In Hong Kong we have a bad situation. A couple of years ago there was a white paper, and when a white paper comes out you can believe it. They had about 250,000, and now it is estimated at about 150,000, and that is about 3 times as many heroin users in 1 city, in 1 British city, as we have in the entire United States. There is where they have adopted the U.S. system of heavy penalties for traffickers and they are trying to cure the addict.

Now, that is probably the most terrific problem in the world today, in Hong Kong, with the British doing their best.

In Japan, this is something. Japan never had an addict. At the close of the war you never heard of any heroin addict in Japan. Their estimate today is 40,000 heroin users, and you can be sure that that heroin is coming from Hong Kong and Thailand. The Japanese have a problem that they never had, but they are trying to do the same as we are doing, to punish the trafficker and make some attempts to cure the addict.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 691

In the United Kingdom—we went through that—they have 532, but that does not include the opium smoker. They have considerable opium smoking in some of their larger cities and I have asked them for their figures and they say that they don't count them in their addiction figures.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you something there. I understood that possibly Great Britain has a more serious problem than we have.

Mr. ANSLINGER. In relation to—

The CHAIRMAN. But I don't understand why they only have 532 addicts for about 60 million people.

Mr. ANSLINGER. Well, that is the number known to the authorities. I think that they only have about half a dozen inspectors.

The CHAIRMAN. We have three times the population they have and we have nearly 100 times as many addicts. I don't understand that.

Mr. ANSLINGER. I would go along with Dr. Livermore and Dr. Brill, who made the survey for New York State, to see whether that system could be applied to New York, and they said positively not. But they thought there was a lack of cultural susceptibility to the use of narcotics.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, Britain has some kind of a system that has operated so successfully that she has only 532 addicts now, whereas, under our system, and making comparisons of population and so forth—isn't that the extent of addiction?

Mr. ANSLINGER. I want to point this out: that they do have a more liberal policy in relation to prescribing by doctors. However, they have about 50 Canadians who went over there to take advantage of the so-called British system. Most of these Canadians have been picked up for crimes in London, which shows even though you give it to them free, they will still commit crimes, and I will just read from a letter here dated in July.

Senator CURTIS. Now, this table at the top of page 5, what is that? Is that the number of persons?

Mr. ANSLINGER. That is the number of persons; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The point I am making here—I have no prejudice or feeling one way or the other about this—and we are trying to seek, in making this study, what is necessary and what may be needed further that we can do, to examine into our system of trying to control this illicit traffic.

If Britain has some system, and if these figures are accurate, whereby out of her population of some 60-odd million people there are only 532 addicts, and we have a population of nearly 200 million and we have 48,500 addicts, it seems to me that we ought to examine her system. She apparently is making some better progress than we have made.

Mr. ANSLINGER. Well, sir; here is the situation in Hong Kong: 150,000 in one British city; three times as many addicts in one British city as we have in the United States, so it doesn't apply there.

The CHAIRMAN. They have one city far removed, though, from the British Isles. I don't know what the conditions are over there. Maybe the system is not working in that area, but obviously it is working in the United Kingdom.

692 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ANSLINGER. Well, it certainly isn't working in the area of opium smoking, and we class that as addiction just as we do heroin.

The CHAIRMAN. I am not challenging it; I am trying to get the facts on the record. But I say if you look at these figures, you will wonder what kind of a system the United Kingdom has if they can hold the number of addicts down to such a small percentage compared to their population.

Mr. ANSLINGER. Well, I might say the British, the official magazine there for the United Kingdom, has expressed some concern and alarm over the situation. They have asked for a reexamination.

The CHAIRMAN. There is some question among themselves then with respect to whether their system is working.

Mr. ANSLINGER. That is right, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. It is not conceded, then, by all authorities that it is working?

Mr. ANSLINGER. I will read you something. This is a letter, dated July 23, from Ottawa, from my colleague in Ottawa. He said, and this is just the other day:

From the information now before us, it is quite evident that only a very small measure of success, if any, has been achieved in respect to the 50-odd Canadian addicts who proceeded to England for treatment. Many of them have been in trouble in that country, while they and others have returned to Canada and subsequently become immediately involved in illicit activities involving either narcotics or other offenses. So the 50 Canadians had absolutely no success.

The CHAIRMAN. We do have those, I understand, who are recommending that we try the British system. For that reason, I wanted to explore it here, to determine if it is successful or if it is unsuccessful, and whether there is any reason for us to give serious consideration to trying to follow the pattern she has set.

Mr. ANSLINGER. I would say that on a per capita basis, they have certainly more of a hashish problem than we have, so they don't do anything there. So their opium smoking is there. These are mostly heroin users who obtain prescriptions. Now, I am quite sure that the type of population there, there is a lack of susceptibility to the use of narcotics in the United Kingdom.

The CHAIRMAN. I take it that these figures here, if they are accurate, apply primarily to the use of heroin and morphine rather than opium; is that correct?

Mr. ANSLINGER. They apply to heroin almost exclusively.

The CHAIRMAN. And the number of opium users is undetermined?

Mr. ANSLINGER. It is undetermined, the opium smokers, and another thing that is, I think, very pertinent to the use of narcotics generally, in medical practice, and otherwise, is this: The people in the United Kingdom use exactly twice the amount of narcotic drugs that we do in the United States, and I would say that includes the illicit use here.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that per capita?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. They use twice as much?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Twice as much under the National Health Service. There is a lot of mass addiction there that doesn't come to the surface.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you say, then, that these figures about the United Kingdom are hardly accurate?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 693

Mr. ANSLINGER. Well, I would say——

The CHAIRMAN. What would you say about their system of collecting the statistics? Is that reliable?

Mr. ANSLINGER. I think that they don't have the force to be able to collect the statistics such as we have.

The CHAIRMAN. You think that these figures here described for the United States and the number of addictions is far more accurate than are those that are supplied by the United Kingdom?

Mr. ANSLINGER. I would say so, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. I am trying to examine it, because on the face of it, it looks as if they have practically solved the problem over there.

Mr. ANSLINGER. Well, that is far from the truth.

The CHAIRMAN. I thought that it needed an explanation.

Mr. ANSLINGER. These very fine doctors, Livermore and Brill, they looked that system over to see whether it could apply to New York State, and they came back and they said certainly it shouldn't be tried because it wouldn't work here.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand some of these doctors are going to testify before us, but right on the face of it these figures look to me as if they need an explanation, at least.

Mr. ANSLINGER. Yes, and I think, for instance, even if you put in the opium smokers here, I am quite sure that this figure would double right here.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Mr. ANSLINGER. We talked about cocaine. Now as to opium, here is something that should be of interest to the committee: During the past 20 years, the Government of India has reduced the eating and smoking of opium from 500 to 3 tons annually. This is a remarkable record. They called the eating a quasi-medical use. Now, under the single convention, that use will disappear because the remaining addicts will disappear under a transitory reservation of the single convention, which is a good thing.

The same is true of Pakistan, although they haven't had this very dramatic reduction.

The CHAIRMAN. In another decade it will probably completely disappear.

Mr. ANSLINGER. I must say that, in my international work, I have always pointed to this enormous use of opium not for medical needs or quasi-medical needs. That has been finally reduced from 500 to 3 tons. That shows some of the most remarkable progress in the world here.

Now, in Burma, most of the smoking is up in the northern states, where the Burmese don't have the administrative control that they would like to have.

In Thailand they estimated 72,000, mostly confined to the hill tribes. That will be under survey.

Singapore is 12,000.

Now, I want to point out that in Iran, about 5 or 6 years ago, the Shah of Iran got tired of seeing so many opium smokers in the country. Probably there were 2 million, which was probably 1 in every 10. He ordered the complete destruction and complete prohibition of opium, even though they had a very large legitimate trade. We purchased for medical use in this country a large quantity of Iranian opium. Here is where the AID program, which is under attack from so many angles, certainly helped us out, because we went to these people and asked for assistance to help the Government of Iran eradicate all of these opium fields, and also to substitute food crops. That has been tremendously successful in Iran. It is due to their willingness, and also to the aid from the United States.

694 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

We sent over our experts and they have really done a magnificent job here.

Now Canada, that is marihuana. Nearly all of the African states have a serious problem, which is rising. There is considerable use in the Union of South Africa, and Morocco and Egypt has considerable use.

The CHAIRMAN. We have no estimate in the United States of the use of marihuana?

Mr. ANSLINGER. No, sir; we have no estimate of the number. We can only give you the number of prosecutions, which is rather constant from year to year. I think it is some 3,000.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you say the use of it here is increasing or diminishing, or do we have it under pretty good control, or what would be your thought there?

Mr. ANSLINGER. I would not say it is diminishing, because it seems to be pretty constant. All of this is not grown here. It is smuggled in from Mexico.

The CHAIRMAN. I am talking about the use of it in this country.

Mr. ANSLINGER. I would like Commissioner Giordano to answer that, but he might confirm that there does not appear to be much diminution of the use of marihuana.

The CHAIRMAN. As compared to the other drugs, is the use of it as harmful or serious?

Mr. ANSLINGER. It is in time. It will lead to heroin addiction.

The CHAIRMAN. It leads to the use of the other drugs?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Yes, sir; and also the matter of road accidents here, these people who press the accelerator down and they do not know whether it is on the floor or up. Our distinguished Dr. Baird here will tell you about the danger involved in the use of marihuana, driving down the street and having no sense of time or distance.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, it is still something that we need to continue our efforts on, or increase our efforts to combat.

Mr. ANSLINGER. Not only here, but all over the world, because it has grown very rapidly in many sections of the world. In fact, I heard a delegate from Liberia say he was afraid to cross the street because these drivers were charged up with hashish. Probably it was not as dangerous to cross the street there as maybe it is here in Washington, but it is not the drivers that are charged up.

The CHAIRMAN. Hashish is a synonym for marihuana?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Yes, it has a number of names. There is a generic term. The African delegates to the United Nations have asked for assistance because they connect massacres and murders and rapes to the use of hashish.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is this marihuana produced, and where is it grown? Is it anywhere? Can you grow it anywhere?

Mr. ANSLINGER. It will grow anywhere, in any country, but what is grown here is a small industry. There is not too much of it used here, but a lot of it is grown in Lebanon, which finds its way into Egypt.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 695

The CHAIRMAN. Does it have any real medical value?

Mr. ANSLINGER. It has been deleted and taken out of the pharmacopeia throughout the world because it has no medical value and it is too unpredictable. There is the danger of the drug.

The CHAIRMAN. So it has no legitimate use?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Only in relation to hemp, the manufacture of hemp. That was in the Middle West, for instance, during the war, when we could not get hemp from the Philippines.

The CHAIRMAN. But as a drug it has no legitimate use?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Absolutely not.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well.

Mr. ANSLINGER. Now, I want to say this about the free drug areas: I did mention the monopolies that were operated by the great powers in the Far East. All of them have been discontinued as being absolutely of no possible help in solving the narcotics problem. When they were in operation, they brought in a lot of revenue, but they have all been closed now. All of the ambulatory treatment in the Far East has been discontinued.

This treatment—the British call it ambulatory, but it is the same thing—has been condemned by the United Nations Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the World Health Organization, the American Medical Association, the National Research Council Committee on Narcotics and Drug Addiction, the President's Interdepartmental Committee on Narcotics, and the President's Advisory Commission on Narcotic and Drug Abuse.

This system was tried by the United States. There were some 45 clinics operating. As a result of public opinion and after passage of a resolution by the American Medical Association, the New York State Legislature ordered them closed. There were no cures, just larger addiction and crime.

The CHAIRMAN. That system failed, then. That method completely failed?

Mr. ANSLINGER. It was a complete failure; yes, sir.

Senator CURTIS. What is the ambulatory treatment?

Mr. ANSLINGER. That is to give a minimal dose to the drug addict daily, and he gets his daily dosage at some clinic, but it is really a narcotic barroom.

The CHAIRMAN. They ration it out to him?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Yes, and, of course, they don't all go, and they don't all attend the clinic, and they buy from the people who misstate their cases.

The CHAIRMAN. For the record, the theory behind that is that if you give them free drugs they would soon tire of the habit and quit the practice.

Mr. ANSLINGER. It has never worked anyplace.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that the theory?

Mr. ANSLINGER. That is the theory—

The CHAIRMAN. It is a complete failure?

Mr. ANSLINGER (continuing). That they can continue on their occupation, whatever they have, but that certainly doesn't work. Through treaties and vigorous Federal law enforcement, the addiction has been reduced.

696 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Now, in the Bureau of Narcotics—he didn't bring this out, but I know you will agree—since heavy penalties for trafficking have gone into effect, beginning with the Boggs Act, the Bureau of Narcotics has closed 50 offices.

The CHAIRMAN. You think the heavy penalties have been a large, contributing factor to the success of the program—trying to combat this evil?

Mr. ANSLINGER. That is the greatest deterrent, Senator, the penalties for the traffickers. That is now the United Nations policy, so stated: that heavy penalties for traffickers will deter them.

The CHAIRMAN. You are talking about the fellow who is profiteering off human misery.

Mr. ANSLINGER. Yes, and I think you were the U.S. attorney in Little Rock when there was a problem there.

The CHAIRMAN. I wasn't U.S. attorney. I was State's attorney.

Mr. ANSLINGER. And you had a problem there, and we don't have an office there any more.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't have any problem there any more that I know of.

Mr. ANSLINGER. Obviously, now, a free drug system, you couldn't encompass the use of marihuana and cocaine, and that is unthinkable that the Federal Government or the States are going to hand out marihuana cigarettes and doses of cocaine for sniffing, both being strong incentives to the commission of criminal acts. We would go back more than 50 years on that.

It is well recognized by international experts that there is a great danger in the easy accessibility of narcotics.

The CHAIRMAN. I asked you, under the British system, or ambulatory system, if they gave the drug to children or juveniles the same as adults.

Mr. ANSLINGER. I am quite sure, because you have an addict coming up to your clinic, and you can't say, "Well, you are 18, and you can't have it." So I don't think the matter of age would make any difference there.

The British said calling this a "British system" isn't right, because this is just an invention by certain Americans who wish to explain their point of view. During the prewar period, we have the records of the former government on Taiwan. That was run by the Japanese, and they sold opium there, and there were supplies for 8 cents. Seventy percent of all crimes on Formosa were committed by opium smokers.

The CHAIRMAN. What period was that?

Mr. ANSLINGER. That was 1945.

The CHAIRMAN. Seventy percent of all crimes on Formosa were committed by opium smokers?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Yes, and they had this ambulatory treatment, and they got their opium for 8 cents a day.

The CHAIRMAN. What happened? Have they abandoned that system?

Mr. ANSLINGER. It has been abandoned all through the Far East. In no area in the world today do we have the ambulatory system.

The CHAIRMAN. It has proved a failure everywhere it was tried?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Yes, sir.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 697

The CHAIRMAN. And it has since been abandoned?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Yes, and now I am going to give you here something that happened.

The Israel Government in 1952 decided to allocate narcotic drugs to a large number of addicts. This is the Government of Israel. The authorities believed this arrangement would prevent drug addicts from being exploited by criminal suppliers.

In an article which I have here, and I would ask permission to put this into the record—this was written by Government authorities and published in the United Nations Bulletin April of 1962—I am just going to quote a paragraph here.

From 1953 onward, a steady stream of drug addicts from the underworld started applying to us, pretending they were anxious to be cured while well knowing that we did not dispose of sufficient hospital space. Their sole purpose was to receive from us an allocation of drugs. Not only did they exaggerate their own demands, but they also sent up drug peddlers who simulated addiction so as to obtain drugs for purposes of trade and sale.

That is what happened in the United States when we had that.

These people used every means at their disposal to achieve their ends and obtain as large a quantity of drugs as possible. They did not hesitate to raise a scandal, to threaten the employees of the health office with knives, etc. It became a dangerous job to work at the health offices, to the extent that it was hardly possible to carry out the work properly and a constant police guard was required. The number of drug addicts registered at the various health offices constantly grew * * *.

The ambulatory treatment was abandoned and compulsory commitment to a hospital was instituted.

So here you have a recent failure of this so-called ambulatory treatment.

Mr. Chairman, if you don't mind, I would like to insert that in the record.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be accepted and printed in the record.

(The article referred to will be found in the appendix on p. 840.)

Mr. ANSLINGER. There was the same agitation as there is in this country for this free drug system and they tried it and they are very sorry.

The CHAIRMAN. You think illicit traffickers in that field would like to see this system continued or tried again?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Of course. I am quite sure. There are many groups in this country that would like to see it.

The CHAIRMAN. They are promoting the idea, you think?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Yes, sir. And, mind you, in the early twenties, when they had this system working throughout the United States, what was then the Bureau of Narcotics seized some several tons of morphine and heroin which had been smuggled in from abroad, because naturally the tendency wasn't to go out and seize anything or enforce it, but it created such an atmosphere that the number of addicts increased.

For instance, in Shreveport, La., the chief of police said:

Well, this is all right with me because any time a crime is committed, overnight I go right down to the clinic where they are all standing in line to get their drugs to pick out a suspect.

698 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Now, Mr. Chairman, we work shoulder to shoulder with the authorities in Mexico, Canada, France, Turkey, Lebanon, Syria, Hong Kong, Singapore, Thailand, and Japan, that is shoulder to shoulder in the exchange of not only information, but working together with them. Also, the International Criminal Police Organization—Interpol—renders considerable assistance. They are to be congratulated for their splendid efforts to assist the United States and Canada in their problem.

I do hope the committee will take note of that.

Now, in conclusion, as former Secretary of State Cordell Hull said, "In no area of international activities is there greater cooperation than in the field of narcotic drugs."

Having been deeply involved in international narcotic work for over 30 years, I can attest that most nations, including the Soviet bloc, are bending every effort to bring the narcotic problem under strict controls. The giant strides which have been made are due in large part to the efforts of the United Nations.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much, sir, and now I would like to ask you one question at this point:

Do you have any suggestions or recommendations with respect to any further action that should be taken by our Government, and particularly with respect to any legislation you think Congress should consider, that might tend to strengthen the hand of law enforcement agencies or otherwise contribute to the elimination of this traffic?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Sir, I would like to support the recommendation made by Commissioner Giordano, after having spent many years in enforcement.

I also hope in the very near future that the United States will be able to join with other nations in getting a revision of the 1961 convention. If we can get a revision to agree with our policies on limiting production of opium to the world, I think that is just about all I could recommend now.

The CHAIRMAN. I guess Congress can do very little about the treaty revision. I don't know just what affirmative action we can take to assist it in that matter. But if there is any further legislation, any statutes, needed, I think Congress would be interested. I don't presume to speak for the Congress, but I am sure that they would be interested in enacting any legislation that can be enacted to help in the further elimination of this illicit practice.

There are bills pending. There is one that I have introduced, with respect to wiretapping, which is a highly controversial bill. It doesn't apply to just this character of crime, crimes in the drug addiction category, drug traffic category, but it would apply generally to all crimes, unless there are some restrictions placed in the statute.

It is highly controversial. The recommendation for that statute as a weapon to use in the elimination of the drug traffic has had to be weighed along with what its impact would be in the enforcement on other crimes.

Mr. ANSLINGER. Sir, that provision was in the Boggs-Daniel Act of 1956, and it was the only thing that was stricken from the bill after some debate. But I can assure you that the enforcement officers throughout the country have their hands tied as a result of these international and national traffickers being insulated, being able to use the telephone.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 699

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, if you had that weapon, do you think that a vigilant enforcement policy then would absolutely put them out of business?

Mr. ANSLINGER. It would go a long ways. I remember before the ban on wiretapping some of the biggest cases came through maybe just by listening in on a telephone. I am sure that insofar as Federal officers are concerned, it wouldn't be abused.

The CHAIRMAN. I think the Congress would look with favor upon the enactment of such a law, if they could ever feel assured that it could be and would be used only for legitimate law enforcement purposes.

I think there is apprehension that the use of it might in some way get out of control and not be used for legitimate law enforcement purposes.

I think that you premise the need for it just as you do on the use of a search warrant, to a great extent. It would have to be guarded and restricted, somewhat like the use of a search warrant.

Mr. ANSLINGER. I can assure you, sir, that when we were permitted to tap wires in the past, there was never any abuse, certainly insofar as the Bureau of Narcotics was concerned, and I believe I can speak for other Federal agencies.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well. I thank you very much.

Senator Curtis?

Senator CURTIS. Mr. Anslinger, I do not expect you to answer this or make comment on it, but it seems to me that this 1961 convention is so dangerous, would set us back so far, and is so much against the public interest, the public morals, that the United States would be justified in serving notice that there would be no more foreign economic assistance to any nation that signs or to any nation that has already signed and fails to nullify it.

I am referring to the ratification rather than the signing of it. Either this business is serious or it isn't.

Mr. ANSLINGER. I will not comment on that, Senator.

Senator CURTIS. No, I wouldn't ask you to.

I do have one question on another matter: Do you think that the efforts and programs of the Federal Government and of the States are sufficient with reference to marihuana?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Sir, I believe the question of marihuana is adequately covered in Federal and State legislation. But as Commissioner Giordano pointed out, it is the leniency on the part of the courts. Not the Federal courts, because we are only making marihuana cases in relation to traffic.

But the leniency on the part of the courts.

Senator CURTIS. Are all of the States equally guilty or are some doing a better job than others?

Mr. ANSLINGER. I would exclude Ohio, for instance. With the legislation they have no one would peddle marihuana around there.

Something has disturbed me very much. I just had a letter from a judge of the Superior Court of California, and he told me that the use of marihuana has spread to some of the campuses out there. That is not only true in this country but it is true over the world. I think that is the last place we should find marihuana or hashish being used, in the campuses.

700 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

There have been recently these supersophisticated pleadings that it should be legalized.

Senator CURTIS. What is the situation in California? Is this one of the States with light sentences, moderate sentences, or heavy, on the marihuana?

Mr. ANSLINGER. The sentences are certainly not commensurate with the degree of the crime that is involved in most of the States. I am not speaking of the Federal courts. They have a floor. They don't like it, but they have it. For trafficking it is 5 years minimum, whether it is marihuana or heroin. In the South, it is pretty well under control.

The southern judges have been very severe. But in nearly all of the States the tendency is that the defense attorney will say, "This is a sick man. He didn't know what he was doing. He is not responsible." But until the States tighten up on this, we are not going to make too much headway because, after all, the Federal Government cannot go into this matter of possession of marihuana.

Senator CURTIS. You say we can't make headway. Are we making headway now or are we going backward on marihuana?

Mr. ANSLINGER. I wouldn't say we are making headway on it.

Senator CURTIS. Are we losing ground?

Mr. ANSLINGER. I would say we are losing ground all over the world.

Senator CURTIS. On marihuana?

Mr. ANSLINGER. Yes, sir.

Senator CURTIS. That is all, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you any questions, Counsel?

Mr. ADLERMAN. On marihuana, we have a particularly difficult problem in that it is easily grown and grown in many areas of the world, is that true?

Mr. ANSLINGER. That is true; yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So, it is readily accessible, readily available, easily smuggled, and easily produced, and that creates a large problem; whereas, in opium, it has been confined to a comparatively few countries.

Mr. ANSLINGER. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Under the new convention that is proposed now, allowing each country to produce 5 tons of opium for export, that would be equivalent to roughly 1,000 kilos per country, is that correct?

Mr. ANSLINGER. That would be 5 tons which would be 5,000 kilos. The country is supposed to notify the Board and ask its advice but they are not bound by it.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Actually, the value to the country for the export of this opium would be rather small, would it not?

Mr. ANSLINGER. This is for the export trade. They would get $12, the market value, per kilo. And 5,000 kilos—what is that?

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is right. So it would be, roughly, $200,000 or $250,000 per country.

Mr. ANSLINGER. Per country. It wouldn't help them at all.

Mr. ADLERMAN. But it could represent untold damage.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 701

Mr. ANSLINGER. Untold damage. And I don't think there is a country in the world that could keep that down to 5 tons.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And the amount that the country would get, the profit they would get out of it, would be really small.

Mr. ANSLINGER. They would lose money. If they followed the convention and put in a monopoly, a state monopoly, to control production, gathering, and distribution, they would lose money.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Who pushes this convention? What makes it attractive to them?

Mr. ANSLINGER. It was just one of those things. They didn't want to create an international monopoly. Turkey, the U.S.S.R., Yugoslavia, Iran, India—they have been the producers, the traditional producers, and it will probably always be that way because I don't see a country that can come along and produce 5 tons and anybody buy it, because they couldn't sell it at the present world market price.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much. You have been very helpful.

(Complete statement by Harry J. Anslinger is as follows:)

STATEMENT BY HARRY J. ANSLINGER, U.S. REPRESENTATIVE TO THE UNITED NATIONS COMMISSION ON NARCOTIC DRUGS, JULY 28, 1964

1. International narcotic controls

There are nine treaties and protocols covering the control of narcotic drugs. These include limitation of production of opium, limitation of the manufacture of narcotic and synthetic narcotic drugs, control of distribution through a system of import and export certificates, statistical reporting, and regulation of the trade by way of licensing all those who handle narcotic drugs. These cover opium and 25 opium derivatives, the coca leaf and its derivatives, 58 synthetic narcotic drugs, and cannabis (marihuana).

In 1961 a conference was held to consolidate all of these previous agreements into a single convention. It is an excellent treaty except in two areas:

(a) It seeks to do away with the provisions of the 1953 protocol which limit production of opium for export to seven countries. It permits production for export in the present producing countries and in any country which desires to produce up to 5 tons of opium. This would destroy the present system of limiting production and would create excessive production.

(b) The reservations clause contains provisions, among others, which would permit any party to avoid being bound by estimates of drug requirements established by the Board for that party, for any other party, or for any nonparty. Likewise, any party can, by reservation, prevent examination of its statistics with a view to determining whether the requirements of the convention are being fulfilled.

The 1961 single convention requires 40 ratifications or accessions. So far there have been 35 ratifications or accessions. Very likely the convention will go into operation this year. Nearly all of the ratifications have come from small nations and some of these will wish to take advantage of the 5-ton provision.

The U.S. Government does not intend to ratify because of these two glaring defects and hopes for a revision in due course which will be in keeping with its policy on limiting the production of opium to medical and scientific needs.

2. Legitimate manufacture

Prior to 1931 the illicit narcotic traffic was supplied by licensed European and Far Eastern factories. At the present time there is no known diversion from legitimate factories anywhere in the world. The 1931 convention to limit the manufacture of narcotic drugs has been the most effective instrument ever forged in the area of narcotic controls. All heroin which is used by the majority of addicts comes from clandestine laboratories.

The manufacture of heroin has been prohibited in all countries except three, the United Kingdom, France, and Belgium. Five other countries in addition to these three manufacturing countries have reported consumption of small quantities of heroin. From the yearly manufacture of 5 tons in licensed factories, the amount has been reduced to less than 100 kilos.

702 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Under the 1931 convention morphine manufacture has been reduced by 40 tons annually and cocaine manufacture is down from 5 tons to 1½ tons annually.

The manufacture of synthetic drugs is gradually overtaking morphine. These drugs are under complete control. There is no known diversion to the illicit traffic and no known clandestine manufacture has occurred so far.

3. International illicit traffic

The traffic in opium and its derivatives is centered in several areas in the Far East (the Burma-mainland China-Laos-Thailand border areas). Clandestine laboratory conversion of opium to morphine, morphine base, and heroin in and around Bangkok, Hong Kong, Singapore, and Macao supplies illicit traffickers in those areas; sizable quantities of this illicit production are smuggled to Japan, the United States, and Canada. A brick morphine of the "999" brand is widely produced in that area, the source of manufacture not having been discovered.

A United Nations survey was recently made of the socioeconomic aspects of the opium-producing areas in Burma. A similar survey is soon to be made by the United Nations in the northern hills of Thailand. In Thailand the situation has been described as a threat to the security of the state and there have been executions for illicit trafficking.

In the Near East there is diversion of opium in Turkey and clandestine morphine base and heroin laboratories in Syria, Lebanon, and Turkey. Much of the morphine base finds its way to Marseilles, France, where it is converted into heroin in clandestine laboratories and smuggled to the United States and to Canada.

There is a small illicit production of opium and heroin in the mountainous regions of Mexico which finds its way into California.

There is considerable illicit manufacture of cocaine in Bolivia and Peru which is destined for the United States and Mexico.

4. Extent of addiction(a) Manufactured drugs (including heroin and morphine) :

United States.....	48, 535
Canada.....	3, 576
Federal Republic of Germany.....	4, 383
Hong Kong—has been estimated as high as	150, 000
Japan (estimate).....	40, 000
United Kingdom.....	532

Thailand: Number unknown. Recent switch from opium to heroin.

Iran: Number unknown. Recent switch from opium to heroin.

(b) Cocaine: For 20 years the use of cocaine was down to an irreducible minimum. During the past 5 years there has been a recrudescence of cocaine use which is confined mostly to the South American continent.

(c) Opium—India: During the past 20 years the Government of India has reduced the eating and smoking of opium from 500 tons to 3 tons annually, a remarkable record. The remaining addicts will disappear under the transitory reservations of the single convention.

Pakistan: Considerable number of opium smokers and opium eaters remaining who will disappear under the transitory reservations of the single convention.

United Kingdom: Undetermined number of opium smokers.

Burma: Number unknown (mostly in Shan and Kachin States).

Thailand: 72,000 estimated in 1959, mostly confined to hill tribes.

Singapore: 12,000.

Iran: In 1955 there was a total prohibition of opium production which has reduced the number of opium smokers from 2 million to 50,000. This has been accomplished with U.S. assistance under the AID program.

(d) Cannabis (marihuana) :

Nearly all African States have a serious problem which is rising. There is considerable use in the Union of South Africa and Morocco.

Egypt: Considerable use.

United States: No estimate.

Mexico: Considerable use.

India: Fairly large.

United Kingdom: Serious hashish problem.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 703

There is no overall estimate of the number of narcotic addicts in the world. Most of the countries are sending in annual reports to the United Nations showing the extent of narcotic addiction in their states or territories.

5. Free drug areas

The ambulatory treatment of drug addiction has been condemned by the United Nations Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the World Health Organization, the American Medical Association, the National Research Council Committee on Narcotics and Drug Addiction, the President's Interdepartmental Committee on Narcotics, and the President's Advisory Commission on Narcotic and Drug Abuse. This system was tried in the United States by some 45 clinics operating in the early 1920's. As a result of public opinion and after passage of a resolution by the American Medical Association, the New York State Legislature closed the clinics in that State. All other clinics were also closed by Federal and State Governments. There were no cures but there was a large spread of addiction and crime.

Through treaties, Federal and State laws and vigorous enforcement, addiction in the United States has been reduced from 1 in 400 to 1 in 4,000. This does not include marihuana.

The Bureau of Narcotics has closed 50 offices where the traffic has dried up due to heavy penalties meted out to traffickers by the courts.

Obviously a free drug system could not encompass the use of marihuana and cocaine. It is unthinkable that the Federal Government or the States would hand out marihuana cigarettes and doses of cocaine for sniffing, both being strong incentives to the commission of criminal acts. It would set the problem back 50 years.

It is well recognized by international experts that there is great danger in the easy accessibility of narcotics through drug maintenance systems or outpatient clinics or by general treatment by doctors which would make these drugs more readily available.

Today addiction is almost completely confined to the large metropolitan areas, such as New York, Chicago, Detroit, and Los Angeles, where organized criminals have made it available. In the major part of the country tight law enforcement by Federal and State officers has made it difficult for organized criminals to extend their traffic in narcotics to the local area. Under the maintenance system, narcotic drugs would be available to all, including teenagers, in every village and hamlet in the South, Midwest, East, and Far West. There would be a tremendous spread of addiction under this system.

The British system has been recommended by many who are not familiar with the problem. The British authorities call this reference to the "British system" an invention by certain Americans who wish to express their point of view. In Hong Kong there is three times the rate of heroin addiction than in the United States and there the authorities follow the American system of severe penalties for traffickers and attempt to cure the addicts. In Hong Kong the accessibility of heroin is the prime factor in the spread of drug addiction. The British authorities find that the only way to eliminate drug addiction is to cut off the supply of narcotics.

Recently some 50 Canadian addicts went to England to take advantage of the doctors' more liberal prescription use of heroin. Many have been arrested in London for offenses against property, showing that freely prescribed drugs do not stop the addict from criminal acts.

During the prewar period, records of the former government on Taiwan indicate opium smokers obtained daily supplies for 8 cents, yet 70 percent of all crimes on Formosa were committed by opium smokers.

Coca leaf chewing at high altitudes in five South American States by the Inca Indians is being considerably reduced by better nutrition.

It has been reported that the ambulatory or free drug treatment has been a dismal failure in Israel. In 1952 the Israeli Government decided to allocate narcotic drugs to a large number of addicts. The authorities believed this arrangement would prevent drug addicts from being exploited by criminal suppliers.

In an article by Z. W. Jermulowicz, M.D., district psychiatrist, Tel Aviv district, and director of government hospital for mental patients, Bat-Yam, and Mag. A. Turnau, district pharmacist, Tel Aviv and central districts, Israeli Ministry of Health, published in the United Nations Bulletin on Narcotics (vol. XIV, No. 2, April-June 1962), it was stated:

704 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

"From 1953 onward, a steady stream of drug addicts from the underworld started applying to us, pretending they were anxious to be cured while well knowing that we did not dispose of sufficient hospital space. Their sole purpose was to receive from us an allocation of drugs. Not only did they exaggerate their own demands, but they also sent us drug peddlers who simulated addiction so as to obtain drugs for purposes of trade and sale. These people used every means at their disposal to achieve their ends and obtain as large a quantity of drugs as possible. They did not hesitate to raise a scandal, to threaten the employees of the health office with knives, etc. It became a dangerous job to work at the health offices, to the extent that it was hardly possible to carry out the work properly and a constant police guard was required. The number of drug addicts registered at the various health offices constantly grew * * *." The ambulatory treatment was abandoned and compulsory commitment to a hospital instituted.

The policy adopted by the United Nations, the Congress, and the several States is completely in favor of drug free areas.

6. International cooperation

We work shoulder to shoulder with the authorities in Mexico, Canada, France, Turkey, Lebanon, Syria, Hong Kong, Singapore, Thailand, and Japan. The International Criminal Police Organization (Interpol) renders considerable assistance. They are to be congratulated for their splendid efforts to assist the United States and Canada in their problem.

7. Conclusion

As former Secretary of State Cordell Hull said, "In no area of international activities is there greater cooperation than in the field of narcotic drugs."

Having been deeply involved in international narcotic work for over 30 years, I can attest that most nations, including the Soviet bloc, are bending every effort to bring the narcotic problem under strict controls. The giant strides which have been made are due in large part to the efforts of the United Nations.

HOLLIDAYSBURG, PA., September 28, 1964.

MR. JEROME S. ADLERMAN,
General Counsel, Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. ADLERMAN: On September 13, 1964, Pravda published an article dealing with the Chinese opium trade. I respectfully request that this article be included as an addition to my testimony before the Senate subcommittee.

I also request inclusion of the United Nations Commission on Narcotic Drugs report of the 18th session April 29 through May 17, 1963, supplement No. 9 pages 9-15, paragraphs 87 through 106 in relation to opium and opiates in the Far East.

Respectfully,

HARRY J. ANSLINGER.

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS,
LEGISLATIVE REFERENCE SERVICE,
Washington, D.C., October 2, 1964.

To Whom It May Concern:

The attached, in the English language, beginning with the words: "Pravda, September 13, 1964—Traders in Narcotics" and ending: "V. Ovchinnikov. Special correspondent of Pravda, Tokyo, September," is a translation of an article appearing in the Russian language in the newspaper Pravda, September 13, 1964, page 5, columns 1-5. The English text is a correct translation of the Russian original, a photocopy of which is attached.

ROBERT V. ALLEN,
Area Specialist (U.S.S.R.), Slavic and Central European Division.

PRAVDA, September 13, 1964.

TRADERS IN NARCOTICS

In propagandizing their views, the Chinese schismatics are squandering money lavishly. To any Japanese, whose address by some means becomes known to Peiping there is directed a stream of free printed matter—calendars, art publications, and of course, as a garnish, anti-Soviet brochures. Japan is not the only object of such attention from Peiping. How many international adventurers are there who take away from the Chinese capital substantial dollar checks for the publication of their own works, promising, of course, that in them they will without fail abuse the Soviet Union? And [what] whole pages of bourgeois newspapers, bought up for the schismatics' articles?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 705

How is this muddy stream of lies and slander financed? What provides the payment for the political rascals; speaking from notes provided by Peiping? The answer sounds like an aphorism. Stupefying of people (odurmanlvaniye), [i.e., by propaganda] is carried on in large measure by money received from the sale of drugs [stupefying agents]. About half a billion dollars every year comes into the hands of the present leaders of China from the illicit sale of narcotics. It has become one of the basic sources of convertible currency for the leadership of the Communist Party of China. The great sums derived from it are spent for anti-Soviet propaganda, and are used to pay for the services of puppets of the Peiping splitters. Apparently in Peiping they consider that any means are all right for the attainment of these goals.

Here in Japan, which has moved up into first place in the world in the use of opium, and where drug addiction has become a very acute social problem, they are better informed than anywhere about this role of Peiping. The most authoritative person in this field, Tsusai Suawara, chairman of the national commission to combat drug addiction, said:

"Any expert on this problem will tell you that China has become the principal world producer of the opium poppy, from which opium, morphine, and heroin are obtained. From Japan alone Peiping is extracting up to 60 billion yen (about $170 million) from opium smuggling. But our share rarely exceeds one-third. Most of the narcotics go to the countries of southeast Asia—yes, and a considerable amount goes to the United States."

Conversations with Japanese specialists and study of the Asian press have shed new light on my observations, on what I had occasion at one time to see with my own eyes in China. In the spring of 1958 I had occasion to be one of the first—and the last—foreign correspondents to visit the remote mountain regions of Yunnan, adjacent to the junction of the borders of Burma, Laos, and Thailand. At that time I managed to get to the Lyangshan district, where the Kawa (Kava) tribes, hidden among wooded mountains, still preserve their tribal system.

The local party officials pointed out to me the rudiments of primitive agriculture: patches of sparse, stunted barley in places where the virgin forest had been burned out, and they said that within just 1 year they intended to teach the local inhabitants to make terraces for irrigated fields, erect dams, and lay out ditches. But what is engraved in my memory is not just such rainbow-hued posters, but also the flowery patches in the green cover of the mountains. I would least expect that the Kawa, among whom even the wild beast slain by the hunter belongs to the whole settlement, would be engaged in flower culture.

These were flowers, or rather, fields of flowers, remarkably like poppies, only not with red, but with violet-tinged white petals. At first it did not occur to me that there before me was the plant which contained the ill-famed poisonous drug. I never imagined that it could be grown thus so openly.

To my puzzled question the members of the district committee answered: "This is a very difficult problem. They have been planting the opium poppy in these regions since long ago. The local inhabitants themselves do not use opium, but they sell it to buyers, to smugglers. To prohibit it would mean to deprive the tribes, and particularly their leaders, of their accustomed income. And it is important to us to maintain a united front with them. And what good would prohibition do, when the border is actually open, and there on the Burma side still remain the Kuomintangists of Gen. Li Mi, who just subsist on the narcotics trade? We must put an end to opium smuggling only after providing the people with another, legal market. The Government has entrusted this to the Chung-kuo T'u-chan Kung-su [China Local Products Co.], company for the procurement of the products of local industry."

These arguments would have seemed convincing to me if on the return trip from the Lyangshan district to Kunming I had not again encountered the violet-tinged white flowers. The chauffeur turned off on some kind of a country road to fix the car, and suddenly beyond the crest of a hill we saw people with hoes.

706 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

I would not have been surprised at the sight of the prisoners, nor the guard, nor the barracks with guard towers in the distance. It was no rarity to find corrective labor camps in the outlying areas of China. What surprised me was the field of white flowers; not just a patch, but a whole extensive tract [massive] of opium poppies. What connection did these plantings, far from any settlements of primitive tribes, have with the "peculiarities of the nationalities problem"?

I did not know then that in the world literature on narcotics there had already been long established the term, "the Yunnan region," which designates the principal zone of growing the opium poppy, situated at the junction of the borders of China, Burma, Thailand, and Laos. I happened to be in the very center of this zone just at the time when the relative importance of Yunnan in the "Yunnan region" went up sharply.

When the extremely nationalistic, openly hegemonistic tendencies of the Peiping leaders became an overt policy, the question immediately arose—Where to get the currency to pay for such activity?

The answer was soon found. In Peiping they decided to expand the trade in opium to conform to the new demands. From the time of the ceaseless wars of the military cliques, the drug from the poppy has served in China as a customary weapon of politics. Every wandering general began with the introduction of the opium monopoly as a favorite means of replenishing his treasury. They had only to borrow this old, established procedure. And they borrowed it.

As early as December 1952, there was held in Peiping a secret meeting under the chairmanship of Po I-bo. The Ministers of Finance and of Foreign Trade, and also leading officials of southwest and south China listened to a report on how the proceeds from the secret sale of narcotics amounted to $70 million in a year, and they came to the conclusion that such a channel of currency acquisition might be substantially enlarged.

It was necessary to return to this question 6 years later. If there was really anywhere "a great leap forward" after the adoption by Peiping of the new adventurist course, it was in the production of the opium poppy for the most widespread smuggling.

According to data in the well-informed Hong Kong weekly, Hsin-wen T'ien-ti, in the very first years after the proclamation of the "great leap forward," the production of opium in China rose to 8,000 tons against 2,000 tons in 1952. What "medical needs" could be brought up here, when the total world requirement for opium for medical purposes, according to official data of the U.N. amounts to 300 tons a year?

Also, the sown areas of opium poppies are being ceaselessly expanded. From 2 million mu they increased in a few years to 6 million, and now they have approached 10 million mu (1 mu is one-sixteenth of a hectare). About one-half of the sowings, according to the same weekly, are in southwest China (in the provinces of Yunnan, Szechwan, and Kweichow).

The undertaking assumed such proportions that the former methods of growing and procuring opium began to appear outmoded. Main reliance was placed on the so-called special regions. The corrective labor camps systems was switched over to the production of the raw material for narcotics. Thus the role of Kwangtung Province rose [in importance]; there, according to Sugawara's book, "Japan Is an Empire of Narcotics," the opium poppy already takes up about one-fifth of the sown area. Apparently there are many accessible mountain localities there, and along with this, the principal sales base, Hong Kong, is near.

The Administration for Procurement and Sale of Special Products of Local Industry exercises guidance from Peiping over the whole opium policy. In the southwest the business is carried on by the previously mentioned company, Chung-kuo T'u-chan Kung-su, with a widespread network. I saw its offices even along high mountain trails of Tibet and Tsinghai. The assimilation of outlying territories of minor nationalities also often has begun with the establishment of these trading stations. Now branches of the company have also appeared in countries neighboring China.

Yunnan opium is delivered in Burma through the country of the Shans. Morphine in briquets with the mark "999" moves to Thailand through Mae Sai. To produce a multitude of facts on this one needs only to leaf through the materials of the International Antiopium Conference which took place recently in Tokyo, and the records of the proceedings of the annual sessions of the U.N. Commission for the Struggle Against Narcotics.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 707

In the south, in the area of Hong Kong which has become the principal one, a similar role is played by the Hwa-nan Mao-i Kung-ssu [South China Trading Co.]. During recent years the system of its "commercial" activity has been substantially reorganized. Previously boxes of opium, with false documents, were sent across through customs in Macao. From there, under armed guard of local "bosses" [zapravily] connected with Peiping, they were delivered to Hong Kong for processing. Now an industrial base for morphine, which is 10 times stronger than opium, and heroin, which is a hundred times stronger, has been creased in China itself. Pharmaceutical and chemical plants in Dairen (Ta-lien), Tientsin, Cheng-tu, K'ang-ting, Kun-ming, Ta-li, Yu-an [? transliterated Russian: Yuy-an'] and other cities are engaged in this processing of raw opium. Therefore the narcotics now enter Hong Kong in the prepared form and the packaging acceptable to the international smuggling syndicates.

At one time the imperialists, with weapons in hand, gained the right to poison with the poison of the poppy the Chinese people, in order to impose on them the yoke of colonialism. Hong Kong, wrested from China by the First Opium War, became the result of this policy. It is not for this reason that the Peiping "destroyers of colonialism" are so tolerant of the colonial regime right under their noses, because Hong Kong now, too, is carrying out its original role—as formerly, it serves as a gateway for the traffic in narcotics, only now in the opposite direction.

To take over the methods of the imperialists, to enter into partnership with criminals—this is loathsome and hideous, but it is also logical for those who, for the sake of their own hegemonistic, nationalistic schemes, disregard the vital interests of their own people and try to poison their minds with a potion still more poisonous than the opium drugs.

V. OVCHINNIKOV,
Special Correspondent of Pravda.

TOKYO, September.

COMMISSION ON NARCOTIC DRUGS

REPORT OF THE 18TH SESSION (APRIL 29–MAY 17, 1963)

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL OFFICIAL RECORDS: 36TH SESSION

Supplement No. 9, United Nations

CHAPTER III

ILLICIT TRAFFIC

* * * * *

B. OPIUM AND THE OPIATES

(I) THE FAR EAST

87. The representative of the United Kingdom described the situation in Hong Kong, where problems of trafficking and addiction continued to be serious despite the sustained and energetic program of prevention and suppression which the authorities had been carrying out in the past years. The colony occupied a small area—391 square miles of land and 600 square miles of water in which lay some 200 islands. The population was 3½ million, of whom 98 percent were Chinese. Hong Kong did not produce opium, and the manufactured drugs or raw materials for local illicit use and manufacture came from outside. The fact that Hong Kong's existence depended largely on its free port facilities complicated the problem of dealing with the illicit import of narcotics. Hong Kong's land frontier of 26 miles raised no trafficking problem, but the port attracted shipping from all over the world and traffickers exploited the freedom of movement permitted to goods. Those various circumstances made the Government's work of prevention and detection more difficult than would otherwise be the case. In 1962, nearly 6,000 oceangoing vessels and over 14,000 other craft visited the port. Smuggling was accomplished by the concealment of drugs in legitimate cargo, on the persons of the crewmembers of vessels and in small craft which picked up supplies outside colony waters. The Special Narcotics Section of the Prevention Service was responsible in particular for the guarding and searching of vessels and the examination of cargo. Six hundred and eighteen ships had been guarded in 1962; of 56 narcotics seizures made by this branch of the Service, 26 had been on board vessels. Six hundred and ten aircraft had also been inspected. The domestic side of the traffic was dealt with by the police force, one of whose functions was to maintain liaison, through its Narcotics Bureau, with enforcement services in other countries. There was regular communication with many of the 20 countries with which the Bureau had established relations since its establishment in 1955. The enforcement services were in constant operation throughout the year. Between 12,000 and 15,000 raids a year were made to detect narcotics and their illicit use; 1,300 cases were discovered and over 1,000 persons prosecuted every month, and at the present time (early 1963) an average of 40 seizures a day were being made. There had been 9,934 seizures in 1962, of which 7,343 were of heroin. Three hundred or four hundred heroin peddlers were apprehended every year.

708 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Hong Kong's intensified campaign against the illicit traffic, launched in 1959, and described in the Government's white paper, had been reported to the Commission at previous sessions, and activities in connection with it, coordinated by the Narcotics Advisory Committee, were constantly being pursued. The direct Bangkok-Hong Kong route continued to be the one most favored by traffickers, but recently there had been a tendency to increase use of other southeast Asian ports (particularly North Borneo ports and Singapore) as points for transshipment. Earlier reports had now been confirmed that large quantities of drugs were being airdropped in the Gulf of Siam-South China Sea area and then brought by boat to Hong Kong. One consignment handled by a syndicate operating in Hong Kong, Thailand, and the Republic of Vietnam had comprised of over 900 kilograms of opium and morphine. Some aircraft used in those operations were reported to be piloted by French nationals resident in Laos. Most opium entering Hong Kong was in the raw state; seizures had amounted to over 372 kilograms in 1962, the number being 2,139. Illicit import of morphine, usually in compressed blocks, was also a feature of the traffic from Bangkok: over 90 kilograms had been seized in 1962. Some morphine was believed to move through Hong Kong to other destinations. Relatively little knowledge had yet been gained of the sources of the morphine base in which there was such a heavy traffic in southeast Asia, but it was generally accepted that production must take place close to many of the opium-growing areas. It was the "999" brand that was most commonly seized in Hong Kong, although at least eight different trademarks had been seen among various seizures. There was some evidence from wrappings and other features of the blocks that "999" morphine might come from more than one source; it was reported that as many as 20 different organizations had at one time or another produced blocks. As for heroin, which continued to be the main drug of addiction in Hong Kong, 8,456 offenses had been recorded in 1962. Fifty-seven kilograms had been seized. Clandestine laboratories continued to operate, seven having been detected and destroyed in the past year. Traffickers in Hong Kong, Macao, and Bangkok worked in close association. In the past 2 years there had been reports of illicit imports of heroin from Thailand, whereas local markets had previously been supplied within the colony or from Macao. In August 1962, the existence of a heroin manufacturing and trafficking syndicate with connections in Hong Kong, Bangkok, Singapore, and Malaya had been disclosed after the arrest in Hong Kong of an important heroin maker and trafficker. A clandestine factory had been set up near Penang, the first indication of illicit manufacture in Malaya. The syndicate was said to have direct connections with morphine supplies in the Laos-Thailand border area. It seemed clear from the evidence of manufacture in Malaya and from that of a recent seizure in Hong Kong of heroin direct from Bangkok that the pattern of trafficking in southeast Asia was widening.

88. The representative of the United States of America expressed appreciation of the informative report on Hong Kong and observed that the problem of the Triad organizations (Chinese groups involved in the illicit traffic in the Far East and Europe) appeared to be significant in recent trafficking developments. The representative of the United Kingdom stated that Triad organizations, of which there were many, were illegal in Hong Kong. They had a long historical background, and members of such societies had in the past had a great influence on criminal activity of all kinds, including the drug traffic. Many heroin traffickers apprehended and dealt with in the past had Triad backgrounds. The influence of the Triad organizations had been greatly reduced through sustained action by the authorities. Hong Kong had notified ICPO that two or three

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 709

Triad traffickers had made trips to Europe in recent years. The ICPO representative informed the Commission that those traffickers had been traced in the Federal Republic of Germany, Spain, and Switzerland; they had been attempting to organize an international trafficking network while posing as clothing manufacturers.

89. The representative of the Republic of Korea stated that his Government considered it a primary task to join with other countries in the work of suppressing the illicit traffic through close and effective international cooperation. Such humanitarian efforts were an appropriate part of the work being done by his Government in the social, economic, and political fields. He referred to information given in his country's annual report for 1962. The illicit traffic was mainly in raw opium, morphine, and heroin supplied by illicit cultivation and intended for the domestic market. There had been 4,221 prosecutions for narcotics offenses. Investigations to detect illicit poppy cultivation, which occurred in sparsely populated mountain areas, were made during the growing and harvesting periods by provincial and national agencies. Illicit import of drugs was also a problem. Smuggling was reported from the northern part of Korea and from Hong Kong. He believed that periodic regional meetings in the Far East and the continuous exchange of information on the traffic would assist materially in bringing trafficking under control.

90. The representative of China stated that the traffic in the Province of Taiwan was not supplied by any illicit cultivation or manufacture, and that all drugs were smuggled into the country, particularly from Hong Kong. Only small quantities of opium, morphine, and heroin had been seized, but enforcement measures were vigorously applied and much effective work was carried out in cooperation with the Hong Kong authorities. Four hundred and sixty-one cases of trafficking had been detected in 1962—about the same number as in 1961. Five-year term of imprisonment had been imposed in 401 cases, and in other cases there had been sentences of 10 years and even life imprisonment. With reference to the traffic in opium from Yunnan Province, he recalled his statements at earlier sessions of the Commission. In his opinion, the Yunnan area must be considered a source of illicit supplies, probably consisting of increasing amounts of morphine, rather than of opium alone. In a case of trafficking at Taipei in 1962, the offender had confessed to handling 2 kilograms of opium which had come from the Yunnan border area.

91. The representative of Japan said that, owing to strict enforcement measures carried out under the Narcotics Control Act, traffickers in his country had not attempted the clandestine manufacture of narcotics. Abuse of heroin was, however, a serious problem in Japan, and foreign traffickers were engaged in organized smuggling on a considerable scale, operating from Bangkok, Hong Kong, and Korea. The quantities of heroin seized in 1962 (8 kilograms) had been double the 1961 total. There had, however, been a considerable decrease in the number of narcotics offenses detected during the year, although 2,418 persons had been arrested. Of those, 1,797 had been involved in offenses concerning heroin. Every effort was being made by the Japanese Government to deal with narcotics problems; amendments to existing laws were before the Diet, which intended to raise the maximum penalties to life imprisonment and also provide facilities for the effective treatment of addicts. It seemed, however, that the problems of international smuggling could be dealt with only by international cooperation, and it was to be hoped that closer relationships between governments could be developed for the implementation of control measures. In that connection, valuable work seemed to have been done by the seminar on prevention of narcotics offenses in southeast Asia which had been held in Tokyo in 1962 under the "Colombo plan." In reply to a request from the representative of the United States for information, he told the Commission that some cases in which teenagers were involved had been reported in Kobe and Osaka and that educational campaigns were being undertaken to prevent young persons from being victimized by traffickers.

92. The ICPO representative said his organization had made a comprehensive study of the question of the extradition of narcotics offenders and that it was now engaged in further detailed study, at the request of the Government of Japan in particular. Unfortunately, there were lacunae in many extradition treaties, especially so far as concerned the illicit traffic and traffickers in drugs. He hoped the study would help governments to cope with that aspect of the problem of intraregional and international cooperation in dealing with traffickers. He wished to congratulate the Japanese Government for the contribution it had made to the seminar on prevention of narcotics offenses, which his organization regretted not having been able to attend. He appealed for the help of all the governments concerned in developing to the fullest possible extent the regional radio communications network which his organization was setting up in connection with the Manila station. There could be no doubt that such a facility for the constant rapid exchange of information would be of great use to governments in the area.

710 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

93. The observer for Thailand referred to the annual report of his Government and stated that seizures of over 6 tons of opium in 1962, as compared with about 4 tons in each of the 2 preceding years, were evidence of the continued very heavy traffic. As the geographical center of southeast Asia, Thailand was easily accessible from all directions. There were 42 possible routes for smuggling from Burma and Laos, but Amphur Chiangsan, the Pang Kway district, and the Mae Sai district seemed to be the three-border areas of Thailand mostly used for trafficking toward Bangkok, or in some cases into the Huey Sai district of Laos for transshipment by air to ships off the coast. Two seizures of opium of over 1 ton each, and a case concerning reports of 14 tons awaiting shipment from beyond the border, were cited in particular. The bulk of the traffic was intended for Hong Kong or Singapore. In 1962 offenses against the Opium Act, consisting mainly of smoking or illicit possession, had been committed by 2,117 persons of whom 1,673 had been convicted. Terms of imprisonment of from 6 months to 5 years, and in some cases of 15 years, had been imposed. The control of chemicals and intensive enforcement measures against illicit manufacture had resulted in the removal of illicit laboratories from their former sites in Bangkok, and the replacement of drug production by packaging work. Only one clandestine manufacturing center had been destroyed in 1962, compared with three in 1961; three packaging plants had been discovered in Bangkok. There had been cases of heroin smuggling over the northern borders of Thailand, and information had been sent in regarding the situation of a factory in the mountains outside Thailand; heroin and manufacturing equipment had been discovered in a hill tribe village. The total quantity (138 kilograms) seized in 1962 had been more than twice that seized in 1961, and nine times the total for 1960. Most of the cases, involving 7,434 persons convicted under the Harmful Habit Forming Drugs Act, had been in connection with offenses concerning diacetylmorphine. From reports that had been received, it was reasonable to believe that there were at least two factories for converting opium into morphine situated near the frontier close to Mae Sai. There was strong evidence to suggest that the areas beyond the northern borders of Thailand were the place of origin of "999" morphine. When the Lampang police seized 88 blocks of "999," the smugglers admitted that the drug had come into Mae Sai from the north. Moreover, in May 1962, the provincial police of Chiangrai had found two "999" molds among morphine- and heroin-producing equipment, which had been brought into Thailand by Chinese hill tribesmen disguised as refugees from Laos, during the civil war in that country. The Thai hill tribes were responding increasingly to the Government's programs of resettlement and crop substitution. A development and aid center, partly consisting of traveling advisory units, had been established. No reasonable estimates could be made of the amount of opium produced by the hill tribes. Much additional study of the situation was required, and until that could be accomplished he felt it would be premature for the Commission to discuss the "Social and Economic Survey of the Hill Tribes in Northern Thailand" (E/CN. 7/450).

94. The representative of the United States of America said he wishes to commend the Government of Thailand for the progress it had made, in the face of a difficult and complex situation, in suppressing the illicit traffic. The co-operation extended to the U.S. Government was appreciated. With reference to the question of the origin of "999" morphine, he drew the Commission's attention to the importance of any assistance which governments might be able to give in collecting evidence. The observer for Burma stated that "999" blocks had been seized in his country, but that the source could only be presumed to be the Burma mainland China-Laos-Thailand border area. The representatives of Canada and France remarked that in view of the opinion expressed by the ICPO representative that manufacture of morphine did not require highly specialized laboratory equipment, there was some possibility that clandestine factories might be fairly mobile.

95. Commenting on the traffic in southeast Asia, the representative of the United States of America informed the Commission that in the late summer of 1962 reports had been received by his government to the effect that a huge quantity (40,000 pounds, or about 18 tons) of raw opium, in leaf wrappers, had been smuggled from the Yunnan region through the Shan State of Burma for sale in Laos and Thailand and for smuggling to the United States. That shipment was reported to have been handled by the Kokang opium syndicate of Burma. In addition, he cited a report dated May 23, 1962, which his government had received from the United Nations Laboratory concerning a sample of opium submitted on November 25, 1958. The U.S. Bureau of Narcotics had requested the Secretariat of the United Nations to determine the origin of a sample of raw opium removed from a seizure made by the Republic of Korea ("case FE(KCZ-21) 54-57, Reports Nos. C-5402, 5404, 5408"). The Korean authorities, through their delegation in Geneva, had associated themselves with the U.S. request for a determination of origin. The report of the examination carried out by the United Nations Laboratory stated that the findings "indicate that this seizure very probably originates from mainland China. It is, however, not possible to be more definite in view of the small number of authenticated samples from the Chinese mainland."

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 711

96. The representative of Hungary observed that clandestine manufacture, local consumption of white drugs, and illicit export all appeared to be constantly on the increase in the Far East. There was evidence also that increasingly effective enforcement measures were being brought into play. However, insinuations about the People's Republic of China were being made with growing frequency; and in the absence of a representative of the Republic, the suggestion that that great country was supplying the illicit traffic in order to finance activities abroad and to purchase strategic materials must be rejected. Furthermore, such a suggestion was refuted by the situation in the Far East, for it could not be logically maintained that the People's Republic of China would engage in the opium traffic when trafficking in morphine and heroin there would be so much more advantageous owing to the high price and small volume (about one-tenth that of opium) of those drugs. Moreover, the evidence went to show that, despite the undeniable risks, clandestine manufacture was widespread in various countries, and such manufacture would not be profitable if drugs were being supplied to illicit markets by the People's Republic of China. He protested against the procedure whereby cases of trafficking were called in evidence without there having been any communication on the matter between the governments concerned, evidently because concrete proof was lacking. It should be remembered that information had been communicated to the Commission at earlier sessions concerning radical measures taken by the People's Republic of China for dealing with narcotics problems that had existed for centuries. He also alluded to the practice of using terms indicative of nationality when naming offenders in reports on illicit traffic. "Nationality" should be used only in its true sense, and it was necessary to know whether offenders were, in fact, nationals of particular countries; otherwise, people would be classified by race and not by place of residence. He was of the opinion that trafficking and addiction were not problems of any one race as such, but rather the scourge of society in general.

97. Referring to the quantities of morphine and heroin seized in recent years, the representative of Poland drew the Commission's attention to the enormous amount of opium which appeared to be involved in the illicit traffic. He feared that such a volume of raw material might further aggravate the illicit traffic in and use of "white drugs." He also expressed the view that the term "Yunnan opium" used in some reports of governments on the illicit traffic and also in some summaries prepared by the Secretariat, was at best misleading and that its use, while convenient, was unnecessarily harmful because it publicized the name of a province of the People's Republic of China in connection with information on illicit traffic that was not well founded. In his opinion, therefore, the use of the term should be discontinued.

* * * * *

101. The representative of China pointed out that it was on scientific grounds that mainland China had been considered to be the probable place of origin of the sample of opium seized in the Republic of Korea, to which the U.S. representative had referred. At previous sessions, he had repeatedly drawn the Commission's attention to the fact that opium was produced and morphine and heroin manufactured on the mainland of China, especially in the Province of Yunnan. Seizures of opium and heroin originating in mainland China had been mentioned in the annual reports of the United States of America and in the statements made by the U.S. representative to the Commission and, according to the annual reports of a number of governments in the Far East, large quantities of opium and opiates presumed to have come from the Yunnan-Burma-Laos-Thailand area, and in some cases explicitly from Yunnan, had been seized. At the Commission's 17th session, reference had been made to an estimate which placed the total amount of opium alone produced in the region at approximately 1,000 tons per year. He mentioned reports by various governments to the effect that the illicit traffic had not abated in the Far East and that seizures represented only a very small fraction of the total actually involved. Yunnan could in his opinion be regarded as one of the possible sources of opium and opiates (morphine and heroin), and he again emphasized the importance to be attached to the scientific evidence of origin for the sample of opium from a seizure made by the Republic of Korea.

712 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

102. The representative of India presented a comprehensive statement. Licit production of opium had increased gradually without any appreciable increase in illicit traffic. In 1962, there had been 2,643 cases of trafficking; about 6½ tons of opium had been seized, but that was a negligible quantity compared with the total production of 969,419 kilograms (nearly 1,000 tons) from the 44,589 hectares used for cultivation. In that connection, he said it would be useful if other producing countries could supply similar details of the total areas under cultivation and the total produced. The issue of strict licenses to every individual cultivator and the measurement of all poppy fields by cadastral survey and ground measurement were basic features of the control of cultivation in India. Illicit traffic was for the most part internal, and such import and export traffic as there was seemed to be decreasing. In addition to general antismuggling measures, special steps had been taken to prevent illicit export. In suspected cases of smuggling, there was a prompt exchange of information with other countries which might be interested. In 1962, only 10 attempts had been made at illegal export; there had been 8 cases of illegal import. Very strict control measures by India and Pakistan had practically eliminated cases of traffic involving Pakistan. He referred to the accounts which had been given to the Commission in previous years of the elaborate and efficient apparatus for prevention and enforcement established in his country under the Central Narcotics Organization. The Government of India wished to record its appreciation of the cooperation extended by the control authorities in Burma, Ceylon, Malaya, Pakistan, and Singapore, and by ICPO.

103. The observer for Burma referred to the statement he had made regarding his country at the Commission's preceding session (E/CN.7/L.244). Without repeating the detailed information that had thus been made available, he would briefly refer to the question of opium cultivation. The presumed area of opium production was divided by the Salween River into areas west of the river where cultivation was prohibited and those to the east where, in the Shan State, cultivation was still permitted. Illicit production undoubtedly did occur in the Kachin State, but it was mostly for local consumption, particularly in quasi-medical use and in connection with the observance of customary rites in some forms of worship. It was estimated that there were some 45,000 addicts in the Kachin State among a population numbering 525,000. Enforcement problems were complicated by legal difficulties and the inaccessibility of much of the area. Surveys were being carried out in the Hukawng Valley area to promote a better understanding of the local problems and to facilitate the treatment of addicts. As to estimates of opium production in his country, no sufficiently accurate figures were at present available. His Government would appreciate receiving from the Government of the United States of America some further information concerning the report that the Kokang opium syndicate of Burma had handled a shipment of some 20,000 kilograms of opium smuggled from Yunnan through the Shan State in 1962.

104. The Commission heard with interest a statement by the representative of the United Kingdom reviewing the situation in southeast Asia. To the question where the opium involved in the traffic came from, and where conversion into morphine and heroin took place, the evidence accumulating before the Commission confirmed what had previously been suspected to be the answer—the Burma-mainland China-Laos-Thailand border area. Opium from that border area had been traditionally described as "Yunnan" opium, and there seemed to be no point in trying to find a substitute for an expression that was so well established and had been used for so long. Though the Commission was gradually achieving a better understanding of the illicit traffic, too little was yet known about it, and much work remained to be done. Governments in the area were making vigorous attempts to deal with narcotics problems. The statements by the observers for Burma and Thailand were appreciated and every encouragement should be given to the efforts that were being made in their countries, despite the difficulties of forested mountain terrain, where there were few communications, and where ethnographic, cultural, and political differences among the inhabitants created complex problems so far as concerned the illicit manufacture of "white drugs," no part of the region could be regarded as beyond suspicion: evidence concerning Malaya, for example, had come to light in 1962. It seemed improbable, however, that factories were mobile, since in the areas in question it would be difficult or too troublesome to move the necessary apparatus, whereas the laboratory in the junks at Macau could be moved around quite easily. Some information was available as to the manner in which the drugs traveled, but the routes were frequently changed and the enforcement services had to be constantly alert in the designs and vagaries of highly organized traffickers. The final question that had to be asked was what action must be taken that was likely to be effective against the illicit traffic. More information was needed, and that need could be met through better reporting by governments and through special studies by individual countries. So far as the Kachin State was concerned, for example, technical assistance might help to solve the problem of traditional cultivation of opium by the hill tribes, who needed education and an alternative means of livelihood. A long-term effort was needed, but the volume and pace of the work should be increased. Many countries might also strengthen their ability to deal with control problems and fulfil their obligations under the treaties by adopting new legislation. Vigorous enforcement of laws had, of course, to follow. Then, too, steps could be taken to improve control of acetic anhydride since all possible approaches to the suppression of the traffickers' activities should be exploited. In general, closer cooperation amongst governments was essential. Conferences and joint work on special studies enabled useful knowledge to be shared and also made for closer and confident working relationships by providing valuable opportunities for experts from various parts of the world to meet each other. Finally, all possible measures should be taken by governments to provide treatment for addicts; any progress made in reducing and preventing addiction had far-reaching beneficial effects and was at the same time a means of attack on the underlying reasons for the existence of the illicit traffic in drugs.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 713

105. The representative of Canada, who stressed the importance of free and frank discussions on the illicit traffic, commended the review of problems in the Far East as being carried out in this spirit. There could be no doubt that one of the Commission's main objectives and a primary need in the struggle against the illicit traffic was clear identification of the problems to be dealt with and of the areas of the world where those problems had to be met.

106. The representative of France congratulated the representative of the United Kingdom on his account of the situation in southeast Asia, with which he wished to express his full agreement. The most important requirement was obviously that governments should make a maximum effort in the areas of cultivation, not only so far as possible to prevent the production of raw materials, but also to deal with the illicit morphine base and heroin manufacture which each year was observed to take place in close proximity to the growing areas. An important point in connection with manufacture—and one which seemed to require more attention—was the question of how traffickers obtained adequate supplies of the chemicals required for the transformation of drugs. He expressed appreciation of the operational services which ICPO provided, and of which governments, in their efforts to strengthen their programs and means of enforcement, would do well to make greater use. There were, however, two sides to the question how progress was to be made through ever-closer collaboration among governments: on the one hand, difficulties might exist because of differences in approach and in needs; but on the other hand, the advantages to be derived from diversity were not to be overlooked. So far as the pattern of activities by the international organizations was concerned, for example, it was to be hoped the time was near when much more work in the field of narcotics control would be undertaken directly by FAO, WHO, and UNESCO within the framework of larger concerted programs than it had as yet been possible to organize against the basic causes of addiction and the illicit traffic.

714 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ANSLINGER. Thank you.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Mr. O'Carroll.

The CHAIRMAN. You do solemnly swear the evidence you shall give before this Senate subcommittee shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. O'CARROLL. I do, sir.

TESTIMONY OF PATRICK P. O'CARROLL

The CHAIRMAN. Will you identify yourself for the record?

Mr. O'CARROLL. My name is Patrick P. O'Carroll. I am the Director of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics Training School. I am employed by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics in the Treasury Department.

The CHAIRMAN. You are Director of the Bureau of Narcotics?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Director of the Bureau of Narcotics Training School.

The CHAIRMAN. The Training School?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you been employed with the Treasury Department?

Mr. O'CARROLL. I have been employed since 1948.

The CHAIRMAN. And how long have you served in the capacity or position you now occupy?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Since 1956.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have a prepared statement?

Mr. O'CARROLL. No, sir, I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Counsel, you may proceed.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Mr. O'Carroll, do you have equipment and various types of heroin and narcotics that you could show to the committee and demonstrate various facets of the use, importation, smuggling, and so forth, of narcotics?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir, I can.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you go ahead in your own words and go through an illustration of how this thing operates?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Fine, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have someone to assist you?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir; Mr. Nichol, a Federal narcotic agent.

The CHAIRMAN. Does he expect to testify? He does not. Very well.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Will you start with the opium pipe, please?

Mr. O'CARROLL. What I would like to do, Mr. Chairman, first, is to talk about the addictive drugs we have heard about from Commissioner Giordano and our former Commissioner, Commissioner Anslinger.

In talking about these addictive drugs, I would like to mention that these are the drugs that cause three things to happen when a person begins using them. No. 1, a person develops a habit, which is a repetitive action, generally on a daily basis if the drugs are available. A person builds up a tolerance to these drugs, meaning that he has to take more and more of these drugs to get the original effect of the drug.

And I might mention the effect of the drug, according to the addict, when he uses any addictive drug, is it causes him to get a tremendous thrill, or, as he calls it, a kick or a bang, and he also mentions it is probably one of the most pleasant reactions he has ever received in life, one of the extreme pleasures of life.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 715

Accompanying this is a very strong feeling of comfort, tranquillity. The doctors call that a euphoric effect.

The third characteristic of an addictive drug is the area of dependence. There is physical dependence in that if the person is withdrawn from the drug he goes into what they call withdrawal symptoms. There is an emotional dependence that you heard about, and you will be hearing about from the doctors that will testify subsequently, which is really one of the great problems in curing an addict, this emotional dependency being extremely strong.

The addictive drugs begin with the opium poppy. The opium poppy is grown in various parts of the world. We need the opium poppy because from it we get opium and from the opium we get very useful medications.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is the opium poppy different from the ordinary poppy that we see in our flower fields?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir, it is. It is a particular type of poppy, called the papaver somniferum, which is the generic term, which means "sleep-producing poppy."

There are many other varieties of poppies but they don't produce opium. This is grown in the Near East, in the Yunnan State of China, in Burma, and in northern Thailand. In the Near East, it is grown in Turkey. Close to us, in the Americas, it is grown in Mexico. These are the centers where the opium is grown that is used in the illicit traffic.

The opium poppy is an annual. I have two varieties of poppy here, both the same type of variety.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are those the pods left over after the flower?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir, after the flower falls off the native goes out in the field and he scarifies the opium poppy.

Mr. ADLERMAN. By that you mean he cuts it with a knife?

Mr. O'CARROLL. He cuts it with a knife, and has to be rather careful and rather skilled in this project because he can't cut it too deeply and he can't cut it too shallow.

As he cuts it, a white juice comes out, very slowly, and collects on the point where it was cut. Generally, the worker will walk down a field backward so he doesn't brush against the sap that is emanating from the ones that he did cut, and he will go through a rather extensive acreage before he returns to the original first poppy that he did cut.

By this time, the opium has collected outside the opium poppy. This is a milky white juice. This milky white juice, when it reaches the air, oxidizes and turns brown. The man collects generally with a utensil that looks something like a measuring cup that you would find in a kitchen.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Sort of a scraping cup?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir. He scrapes this and eventually collects all of the opium from the poppies that he cut. This is eventually collected in a clearing point and the opium is then made into balls and dried out in the sun.

This is the crude opium. I have some crude opium to show the committee.

716 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would that be about a kilo that you have in your hand?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This would be approximately a kilo, yes, sir, 2.2 pounds.

Senator CURTIS. How much is it worth?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This kilo overseas, for a kilo of heroin, would be worth approximately $35.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In the illicit market?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The official price paid by the processor would be what?

Mr. O'CARROLL. I believe it is around $6 to $10.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Or about $15 or $16.

Senator CURTIS. What would it retail for? I am speaking of the illicit trade.

Mr. O'CARROLL. For 10 kilos of crude opium you could net a yield of 1 kilo of morphine, and in that particular area, in Turkey, it would cost about $350.

From the crude opium, by a chemical process—not so much a chemical process, it is an evaporation process—you get your smoking opium, which is a drug of choice in many countries in the world.

I have with me some smoking opium. You might like to compare it with crude opium. The crude opium generally has twigs and various types of impurities in it. But the smoking opium is the finished product.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there any special pipe used for the smoking opium?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it in cigarette form?

Mr. O'CARROLL. I have a pipe with me that you might like to see. The pipe consists of a stem and a bowl. The bowl looks very much like a doorknob with a small hole in the center. The man that would be smoking opium would use what they call a yenhok in Chinese.

It looks very much like a woman's darning needle. He will dip this into the smoking opium and make a small ball on the tip of this particular needle. He will light a lamp, generally a peanut oil lamp, and he will hold the pill of opium over the lamp until it begins to sputter and smoke.

As it does sputter and smoke, he plunges it into the hole or aperture of the pipe. There is now a small hole through the pill of opium, and he holds it over the lamp and as it sputters and burns, he smokes it.

He generally takes about three of these pills before he gets into this euphoric state, this feeling of tranquility, being comfortable.

The CHAIRMAN. You have to have all of that particular equipment to smoke opium?

Mr. O'CARROLL. It is a very elaborate affair, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. They make a real project out of it. It is not like smoking a cigarette or a pipe.

Mr. O'CARROLL. Believe me, Mr. Chairman, it is a very elaborate project and when it was smoked here in the United States 15 or 20 years ago, and it is not being smoked today, they generally had—

The CHAIRMAN. That elaborate equipment is not needed for the smoking of marihuana.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 717

Mr. O'CARROLL. No, sir. This is in cigarette form.

The CHAIRMAN. They take that in cigarette form.

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is right, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. This, though, is a real ceremony or project.

Mr. O'CARROLL. This is quite an elaborate project. Generally, when people would smoke, they would hire what they call an opium chef and he would handle all of the trimming of the wicks, of the lamp, and making sure the pills were the right size, the right consistency. There was quite a bit of work involved in this.

The CHAIRMAN. My counsel suggests that some of these pipes are rather expensive. What do you know about that?

Mr. O'CARROLL. In China they have some truly elaborate pipes made out of silver. They are generally made out of bamboo, but filigreed with silver, some unusual ivory bowls, and some of these have been passed down from family to family, from the grandfather to the father.

The CHAIRMAN. They don't wear out?

Mr. O'CARROLL. They don't wear out, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Some are collectors items, I understand.

Mr. O'CARROLL. Some, I understand, are truly collectors items. I don't know if you can put a price on them.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well.

What would be the value in this country of the amount of opium for one ceremony of smoking?

Mr. O'CARROLL. I would say approximately $25 or $30, Senator.

We have here what is called a 5 tael chin in Chinese. It is about 7½ ounces of American weight. This would cost approximately $400 on the illicit market, when it is sold on the street.

The CHAIRMAN. About $400?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. And how many smokes would they get out of that? I guess you would call them smoke sessions.

Mr. O'CARROLL. I think you could get quite a number of sessions out of it.

The CHAIRMAN. I was trying to get to what it would cost to the user purchasing his product illegitimately.

Mr. O'CARROLL. I would say it would cost approximately $30 a day if a man had a regular opium habit and did it on a daily basis.

The CHAIRMAN. How many times would he have to smoke daily to keep the thrill, to keep the kick?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This is not as deadly as the heroin. Generally, it would be on a daily basis, once a day.

The CHAIRMAN. Only once a day?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This was general. But what they might do, in order to allay the pains of withdrawal, because they could go into withdrawal if they are heavy opium smokers, is scrape the ashes of the opium they had smoked from the bowl. They have a little scraper for this. They generally, then, with the ashes of opium mix this with wine or water.

During the day, when they would get these stomach pains because they weren't able to, as they say, lie down with the smoke, they would drink this solution. They called it yenshee.

The ashes would contain the morphine.

718 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. They would drink the ashes?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is right, in a wine or water solution. This would keep them from becoming sick.

The CHAIRMAN. So, there is no waste. Even the ashes are used.

Mr. O'CARROLL. Even the ashes are used, yes, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That can is a 5 tael can, is that correct?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That would give you what; about four or five smokes? How many smokes would you get out of that?

Mr. O'CARROLL. I am not too sure.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, it would give you about 20 sessions?

Mr. O'CARROLL. I would say about 20.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That would be about $30 or $40 a session.

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is right.

From the crude opium, by a chemical process, you can make morphine base. This is what is happening in a number of countries in the world. You have heard of the term "morphine base." What generally happens, as an example in Turkey, when the farmer goes into Istanbul or Ankara, he will sell the crude opium that he harvested in his particular field.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that the crude opium—the package that you have in your hand?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This is the crude opium, Mr. Chairman.

What he will generally do is sell it on the illicit market. The people who buy it would buy it in rather large quantities. They, then, have the problem of transporting this to what might be termed a "victim" country, a country that has no opium and does want heroin. They don't like to transport it in this bulk because it is very large.

It is easily identified by enforcement officers along the borders of these countries. So, they would like to reduce this to a powder. They reduce this to the powder which is the morphine base.

I might mention Turkey is making great strides in this area, although they are one of the principal problems we have in the illicit traffic in that section of the world.

They are making great strides and they now have a law in Turkey that if any man converts crude opium into morphine base or heroin he will get the death penalty.

This is a recent law. It has just been enacted in Turkey. As a result of this, many of the smugglers have gone down to Syria, which is a neighboring country, and used Syria as the point where they would convert the opium into morphine base.

Mr. ADLERMAN. When you convert the opium into morphine base, it results in reduction from 10 pounds, we will say, of opium, to 1 pound of morphine base; is that correct?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. What do you mean by "morphine base"? Do you then have to process that further?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes; to make morphine and then heroin.

Mr. ADLERMAN. As I gather, the opium is reduced to a morphine base by a laboratory process, and this is done now in Syria or Lebanon, and had formerly been done in Turkey, but because of the death penalty, it has been moved out of there. They have been doing it in Syria and Lebanon for some time; is that correct?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 719

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You may proceed.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask this one question: Suppose you had 10 pounds of that raw opium; how much heroin will that produce?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That will yield 1 pound of heroin.

The CHAIRMAN. One pound?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You spoke about 1 pound of morphine base awhile ago.

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct, sir. The transition from morphine base to heroin has no loss in the process.

Mr. ADLERMAN. As a matter of fact, there may be a slight increase.

Mr. O'CARROLL. There may be a slight increase.

Once they have the morphine base in Syria or in Lebanon, they ship it out generally by ship and sometimes by plane to Italy or to France. Generally, they go into Marseilles. In Marseilles, the organized groups that are conducting this traffic generally hire a villa on the shore of France and they will wait a month or two, until they are sure there is no police activity, because the French Surête, of course, are working very closely on these organized groups.

We also have a man in Marseilles, a Federal narcotic agent, and we also have an office in Paris.

They reduce the morphine base to heroin, ship it up to Paris and, from Orly Field in Paris, they will fly it into the United States, into Canada, or into Mexico.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you have any samples of the 999 heroin that we were discussing a little while ago?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Sir, I don't have any 999 at the moment, but I do have another series that is also known in the Far Eastern traffic. This happens to be AAA.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What is that?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This is a morphine base, sir, and this is simulated. This is a plastic cast of an actual block.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The 999 is sort of tan colored?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. But similar in size, and taste, and so forth?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Almost identical.

Mr. ADLERMAN. These are the ones produced in the Far East?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Commissioner Anslinger discussed the 999 and I thought you might have it with you.

Mr. O'CARROLL. I might mention in talking about the Far East I have received a sample of crude opium. This opium was smuggled into Taiwan from Laos and China.

According to the confession of the criminal, the opium was produced in the Yunnan Province and transported to Laos for sale.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is in Communist China?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yunnan Province is in Communist China.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think that sample shows that it was covered with a Chinese newspaper.

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes; this is interesting because although this was repacked, the inner material of the package was a Chinese newspaper—a Chinese Communist newspaper. The opium sticks to the paper and was difficult probably to tear off. It is easily identified as of Chinese Communist origin.

720 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, you can identify the source by the fact that it was wrapped in a Chinese Communist newspaper?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That plus the statement from the criminal that it was produced in Yunnan Province.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you have any of the paraphernalia showing the use of morphine, or the use of heroin?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir; I have. I thought before I would show that, Mr. Adlerman, I might mention about the heroin coming into the United States in kilo quantities. Would you like me to discuss that?

Mr. ADLERMAN. All right.

Mr. O'CARROLL. I brought with me a partial amount of heroin that was seized by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics in New York, with the cooperation of the New York City Police Department. I think it shows in a way, some of the traffic into the United States and also the work of the enforcement agencies in this particular area. These packages, 45 kilos in all, were seized as a result of an investigation that began in November 1961, by a Federal narcotic agent.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is that one of the packages there?

Mr. O'CARROLL. No, sir; it is not.

This happens to be one in my hand now.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are they about 1 kilo packages?

Mr. O'CARROLL. These are half kilo packages, Mr. Adlerman.

Mr. ADLERMAN. How many kilos were involved?

Mr. O'CARROLL. The total amount of heroin seized in that particular case was 45 kilos of heroin.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Have you an outside estimate of what the total value would be on a retail base?

Mr. O'CARROLL. On a retail base, if this were adulterated as it is and went down to the street level, each kilo would be approximately $225,000.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That brings up another subject. The heroin that is sold to the addict is cut many times in the process from the time it is brought into the United States. It is adulterated and cut many times. Would you say as high as 20 times?

Mr. O'CARROLL. I would say it goes down to a 5-percent base and this would be approximately 20 times.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, the pure heroin is mixed with other substances. What other substances are generally mixed with it?

Mr. O'CARROLL. The heroin is generally mixed with what is called milk sugar, which you can buy in any pharmacy. This is a very popular way.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It looks like heroin.

Mr. O'CARROLL. It looks exactly like heroin. It is a fine, white powder. In New York City, and this is fairly recently, they have been using another item which you can also buy in a drugstore. It is called Mannite.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They use Mannite because it has a taste similar to heroin?

Mr. O'CARROLL. It has a bitter taste to it.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, the addict would test it to see that he is getting heroin and would want to make sure he can taste it?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 721

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is right. An addict, when he buys from a person he may not know, and would like to test the product that he buys, he will generally taste-test it. He will put his finger into the powder and taste it on the tip of his tongue. If it has a bitter taste, this would be an indication to him that it is good heroin. The peddler, of course, knows this and mixes in with the sugar some quinine. That will also give him the taste.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That quinine will give a bitter taste.

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. But generally speaking, the addict who buys from the street peddler or at the street level, actually is getting a very highly adulterated form of heroin?

Mr. O'CARROLL. It is so highly adulterated, Mr. Adlerman, that in the past few years, and this is current to the present day, they haven't seen any case of classic withdrawal in our hospitals that are treating these addicts.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Sometimes they actually do get some high rated heroin and when they injected it they don't have the built-in tolerance and are killed, are they not?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is true.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In a case in Baltimore, there was a professional football player who was killed that way.

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is right, sir. Generally, what happens when you use one of these narcotic drugs the respiration rate lowers, and if you use a huge amount of it, the respiration just stops and the man dies. There have been some instances on record, and the medical examiner in New York has discussed some of these cases, and I happened to hear about it, that the homicide people in New York when called to a death of unnatural causes quite often will find the heroin needle still sticking in the man's arm.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Coming back to the sources of these supplies, the United Nations makes an attempt to identify the sources of supply of any opium, is that true?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. By means of a very involved process, the so-called neutron process, they can practically identify the source of any opium grown anywhere in the world, almost naming the village or county or place where it is grown if they have samples of the original growths, official samples from that area. Is that correct?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct. We have a chemist in the Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Unit in the Treasury Department. This is called neutron activation analysis. There has been a great deal of work done in Tennessee on this project.

As a result of it, if they have a true sample, putting it through this neutron activation process, they can pinpoint not only the country of origin but, as you mentioned, the actual county or almost the farmer where it came from.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And samples have been obtained from almost all over the world except Communist China?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They can trace back any seized opium, almost to the village or county or town from where it comes, except for that coming from the Communists.

722 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. O'CARROLL. Except for the Communists.

Mr. ADLERMAN. All right, thank you. You may proceed.

Mr. O'CARROLL. Once this heroin is flown into the United States in these kilo quantities, and this is generally the quantity it does come in, generally coming in by airplane or ship, it comes in generally to the ports of New York City, or it might come into the country of Mexico, Mexico City, or it may go into Montreal, Canada.

Once it is there, it then comes into the United States, across the border.

Of course, this is where Customs enters into the picture. They have had some real success in this particular area.

But these men are quite cunning and they use all kinds of devices and ingenious methods to smuggle the narcotics in. In this particular case, a French television star, whose name was Jacques Angelvin, smuggled the heroin in his Buick Electra that he transported from France to the United States.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What?

Mr. O'CARROLL. A Buick automobile. This particular automobile had a welded trap in the gasoline section of the automobile and it passed through customs. It came to our attention—and this is a little interesting, and I might mention this particular case quickly, Mr. Adlerman—when we had some Bureau of Narcotic personnel in New York looking for a fugitive. This man's name was Angelo Tuminaro. They learned that his nephew, a man by the name of Pasquale Fuca, was in communication with him, and they conducted a surveillance on this person, Fuca, from the beginning of November until late November.

At that time, and I believe it was around November 21, 1962, they saw this person, Fuca, in an automobile bearing a Canadian license plate. They checked this out through the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and learned that the automobile belonged to a man by the name of Martin, who was a well-known drug smuggler in Canada.

They then began an intensive surveillance with the help of the New York City Police Department and learned, after almost 3 months of around-the-clock surveillance, that this man was in communication with a man by the name of Jean Jehan, who is a well-known narcotic trafficker from France. They had a conversation in a hotel room in a midtown hotel in New York City, and after this conversation ended Jehan was then followed by our narcotics agents and members of the police department.

Jehan was followed to this man Jacques Angelvin, the French television star, and they began a surveillance of this particular personality, and found that he was in communication with Fuca. They saw a suitcase passed between Jacques Angelvin and Fuca and they arrested both of them with arrest warrants and search warrants. They searched Mr. Fuca's residence in Brooklyn and in the ceiling of the basement in his home they found 12 kilos of this particular heroin, also a machinegun, and also some pistols.

They continued working on the investigation and they then uncovered 33 more kilos in the brother's home, whose name was Anthony Fuca.

All of these people received prison terms in State court.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 723

Mr. ADLERMAN. There are many ingenious devices, as you can imagine, in trying to smuggle the heroin into the United States. Do you have any of the types of equipment that they use?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir. I have a very interesting case here that you might like to look at.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What is that? Will you explain it?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This is an aluminum suitcase, rather lightweight, and it was made by a French smuggler who was operating out of Mexico City. It came to our attention when we were conducting a case in New York on this particular French smuggler.

He gave our agent this particular suitcase, our undercover agent who was negotiating for heroin. He asked the agent if he knew of any tinsmith in New York City who could repair the suitcase for him. He said, "This is my smuggling suitcase," and so this was eventually part of the case. The smuggling suitcase, which is rather ripped up now, as you can see, has the sides hollow. These were, of course, welded together, riveted together, and it was a very elaborate smuggling type of suitcase.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, one box inside of another?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. With hollow walls.

Mr. O'CARROLL. Hollow walls around the suitcase. This was used on many smuggling ventures until it came to our particular attention.

Mr. ADLERMAN. How much could he smuggle in that?

Mr. O'CARROLL. I think in this particular instance they smuggled 30 kilos of heroin into the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. What would that sell for when they got it here?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Down at the street level, at $225,000 per kilo, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. $225,000 per kilo. What did it sell for to the one who purchased it?

Mr. O'CARROLL. The man who purchased it would pay $18,000 to $21,000 for that particular kilo, per kilo.

The CHAIRMAN. He would pay $18,000 to $21,000 per kilo. How many did you say came in in that?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Approximately 30.

Senator CURTIS. What is the value of all of that you have spread out in front of you?

Mr. O'CARROLL. I think we would have to inventory it, Senator Curtis. I am sure it is worth millions of dollars.

The CHAIRMAN. Millions of dollars?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Millions.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The 45 kilos of that heroin, what would that come out to?

Mr. O'CARROLL. I am not much of a mathematician, Mr. Adlerman, but 45 times $225,000.

Mr. ADLERMAN. About $11 million.

Do you want to go further in your testimony?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir.

I also have another hidden trap technique that these people in organized crime use. They have a number of different techniques to secrete the heroin in their apartments or hotels. This happens to be a hassock, which is rather interesting.

724 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would you describe what you are doing?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This is a normal hassock that you would find in, I presume, many apartments. In this particular hassock there were 12 kilos of heroin. This was seized from a man by the name of Anthony Valucchi.

Mr. ADLERMAN. How is that activated?

Mr. O'CARROLL. By a solenoid, with a battery. You have to find two buttons underneath this particular hassock. When you press the buttons, you need a second man to help you to lift it open.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are they visible?

Mr. O'CARROLL. No, these buttons are covered by the cloth in the back.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They are not visible even if you turn it upside down?

Mr. O'CARROLL. No, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you turn it bottomsides up? You put some red marks where the buttons are.

Mr. O'CARROLL. To assist me in finding the buttons.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They are hidden from view?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And you have to press both buttons to open it up?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The only way you could tell would be to have an expert to find that, is that correct?

Mr. O'CARROLL. You would have to find a man who is an excellent searcher.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You have batteries inside and a solenoid switch?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir; and a lock.

The CHAIRMAN. Was all that equipment in it when you confiscated it?

Mr. O'CARROLL. All of this equipment; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And the purpose of that is to open and close it?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct. This is as it is closed, and by activating the buttons it would open. You have to press the buttons to open it. This is locked otherwise.

This is also an example of the elaborate traps that they have in automobiles that come across our borders from Mexico and Canada.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They have similar ways to open up the back seats and so forth.

The CHAIRMAN. You can't examine or inspect everyone who comes across the border. You have to use some judgment, don't you, or your agents, as to whether there are suspicious circumstances to indicate that there is a need for a search; is that correct?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct, Mr. Chairman. Customs has a very difficult job because of the heavy traffic on the Mexican border and the Canadian border, and if they searched everyone coming across, the traffic, of course, would be piled up for miles and miles. Generally, they act on information. They act on what they call "lookouts," where they have people's photographs in their customs office that they continually look at. When they see these people crossing the border, they will give them a minute search, which might include putting the automobile up on a regular lift that you would find in a garage and looking at it very closely, mainly for unusual wiring, because this is the common technique that they are using today.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 725

Generally what they will do is wire the ignition switch so you must turn on the ignition switch, and sometimes you also have to pull a switch for the heater of the automobile and then, by pressing a hidden button, this trap in the back of the automobile will open up. It is usually hidden in the upholstery. It is very, very difficult.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you have any samples of marihuana and cocaine to show?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. We will have to conclude within about 5 minutes.

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir.

I have with me what is called a brick of marihuana. Marihuana sells for approximately $125 a pound, and quite often it is compressed into this brick shape so they can conceal it in trucks, in automobiles. Sometimes they take away the upholstery of the automobile and place these inside. Sometimes they take the side panels of the doors and place this inside and bring it across the border.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you have any samples of the original weed?

The CHAIRMAN. What does that brick weigh?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This is about 2 pounds, Senator. It would cost $250.

The CHAIRMAN. To the purchaser here?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This is to the purchaser.

The CHAIRMAN. What will that finally retail for?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This would yield in the form of cigarettes about $700. You would get about 700 cigarettes from these 2 pounds.

The CHAIRMAN. About $1 a cigarette retail?

Mr. O'CARROLL. About $1 a cigarette. I have some cigarettes with me. Generally they are sold in this quantity. It might be a quantity of 5, 10, or 15, and you have to pay that amount, $1 per cigarette.

The CHAIRMAN. Are those a regular sized cigarette?

Mr. O'CARROLL. No; it is a rather unusual cigarette, Mr. Chairman. It is long and it is thin. It is extremely thin.

The CHAIRMAN. How long does it take to smoke one of those up; based on the ordinary cigarette, would it go up in a minute?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This goes up very quickly because it is quite dry and they puff on it quite vigorously.

The CHAIRMAN. Do they inhale it?

Mr. O'CARROLL. They inhale it in tremendous drafts of inhalation. They have to really suck hard and bring that smoke down into their stomach.

The CHAIRMAN. I was wondering how you were going to get 700 cigarettes out of that package. But they are this size?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is the standard size, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. You say you have the original weed there?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir. This is the original leaf which is enclosed in a plastic. This is what they crush to make the marihuana.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is this grown, principally?

Mr. O'CARROLL. It can be grown anywhere in the world and it is grown everywhere in the world. But the marihuana users in the United States use the Mexican variety, mostly from Mexico.

The CHAIRMAN. I see you have a male flower and a female flower. What is the difference? Which one is the most potent?

726 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. O'CARROLL. The most potent is the female, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That can be grown in lots on the streets of Washington, New York, Philadelphia, or any place?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. As a matter of fact, they grow along the sides of the roads in some areas of the United States.

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. I am very sorry that we have to suspend at this time, and not only suspend, but I am compelled to recess over until in the morning. Some other matters have come up that have to take precedence over this hearing. I am not sure but what I could continue the hearing this afternoon if I knew I could get two members of the committee to attend and proceed with the hearings, but we are all under such a strain now in work on the floor trying to process legislation, appropriation bills, before adjournment. Each Senator has his problems and cannot be every place he needs to be.

I know of no other way to do it if we continue these hearings at this time except to come in in the morning and get as much done as we can and then determine each day whether it is possible for us to resume and proceed in the afternoon. That is the only way I know to do it. We are under a difficult situation and doing the best we can.

Of course, we are not through with your testimony and I will have to ask you to return.

We will recess over until 10:30 in the morning.

(Members of the subcommittee present at time of recess: Senators McClellan and Curtis.)

(Whereupon, at 12:30 p.m. the subcommittee recessed, to reconvene at 10:30 a.m., Thursday, July 30, 1964.)

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

THURSDAY, JULY 30, 1964

U.S. SENATE,
PERMANENT SUBCOMMITTEE ON INVESTIGATIONS
OF THE COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS,
Washington, D.C.

The subcommittee met at 10:30 a.m. in room 3302, New Senate Office Building, pursuant to Senate Resolution 278, agreed to February 10, 1964, Senator John L. McClellan (chairman of the subcommittee) presiding.

Members of the subcommittee present: Senator John L. McClellan, Democrat, Arkansas; Senator Karl E. Mundt, Republican, South Dakota; Senator Carl T. Curtis, Republican, Nebraska; Senator Jacob K. Javits, Republican, New York.

Also present: Jerome S. Adlerman, general counsel; Paul B. Kame-rick, assistant counsel; LaVern J. Duffy, assistant counsel; Philip W.
Morgan, chief counsel to minority; Eugene J. Marshall, Bureau of Narcotics; Ruth Y. Watt, chief clerk.

The CHAIRMAN. We will come to order.

(Members of the subcommittee present at time of convening: Senators McClellan and Javits.)

The CHAIRMAN. We will resume with Mr. O'Carroll, who was testifying when we had the recess yesterday.

Very well, Mr. O'Carroll, if you will take up about where you left off with your testimony yesterday, we will proceed.

TESTIMONY OF PATRICK P. O'CARROLL—Resumed

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yesterday I was talking about marihuana and mentioning the leads of marihuana made into marihuana cigarettes. I also brought with me a substance which is also marihuana, but it is the refined marihuana and it is a very strong type and it is called hashish.

This is principally used in the Near East and the Middle East. We seldom see it in this country. It is a great problem in the United Arab Republic. It is principally grown in Lebanon and shipped into the United Arab Republic, as well as other countries of the Middle East. This is called a slipper of hashish, and it is quite potent.

The CHAIRMAN. What would that sell for on the American market?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This would sell for approximately $250 in the illicit market, but we seldom see it, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. We have no particular problem with that?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Fortunately, not with this, because this is extremely strong.

728 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. The source of that is Africa.

Mr. O'CARROLL. The source is the Middle East, generally the country of Lebanon.

I also brought with me some coca leaves that you may be interested in seeing. As you heard from the testimony of Commissioner Giordano and Commissioner Anslinger, these coca leaves are from the coca bush, which is grown in Peru and Bolivia, and in Colombia.

The CHAIRMAN. Are those bushes cultivated as we cultivate something over here, that we want to grow and use, or do they just grow wild?

Mr. O'CARROLL. No, they are actually cultivated.

The CHAIRMAN. And they are specifically grown for the purpose, is that right?

Mr. O'CARROLL. For the coca leaf, which is a custom in Peru and Bolivia and Colombia to chew this coca leaf, and this is the major use of the coca leaves. However, there is a cocaine alkaloid and by a chemical process you can come up with the drug called cocaine, and this is a white powder that looks very much like epsom salt that you have in your home.

It is highly crystalline and the addicts or users in the United States use this cocaine by sniffing it into their nose.

I have a number of boards here that you may be interested in seeing. These are exhibit boards. One is on opium and another is on heroin, and the third is mainly on marihuana. As I mentioned to you yesterday, the opium is smoked in the opium pipe and we have an opium pipe here.

We also have on the board an improvised pipe which you sometimes see. This improvised pipe is made of bamboo and the bowl is actually a bottle that is taped to the bamboo pole. This particular item up here is a very hard pillow made out of plastic. It is a head rest.

The CHAIRMAN. While they are smoking, they recline, is that right?

Mr. O'CARROLL. They recline while they are smoking and you can't stand up as you are smoking, and you must lie down, and as you lie down, you put your head on this rest so that you can elevate your head in order to facilitate your smoking.

There are other items on the board. This is a bamboo box with scales enclosed, and quite often you will see this in weighing the opium in an opium den.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't understand how they weigh opium with a paddle. That looks something like a paddle.

Mr. O'CARROLL. Evidently, it is a real old type of scale, that would balance out with an amount here. This is the scale box. You would take this scale which is now on the board and fold it up and put it in this scale box, and carry it. This could be carried.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The scale has two little pans on the side, is that right?

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And the pans fit into the case side of it.

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And the balance stick goes across between them.

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, that board you have been testifying from, there is one with respect to marihuana, and opium, and the—

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 729

Mr. O'CARROLL. Smoking of opium, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, the next board, what is that? What do you have there?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Now, the next board mainly consists of paraphernalia and also heroin. On the upper right is the raw opium as we mentioned yesterday, and you can make morphine base from it, and from the morphine base you make this white powder which is the heroin.

The heroin is packaged up in various types of containers, and in the street trade they may sell it in terms of 1 ounce or half an ounce. These days in some of our larger cities, they are selling it in small packages.

The CHAIRMAN. Those small packages at the bottom, what do they sell for?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This would sell for approximately $5, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How many shots or doses could you get from that?

Mr. O'CARROLL. You would get one shot, depending upon your addiction, sir. Some may adulterate this and make three shots out of it.

The CHAIRMAN. Depending on how long you have had the habit.

Mr. O'CARROLL. That is right, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How much resistance you have built up.

Mr. O'CARROLL. Exactly, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And the other larger ones, would they sell for $10?

Mr. O'CARROLL. The larger ones would be correspondingly higher, $10 or $20 or $30, going up to $300 to $500 for an ounce of heroin.

I have with me, Senator, and you might be interested in it, the paraphernalia used by the addict in using this heroin, and generally they carry it in a case, or sometimes in a handkerchief, and it consists usually of a spoon, and sometimes if they don't use a spoon, they will use a bottle cap, and they will improvise a spoon by putting a wire around it.

Now when you have a quantity of heroin that you would inject into your system, if you were an addict, you would take this bottlecap, which is the common type of paraphernalia that is used, and you would put water in it. You would add the heroin to the water, and you would put a match under the bottlecap and as this heats the heroin would dissolve into the water.

Generally, on this bottlecap they will have a small piece of cotton, because when they use the eyedropper to take this solution into the eyedropper, they don't want any impurities to go into the eyedropper.

The reason they don't want the impurities is that the hypodermic needle that they use is, of course, extremely small, and if they are injecting the needle into their arm and plunging the eyedropper so that solution would run in, if there are any impurities, it would clog the needle and therefore they would have to go through the whole process of going through the shot again.

Now, generally, what they do to make sure that there is a firm joint between the eyedropper and the needle, they would take generally a dollar bill, and they will tear a small corner from the dollar bill, and after, of course, they have the solution in the eyedropper, they will wrap the piece of currency tightly around the eyedropper, and attach the hypodermic needle to it.

The CHAIRMAN. You are not too experienced in that.

730 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. O'CARROLL. No, I am not. Once they have the solution in the eyedropper and the hypodermic needle attached with a very firm joint as a result of using this dollar bill on it, they would then inject it into their veins.

The CHAIRMAN. Why do they use a dollar bill? Is there any significance in that?

Mr. O'CARROLL. No, there isn't; it might be because it is handy. In all probability they use it because the texture of the paper is quite good and there won't be any leakage from it.

The CHAIRMAN. The reason you say dollar bill, is because it's likely they don't have more than dollar bills.

Mr. O'CARROLL. They don't have many $5 or $20 bills on them.

The CHAIRMAN. On those shots now, after they give themselves shots, how long will they last? Do they last a day or several hours?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Generally, and you have to speak in generalities, Mr. Chairman, because it depends on the weight of the individual and the amount of the drug taken and the purity of the drug, but generally, it would be every 4 hours if you are an addict, and the drug is available. He would be taking it approximately every 4 hours.

The CHAIRMAN. Would that include nighttime?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Generally, most of the addicts are late risers, and they might get up at 1 or 2 o'clock in the afternoon. They will immediately take a shot at that point if the drug is available in the house, and if it isn't, they will have to go out and find some.

I would say around 6 or 7 o'clock at night, they take another shot, and again at 12 o'clock, around midnight, and then before they go to bed at night, which might be 4 o'clock in the morning.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, you may proceed.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Does that complete your statement?

Mr. O'CARROLL. This generally completes my statement.

The CHAIRMAN. What about the other board?

Mr. O'CARROLL. The other board has some marihuana cigarettes that you saw yesterday. In the upper right-hand corner are some marihuana pipes which you don't see too often, but in the Greenwich Village area of New York or out in Venice, Calif., or some places where the beatniks, if that is the word, gather, some of them may be more sophisticated and use the pipe, by inserting the cigarette through the hole in the pipe, and it is usually made out of a chicken bone.

But you don't see this too often. It is generally smoked in the form of cigarettes, which you see in the right-hand corner.

The heel is an indication of how narcotics could be smuggled perhaps into prisons and into hospitals, or sometimes into the country. It is a hollowed-out heel. On the book, there are sometimes sellers of narcotics that will hide the narcotics in cutout sections of books, and they will have a number of books around, and sometimes the inexperienced officer may not thumb through it and, of course, would not find the heroin.

The pictures show the abscessed scars which often accompany narcotic addiction. Most of the times on the arms, and sometimes it is on the legs. It depends upon where they are shooting the injection, but I would say the majority use the arms for this, and, as a result of dirty needles or impurities in the drug, some abscesses are formed, and they are rather ugly looking and mainly from the impurities.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 731

Sometimes—talking about the abscesses—if an addict has a social disease or a blood disease, and he lends what he calls his outfit, which would be the hypodermic needle and the eyedropper, to a fellow addict, after taking a shot of heroin, he can transmit this blood disease to the other addict, and, of course, this has happened on a number of occasions.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well. Is there anything further?

Mr. O'CARROLL. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Are the law enforcement agencies, their personnel, able to keep up with—and I don't know whether this is a proper term—the scientific progress being made in this field, to the techniques of the trafficker and the victim and the means that they adopt. Are you able to keep current with it sufficiently and devise countermeasures to detect it?

Mr. O'CARROLL. Yes, sir. I would like to mention that as a director of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics Training School, we keep up to date on all of these methods and, since the school began in 1956, we have trained 1,418 local and State enforcement officers at the school.

Now, the instructors at the school, most of them are supervisors in the Bureau of Narcotics. We also have a doctor from Lexington, Ky., who is now an official here in Washington. He gives a course on the treatment of drug addiction.

We have the latest techniques in the laboratories, such as activation analysis, so the policemen of the country on a local and State level are certainly being educated in this matter. We certainly would like to educate a lot more and we are trying to do this. We have about eight classes a year.

The CHAIRMAN. The instruction you give to local and State officers, do you think that pays off and it equips them and develops in them a knowledge of the situation so that they are able to cooperate with you better and be helpful in that respect?

Mr. O'CARROLL. I think it gives them a great insight and understanding, those that are already trained in narcotic enforcement, on the things that we are doing, and it makes a much better cooperation between our agencies. Those who are inexperienced, and generally it is in those States that do not have a narcotic problem, are aware now of the problem and can take steps to prevent the problem from occurring in their community. I think it is extremely helpful, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, thank you, sir.

Senator Javits, do you have any questions?

Senator JAVITS. I have no questions, thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, we will call the next witness.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would like to call Deputy Chief Inspector Patrick J. McCormack, Deputy Superintendent Joseph Morris, and California State Bureau of Narcotics Director John Storer.

The CHAIRMAN. Will each of you be sworn.

Do you, and each of you, solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give before this Senate subcommittee shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. McCORMACK. I do.

Mr. MORRIS. I do.

Mr. STORER. I do.

732 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

TESTIMONY OF PATRICK J. McCORMACK

The CHAIRMAN. Beginning on my left, will you identify yourself for the record, please?

Mr. McCORMACK. Deputy Chief Inspector Patrick J. McCormack, commanding officer, Narcotics Bureau, New York City Police Department.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have a prepared statement?

Mr. McCORMACK. I do, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I believe you have indicated a willingness to have it inserted in the record as your testimony.

Mr. McCORMACK. I have, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you swear that the contents of this statement, which you submit for the record, are true to the best of your knowledge and belief?

Mr. McCORMACK. I do, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, the statement will be received and printed in the record at this point.

(The statement referred to is as follows:)

STATEMENT OF DEPUTY CHIEF INSPECTOR PATRICK J. McCORMACK, COMMANDING OFFICER, NARCOTICS BUREAU, NEW YORK CITY POLICE DEPARTMENT

Mr. Chairman, and distinguished members of the committee, I am happy to be here with you today to discuss the narcotics problem in New York City. The observations I make are based on the police department's experience in battling the evils of the narcotic traffic. They represent the crystallized thinking of 200 specially assigned detectives, who annually spend hundreds of thousands of man-hours in the field of narcotics law enforcement and who have gained a keen insight into their portions of the problem. We hope this experience will be of aid to the committee and the people of the United States.

We realize that the problem of control of narcotics addiction is a many-faceted one. It will take the closest cooperation among experts in medicine, law enforcement, social work, legislation, and other allied fields before any real progress can be made toward the goal of prevention and cure of narcotics addiction.

In order to evaluate the narcotics problem in the city of New York, let us examine the arrest figures of the police department for the years 1962 and 1963.

In this period, arrests for sale of narcotics or possession of narcotics as a felony rose from 2,080 in 1962 to 2,385 in 1963, an increase of 14.6 percent.

Arrests for the possession of narcotics as a misdemeanor rose from 5,834 in 1962 to 6,221 in 1963, an increase of 6.6 percent.

The number of persons arrested for any crime and found upon arrests to be drug users rose from 13,670 in 1962 to 14,345 in 1963, an increase of 4.9 percent.

These figures indicate that there has been an increase in arrests for violations of the narcotics laws and in the number of drug users arrested for violations of any law. We feel that our effectiveness has been stepped up but at the same time we also believe that there has been an enlargement of the narcotics problem. These statistics reflect both of these factors.

Of the drug users arrested 93.4 percent used heroin, while 4.3 percent used marihuana, and the remaining 2.3 percent used one of many types of drugs including cocaine, morphine, opium, barbiturates, and amphetamines.

A survey of all arrests effected by the police department during March 1964 was conducted to determine the number of arrests made of heroin users, the average amount of the drug used daily, and the average cost to the user. This survey indicated that of 16,751 arrests, 1,382 of the persons arrested admitted to being heroin users, comprising 8.25 percent of the total arrests.

The questioning of these 1,382 users indicated that they used 3,548 "bags" or "decks" of heroin per day. This amounts to an average use of 2.6 "bags" of heroin by one user per day. On March 22, 1964, 17 arrested users stated they used an average of 3.4 "bags" per day; this represented the highest average amount used daily. Conversely, on March 28, 1964, 30 arrested users stated their average daily consumption was 2 "bags" per day. One user claimed a 20 "bags" per day habit, the highest during this period while one-half "bag" per day was the lowest usage.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 733

The 1,382 admitted users declared that they expended an average of $12.30 per day to support their heroin habit. On March 22, 17 users said their daily cost was $16.59 per day. The lowest amount was stated to be $9.66 per day by 35 addicts on March 14. In one instance a user claimed his habit cost him $100 per day. The lowest expenditure per day was said to be $2.50 for one-half a "bag".

The "bag" or "deck" usually purchased by addicts at street level is priced at either $3 a "bag" weighing 1 grain with a 15- to 30-percent heroin content or $5 a "bag" weighing 2 to 3 grains with a 15- to 30-percent heroin content.

Of the 1,382 admitted arrested users, 863 had been previously arrested for a narcotic violation. These 863 were apprehended a total of 2,841 times. This reflects an average number of arrests of narcotic recidivists to be 3.3 at the present time.

A total of 332 of the 1,382 addicts or 24 percent of those surveyed, offered the information that they had undergone some form of hospitalization for their heroin usage.

Males comprised 1,258 of the heroin users apprehended, or 91 percent and females 124 arrested, or 9 percent.

We believe that narcotics addiction poses two problems: that of illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and that of the addict and prevention of addiction. The police department is interested in both.

The answer to illicit traffic can only be intensified law enforcement and stiffer penalties for drug traffickers. The New York City Police Department maintains the largest narcotics unit of any local police department in the world. It is second only to the Federal Bureau of Narcotics in size and activity.

The superior officers assigned to our narcotics bureau are trained at the Federal Narcotics Bureau School in Washington, D.C. Initial and refresher courses in local problems are given at our police academy to all members of the department to enable them to be familiar with and cope with violations of the narcotic laws.

Our department works closely with other law enforcement agencies in a constant effort to stop the flow of narcotics into New York City, and to arrest those who deal in narcotics in New York City. We maintain constant contact with the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, as well as with local law enforcement forces in the areas surrounding and adjacent to our city. This cooperation has been mutually beneficial to all agencies concerned, and to the public.

We believe we would be assisted immeasurably in our law enforcement efforts if Congress would restore the right to utilize fully wiretapping procedures. It is our experience that the higher-ups in illicit narcotic traffic are careful never to dirty their hands with the physical possession of narcotics thereby making their arrest and conviction difficult. Legalized telephonic interception will give us an effective means to bring them to justice.

In 1961, our efforts in enforcement of the narcotic laws were hampered by the Mapp v. Ohio decision by the Supreme Court of the United States. We have had some progress in New York State in obtaining the means to overcome the serious effects of that decision. Search warrant procedures have been expanded to adjust to the problem encountered and two new statutes with major impact on police authority became effective on July 1, 1964. The first is known as the stop-and-frisk law and provides for the temporary questioning of persons in public places under indicated circumstances and allows for the search of such persons when a police officer reasonably suspects that he is in danger of life or limb. The second is known as the no-knock law and provides for the execution of a search warrant without notice of authority, under indicated circumstances, when the property sought may be easily and quickly destroyed or disposed of, or that danger to the life and limb of the officer or another may result, if such notice were to be given. In order to insure the constitutionality of these two new laws and their continued availability to us every precaution has been taken in instructing law enforcement officers in properly carrying out their provisions. We are endeavoring, with the proper execution of added police powers, to protect the community, while simultaneously protecting and treating fairly all persons in it.

734 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Now to the addict problem. In New York State narcotics addiction is not a crime and the addict is not liable to arrest solely because of his addiction. It is the consensus among experienced law enforcement officers that there are two basic and harsh facts of drug addiction which are not too well known. One is that addicts beget addicts; that pushers, alone, do not. The other is that generally speaking addicts do not want to be cured.

In the light of these two facts we believe that detoxification, convalescence, and aftercare rehabilitation under proper supervision are absolutely necessary in any program for the cure of addiction. This belief conforms to the provision of the new Metcalf-Volker Act now in effect in the State of New York providing procedures in narcotic drug addiction cases. This belief also conforms to the procedures adopted by the New York City Health Department through its narcotics coordinator.

Under the present State and city programs against narcotic drug addiction the various qualified agencies are engaged in the greatest effort yet made to determine the causes and provide for the cure and rehabilitation of the addict. It is the intent and desire of our department to cooperate and aid in every way we can to insure the success of these programs.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you wish to make any further comment with respect to any of the matters that you have covered in your prepared statement or make any further statement pertinent to the subject under inquiry?

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes, sir, Mr. Chairman. I would also like to insert as a part of the record the instructions issued to each and every member of the New York City Police Department, in connection with the new stop-and-frisk and no-knock laws, so that their provisions will be carried out with care.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, is there anything further?

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you have a copy of that?

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes.

(The instructions referred to will be found in the appendix on p. 852.)

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have any questions?

Senator JAVITS. I just wanted to welcome you here, sir, and I didn't quite get the implication of the statement which you are submitting. It is the law, is it not, or the law just passed?

Mr. McCORMACK. You mean the statement that I said I would like to append to my statement.

Senator JAVITS. Yes.

Mr. McCORMACK. Those are the police department regulations with relation to the regulations and how they will be enforced and I am submitting them to show the care that is being taken not to violate anybody's constitutional rights.

Senator JAVITS. Is the witness making any statement here?

The CHAIRMAN. He is submitting a statement for the record.

Senator JAVITS. I would like to ask this witness one question, if I may.

In New York, with which we are both very well acquainted, I have heard varying estimates of the incidence of narcotics addiction among prisoners arraigned for felonies. I have heard this mainly from the judges of what was general sessions and now the supreme court, and I have heard estimates generally running around 30 percent. That is, 30 percent of the prisoners arraigned for felonies are narcotic addicts.

Mr. McCORMACK. No, Senator, it wouldn't be that high.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 735

Senator JAVITS. That is why I am asking you the question. Would you give us some concept of the incidence of narcotic addiction as it relates to the incidence of major crime, in either New York County or all of the counties?

Mr. McCORMACK. I will give it to you for the city as a whole.

Senator JAVITS. That will be fine.

Mr. McCORMACK. In 1963, there were a total of 206,248 arrests for all crimes, compared to 207,615 arrests in 1962. That is a decrease of 1,367 arrests.

Despite the decrease in total arrests, arrests of persons who are narcotic users increased to 14,345 in 1963, from 13,607 in 1962, an increase of 675 users.

In 1963, narcotic users made up 7 percent of the total persons arrested, while in 1962 narcotic users made up 6.6 percent of the total persons arrested.

Senator JAVITS. That is of persons arrested for all crimes or of those arrested for felonies?

Mr. McCORMACK. That is all crimes.

Senator JAVITS. What about felonies?

Mr. McCORMACK. Now, this is the table of narcotic and drug users compared to total arrests. That is for New York City and I gave you that.

Now, they have it split down into other categories. This is narcotic and drug users, compared to arrests for crimes against property. This is the selected felonies of robbery, burglary, and grand larceny, except motor vehicle, and grand larceny motor vehicle, and criminally receiving, frauds and cheats, and forgery and counterfeiting, arson, malicious mischief, extortion and blackmail, and then the totals.

Senator JAVITS. What is the percentage there?

Mr. McCORMACK. The percentage there is 11.7 percent.

Senator JAVITS. Is that the highest percentage of any? What about crimes against persons?

Mr. McCORMACK. That is much lower.

Senator JAVITS. So that 11 percent is the highest you have?

Mr. McCORMACK. 11.7.

Senator JAVITS. Now, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the charts may be submitted as part of the witness' testimony.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, they may be received.

Senator JAVITS. These are confidential?

Mr. McCORMACK. I have already submitted them to the committee, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Were they submitted as a part of your statement?

Mr. McCORMACK. No; they weren't, Mr. Chairman. I had forwarded them at the request of Mr. Adlerman.

Senator JAVITS. May they be reproduced?

The CHAIRMAN. They will be.

(The charts referred to will be found in the appendix on p. 856.)

Senator JAVITS. I have one other line of questioning. How do you define a narcotic user for the purpose of those statistics?

Mr. McCORMACK. Well, when he is brought to the station house and he is arrested, he is questioned by the desk officer, Senator, and he gives the answer on whether or not he is addicted to drugs.

736 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Senator JAVITS. So there might be a higher estimate if you left it to the arresting officer or the arraigning judge to determine whether or not an accused person is a narcotic user? This is his self-confessed definition you are giving us?

Mr. McCORMACK. That is right.

Senator JAVITS. Do you have any estimate of what the figures would be if you gave us the actual narcotic users as against the admitted narcotics users?

Mr. McCORMACK. No; I do not have any estimate.

Senator JAVITS. You would not reject the figure given me by the judges, which is approximately 30 percent, as necessarily inaccurate?

Mr. McCORMACK. No; I could not.

Senator JAVITS. You couldn't do that.

Mr. McCORMACK. No.

Senator JAVITS. These are just self-confessed narcotics users?

Mr. McCORMACK. That is right.

Senator JAVITS. I would state to the Chair authoritatively, because it has been stated to me by judges of the court which handles all felonies in New York County, that they estimate that 30 percent of those arraigned for felonies are narcotics users, and that this is, in their judgment, the most critical problem in law enforcement in the City of New York, certainly in the county of New York.

Mr. McCORMACK. Certainly it is.

Senator JAVITS. You would agree with that?

Mr. McCORMACK. I would agree it is a terrific problem and a terrific law enforcement problem and their estimates could be correct.

Senator JAVITS. Would you agree with them, Mr. McCormack, because I think this is really the question, that the principal incitement of crime, the one single greatest incitement to major crime is narcotics addiction?

Mr. McCORMACK. I would, Senator, yes.

Senator JAVITS. In other words, there might be 11 percent and for this reason might be 7 or 8 or 6 percent for various other reasons, but this is the biggest single one.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is right, and it is a major problem in the city of New York.

Senator JAVITS. Would you say it is on the rise, or in decline or unchanging?

Mr. McCORMACK. Apparently it is on the increase.

(At this point Senator Curtis entered the hearing room.)

Senator JAVITS. Now, has the New York State Civil Commitment Act helped you at all?

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes, it has, Senator, regardless of the people that may not be satisfied with it, we believe it is the first substantial step taken and that it should prove successful and that it is the best law that we have had so far.

Senator JAVITS. And would you think, therefore, that our experience deserves to be projected on the national level?

Mr. McCORMACK. I would, Senator; yes.

Senator JAVITS. You don't see our New York City problem as particularly different from the problem of any big city with narcotics addiction in it?

Mr. McCORMACK. I do not, Senator.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 737

Senator JAVITS. So the idea of civil commitment, you feel, is the first really constructive step to deal with the problem in many years?

Mr. McCORMACK. I do, Senator.

Senator JAVITS. I thank the Chair for allowing me to question the witness. I would say, Mr. Chairman, deplorable as it is for us, that we probably have the prime experience with this problem of any major community in the country, and so I do hope that the members of our committee and of the Senate will pay very serious attention to what is developed from the testimony with respect to New York City.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator. Do you feel, then, that the Senate committee in this instance, is not engaged in some pursuit, idle pursuit, of something that doesn't need attention?

Mr. McCORMACK. On the contrary, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. You feel this is an area where attention and effort and study and action, if we can determine what action should be taken, is not only desirable, but almost mandatory.

Mr. McCORMACK. I certainly agree with that statement, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have any suggestions as to legislation in—that is, Federal legislation, that the Congress should consider or that you think might be helpful in this field?

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes, I have incorporated in my statement a suggestion.

The CHAIRMAN. I haven't had the opportunity to read your statement, but you folks who are right next to this problem and have the experience and have the responsibility, I want certainly to invite your earnest suggestions and recommendations to what the Congress can do, if anything.

If you think of anything which you are considering doing, we would like to have your counsel on it. It is the primary purpose of this series of hearings to go into this field and try to determine if there is something more we can do here in the Congress to be helpful.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I have mentioned in my statement our request for Congress to give us the right of lawful telephonic interception.

The CHAIRMAN. You believe that is almost imperative, to cope with this situation.

Mr. McCORMACK. It is absolutely imperative, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. You know, we have a problem here. I have introduced legislation, and I am for it, but I do want us to use every precaution and take every proper restriction on it necessary to protect the rights of citizens. As long as we are really after a criminal or somebody violating the law and we are searching for that, that is fine, but I want to be sure that we place such safeguards on it that it is most unlikely that the authority will be abused in any way or misused.

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes, Mr. Chairman. That is why I was particularly interested in introducing into evidence before the committee the police department's instructions to its members in connection with the no-knock law, and the stop and frisk, to show how careful we are trying to be, in educating our officers not to violate the rights and the constitutional privileges of those who should be protected.

738 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. I may be mistaken, but I think the Congress would readily enact such legislation, if it could feel sure that there would be no such abuses of the authority granted. I may be mistaken, and it is just my judgment.

Mr. McCORMACK. Certainly, Mr. Chairman. We agree with that.

The CHAIRMAN. I would vote for it enthusiastically, if I could be assured that there would be no abuse of it. In other words, that it would only be applied in those cases where it would be properly used.

Senator JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, if I could sum up, because I have now run through the inspector's statement, I gather that the New York Police Department would recommend, first, having procedures adequate to meet constitutional and civil liberty safeguards.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is correct, Senator.

Senator JAVITS. That would be one branch of it.

Two, you like the new laws, the stop-and-frisk law, and the no-knock law, which you have described.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is correct.

Senator JAVITS. And three, what interests me especially, you like very much the idea of the Metcalf-Volker Act, which is detoxification, convalescence, aftercare and rehabilitation under proper supervision, with the mere addiction not a crime, but a cause for civil commitment, in an effort to bring about a cure.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is correct, Senator.

Senator JAVITS. Incidentally, Senator Keating and I have introduced legislation exactly for that purpose on the Federal level.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Senator, I have read your legislation, and Senator Keating's legislation, and I have attended symposiums where you have appeared, and I know the strenuous effort that both you and Senator Keating have put forth in the narcotics addiction problem, and I think the people who are addicted and the people who are trying to care for the addicts should be grateful to you.

Senator JAVITS. You are very kind, Inspector. And, finally, the idea of research, because this is an area which has suffered very severely from lack of work.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is right.

Senator JAVITS. I think that summarizes it. I thank you very much.

Senator CURTIS. I have no questions at this point, except I might just have one question about this wiretapping proposal. Is it true that one of the things that makes this necessary is that the big-management boys in narcotics aren't the ones you can pick up out on the street?

Mr. McCORMACK. That is absolutely correct, Senator. They won't go near the narcotics or touch them at all.

Senator CURTIS. The big brains and the big profits and the top side of management in narcotics peddling is directed behind the security they set up, and the only avenue of tying them in is communications.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is correct, Senator.

Senator CURTIS. Well, it seems to me that Senator McClellan's bill has a number of safeguards in it. As I understand it, instead of allowing people just to wire tap indiscriminately, you apply for a writ before a judge just like prosecutors now apply for a search warrant.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is right, Senator.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 739

Senator CURTIS. Then, from the very practical standpoint, it seems to me that if a court is going to admit evidence where a witness is physically concealed in somebody's premises or in back of their automobile, and let him testify, there isn't much logical reason for saying he can't testify as to what he heard over the telephone.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is correct.

Senator CURTIS. Because so far as invading individuals privacy, they are one and the same, only one is mechanical and the other isn't.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Captain McCormack, your testimony shows that the average cost of addiction per addict is about $12½ a day.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You have, according to the statistics that we heard yesterday, a minimum of 22,000 addicts in the city of New York today.

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That would lead to an annual cost for the purchase of narcotics of about $5,000 per addict, is that right?

Mr. McCORMACK. Approximately; yes, Mr. Adlerman.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In your experience as head of the narcotics squad, do you find that the narcotic addict is able to support himself by honest labor?

Mr. McCORMACK. Very rarely.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So that most of them must obtain the money from some other source or another.

Mr. McCORMACK. A good many of them; yes, Mr. Adlerman.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would you say that most of them obtain it through some illegal means?

Mr. McCORMACK. I would.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Now, some may obtain it through prostitution.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The male may obtain it through theft or burglary or something of that sort.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So that if we were to take even a figure of half, say 11,000, who support themselves by thievery or larceny of some kind, that would come to a figure of a quarter of a billion dollars a year in theft. If you figure the total amount of the theft it would have to be five times the amount the criminal will eventually get back from a fence.

Mr. McCORMACK. That would be correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is that your estimate?

Mr. McCORMACK. It goes into the millions, there is no question about that.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In New York City, the lowest estimate that you could put on the amount of theft that is created by addiction would be a quarter of a billion dollars a year.

Mr. McCORMACK. Let us put it anywhere from $5 million. When they get to these figures, they are astronomical to me.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Let us say $5,000 per addict, and there are 22,000 addicts, and it will come out to $110 million a year.

Now, if they had to fence their material, they usually get 25 percent or 20 percent on a dollar, is that right?

740 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. McCORMACK. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That would mean that they would have to fence a total of $500 million, or a half billion dollars a year.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is right. Is that the calculation that you made?

Mr. ADLERMAN. Assuming only half of them steal, it would come to a quarter of a billion dollars a year.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is correct, Mr. Adlerman.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Now, apropos of that, you have received a letter from Mr. Hoover, Mr. Chairman, as to the pertinency of the statements made by Mr. Giordano, and I think the most pertinent part of it is the statement that 73 percent of the narcotic offenders were arrested for some other criminal offense prior to their first arrest on a narcotics charge.

This goes to the statement that Senator Javits made, that the big problem that we have with the addict as a criminal is important here.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, I am going to let this letter from Mr. Hoover, and the report, appear in the record for information, without classifying it as sworn testimony, but just for information.

(The letter referred to follows. The report referred to will be found on p. 678.)

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION,
Washington, D.C., July 28, 1964.

Hon. JOHN L. McCLELLAN,
U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: In response to your letter of July 16, 1964, there is enclosed a brief statement concerning crime statistics available within the FBI on narcotic offenders.

It is hoped that the enclosed material will be of some value to your subcommittee. If we can be of any further assistance, please write.

Sincerely yours,

J. EDGAR HOOVER.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, thank you, gentlemen.

The next is Mr. Storer. Will you identify yourself for the record, please.

TESTIMONY OF JOHN E. STORER

Mr. STORER. My name is John E. Storer. I am the chief of the California State Bureau of Narcotic Enforcement.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you served in that capacity?

Mr. STORER. I have been chief of the bureau since 1958.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you a prepared statement?

Mr. STORER. I have, Mr. Chairman, and I have already submitted that to the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you state under oath that the contents of the statement to the best of your knowledge and belief are correct?

Mr. STORER. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. The statement will be received and printed in the record.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 741

(The statement is as follows together with a letter from Attorney General Stanley Mosk.)

STATEMENT OF JOHN E. STOREY, CHIEF, BUREAU OF NARCOTIC ENFORCEMENT
DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

The Honorable Senator McClellan and members of the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, it is a great personal pleasure and honor for me to appear before you to discuss the narcotic problem in the State of California.

The traffic in illicit narcotics and the great number of addicts and peddlers of these drugs in California's population places us each year, and at each count, among the two or three States which suffer the most from this disease in our society.

Wherever there is drug addiction, there is misery and crime.

Beginning in July 1959, our bureau of criminal statistics has made a compilation of statistically new addict-users as part of the State's arrest studies. This count contains only those persons whose criminal reports and arrest documents indicate that they are addicts or users of a narcotic, such as heroin. New addict-users continue to swell this list at the rate of more than 200 per month.

Now, exactly 5 years after this counting project started, more than 17,000 separate individual names are in the addict-user files.

Statistically, the addicts are about 41 percent whites, 36 percent whites of Mexican descent, 21 percent Negro and 2 percent other races. Eighty-five percent of the addicts are males; 15 percent, females; and two-thirds had their initial arrest for illegal use of narcotics in Los Angeles County. These detailed statistical analyses are given to the Federal Bureau of Narcotics and to all others who are interested in the subject.

Some of our other findings on California drug abuse may be summarized briefly:

During the past 5 years, arrests have ranged between 15,000 and 17,000 each year for all types of drug law violations.

Over 80 percent of all narcotic arrests occur in southern California with two-thirds of them taking place in Los Angeles County.

Last year, 1963, heroin offenses were up almost 12 percent over the previous year and marihuana offenses increased more than 42 percent in the same period.

Over 90 percent of addicts arrested will have had prior arrests for addiction and out of all drug offenders arrested, 97 percent were in trouble with the law and were antisocial before they became addicts.

Two-thirds of the narcotics offenders are 30 years of age or younger.

Year by year as we have seen this increase in the illicit traffic in narcotics, law enforcement has increased its efforts to combat it. The California State Bureau of Narcotics has doubled in size since 1958, with our personnel of 117 people distributed in 5 field offices in major cities from San Diego and Los Angeles in southern California to Fresno, Sacramento, and San Francisco in the north.

Our primary function under the law is to investigate and arrest major violators and to seek out the sources of supply. Our secondary objective is in the control and enforcement of laws regulating the legal supplies of narcotics as prescribed by physicians, administered in hospitals and dispensed by pharmacists.

We recognize the severity of the drug problem in southern California by having 2 of our largest offices with a total of 46 agents stationed in that area. Other law enforcement agencies throughout the State have expanded their narcotic details and work in full cooperation with us.

It is not through California's three major seaports facing the Orient or our 1,600 miles of coastline that all of these drugs are smuggled. Planes flying into our four international airports from around the world are not bringing this heroin to our addicts. Our trade and commerce with all of the States to the east of us and on the Atlantic seaboard does not contribute in any significant measure to the supplies of heroin or of marihuana which arrive in California.

Heroin and marihuana in our State originate in Mexico. It is brought across the 140 mile-long border between California and Mexico, mainly through the ports of entry at San Ysidro and Calexico or those at Tecate and Andrade.

742 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Each year the drugs come through these ports along with 8 million automobiles, 30 million passengers and pedestrians and thousands of trucks and common carriers loaded with millions of dollars in legitimate merchandise.

Prior to 1940, Mexico produced no opium and manufactured no heroin. In 1950, Mexican heroin in California was commonplace but drugs of Far Eastern and Middle Eastern origin were more prevalent. By 1960, veteran officers agreed that 75 percent, three-fourths of the heroin in California, came from Mexico. Today, 1964, there is more heroin, more potent heroin, and cheaper heroin available in Mexico than ever before.

Those California officers who talk to informants, defendants, and suspects constantly concerning their "connections" are now saying that "practically all" of the heroin as well as marihuana comes from Mexico. This opinion is confirmed by the chemists in the laboratories of all of the major police agencies in California who agree that the heroin now encountered is characteristically and consistently of Mexican origin. This heroin ranges in color from dark brown to light brown. Heroin of the color of milk chocolate is the usual type found. It is extremely unusual for us to encounter white-, gray-, or buff-colored heroin in California, such as is smuggled from the Near East. As I have previously stated, this was not always the case.

Other characteristics of Mexican heroin are: the darker it is, the stronger it usually smells of acetic acid; the darker brown it is, the higher is the heroin content. The light-colored heroin is always fine textured, whereas the darker heroin is granular. These variations are probably all attributable to the kind of adulterant and especially the amount of adulterant which is present in the sample. Lactose is still the most commonly used adulterant, although we have seen samples where instant coffee was used, apparently in an attempt to retain the dark color. Lactose is found in almost all samples.

Procaine is frequently present and amidone occasionally is found in heroin as it comes across the border and before it has been further adulterated by the peddler in California. Mexican heroin has been described as morphine base which has been subjected to fast, crude laboratory conversion, producing very potent but chemically impure heroin.

A week ago, our agents in Los Angeles arrested two young peddlers after making undercover purchases of a total of 8 ounces of heroin on three different occasions. The price, delivered in Los Angeles, was $200 per ounce. The first purchase of 2 ounces tested 81.1 percent heroin, the second 2-ounce purchase was 72.4 percent, and the third 4-ounce package was 68.7 percent pure.

One of these deliveries was a black chunk, resembling dried smoking opium or black tar. It burns with a medicinal odor quite unlike the smell of opium. It contains no meconic acid and when ground or grated to a powder, assumes the darkish-brown color of typically good quality Mexican heroin. The other two samples purchased were the brown, very granular heroin. This, the peddlers tell us, was prepared by rubbing the black chunks through a screen or sieve. This heroin came from the Laguna Salada area, west and south of Mexicali. I have the name of the connection there. The peddlers tell us that it is morphine but our chemists say it reacts to all of the chemical tests for heroin.

Both quantitative and qualitative analyses are made, as a matter of routine, in all of our larger drug seizures. Samples of one-half ounce or more, will almost invariably test from a low of about 15 percent to the highest we have seen in recent years, a sample of 169 grams which tested 94 percent heroin. The average heroin content of the larger samples will exceed 30 percent purity.

A typical small seizure of 1-grain bindles or capsules will assay from 3 to 9 or 10 percent. The addict who is the ultimate consumer seldom has access to uncut heroin. His drugs have passed through several hands and in each instance, the drug has been diluted further to increase profits.

Marihuana is sometimes offered for sale in Tijuana, Mexico, for 25 pesos (U.S. $2) per kilogram (2.2 pounds), but the usual price is $20 or $25 per kilogram. This same marihuana sells for $40 per kilogram, or $12 for a small tobacco can full, in California. Heroin, which sells for $175 or less per ounce in Mexico is peddled in California for $200 to $250 per ounce, or $20 per gram.

The opinion of officers enforcing the narcotic laws is that addicts in recent years have not had the severe narcotic habits that were the rule many years ago. In fact, in 1961 and 1962, it seemed that the adulterated drugs reaching the addict were so weak that involuntary "cures" were being effected and that addicts had mere psychological habits. Recently this trend is reversing and more and more it is necessary to hospitalize newly arrested addicts because of the intensity of their withdrawal symptoms.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 743

In the past week in Los Angeles there have been eight separate and unconnected deaths which have been attributed to narcotics. Most of these victims had records of narcotic addiction. This type of death has been increasing in California in recent months. It is possible that the more potent heroin now available is the cause of these deaths.

There is no syndicate with tentacles throughout California and extending into Mexico organized to supply our addicts and to enslave more and more recruits. There is no sinister "Mr. Big" controlling supply, demand, price, and quality from his mountain hideaway. Anybody with an automobile can be a narcotics peddler by driving to Mexico and purchasing any quantity he desires. There is no need for a complex organization. There is no need for the intricate planning, ingenuity, and know-how that is required to arrange for a shipment from the Middle East.

It takes no talent, no organizational ability, no brokers, and no middlemen to drive to Mexico to arrange for a purchase of drugs. With automobiles crossing the border bumper to bumper, day and night, it is no problem for the smuggler to escape detection. Here the law enforcement officer's only useful tools are his sources of information. Recent court decisions have all but destroyed the confidentiality, and thereby the usefulness, of this weapon against the narcotic traffic.

Thousands of California's addicts have relatives, friends, or business associates in Mexico who, like themselves, are always ready to violate a law to get U.S. currency, and if one has no friend in Mexico, he can find a readymade friend in any one or more of the major dope peddlers in Mexico who are citizens of the United States of America but who are bond jumpers, parole violators, and fugitives from prosecution now living near the border in readiness to supply the demands of our addicts. My bureau has a list of these persons which we will be happy to furnish to this committee.

The Federal Government can prevent narcotics from crossing our borders and from being smuggled through our ports of entry by drastically increasing the investigative force of the Bureau of Customs. With more thorough and frequent searches based on more accurate information, smuggling will be less profitable.

The Federal Government, through the President and the Department of State, can negotiate treaties by which this country and Mexico can work out a program to wipe out the poppy fields, the heroin factories, and the cultivation of marihuana.

The Federal Government can also work out a program with Mexico to return to us our fugitives who become bigger peddlers with readymade connections once they have fled across the border into Mexico's sanctuary.

Finally, as has been recommended by many observers of this problem, the United States should invite the Mexican Government to join in the establishment of a joint commission for consultation and development of methods to curb the production and flow of illicit drugs between the two countries.

It is apparent from what I have said that regardless of what new enforcement efforts are initiated locally or statewide, California cannot eliminate the narcotics menace alone. I repeat, marihuana and heroin have never been cheaper, more plentiful, more potent, and more readily available in Mexico and, if desired, in California, than they are today.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Los Angeles, July 27, 1964.

HON. JOHN L. McCLELLAN,
Chairman, U.S. Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR McCLELLAN: I regret that previous commitments prevent me from joining John Storer, chief of the State bureau of narcotic enforcement, at your hearings on the traffic in illicit narcotics. I should like the committee to know, however, that Chief Storer appears before you with my authorization and full support.

While we in California recognize the extent and nature of the illicit drug traffic in most of our country and the world, we feel impelled to point out that the drug problems in the Nation's largest State evolves from one source of supply, Mexico, rather than a global network. And, we believe that our State's problems can never be solved until the Federal Government undertakes with the Republic of Mexico to strengthen enforcement against the illicit cultivation, processing, and trafficking of opium poppies and marihuana plants.

744 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The committee should also know that the narcotics problem in California has been compounded in the last 3 or 4 years by heavy trafficking in the dangerous drugs—particularly the amphetamines and the barbiturates. Here, again, law enforcement finds the source of supply to be south of our international border. It should be noted, however, that few of these drugs are actually produced in Mexico. They are shipped into Mexican border towns and diverted into illicit traffic.

There have been before the U.S. Senate for many months a group of drug law bills which we in California believe would greatly improve enforcement against trafficking. Foremost is Joint Resolution 65, which calls for the establishment of the United States-Mexico Commission to work on a day-to-day basis on the problem, effecting greater cooperation, coordination, and effort. The concept of Joint Resolution 65 also is embodied in the recommendation of the President's Advisory Commission on Narcotic and Drug Abuse.

We also support S. 553, which is referred to as the barbiturate and stimulant drug control amendment, and S. 742, which would prescribe criminal penalties for bringing certain dangerous drugs into the United States for the purpose of illegal sale or use. I should also like the committee to know that I have endorsed the principle of wiretapping by court order as a narcotic enforcement measure.

The State of California, at a cost of many millions of dollars, has undertaken a massive rehabilitation program for the addict. In addition, every law-enforcement agency in the State has also, and at great expense to the local taxpayers, expanded enforcement against the drug traffic. We should like to look forward to the time when our efforts will be matched at the Federal and international level.

Sincerely yours,

STANLEY MOSK, Attorney General.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you care, Mr. Storer, to add anything to your statement?

Mr. STORER. Not other than to answer any questions the committee would have. I would consider my statement as being complete at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I haven't had the opportunity yet to read your statement. I would like to ask you, as I did Mr. McCormack, about legislation, if any, that you think that Congress should enact.

Mr. STORER. I have covered this subject in my statement, Mr. Chairman.

California's problem is almost entirely stemming from narcotics and marihuana which comes from Mexico. Our problem is not in commerce across the oceans or across the United States from the Far East. We have found that the prices of narcotics, and the quantities and the quality in California, make heroin and any other narcotic from the Middle East noncompetitive with that which is coming into California from Mexico.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean it comes in so much cheaper from Mexico?

Mr. STORER. Yes, sir. We, therefore, feel that any legislation which the Government should consider with respect to California should have to do with the traffic which is coming into California from that single source. The State alone, although we have an excellent narcotic law, cannot defeat this problem without Federal intervention in the matter. I have covered that subject in my statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well. In other words, you think that your laws in California are adequate to deal with the problem if you could just do something about the source of supply.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 745

Mr. STORER. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. That is your main problem?

Mr. STORER. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Is the addiction or the number of victims increasing, do you think, in California?

Mr. STORER. It is. We began in our Bureau of Criminal Statistics—which is another bureau in the Department of Justice in California—we began an addict count because of public pressure in California, in July of 1959. They have just completed 5 years' count of addict users in California.

At the present moment there are more than 17,000 names in that file. This is a 5-year count. There will naturally be attrition from these in future years and at the present time the Bureau of Criminal Statistics will withdraw from the files those who have not appeared again in a 5-year period, so that this will be on a 5-year basis.

The CHAIRMAN. You have a system of checking that you think will be substantially adequate in that?

Mr. STORER. A very adequate system, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any questions, Senator Curtis?

Senator CURTIS. Just very briefly, Mr. Storer, I notice that your 5-year counting indicates about 17,000 individual names on your addict-user list.

Mr. STORER. Yes, sir.

Senator CURTIS. And that 41 percent of these are whites, 36 percent are whites of Mexican descent, and 21 percent Negro, and 2 percent of other races. Eighty-five percent of the addicts are males, and 15 percent females. Two-thirds had their initial arrest for the use of narcotics in Los Angeles County.

What I would like to know is this: Is the pattern of operations—wholesaling and retailing, and the resulting pattern of apprehension for marihuana—different than it is for the other drugs?

Mr. STORER. Not in California. The same people who peddle heroin in California will be peddling marihuana. The sources are the same. The connections in Mexico are the same. Marihuana, I might add, does not grow naturally and normally in California, because of the air and climate; except for a small flowerpot and back-garden culture, there is no marihuana grown in California naturally. It is all smuggled into the State from Mexico.

Senator CURTIS. But the same type of organization you might expect to be set up to distribute other drugs in a great city is followed in marihuana?

Mr. STORER. You use the term "organization," Senator. In California we don't have a syndicate operation in the narcotic traffic. The ingenuity and the organizational ability and the long lines of communications and the hard work that is necessary to bring narcotics from the Middle East do not apply in California. Anyone who has an automobile and ambition to be a narcotic peddler can drive to Mexico and pick up narcotics. These people who peddle in California are private entrepreneurs.

A syndicate operation would amount there to maybe two or three people—a peddler who gets narcotics from Mexico and delivers it to some of his friends, perhaps in Los Angeles, for delivery to some addicts. But this is not in the true sense a syndicate operation. We do not have any "Mr. Big" living on a mountain, and surrounded by a moat in California, operating this situation. It is not a Mafia, Cosa Nostra-type operation in California.

746 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Senator CURTIS. Well, now, the marihuana addicts; are they as individuals in as much trouble as the other dope addicts?

Mr. STORER. No, sir.

Senator CURTIS. But it can lead to a more severe situation; is that the point?

Mr. STORER. We feel, I believe, along with law officers from all of the States, that marihuana is a stepping stone to the use of heroin.

Senator CURTIS. What are the dangerous immediate effects of someone becoming a marihuana user? Reckless driving, no doubt.

Mr. STORER. Yes; that has all been covered. The reckless driving is one, and the loss of sense of space and time, the release of the inhibitions, the numerous things that any intoxicant like this can cause. But in addition to that, they are thrown in with the same type of trafficker who is dealing at the same time in heroin, with its greater profit and it is commonplace, "Why don't you stop this kid stuff, and don't be chicken, and try this other drug?" It is the stepping stone to further addiction.

Senator CURTIS. If the addict hasn't gone beyond marihuana, is he as apt to resort to crime to get money to continue it as with heroin?

Mr. STORER. I think not.

Senator CURTIS. How about his responsibility to do a job and to his family, and his general citizenship? Is it quite deteriorating of those qualities?

Mr. STORER. Not to the degree heroin is; not by any means. I am referring only to the person who has used marihuana, and not an opiate drug. I think the addiction which is caused by heroin and morphine or one of those drugs leads to a life of crime, because the person cannot be gainfully employed at the same time he acquires narcotics.

This would not be true in the case of the person who used only marihuana.

Senator CURTIS. Now, I have one more question: Have you developed any statistics on the number of marihuana addicts becoming addicts to other drugs?

Mr. STORER. I have no statistics at my fingertips which would indicate how many people do go. I believe that our Bureau of Criminal Statistics does have some figures of prior arrests for marihuana and the use of dangerous drugs.

Senator CURTIS. From your personal observation, it is one of the greatest dangers that they are apt to do that; is that right?

Mr. STORER. There is a great danger.

Senator CURTIS. That is your personal opinion or observation, from your experience: That there is a great danger that the marihuana addict will find other drugs?

Mr. STORER. Yes; and I know that this is true. I have no statistics as to the percentage figures of this, but it is well known, and well established, that the person begins with marihuana, and perhaps with the dangerous drugs, and gravitates to the use of heroin.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well; thank you.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Mr. Storer, can you tell me what makes you feel that the heroin is coming from Mexico and not from other sources?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 747

Mr. STORER. We know that it is not coming across the Pacific Ocean for this reason: Vancouver, British Columbia—this is one reason—has a large narcotics problem there. Within the past few months 10 or a dozen people, 4 just appeared in Federal court this past week in San Francisco, but 10 or a dozen people within the last few months have been arrested—Canadian nationals going to the Mexican border to pick up narcotics. They have braved the dangers of coming across the Mexican line through California, Oregon, and Washington, and smuggling it into their own country, and yet Vancouver, British Columbia, is on a direct steamship line to Hong Kong and all of the places in the Far East.

The U.S. Customs assures me, and my own agents in the Bureau assure me, that narcotics do not come across the Pacific Ocean.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I wasn't thinking of that so much as I was thinking of what the source of the heroin was. In other words, the stuff is coming in from Mexico, and could it be of French origin?

Mr. STORER. No, sir. There have been some seizures in Laredo, Tex., and in those areas where we know it was destined. The Customs made an arrest of 70-some ounces, and again 23 ounces, which came from France and was transshipped through Mexico, and destined for Canada.

But after the arrests were made, it was determined that this was not actually a Mexican peddling operation, but was designed from the very beginning to be transshipped through Mexico.

I think what you are getting at, though, sir, is the fact that the heroin which appears in California is entirely different in its complexion and content than that which comes from the Middle East. Heroin in California is a dark brown, the darker it is the more potent it is.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You don't get the white kind?

Mr. STORER. We don't get the white heroin at all in California.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much.

Mr. Morris, will you identify yourself?

TESTIMONY OF JOSEPH F. MORRIS

Mr. MORRIS. Joseph F. Morris. I am deputy superintendent of the Chicago Police Department.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you been connected with the police force in Chicago?

Mr. MORRIS. For 32 years.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you held this particular position with the force?

Mr. MORRIS. Five years.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, you have submitted a prepared statement; have you?

Mr. MORRIS. I have, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. To which you testify that the facts stated therein are correct to the best of your knowledge and belief?

Mr. MORRIS. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The statement will be received and printed in the record.

748 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

(The statement is as follows:)

STATEMENT OF DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENT JOSEPH F. MORRIS OF THE CHICAGO POLICE DEPARTMENT REGARDING THE ILLEGAL NARCOTIC PROBLEM IN CHICAGO

I am honored to appear before this committee and pleased to cooperate in any way possible. Based on departmental arrest records there are approximately 6,200 drug addicts known to the police in this city. This figure includes the marihuana and dangerous drug users. The average Chicago drug addict is from a low socioeconomic status; 87 percent of this group are Negroes and the remaining 13 percent is made up of native whites, Puerto Ricans, and Mexicans. About 19 percent are females with the same ethnic background.

The use of heroin and marihuana is confined mainly to Negroes while the barbiturates and amphetamines are a problem of white teenagers for the most part. The most common drug used by this group is heroin.

Of this group about 92 percent are under 40 years of age with the highest percentage of users in the 26- to 30-year group; about 6 percent are between 17 and 20 years of age.

There is a slight decrease in the use of narcotic drugs with a corresponding increase in the use of nonnarcotic drugs. There are indications that some confirmed heroin users are turning to the dangerous drugs because of the poor quality of heroin available on the street. Tests made by the Chicago Police Department's Crime Laboratory on heroin seized by the Chicago Police Department last year indicated that the quality of the heroin is from 1- to 3-percent pure. The average addict who purchases heroin at the street level gets a product that has been cut many times.

Narcotic addiction is a serious social and economic problem. The addict tends to prey on and hurt the people closest to him and in order to support his addiction he must turn to crime. Male addicts turn to crime against property for the most part while the female addict turns to prostitution and petty crimes against property such as shoplifting. To sustain a $20-a-day habit an addict must steal property worth four or five times that amount, thus the narcotic problem effects the entire community in losses through crimes committed by addicts and increased costs in law enforcement.

The average addict in Chicago purchases heroin for $5 a "bag." A "bag" contains one-twentieth of a gram. The number of "bags" used per day depends upon the tolerance built up by the individual user. The next breakdown on heroin would be the 16th (16th of an ounce) which sells for around $15. Any amount over a 16th is usually purchased by a person who intends to dilute it and resell it at a profit. The other prices for heroin are as follows:

A "spoon," roughly one fifth of an ounce, sells for from $65 to $125 depending upon the percentage of heroin; an ounce of heroin sells for from $400 to $800, again depending upon the quality of the heroin.

What we are doing to cope with the narcotic problem in Chicago: Our principal aim is to prevent further spread of narcotic abuse and reduce it to an irreducible minimum the city's narcotic drug problem. There is a central headquarters narcotic unit through which all persons arrested as narcotic violators or persons with narcotic histories and their associates are processed. The central narcotic unit is comprised of 50 men and women who also engage in enforcement activities. District vice officers are charged with narcotic enforcement also.

In 1963 there were 8,440 persons arrested and charged with narcotic violations (opiates). Of this number 1,063 were charged with felonies (sale, possession, and conspiracy to sell narcotics). The remaining 7,377 were for misdemeanors. Of our felony charges, 303 cases have been tried with 158 penitentiary convictions and 760 cases still are pending.

Besides the enforcement program we also engage in educational work, having trained speakers who address community groups, high school, and college students. There is very close cooperation and exchange of information with the Federal, State, and county enforcement officers engaged in the narcotic field.

The State's attorney prosecutes the narcotic cases vigorously and the courts, for the most part, have been uniform in handing out stiff punishment to the willful violators. There is a State rehabilitation program which provides for the probationary release of addicts requiring that they submit to periodic Nalline and urinalysis checks. This same program is utilized by parole officers and is administered by the State division of narcotics control in cooperation with the parole and probation authorities. These tests are conducted in the Chicago office of the State division of narcotic control.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 749

While we still have a narcotic problem we feel that we are making some progress in combating it. As I see it, the problem is the care of the narcotic abuser after he has been withdrawn from narcotics and is returned to society it seems he is left more or less on his own. There are no community groups that are active in the rehabilitation of these people.

A discussion of the problems in law enforcement in narcotics must necessarily include our State statutes dealing with illegal use of narcotics. We have an excellent sale law directed at the trafficker who deals in drugs for a monetary gain. The penalty is a minimum of 10 years to life with no probation or suspension of sentence. Our possession law is also a felony with penalties of 2 to 10 years for the first offense and any subsequent offense 5 years to life. We hope to have this latter law amended making the first offense a misdemeanor and increasing the penalty for the second and subsequent offenses. The reason for wanting this law amended is that police officers must necessarily charge any person found in possession of narcotics no matter how small the amount, with possession of narcotics, and under this present statute have no alternate charge to place against the user.

Along with our recommendations to amend the present possession law we are going to recommend to the next Illinois Legislature a possession for sale law with penalties of from 5 to 15 years for the first offense. This is patterned after legislation which is now in force in several other States including Arizona, California, Ohio, and New York and which has proved very effective in the control of illegal narcotics.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you like to add anything to the prepared statement which you have submitted?

Mr. MORRIS. Nothing other than to compliment this committee. I feel, as a veteran—this is my fourth appearance here—and I want to assure you that the work done here has aided law enforcement immensely in the Chicago area.

I also would like to take this opportunity——

The CHAIRMAN. I want to interrupt to thank you for that. We do a lot of this investigative work, and this is an investigative subcommittee. We do a lot of work that is never brought out here in the open in public hearings. We frequently get letters or inquiries saying "What good does it do? What good does it do to hold these hearings?"

I would like to say for the record that this is work—when you prepare for hearings of this nature, and hold hearings of this kind, interviewing of witnesses and the sifting of testimony and the arranging for these sessions, where it is placed on the record—it is work. Of course, if it is doing no good, that is another thing.

I don't get any comfort or pleasure out of doing the futile thing. It is a bit gratifying to hear and to have law enforcement officers over the country say that the work of the committee does do good and it helps them. Well, the primary purpose of these investigations is to ascertain whether legislation is needed, or how effective our laws are in a given area.

But if we accomplish some good, and if there is some byproduct from the work that we do in hearings and in investigations of this character, it is gratifying to know that that is true. You who are out in the field, as you are, and in daily contact with the problem, and working at it, are in the best position to know whether a series of hearings of this character is helpful to you, whether it gives you some support that you need and you know what consequences may follow and what results are achieved from the standpoint of the psychological effect.

I am very grateful to you for making reference to this, and what you think of the work of the committee. I am sorry to interrupt you.

750 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

We do get inquiries and letters saying, "What good does it do?" Well, it is difficult, perhaps, to see the results from a distance, but if I didn't think that some good came from this, I certainly would employ my time in some other way.

Mr. MORRIS. I am convinced that there has been very much good. We have had experience in Chicago. There has been a conviction recently which I know of as a result directly of information brought out by this committee, and in our organized crime problem where it touches on gambling and other forms of organized crime, it has made our job much easier by the revelations brought forward from the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean revelations brought forth by the subcommittee's investigations have made your work easier?

Mr. MORRIS. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And more fruitful, I hope?

Mr. MORRIS. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Thank you very much.

Now, have you said anything in your statement, and I haven't read all of it, with respect to any legislative recommendations that you would care to make?

Mr. MORRIS. Yes, but they do not apply in the Federal level. But I would like to repeat what I have heard here the last few days, the need for wiretap legislation. We are handcuffed. People in law enforcement are handcuffed without this particular weapon. These people dealing in illegal narcotics and other forms of organized crime could not operate without a telephone. Still, we are denied the use of telephone evidence to have against them.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think if the power were granted, and if the law were enacted—say something comparable at least to the bill that I have introduced with the restrictions and safeguards that we have attempted to place in the bill—do you think it would be subjected to much abuse, if you had such a law?

Mr. MORRIS. No; I don't, Senator. I think in the past where wiretapping has been legal, I don't know of any case where law enforcement people were responsible for any abuse. There have been cases where private operators have abused this privilege.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, this would have the safeguard that it couldn't be done except by presenting your petition to a court of competent jurisdiction which hears testimony as to the need for it and the justification for granting such authority to a police officer.

With that requirement, the only way it could be abused would be for some police officer or someone petitioning the court to mislead the court deliberately as to whether there was a need for it. It would have to come right back to the integrity of law enforcement officials.

Mr. MORRIS. I am in favor of those safeguards, and we certainly need it, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. I noticed another thing right in the beginning of your statement here. You point out that drug addicts in Chicago are of very low economic status. A large percentage, 87 percent of them, are Negroes, and 13 percent native whites and Puerto Ricans and Mexicans. That seems to be an unusually large percentage of one race being involved in your area.

How do you account for that?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 751

Mr. MORRIS. Well, I really have no way to account for it.

The CHAIRMAN. That is a very large percentage.

Mr. MORRIS. Other than the fact that the Negroes are not as advanced economically as the others, I mean in the economical status. They haven't reached the same plane as the average white.

The CHAIRMAN. One reason I mentioned this, it seemed to be a larger percentage in your particular community than in others, and I know nationwide the percentage is large, but yours seems to be the largest that comes to our attention.

Mr. MORRIS. I noticed that, in comparing that, but according to our records, that is the way the percentages break down.

The CHAIRMAN. That is the way it breaks down?

Mr. MORRIS. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have any specific recommendations as to how we might reach that problem? I think the national average is 53 percent, but you have 87 percent there.

Mr. MORRIS. I think that we have a higher percentage of Negroes in the Chicago area, about 25 percent of the population.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, the statement was not singling out that race, other than the fact that wherever we can pinpoint a problem, the idea is to try to find a solution, and how to deal with it. It may very well be that the principal cause is simply because of the low economic status. That may be the real reason.

But as we examine these things, we need to inquire, if we can, and ascertain any pertinent facts that might be helpful in moving toward a solution.

Very well, is there anything further that you can think of?

Mr. MORRIS. I just wanted to take this opportunity to commend the Federal Bureau of Narcotics for the wonderful work they have been doing, particularly in the Chicago area. Here in the last 2 months they made two very fine cases. In a gun battle, a narcotic agent killed one of our leading peddlers, and just recently six of the high-level traffickers were convicted in Federal court due to the efforts of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think that will have some deterrent effect on others?

Mr. MORRIS. I know it does.

The CHAIRMAN. It makes it more difficult for them to operate, and they have to take more precautions and they get a little jittery about it, and they are not as bold in the trafficking as they were before.

Mr. MORRIS. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Counsel wishes to make a little observation.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would just like to say that we have gone through many of the cities in the United States, and that we were very much impressed with the Bureau of Narcotics setup which was started in the city of Chicago in the last few years. We think that you have a very dedicated and very active group there doing a very good job. I think that they should be commended for that.

Mr. MORRIS. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Curtis, do you have any questions?

Senator CURTIS. I have none, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly we wish to thank you, Mr. Morris, for your appearance here, and the cooperation you have always given the committee. We want to thank Mr. Storer, of California, and also Mr. McCormack of New York City.

752 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Gentlemen, we all have a duty in this field, and we all try to meet it. Unless we are able to move successfully, and more successfully than in the past, we may be confronted with a definite menace to our internal security, so we need to pursue this thing with all diligence.

Thank you very kindly for your cooperation.

Who is the next witness?

Mr. ADLERMAN. We have Mr. Eugene Marshall.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you be sworn?

You do solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give before this Senate subcommittee shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. MARSHALL. I do.

TESTIMONY OF EUGENE J. MARSHALL

The CHAIRMAN. Will you identify yourself for the record, please?

Mr. MARSHALL. Eugene J. Marshall, narcotic agent, stationed in Miami, Fla., and I have been assigned to the committee for the past year.

The CHAIRMAN. You have been working with the committee since this investigation began, and you have been assigned to this particular area of the committee's work?

Mr. MARSHALL. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, sir. You may proceed. Do you have a prepared statement?

Mr. MARSHALL. I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you been with the Bureau of Narcotics?

Mr. MARSHALL. Since 1948.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you presenting a chart to the committee at this time?

Mr. MARSHALL. Yes, sir; I am.

The CHAIRMAN. And the title of it is "Foreign and Domestic Prices for Opium and Heroin."

All right, let the chart be printed in the record at this point, if it can be printed in the record.

(The chart referred to appears on page 753.)

The CHAIRMAN. Now you may explain the chart.

Mr. MARSHALL. Commissioner Giordano and Mr. Anslinger testified about the growth of opium and the conversion to morphine base and heroin and the smuggling of these drugs into the United States. I will limit my testimony to tracing the cost of these drugs from the raw product to the ultimate customer, the addict in the United States.

The farmer in Turkey sells the opium to an underworld broker.

The CHAIRMAN. The farmer grows a plant, does he?

Mr. MARSHALL. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Just as we do tobacco over here, as an illustration. Would that be a comparable illustration?

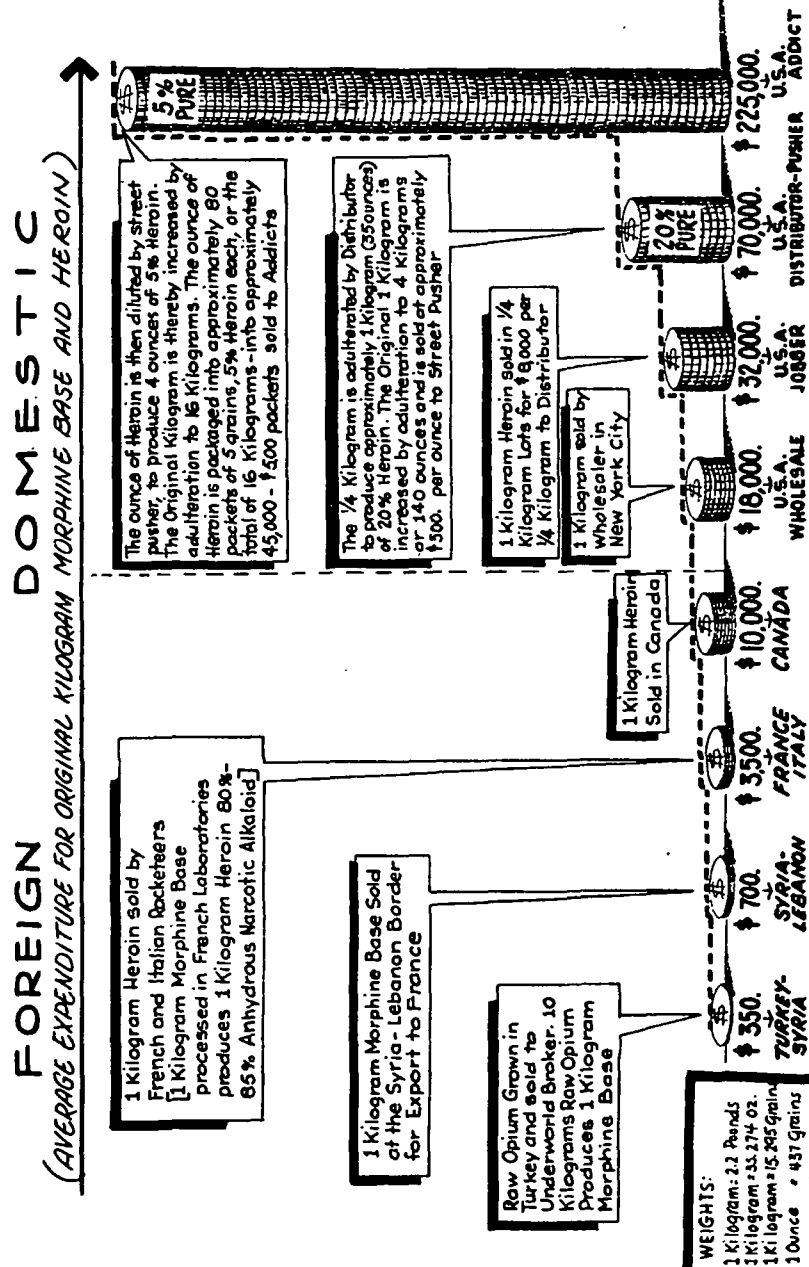

Mr. MARSHALL. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. He grows a plant from which opium is made.

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

753

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC PRICES FOR OPIUM AND HEROIN

754 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. Tell us about the farmer, first.

Mr. MARSHALL. He sells a kilogram of opium to an underworld broker for approximately $35 per kilogram.

The CHAIRMAN. Opium is not the name of it. Is that the name of the plant?

Mr. MARSHALL. The plant is the opium poppy. The opium is the product of the plant.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, a poppy is what he grows, and how does he get opium to sell out of the poppy?

Mr. MARSHALL. As Mr. O'Carroll explained, the opium is gathered from the poppies, and made into balls weighing approximately 1 to 2 kilograms, which are sold.

The CHAIRMAN. That is raw opium.

Mr. MARSHALL. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And he sells it and what does he usually get for it?

Mr. MARSHALL. An average of $35 per kilogram.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, now, $35 per kilogram. Relate a kilogram to a pound.

Mr. MARSHALL. 2.2 pounds.

The CHAIRMAN. So he gets about $15 a pound for it, actually.

Mr. MARSHALL. Roughly, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Now go ahead.

Mr. MARSHALL. It takes 10 kilograms of raw opium to produce 1 kilogram of morphine base.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, it takes about 22 pounds to produce 1 kilogram. That is about one-tenth of the raw opium; is that right?

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct.

The underworld broker sells the raw opium, converts it to morphine base, which is sold, as subsequent testimony will indicate, on the Syrian and Lebanon border for approximately $700 per kilogram of morphine base.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, now, he has taken how many kilograms?

Mr. MARSHALL. He starts out with 10 kilograms of raw opium, which produces 1 kilogram of morphine base.

The CHAIRMAN. That 10 kilograms, that cost him $350.

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. And he processes it to where he gets $700 from it.

Mr. MARSHALL. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. He doubles his money.

Mr. MARSHALL. That is right. In France, this $700 kilogram of morphine base is converted to heroin, which is then sold by the French and Italian racketeers for approximately $3,500 per kilogram of heroin.

The CHAIRMAN. I would like to ask you, is there any substantial expense in these conversions?

Mr. MARSHALL. Not too much. The expense is nominal, with the exception of setting up the clandestine laboratories, and purchasing the equipment.

The CHAIRMAN. Once you have the equipment set up, the actual cost of conversion is not much, is it?

Mr. MARSHALL. No, sir; it is not.

The CHAIRMAN. It is not a difficult process?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 755

Mr. MARSHALL. No, a good chemist can do it.

The CHAIRMAN. So they make about a five-times profit.

Mr. MARSHALL. Well, after paying off the smuggler, the profit is not that high, because the courier must be paid off, and the smuggler himself must be paid out of that amount.

The CHAIRMAN. There is that much gross profit, but not net profit.

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct. The minimum amount that he makes, is at least double his investment.

The CHAIRMAN. He at least doubles his money.

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it pretty well handled on that basis all of the way through?

Mr. MARSHALL. All of the way.

The CHAIRMAN. You double your money.

Mr. MARSHALL. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well.

Mr. MARSHALL. The kilogram, after being smuggled into Canada—later, testimony will indicate how this is being done—is sold for approximately $10,000 per kilogram of heroin. From Canada it reaches the United States, where this same kilogram is priced at $18,000.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, getting a kilogram from Canada to the United States costs $8,000. I don't mean there is that actual expense, but it is the profit that you pay to get it.

Mr. MARSHALL. That is right. The wholesaler then sells one quarter of a kilogram of this $18,000 product for approximately $8,000 per quarter kilogram, which now is priced at $32,000 for the original kilogram.

This is a simplified chart. It is possible that the heroin could go through many more hands than are indicated here. We just have four subdivisions, on this chart, but it could go through as many as 10 to 15 hands before it reaches the last customer.

The CHAIRMAN. But those are prices at those indicated stages.

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct. The distributor dilutes the heroin to approximately 20 percent purity. The original kilogram, therefore—

Mr. ADLERMAN. He cuts it five times?

Mr. MARSHALL. It is four times, because you start out with anywhere from 80 to 85 percent anhydrous alkaloid.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The so-called pure heroin is only 80 percent pure?

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct. So by cutting it down to 20 percent, the original 1 kilogram is increased by adulteration, as Mr. O'Carroll testified—the addition of milk sugar, quinine, and manite—to 4 kilograms. That amount converts to 140 ounces, which is sold at $500 per ounce. The total is now $70,000 for the original kilogram.

It is then cut again to approximately 5 percent heroin, and the original kilogram is thus increased to 16 kilograms of the original weight. Each ounce is packaged into approximately 80 small packets, called $5 decks, which Mr. O'Carroll showed, of 5-percent heroin each. The 16 kilograms are placed into approximately 45,000 packets, at $5 per packet, which is roughly $225,000 in ultimate expenditure for the original kilogram.

756 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. Now, let us take this little package that Mr. O'Carroll showed us, which sold for $5. That is probably enough to constitute one dose, or one shot. That would sell for $5, and out of the original kilogram sold by the farmer, the original 10 kilograms sold by the farmer, it finally winds up on the retail market to the victim at about $225,000?

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, you speak of this cutting. When you cut it, you simply take what is the original, that is, about 80 percent pure, and you dilute it down as you go through these processes?

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct, and you add the adulterate.

The CHAIRMAN. By adding some other substance to it?

Mr. MARSHALL. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. So that you have got it eventually to 45,000 packets.

Mr. MARSHALL. Yes, at about 5 percent heroin.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that 5 percent in weight or 5 percent in bulk?

Mr. MARSHALL. It is 5 percent in purity.

The CHAIRMAN. It is 5 percent of the 80-percent purity. That is what you are saying?

Mr. MARSHALL. Yes, and out of the 5 grains of substance which are in this $5 packet, only 5 percent of that is heroin.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there any particular powder or something that they use to increase it that way, or to cut it?

Mr. MARSHALL. Milk sugar, or mannite, and quinine.

The CHAIRMAN. Those are the standards. Is there anything further?

Mr. MARSHALL. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. It looks to me, if anyone could ever develop a monopoly on it from growing it to the distribution of it, he wouldn't need to be in business long until he could retire.

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. But it has to pass through a lot of hands.

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct, and, in proportion, the street pusher or the addict seller makes the largest amount of profit.

The CHAIRMAN. What is his profit?

Mr. ADLERMAN. You mean the percentage of profit?

Mr. MARSHALL. We had a case recently in Miami where a dealer, one of the big dealers—

The CHAIRMAN. Which is the dealer?

Mr. MARSHALL. A street-level pusher, the individual who sells it directly to the addict.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, he is the pusher, is he?

Mr. MARSHALL. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is the dealer?

Mr. MARSHALL. One step beyond him.

The CHAIRMAN. Where he gets his supply?

Mr. MARSHALL. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. The dealer doesn't push it out on the street ordinarily?

Mr. MARSHALL. Ordinarily, no.

The CHAIRMAN. So the man who comes in contact with the victim is the pusher, and the source that the pusher gets his product from is the dealer?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 757

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Now go ahead.

Mr. MARSHALL. As I said, recently we concluded a case in Miami where an addict seller would purchase an ounce of heroin in New York for approximately $150. It was greatly diluted. He, in turn, cut it or adulterated it three more times, and he sold it in little gelatin capsules of 1 grain each at $5 per capsule. Deducting his $150 original investment, plus his plane fare to New York, leaves him with something like $5,000.

The CHAIRMAN. That is about $150 plane fare; is that right?

Mr. MARSHALL. Roughly.

The CHAIRMAN. He would have about $400 invested and he gets $5,000.

Mr. MARSHALL. Roughly it is $5,500.

The CHAIRMAN. That he gets, you mean?

Mr. MARSHALL. That he received for his original $150 investment.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, out of a 10- or 15-percent investment, in other words, out of the $5,000, he has an investment of 10 or 15 percent of capital.

Mr. MARSHALL. That is right, and he was an addict himself.

The CHAIRMAN. Maybe he got his free.

Mr. MARSHALL. He didn't take too much off.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any questions?

Senator CURTIS. No questions other than that this chart is very informative, and it shows how this pyramids into so much money.

The CHAIRMAN. It is very good. Thank you very much.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What is the amount of heroin that they estimate comes in undetected each year?

Mr. MARSHALL. The Bureau estimates that approximately 1,000 kilograms per year come undetected.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Approximately 2,200 pounds, or about, roughly, 1 ton—

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN (continuing). Of heroin comes into the United States each year?

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What is the estimated value of that undetected heroin?

Mr. MARSHALL. At which level? At the street level?

Mr. ADLERMAN. At the street level.

Mr. MARSHALL. Well, anywhere from $225 to $350 million.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is the street-level value of the undetected heroin that comes in?

Mr. MARSHALL. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Now, about how many kilos of undetected heroin today are needed or are used to fulfill the narcotics' addiction habit?

Mr. MARSHALL. The Bureau of Narcotics studied this and estimated that it would take 3 kilograms of heroin per day to maintain the addict population of the United States.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Now, this is the 80-percent pure heroin.

Mr. MARSHALL. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. All right. Thank you.

758 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have any other witnesses now, or do you want to recess?

We are going to recess now, and try to resume at 2 o'clock this afternoon, instead of 2:30, as usual. We will come back at 2 o'clock in the hope that we can finish up what we had scheduled this week.

(Members of the subcommittee present at time of recess: Senators McClellan and Curtis.)

(Whereupon, at 12:10 p.m. the subcommittee recessed, to reconvene at 2 p.m. the same day.)

APPENDIX

Federal Bureau of Narcotics

ACTIVE NARCOTIC ADDICTS REPORTED IN SEVERAL SELECTED STATES
AS OF DECEMBER 31, 1963
Total Active Addicts 48,535

760 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

761

*Federal Bureau of NarcoticsACTIVE NARCOTIC ADDICTS REPORTED IN THE UNITED STATES
AS OF DECEMBER 31, 1963
Total Active Addicts 48,535

762 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Federal Bureau of NarcoticsAGE OF ACTIVE NARCOTIC ADDICTS
AS OF DECEMBER 31, 1963
IN THE UNITED STATES
Total Active Addicts 48,535

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

763

Federal Bureau of Narcotics

ACTIVE NARCOTIC ADDICTS
IN THE UNITED STATES
UNDER 21 YEARS OF AGE
AS OF DECEMBER 31, 1963
Total Active Addicts Under 21 — 1,579

All Other Addicts - 5 (0.3%)

764 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 765

Federal Bureau of NarcoticsNEW NARCOTIC ADDICTS REPORTED TO THE
FEDERAL BUREAU OF NARCOTICS
DURING THE CALENDAR YEARS 1953-1963

766 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

U.S. District CourtsAVERAGE LENGTH OF NARCOTIC SENTENCES
IN U.S. DISTRICT COURTS
FISCAL YEARS 1948-1963

Note: 86 U.S. District Courts 1948-60. All U.S. District Courts, except District of Columbia, 1961-63.

Data Source: Administrative Office, U.S. Courts.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLEGAL TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 767

Statistical data of active narcotic addicts in the United States, as of Dec. 31, 1963, recorded by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics

Total addicts.....	48,535
Reporting agencies:
Federal.....	6,536
Local.....	36,789
State.....	5,210
Race:
Total white.....	21,918
Mexican.....	3,190
Puerto Rican.....	5,656
All other white.....	13,072
Negro.....	26,139
All other.....	478
Age of addict (as of Dec. 31, 1963):
13.....	1
14.....	1
15.....	5
16.....	11
17.....	57
18.....	226
19.....	446
20.....	832
Total under 21.....	1,579
21 to 30.....	23,033
31 to 40.....	18,482
Over 40.....	5,441
Male.....	39,743
Female.....	8,792
Heroin.....	44,816
Morphine.....	1,053
Opium.....	116
Dilaudid.....	591
Demerol.....	624
Amidon (dolophine).....	99
Paregoric.....	622
Codeine.....	376
Eucodal (percordan).....	127
All other.....	111

NOTE.—15,178 of the addicts included in this table were originally reported during the years 1953-58, and have remained active during the subsequent 5-year period (1959-63).

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

768 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Statistical data on new narcotic addicts reported to the Federal Bureau of Narcotics from all States during the calendar years 1959-63

	1959	1960	1961	1962	1963
Total addicts.....	5,690	7,479	7,041	6,863	7,456
Reporting agencies:
Federal.....	1,102	1,055	1,032	992	816
Local.....	3,695	5,887	5,677	4,749	5,116
State.....	893	537	332	622	1,525
Race:
Mexican.....	406	672	580	486	290
Puerto Rican.....	672	745	848	760	993
All other white.....	1,765	2,165	2,116	2,077	2,564
Total white.....	2,843	3,582	3,544	3,323	3,847
Negro.....	2,780	3,808	3,433	3,002	3,538
All other.....	67	89	64	38	71
Age of addicts:
13.....					1
14.....		2		1	1
15.....	3	6	3	1	5
16.....	14	24	18	10	12
17.....	60	85	58	51	57
18.....	130	169	148	113	162
19.....	204	251	252	242	268
20.....	428	553	662	542	531
Total under 21.....	839	1,090	1,141	960	1,037
21 to 30.....	3,156	4,149	3,906	3,425	4,139
31 to 40.....	1,206	1,675	1,496	1,443	1,712
Over 40.....	489	565	498	535	568
Male.....	4,512	6,067	5,848	5,206	5,946
Female.....	1,178	1,412	1,193	1,157	1,510
Heroin.....	5,153	6,944	6,417	5,548	6,562
Morphine.....	180	187	177	218	188
Opium.....	16	31	34	9	13
Dilaudid.....	78	78	106	127	128
Demerol.....	122	98	96	128	149
Amidon (dolphine).....	18	18	16	27	14
Paregoric.....	43	39	96	173	189
Codeine.....	52	56	67	75	110
Eucodal (percordan).....	4	5	9	24	77
All other.....	24	23	24	34	26

Active narcotic addicts recorded by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics

Alabama.....	161	Nebraska.....	21
Alaska.....	—	Nevada.....	19
Arizona.....	217	New Hampshire.....	4
Arkansas.....	18	New Jersey.....	1,153
California.....	6,773	New Mexico.....	260
Colorado.....	281	New York.....	23,740
Connecticut.....	306	North Carolina.....	75
Delaware.....	32	North Dakota.....	2
District of Columbia.....	1,021	Ohio.....	404
Florida.....	103	Oklahoma.....	101
Georgia.....	52	Oregon.....	119
Hawaii.....	57	Pennsylvania.....	896
Idaho.....	8	Rhode Island.....	58
Illinois.....	7,091	South Carolina.....	22
Indiana.....	405	South Dakota.....	4
Iowa.....	24	Tennessee.....	113
Kansas.....	33	Texas.....	1,154
Kentucky.....	78	Utah.....	2
Louisiana.....	230	Vermont.....	—
Maine.....	7	Virginia.....	165
Maryland.....	441	Washington.....	202
Massachusetts.....	433	West Virginia.....	9
Michigan.....	1,740	Wisconsin.....	120
Minnesota.....	90	Wyoming.....	8
Mississippi.....	60
Missouri.....	470	Grand total.....	48,535
Montana.....	23

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 769

New narcotic addicts reported to the Federal Bureau of Narcotics during the calendar years 1959-63, by State

State	1959	1960	1961	1962	1963
Alabama.....	33	29	30	44	21
Alaska.....
Arizona.....	28	49	60	35	38
Arkansas.....	3	4	3	2	4
California.....	914	1,606	1,220	902	697
Colorado.....	46	35	66	76	52
Connecticut.....	21	19	30	143	54
Delaware.....	1	12	17	1	1
District of Columbia.....	125	159	130	127	133
Florida.....	18	19	28	20	13
Georgia.....	11	7	14	6	8
Hawaii.....	5	10	2	8	13
Idaho.....	1	3	3		1
Illinois.....	493	912	981	865	753
Indiana.....	54	95	86	69	60
Iowa.....	4	9	3	2	4
Kansas.....	1	8	19	2	2
Kentucky.....	21	15	17	7	13
Louisiana.....	73	23	43	33	25
Maine.....	2			1	4
Maryland.....	47	91	85	58	84
Massachusetts.....	57	53	48	95	92
Michigan.....	187	186	182	180	207
Minnesota.....	10	17	12	22	33
Mississippi.....	12	5	6	23	11
Missouri.....	88	84	119	43	29
Montana.....	1	1	9	9	2
Nebraska.....	4	2	6		9
Nevada.....	1	5	4	3	6
New Hampshire.....	2	1			1
New Jersey.....	113	141	205	210	225
New Mexico.....	36	12	5	75	105
New York.....	2,875	3,372	2,972	2,480	4,213
North Carolina.....	11	12	8	22	16
North Dakota.....				1
Ohio.....	31	59	66	67	105
Oklahoma.....	23	16	14	26	19
Oregon.....	19	23	13	22	26
Pennsylvania.....	75	94	173	297	120
Rhode Island.....	5				53
South Carolina.....	3	1	9	6	1
South Dakota.....		1			1
Tennessee.....	16	9	19	45	16
Texas.....	170	160	214	274	107
Utah.....	1				2
Vermont.....
Virginia.....	28	32	42	19	18
Washington.....	9	51	51	34	35
West Virginia.....	4			3
Wisconsin.....	10	34	26	6	24
Wyoming.....		3	1		5
Grand total.....	5,690	7,479	7,041	6,363	7,456

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

770 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Active narcotic addicts in the United States as of Dec. 31, 1962, and Dec. 31, 1963, by State

State	Active, Dec. 31, 1962	Active, Dec. 31, 1963	Increase	Decrease
Alabama.....	155	161	6
Alaska.....
Arizona.....	219	217		2
Arkansas.....	21	18		3
California.....	7,412	6,773		639
Colorado.....	239	281	42
Connecticut.....	274	306	32
Delaware.....	43	32		11
District of Columbia.....	918	1,021	103
Florida.....	128	103		25
Georgia.....	54	52		2
Hawaii.....	48	57	9
Idaho.....	7	8	1
Illinois.....	7,034	7,091	57
Indiana.....	372	405	33
Iowa.....	22	24	2
Kansas.....	35	33		2
Kentucky.....	70	78	8
Louisiana.....	277	230		47
Maine.....	5	7	2
Maryland.....	396	441	45
Massachusetts.....	405	443	28
Michigan.....	1,818	1,740		78
Minnesota.....	77	90	13
Mississippi.....	50	60	10
Missouri.....	629	470		159
Montana.....	21	23	2
Nebraska.....	14	21	7
Nevada.....	26	19		7
New Hampshire.....	3	4	1
New Jersey.....	1,106	1,153	47
New Mexico.....	179	260	81
New York.....	22,031	23,470	1,439
North Carolina.....	72	75	3
North Dakota.....	1	2	1
Ohio.....	327	404	77
Oklahoma.....	103	101		2
Oregon.....	124	119		5
Pennsylvania.....	889	896	7
Rhode Island.....	6	58	52
South Carolina.....	35	22		13
South Dakota.....	4	4
Tennessee.....	107	113	6
Texas.....	1,204	1,154		50
Utah.....		2	2
Vermont.....
Virginia.....	176	165		11
Washington.....	183	202	19
West Virginia.....	14	9		5
Wisconsin.....	152	120		32
Wyoming.....	4	8	4
Grand total.....	47,489	48,535	1,046

New narcotic addicts reported to the Federal Bureau of Narcotics by race, 1953-63

	1953	1954	1955	1956	1957	1958	1959	1960	1961	1962	1963
Total white.....	2,739	3,102	3,639	3,775	3,190	3,476	2,843	3,582	3,544	3,323	3,847
Mexican.....	202	303	408	652	502	601	406	672	580	486	290
Puerto Rican.....	155	519	634	729	753	799	672	745	848	760	993
All other white.....	2,382	2,280	2,597	2,394	1,935	2,076	1,765	2,165	2,116	2,077	2,564
Negro.....	5,806	4,710	5,199	5,395	4,378	4,021	2,780	3,808	3,433	3,002	3,538
All other.....	160	213	275	167	136	129	67	89	64	38	71
Percentages
Total white.....	31.5	38.7	39.9	40.4	41.4	45.6	50.0	47.9	50.3	52.2	51.6
Mexican.....	2.3	3.8	4.5	7.0	6.5	7.9	7.2	9.0	8.2	7.6	3.9
Puerto Rican.....	1.8	6.5	6.9	7.8	9.8	10.5	11.8	10.0	12.0	11.9	13.3
All other white.....	27.4	28.4	28.5	25.6	25.1	27.2	31.0	28.9	30.1	32.7	34.4
Negro.....	66.7	58.7	57.1	57.8	56.8	52.7	48.9	50.9	48.8	47.2	47.4
All other.....	1.8	2.6	3.0	1.8	1.8	1.7	1.1	1.2	.9	.6	1.0

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

771

772 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

(Attached is a list of high echelon narcotic traffickers who have been apprehended since 1951 as a direct result of investigations conducted by agents of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics. A brief résumé of the criminal background and activity of each violator is included. It does not include a score of major traffickers apprehended in Europe, the Near East, and Asia.)

Accardo, Settimo, Bloomfield, N.J.; FBI No. 683907

Accardo, as a result of an undercover investigation initiated by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, was arrested on August 3, 1955, at Newark, N.J., for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. He was arraigned at Federal court, New York, and subsequently jumped $92,500 total bond and fled to Italy. Accardo controlled rackets in northern New Jersey and was a leader of organized crime in this area. He is familiar with every major racketeer throughout the United States and Canada. Following his flight to Italy, he established himself in the organized Italian criminal element and reorganized a smuggling ring which brought heroin from Italy to Canada. He traveled to Toronto for the purpose of supervising this operation. Upon the implication of his associates Vito and Albert Agueci and John Papalia in the narcotic investigations at Toronto, Accardo left for Italy where he has remained to date. Efforts are underway to effect his extradition to the United States. His criminal record dates from 1928.

Aeby, Aubrey, Dallas, Tex.; FBI No. 50226

Sentenced on September 18, 1952, to 20 years for violation of Federal narcotic laws. A major wholesaler of heroin, which he obtained in Chicago and distributed throughout the Southwest, Aeby was known to be a large-scale receiver of stolen goods. His criminal record dates back to 1925.

Agueci, Albert, Toronto, Canada; FBI No. 827538D; Agueci, Vito, Toronto, Canada; FBI No. 889944D

The Agueci brothers emigrated from Sicily to Canada during the early 1950's. They were part of the Sicilian underworld organization that set up outlets for heroin smuggled into Canada from Italy. In Toronto they operated a bakery as a front. Following their implication in the Federal narcotic conspiracy case at New York City during November 1961 Albert Agueci was found murdered at Rochester, N.Y. He had been strangled and burned with his hands tied behind his back. During February 1962 Vito Agueci stood trial and was convicted in the southern district of New York and sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Amato, Angelo, Cleveland, Ohio; FBI No. 1189758

Sentenced in 1952 for violation of Federal narcotic laws (5 years). One of the main outlets of heroin in Cleveland, Ohio. Member of the Italo-American underworld, he obtained large quantities of heroin for distribution in Ohio from his organization's sources in New York. Equally active in other aspects of organized crime in his area before his imprisonment. His criminal record dates back to 1936.

Angelet, Anthony, New York City, N.Y.; FBI No. 793133

Anthony Angelet with his brother William had a tight control over the criminal activities of Spanish-speaking Harlem of New York City. They obtained this criminal control through violence and intimidation. During April of 1956 Anthony Angelet was sentenced to 5 years by a Federal court in New York City for assaulting a Federal narcotics agent. Among his associates are numbered the most important sources of South American cocaine. His criminal record dates back to 1934.

Armone, Joseph, Brooklyn, N.Y.; FBI No. 798682

Armone is one of the right-hand men of Lower East Side underworld leader Joseph Biondo. Joseph Armone, his brother, the late Steve Armone, Joe Biondo and Salvatore Lucania (Charles "Lucky" Luciano), prior to the latter's deportation, were major sources of heroin supply in New York. Steve Armone has since died and Joseph assumed his position in the underworld. He became a fugitive in Federal narcotic case during 1956 and was apprehended by Federal narcotic agents at Newburgh, N.Y. He was tried and found guilty in Federal court in New York City and sentenced to 5 years. He has been an enforcer for the Biondo criminal organization, which is involved in a multitude of organized illicit activities. His criminal record dates back to 1933.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 773

Balistreri, Mario, Santa Clara, Calif.; FBI No. 93064

On September 4, 1953, was sentenced to 8 years in the Federal penitentiary for violation of the Federal narcotic laws and the terms of his parole. Balistreri has a total of three Federal narcotic convictions. He is an important member of the Italo-American underworld operating in both southern California and Kansas City, Mo., areas. He is known to major narcotic traffickers throughout the United States and is also an important counterfeiting suspect. He has a very lengthy criminal record.

Behrman, Nathan, New York City, N.Y.; FBI No. 1541128

Sentenced March 15, 1956, to 19 to 20 years by the State court of New York for violation of the narcotic laws. Behrman was part of a narcotic smuggling organization financed by Harry Stromberg with outlets in the major cities on the eastern seaboard and the Midwest. This organization was equally active in other activities including counterfeiting, gambling, and extortion. His criminal record dates back to 1938.

Bellanca, Sebastiano, New York City, N.Y.; FBI No. 797788

During 1939 was convicted of violation of the Federal narcotic laws at New York City. During the postwar years was a partner of Frank Scalici and Giacomo Scarpulla in control of the underworld activities in the Bronx. He was active in racket unions and claimed to be a business agent for the Teamsters Union in northern New Jersey. Bellanca was closely associated with the Accardo organization and had sources of supply in Italy. The criminal group he represented was equally involved in the traffic of counterfeit currency, bootleg alcohol, smuggled gold, stolen merchandise, and many other criminal ventures. In pursuance of these illegal enterprises, he traveled to Canada, Mexico, France, Italy, and Germany. Following his sale of heroin to an undercover narcotic agent during 1954, he was arrested for violation of the Federal narcotic laws at New York City and subsequently jumped a $20,000 bond. He has since been a fugitive. Information from underworld sources has it that he has been murdered. His partner, Bronx underworld leader, Frank Scalice, was murdered by gunfire in the Bronx in 1957. His criminal record dates back prior to World War II, shortly after he emigrated to the United States.

Biase, Anthony, Omaha, Nebr.; FBI No. 1749112

Biase has been closely associated with notorious criminals throughout the Midwest in the distribution of illicit heroin to wholesalers in that area. Part of the organized underworld fraternity, he is known to have sources of heroin in New York City, Chicago, and Kansas City. Following the burglary of a wholesale drug firm at Council Bluffs, Iowa, during 1959, a Bureau of Narcotics undercover agent purchased a substantial quantity of the burglarized drugs from Biase. The agent was introduced to him by one Kenneth Sheetz of Kansas City, who later became a Government witness. During June of 1960, Sheetz, upon returning to his home in Kansas City, found Felix Ferina and Anthony Cardarella in his living room with drawn revolvers. He was shot and left for dead by his assailants. Sheetz, however, survived and in July of that year Ferina, Cardarella, Carleton A. Young and Anthony Biase were indicted by a Federal grand jury in Kansas City on charges growing out of the assault on Sheetz. Carleton A. Young is a labor union official in that city. Biase is one of four notorious brothers who operate a wide assortment of criminal ventures in Omaha, Nebr. During December of 1960 Anthony Biase was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment following his conviction on a Federal narcotic case. His criminal record indicates his involvement in burglary, theft, as well as numerous arrests for bookmaking.

Blaustein, Bernard, alias Bernie Barton, New York City, Los Angeles, Calif., and Miami, Fla.; FBI No. 1723416

Associated with top union racketeering figures and those controlling jukebox distribution. Among his intimate associates are Milton Holt and Charles Bernoff. He is equally involved in organized gambling activities. A leading figure among the Jewish underworld fraternity. During 1955 was convicted in Federal court in New York on a charge of violation of the Federal narcotic laws and sentenced to 3 years imprisonment. His criminal record dates back to 1938.

774 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Bruno, Joseph, Chicago, Ill., FBI No. 1828913

An important figure in the organized Italo-American fraternity of Chicago. In June 1958 he was convicted in Federal court in Chicago on a charge of violation of the Federal narcotic laws and sentenced to 8 years. For many years he had been involved in the distribution of bootleg alcohol and narcotics to large scale Negro peddlers in the South Side of Chicago. He has four prior convictions for violation of the Internal Revenue laws (alcohol).

Bucelli, John, Boston, Mass.; FBI No. 1454815

Bucelli, a member of an underworld organization involved in large scale distribution of narcotic drugs, is a leading Boston racketeer, who controlled the waterfront in that city through his influence in the longshore unions. He was implicated in the Brink's robbery and was convicted for possession of $50,000 of the stolen money. During April 1958 he was sentenced to 5 years imprisonment for his part in the conspiracy case involving Harry Stromberg, Saul Gelb, et al. Prior to his serving the sentence, he was murdered by gunfire at Boston.

Buia, Angelo, New York City; FBI No. 1641962; Buia, Matildo, New York City; FBI No. 368359

The Buia brothers were members of the organization of Settimo Accardo specializing in large scale distribution of heroin. Both have had at least two prior convictions for violation of Federal narcotic laws. As part of the criminal organization controlled by Accardo, they were equally active in other criminal ventures this group engaged in.

Campisi, Charles, Newark, N.J., and Miami, Fla.; FBI No. 652456; Campisi, Thomas, Newark, N.J., and Miami, Fla.; FBI No. 148998

Both leading members of Settimo Accardo organization which controlled the underworld in northern New Jersey area. Both are known to have been active in organized gambling activities, distribution of bootleg alcohol and the enforcement of underworld agreements through violence and intimidation. During November 1956 Thomas Campisi was sentenced to 8 years at New York for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. Charles Campisi was sentenced in Brooklyn during April 1960 to 5 years after being a fugitive for several years.

Carmanati, Anthony, Bronx, N.Y.; FBI No. 1947698

An important member of the Bronx underworld organization, his earliest record dates back to 1931. He was involved in various organized criminal ventures of the Scalise organization. During February 1957 he was sentenced to 10 years in New York for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Caruso, Frank, alias "Frankie the Bug," New York City; FBI No. 187656

One of the ranking members of the underworld organization formerly headed by Anthony Strollo, alias Tony Bender. Caruso with Vincent Mauro and Salvatore Maneri was involved in the large scale distribution of heroin smuggled into the United States from his associates among the organized Sicilian underworld in Italy and Canada. Caruso was an equal partner with Maneri and Mauro. As leading members of the Strollo organization they were involved in the multiple illicit activities this criminal organization specialized in. As a result of an investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, Caruso was implicated in the conspiracy case at the southern district of New York. Following his arrest he joined Maneri and Mauro in jumping bail, obtained a fraudulently executed Canadian passport, and used this document to escape to Spain. There Caruso was in contact with Salvatore Lucania as "Lucky" Luciano, through an emissary of the latter, who traveled between Spain and Italy. Following many months of investigation by the Bureau of Narcotics, Caruso, Mauro, and Maneri were located in Spain and through the cooperation of Interpol and the Spanish authorities they were apprehended. The three were extradited, faced trial and were convicted on March 11, 1963. Each was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment in the southern district court in New York for violation of the Federal narcotic laws and 5 years for bail jumping to run concurrent to the 15.

Casella, Peter, Philadelphia, Pa.; FBI No. 894604

Casella was one of the principal figures in controlling crime in the Philadelphia, Pa., and Camden, N.J., areas. Following the death of Marco Reginelli he assumed the leadership of the criminal organization headed by the latter. As a result of an undercover investigation conducted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics,

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 775

Casella was implicated in a case involving distribution of large quantities of heroin smuggled into the United States by his associates, Vincent Todaro and Joseph Lo Piccolo. For the part played as one of the principals in this case, Casella was sentenced during July 1958 by a Federal court at New York City to serve 40 years in prison. His criminal record dates back to 1927 and includes entries reflecting arrest for larceny, illegal lottery, and homicide.

Chalupowitz, Abraham, alias Abraham Chapman, San Francisco, Calif.; FBI No. 264265

Until his conviction on a charge of violating the Federal narcotic law in August 1951 at San Francisco, at which time he was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment as a result of an undercover investigation conducted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, Chalupowitz was an important figure in organized criminal activities of both the Jewish and Italo-American underworld organization throughout the United States. He had been sentenced in Chicago, New Orleans, Fort Worth, and San Francisco separately for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Christie, George, New York City, N.Y.; FBI No. 625887B

Christie has long been known by the FBI and the New York Police Department as one of the most important receivers of stolen furs and jewelry in that city. His legal interests included ownership of 12½ percent of the Jewelry Exchange of New York City. In spite of extensive efforts to implicate him in such crimes, Christie had never been arrested until an investigation by the Bureau of Narcotics resulted in implicating him as a man who conceived of and financed a scheme to illicitly manufacture and distribute Amidone, a synthetic narcotic drug. His partner in this venture was Morris Potnick and the two were equally involved in criminal activities related to organized prostitution, as well as criminal receiving and trafficking of narcotic drugs. During June 1958 he was sentenced in New York to 3 years in prison for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Cinquegrana, Benedetto, New York City; FBI No. 444281

An important member of the Italo-American underworld organization operating in lower east side area of New York City. During May 1956 he was sentenced to 2½ years in prison to be followed by 5 years probation, for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. He has been equally active in bookmaking activities and his arrest record reflects the latter as well as entries for robbery.

Condi, Joseph Dominic, Chicago, Ill.; FBI No. 464

An important member of both the Jewish and Italo-American underworld, he has been active in organized criminal activities in both New York City and Chicago, Ill. In January of 1955, he was sentenced to 10 years at Chicago, Ill., for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. His criminal record dates back to 1919 and reflects entries for burglary, robbery, and safe blowing.

Curcio, Charles, New York City; FBI No. 4226766

Curcio for many years has been active in organized underworld ventures in partnership with Frank Borelli. He and Borelli supplied traffickers in Chicago, Detroit, and Cleveland with large quantities of narcotic drugs. Borelli was arrested in 1948 for violation of the Federal narcotic laws but he succeeded in convincing the district court judge that he was addicted (although he was not an addict) and consequently received a 2-year probationary term with provision that he undertake a cure at the Public Health hospital located in Lexington, Ky. Borelli was admitted to Lexington during January of 1949 and released in July of the same year. During the period of 1950-52 Curcio, along with Borelli, Benjamin and Joseph Licchi, his two uncles, and Dr. John E. Jackson, an underworld chemist, assembled and operated a laboratory in northern New Jersey for the purpose of processing heroin and cocaine. Investigation by the Bureau of Narcotics resulted in the location of this laboratory and the obtaining of testimony from Dr. Jackson against Curcio and his associates. Curcio and the Licchi brothers were arrested and convicted in New Jersey State court, Bergen County, and received substantial prison terms. Borelli, however, fled to Chicago and through a series of legal maneuvers was able to avoid extradition until February 1959, at which time he was ordered to be returned to New Jersey. Shortly after Borelli's return to New Jersey, the essential State witness in the case against him, Dr. Jackson, age 72, was murdered at his home in the Bronx.

776 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Cotroni, Giuseppe, Montreal, Canada; FBI No. 16490D

With his brother Vincent, Giuseppe Cotroni has been for many years a leading figure in the organized underworld operating in Montreal, Canada. The criminal organization he and his brother head is responsible for the burglary of securities from several Canadian banks in amounts totaling approximately $12 million. Operating in conjunction with the criminal organization headed by Carmine Galante and Joseph Bonanno, this group trafficked securities they obtained through the burglary of these banks. Their organization instituted labor racketeering in Montreal and controlled both organized prostitution and gambling in that city as well. In addition they have been equally active in the sale and promotion of worthless securities. Since the early 1950's the Cotroni group supplied a substantial portion of the heroin distributed in the United States, receiving the drug from their sources in France. As a result of an undercover investigation initiated by the Bureau of Narcotics, Giuseppe Cotroni was arrested during August 1959 at Montreal, Canada and subsequently stood trial and was sentenced to serve a 10-year term by a Canadian court.

Coudert, Roger, Paris, France; FBI No. 959779

Coudert was known to the French police as a member of the Paris underworld. In furtherance of various illegal enterprises, Coudert traveled to Mexico, Canada and the United States, under a fraudulently executed Canadian passport. During this period he was active in both the traffic of illegal narcotics and organized prostitution. As a result of an undercover investigation initiated by the Bureau of Narcotics, he was apprehended during 1953 and subsequently sentenced to 10 years imprisonment by a Federal court in New York City. Following the expiration of his sentence, he was deported to France.

Di Pietro, Carlo, New York City; FBI No. 315537A

An important member of the underworld organization operated by Carmine Galante at New York Di Pietro has been equally active in organized gambling activities and interstate theft. He has the reputation of enforcing underworld agreements through intimidation and violence. During May, 1960 he was arrested in New York City and subsequently stood trial on charge of conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws. In July 1962 Di Pietro was sentenced to 20 years by a Federal court in New York. His criminal record dates back to 1936 and reflects entries for criminal entry and criminal receiving of stolen goods.

Di Palermo, Joseph, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 1519166

A leading member of the Italo-American underworld organization of New York, he is closely associated with Carmine Galante and has acted as an underworld "enforcer." He has participated in the criminal activities of this organization throughout the eastern seaboard, Cuba, Canada, and in the past has made trips to Italy in furtherance of organized racketeering activities. When Carmine Galante was apprehended in Binghamton, N.Y., in the company of Joseph Barbara and Frank Garafolo and Joseph Bonanno, Galante attempted to conceal his identity by maintaining he was Joseph Di Palermo and used the latter's drivers license for that purpose. Di Palermo and Carmine Galante were jointly suspected of the 1943 murder in New York City of Carlo Tresca, an Italian language newspaper publisher. During April 1959 Di Palermo was sentenced to 15 years by a Federal court in New York City for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. His criminal record dates back to 1925 and reflects various entries for homicide, conviction for both the Federal liquor laws and counterfeiting violations. He is described by underworld sources as a murderer.

Evola, Natale, New York City; FBI No. 449926

Evola is highly placed in the organized Italo-American underworld. He attended the Apalachin meeting of 1957. Evola has long been known to enforcement authorities as an important figure in labor racketeering activities in the New York garment center. His criminal record dates back to 1930 and includes entries for coercion and illegal possession of firearms. As a result of an extensive investigation conducted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, Evola was implicated and charged in a case involving conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws. Following his trial at the southern district of New York, he was sentenced during April 1959 to 10 years imprisonment.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 777

Galante, Carmine, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 119495

He has long been known as one of the most ruthless underworld leaders in the United States. Prior to his expulsion by Canadian authorities in 1956, Galante organized the underworld activities in Montreal and was largely responsible for the powerful criminal organization which has remained to date. He is suspected of having committed the murder of Carlo Tresca in New York during 1943. During 1956, following the meeting he had with underworld leader Joseph Bonanno, Frank Garafolo and Joseph Barbara, Galante was arrested by the New York State police for a motor vehicle violation. He was sentenced to serve 1 month in prison and during this period there were numerous attempts on the part of various influential persons to intercede in his behalf. Immediately prior to the Apalachin meeting of 1957, Galante had appeared at Palermo, Sicily, with underworld leaders Joseph Bonanno and John Bonventre, and it is believed that the meeting set the pattern of topics to be discussed at the Apalachin meeting which followed immediately afterward. He was sought for questioning with regard to the Apalachin meeting of 1957. Following an investigation by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, Galante was subsequently implicated and charged with conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws. In spite of an intensive search by several law enforcement agencies, Galante remained a fugitive until June 1959, when he was apprehended by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics at a hideout in southern New Jersey. During July 1962 Galante was sentenced to 20 years for conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws by a Federal court in New York City.

Gelb, Saul, New York City, N.Y.; FBI No. 35989

Gelb has long been known as one of the leaders of the Jewish underworld element of New York specializing in the smuggling and distribution of narcotic drugs as well as the large-scale theft and transfer of stolen securities. Prior to World War II, Gelb headed a syndicate which was engaged in the smuggling of narcotics between Europe, the Far East, Mexico, South America, and the United States on a large scale. This group distributed these drugs throughout the United States. His criminal record dates back to 1913 when he was charged at New York, N.Y. as a juvenile delinquent for shooting at a man. During May 1956 he was sentenced to 5 years by a Federal court at New York City for conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws, as a result of an investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics.

Genovese, Vito, New York City and Atlantic Highlands, N.J.; FBI No. 861267

Well known as one of the most important leaders in the organized underworld in the United States, Genovese attended the Apalachin meeting of 1957. In recent years he succeeded in accumulating considerable wealth and influence as a result of his position in the underworld. While the organization he headed was active in many diverse criminal enterprises, Genovese operated relatively freely until, as a result of an investigation conducted by the Bureau of Narcotics, he was implicated in a conspiracy case in New York. In April of 1959 he was sentenced to 15 years by a Federal court at New York City following his trial in this case.

Gernie, Joseph, New York City; FBI No. 1851322

An "enforcer" for the criminal organization formerly headed by Anthony Strollo, alias Tony Bender. Gernie came into prominence during the early 1950's when Strollo's organization attempted to take control of the water front unions at the Claremont pier terminal, New Jersey. He, with Pasquale Pagano resorted to physical violence in order to bring the union members in line. He is known as a professional strong-arm man and murderer. As a result of an undercover investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, Joseph Gernie during 1957 was sentenced to serve 10 years by a Federal court in New York City for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Giannini, Eugene, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 154471

Eugene Giannini was long known as a highly placed member of the organized New York underworld specializing in the traffic of narcotics and counterfeit currency. As a result of an investigation conducted by the Bureau of Narcotics, Giannini and his group made the mistake of selecting an undercover narcotic agent to act as their courier to Italy and, in furtherance of large-scale narcotic transactions, Giannini and his associates furnished the undercover agent with sealed instructions and provided him with round-trip transportation. Shortly after his arrest in this case Giannini was murdered at New York City while under proceedings in Federal court on this and other charges.

778 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Gigante, Vincent, New York City, N.Y.; FBI No. 5020214

A strong-arm man and suspected killer for the Vito Genovese organization. During 1957 Gigante was the prime suspect in the attempted murder of Frank Costello at New York City. He is a former professional boxer. As a result of an investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, Gigante was charged with conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws at New York and during April 1959, following his trial, was sentenced to 7 years on this charge.

Giglio, Salvatore, New York City, N.Y.; FBI No. 1967931

A close criminal associate of Carmine Galante, Giglio represented the New York underworld's interests in Montreal following Galante's expulsion from Canada. During 1956 as a result of an investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics Giglio was indicted on the charge of conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws along with Carmine Galante, John Ormento and others. Since that time Giglio has been sought but never found to date. Underworld sources indicate that he may have been murdered. His criminal record dates back to 1937 and includes a conviction for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Giordanello, Vito, Houston, Tex.; FBI No. 3254832

An important member of the Italo-American underworld organization operating throughout the Southwest, Giordanello was particularly active in New Orleans, La., Houston and Beaumont, Tex. He secured heroin from sources in Chicago and New York, and distributed the drug into the interstate traffic throughout the Southwest. As a result of an investigation conducted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics Vito Giordanello was charged and convicted for violation of the Federal narcotic laws and sentenced to 10 years in prison during December 1956 by a Federal court in Dallas, Tex. His source of supply, Benjamin Indiviglio of New York, was sentenced to 4 years by the same court. Giordanello's criminal record dates back to 1941 and includes other convictions for violating the Federal narcotic laws. As a member of the organized underworld he has been equally active in other illicit ventures controlled by this group.

Impastato, Nicolo, deported to Italy; FBI No. 2716692

A high ranking member of the organized Italo-American underworld which controlled criminal activities in Kansas City, Impastato was known to maintain discipline within the Kansas City underworld through use of violence. He was actively engaged in the multiple illicit ventures operated by this organization. Following an investigation conducted by the Bureau of Narcotics, he was convicted on a charge of violation of the Federal Narcotic law and during 1955 deported to Mexico and from that country to Italy in the same year. His criminal record in Italy dates back to the 1920's and includes entries for homicide and attempted murder.

Isabella, Florio, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 467320

An important member of the Italo-American underworld element operating on the Lower East Side of New York, he has been equally active in organized gambling and shylocking, interstate theft, criminal receiving of stolen goods, and counterfeiting violations. Following an investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, Isabella in May 1957 was sentenced to 15 years for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. His criminal record dates back to 1932 and includes entries for highjacking, interstate theft, counterfeiting, and criminal receiving.

Landers, Clifford, Atlanta, Ga.; FBI No. 1071073

An important member of the organized criminal element operating out of Atlanta, Ga., he is equally active in organized prostitution and crimes arising out of interstate theft. Landers secured sources of supply from major traffickers operating out of the Lower East Side of New York. As a result of an investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics he was arrested, tried and found guilty in Federal court in Atlanta, and during January 1957 was sentenced to 2 years in prison for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. Landers criminal record dates back to 1928 and includes entries for highway robbery, assault and battery, violation of the Mann Act, and rape.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 779

Lasala, James Vincent, San Francisco, Calif.; FBI No. 690454

Member of the organized underworld at San Francisco, Lasala has been equally active in gambling activities and counterfeiting violations. Following an investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, Lasala was tried, found guilty, and during July 1954 was sentenced by a Federal court in San Francisco to 4 years for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Lessa, Daniel, New York City, N.Y.; FBI No. 1018546

An important member of the Italo-American underworld operating out of East Harlem, New York, Lessa is suspected of engaging in labor union racketeering activities and the bringing about of labor agreements through violence and intimidation. Following investigation by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, Lessa was implicated, stood trial and was sentenced to 5 years imprisonment during April 1958 for conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws. His criminal record dates back to 1935. He is also well known to both the Los Angeles police department and the Los Angeles County sheriff's office.

Lewis, Wesley, Chicago, Ill.; FBI No. 518493

An important member of the organized criminal element operating in the South Side of Chicago. He has been equally active in the criminal receiving and interstate shipment of stolen merchandise and gambling violations. As a result of an investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics Lewis, during November 1957, was sentenced to 10 years in Chicago, Ill., for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. His criminal record dates back to 1931 and includes entries for burglary and interstate shipment of stolen merchandise.

Loiacano, Angelo, New York City, N.Y.; FBI No. 2748953

An important member of the Italo-American underworld organization operating in the Lower East Side and East Harlem areas of New York City Loiacano was equally active in the organized gambling activities. As a result of an investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics Loiacano was brought to trial on charges of conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws in Federal court in New York. During June 1962 he was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment on these charges.

Lo Piccolo, Joseph, Chicago, Ill. and Miami, Fla.; FBI No. 790022C

A partner of Vincent Todaro, Lo Piccolo was one of the leading members of an organization that smuggled large quantities of heroin into the United States and distributed this drug through organized underworld channels. Lo Piccolo was active in various criminal ventures at Chicago, Ill.; Miami, Fla.; Philadelphia, Pa.; New York City and Havana, Cuba. Long a leading member of the underworld Lo Piccolo escaped detection until 1958 when an investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics implicated him as a major source of heroin. During August 1958 he was sentenced to 20 years in Federal court in New York on this charge.

Maneri, Salvatore, deported to Italy (addicted); FBI No. 495856

Maneri, prior to his deportation, was an important figure in the organized underworld element operating in the waterfront area of New York. His position as longshoreman helped him to further large scale thefts from foreign shipments. Following his deportation to Italy, he became associated with Salvatore Lucania and actively engaged in the procuring of large quantities of heroin which he smuggled into the United States. He became well known to the sources of supply in France and Italy and worked closely with the organized underworld's outlets of drugs in the United States. As a result of an investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics Maneri was implicated in the conspiracy case at New York City. Following his arrest, he jumped bail and fled prosecution with fugitives Frank Caruso and Vincent Mauro. The three took refuge in Spain, using fraudulently executed Canadian passports. Following many months of investigation, the Bureau of Narcotics located him and the other fugitives in that country and through the cooperation of Interpol succeeded in apprehending and successfully extraditing the three defendants. On March 11, 1963, Maneri was convicted and sentenced to 15 years by a Federal court in New York and 5 years for bail jumping to run concurrent to the 15. Maneri's criminal record dates back to 1929 and includes entries for burglary, grand larceny, illegal entry, violation of parole, possession of burglary tools, theft from interstate shipments, theft from foreign shipments, and multiple convictions for illegal entry.

780 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Marchese, Ignazio, Ansonia, Conn.; FBI No. 4612703

An important member of the Italo-American underworld operating out of Connecticut. He has been equally active in robbery and other crimes of violence. He is known to most of the major underworld figures in the East Harlem area of New York. Marchese is equally active in other organized criminal ventures such as gambling and interstate theft. During March 1958 agents of the Bureau of Narcotics made several undercover purchases of heroin from Marchese at his home in Connecticut. During September 1958 Marchese was sentenced to 7 years by a Federal court at New York for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. His criminal record dates back to 1930 and includes entries for carrying concealed weapons and robbery with violence.

Maresca, Raymond, New Haven, Conn. (addicted at the time of his arrest); FBI No. 26808

For many years a leader of the organized underworld in the New England area, Maresca was active in masterminding thefts from interstate shipments, gambling operations, arson, and other assorted racketeering activities in this area. He was also responsible for the theft of firearms from manufacturers in Connecticut and their subsequent sale to underworld figures. In the course of an undercover investigation conducted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics several purchases of evidence were made from Maresca during 1952. On October 17, 1952, he was sentenced to 8 years by a Federal court at New Haven, Conn. for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. His criminal record dates back to 1933 and includes entries for burglary and carrying concealed weapons.

Martello, Nicholas, New York City, N.Y.; FBI No. 54716

A leading member of the organized Italo-American underworld operating out of the lower East Side of New York, Martello was equally active in the distribution of bootleg alcohol, gambling violations and extortion. Following an undercover investigation conducted by the agents of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics which implicated Martello, the latter was arrested on October 15, 1958, for conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws. Since that time he has disappeared and it is suspected that he has been murdered. Martello's criminal record dates back to 1926 and includes entries for rape, assault, robbery, grand larceny, extortion, and violation of National Fire Arms Act and violation of liquor laws.

Mauro, Vincent, New York City, N.Y.; FBI No. 760950

A high ranking member of the criminal organization formerly controlled by Anthony Strollo (alias) Tony Bender. In pursuance of the activities this organization engaged in Mauro participated equally in operating their gambling and shylocking interests and in the operation of hoodlum controlled nightclubs. As a result of the investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics Mauro was implicated in a narcotic conspiracy case. Following his arrest during May 1961 Mauro with Caruso and Maneri jumped bail and fled to Spain using fraudulent Canadian passports. Intensive investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics resulted in the location of the three fugitives and, through the cooperation of Interpol and the Spanish police, these defendants were extradited to the United States where they subsequently stood trial. On March 11, 1963, they were convicted and sentenced to 15 years by a Federal court in New York and 5 years for bail jumping to run concurrent to the 15.

Mazzie, Rocco, New York City, N.Y.; FBI No. 836192

An important member of the organized Italo-American underworld operating out of east Harlem, Bronx, and Westchester, N.Y. He is known as an "enforcer" and has been used to control dissident underworld segments by means of violence and intimidation. For years he has been a major source of heroin for outlets in Cleveland, Ohio and Chicago, Ill. Following an investigation conducted by the Bureau of Narcotics Mazzie was implicated in a conspiracy case and, during April 1959, was sentenced to 12 years for his participation in the illegal traffic. His criminal record dates back to 1934 and reflects entries for robbery and assault and robbery.

Malizia, John, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 735314

An important member of the organized underworld operating out of the eastern Harlem and Bronx areas of New York City, he, with his brother Joseph, are known as the "Pontiac" brothers. The two brothers have been equally involved in large scale bookmaking activities. Following an undercover investigation during which an agent of the Bureau of Narcotics purchased evidence from both, the brothers were arrested and during November 1957 John and Joseph Malizia were sentenced to 9- and 7-year prison terms, respectively.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 781

Meltzer, Harold, Los Angeles, Calif.; Mexico City, Mexico and New York City; FBI No. 113017 (has legally changed his name to Harold Fried)

Meltzer now is reported to operate large bookmaking and prostitution syndicates in California. A major figure in the organized underworld in California and Mexico, he is known to all the important narcotic traffickers throughout the United States. He has also operated in Oklahoma, Texas, Baltimore, Miami, Las Vegas, Boston, and various areas in Canada, Cuba, Hong Kong, Japan, Hawaii, and the Philippines. Meltzer is also associated with the more important labor organizers and has been involved in union racketeering activities. As a result of a lengthy investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, Meltzer was implicated in a conspiracy case at the southern district of New York and on June of 1951 was sentenced to 5 years, upon his plea of guilty, on this charge.

Mirra, Anthony, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 3938450

An important member of the organized Italo-American underworld operating out of the lower East Side, Bronx, and Westchester areas of New York City, Mirra has been active in many aspects of organized criminal activities and has engaged in violence in pursuit of such crimes. As a result of a lengthy investigation conducted by the Bureau of Narcotics, Anthony Mirra was implicated and charged in a case involving conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws. On September 4, 1957, Mirra was arrested and following his trial at the southern district of New York, during April 1958, he was sentenced to 3 years, 6 months, in this case. Continued investigation of another group of traffickers implicated Mirra in the second conspiracy case. In the course of the trial of this case, in the southern district of New York, Mirra was cited for contempt. During July of 1962 he was sentenced to 20 years for conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws in the latter case and also received a 1-year sentence on the contempt charge, to run consecutively.

Nobile, George, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 1379511

His criminal record dates from 1937 and reflects entries for policy and conspiracy to obstruct justice. George Nobile is a trusted member of the underworld syndicate in the lower East Side section of New York City from whom he has obtained large quantities of heroin for eventual distribution in interstate traffic. He has acted as an underworld chemist in the conversion of narcotic drugs for the illicit market. He is suspected of having been active in counterfeiting, gambling, and the trafficking of illicit alcohol. Most recently he was associated with Vincent Todaro who was a principal in a narcotic organization which obtained vast quantities of heroin from French-Corsican sources in France and from important members of the Sicilian underworld.

Following an intensive undercover investigation by the Bureau of Narcotics during 1957 and 1958, Nobile and several other important violators were arrested in possession of narcotics which originated from French-Corsican and Sicilian underworld sources. Following trial in this case, he was sentenced on May 20, 1958, to 10 years imprisonment in Virginia for violation of the Virginia State narcotic laws.

Orlando, Lorenzo, Elmont, Long Island, N.Y.; he is known to the Kansas City (Mo.) Police Department; FBI No. 511557

Orlando's criminal record dates to 1928 and includes entries for alcohol violations. In his early days Orlando was a member of the underworld in Kansas City, Mo., where he engaged in multiple illicit activities, principally trafficking in alcohol. In recent years he was part of the Vincent Todaro-Joseph Lo Piccolo organization which obtained large quantities of heroin from French-Corsican and Sicilian traffickers and smuggled same into the United States for eventual distribution in interstate traffic. At the time of his arrest in 1958 by the Bureau of Narcotics in the extensive Todaro-Lo Piccolo Narcotic Conspiracy case, Orlando's home contained a large cache of 9 kilos of heroin which had been smuggled into the United States by the Todaro-Lo Piccolo organization. Orlando himself maintained close ties with leading underworld figures in Sicily. In 1958 he was sentenced (re Todaro-Lo Piccolo case) to 17 years in Federal prison for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

782 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Ormento, John, Lido Beach, Long Island, N.Y.; FBI No. 1321383

For many years John Ormento was one of the most influential members of the notorious East 107th Street mob of the East Harlem area of New York City. This criminal organization soon developed into one of the most powerful syndicates in New York City and engaged in various illegal enterprises, including trafficking in narcotics and illicit alcohol, gambling, jukebox racket, extortion, labor racketeering, and shylocking. Ormento has been a trusted lieutenant in this gang and, in addition to being active in gambling and allied illicit interests, specialized in distributing huge quantities of heroin in local and interstate commerce. He is acquainted with most of the leading racketeers in the United States. He attended the notorious Apalachin meeting on November 14, 1957. He was involved in recent years in the narcotic traffic with Vito Genovese and some of the latter's underlings and with members of the Joseph Cotroni organization of Montreal, Canada, which smuggled huge amounts of heroin into the United States. Ormento was a fugitive in the Vito Genovese case until he was apprehended by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics in 1959. During this time he was also being sought by other law enforcement agencies regarding his attendance at the Apalachin meeting. Ormento did not stand trial in the Vito Genovese case but subsequent to his apprehension he stood trial in the Joseph Cotroni Conspiracy case. Following this trial, he was sentenced in U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York, on July 10, 1962, to 40 years' imprisonment in Federal prison where he is currently incarcerated. His arrest record dates from 1937 and includes entries for bookmaking. His 1962 narcotic conviction, his latest, was his fourth narcotic conviction.

Pagano, Joseph, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 4674260

His criminal record dates to 1946 and includes entries for robbery, and assault and robbery. Pagano has been associated for many years with the Anthony Strollo criminal combine of New York City. About 15 years ago he was involved in strong-arm tactics in taking over operations at the Claremont Pier Terminal, New Jersey, for the Anthony Strollo organization. He was associated with racketeer Joseph Gernie, of Harlem, New York City, in the local and interstate trafficking of narcotics. In 1955 he was sentenced to 7 years imprisonment for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. In the latter case he was involved with a group of individuals engaged in distributing narcotics in local and interstate traffic. In recent months he was indicted in U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York, for conspiring to violate the Federal bankruptcy laws in that he and several other individuals had fraudulently transferred $1.3 million in assets of a wholesale meat and poultry corporation. He and his codefendants (New York City racketeers) are awaiting trial in this case.

Pagano, Pasquale, Bronx, N.Y.; he is known to the Jersey City (N.J.) Police Department; FBI No. 74687B

His criminal record dates to 1952 and includes entries for atrocious assault and battery, and attempt to bribe an internal revenue agent. Pasquale Pagano was active in the early 1950's in gambling and extortion activities. During this period he was involved in strong-arm tactics at the Claremont Pier Terminal, New Jersey, on behalf of the highly organized Anthony Strollo criminal group. Also, in the 1950's he was associated in international and interstate trafficking of narcotics with Joseph Valachi, Giacomo Reina, and the late Eugene Giannini. Pagano traveled to France for this group and made arrangements with French-Corsican narcotic traffickers for huge quantities of heroin to be smuggled into the United States. Investigation by the Bureau of Narcotics eventually broke up this narcotic ring. The principals received substantial prison sentences. Pasquale Pagano was sentenced relative to this case on April 23, 1956, to 5 years in Federal prison to run concurrently with a 3-year sentence received in U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York, for an attempt to bribe a Government officer.

Papalardo, Sylvester, Cleveland, Ohio; FBI No. 463957

His criminal record dates from 1932 and includes entries for burglary, robbery, and homicide. He derives the major portion of his income from gambling and trafficking in narcotics. He has been associated for the past several years with leading Cleveland, Ohio, racketeers involved in interstate narcotic traffic with important New York City narcotic distributors. On August 14, 1953, he was sentenced to 15 years in Federal prison for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 783

In this case he was involved with defendants Angelo P. Lavelle, Frank Ciccarello, and Raymond J. Lamarca whose operations were extensive and who supplied major narcotic dealers in the State of Michigan and Ohio.

Papalia, John, Toronto, Canada; FPS No. 568267RCMP, Ottawa, Canada; FBI No. 818021D

His criminal record dates back to 1942 when he was arrested in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, for assault and robbery. His subsequent arrests include violation of the Canadian Liquor Control Act, violation of the Canadian National Selective Civil Service Registration Act, burglary and entry, assault (bodily harm), violation of the narcotic laws of Canada, and violation of the narcotic laws of the United States. Papalia was associated in the narcotic traffic in Toronto, Canada, with the Agueci brothers, Vito and Albert. These individuals furnished narcotic traffickers in the United States with vast quantities of heroin which was eventually distributed in interstate traffic. Papalia has engaged in multiple illicit activities in Canada including gambling, organized prostitution, and trafficking in illicit alcohol. On March 11, 1963, he was sentenced to 10 years imprisonment for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. This conviction resulted from his involvement in the Salvatore Rinaldo Conspiracy case which uncovered and broke up a vast conspiracy ring in the United States engaged in the smuggling of narcotics from Canada and Europe.

Paroutian, Antranik, Marseilles, France; FBI No. 520974D

Paroutian is a major underworld figure of Marseilles, France, and part of the highly organized and powerful Corsican criminal element. He is known to the French police as having maintained an organization that specialized in economic-type crimes and is suspected of the murder of one of his former business associates. Paroutian and his partner, Gabriel Graziani, during the period of 1956-58, traveled from France and set up operations in Montreal, Canada; Havana, Cuba, and New York City. Working closely with leading underworld elements in each of these countries, they set up channels of distribution of heroin which they had smuggled into North America from France by means of their organization. In addition to the traffic in heroin, this group specialized in the traffic in stolen securities and was one of the outlets for the securities burglarized from the Canadian banks by the Cotroni organization. As a fruit of their illicit operations, Paroutian and Graziani, during an 18-month period, were able to send to secret Swiss bank accounts a total of slightly more than $500,000. An intensive investigation conducted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics uncovered the activities of Paroutian. As a result, both he and Graziani were indicted at the southern district of New York during 1958. Continuing investigation by the Bureau of Narcotics resulted in the arrest in Beirut and subsequent extradition to the United States to stand trial on the narcotic charge. In the course of Paroutian's trial, one of the essential pieces of evidence was the complete record pertaining to the coded Swiss bank accounts maintained by Paroutian and his associates which the Bureau of Narcotics had succeeded in obtaining from the Swiss police. This was the only known instance wherein coded Swiss bank records have been made available to U.S. enforcement authorities, in spite of the continuous need and demand for this information. Following his retrial, Paroutian was convicted and in September 1962 was sentenced at the eastern district of New York to two counts of 20 years each, the sentences to run concurrently, on charges of violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Pieri, Salvatore, Buffalo, N.Y.; FBI No. 182971

His criminal record, since he was a juvenile, includes entries for burglary, possession of firearms, and grand larceny. Pieri is an important interstate narcotic trafficker and a trusted member of the Stefano Magaddino, Buffalo, N.Y., crime syndicate which controls multiple illicit activities in upstate New York, including gambling, narcotics, illicit alcohol, shylocking, and extortion. Pieri has no known legal source of income and has maintained his livelihood through participation in narcotics, gambling, extortion, and other illegal pursuits. In the early 1950's he was involved in the distribution of large quantities of heroin and interstate traffic. Following an intensive investigation by the Bureau of Narcotics, Pieri was implicated in a narcotic case for which he received a 10-year prison sentence in 1954.

784 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Pisciotta, Anthony, Bronx, N.Y.; FBI No. 592746A

His criminal record consists of two arrests by the Bureau of Narcotics. Since the 1950's Pisciotta was engaged with important underworld racketeers at New York City in the wholesale narcotic traffic and supplied heroin dealers from all sections of the United States. One of his principal sources of heroin supply was notorious narcotic trafficker Frank Borelli who, through the years, has had access to pure-grade heroin imported from France. Pisciotta had an interest in the Skyway Bar near LaGuardia Airport, in New York City, which he used as a base of operations for many of his narcotic deals and other illicit activities, including gambling. On May 25, 1951, he was sentenced to 9 years' imprisonment followed by 5 years' probation for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. In 1960, he was sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. In the latter venture he was associated with Thomas Garibaldi, of New York City in the distribution of vast quantities of heroin in interstate traffic.

Poliafico, Salvatore, Cleveland, Ohio; FBI No. 1482222

His arrest record dates to 1930, when he was acquitted for murder, and includes an entry for robbery. Poliafico has been employed as a nightclub manager and operator of a television repair service shop. The Cleveland, Ohio, underworld has employed Poliafico as an enforcer of its syndicate operations. In the 1950's he and his associates obtained from leading New York City racketeers large amounts of heroin which he and his associates caused to be distributed in the midwestern part of the United States. It is alleged that his other source of income, aside from trafficking in narcotics, is derived from his gambling interests which are an integral part of the vast operations of the criminal syndicate in Cleveland, Ohio, and its environs. Following an intensive investigation by the Bureau of Narcotics, Poliafico was involved in an important narcotic case and on April 23, 1957, he was sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment in Federal prison for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Polizzano, Ralph, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 7365660

His criminal record commenced in 1957 with an arrest and conviction for interstate narcotic violations. Polizzano was the owner of the Squeez Inn Bar, 57 East Fourth Street, New York City. He used this bar as a base of operations for distributing heroin which he had received from members of the Vito Genovese criminal syndicate which controlled most of the illicit activities in this area. He was subsequently implicated in the vast Vito Genovese narcotic conspiracy case as one of the outlets for heroin for this group and on April 17, 1959, he was sentenced to 7 years imprisonment in Federal prison. This sentence was to run consecutive to a State sentence of 2½ to 4 years which started on October 25, 1957, in New York State Prison for violation of the State narcotic laws. Polizzano was active in gambling activities in the Lower East Side section of New York City.

Pullings, Jeremiah, Chicago, Ill.; FBI No. 274479A

His criminal record dates from 1940 and includes entries for violation of the liquor laws. During past years Pullings was an important member of the underworld in the South Side of Chicago where he controlled the distribution of narcotics from that area to other cities. Among his other illicit operations the sale of illicit alcohol and gambling activities played an important role. He was arrested in 1955 by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics for involvement in an important narcotic conspiracy case and on April 24, 1961, as a result of a conviction in this case, he was sentenced to 12 years in Federal prison.

Ragone, Joseph, Bronx, N.Y.; FBI No. 688161B

His criminal record dates to 1954 when he was arrested for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. This is his only arrest. Joseph Ragone has been active with his brother Gaspare Ragone in the vending machine business and has had interests in the Bluebird Bar, Bronx, N.Y. Through the years he has been associated with several important narcotic violators operating in the Bronx, N.Y. It is suspected that he has engaged in strong-arm tactics in the jukebox racket. He and his associates have been active in gambling operations controlled by the underworld element in the Bronx. In 1954 he was implicated in a narcotic case and was sentenced on November 27, 1954, to serve 3½ years in prison followed by 5 years of probation.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 785

Robert, Rene, Montreal, Canada; FBI No. 164789D

His criminal record dates back to August 25, 1942, when he was arrested in the Province of Quebec, Canada, for breaking into and theft. He was subsequently arrested for theft (5 years), attempted strangulation, theft from person with violence (sentenced to 7 years on October 5, 1950), and lottery. As a result of an undercover investigation conducted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, Robert stood trial at Montreal, Canada, for violation of the Canadian narcotic laws. Robert is now in St. De Paul Prison in Canada serving an 8-year sentence. Robert was an important member of the Joseph Cotroni narcotic smuggling organization in Montreal, Canada, and was instrumental in the smuggling of large quantities of heroin into the United States to leading members of the Carmine Galente criminal syndicate. Robert's other illicit activities included gambling, prostitution, and suspected counterfeiting.

Roberts, James Milton, Washington, D.C.; FBI No. 95554

His arrest record dates to 1926 and includes entries for larceny, disorderly conduct, and assault. Roberts was closely associated in the narcotic traffic with Italo-American racketeers from the East Harlem section of New York City who supplied him with sizable quantities of heroin which he distributed to Washington, D.C., and neighboring cities. Roberts was active in gambling activities in the Washington, D.C., area. On February 3, 1950, he was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. It is believed that this individual will revert to his criminal activities upon release from prison.

Robino, Cristoforo, native of Italy; murdered in Brooklyn, N.Y., on July 18, 1958; FBI No. 492460

Robino was an important figure in the Sicilian organized underworld described by the Italian police as the Mafia. This criminal group maintains a tight control of all illicit and many of the more lucrative legitimate enterprises in Sicily. Its membership has established itself in the United States and they have cooperated closely with their counterpart in Sicily. During early 1950, there were attributed a series of murders committed throughout Italy as a result of Mafia efforts to control the fruit industry in that country. Robino became implicated in a double homicide described as a Mafia killing and was sought for by the Italian police in connection with the two murders. He fled to Canada and subsequently entered the United States. At Windsor, Ontario, he married, and the best man at his wedding was John Ormento, a high-ranking member of the organized New York underworld and notorious narcotic trafficker. After settling in Brooklyn, Robino entered the large-scale narcotic traffic, obtaining heroin from his Mafia associates in Sicily. As a result of an extensive undercover investigation initiated by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, evidence was developed against Robino, who was indicted by a Federal grand jury at New York. Robino fled prosecution and became a fugitive. Following a prolonged investigation by the Bureau of Narcotics and, as a result of these efforts, Robino surrendered for trial during December 1957. Before his trial commenced he was shot to death at Brooklyn, N.Y., on July 18, 1958.

Santagata, Aniello, Kearney, N.J.; he is known to the New York City Police Department; FBI No. 1671607

His arrest record dates from 1909 and includes entries for pickpocketing, larceny, kidnaping, bastardy, fornication, assault and battery, disorderly conduct, and gambling. Santagata was born on January 13, 1888, in Caserta, Italy. He is an oldtime hoodlum highly regarded by his associates. For a number of years he has had sources of supplies of narcotics in Italy, Mexico, and Canada and has been responsible for smuggling and distributing large quantities of heroin throughout the United States. He lists himself as a retired barber but he has maintained his close ties with high-ranking underworld figures in the metropolitan area of New York City. As a result of an undercover investigation conducted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, Santagata was brought to trial at the eastern district of New York on charges of violation of the Federal narcotic law.

Upon completion of the trial, which took place during 1955, he was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

786 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Santora, Salvatore, Leonia, N.J.; FBI No. 838426

His arrest record dates from 1953 and includes entries for grand larceny, assault, possession of a gun, and convictions for violation of the Federal narcotic law. Santora is an important member of one of the leading criminal syndicates in New York City, concentrating its principal activities in the Harlem area of New York City and Westchester County, N.Y. He has been active in gambling, shylocking, and labor racketeering. Through his close association with Racketeer John Ormento, he has established himself in a key position in the underworld. He, John Ormento, Rocco Mazzie, Natale Evola, and gangland Chieftain Vito Genovese were implicated in a vast narcotic conspiracy case which resulted in their conviction in U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York, in 1959. He was sentenced relative to this conspiracy case in April 1959 to 20 years' imprisonment in Federal prison.

Schennault, Harry, Chicago, Ill.; FBI No. 62403

His criminal record dates from 1922 and includes entries for larceny, disorderly person, burglary, gambling, violation of liquor laws, and violation of State and Federal narcotic laws. As a result of an undercover investigation conducted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, evidence was acquired implicating him and he was subsequently arrested for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. During February 1952 he was sentenced to 5 years, followed by 7 years' probation on this charge.

Schiffman, Charles, Newark, N.J., and New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 313781

His criminal record dates to 1921 when he was arrested in Chicago, Ill., for burglary. This record also reflects entries for robbery, holdup kidnaping, and robbery, concealed weapon (loaded revolver), assault with intent to rob, highway robbery, and harboring. On March 30, 1934, he was sentenced to 4 years imprisonment for violation of the Harrison Narcotic Act. On July 18, 1940, he was sentenced to 10 years in the U.S. penitentiary for violation of the Federal narcotic laws and harboring. Following an investigation conducted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, Schiffman was implicated and charged in a case involving conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws. During February 1962 he was sentenced to 25 years in Federal prison as a result of this case. Through the years Schiffman has been a persistent narcotic violator and has been engaged in various illicit activities including gambling, illicit alcohol, and suspected counterfeiting. Schiffman is acquainted with numerous racketeers throughout the United States and has been especially involved in numerous illicit activities with leading members of the Italian underworld element in the metropolitan area of New York City. Schiffman is one of several racketeers of Jewish extraction who share close confidence with high-ranking members of the Italian underworld in New York City. In his most recent brush with the law he was involved in obtaining large quantities of heroin from the Mauro-Caruso-Maneri narcotic organization and subsequently selling a greater portion of these drugs to out-of-town violators.

Serritella, Sam, Hazel Crest, Ill.; FBI No. 2677927

His arrest record dates from 1942 and includes entries for violation of liquor laws. He was sentenced on August 5, 1957, to 10 years imprisonment for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. Serritella has obtained large quantities of high-grade heroin from important racketeers in New York City and has distributed same in Chicago and in interstate traffic. He is associated with leading Chicago racketeers and is active in gambling, illicit alcohol, and other illegal activities.

Sherman, Harry, Los Angeles, Calif.; FBI No. 1754111

His criminal record dates from 1928 and includes entries for felonious assault, robbery, and homicide. He was sentenced on October 11, 1954, to 3- and 4-year consecutive sentences as a result of a case initiated and developed by the Bureau of Narcotics. Sherman is associated with racketeers Samuel Goldstein, Abe Elenevitch, and Charles O'Connor and is well known to all major racketeers in the Los Angeles underworld. He is engaged in several illegal enterprises among which is included gambling as well as interstate narcotic trafficking.

Siano, Fiore, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 109492

He was first arrested in 1948, charged with burglary. His criminal record also includes entries for assault, and robbery with a gun. On November 27, 1954, he was sentenced to 8 years for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. Fiore Siano has been a main source of supply for Negro narcotic traffickers operating in the Harlem area of New York City. He is a trusted associate of leading underworld figures operating and controlling the rackets in Harlem, New York City. Siano is reportedly a trigger man for the crime syndicate operating in the Harlem, New York City, area. He has participated in lucrative gambling activities and has employed strong-arm tactics in enforcing the syndicate's interests in labor racketeering and the jukebox racket.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 787

Stromberg, Harry, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 786309

His criminal record dates back to the early 1920's and includes entries for robbery, illegal lottery, burglary and possession of a gun and violation of liquor laws. In 1958, as a result of an extensive investigation conducted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, Stromberg was implicated in a case involving conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws. He was convicted and sentenced to 5 years imprisonment in this case. Stromberg was reportedly a member of Murder, Inc. He is associated with leading Italian racketeers in the metropolitan New York City area in criminality of all types, including labor racketeering, gambling, extortion, and trafficking in narcotics. In the early 1950's he was the principal financier of a vast narcotic organization which smuggled large quantities of heroin into the United States from France. Investigation by the Bureau of Narcotics subsequently succeeded in breaking up the Stromberg organization. Many of his associates and customers received substantial prison sentences. Stromberg was released from prison on April 28, 1963, and will remain under Federal parole supervision until April 28, 1964. He will undoubtedly revert to his criminal activities and will remain a problem to law enforcement officers.

Thomas, Mack, Chicago, Ill.; FBI No. 186993

His criminal record dates from 1921 and includes entries for carrying a concealed weapon, burglary, and possession of a gun and violation of the State and Federal narcotic laws. On April 23, 1957, he was sentenced from 5 to 10 years imprisonment for violation of the Illinois State narcotic laws. Thomas has maintained an organization in the South Side of Chicago where he has distributed sizable quantities of heroin and has been active in gambling and in the sale of illicit alcohol.

Thompson, John Willard, Dallas, Tex.; FBI No. 1076157

His criminal record dates from 1932 and includes entries for burglary, auto theft, and theft of interstate shipment. As a result of an investigation conducted by agents of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, Thompson was implicated and charged with violation of the Federal narcotics laws. On May 11, 1953, he was sentenced to 8 years imprisonment in this case. He has been active locally in Dallas, Tex., and in interstate traffic in the wholesale distribution of narcotics. He has also been active in hijacking interstate truck cargoes and in gambling enterprises.

Todaro, Vincent, Herndon, Va.; FBI No. 534748

His criminal record dates from 1932 and includes entries for robbery, concealed weapon, receiving stolen goods, and counterfeiting OPA stamps. On May 20, 1958, he was sentenced to 10 years in Fairfax County, Va., for violation of Virginia State narcotic laws. Todaro was the principal in a narcotic organization which obtained large quantities of heroin from French-Corsican traffickers in France and from underworld Sicilian sources and smuggled same into the United States for eventual distribution in New York City and other major cities in the United States. Todaro maintained close ties with French narcotic traffickers Edouard Giribone and Antoine Cordoleani who furnished Todaro with his major supplies of heroin. Todaro had in his organization important narcotic traffickers such as George Nobile, Joseph Lo Piccolo, Frank Moccardi and others. Todaro's narcotic conviction resulted from evidence developed through an undercover case initiated and exploited by the Bureau of Narcotics. As a leader of a major underworld organization, Todaro worked in close criminal association with highly placed racketeers throughout the United States in pursuit of multiple illicit ventures.

Tramaglino, Eugene, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 588015

His criminal record dates from 1932 and includes numerous entries for grand larceny, counterfeiting, intimidation of witnesses and violation of the Federal liquor and narcotic laws. On June 26, 1951, he was sentenced to 10 years for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. Tramaglino is a key member of the Arnold Romano gang which distributes wholesale quantities of heroin in New York and interstate traffic. This criminal group is also active in the trafficking of illicit alcohol, counterfeiting, gambling, and extortion.

788 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Tuminaro, Angelo, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 270010

His criminal record dates to 1929 and includes entries for grand larceny, assault and robbery, and violation of New York State and Federal narcotic laws. As a result of an investigation conducted by the Bureau of Narcotics, Tuminaro was implicated in a case involving conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws. He was arrested during May 1960, on this charge and subsequently jumped $35,000 bail. Following an intensive search for this fugitive by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, he was located at Miami, Fla., and apprehended on November 5, 1962. He was extradited to New York and is currently under $300,000 bond awaiting trial in New York relative to the Joseph Cotroni narcotic conspiracy case. Tuminaro was closely associated with his partner Anthony DiPasqua in the narcotics traffic. As part of the Galente organization, he was involved with the Joseph Cotroni mob of Montreal, Canada, which was responsible for flooding the New York City area with huge quantities of heroin obtained from sources in France. Tuminaro and DiPasqua dealt with local Jewish traffickers who are engaged in interstate narcotic trafficking. Tuminaro has been suspected of several unsolved homicides in New York City.

Turner, Randolph, Washington, D.C. He is known to the New York City Police Department. FBI No. 787265

His criminal record dates from 1933 and includes entries for disorderly conduct, violation of liquor laws, and violation of the State and Federal narcotic laws in New York City and Washington, D.C. On January 2, 1953, he was sentenced to 8 to 24 years for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. Prior to his prison sentence in 1953 he was one of the leading narcotic traffickers operating in Washington, D.C. His illicit activities extended to other huge lucrative areas, including gambling and trafficking of illicit alcohol. He had close ties with leading Italian racketeers operating in the Harlem area of New York City. The latter furnished Turner with large quantities of heroin which he distributed to Washington, D.C., and surrounding areas.

Valachi, Joseph, Bronx, N.Y.; FBI No. 544

His criminal record dates from 1921 and includes entries for concealed weapons, burglary, and robbery. For many years Joseph Valachi was a member of one of the large criminal syndicates in New York City, which specialized in narcotics, labor extortion, illicit alcohol, and various lucrative illegal operations. At times Valachi was employed as a strong-arm man in enforcing this syndicate's policies. Valachi was very active in the narcotic traffic and in the 1950's supplied heroin to notorious violator John Freeman, who has been one of the most active Negro interstate traffickers of heroin in the United States. In 1960, as a result of an investigation conducted by the Bureau of Narcotics, Valachi was sentenced at the Eastern District of New York to 15 years imprisonment for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. This sentence was in regard to his involvement in the narcotic traffic with John Freeman's son and other individuals. While in Federal prison, Valachi killed an inmate and subsequently was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Wexler, Irving, New York, N.Y.; FBI No. 668974

One of the most significant cases made in 1951 was that against Irving Wexler, alias Waxey Gordon. A fourth offender under the New York law he was sentenced on December 13, 1951, to 25 years to life in Federal prison. During the prohibition era he was the most important distributor of illicit beer in the eastern part of the United States, with income reputedly running into the millions. In 1930 he was designated as New York's public enemy No. 1. Trafficking in narcotics was one of his major illicit activities. At the time of his arrest in this case, he was associated with one of the largest nationwide illicit narcotic combines ever to operate in this country. Associated with Wexler in this narcotic conspiracy case and arrested at the same time were Samuel Kass, Benjamin Katz, and Arthur Repola. These violators were sentenced in December 1951, to substantial prison sentences.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 789

Rosal, Mauricio, et al.

During the summer months of 1960, our agents abroad received information from the French Sureté indicating Étienne Tarditi and his associates were supplying large amounts of heroin to traffickers in the United States. Agents of our New York office determined Tarditi was making frequent trips to the United States and meeting with Mauricio Rosal, Ambassador from Guatemala to Belgium.

In September 1960, information was developed indicating a shipment would take place. Agents of our New York office placed an alert at the airport in New York and watched their hotels for advance reservations. In the meantime, the French police determined Tarditi was about to leave for the United States. Tarditi arrived in New York on the evening of October 1, 1960, followed by Ambassador Rosal who arrived on the evening of October 2, 1960. These suspects were placed under continuous surveillance and on October 3, 1960, they were placed under arrest when they delivered 50 kilograms of heroin to Charles Bourbonnais and Nick Calamaras.

Immediately following this arrest, additional information was developed that led to a seizure of 52 kilograms of heroin in the residence of a friend of Charles Bourbonnais. This total of 102 kilograms of heroin seized is the largest seizure of heroin ever made by the Bureau of Narcotics.

All information and evidence obtained as a result of the above was immediately transmitted to the French Sureté Nationale at Paris. They commenced an intensive investigation and as a result arrested the suppliers of this heroin. Arrested in France were Robert LeCoat, Felix Barnier, and Gilbert Coscia.

In New York, a conspiracy investigation was started toward identifying and implicating the intended recipients of this large amount of heroin. On September 28, 1962, Boston criminal attorney Joseph Sax and his lieutenant, Joseph Massa were arrested. In addition, Robert Ager was arrested in Groton, Conn., and charged with receiving hundreds of kilograms of heroin since 1951 from this French organization.

Stadter, Victor, et al.

On June 7, 1962, Mustafa Abdullah, a member of the Black Muslim movement, introduced an undercover narcotic agent to James Joseph, who furnished the agent with an ounce of pure heroin. The following day, the undercover agent purchased one kilogram of heroin from Joseph for $18,000. Surveillance implicated Joseph's source of supply, one Victor Stadter, who operated a Cessna aircraft. It was further ascertained, that Richard Gardiner and two airline pilots, Marvin Wright and Roy Ehlen were associated with Stadter in the narcotic traffic.

On June 14, 1962, James Joseph and Richard Gardiner were arrested as they were about to deliver 1½ kilograms of heroin to an undercover agent. Shortly afterward, Stadter, Wright, and Ehlen were arrested. An additional 80 grams of heroin was seized at Joseph's apartment. The investigation, which was developed with the Bureau of Customs, indicated the heroin was of French origin which had been smuggled into the United States via Panama and Mexico.

Angelvin Jacques, et al.

On January 18, 1962, in Brooklyn, N.Y., agents of our New York office working with New York City police, arrested Joseph Fuca, Anthony Fuca, Pasquale Fuca, Barbara Fuca, Francois Scaglia, and Nicholas Trovato and seized from them 11 kilograms, 91 grams of heroin. Anthony Fuca was released on bail to await trial. On February 24, 1962, Anthony Fuca was arrested in the Bronx, N.Y., in possession of 33 kilograms of heroin. During this investigation it was learned that the heroin, secreted in a trap specially built into an automobile belonging to Jacques Angelvin, a French citizen, had been transported from Le Havre, France, aboard the SS United States which had arrived in New York on January 10, 1962.

INTERNATIONAL ILLICIT NARCOTIC CASES 1951 TO JULY 1963 BY HENRY L. GIORDANO, COMMISSIONER OF NARCOTICS

U.S. Treasury Department, Bureau of Narcotics, Washington, D.C.

The major narcotic law enforcement objectives of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics have been the suppression of the interstate and international illicit narcotic traffic.

790 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The Bureau of Narcotics has successfully concluded numerous international illicit narcotic trafficking investigations through efforts in the United States and abroad. Since 1951, a concerted effort was made to apprehend abroad the sources of supply of illicit narcotics seized in the United States. Narcotic agents were sent abroad on special assignments to assist foreign police authorities in cutting off this flow of illicit narcotics to the United States. In 1951, a district headquarters office was created, attached to the American Embassy at Rome, Italy. Subsequently, branch offices were established in Beirut, Lebanon; Istanbul, Turkey; Paris and Marseilles, France.

In 1962, the Treasury Department extended the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Narcotics to other regions of the world. Accordingly, district headquarters offices have been established in Mexico City with a branch office at Monterrey, for the Central and South American region; and at Bangkok, Thailand, for the southeast Asia-Far East region. Before the Bureau's investigative interests were expanded to include these regions, narcotic agents had been sent on special assignments to countries in those sections of the world.

Bureau participation in this foreign program has been based on invitations extended by individual governments; U.S. membership in the International Criminal Police Organization (Interpol); provisions of international treaties and conventions recommending direct exchange of information among countries having common narcotic enforcement interests; resolutions adopted by the United Nations Commission on Narcotic Drugs, and other international bodies concerned with the narcotics problem; and other factors.

The great majority of the investigations conducted abroad are initiated and developed through the undercover investigative technique involving penetration of highly organized gangs, with attendant hazards and hardships to intrepid, courageous agents.

From the inception of this foreign enforcement program to July 1, 1963, a total of 510 defendants have been arrested, in 165 cases.

Drugs, intended for smuggling to the United States (in either intermediate or refined form) seized between 1951 and July 1, 1963

	Kilograms
Raw opium.....	9, 143. 900
Prepared opium.....	625. 900
Morphine base.....	440. 800
Heroin.....	201. 040
Cocaine.....	8. 740
Hashish.....	763. 400
Other.....	. 471
Clandestine laboratories.....	32. 000

Summaries of some of the more important cases :

FAR EAST

THAILAND

Kongsombat, Tong, et al.

On October 3, 1962, a U.S. narcotic agent, working undercover in cooperation with the Thailand Central Narcotic Bureau, met suspected opium trafficker Tong Kongsombat at Bangkok. Following a discussion regarding price and methods of delivery, Kongsombat agreed to sell 1 ton of opium. On October 9, 1962, Tong Kongsombat, Yai Kokeprang, and Narong Janisamut were arrested at Lampang, Thailand, as they delivered 1,057 kilograms, 700 grams of opium. Lampang is near the general border area of northern Thailand, Shan State of Burma, and Yunnan Province of Communist China. From information obtained during this investigation, Thai authorities on October 31, 1962, arrested Song Yu-Suparb at Lampang and seized an additional 1,094 kilograms of opium and 52.9 kilograms of "999" brand morphine. The Bureau agent assisted officers of the Thailand Central Narcotic Bureau in the supplemental investigation of a Chinese source for the well-known "999" brand of morphine base which has appeared in increasing quantities in the illicit narcotic traffic.

Tang, Toi Siang

After lengthy negotiations with our undercover agent, Toi Siang Tang was arrested in Bangkok on August 24, 1962, as he delivered 5 kilograms 807 grams of "999" brand morphine. On October 10, 1962, Tang was sentenced to 2½ years' imprisonment and fined $10,000.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 791

Chun, Hao Lu

On September 12, 1962, a U.S. narcotic agent in Bangkok, Thailand, received information regarding a Chinese narcotic violator operating from the northern border village of Chiangmai. In cooperation with Thai authorities, the U.S. narcotic agent proceeded to Chiangmai. The narcotics agent, posing as a criminal buyer, met Hao Lu Chun, who gave assurances that he could supply unlimited quantities of opium. On September 24, Hao Lu Chun was arrested as he was delivering 306 kilograms of opium to the U.S. narcotic agent.

Semsan, Tongpond, et al.

On February 11, 1963, following negotiations with an undercover narcotic agent posing as an Air Force pilot engaged in the narcotic traffic, an officer of the Thailand Central Narcotic Bureau and assisted by Bangkok Metropolitan Police, arrested the suspect with two other defendants in possession of 510 kilograms, 800 grams of smoking opium.

Chua, Veng, et al.

A confidential informant reported to an agent of this district that a clandestine laboratory converting morphine base to heroin was being operated in the Bangkok area by a Chinese chemist. Surveillance indicated that the laboratory was operated only during the early morning hours. On February 22, 1963, at about 8 a.m., Central Narcotic Bureau officers arrested the chemist, Lee Yok Kun, and his assistant, Boonsri Kittisuwai. A completely equipped conversion laboratory was seized with approximately 14 kilograms of heroin. Prior to the seizure, surveillance by Central Narcotic Bureau officers had implicated Veng Chua, and this was subsequently corroborated when the chemist, Kun, identified Chua as the owner and financier of the laboratory. Chua was arrested on that same date at his residence in Bangkok. Kun also admitted that the heroin produced by the laboratory was being shipped to a customer in Hong Kong whom he would not identify.

Chareonsri, Theb, et al.

An American naval enlisted man was approached by a Vietnamese employed at the Navy Exchange, Saigon, Vietnam, offering approximately $48 per kilogram to transport opium from Bangkok, Thailand, to Saigon. An undercover narcotic agent, posing as a Navy pilot, agreed to fly about 100 kilograms of opium from Bangkok to Saigon, and was furnished a letter from the trafficker to the source of supply in Bangkok. On March 14, 1962, following undercover negotiations between the undercover narcotic agent and the source of supply; officers of the Thailand Central Narcotic Bureau arrested Chareonsri with Vibul Thienpothong and Reuw Tan in possession of 11.78 kilograms of smoking opium. Two automobiles, a Mercedes 220 and a Fiat 1800 were seized. Further investigation, in which our agent assisted, led to the arrest at Saigon on March 17, 1963, of the two intended recipients of the opium, Trieu Ming Van, alias Ming-Wen Chao, and Chau Buu Co. The opium was intended for conversion to heroin at Saigon, for shipment to Hong Kong and then to the United States.

EUROPE AND THE MIDDLE EAST

Toprak, Mehmet, et al.—Turkey

On April 1, 1963, a Bureau agent at Istanbul assisted Turkish police in the arrest of Mehmet Toprak and Mustafa Aydogan at Kayseri, Turkey, and the seizure of 11 kilograms of morphine base.

Parlak, Hassan—Turkey

On April 6, 1963, an agent stationed at Istanbul developed a case jointly with the Turkish police which resulted in the seizure of 224 kilograms of opium, and the arrest of Hassan Parlak in Afyon, Turkey. During this seizure, the Turkish traffickers resisted arrest. During a gun battle with the police, one of the narcotic traffickers was slain, and another unidentified Turk escaped in the darkness.

Bistoni, Albert Ansan, et al.—France

On March 3, 1963, an undercover agent of our Marseilles office assisted French police authorities in a case which resulted in the seizure of 3½ kilograms of heroin and the arrests of Albert Bistoni, Jean Baptist Beysson, and Louis Alunnimenechini. The agent initiated this case in December 1962, when he purchased 1 kilogram of heroin from Beysson at Nice, France. Subsequent undercover meetings and conversations implicated Bistoni and culminated with the arrest of Alunnimenechini when he delivered 3½ kilograms of heroin on March 3, 1963, to our undercover agent.

792 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Sozer, Omar, et al.—Turkey

On March 31, 1963, on a road near the village of Goceri, Turkey, Omar Sozer, Mustafa Demir, and Moussa Murur delivered more than 1 metric ton of opium to an undercover narcotic agent. Although the defendants were heavily armed, they were taken into custody before they could open fire.

Cambon, Pierre—France

On January 27, 1963, an agent of our Marseilles office working in collaboration with the French authorities in Paris, commenced undercover negotiations with Pierre Cambon and his associate, Henri Riestl, both French seamen who had returned from a trip to the Far East. Cambon indicated he had 50 kilograms of opium to sell for consumption on the American market. French authorities arrested Cambon and Riestl as they delivered 6 kilograms of opium to the Bureau's undercover agent.

Osman, Ahmed, et al.—Lebanon

On December 23, 1962, an agent at Beirut working in an undercover capacity, assisted the authorities there in a case which involved the seizure of 5 kilograms of heroin, and the arrest of Ahmed Osman, Mohamed Bashir Jleilati, and Abdo Ali Sarraji. During subsequent interrogations, it was learned that the heroin had been manufactured at the home of Abdel Wahab Edlebi in Beirut. A search of his residence disclosed the chemicals and equipment that had been used to make the heroin. Edlebi and his wife, Taha Edlebi, were also arrested.

Soysal, Ahmet, et al.—Turkey

On October 29, 1962, the Belgian authorities made available to the Bureau the services of an informant who had been propositioned to smuggle approximately 50 kilograms of morphine base from Istanbul, Turkey, to Marseilles France, where it was to be converted to heroin for smuggling to the United States. The Bureau agent in Paris interviewed the informant and sent the informant to Istanbul where the matter was coordinated with the Bureau agent in that city and the Turkish authorities. The informant, working under the direction of the Bureau representative and the Turkish police, communicated with the traffickers, Ahmet Soysal, et al., who equipped the informant's automobile with a secret compartment capable of holding 40 kilograms of morphine base. They also gave him specific instructions regarding the mode of delivery and persons to whom the drugs were to be delivered in Marseilles. On November 22, the Turkish police, assisted by the Bureau representative in Istanbul, searched the informant's vehicle while it was in possession of one of the traffickers and seized 40 kilograms of pure morphine base. Turkish police arrested Ahmet Soysal, Ali Bezal, Saben Selmasi, Sefer Bezal, Mustafa Ozer, and Remzi Aslan.

Doueihi, Georges—France

On October 12, 1962, a Bureau agent at Paris, while working in an undercover capacity, assisted the French authorities in a case which resulted in the arrest of a Lebanese Maronite priest, Georges Doueihi, as he delivered 5 kilograms of high-grade morphine base to the undercover agent. French authorities searched his hotel room where they seized 15 kilograms of hashish.

Jamous, Michel Said, et al.—Lebanon

On October 18, 1962, following 2 weeks of negotiations, an undercover agent at Beirut assisted the Lebanese authorities in a case which resulted in the seizure of 4 kilograms of morphine base. Lebanese authorities arrested Michel Jamous, Joseph Nhalil Daher, and Jean and Boutrous Namroud. The morphine base was analyzed at 96.4 percent.

Erdem, Suleyman, et al.—Turkey

On October 22, 1962, Turkish police authorities arrested Suleyman Erdem and his partner, Mustafa Yasa, at Burdur, Turkey, and seized 180 kilograms of opium, as well as a loaded automatic pistol from Yasa. This case was developed and had its successful conclusion as a result of an informant, developed by the Bureau representative at Istanbul, who assisted in devising the strategy and provided the information to the Turkish authorities.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 793

Osluk, Mustafa, et al.—Turkey

On August 24, 1962, an agent of the Bureau office in Istanbul assisted the Turkish police authorities in a case which resulted in the seizure of 223 kilograms of opium and the arrests of Mustafa Osluk, Mustafa Kacar, and Ismail Beyshir, at a village in eastern Turkey. As the traffickers delivered the opium to the undercover agent working with a Turkish police colonel, they were placed under arrest. During a gun battle between the Turkish police and the traffickers, Beyshir escaped.

Dahir, Dahir Khuder, et al.—Syria

During early August 1962, a reliable informant working under the direction of the Bureau representative in Beirut, Lebanon, obtained information regarding a future delivery of opium. The information indicated that the drugs were to be delivered to the residence of Dahir in Aleppo, Syria. Accordingly, on August 25, 1962, the Syrian authorities placed the suspect residence under surveillance. In the early morning hours, Mamidi Darwish, Ali Hussays, Juwayyid, and Jasim Kazili approached the residence of Dahir, and were arrested as they were about to deliver 53 kilos of opium.

Cakir, Sezai, et al.—Turkey

On July 5, 1962, in the village of Usak, Turkey, the Turkish authorities arrested Sezai Cakir and Ismail Barlas as they were about to deliver 5 kilograms of morphine base and 3 kilograms of opium to two informants working under the direction of the Bureau representative stationed in Istanbul.

Zora, Remzi, et al.—Turkey

On July 6, 1962, an agent of the Bureau office in Istanbul assisted the Turkish police authorities in a case which resulted in the seizure of 120 kilograms of opium, and the arrest of Remzi Zora and Halit Keskin. This case had its inception 3 weeks earlier when two informants of the Bureau Istanbul representative commenced negotiations with these traffickers on a farm near Usak, Turkey.

Mavilioglu, Enver, et al.—Turkey

During June 1962, an informant of the Bureau office in Istanbul introduced a Turkish police officer to Mavilioglu and ordered 100 kilograms of opium for delivery at a later date. On July 8, 1962, near the village of Usak, Turkey, Mavilioglu's associate, Muzzafer Basaran, made arrangements for the delivery. Later, Elyas Erdemir and three unidentified persons appeared. Erdemir stated that he had brought 100 kilograms of opium. As the Turkish police officer, working undercover, gave the appropriate signal, the narcotic traffickers opened fire on the Turkish police and the Bureau agent. Basaran and Erdemir were arrested while the others escaped in the darkness. Fifty kilograms of opium were seized at the scene. On the following day, Mavilioglu was arrested for his participation in this case.

Erdin, Mehmet, et al.—Turkey

On July 12, 1962, near Izmir, Turkey, an informant of the Bureau Istanbul office negotiated with Mehmet Erdin for the delivery of 500 kilograms of opium. As the informant drove to the scene to accept delivery, under the surveillance of the Turkish police assisted by the Bureau representative, Kamal Erdin was seen to approach the informant. At this point, the Turkish police, assisted by the Bureau agent, closed in, placed Kamal and Mehmet Erdin under arrest, and seized 420 kilograms of opium. The defendants admitted recently selling 2,700 kilograms (2 metric tons) of opium for smuggling abroad.

Kirik, Davut, et al.—Turkey

On July 19, 1962, the Bureau agent at Istanbul assisted the Turkish police near Yenice, Turkey in the seizure of 120 kilograms of opium, and the arrest of Osman Kayar, Ali Ozcetin, and the latter's brother, Mehmet. Shortly thereafter, Ali Ozcetin, who had been handcuffed and arrested, leaped into a river and disappeared from sight. His body was not recovered.

Cay, Vahitting, et al.—Turkey

On July 9, 1962, an informant working under the direction of the agent in Beirut, Lebanon, and assisting the Turkish authorities, negotiated for the delivery of a large quantity of morphine base. On July 21, 1962, a sample was received, and on July 23, 1962, Cay, Habib Ruhl, and Mehmet Ali Tosyaliloglu were arrested by the Turkish police as they delivered 10 kilograms of morphine base to the undercover agent working in cooperation with the Turkish authorities.

794 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Erdimitriades, Isaias, et al.—Turkey

Erdimitriades delivered 5 kilograms of morphine base, on July 30, 1962, to an undercover agent at Istanbul, in cooperation with the Turkish police. A previous delivery of 1 kilogram was made to an informant on July 27, 1962. On July 30, after the agent had tested the 5 kilograms and obtained positive identification, he signaled the Turkish police, who arrested Erdimitriades and two less known traffickers, and seized the morphine base. Erdimitriades is recorded extensively in our files as a principal source of supply of morphine base for French heroin laboratory operators.

Albertini, Barthelémy—France

Prior undercover negotiations were brought to a successful conclusion on May 9, 1962, when French police arrested Barthelémy Albertini, Janvier Piccirillo, and Jean Donati as they were about to deliver 3 kilograms of pure heroin to the Bureau undercover agent at Marseilles. Donati had supplied Albertini with the heroin. The investigation revealed that the seized heroin was destined for consumption in the United States.

Ozkursun, Sain, et al.—Turkey

The Bureau representative at Istanbul learned from a confidential informant that Ozkursun was clandestinely manufacturing heroin in his local brass factory. On May 30, 1962, the Istanbul police gained entry and uncovered a heroin laboratory complete with a large supply of chemicals necessary for the conversion of opium to heroin. The suspects admitted they were awaiting a shipment of opium expected with the first harvest of the 1962 crop.

Bayramin, Bayram, et al.—Turkey

On April 23, 1962, predicated on information received from the Bureau agent at Beirut, Lebanon, the Turkish police stopped a caravan on a routine patrol. Eyup Bayramin, a member of the party, became frightened and fled after exchanging gunfire with the Turkish police. Bayram Bayramin sensed that something had gone wrong, tried to dispose of the opium by fleeing and hiding it in a village. Through a carefully executed plan, the Turkish police seized 370.5 kilograms of opium and arrested Bayram Bayramin and five others.

Davis, George William—France

In April 1962, the Bureau agent at Paris, working undercover, met Davis in a bistro. After several meetings the suspect, Davis, asked the undercover agent to become his partner in the smuggling of illicit drugs into the United States. He was having difficulties in collecting payments for narcotics sent to the United States previously. The case eventually led to the seizure of 3 kilograms of heroin from Davis by the French police, with whom the investigation had been jointly conducted. Under interrogation Davis admitted that he had smuggled narcotics into the United States and also that he had delivered narcotics personally to two known traffickers in New York City.

Valenti, Salvatore, et al.—Italy

During the month of October 1960, Bureau agents in New York City seized 10 kilograms of pure heroin which had been smuggled from Italy. An intensive investigation was started in Italy by agents stationed there, in cooperation with the Italian authorities. As a result, an extensive penal report was completed and sent to the instructional judge in Rome. This report sets forth many facts implicating 42 individuals in Italy who were sending heroin to the United States. This report reveals connections between various high level Mafiosi in Italy and the United States. These 42 defendants were indicted and are awaiting prosecution in Italy.

Mauro, Vincent, et al.—Spain

As a result of a large-scale narcotic conspiracy in New York City, notorious narcotic gangsters Vincent Mauro, Salvatore Maneri, and Frank Caruso were indicted in Federal court, and subsequently fled from the United States. These fugitives were traced to Spain by members of the Bureau office in New York, working in cooperation with the office in Rome, Italy. An agent from the Beirut office was sent to Spain to assist the Spanish authorities. During January 1962, all of the fugitives were arrested by Spanish authorities, and expelled to the United States. They were arraigned in New York City, and each held in $300,000 bail. Subsequently, they pleaded guilty and each was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 795

Lucania, Salvatore, alias Lucky Luciano—Italy

During January 1962, Salvatore Lucania died of a heart attack in Naples, Italy. At the time of his death, Bureau agents in Rome, working in cooperation with Italian authorities, had established his close associations with Maneri, Caruso, and Mauro listed above. Considerable criminal intelligence was obtained concerning Lucania's connection with the highest ranking members of organized crime in both Italy and the United States. Even up to the time of his demise, Lucania had maintained his fearsome stature as one of the most important illicit narcotic traffickers of this generation.

Sava, Abdulvahap—Turkey

A confidential informant of the Bureau office in Beirut penetrated a Turkish narcotic smuggling organization. Working in cooperation with the Turkish authorities, a U.S. narcotic agent directed the efforts of the informant which resulted in the seizure of 404 kilograms of opium from defendant Abdulvahap Sava and Ali Atas on October 28, 1961, at Malatya, Turkey.

Konakci, Vahap and Husseyin—Turkey

During July 1961, a Bureau agent at Beirut proceeded to Turkey and was introduced to the above-named defendants in an undercover capacity. This investigation was coordinated with the Turkish authorities. Negotiations at the time did not materialize because the undercover agent was unable to produce the purchase price. This obstacle was eventually overcome and on September 20, 1961, the undercover agent met the defendant and ordered 250 kilograms of opium. The investigation was terminated prematurely when the defendants became apprehensive. Nevertheless, 12 kilograms of opium were seized.

Cetinkaya, Hasan—Turkey

In cooperation with the Turkish authorities, a Bureau agent at Istanbul assisted in the seizure of 105 kilograms of opium in the region of Dinar, Turkey, and the arrest of Cetinkaya, Tefik Tasbas, and Ali Celen.

Topuk, Turmus et al.—Turkey

On July 29, 1961, Turmus Topuk and codefendants Rustu Cetin and Sakir Orhan were arrested as they delivered 170 kilograms of opium to a Bureau agent in Istanbul, Turkey, while he was working undercover in collaboration with the Turkish police.

Ruberti, Madeleine et al.—France

In April 1961, a confidential informant at New York City introduced a Bureau undercover agent to two New York traffickers. These traffickers made arrangements for the agent to purchase 2 kilograms of opium in Marseilles and smuggle it back to New York City. These traffickers also paid most of the expenses for the European trip of the undercover agent, who proceeded to Paris, coordinated the matter with the French authorities, and then proceeded to Marseilles under the surveillance of the French police. In Marseilles the agent visited Madeleine Ruberti, who told the undercover agent to return later. On June 3, 1961, Ruberti met the undercover agent and delivered to him 1½ kilograms of opium which was concealed in a false-bottomed suitcase. The French police arrested Madeleine Ruberti, her son Roland Bethbeze, and Pascal Guidoni. Simultaneously, Antoine Buttafuco and Carmelo Sansone were arrested in New York City for having engaged the undercover agent for the smuggling mission.

Galiano, Antoine—France

On April 20, 1961, two agents of the Bureau assisted the French police in a case which resulted in the arrest of Antoine Galiano. An informant working under the supervision of the agents purchased a sample of heroin from Galiano, at which time he was arrested. One-quarter kilogram of heroin was seized in a subsequent search of Galiano's residence. For many years this defendant was engaged in placing large quantities of heroin aboard ships at French ports destined for the United States.

796 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICSKiyar, Hagi Ibrahim—Turkey

On February 24, 1961, an undercover agent at Istanbul, working in cooperation with the Turkish authorities, entered into negotiations for the purchase of 10 kilograms of morphine base. Kiyar subsequently sent his 14-year-old son who delivered the 10 kilograms of morphine base to the undercover agent. Kiyar and his son were arrested. In a followup investigation based on statements by Kiyar, the Bureau agent accompanied members of the Turkish police to the interior of Turkey. They immediately located Lufti Akaaca, placed him under arrest, and searched his home. The search was negative. He did, however, admit making the morphine base from 180 kilograms of opium which had been diverted from the previous year's harvest. Four other defendants, including the opium growers and laboratory operators, were subsequently arrested.

Rosal, Mauricio, et al.—France

During the summer of 1960 the agent at our Beirut office obtained information concerning the Beirut-Paris narcotic trafficking activities of one Etienne Tarditi. The matter was coordinated with the French authorities. Working in cooperation with the Bureau office in New York City, a pattern was uncovered which disclosed that Tarditi was also making frequent trips between Paris and New York. The New York office was able to identify a diplomat who had assisted Tarditi in his international narcotic smuggling ventures. This carefully coordinated investigation led to the arrest on October 3, 1960, in New York City of Mauricio Rosal, then Guatemalan Ambassador to Belgium and the Netherlands, Etienne Tarditi, and TWA Employee Charles Bourbonnais as they were delivering to Nicholas Calamaris 50 kilograms of heroin smuggled in by Ambassador Rosal. Calamaris represented the New York mobsters. The French police subsequently arrested three known French traffickers as a result of information obtained in New York City. Agents seized 52 kilograms of heroin at the home of Charles Bourbonnais in a followup investigation in New York City on October 5, 1960. At the time of the arrests approximately $78,000 was seized from the group.

El Badawi, Mahmoud—Syria

Mahmoud El Badawi and three other traffickers had for years been selling morphine base to Lebanese traffickers for export to Europe, where it was processed in heroin for smuggling into the United States. In April 1960 this group of narcotic traffickers agreed to deliver a large quantity of morphine base to an undercover narcotic agent at a desert point near Homs, Syria. The delivery was made on the night of April 5, and the traffickers escaped into the desert amid gunfire and successfully broke through the roadblocks. On the morning of April 6, 25 kilograms of morphine base was found near the area by desert patrols and two of the defendants, including El Badawi, were later arrested. United Arab Republic Customs at Damascus refer to the Mahmoud El Badawi case as the biggest morphine case in their history.

Aranci, Marius—France

Through the services of an informant developed by agents of the Bureau's New York office, French police working with U.S. narcotic agents in France were able to seize 3 kilograms of pure heroin from Marius Aranci on October 1, 1960, at Marseilles. Sufficient evidence was obtained, also implicating his brother and a female defendant who acted as an interpreter and assistant to Marius Aranci.

Pici, Giuseppe, et al.—Italy

In an investigation carefully coordinated with the Italian authorities, an undercover agent of the Bureau office in Rome met and purchased a quantity of heroin from deportee Johnny Gioia, in Genoa, Italy, in September 1959. Gioia, it was established, was in the employ of Joe Pici, another deportee, and a top lieutenant of Lucky Luciano. Technical devices were immediately installed and Pici was implicated in the original purchase of evidence. Positive information was developed revealing that Pici was awaiting the delivery of a kilogram of cocaine. On September 24, 1959, while the undercover agent was negotiating with Gioia, additional information was received regarding the cocaine delivery. An additional quantity of heroin was purchased from Gioia, and he and his wife were arrested by the Italian authorities. At the same time, Lino Boscolo, a seaman, was implicated and arrested. Giuseppe Pici, Gian Franco Favero, and

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 797

Giuseppe Radin, the latter a Trans-Atlantic Airline pilot, were also arrested; 1 kilogram of cocaine was seized. Information proved the existence of an active narcotic smuggling group operating between the United States, Italy, and South America.

Giovanotti, Jack, et al.—Italy

On July 1, 1959, an informant working under the supervision of an agent of the Bureau's Rome office, and in cooperation with the Italian authorities, introduced an Italian police officer to Amerigo Pistacchi and Eugenio Pesce. These latter two introduced the police officer to Jack Giovanotti, the French source of supply who came from Nice, France, to Genoa, Italy, on July 3, 1959. Giovanotti was arrested on July 12, 1959, as he delivered 1 kilogram of heroin to the undercover police officer in Genoa, Italy. Pistacchi and Pesce, together with Osvaldo Audisio, also implicated in the case, were arrested.

Badalamenti, Vito, et al.—Italy

On June 4, 1958, the Italian police arrested Vito Badalamenti, Cesare Badalamenti, and Maria Badalamenti for their part in the sale of 1 kilogram of heroin to an undercover agent of the Bureau's Rome, Italy office, working with the Italian police. Subsequently, Calogero DiMaggio and Calcedonio Dipisa were arrested as defendants in this case. The Badalamenti trafficking organization was one of the most important smuggling groups in Sicily engaged in sending large quantities of heroin to the United States.

El-Serouji, Naje, et al.—Italy

On April 22, 1958, two undercover agents of the Bureau office in Rome, assisting the Italian police authorities, received 8 kilograms of morphine base from Mohammed Asghar, who admitted that he had been sent to sell it for El-Serouji. At the time of the delivery Asghar's associate, Mohammed Hassan Kazara, a Syrian national, was arrested and charged with actually smuggling the morphine base into Italy. This investigation began in February 1957, when an undercover agent working in Havana Cuba, received 1½ kilograms of cocaine from an associate of El-Serouji named Jose Flaifel Moubarak.

Karaata, Mehmet, et al.—Turkey

An undercover agent of the Bureau in Rome traveled to Istanbul, Turkey, in March 1958 and was introduced to Karaata by an informant of the Turkish police. One kilogram of morphine base was received on consignment. On March 8, 1958, Turkish police seized 6½ kilograms of morphine base in Istanbul. In a followup investigation the undercover agent accompanied the Turkish police to a mountain village home where they seized a complete heroin laboratory and arrested one Mehmet Hekimoglu, a licensed opium landowner who had for some time supplied opium illicitly to these traffickers.

Keifu, Hassan, et al.—Turkey

On November 6, 1957, Keifu and his brother were arrested at Iskenderun, Turkey, as they delivered 15 kilograms of morphine base to an informant working under the supervision of a Bureau agent in cooperation with the Turkish police.

Fiume, Armando, et al.—Italy

On August 21, 1957, two undercover agents of the Bureau's Rome office, working with the Italian police, assisted in a case which resulted in the arrest of Armando Fiume, Angelo Galeri, and Giovanni Barilla. At the time of their arrest, 1 kilogram of heroin was seized at San Remo, Italy. In addition, one vehicle was seized as well as a counterfeiting plant for the production of French money, and other counterfeiting paraphernalia, many burglary tools, and firearms. Four other persons of French and Italian citizenship were arrested.

El Etir, Youssef, et al.—Lebanon

On June 18, 1957, an 11-month intensive undercover investigation by two U.S. narcotic agents was successfully concluded by Lebanese authorities in Beirut with the seizure of 3 kilograms of heroin, 25 kilograms of morphine base, and a clandestine laboratory. Arrested were Youssef El Etir, who negotiated directly with the undercover agents, and his chemist, Omar Makkouk.

798 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Amoruso, Giuseppe, et al.—Italy

An undercover case initiated by an agent of the Bureau's Rome office working in cooperation with the Italian authorities resulted in the seizure of 2 kilograms of morphine base at Naples, Italy, on April 5, 1957. Five defendants were involved. A loaded pistol and an automobile were seized from the defendants.

Fuchs, Arnold Joseph, et al.—Lebanon

On March 19, 1957, following two months of investigative and undercover work by an agent of the Beirut office of the Bureau in cooperation with the Iranian and Lebanese police, Fuchs and three other defendants were arrested and a half kilogram of heroin was seized.

Gordon, Egbert Theodore—France

On August 10, 1956, an undercover agent of the Bureau office in Rome working in Le Havre, France, in cooperation with the French police received 1 kilogram of heroin from Gordon and his French source of supply, Madani Bessedik. The heroin was seized and Gordon and Bessedik were arrested. In an immediately followup investigation, the French police identified and arrested the two persons who had brought the heroin from Paris, France.

Al Harris, Mustafa—Lebanon

On August 18, 1956, Lebanese customs officers at Beirut seized 12 kilograms of heroin, a complete clandestine laboratory, and arrested Afif Mneymni, the owner of the laboratory, Mustafa Al Harris, and his associate, Mohammad Al Malki. The Beirut branch office of the Bureau collaborated with the Lebanese authorities on this investigation.

Halawi, Ali—Lebanon

Information supplied by an agent of the Beirut office enabled the Lebanese customs authorities to seize 23 kilograms of morphine base and 100 kilograms of opium on June 17, 1956, at Saida, an oil tanker seaport, from two seamen aboard the French vessel SS Ronsard. The Lebanese source of supply and two of his criminal associates were arrested.

Makkouk, Omar—Lebanon

On May 20, 1956, the Beirut office assisted the Lebanese authorities in the arrest of Makkouk and in the confiscation of his automobile, 6 kilograms of heroin, and a complete equipped clandestine laboratory.

Simoni, Pierre, et al.—Italy

On May 23, 1956, a joint investigation by U.S. narcotic agents and Italian authorities resulted in the seizure of 2 kilograms of heroin from Giuseppe Grinovero at Genoa, Italy. This heroin was part of an original quantity ordered by an undercover agent of the Bureau from a French trafficker, Pierre Simoni.

Kalogridi, Kalyopi—Iran

On March 15, 1956, agents of the Bureau office in Rome assisted the Iranian police at Teheran in the arrest of Kalogridi, a Greek national, and four Iranian nationals, and seized a complete clandestine laboratory, 1½ kilograms of heroin and one-half kilogram of morphine base. The heroin was destined for smuggling to the United States. This was the first heroin factory ever seized in Iran. The national police director of Iran was personally interested in this investigation, which had begun a year earlier in Istanbul, Turkey, when U.S. narcotic agents had assisted the Turkish authorities.

Kabani, Mahmoud—Lebanon

Pursuant to information supplied by the Rome office of the Bureau, Kabani was arrested on March 12, 1956, at Beirut, by the authorities of that country for possession of 3 kilograms of morphine base which was destined for a French clandestine heroin factory.

Bibkadmajian, Agop—Syria

As a result of cooperation with the Syrian authorities, Bibkadmajian was arrested on January 28, 1956, in possession of 60 kilograms of opium and 2 kilograms of morphine base. This case was developed by the Beirut office of the Bureau in cooperation with the Syrian and Lebanese authorities.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 799

Khoury, Joseph—Lebanon

Information furnished the Lebanese authorities by an agent of the Beirut branch office led to the arrest of Joseph Khoury, a Lebanese Army major, for possession of 300 kilograms of hashish.

Alpten, Nadir, et al.—Turkey

On December 23, 1955, at Kirikkale, Turkey, an undercover investigation, conducted by an agent of the Istanbul office, resulted in the arrest of a gang of five violators, and the seizure of 150 kilograms of opium. The defendants were heavily armed during the negotiations with the undercover agent; at the time of their arrest, six pistols, one sword, and five daggers were seized from them.

Demirel, Ali Riza, et al.—Turkey

On December 23, 1955, at Kirikkale, Turkey, a Bureau undercover agent, working in cooperation with the Turkish authorities, assisted them in the arrest of Demirel and one other violator and the seizure of 150 kilograms of opium from them.

Oz Yubik, Mohammed, et al.—Turkey

On November 22, 1955, the assistance of a Bureau narcotic agent working undercover with the Turkish authorities, resulted in the arrest of one defendant and the seizure of 31½ kilograms of morphine base. One defendant escaped and eight other persons armed with rifles and pistols fired many blasts of gunfire at our undercover agent, who escaped injury. The fugitive, arrested later, gave the Turkish police additional information which led to the seizure of a clandestine laboratory, 44 kilograms of morphine base in powder form, 20 kilograms of morphine base in preparation, and 680 kilograms of opium. A total of seven defendants were arrested. The Turkish police and the Bureau agent successfully concluded the second phase of this investigation after another gun battle in the laboratory. At the time, this was the largest postwar seizure of narcotics made in Turkey or in Europe.

Sainas, Raphael—Italy

This Corsican trafficker was arrested at Milano, Italy, by the Italian authorities on October 25, 1955, in possession of 4 kilograms of heroin. The drugs had been smuggled into Italy from France and were destined for the United States. This seizure was made on information furnished the Italian police by the Rome office of the Bureau.

Khalil, Tanios Salim Abou—Lebanon

On August 28, 1955, Khalil and Joussef El Etir were arrested at Beirut airport by the Lebanese customs authorities in possession of 10 kilograms of morphine base as they were about to deliver these drugs to an Air Force non-commissioned officer who was cooperating with the Bureau office. The Air Force officer had been instructed by the Lebanese traffickers to carry the drugs to Paris and thence to the United States.

Galleini, Salim, et al.—Lebanon

On April 23, 1955, Mounir Ghourayeb was arrested by the Lebanese custom authorities as he was about to deliver 1 kilogram of heroin to an undercover agent of the Beirut office. Ghourayeb was well known as a trafficker who caused drugs to be smuggled from Beirut to Detroit, Mich.

Basatni, Abou Sayia, et al.—Lebanon

Five months of undercover work by three undercover narcotic agents working in cooperation with the Lebanese and Turkish authorities resulted in simultaneous arrests at Beirut, Lebanon and Adana, Turkey, between November 17 and November 20, 1954. A total of 317½ kilograms of opium, 4 kilograms of hashish, and a 1953 pickup truck were seized. This investigation, resulting from the combined efforts of Bureau agents working in collaboration with the police of Greece, Turkey, Syria, and Lebanon, is an outstanding example of international police cooperation.

Harriss, Mustapha Al, et al.—Lebanon

On November 11, 1954, the Lebanese customs police arrested Al Harriss and five other defendants, raided a clandestine heroin laboratory, and seized 4 kilograms of heroin and a large quantity of base materials at Beirut. These results were achieved from information furnished the Lebanese authorities by a Bureau agent at Beirut.

800 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

El Sheika, Abdullah Attie, et al.—Lebanon

In November 1954, information provided by the Beirut office of the Bureau enabled the Lebanese customs authorities to seize 20 kilograms of morphine base and 86 kilograms of opium which were found concealed in an automobile. El Sheika was identified as a courier for Samil Khoury, whose organization was probably the largest gang furnishing morphine base to French clandestine laboratories.

Suleiman, Mahmoud Abou, et al.—Italy

On July 18, 1954, the Italian police arrested Samil Bey Kivrak, a chief steward aboard a Turkish vessel at Naples, for possession of 20 kilograms of crude opium and 3½ kilograms of morphine base. On July 31, four persons were arrested in Venice in connection with this case. An undercover agent of the Bureau initiated this investigation in collaboration with the Italian police.

Di Giovanni, Nicolo, et al.—France

In a joint investigation by the Bureau offices at New York City and Rome, Italy, during October 1953, two seamen were arrested in New York City aboard the French vessel, SS Flandre for possession of 5 kilograms of heroin. Simultaneously, the source of supply for these drugs, Nicolo di Giovanni and two of his underlings, were arrested in Marseilles, France. The agents had worked continuously with the French police for 5 months in an effort to eliminate this smuggling group.

Nercessian, Armet, et al.—France

This ex-diplomat of Iran was arrested in Paris, France during June 1953 with two codefendants. French police, assisted by a Bureau undercover agent, seized 4 kilograms of morphine base and a complete clandestine conversion laboratory. These drugs had been smuggled into France from Iran by unknown persons who, it was learned, had just started manufacturing heroin for eventual smuggling into the United States.

Ruspoli, Alessandro—France

Information from the Rome office actuated the French police to arrest Italian Prince Ruspoli at Nice, France, during May 1953 and seized from him 5 kilograms of opium and an Italian built sports car.

Schiapparelli, et al.—Italy

During January 1953, as a result of efforts by the Rome office, in cooperation with Italian police authorities, the Schiapparelli firm's license to manufacture opium alkaloids was suspended indefinitely. In addition, its medical narcotics stock was confiscated by the Italian Government. This action resulted from a large-scale investigation initiated by a Bureau agent in Rome which proved the diversion of 345 kilograms of heroin from the Schiapparelli firm. A supplemental investigation disclosed the theft of 50 kilograms of morphine base by Carlo Migliardi in 1951. During 1950-53, Migliardi illegally sold 345 kilograms of heroin to Egidio Calascibetta (already the subject of narcotic criminal proceedings for a traffic of more than 540 kilograms of heroin). Migliardi used the simple device of manufacturing heroin in this licensed factory and falsifying his records to make it appear that codeine was manufactured and sold from the raw material, crude opium, which the company imported on a license. Carlo Migliardi, the technical director of the firm, who was responsible for this huge diversion to gangster outlets, was convicted by the Italian court and received a sentence of 14 years in jail. The disclosures in this case precipitated a later governmental decree forbidding the future licensed manufacture and consumption of heroin.

Pellegrino, Giuseppe—Italy

During August 1952, Italian police at Salerno, Italy, arrested deportee Joe Pellegrino and his partner, Gennaro Rizzo, and seized 4 kilograms of heroin from them. Simultaneously agents of the New York office arrested Eugene Giannini, who had unwittingly sent an undercover agent of the New York office to Italy to purchase this heroin, with instruction to smuggle it into the United States.

Petras, Egidio, et al.—Italy

On July 31, 1952, representatives of the Rome office collaborated with the Italian police in the arrest at Milan, Italy, of Petras and three other defendants and the seizure of 5 kilograms of heroin. This undercover investigation developed from an investigation previously initiated which resulted in the seizure of another 5½ kilograms of heroin from Albert Yahni. This illegally manufactured heroin originated in Turkey.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 801

Ansaldi, Marius, et al.—France

On June 29, 1952, French police arrested Ansaldi and several of his notorious gang, including two chemists, and seized a clandestine laboratory containing 3 kilograms of heroin and complete conversion paraphernalia. The police succeeded in locating this laboratory through purchases of acetic anhydride. This gang had been in operation since the end of World War II and directly and indirectly smuggled upward to 50 kilograms of heroin per month to the United States. U.S. narcotic agents in Europe closely collaborated with the French police on this case, in which one of the agents had meetings and undercover conversations with Ansaldi and his gang.

Dobriezic, Jarlo, et al.—Italy

On June 20, 1952, a Bureau agent assisted the Trieste police in an investigation which resulted in the arrest of Dobriezic and Alfredo Boscolo, and the seizure of 10 kilograms of morphine hydrochloride. Dobriezic, a Yugoslav National, was the source of supply.

Brahim, Ait Labbi, et al.—France

On June 25, 1952, Brahim and Seblar Kaddour were arrested at Marseilles, France, and 2 kilograms of heroin were seized from them. An undercover agent of the European office of the Bureau assisted the French police in this investigation.

Van Kip, Madame Tran—France

On June 23, 1952, Madame Kip and four other defendants were arrested by Marseilles police for possession of 43 pounds of crude opium, following an undercover investigation conducted by an agent of the Rome office.

Wegsman, Samuel, et al.—Italy

On June 1, 1952, Samuel Wegsman and Albert Yahni (see related case above, Dobriezic) were arrested at Milan, Italy, following the undercover operation by a Bureau agent from Rome, in collaboration with Italian police, and 5½ kilograms of heroin were seized.

Rivola, Natale—Italy

On June 28, 1952, as a result of an undercover operation by two agents of the Rome office, Italian police at Genoa, Italy, arrested Rivola and Giorgia Gatti and charged them with possession of 1½ kilograms of heroin.

Coppola, Frank, et al.—Italy

On March 19, 1952, Serafino Mancuso was arrested for possession of 6 kilograms of heroin concealed inside a specially fabricated trunk, at Alcamo, Italy. Five others were immediately arrested, but the ringleader, Frank Coppola, escaped. In a followup investigation, 25 defendants were located, arrested and denounced by the Italian authorities. The Coppola organization was one of the principal mobs smuggling large amounts of heroin from Italy to New York, New Orleans, Detroit, Kansas City, and St. Louis. Although it was known that Charles "Lucky" Luciano was implicated, there was insufficient evidence to prosecute him. U.S. narcotic agents initiated and assisted the Italian police during the two-year investigation. Coppola, Mancuso and other defendants were important deportee gangsters from the United States.

Coret, Jean, et al.—France

During March 1952, Surete police at Paris arrested Jean Coret and three others for the possession of 1 kilogram of heroin. The Coret organization was a principal source of supply for a New York distributor well known to the Bureau of Narcotics named Neil Schau. An undercover agent of the European office assisted in the initiation and development of this case.

You, Chong Foo—Netherlands

On January 22, 1952, police authorities at Rotterdam arrested Chong Foo You and three other defendants as they were about to deliver 10 pounds of crude opium to an undercover agent of the Bureau working in collaboration with the local police. Members of this organization were suspected of supplying opium to traffickers in New York City.

802 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Buchler, Dr. Walter, et al.—Germany

As a result of the undercover assistance furnished the Hamburg police in February 1951, they arrested Dr. Walter Buchler and Gerhardt Oertel in connection with the illegal distribution of more than 300 kilograms of cocaine, which they had obtained from German Army stocks during World War II, and which Buchler later stored in his licensed narcotic manufacturing plant without including this cocaine in his records. Buchler had diverted the cocaine to Sicilian gangsters living in Germany, who then smuggled it to Italy for further smuggling to criminal associates in New York City.

NORTH AND SOUTH AMERICA

CANADA

Cotroni, Giuseppe, et al.

On June 2, 1959, a U.S. narcotic agent, using funds furnished by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, purchased 2 kilograms of heroin from Cotroni and Rene Robert in Montreal, Canada. Again, on June 18, 1959, the undercover agent purchased 2 kilograms of heroin and received 2 kilograms from Cotroni on consignment. On the night of July 8, 1959, officers of the RCMP arrested Cotroni and Robert at a motel in Montreal. Cotroni's arrest was precipitated when he demanded payment of an additional $40,000 before making further deliveries. He and Robert were apprehended in a Montreal motel.

Maliverno, Roberto Thomas Bianchi

On November 10, 1955, as a result of information furnished by the Bureau of Narcotics, Canadian authorities arrested French seaman Roberto Thomas Bianchi Maliverno for possession of 14 kilograms of heroin he had smuggled into that country on the French SS St. Malo. He was originally sentenced to 5 years in prison. In March 1956, the Canadian Government appealed the inadequacy of this sentence and his sentence was increased to 10 years.

Rosenblat, Jacob, et al.

In August 1955, the Canadian police arrested Jacob Rosenblat, Hannah Rosenblum and Jake Goldbar at Toronto, and seized 2 kilograms of heroin and ½ kilogram of opium they had smuggled from Europe. The Bureau office in Rome had provided the original information.

MEXICO

Rosas, Emelio Maldonado

On February 1, 1963, after coordinated arrangements had been made with the Mexican Federal Judicial Police, a Bureau of Narcotics undercover agent entered the residence of Rosas in Piedras Negras, Mexico; following a pre-arranged signal, the Mexican police entered the residence and placed Rosas under arrest and seized 85 grams of heroin.

Vasquez, Emelio Arreola

On March 25, 1963, at Guadalajara, Mexico, an undercover agent of the Bureau of Narcotics, working in cooperation with the Mexican authorities, negotiated with Vasquez. On March 26, 1963, Mexican police arrested Vasquez, Fernando Guzman-Guzman, and Emelio Perez as they were delivering 1 kilogram of opium to the undercover agent. All three defendants were armed at the time of their arrest.

Batista-Gomez, Arturo

On January 21, 1962, at Mexicali, Mexico, Federal Judicial Police officers arrested Arturo Batista-Gomez, Thomas Guerra Garcia, and Hipolito Soto-Valezquez and seized 31 grams of heroin. This seizure, the result of a joint investigation conducted with U.S. narcotic agents, eliminated an important source for heroin in the Los Angeles, Calif. area.

Beltran, Maria

An investigation of the narcotic activities of the notorious Maria Beltran of Tijuana, Mexico, was successfully concluded on February 5, 1962, when two of her lieutenants, Marino Ulloa Garcia and Fernando Castro Monroy, were arrested in Tijuana in possession of 82 grams of heroin. On March 17, 1962,

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 803

Mexican Federal Judicial Police officers in Tijuana arrested Maria Beltran and two other associates, and seized 168 grams of heroin. U.S. narcotic agents assisted the Mexican authorities during the 3-month investigation.

Villalobus-Rodriguez, Mario, et al.

On March 15, 1961, authorities in Tijuana, Baja California, arrested Mario Villalobus-Rodriguez and Rodolfo Ochoa in possession of 850 grams of heroin. Villalobus and Ochoa had been selling heroin in wholesale quantities for smuggling to southern California. Agents of the Los Angeles office provided the original information as well as technical assistance.

Jimenez, Jose Luis Robles

On July 31, 1961, in a joint investigation with agents of the Los Angeles office, Jose Luis Jimenez Robles was arrested by Mexican Federal Judicial Police officers in Tijuana, Baja California, Mexico, in possession of 462 grams of heroin. Jimenez was a well-known trafficker supplying heroin to the United States.

Carrillo, Manuel Diaz

On July 30, 1960, in Culiacan, Mexico, Carrillo was arrested by Mexican authorities in possession of 600 grams of heroin. Carrillo had been supplying drugs to the United States from a well-equipped laboratory, which was seized. This case was developed with the assistance of agents from the Bureau of Narcotics.

Parra-Lopez, Telesforo

On August 20, 1960, Parra-Lopez was arrested by Mexican Federal Judicial Police in connection with a cooperative investigation with members of the Los Angeles office. Parra-Lopez was one of the principal sources of supply for heroin reaching Los Angeles from Mexico and also supplied substantial quantities to the illicit traffic in Chicago. The evidence against Parra-Lopez was obtained when a "marker" was placed in the procaine purchased in the United States as a diluent for heroin.

Soto, Baldemar

During 1960 Mexican authorities, with assistance from the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, arrested the principal distributor of heroin manufacturers in the laboratory of Parra-Lopez. This trafficker, Baldemar Soto, was one of the chief sources of supply for heroin smuggled to the United States from Mexico.

Reyes, Bernardo Caballero

On April 27, 1960, Reyes and his associate, Alphonso Trevino Ramon, were arrested by Mexican officers in possession of 2 kilograms of heroin. Reyes, who had previously lived in New York City, was a close associate of major narcotic agents there as well as in Chicago. U.S. narcotic agents furnished assistance to Mexican police in this investigation.

Asaf, Jorge Bala, et al.

Information was received that Jorge Asaf Bala and Salvador Escabi were trafficking in heroin in multikilogram quantities to outlets in the United States. Jorge Asaf Bala, a member of an international narcotic trafficking organization since 1954, was known to Mexican police officials as the "Al Capone" of Mexico. On November 11, 1959, Mexican authorities arrested Asaf and Escabi and charged them with violation of the Mexican narcotic laws as they were about to deliver 3 kilograms of pure heroin to two U.S. undercover narcotic agents who had negotiated for the heroin.

Rosas, Emilio, et al.

Working with Mexican authorities, two U.S. narcotic agents negotiated with the notorious narcotic trafficker Emilio Rosas of Piedras Negras, Coahuila, Mexico. On December 1, 1959, when Rosas and his associate Adolfo Jimenez were about to deliver 50 grams of heroin to the undercover agents, Mexican police, under the direction of Jose Antonio Farias, chief of Coahuila judicial police, arrested the traffickers and seized the heroin. For several years Rosas had supplied large quantities of heroin from Mexico to narcotic traffickers in the United States, and was considered the chief supplier of heroin in San Antonio, Tex.

Barberena, Octavio, et al.

Mexican Federal judicial police and U.S. narcotic agents received information that Octavio Barberena, a nightclub owner in Nuevo Laredo, was furnishing heroin to numerous outlets in Houston, Tex. Undercover narcotic agents from the United States arranged for a delivery of 30 grams of heroin from Barberena on the night of February 4, 1960. A narcotic trafficker known only as Gordo made the delivery for Barberena, and in resisting arrest, Gordo drew a gun on the purchasing agent. Mexican Officer Rafael Garcia Tello, who grappled with the trafficker and saved the life of the U.S. narcotic agent, was critically wounded.

804 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

D'Agostino, Antoine

Antoine D'Agostino (alias Michel Sisco), a French national, was arrested March 7, 1955, in Mexico City, Mexico, where he had been directing large-scale intercontinental smuggling of narcotics, chiefly to New York City and Montreal, Canada. His emissaries on this continent included Roger Coudert and John and George Mallock, all convicted of narcotic violations in 1954.

D'Agostino was expelled to the United States, where he was arrested at San Antonio, Tex., for removal to New York City for trial in Federal court on a 1951 narcotic indictment. He was sentenced to a 2-year term for conspiracy. Upon completion of sentence, on June 6, 1958, he was extradited to Canada, where he was wanted for additional narcotic violations. He was subsequently sentenced to a long prison term; upon his release on October 31, 1960, he was promptly deported to France.

BOLIVIA

De Sanchez, Blanca Ibanez

For more than a year, a narcotic agent posing as a New York dealer of narcotics conducted negotiations, by correspondence with De Sanchez, of La Paz, Bolivia. The agent and De Sanchez eventually agreed to a delivery of 10 kilograms of cocaine for $40,000 in La Paz. At the request of the Bolivian Government two agents were dispatched to La Paz. On May 17, 1960, De Sanchez and her associate Ebar Franco, delivered 5 kilograms of cocaine to the agents. When Franco and four of his husky associates demanded that the agents hand over $40,000, an altercation developed. During the struggle, the two agents were able to retain possession of four of the five plastic bags. The traffickers escaped; at a later date, however, the two principals were arrested.

COLOMBIA

Herran, Tomas, et al.

On February 20, 1957, agents of the Colombia Intelligence Service, assisted by a narcotic officer, discovered a clandestine heroin and cocaine factory on the estate of Tomas and Rafael Herran Olozaga in Medellin, Colombia. The defendants had been arrested in Havana by Cuban police on December 24, 1956, when Tomas Herran was found in possession of about 800 grams of heroin. Cuban national, Antonio Botano Sojo, was arrested at Havana in connection with this case.

ECUADOR

Davila, Carlos

In August 1957, an agent of the New York office of the Bureau of Narcotic initiated an investigation of the activities of Carlos Davila, of Guaranda, Ecuador, by negotiating for the purchase of 100 kilograms of raw opium. The investigation continued as undercover agents from New York City and Miami, Fla., traveled to Quito, Ecuador. On October 9, 1957, Ecuadoran authorities arrested Carlos Davila and Luis Estralla and seized about 15 kilograms of raw opium as Davila was about to deliver it to two agents.

Continued investigation by the Ecuadoran authorities resulted in arrests of several additional associates of Davila. Davila had supplied international traffickers Rafael and Tomas Herran Olozaga with the raw opium used in their clandestine laboratory at Medellin, Colombia (see above).

CUBA

Moubarak, Jose Flaisel, et al.

As a result of information obtained by an undercover agent of our office in Beirut, the agent went to Havana, Cuba, in December 1956. Working in cooperation with the Cuban police, the undercover agent introduced a second agent, who negotiated with Moubarak, for delivery of a large quantity of cocaine. This case was successfully concluded on February 4, 1957, when Moubarak delivered 1½ kilograms of cocaine to the undercover agent and two other defendants were arrested.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

805

806 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

807

808 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

EXHIBIT No. 1

COMMENTS OF THE COMMISSIONER OF NARCOTICS ON THE POLICY STATEMENT OF THE ADVISORY COUNCIL OF JUDGES RELATING TO NARCOTIC DRUG VIOLATIONS

The policy statement concerning the narcotic law violations published by the Advisory Council of Judges of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency in May 1964, is substantially the same as the draft furnished the Bureau of Narcotics in September 1963. We reviewed the original draft, and on October 2, 1963, forwarded to Mr. Sol Rubin, counsel for the Advisory Council of Judges, a brief of the Bureau's position regarding the meaning of the term "professional practice," and our interpretation of the Supreme Court decision of O. O. Linder v. United States. A copy of a paper marked "A" entitled "Bureau of Narcotics Comments on Unpublished Statement of the Committee on Narcotics of the Advisory Council of Judges, National Council on Crime and Delinquency" is attached.

At least one judge on the Advisory Council expressed disagreement with the proposed policy statement, and on December 2, 1963, Judge William F. Smith, U.S. Court of Appeals, Newark, N.J., addressed a letter to Mr. Sol Rubin setting forth his objections to the proposed statement and indicated a desire to file a dissent. A copy of Judge Smith's letter to Mr. Rubin marked "B" is attached.

Comparison of the final report with the original draft reveals that the authors were not dissuaded by the comments of the Bureau or by the letter from Judge Smith. Several harsh and injudicious remarks were deleted, but the substance of the report remained unchanged.

The report hits sharply at the Bureau of Narcotics and concludes that we have carved away at the rights of physicians to handle narcotic addicts until physicians now believe they can no longer treat them as sick persons. According to the report, the Bureau of Narcotics has refused to follow the mandate handed down in the Linder case, and we have continued to threaten physicians with prosecution until the medical profession has relinquished treating the problem of addiction as a medical matter. Let me make it clear that I respect the right of the authors of the report to hold views contrary to the interpretations of the laws by the Bureau of Narcotics, provided, of course, that the statements do not contain erroneous accusations of bad faith on the part of Bureau officials. We have reviewed the decision in the Linder case many times and I am convinced that the court did not intend to hold and it did not so hold that furnishing narcotics to an addict without a good faith intent to cure the state of addiction would be countenanced. Since this is a basic and important issue, a comprehensive brief has been prepared by the Bureau's Legal Division covering the Linder decision and the regulation which has been declared by the report as one which " * * * clearly violates the rulings of the courts." A copy of the brief marked "C" is attached.

I submit that the interpretations of the Bureau of Narcotics are fully justified and deserving of appropriate consideration. The regulation opposed by the Advisory Council's report prohibits, in my opinion, only those prescriptions issued not in the course of professional practice and which are intended only to maintain addiction. This does not mean that a doctor in good faith, in the course of professional practice may not furnish narcotics to an addict being treated to cure addiction. This very type of treatment is being done today by doctors throughout the country with the approval of the Bureau of Narcotics and is in complete accord with statutory and case law and the regulations.

In carrying out the responsibilities of enforcing the laws, the Bureau of Narcotics has looked to the responsible medical groups for guidance concerning such terms as "bona fide treatment," "fair medical practices," and "good faith." In June 1963, the American Medical Association and the National Research Council issued a joint statement which not only reiterated previous pronouncements, but also presented a "code" to define legitimate narcotic drug practice. A copy of pamphlet No. 56 marked "D" entitled "Prescribing and Dispensing of Narcotics Under the Harrison Narcotic Law," is attached. This is a widely circulated pamphlet throughout the medical profession, which includes all of the pronouncements of the American Medical Association and the National Research Council.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 809

The report of the Advisory Council of Judges accuses the Bureau of Narcotics of launching a campaign against doctors who administered narcotics to addicts, thereby deterring physicians from performing their ethical duties. In response to this, it is appropriate to quote a portion of a letter addressed to President Lyndon B. Johnson from Dr. F. J. L. Blasingame, executive vice president of the American Medical Association, dated March 11, 1964:

"Lastly, but of no less significance, we wish to emphasize the important role that physicians must play in a program of eradicating the abuse in the use of narcotic drugs. This role has been recognized by the Bureau of Narcotics, which has also been cognizant of the significant and beneficial use of narcotic drugs in the practice of medicine. In recent years there have developed between the Bureau and the Nation's physicians a mutual trust and confidence which are manifest in the cooperation and rapport now existing in their relationship. This development should be fostered. It would be most unfortunate if an action were undertaken, the unknown consequences of which could result in a deterioration of this beneficial rapprochement."

A copy of Dr. Blasingame's letter marked "E" is attached.

In my opinion, Dr. Blasingame's letter does not sound like the Bureau of Narcotics has been tyrannizing the medical profession.

The report accepts a statement made by the New York Academy of Medicine which states: "From the year of the Harrison Act to 1938 it is estimated that * * * 3,000 (physicians) served penitentiary sentences on narcotic charges. About 20,000 were said to have made a financial settlement." I do not know how these estimates were computed. Certainly, the figures do not compare with ours. The statistics compiled by the Bureau of Narcotics indicate that there were only 915 physicians convicted in Federal court during the period from 1919 to 1938. So far as recent prosecutions are concerned, during the past 6 years, there have only been six physicians convicted for violations of the Federal narcotic laws. A list showing the number of physicians convicted each year since 1919, marked "F," is attached.

The suggestion in the report of the council concerning the so-called British approach, is extremely controversial. This issue has been considered extensively by several committees and conferences, and has not been accepted as sound. The implication of the report that the so-called British plan would be applicable in America, is highly questionable and not in keeping with the two reports of the Interdepartmental Committee on Narcotics, the report of the Senate subcommittee of the 84th Congress (S. Rept. No. 1850), the report from the House Subcommittee on Narcotics, dated May 10, 1956, the report of an Ad Hoc Panel on Drug Abuse submitted to the White House Conference on Narcotic and Drug Abuse in September 1962, and the joint statement of AMA-NRC published in the Journal of the American Medical Association September 21, 1963.

The first policy position of the Advisory Council of Judges, which states that the addict is a sick person and needs medical treatment, certainly is not contrary to any views of the officials of the Bureau of Narcotics. However, to advocate that the "vast majority" of addicts be handled on an outpatient basis without resorting to compulsory civil commitment provisions disregards all pronouncements and standards of competent medical opinion. The American Medical Association, the National Research Council, and other authorities on the subject of addiction are on record with the opinion that drug addiction can best be handled by institutional care in a drug-free environment, and they have generally discredited the ambulatory or clinic plan approach. To ignore these views would be sheer folly, which could lead to spread of addiction and retrogression.

The second position of the Advisory Council of Judges belittles the efforts of law enforcement agencies for not bringing to justice the high-echelon traffickers. I do not deem it necessary to comment at length on this; however, I will say that we are proud of our accomplishments in obtaining evidence in many cases involving individuals and groups on the highest level of the illicit narcotic traffic. From an examination of our cases, there is no disputing that we seek to prosecute the wholesale suppliers, the smugglers, and the national and international violators. In recognition of our accomplishments the Bureau of Narcotics has been commended on several occasions by Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy.

Obviously, the authors of the report are misinformed in their conclusion that " * * * the majority of [prisoners] are primarily users also, whose addiction leads them to sell drugs in order to continue their own supply." A review of our cases indicates that over 60 percent of all defendants prosecuted under the Federal narcotic laws in recent years were not addicted.

810 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The third position of the Council's report opposes mandatory sentencing statutes, stating the severe penalties have done no more than to fill the penal institutions without a deterrent effect on the traffic.

We should not forget that the mandatory penalty provisions of the Boggs-Daniel Narcotic Control Act of 1956 were enacted by a unanimous Congress after hearings had established that leniency in sentencing was the prevailing practice in dealing with narcotic drug offenders. No one has ever alleged that stringent penalties will completely eliminate the illicit traffic; however, we do not believe there must be a complete elimination to prove the penalties are a deterrent. I know that in many areas where there have been State mandatory penalty provisions accompanied by effective local enforcement, there is a very substantial reduction of the traffic. I submit that the incidence of drug addiction and violations of the narcotic laws would now be much greater had it not been for the present penalty provisions.

[Attachment A]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF NARCOTICS,
Washington, D.C., October 2, 1963.

Mr. SOL RUBIN,
Counsel, National Council on Crime and Delinquency,
New York, N.Y.

DEAR MR. RUBIN: I have received from District Supervisor Samuel Levine a copy of your letter of September 23, 1963, with which you so kindly enclosed a confidential copy of the proposed statement of the Advisory Council of Judges, which is dated May 1961, with reference to the problem of narcotic drug addiction. I am also grateful to you for agreeing to withhold publication of this statement until receiving from me the Bureau's views and comments regarding it.

You will find attached a rather detailed critique of the proposed statement. I feel certain that the judges and the National Council on Crime and Delinquency would not wish to issue any statement on the narcotic problem based upon background statements of persons who have been avowedly opposed to the policies of the Federal Government in this field. This is all the more so when one considers that the arguments presented by Mr. Rufus King and others are subject to serious question on the point of accuracy.

After considering the comments which are attached to this letter, should you have any further questions, I shall be delighted to endeavor to answer them for you.

Sincerely yours,

HENRY L. GIORDANO,
Commissioner of Narcotics.

BUREAU OF NARCOTICS COMMENTS ON UNPUBLISHED STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE ON NARCOTICS OF THE ADVISORY COUNCIL OF JUDGES, NATIONAL COUNCIL ON CRIME AND DELINQUENCY

It is quite apparent that the report dated May 1961, of the Committee on Narcotics of the Advisory Council of Judges of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency was prepared to support a preconceived position of the Advisory Council of Judges. This view is substantiated when one checks the references upon which the statement is based. The author of the primary source of information is Rufus King, a Washington, D.C., lawyer who has strongly advocated the supplying of narcotics to addicts by doctors or a governmental agency without serious effort to cure the desire for narcotics. Another source of information is Alfred R. Lindesmith who has opposed the policies of the Bureau of Narcotics for more than 30 years. Donald J. Cantor is cited as another reference. His appearance on the scene as an authority in the field of narcotic addiction is as recent as 1961.

Of the 20 references cited in the statement (most of them are to King) not a single reference is given to an authority holding contrary views. For instance, there is not a reference to an Isbell, Cameron, Brill, Bloomquist, Raskin, etc.

The most distracting and disturbing thing about the statement is the fact that the judges completely and apparently without question have accepted King's statements and particularly his interpretations of court decisions as being absolutely correct.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 811

Obviously, if it can be shown that King is incorrect, then the statement also is greatly undermined. Therefore it is proposed to bring to light the errors in the references of King upon which the judges have based their case.

On page 4 of the statement, Mr. King's views of the Behrman case are quoted. Mr. King admits that the facts in the Behrman case disclose a flagrant abuse, but he asserts the indictment was drafted to omit an allegation of bad faith. That is correct, thus placing the burden on Dr. Behrman to prove that his prescribing of narcotics was in good faith and for bona fide medical purposes. King, then says the indictment charged in effect that this treatment was for the purpose of curing the addict "and thus its validity depended on a holding that prescribing drugs for an addict was a crime, regardless of the physician's intent in the matter."

There could be no greater distortion of the truth than the above quotation from King. The only purpose in drafting the indictment without negating the good faith of the physician was to obtain a court ruling that such a negative in the indictment was not required under the statute and that the question of the good faith of the physician was a matter for affirmative pleading and proof by the defendant.

On page 5 of the statement, King asserts that the Narcotics Division of the Prohibition Department launched a reign of terror, and doctors were bullied and threatened. Before accepting such a charge as correct, the Council of Judges should require more proof than Mr. King's word for it. Mr. King's statement that the Narcotics Division expanded its activities until it was swelling our prison population with thousands of (doctor) felony convictions a year is without substance in fact. At no time in the history of the Federal narcotic laws were doctors by the thousands convicted in any year. In fact, it is difficult to establish that doctors have been convicted by the thousands in the 50 years since the Harrison Act.

Further, in quoting King regarding the Linder case, both Mr. King and the committee of the Judges Advisory Council have been carried away by their emotions. Commenting on the Linder case, King says: "Several agents thereupon descended on his office, conducted a rowdy search, and dragged him off to jail." What proof does King have that a "rowdy" search was conducted? Before the Committee of Judges accepts such a gratuitous statement, it should be prepared to prove it.

Mr. King's further comment concerning the Linder decision contains language unbecoming a committee of judges. He says the Supreme Court in Linder dismissed the Behrman case "(and blasted at the Behrman indictment)" in a strong disclaimer. Actually, the Court in Linder merely says that Behrman cannot be accepted as authority for holding that a physician who acts bona fide and according to fair medical standards may never give an addict moderate amounts of narcotics in order to relieve conditions incident to addiction.

In the Linder case, the physician had been convicted of the unlawful sale to an addict of one tablet of morphine and three tablets of cocaine for self-administration, but the indictment did not specifically challenge the good faith of the physician or negative that the sale was in the course of professional practice only, as did the indictment in the previous Jin Fuey Mou case (254 U.S. 189). The same form of indictment was used in Linder as had been used in Behrman. In the course of the Supreme Court's decision, there was discussion that direct control of medical practice in the States is beyond the power of the Federal Government, but the Court had first significantly noted that the indictment "does not question the doctor's good faith nor the wisdom or propriety of his action according to medical standards" and that "it does not allege that he dispensed the drugs otherwise than to a patient in the course of his professional practice or for other than medical purposes." All that the Linder case holds, therefore, is that in the absence of an allegation in the indictment negating the good faith and professional practice, the Court cannot supply the omission by holding as a matter of law that the sale of four tablets of narcotics necessarily transcends the limits of professional practice.

In at least 10 cases, decided by 5 different U.S. courts of appeal throughout the years since Linder, the courts have affirmed judgments of convictions for making unlawful sales of narcotics where the indictments, unlike that used in Linder, duly negated "good faith" and "in the course of professional practice."

812 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

These cases are:

Bush v. U.S., 16 F. 2 709 (5th C.A.), January 3, 1927.

Boehm v. U.S., 21 F. 2 283 (8th C.A.), July 22, 1927.

Nelms v. U.S., 22 F. 2 79 (9th C.A.), October 10, 1927.

Freeman v. U.S., 86 F. 2 243 (5th C.A.), November 18, 1936.

Ratigan v. U.S., 88 F. 2 919 (9th C.A.), February 23, 1937.

Hawkins v. U.S., 90 F. 2 551 (5th C.A.), June 3, 1937.

U.S. v. Lindenfeld, 142 F. 2 829 (2d C.A.), June 1, 1944.

U.S. v. Abdallah, 149 F. 2 219 (2d C.A.), May 2, 1945.

U.S. v. Brandenburg, 155 F. 2 110 (3d C.A.), April 12, 1946.

McBride v. U.S., 225 F. 2 249 (5th C.A.), August 9, 1955.

If 5 U.S. courts of appeals in 10 cases decided subsequent to the Linder decision have upheld the principle of the Webb and Goldbaum and the Jin Fuey Moy cases condemning prescribing or dispensing of narcotics merely for gratification of addiction it is reasonable to assume that that principle has not been overruled by the Linder decision. Surely, if these intermediate appellate courts and the Bureau of Narcotics were misinterpreting the effect of the Linder decision, one of these later decisions of the courts of appeals would have reached the Supreme Court for a corrective pronouncement but, as of this date some 37 years after the Linder decision was rendered, the Supreme Court has not reviewed or sought to review the basic principle.

The medical profession even to this day (see statement of 1963 by AMA) does not consider it good medical practice to maintain an addict on narcotic drugs merely to keep him comfortable.

The success of the so-called British system of handling the addiction problem is extremely controversial. In 1962 the number of addicts in Great Britain increased by nearly 20 percent over the preceding year. Before accepting the opinion of King, Murtagh, or Bishop, the judges should consider the report of Doctors Brill and Larimore regarding the British system.

The committee's first recommendation that an addict is a sick person and needs medical treatment is not contrary to any view of the Bureau of Narcotics. As a matter of fact, the following quoted sentence is taken from a 1919 report of a special Committee appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

"In many cases it is no doubt partly due to the more or less general acceptance of the old theory that drug addiction is a vice, or depraved state, and not a disease, as held by modern investigators."

The Committee's statement referred to a lack of information and effort on the part of State, county, and municipal officials regarding the narcotic problem. The main point is that the Federal Government has recognized the medical aspects of drug addiction for many, many years. But to say that sick people need no civil process for medical care ignores all of the statutory provisions for confining the mentally ill.

The recommendation of the Committee that the policy of the Linder case be established by statute is completely unnecessary and evidence of utter unfamiliarity with the existing statutes. There is no disparity between Linder and existing statutes.

The second recommendation beginning on page 10 of the statement indicates a lack of awareness of the direction which the enforcement efforts of the Bureau of Narcotics takes. More than 150 topflight hoodlums engaged in the narcotic traffic have been convicted during the past few years. The Bureau of Narcotics has no objection to detection of the addict for treatment instead of criminal prosecution provided he is detected without evidence of the commission of a crime. The theory that furnishing narcotics to addicts will reduce crime and thus deprive organized crime of its customers has been disproved on numerous occasions and most recently (1956) in an experiment by Israel. (See U.N. Bulletin, vol. 14, No. 2, pp. 11-18, 1962—"Control and Treatment of Drug Addicts in Israel.")

It has been known for some time that many judges oppose minimum mandatory penalties. When casting criticism at the Federal Bureau of Narcotics because it advocates such penalties, it should be remembered that the present Federal narcotic penalties were adopted by a unanimous Congress. It should also be kept in mind that today the number of addicts in the United States is far less than it was in 1920. The most accurate statistics available to the Bureau disclose an addict population (mostly centered in a few large cities) of about 1 in 4,000 of the total population. Forty-five years ago a survey then made indicated 1 addict in 400 of the population. The policies of the Federal Government as administered by the Bureau of Narcotics are largely responsible for this improvement.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 813

The explanations following the three recommendations all indicate a belief on the part of the judges that the solution to the narcotic problem is to provide narcotic drugs for the addicts. This philosophy is not acceptable to the American Medical Association and is nowhere evident in the statement issued in 1963 by the American Medical Association and the National Research Council.

In conclusion, it would seem somewhat illogical to reduce the severity of punishment for serious offenses merely because the penitentiaries are overcrowded. It would be more logical to release more quickly offenders of less serious offenses.

[Attachment B]

U.S. COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE THIRD CIRCUIT,
December 2, 1963.

SOL RUBIN, Esq.,
National Council on Crime and Delinquency,
New York, N.Y.

DEAR MR. RUBIN: About 3 weeks ago you forwarded to me a copy of the proposed final draft of a report entitled "Narcotics Law Violations." The existence of this report first came to my attention on September 28, 1962, at the White House Conference on Narcotic and Drug Abuse. You will find, upon examination of the program, that I was a panelist on the afternoon seminar. My appearance was official as Chairman of the U.S. Judicial Conference Committee on the Administration of the Criminal Law. We have had under consideration and study for more than 5 years the narcotic laws, particularly with relation to addiction and its attendant consequences. The contents of your report surprises me.

This report is superficial and so deficient that as a member of the Advisory Council of Judges I am impelled to record my objection to its publication either in its present form or in anything that resembles it. It is my considered judgment that the report is so lacking in depth and objectivity that its publication in its present form would impair confidence in the National Council on Crime and Delinquency and reflect adversely on the Advisory Council of Judges. This opinion is based upon an experience of 27 years in the enforcement of the narcotic laws—7 years in the Office of the U.S. Attorney—and 20 years as a member of the district court in an area in which the enforcement of the narcotic laws has always presented a difficult problem.

Your characterization of the enforcement policy of the Bureau of Narcotics as a "reign of terror," supported as it is only by references of tenuous validity, is not warranted. We can agree that the field agent charged with the responsibility for investigation may have been guilty of mistakes of judgment, but these mistakes of judgment do not justify a blanket indictment of the enforcement policy.

The report stresses the case of Linder v. United States (268 U.S. 5), decided in 1925. This case may be an example of an ill-advised prosecution, but it must be remembered that the ultimate responsibility—the decision to undertake prosecution—was that of the U.S. Attorney. While chief assistant to the U.S. Attorney for the district of New Jersey, I authorized and undertook the prosecution of several physicians—not many—whose conduct, in my judgment, violated not only the narcotic laws but the honored oath of their profession. These prosecutions resulted in their conviction, and properly so.

My observation is not to be construed as a blanket endorsement of all of the views expressed by the responsible representatives of the Bureau of Narcotics. There have been times when they and I have disagreed, particularly with reference to the indiscriminate imposition of mandatory terms of imprisonment. My views, and those of many judges, are summarized in the paper delivered at the White House Conference. There is apparent disagreement in the efficacy of criminal sanctions but the areas of disagreement are specific. The responsible officials of the Bureau of Narcotics are just as sincere and conscientious as we are. Their views, based on years of experience in the enforcement of the laws, should be given respectful consideration and not be condemned without affording them a chance to be heard.

814 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Your report suggests that the great majority of physicians are reluctant to prescribe a course of treatment for a narcotic addict because of a fear of prosecution. This statement is supported by the reports of the New York Academy of Medicine, which has been criticized by many physicians, including several who are members of the academy. Your report fails to give any consideration to the views of the critics. The great majority of physicians would probably refuse to undertake the treatment of a narcotic addict even if authorized to do so, not because of fear but because of a well-founded medical opinion that the ambulatory treatment of the narcotic addict is not feasible. This view was expressed by the medical experts in the field who participated in the White House Conference.

At the present time the California plan is hailed as a progressive step in the right direction. The necessary limits of this letter will not permit a complete discussion of the plan, but it should be noted that under it there are two salient features: first, a period of institutionalization during which the addict will be given extensive medical and psychiatric treatment directed to the solution of the underlying causes of his addiction; and second, a period of strict supervision after release. This plan was discussed at the White House Conference and is under study by the President's Commission on Narcotic and Drug Abuse. This plan, notwithstanding the necessary preliminary study that went into its formulations, is not even referred to in the report.

It is difficult to determine from the report whether or not the Advisory Council of Judges intends to give blanket support to the "British System." This system cannot be evaluated without reference to the governmental control of the practice of medicine in England. The adaptability of the system to the solution of the narcotic problem which exists in this country was questioned also at the White House Conference.

It seems rather obvious to me that absent the rigid regulation, the dispensing of narcotics to the addict would afford him nothing more than another source of supply. There would be nothing to prevent his going to two or more physicians, each unaware that the addict was under treatment by another. This difficulty, incidentally, is one which has made the responsible physician reluctant to undertake the ambulatory treatment of the addict. You have characterized the British system as an apparent success. There are many medical experts in this country who would seriously question this characterization.

The late President of the United States organized a commission composed of responsible members. Thus far this commission has issued nothing more than a preliminary report which is at least more comprehensive and objective than ours. It is my recommendation that the report of the Council should be withheld until after the Commission has acted. However, if the Advisory Council of Judges thinks otherwise, then I reserve the right to file a dissenting report.

It is requested that copies of this letter be forwarded to the present members of the Advisory Council of Judges.

Very truly yours,

WILLIAM F. SMITH.

[Attachment C]

BRIEF OF COURT DECISIONS BEARING UPON THE MEANING OF THE TERM "PROFESSIONAL TREATMENT," USED IN SECTION 151.392, TITLE 26, CODE OF FEDERAL REGULATIONS

The regulation described by the statement of the Advisory Council of Judges of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency (hereinafter referred to as the Council, is section 151.392, title 26, Code of Federal Regulations, 1961 supp. 1963. This section reads as follows:

"A prescription, in order to be effective in legalizing the possession of unstamped narcotic drugs and eliminating the necessity for use of order forms, must be issued for legitimate medical purposes. The responsibility for the proper prescribing and dispensing of narcotic drugs is upon the practitioner, but a corresponding liability rests with the druggist who fills the prescription. An order purporting to be a prescription issued to an addict or habitual user of narcotics, not in the course of professional treatment but for the purpose of providing the user with narcotics sufficient to keep him comfortable by maintaining his customary use, is not a prescription within the meaning and intent of section 4705(c) (2), and the person filling such an order, as well as the person issuing it, shall be subject to the penalties provided for violations of the provisions of law relating to narcotic drugs."

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 815

For a determination of the validity of this regulation, a full discussion of the court decisions is necessary.

Section 2 of the original Harrison Narcotic Act (the predecessor section of sec. 4705 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) was held constitutional by the Supreme Court, when challenged by a physician-defendant, as early as March 3, 1919 (United States v. C. T. Doremus, 249 U.S. 86). In another case, decided the same day, the Supreme Court was called upon to answer the following question:

"If a practicing and registered physician issues an order for morphine to an habitual user thereof, the order not being issued by him in the course of professional treatment in the attempted cure of the habit, but being issued for the purpose of providing the user with morphine sufficient to keep him comfortable by maintaining his customary use, is such order a physician's prescription under exception (b) of section 2 (of the Harrison Act)?"

To this question, the Supreme Court answered, "To call such an order for the use of morphine a physician's prescription would be so plain a perversion of meaning that no discussion of the subject is required. That question should be answered in the negative" (Webb v. U.S., 249 U.S. 96).

In U.S. v. Behrman, 258 U.S. 280, decided March 27, 1922, the indictment charged that the defendant-physician unlawfully sold certain narcotics to Willie King, by means of three written orders to the said King in the form of prescriptions, i.e., 150 grains of heroin, 360 grains of morphine, and 210 grains of cocaine; it alleged that King was an addict to the said drugs, did not require the administration of the drugs by reason of any disease other than such addiction, etc., but the indictment omitted the allegation "not in the course of professional practice only." The Court held that the acts charged in the indictment constituted an offense within the terms and meaning of the act, and stated, in part:

"It may be admitted that to prescribe a single dose, or even a number of doses, may not bring a physician within the penalties of the act; but what is here charged is that the defendant physician, by means of prescriptions, has enabled one, known by him to be an addict, to obtain from a pharmacist the enormous number of doses contained in 150 grains of heroin, 360 grains of morphine, and 210 grains of cocaine. (Quoting dosages shown in Wood's United States Dispensatory); by these standards more than 3,000 ordinary doses were placed in the control of King. Undoubtedly doses may be varied to suit different cases, as determined by the judgment of a physician. But the quantities named in the indictment are charged to have been intrusted to a person known by the physician to be an addict, without restraint upon him in its administration or disposition by anything more than his own weakened and perverted will. Such so-called prescriptions could only result in the gratification of a diseased appetite for these pernicious drugs, or result in an unlawful parting with them to others, in violation of the act as heretofore interpreted in this court, within the principles laid down in the Webb and Jin Fuey Moy cases, supra."

In C. O. Linder v. U.S., 268 U.S. 5, decided April 13, 1925, the indictment (count II) charged that defendant, a registered licensed physician, unlawfully sold, etc. to Ida Casey one tablet of morphine and three tablets of cocaine, not in pursuance of any written order of Ida Casey on a prescribed form, not in the treatment of any disease, with knowledge that Ida Casey was a person addicted to the habitual use of morphine and cocaine, etc. The indictment did not contain the usual negative averment "not in the course of professional practice only."

In its decision, the Court was careful to point out that "It (the indictment) does not question the doctor's good faith nor the wisdom or propriety of his action according to medical standards. It does not allege that he dispensed the drugs otherwise than to a patient in the course of his professional practice or for other than medical purposes." Then, after discussing its previous decisions in narcotic cases, it held " * * * We find no facts alleged in the indictment sufficient to show that petitioner had done anything falling within definite inhibitions or sufficient materially to imperil orderly collection of revenue from sales. * * * The unfortunate condition of the recipient certainly created no reasonable probability that she would sell or otherwise dispose of the few tablets entrusted to her; and we cannot say that by so dispensing them the doctor necessarily transcended the limits of that professional conduct with which Congress never intended to interfere."

It seems, therefore, that the substance of the holding was that, in the absence of an averment in the indictment that the sale was not in the course of professional practice only, the Court could not find as a matter of law that the sale of the tablets by Dr. Linder "necessarily transcended the limits of" professional practice.

816 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

In Boehm v. U.S., 21 F. 2d 283 (8th Cir., 1927), Dr. John C. Boehm was convicted on five counts of an indictment charging unlawful sale of morphine not in pursuance of a written order, and that the drugs were not dispensed in the regular course of his professional practice as a physician, but for the purpose of satisfying the cravings of addicts. Defendant appealed, basing his argument that the indictment is insufficient (in part) upon the case of Linder v. U.S., supra.

The court of appeals held that the Linder case was entirely different from the present case as to the allegations in the indictment, and are easily distinguishable. The court said in part:

"The real crux of this case is the good faith of the plaintiff in error as a physician. In the Linder case, supra, the court pointed out that 'what constitutes bona fide medical practice, consistent with the statute, depends upon the facts and circumstances of the case' (syllabus). This case is not one, as we read the record, where a physician in good faith and as a part of medical treatment and in the interest of humanity prescribes a drug to relieve the patient from pain and suffering incident to addiction. * * * The alleged prescriptions were such only in name. The method pursued by the plaintiff in error was a mere scheme to sell the drugs to unfortunate addicts. It was for the jury to say whether the sales in which he participated by issuing the prescriptions were in good faith. The court very clearly instructed the jury on this subject. The evidence was sufficient to warrant the jury in finding there was no good faith in this phase of defendant's alleged practice."

In Nelms v. U.S., 22 F. 2d 79 (9th Cir., 1927); cert. denied, 276 U.S. 615, Dr. Milton A. Nelms was convicted under three counts of an indictment charging the unlawful sale of morphine not in pursuance of a written order and not in good faith and in the course of his professional practice only, the sale having been made by a prescription which was filled by a druggist. One count charged the sale of 12 quarter grains of morphine, or a total of 3 grains. The other counts differed only in dates, quantities, and aliases used by the purchaser.

On appeal, the defendant cited the Linder decision. The court of appeals held that the indictment was sufficient, and distinguished the Linder case thus:

"In Linder v. United States, 268 U.S. 5, cited by plaintiff in error, the indictment alleged that the person to whom the sale was made was addicted to the habitual use of cocaine, and known by defendant to be so addicted; but there was no allegation questioning the good faith of the doctor or the wisdom of his action according to medical standards, nor was there an allegation that the physician dispensed the drugs otherwise than to a patient in the course of his professional practice or for other medical purposes."

In Freeman v. U.S., 86 F. 2d 243 (5th Cir., 1936); rehearing denied December 17, 1936; cert. denied 57 S. Ct. 323, Dr. Jephtha S. Freeman was convicted on 12 counts of an indictment charging unlawful sales of narcotics, with the usual negative averment "not in the course of his professional practice only." In this case, the contention was made on behalf of defendant that the quoted negative averment was a conclusion of the pleader since it did not negative the various circumstances necessary to constitute an administration in the course of his professional practice or allege the existence of conditions which rendered the use of the drug unprofessional and in bad faith. The court held that the allegation assailed was in the language of the statute, which is ordinarily sufficient. The allegation was held to charge an ultimate fact and not a mere conclusion.

Other assignments (of error) related to the refusal of the court to direct a verdict of acquittal on the ground that the evidence showed that the prescriptions were issued in the course of appellant's professional practice. Under these assignments it was insisted that the prescriptions themselves appeared to have been so issued, and therefore satisfied the Narcotic Act, as a revenue measure, and that to construe the act as authorizing judicial inquiry into the sufficiency and propriety of the reasons assigned for their issuance was to construe it as a police regulation, thereby rendering it unconstitutional and void. The appellant relied on the case of Linder v. U.S., supra.

The court of appeals pointed out, however, that the Supreme Court had said in the Linder case: "Mere pretense of such practice, of course, cannot legalize forbidden sales, or otherwise nullify valid provisions of the statute." The court of appeals pointed out that the constitutionality of the act had been upheld in United States v. Doremus, 249 U.S. 86 and held "In order to be entitled to the benefit of the exception, the practice of the profession must be real and genuine, and resort to it may not be held as a subterfuge to cover an otherwise unlawful dispensing of the taxable drug (citing Jin Fuy Moy v. United States, 254 U.S. 189, and United States v. Behrman, supra)."

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 817

The appellate court said the issue was squarely joined on the good faith of the appellant in issuing the prescriptions set out in the indictment. The question was fairly presented to the jury under the instructions of the court. On this issue there was sufficient evidence to sustain the indictment; and the charge contained in the indictment is within the prohibition of the statute. Therefore, the grounds assigned were not sufficient to warrant an instructed verdict to find the defendant not guilty or an order quashing the indictment. Having found no reversible error in the record, the judgment of the district court was affirmed.

In Ratigan v. U.S., 88 F. 2d 919 (9th Cir., 1937), Dr. Thomas P. Ratigan, Jr., was charged in 12 counts with selling morphine by means of hypodermic administration, not in the course of professional practice or in good faith or for legitimate medical purposes, merely for the purpose of gratifying his (purchaser's) craving for the drug, and not in pursuance of a written order on the prescribed form. On appeal from conviction, he urged that no offense was stated in the 12 counts.

Court held: The allegation that the sales charged in the indictment were made "not in the course of the professional practice of (appellant), or in good faith, or for legitimate medical purposes, he, the (purchaser) being free from any disease in which morphine is indicated for legitimate medical purposes, and receiving same, as aforesaid, from (appellant) merely for the purpose of gratifying his craving for the drug," sufficiently negatives the exception contained in section 1044(c) (1) (now section 4705(c) (1)).

In U.S. v. Lindenfeld, 142 F. 2d 829 (2d Cir., 1944), Dr. William Lindenfeld was convicted on 15 counts of an indictment charging unlawful sales of morphine by issuance of prescriptions to addicts. On appeal, defendant argued, first, that his acts were merely those of a physician in the course of professional employment, and hence within the exception of section 2554(c) (1)—(now section 4705(c) (1))—of the statute. Court held: "But that was a question of fact as to defendant's good faith for the jury to decide, and it was properly presented to them in the court's charge. When a licensed physician abuses his professional function by selling or giving away prescriptions for drugs to known addicts, he automatically forfeits the privileges extended to him by section 2554(c) (1) (now section 4705(c) (1)) of the statute."

In U.S. v. Abdallah, 149 F. 2d 219 (2d Cir., 1945), Dr. Ibrahim J. Abdallah was convicted on three counts of an indictment charging unlawful sales of morphine by issuance of prescriptions to addicts. On appeal, defendant urged the court to reconsider its holding in the Lindenfeld case that the question as to whether the defendant comes within the exception (as to professional practice) was one of fact as to his good faith, for the jury to decide, and contended that there must be a consent or conspiracy between the physician and the druggist filling the prescription in order to render the physician's acts unlawful.

Court held: "But our holding was not at all novel, and we find no occasion for reconsidering it."

In McBride v. U.S., 225 F. 2d 249 (5th Cir., 1955), Dr. Julius B. McBride was convicted on several counts of an indictment charging unlawful sale of narcotics (codeine) not in the course of professional practice, not for legitimate medical purposes, and not in good faith. On appeal, the defendant contended that the charge of the court as to standard medical practices and good faith injected elements of the offense which are not within the statute. This instruction of the court was:

"If dispensations were made in good faith and according to standard medical practices in the cure of disease or injury, and not merely to satisfy the craving of a person for such drug, then the dispensations may be said to have been made in the regular course of the defendant's professional practice only; but if the dispensations were not made in good faith, but were made to enable such person to obtain codeine sulphate to satisfy his appetite or craving for such drug only and not in the treatment of his patient, then the dispensation of such drug would not be in good faith nor in the regular course of the defendant's professional practice as a physician, nor for legitimate medical purposes, and such sale and dispensing would not be lawful."

Court held: "The foregoing portion of the court's charge is almost identical with a portion of an instruction approved in DuVall v. United States, 82 F. 2d 382,

818 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

9th Cir., cert. denied, 298 U.S. 667. The instruction above quoted accurately states the law of this aspect of the case as announced by the Supreme Court (citing Linder v. U.S., supra; Boyd v. U.S., 271 U.S. 104). The belief of appellant that the codeine dispensed was beneficial to Chief Morrison in 'making him good' and 'holding his job,' if such belief was sincerely held, does not establish good faith nor alter criteria of standard medical practices."

In Bush v. U.S., 16 F. 2d 709 (5th Cir., 1927), Dr. A. R. Bush was convicted on five counts of an indictment charging him with unlawful sales of morphine to certain persons by issuing prescriptions not in the course of his professional practice only, not to his patients, and not in pursuance of a written order on the proper form.

Court held: "It has been repeatedly held that the provision exempting a physician does not protect him, if he dispenses the drug by writing a prescription for one who is not a bona fide patient, and it is not for the purpose of treating him in the course of his professional practice. In such case violation of the regulations imposed by the statute for the purpose of facilitating the collection of the tax is an offense, and it is not necessary to show that the United States was actually deprived of revenue (citing U.S. v. Doremus, supra; Webb v. U.S., supra; Jin Fuey Moy v. U.S., supra, and other cases). Defendant relies, however, on the recent case of Linder v. U.S., 268 U.S. 5, and argues that under that authority a doctor may dispense as much morphine to a habitual user as he sees fit, merely to satisfy his craving for the drug, and without any intention to cure him of the habit. We think the Linder case in harmony with the cases above cited. What was decided in the Linder case, so far as it is here applicable, is well stated in the syllabus. Briefly it is that a physician may give an addict moderate amounts of drugs for self-administration, if he does so in good faith and according to fair medical standards; but what constitutes bona fide medical practice depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case."

In Hawkins v. U.S., 90 F. 2d 551 (5th Cir. 1937), Dr. David B. Hawkins was convicted on eight counts of two indictments, charging unlawful sales of morphine not pursuant to a written order and not in the course of professional practice only. Defendant appealed, relying on the case of Linder v. U.S., 268 U.S. 5.

Court held: "There is no doubt that case ruled that a physician may lawfully prescribe narcotics for an addict purely because of his addiction, provided the amount is not so large as to put it within the power of the addict to sell part of the drug in violation of the Harrison Act, which is to be strictly construed as a revenue measure. In that case the amount prescribed was one tablet of morphine and three tablets of cocaine. The number of grains of the drug in each tablet was not shown, but it may be assumed that a single tablet of morphine was not more than enough for one dose. Because of the small quantity prescribed it was held that the indictment did not charge a crime. We do not consider the Linder case controlling as applied to the prescriptions specified in the indictments in this case. Each prescription was for at least 15 grains. * * * However, the regulation and terms of the act do not grant immunity to a physician unless the prescription is issued in good faith, in the course of his professional practice, to a bona fide patient. We consider 15 grains of morphine was enough to present a question of fact as to the good faith of the doctor to be decided by the jury and the indictments were not demurrable on that point. The indictments in this case were sufficient in form to charge an offense under the statute. It was not error to overrule the demurrers."

In U.S. v. Brandenburg, 155 F. 2d (3d Cir., 1946), Dr. Leopold W. Brandenburg was convicted on 11 counts of an indictment charging unlawful sales of morphine by prescriptions, not pursuant to a written order form, not in good faith and in the course of professional practice only, and a number of other allegations.

The Court enunciated certain principles, thus:

"By judicial interpretation, the excepting language has been restricted to bona fide treatment of a patient's disease by a physician. Thus, under the guise of 'treating' a patient a physician may not by issuing prescriptions make it possible for drugs to be peddled or for known addicts merely to satisfy their craving (citing U.S. v. Behrman, supra). However, a prescription of a moderate amount of drugs issued even to a known addict is not criminal if the physician in good faith is attempting to 'treat' the disease of consequences of the addiction (citing Linder v. U.S., supra)."

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 819

After summarizing the allegations in the indictment, the Court held:

"It will be seen, therefore, that the rather elaborately drawn count does not charge a sale of drugs to a known addict. In essence, the charge is that the drugs were sold to a purchaser for the purpose of satisfying the cravings of unspecified addicts. Under the principles already enunciated there can be no doubt that an indictable offense is thus charged. Obviously, a physician who prescribes drugs in bad faith, not in the course of his professional practice only, and for the purpose of satisfying the cravings of drug addicts is guilty of an indictable offense under the statute and the decisions cited above, interpreting it."

DISCUSSION

It is clear that the proposed plan of the authors of the report of "The Council" would ultimately result in a program of allowing physicians to supply narcotic dosage to ordinary addicts merely for the purpose of gratifying and maintaining addiction. Such a program would place great stress upon the decisions of the Supreme Court in Linder v. United States, as authority for the establishment of such a system, under the Federal Narcotic law. They quote the following Behrman comment by the Court in the Linder case with regard to the previous Behrman decision:

"The opinion cannot be accepted as authority for holding that a physician, who acts bona fide and according to fair medical standards, may never give an addict moderate amounts of drugs for self-administration in order to relieve conditions incident to addiction. Enforcement of the tax demands no such drastic rule, and if the act had such scope it would certainly encounter grave constitutional difficulties."

Again, it is desirable to point out that the Court, in the Linder decision, after summarizing the narcotic statutory provisions and the allegation in the indictment, was careful to observe that the indictment "does not question the doctor's good faith nor the wisdom or propriety of his action according to medical standards" and that "it does not allege that he dispensed the drugs otherwise than to a patient in the course of his professional practice or for other than medical purposes." The Court took occasion to review its previous decisions in narcotic cases, particularly United States v. Doremus, supra; Webb v. United States, supra; and Jin Fuey Moy v. United States, supra, and in all three of these cases the validity of the charge of an unlawful sale of narcotics by a doctor had been sustained. In all three of these cases (unlike the Linder case) the charge had questioned the wisdom or propriety of the doctor's action according to medical standards, i.e., that he had sold the drug not in the course of his professional practice only. In its Linder case review of the three preceding cases, Doremus, Webb, and Jin Fuey Moy, the Court did not overrule them. It did comment, with reference to the Behrman case (in which the indictment did not allege that the sale was not in the course of professional practice, but where the quantity of drugs involved was unusually large) that this decision could not be accepted as authority for holding that a physician, who acts bona fide and according to fair medical standards, may never give an addict moderate amounts of drugs for self-administration in order to relieve conditions incident to addiction. And in the final statement of the opinion the Court, still mindful of the absence of the negative averment concerning professional practice from the Linder indictment, stated "we cannot say that by so dispensing [the four tablets in the Linder case] the doctor necessarily transcended the limits of that professional conduct with which Congress never intended to interfere."

In reviewing the previously described decisions of U.S. courts of appeals of several circuits in 10 cases involving convictions of physicians for unlawful sales of narcotics, not in the course of professional practice (all of the said decisions having been rendered since the Supreme Court handed down its decision in the Linder case), we note that in each case the judgment of conviction was affirmed. In several of these cases, the appellant physician urged as ground for reversal of the Linder decision, but the courts of appeal generally distinguished that case from the case under consideration because of the allegation, in the latter case, that the sale was not in the course of professional practice and the jury had so found under proper instructions. For instance, in the Nelms case where at least one of the three counts on which defendant was convicted involved the unlawful sale of only 12 quarter grains of morphine, and the defendant urged in exculpation the Linder case, the court of appeals pointed out that the Linder indictment did not contain an allegation questioning the good faith of the doctor, or that the drugs were dispensed not in the course of professional practice, and so affirmed the Nelms conviction where the indictment did contain such an allegation.

820 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

In the Bush and Brandenburg cases, the respective courts of appeals, in affirming the validity of the charge, did take occasion to mention that the Linder case decided "a physician may give an addict moderate amounts of drugs for self-administration," or "a physician may lawfully prescribe narcotics for an addict if the physician in good faith is attempting to 'treat' the disease or consequences of the addiction," but the court qualified the statement in each case by adding (in the Bush case) the phrase "* * * if he does so in good faith and according to fair medical standards," and (in the Brandenburg case) the statement "Obviously, a physician who prescribes drugs in bad faith, not in the course of his professional practice only and for the purpose of satisfying the cravings of drug addicts is guilty of an indictable offense under the statute and the decisions cited above, interpreting it." In the Hawkins case, the court of appeals affirmed the judgment of conviction, while expressing the unusual viewpoint that the Linder case ruled "a physician may lawfully prescribe narcotics for an addict purely because of his addiction, provided the amount is not so large as to put it within the power of the addict to sell part of the drug in violation of the Harrison Act." Although the Court indicated the application of a quantity standard, it did add: "However, the regulation and terms of the act do not grant immunity to a physician unless the prescription is issued in good faith, in the course of his professional practice, to a bona fide patient." If the Bush and Hawkins decisions (cited in the report of "The Council") rendered by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit in 1927 and 1937, respectively, could once have been considered some authority in that circuit for the principle of a physician prescribing or dispensing narcotics for mere gratification of drug addiction, such authority is now certainly doubtful in view of the later decision of the same court of appeals in the later (1955) McBride decision, supra. In the McBride decision, the court affirmed the judgment of conviction, approving an instruction to the jury which in substance stated that if the dispensations (of codeine) were not made in good faith but were made to enable such person to satisfy his appetite or craving for such drug only and not in the treatment of his patient, then the dispensation would not be in good faith nor in the regular course of defendant's professional practice as a physician, nor for legitimate medical purposes.

In the Lindenfeld case, the defendant-physician, who was convicted on 15 counts of an indictment, argued that his acts (issuance of narcotic prescriptions to addicts) were merely those of a physician in the course of professional employment and hence within the exception to the statute. The court held this was a question for the jury as to defendant's good faith; that when a licensed physician abuses his professional function by selling or giving away prescriptions for drugs to known addicts, he automatically forfeits the privileges extended to him by the exception. In the later case in the same circuit, the Abdallah case (decided May 2, 1945) where the doctor had been convicted on three counts of unlawful sales of morphine, the plea was made to the court to reconsider its holding in the Lindenfeld case, but the court stated its holding was not at all novel and found no occasion for reconsidering it, and affirmed the Abdallah judgment of conviction.

In summary, it is submitted that the principle of the Webb and Jin Fuey Moy decisions have not been overruled by the subsequent decisions of the Supreme Court in Behrman and Linder; that this position is sustained fully by the decisions of U.S. Courts of Appeals in 10 cases, heretofore discussed, which have been rendered since the Linder case; that not 1 of the 10 cases (or any other decision in a physician-narcotic case) has been reviewed by the Supreme Court; that certiorari was denied by the Supreme Court in the Nelms and Freeman cases; and that in the intervening period since the Linder decision, one of the circuit court of appeals cases would surely have been reviewed by the Supreme Court if considered inconsistent with the Linder case.

Accordingly, it is concluded that the authors of the report of the council are mistaken in the view that the Bureau of Narcotics' regulation is not in accord with the decisions of the Supreme Court, and therefore, there is no need to amend the regulation.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 821

[Attachment D]

Pamphlet No. 56, Revised September 1963

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF NARCOTICS,
Washington, D.C.

PRESCRIBING AND DISPENSING OF NARCOTICS UNDER HARRISON NARCOTIC LAW

The following outline of procedure to be observed in prescribing and dispensing narcotic drugs is issued for the guidance of registrants under the Harrison narcotic law, and others concerned. This pamphlet is intended to be advisory only and to anticipate and answer questions arising in the minds of practitioners concerning the law and regulations governing the prescribing and dispensing of narcotic drugs as interpreted by the courts.

The regulations governing this subject are contained in Section 151.392, Regulations No. 5, and read as follows:

"Sec. 151.392. Purpose of issue.—A prescription, in order to be effective in legalizing the possession of unstamped narcotic drugs and eliminating the necessity for use of order forms, must be issued for legitimate medical purposes. The responsibility for the proper prescribing and dispensing of narcotic drugs is upon the practitioner, but a corresponding liability rests with the druggist who fills the prescription. An order purporting to be a prescription issued to an addict or habitual user of narcotics, not in the course of professional treatment but for the purpose of providing the user with narcotics sufficient to keep him comfortable by maintaining his customary use, is not a prescription within the meaning and intent of the act; and the person filling such an order, as well as the person issuing it, may be charged with violation of the law."

GENERAL

It is impossible to state an inflexible rule which will cover all cases, and this outline must, therefore, be general in nature and subject to modification through further interpretation of the law by the courts. The Bureau is not charged with the duty of laying down any fixed rule as to the furnishing of drugs or the frequency of the prescriptions in any particular case.¹ The responsibility for the proper prescribing and dispensing of narcotic drugs, under the Harrison narcotic law, rests upon the physician in charge of any given case.² While the primary responsibility for the proper prescribing and dispensing of narcotic drugs rests upon the physician in each case, a corresponding responsibility rests upon the druggist who fills a prescription to determine, in good faith, that the prescription was issued in the course of professional practice, and not for the

¹ In a prosecution against a physician for violating the Harrison narcotic law by dispensing narcotics to habitual users of drugs, the exclusion of a letter from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in response to a query by defendant physician as to dispensing of narcotics held proper. (Thompson v. United States, C.C.A., 8th, 258 Fed. 196.)

² (a) Indictment which charged that defendant, a practicing physician, did feloniously, etc., sell, exchange, barter, and give away a specified quantity of morphine sulphate, to a person named, not pursuant to an order on a form issued by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, by issuing and dispensing a prescription to such person, not a patient of the physician, which morphine was dispensed and distributed by the physician not in the course of his professional practice only, was sufficient. (Jin Fuey Moy v. United States, 254 U.S. 189.)

(b) Question of good faith in opium sales, in which accused physician participated by issuing prescriptions, held for jury. (Boehm v. United States, C.C.A., 8th, 21 F. (2d) 283.)

(c) Physician prescribing narcotics for other than bona fide patient, and not in course of professional treatment, is not protected by statutory exemption. (Bush v. United States, C.C.A., 5th, 16 F. (2d) 709.)

(d) In order to be entitled to the benefit of the exception, the practice of the profession must be real and genuine, and resort to it may not be had as a subterfuge to cover an otherwise unlawful dispensing of the taxable drug. (Freeman v. United States, C.C.A., 5th 86 F. (2d) 243.)

(e) A sale is complete when the drug is delivered whether hypodermically into the human system by request of the buyer, or delivered elsewhere on his direction and does not need to be personally handled by the buyer. (Ratigan v. United States, C.C.A., 9th, 88 F. (2d) 919. Rehearing denied Mar. 29, 1937; Certiorari denied, 57 S. Ct. 938; Petition for rehearing on writ of certiorari denied.)

822 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

purpose of gratifying addiction.³ Caution should be exercised to avoid being imposed upon by unscrupulous persons. Prescriptions for narcotics should be scrutinized carefully in an effort to detect possible alterations or forgery.⁴

The good faith of the physician and the bona fides of his treatment in a given case will be established by the facts and circumstances of the case and the consensus of medical opinion with regard thereto, based on the experience of the medical profession in cases of similar nature.⁵ Physicians will be expected to exercise such care in every case where narcotic dosage is indicated, that the patient under treatment shall receive no quantity of narcotic drug greater than that sufficient for bona fide medical needs, in order that there may be no surplus available for possible diversion by the patient to illicit use.⁶

USE OF NARCOTICS IN THE TREATMENT OF DISEASE WITHOUT REFERENCE TO THE QUESTION OF ADDICTION

Without reference to the question of addiction, a physician acting in accordance with proper medical practice may prescribe or dispense narcotics for the relief of acute pain or for any acute condition, such as influenza, pneumonia, renal calculi, broken limbs, etc.

USE OF NARCOTICS IN THE TREATMENT OF INCURABLE DISEASE

A reputable physician directly in charge of bona fide patients suffering from diseases known to be incurable, such as cancer, advanced tuberculosis, and other diseases well recognized as coming within this class, may in the course of his professional practice, and strictly for legitimate medical purposes, dispense or prescribe narcotic drugs for such diseases, provided the patients are personally attended by the physician who regulates the dosage, and the physician prescribes

³ (a) The acts of the principal become the acts of the accessory or aider and he may be charged as having done the act himself, and be indicted and punished accordingly, under Penal Code, sec. 332, making the accessory a principal. (Di Preta v. United States, C.C.A., 2d, 270 Fed. 73.)

(b) A person dealing in drugs is required to ascertain at his peril whether that which he sells comes within the statute, so that an indictment for violation of that section need not allege that defendant knew the character of the drug sold. (United States v. Balint, 258 U.S. 250.)

(c) Notwithstanding Harrison Narcotic Act, sec. 2, exception (b), excepting sales of the prohibited drugs on the written prescription of a registered physician, a sale by a druggist, who knows that the prescription was issued to gratify the holder's appetite and not to cure disease or alleviate suffering, violates the law, and the physician issuing the prescription, knowing that it is to be filled by a druggist having such knowledge, aids and abets the violation. (Doremus v. United States, C.C.A., 5th, 262 Fed. 849.)

(d) It is apparent that when a physician issues a prescription to be filled and charged for by a druggist, he does not personally sell or dispense the drug. The theory upon which he may be convicted is that he aided and abetted the druggist. (Hawkins v. United States, C.C.A., 5th, 90 F. (2d) 551.)

⁴ The purpose of antinarcotic act is to confine the distribution of such (narcotic) drugs to the regular and lawful course of professional practice, and not every order therefor written by a duly registered physician in the form of a prescription is necessarily a prescription within the exception. (United States v. Behrman, 258 U.S. 280.)

⁵ (a) Expert testimony as to proper method of treating addicts admissible. (Reeves v. United States, C.C.A., 5th, 263 Fed. 690.)

(b) In a prosecution under Harrison Narcotic Act, sec. 2, against a physician who sold large quantities of narcotics to habitual users of the drug, medical testimony as to recognized methods among physicians for treating persons addicted to the use of narcotic drugs was admissible for the purpose of showing that the accused physician did not come within the exception as to physicians dispensing drugs in the course of their practice, for, while the act is in the guise of a revenue measure, it was intended to accomplish a moral purpose. (Thompson v. United States, C.C.A., 8th, 258 Fed. 196.)

(c) In prosecution of physician for issuing to addicts prescriptions for morphine sulphate, medical testimony concerning methods of treating drug addiction was properly admitted. The regulation and terms of the Harrison narcotic law do not grant immunity to a physician unless the prescription is issued in good faith, in the course of his professional practice, to a bona fide patient. (Hawkins v. United States, C.C.A., 5th, 90 F. (2d) 551.)

⁶ An order issued by a practicing and registered physician for morphine to a habitual user thereof, the order not being issued by him in the course of professional treatment in the attempted cure of the habit, but being issued for the purpose of providing the user with morphine sufficient to keep him comfortable by maintaining his customary use, is not a physician's prescription within exception (b) of sec. 2 of the Harrison Narcotic Act. (Webb & Goldbaum v. United States, 249 U.S. 96.)

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 823

no quantity greater than that ordinarily recognized by members of his profession to be sufficient for the proper treatment of the given case.⁷

As previously indicated, physicians should recognize the danger of supplying persons suffering from incurable diseases with excessive quantities of narcotics, because such persons may use the narcotic wrongfully, either by taking excessive quantities or by disposing of a portion of the drugs in their possession to other addicts or persons not lawfully entitled thereto.⁸

USE OF NARCOTICS IN THE TREATMENT OF ADDICTION ONLY

Mere addiction alone is not recognized as an incurable disease. It is well established that the ordinary case of addiction yields to proper treatment, and that addicts can remain permanently cured when drug taking is stopped and they are otherwise physically restored to health and strengthened in willpower.

An exception may be noted in the case of an aged and infirm person, with drug addiction of long standing, whose collapse and death might result from withdrawal of the drug. Here, again, there is the necessity of controlling dosage to prevent the patient from obtaining excessive quantities of the drug.

Medical authorities⁹ agree that the treatment of addiction, with a view to

⁷ (a) In prosecution of physicians for having violated and conspired to violate the Harrison Narcotic Act, the trial court in his general charge properly submitted an issue as to the good faith of defendants in issuing their prescriptions to supposed patients, since the defendants could only protect themselves if the prescriptions were issued legitimately in their practice. (McLanson v. United States, C.C.A., 5th 256 Fed. 783.)

(b) In a prosecution for violation of Harrison Narcotic Act, sec. 2, by selling narcotic drugs, not in pursuance of written orders on the prescribed forms, evidence that defendant, although a physician registered under the act, did not dispense the drugs in good faith in the course of his professional practice, which would bring him within exception (a) of the statute, but sold the same to gratify the appetite of the purchasers, was competent and relevant, and such issue was properly submitted to the jury. (Oakshette v. United States, C.C.A. 5th, 260 Fed. 830.)

(c) An indictment charging that defendant, a duly registered physician, by means of three prescriptions sold to one, whom he knew to be a drug addict, at one time heroin, morphine, and cocaine equivalent to more than 3,000 ordinary doses, without directions or restrictions, as to the use thereof by the addict, shows the sale was not within the exception to Antinarcotic Act of Dec. 17, 1914. (United States v. Behrman, 258 U.S. 280.)

⁸ (a) A careful review of the decisions as they exist at the present time makes clear the fact that when a physician is charged with unlawfully selling or prescribing drugs under the Harrison Act, the case turns largely upon his good faith in prescribing drugs to his regular patients for maladies requiring the administration of the drug or whether he prescribed for persons seeking his professional aid merely to procure the drug. In the latter case the physician might, perhaps, in a single instance afford, temporarily, relief for one whose condition demanded immediate treatment. To go further than this would enable every doctor to do just what the defendant did here—furnish drugs to addicts or afford opportunity to them to procure all the narcotics they desired—as, unrestrained, they would go from one physician to another, and thus quickly destroy the whole purpose of the act in question. (Barbot v. United States, C.C.A., 4th, 273 Fed. 919.)

(b) The provisions of sec. 2, to which we have referred, aim to confine sales to registered dealers and to those dispensing the drugs as physicians, and to those who come to dealers with legitimate prescriptions of physicians. Congress, with full power over the subject, short of arbitrary and unreasonable action which is not to be assumed, inserted these provisions in an act specifically providing for the raising of revenue. Considered of themselves, we think they tend to keep the traffic above board and subject to inspection by those authorized to collect the revenue. They tend to diminish the opportunity of unauthorized persons to obtain the drugs and sell them clandestinely without paying the tax imposed by the Federal law. This case well illustrates the possibility which may have induced Congress to insert the provisions limiting sales to registered dealers and requiring patients to obtain these drugs as a medicine from physicians or upon regular prescription. Ameris, being as the indictment charges an addict, may not have used this great number of doses himself. He might sell some to others without paying the tax, at least Congress may have deemed it wise to prevent such possible dealings because of their effect upon the collection of the revenue. (United States v. Doremus, 249 U.S. 86.)

⁹ (a) "Your committee desires to place on record its firm conviction that any method of treatment for narcotic drug addiction, whether private, institutional, official or governmental, which permits the addicted person to dose himself with the habit-forming narcotic drugs placed in his hands for self-administration, is an unsatisfactory treatment of addiction, begets deception, extends the abuse of habit-forming narcotic drugs, and causes an increase in crime. Therefore, your committee recommends that the American Medical Association urge both Federal and State Governments to exert their full powers and authority to put an end to all manner of such so-called ambulatory methods of treatment of narcotic drug addiction, whether practiced by the private physician or by the so-called narcotic clinic or dispensary.

"In the opinion of your committee, the only proper and scientific method of treating narcotic drug addiction is under such conditions of control of both the addict and the drug, that any administration of a habit-forming narcotic drug must be by, or under the direct personal authority of the physician, with no chance of any distribution of the drug of addiction to others, or opportunity for the same person to procure any of the drug effecting a cure, which makes no provision for confinement while the drug is being withdrawn, is a failure, except in a relatively small number of cases where the addict is possessed of a much greater degree of willpower than that of the ordinary addict.

824 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Recognizing the importance of general medical opinion on the individual practice of medicine and the ethical problems involved in treating narcotic addicts, the American Medical Association's Council on Mental Health and the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council asked their respective committees dealing with problems of addiction to prepare "a review of current medical opinion to the end of developing a tentative 'code' defining proper ethical medical practice with respect to narcotics and narcotic addicts * * *."¹⁰ In June 1963, a statement on "The Use of Narcotic Drugs in Medical Practice and the Medical Management of Narcotic Addicts" was completed by the committees. That statement has been approved by the Board of Trustees and the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association and is quoted below and on the following pages ending on page 27.

NARCOTICS AND MEDICAL PRACTICE

THE USE OF NARCOTIC DRUGS IN MEDICAL PRACTICE AND THE MEDICAL MANAGEMENT OF NARCOTIC ADDICTS

(A report of the American Medical Association's Council on Mental Health and the National Academy of Sciences—National Research Council's Committee on Drug Addiction and Narcotics.)

One of the major points of the President's ad hoc panel[1] as presented to the 1962 White House Conference on Narcotics was that the statutory and regula-from any source other than from the physician directly responsible for the addict's treatment." (Journal of the American Medical Association, June 14, 1924.)

(b) "Physicians may, by the exercise of more thought in practicing, do much to avoid censure in relation to narcotic addiction. They may substitute, whenever possible, non-habit-forming drugs in the place of morphine or other opium alkaloids. When narcotics are indispensable, however, as shown in this series of articles, no more should be administered than is necessary to achieve the desired end. Patients requiring daily administration should be seen often by the doctor and the amount of drugs ordered or supplied should not exceed that required by the patient until seen again. Independence of administration on the part of nurses should be strictly limited to prescription and any change in treatment should be in writing." (See "Introduction," by Dr. Morris Fishbein, to series of articles by various authors, published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Mar. 14 to June 6, inclusive, 1931. This material—revised, rearranged, and shortened—was republished in the Journal of American Medical Association, May 23, 1942.)

(c) In affirmation of its earlier position, on May 14, 1962, the American Medical Association issued a joint statement with the National Research Council, which reads as follows:

"The American Medical Association and the National Research Council for many years have been concerned about and have studied the narcotic drug addiction problem. To assist in carrying out its studies, the American Medical Association collaborated with the American Bar Association in establishing a joint committee which made an interim report to the two organizations in 1958, and a final report in 1959.

"It is concluded that there is widespread public and professional misunderstanding about this subject, specifically (1) that the Federal Bureau of Narcotics believes drug addiction to be a crime—a belief that is contrary to the Federal law and its application by the Bureau; and (2) that the American Medical Association proposes the establishment of community ambulatory clinics for the withdrawal of narcotics from addicts or for the continuing maintenance of addicts on narcotics—a belief that is contrary to the official position of the American Medical Association.

"Historically, society has found it necessary to employ legal controls to prevent the spread of certain types of illness that constitute a hazard to the public health. Drug addiction is such a hazard.

"The successful and humane withdrawal of individuals addicted to narcotics in the United States necessitates constant control, under conditions affording a drug-free environment, and always requires close medical supervision.

"The successful treatment of narcotic addicts in the United States requires extensive postwithdrawal rehabilitation and other therapeutic services.

"The maintenance of stable dosage levels in individuals addicted to narcotics is generally inadequate and medically unsound and ambulatory clinic plans for the withdrawal of narcotics from addicts are likewise generally inadequate and medically unsound.

"As a result of these conclusions the American Medical Association and the National Research Council oppose on the basis of present knowledge such ambulatory treatment plans.

"These two organizations support (1) after complete withdrawal, followup treatment for addicts, including that available at rehabilitation centers; (2) measures designed to permit the compulsory civil commitment of drug addicts for treatment in a drug-free environment; (3) the advancement of methods and measures toward rehabilitation of the addict under continuing civil commitment; (4) the development of research designed to gain new knowledge about the prevention of drug addiction and the treatment of addicted persons; and (5) the dissemination of factual information on narcotic addiction."

¹⁰ Journal of the American Medical Association 185: 976-982, Sept. 21, 1963.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 825

tory measures for the control of narcotic drugs are not intended to interfere with administration of narcotic drugs in legitimate medical practice. Such administration is legally and medically sound and is approved by enforcement agencies.

The ad hoc report contains a sharp reminder that expressions of prevailing medical opinion have a profound impact not only on medical practice but on regulations,[2] laws, and courts, and that it is the duty of the medical profession to review its expressed opinions regularly in order to assure their current validity.

Our two committees are now charged with the task of preparing such a review of current medical opinion to the end of developing a tentative 'code' defining proper ethical medical practice with respect to narcotics and narcotic addicts which reflects the best of current opinion. It is the primary purpose of the committees to identify generally accepted broad principles, presenting specific details only where especially indicated, for example: (1) to correct certain mistaken but widely held impressions, (2) to emphasize relatively new developments, and (3) to establish a better balance between the emphasis on what can or should be done and what cannot or should not be done.

The opening pages of the present report are devoted to a brief historical review of previous documents in this field and an outline of some general data which seems necessary to give the statement an adequate degree of continuity. The main body of the text is presented next and is followed by a summary and appendixes composed of material from three of the important supporting documents.¹¹

HISTORICAL NOTE

In 1921 an AMA committee issued a statement which was, in effect, a definition and a code of medical practice,[3]. It was adopted in 1924 as a resolution by the AMA House of Delegates[4] and many Federal and State narcotic law-enforcement policies were built around it. It read in part:

"* * * The only proper and scientific method of treating narcotic drug addiction is under such conditions of control that any administration of any habit-forming narcotic drug must be by or under the direct personal authority of the physician with no chance of any distribution of the drug of addiction to others, or opportunity for the same person to procure any of the drug from any source other than from the physician directly responsible for the addict's treatment."

A number of statements have appeared since this original position paper. Among them are the following:

1. A 1952 report to the AMA Council of Pharmacy and Chemistry.[5] This statement, entitled "What To Do With a Drug Addict," was prepared by the Committee on Drug Addiction and Narcotics of the National Research Council (NRC) with the assistance of Dr. Harris Isbell, director of the Addiction Research Center at Lexington, Ky. The Council on Pharmacy and Chemistry of the AMA authorized its publication.

2. A 1957 report of the board of trustees to the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association,[6] outlined a series of steps which began in 1954 with a resolution by Dr. Eggston of New York and resulted in the appointment by the AMA Council on Mental Health of a committee on narcotic addiction.

3. A report prepared by the Council on Mental Health, the AMA staff and several physicians well informed on the subject of narcotic addiction.[7]

4. Certain items prepared in connection with the Karsten bill of 1959.[8]

5. A joint release[9] by the AMA and the NRC committees, approved by the Bureau of Narcotics, retained the essentials of the original 1924 position but indicated the need for development of research designed to provide new knowledge about the prevention of drug addiction and the treatment of addicted persons (apps. 1 and 2).

DEFINITION OF THE PROBLEM

For purposes of this document the World Health Organization (WHO) definition of addiction[10] is used, but our presentation is limited to the opiate class of drugs, natural and synthetic (app. 3).

Physicians have a fundamental responsibility to treat narcotic addiction because it is recognized as a medical syndrome based on an underlying emotional disorder. This syndrome tends to perpetuate itself and further aggravate the underlying disorder. Physical dependence without underlying emotional disorder is easily terminated and does not constitute an addiction problem. This is usually so if physical dependence develops in those receiving narcotics for relief of intractable pain.

¹¹ The appendixes referred to are not quoted.

826 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

EPIDEMIOLOGY

The opiate addiction problem can be described in terms of the interplay of three epidemiological factors:

The agent.—Heroin is the drug of choice of most addicts in the United States and accounts for the bulk of the problem.

The host.—At the present time young adult males of certain minority groups constitute the great preponderance of patients. Many other groups of addicts can be distinguished.

The environment.—Drug addiction is at present chiefly a problem of certain large cities, particularly in their low socioeconomic areas. It may, however, involve any part of the country or any socioeconomic class.

PSYCHIATRY

Disturbances of personality are usually easy to discover in persons who have become addicted and these disturbances are thought to precede and predispose to the occurrence of the disorder rather than being caused by the addiction. Expression of the personality disorder is aggravated by the use of drugs, but full-blown psychoses are rarely associated with the opiates except for toxic psychoses caused by intoxication with or withdrawal from nonopiate drugs.

Addicts as a group are lacking in frustration tolerance, are dependent and adept at manipulating those about them in relation to their addiction. They are very often amoral, hedonistic, unreliable, and difficult as patients, yet it is wrong to generalize too freely since much depends on the structure of individual psychopathology, the social and cultural background, and the patient's total physiological and psychological resources. An adequate evaluation is necessary in order to prepare a course of action with respect to any particular case, and one cannot rely on general statements which purport to relate uniformly to all addicts, since there are many variations and exceptions.

CLINICAL COURSE AND NATURE OF HISTORY

Addiction to heroin and to other opiates, once established, has the characteristics of a chronic relapsing disease. Withdrawal is the least complex part of treatment; indeed, it is periodically accomplished by certain addicts extramurally without medical assistance. Repeated relapse occurs frequently; success or failure should not be measured solely by the single criterion of relapse. There is good reason to believe that the total course, of this disorder is influenced by adequate treatment and, in any event, treatment of addicted persons remains a medical responsibility. Regardless of prognosis, the physician must use available knowledge in attempting to eliminate the syndrome of addiction and to cure the underlying personality disorder. Continued administration of drugs for the maintenance of addiction is not a bona fide attempt at cure, nor is it ethical treatment except in the few unusual circumstances mentioned later.

DIAGNOSIS

Diagnosis is based primarily on history, physical examination, and observation. Diagnosis of the fact of addiction is usually not difficult but assessment of the degree and the pattern of addiction are far more complex. Addicts regularly overestimate the amount of drugs they have been taking, especially now that most illicit drugs are diluted. It is particularly important to be aware of combinations with barbiturates because of convulsions and delirium which occur when the latter are suddenly withdrawn. Laboratory tests are available for finding opiates in the urine but they are not now in general use. The administration of opiate antagonists such as nalorphine to precipitate the withdrawal syndrome for the detection of drug use requires special skill and experience. Chief reliance should be placed on clinical techniques of diagnosis and evaluation. Not all physicians will have equal skill and experience in this field and, when indicated, suitable consultations should be obtained.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLEGAL TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 827

ADMINISTRATION OF NARCOTICS TO PERSONS WITH INTRACTABLE PAIN

There is general recognition of the belief that it is proper ethical practice to administer narcotics over a prolonged period in the treatment of patients with chronic incurable and painful conditions, when all reasonable alternate procedures have failed. This is especially true in cases of terminal disorders but, in certain unusual instances, may apply also to nonfatal diseases with intractable pain in which no relief or cure is possible or none has been found after reasonable efforts.

In such cases the physician should obtain consultation and is required to maintain adequate records of the drugs administered and the indications for such administration. He must also maintain adequate safeguards against diversion of drugs into illicit channels.

ADMINISTRATION OF NARCOTICS TO AGED AND DEBILITATED ADDICTED PERSONS

Occasional cases of addiction in aged and infirm or severely ill persons are found in which withdrawal of narcotics may be dangerous to life. As long as there is danger to life from withdrawal it is proper and necessary to maintain a supportive level of narcotic medication, provided the opinion is confirmed by adequate consultation, proper records are kept, adequate safeguards against diversion of narcotics are maintained, and the patient is closely supervised.

ADMINISTRATION OF NARCOTICS TO RELIEVE ACUTE WITHDRAWAL SYMPTOMS

There has never been any legal or medical question of the right and duty of a physician, in order to relieve acute withdrawal symptoms, to administer limited quantities of narcotics for a few days in a hospital or other secure setting which is reasonably certain to be drug-free. The drug of choice is methadone and various schedules of application are available. "Cold turkey" as routine "treatment" of addicted persons, including those in detention facilities, is contraindicated. In New York this has been specifically forbidden and the right of the addict to a humane withdrawal is established by a State law (Metcalf-Volker Act, 1962).

REQUIREMENTS FOR WITHDRAWAL

Institutional.—Withdrawal is most easily carried out in a drug-free environment in specialized wards or installations for narcotic addicts and such installations have been increasing in number within recent years as, for example, in New York State and California.

However, under the following conditions, withdrawal may be carried out in other settings: (1) few cases are involved, (2) the patient is well evaluated, (3) good control is maintained, and (4) the physician has acquired special skill and experience in this work.

Included among the factors to be evaluated and the circumstances to be considered are elements such as extent of delinquency record, degree of motivation, and nature of introduction to drug use.

The following settings may be acceptable: (1) psychiatric wards of general hospitals, (2) a properly selected ward (usually the sick bay) of a public or private mental hospital without specialized units, and (3) certain general hospital wards.

Ambulatory.—Withdrawal on an ambulatory basis is generally medically unsound and not recommended on the basis of present knowledge. Only under exceptional circumstances is it proper to attempt withdrawal on an ambulatory basis and then it must be done only by a physician with special skill and experience in the management of addicted patients. In such cases there should always be consultation with a psychiatrist, if one is available, or with another physician experienced in this field, or with another physician who will substantiate the fact that ambulatory withdrawal is, in fact, indicated.

Methadone is usually the drug of choice and the patient should in no case be given medication at any visit that will provide for his needs for more than 1 day nor should he receive more of the drug than is necessary to reduce abstinence distress to a mild level. Patients should be seen daily by the physician himself and only oral medication, preferably liquid, should be dispensed. Ambulatory treatment should be promptly terminated if the patient is found to be securing additional drug elsewhere or if he fails to maintain a prearranged schedule for withdrawal. Withdrawal should be completed within a 3-week period. If there is a complicating physical illness which makes this a danger to life and withdrawal is to be undertaken, hospitalization is always required.

828 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

It is recommended that the patient should agree in writing to follow the advice of the physician and not to obtain drugs from other sources.

Adequate records are required in all cases and should include results of physical examination, history, and a record of the consultation as well as copies of agreements with the patient and the records of the visits and actual medication administered.

In cases of pregnancy, withdrawal should be carried out prior to delivery; otherwise, the child must also be carried through a withdrawal schedule.

INTERIM TREATMENT OF ADDICT ON WAITING LIST FOR ADMISSION TO NARCOTIC FACILITY

When the diagnosis of addiction has been established and the patient is awaiting admission to a treatment facility and the fact of his acceptance and the date of admission have been confirmed by the attending physician, oral dosages of methadone, preferably in liquid form, may be given on daily visits by the physician for not more than 10 days to 2 weeks. Needed dosage will be established by observation of response to medication. No more than 1 day's medication should be dispensed to the addict at one time.

AMBULATORY WITHDRAWAL CLINICS

The 1962 joint AMA-NRC statement [9] reads, " * * * Ambulatory clinic plans for the withdrawal of narcotics from addicts are * * * generally inadequate and medically unsound." This position is taken "on the basis of present knowledge" and is intended to cover current clinical practice; it is not intended to obstruct bona fide research.

AMBULATORY MAINTENANCE AND CONTINUED ADMINISTRATION

The joint statement covers this much-debated issue as follows:

"The maintenance of stable dosage levels is generally inadequate and medically unsound and ambulatory clinic plans for the withdrawal of narcotics from addicts are likewise generally inadequate and medically unsound.

"As a result of these conclusions the American Medical Association and the National Research Council oppose on the basis of present knowledge such ambulatory treatment plans."

In fact, as was pointed out earlier, ambulatory maintenance can be considered ethical medical practice only if there has been consultation and it is agreed by the physicians concerned that (a) withdrawal would be hazardous to life, or (b) continued drug administration is necessary for treatment of a chronic or terminal painful condition other than the drug addiction itself and for which no other mode of treatment is feasible.

DEFINITIVE TREATMENT

After withdrawal a therapeutic program of up to 6 months or even a year is often indicated and this is best carried out in specialized facilities. However, physicians with specialized experience in this field who have established a good working relationship with the patient can and do carry out treatment in other institutional settings and provide followup services with long-term aftercare in the community.

Information as to inpatient facilities is available on a local basis from the State or local agency having to do with health matters, or from local voluntary and professional groups such as local medical societies or mental health associations.

Physicians will often wish to refer patients to such facilities for definitive care. Certification to civil facilities is possible in a number of States and its broader application is recommended. It may supply the element of compulsion toward maintenance of treatment which most addicts require. Information on certification is also available from specialized institutions.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 829

AFTERCARE AND REHABILITATION

After a patient has had even the best available treatment in any special closed facility his subsequent course will depend to a significant degree on the type and adequacy of aftercare; the social, economic, and psychiatric rehabilitation program which can be provided; and the environment to which he returns. Physicians should play an important role in the mobilization of social resources for aftercare and in providing supervision and followup treatment.

Relapse requires retreatment and should not be taken as indication of failure but should be accepted as in any other relapsing disorder. There is suggestive evidence that, with the passage of time, patients tend to become more responsive to treatment and an increasing number "mature out" of addiction.

PREVENTION

Physicians should be fully informed in order that they: (1) may play their role in the program of public education on the dangers of narcotic drugs and (2) can discharge the basic responsibility for controlling their administration of narcotics in such a way as to avoid diversion to illicit use or the creation of addiction.

LEGAL AND REGULATORY ASPECTS

A physician must comply with local, State, and Federal narcotic laws and regulations. A copy of the Federal regulations [2, 11] can be obtained from the Bureau of Narcotics at the Department of the Treasury, Washington, D.C., or from the nearest district supervisor for the Federal Bureau of Narcotics. Information as to local and State regulations can be obtained from the physician's county or State medical society.

Any future recodification of laws or of regulations should be couched in language as simple and direct as possible with a balanced emphasis on the positive as well as negative aspects of treatment of addicts.

In order to promote a better coordination between law enforcement and medical treatment, responsible medical bodies should be developed in each State to collaborate with the Federal Bureau of Narcotics or appropriate State agencies in the investigation of physicians under question concerning their prescribing or dispensing of narcotics. The medical profession recognizes the need for the establishment of this sort of procedure and stands ready to cooperate with the Federal Bureau of Narcotics and appropriate State agencies in such an undertaking.

In addition, there appears to be a need for a medical body on a national level to maintain a current "code" of ethical medical practice with relation to narcotics and narcotic addiction and to act in an advisory capacity to the Commissioner of Narcotics. The AMA and the National Academy of Sciences stand ready to cooperate with the Commissioner in this regard.

It is recommended that the national body should meet not less than every 2 years and publish any new material within 3 months.

RESEARCH

It is apparent that research on the problems of addiction to narcotics is absolutely necessary. The joint statement of the AMA and the NRC committees [9] was very explicit in emphasizing that the judgment of these organizations about ambulatory withdrawal and ambulatory maintenance was based on "present knowledge" and it characterizes these methods as generally inadequate and unsound, but there was no intent or desire to prevent any further research efforts. [12]

There is urgent need for further investigations of many types, both at clinical and basic science levels, and future findings may make it necessary to further revise our current concepts of what constitutes ethical medical practice in relation to narcotics and narcotic addicts.

Many of the restrictions on the use of narcotics in general medical practice may properly be modified for the purpose of carrying out bona fide research activities, since research creates special requirements. Such activities must, however, be carried out within the limits of ethical medical practice as applied to research.

830 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

SUMMARY

Laws and regulations controlling narcotic drugs are not intended to interfere with their administration in legitimate medical practice. Such administration is legally and medically sound.

It is a responsibility of the medical community to provide on a current basis a "code" defining legitimate medical practice. The present report represents a review of such current opinion as will tend to meet this need.

The WHO definition of addiction is adopted for this document but consideration is limited to the opiates and the natural and synthetic drugs of this class.

Heroin is the principal drug of addiction in the United States and moves entirely through illicit channels. Other opiates have a proper and necessary place in medical practice but special limitations and precautions are required because of their addiction-producing capacities.

It is the duty of the physician to bear these dangers in mind in his administration of narcotics.

It is his duty to (1) maintain adequate records; (2) maintain adequate precautions to prevent diversion of drugs to illicit channels or creation of addiction; (3) know and obey relevant local, State, and Federal laws and regulations on prescribing and dispensing narcotics and on narcotic addiction.

Narcotics may properly be given over prolonged periods of time to patients with chronic painful diseases other than drug addiction itself if a reasonable use of alternative procedures fails to give relief in terminal states and chronic painful diseases for which no cure or other relief is known.

The physician should secure medical consultation.

The treatment of persons already addicted is a medical responsibility because addiction is recognized as a medical syndrome which is based on an underlying emotional disorder. This syndrome tends to perpetuate itself and to further aggravate the underlying disorder.

Within the field of medicine, addiction is a problem in psychiatry and in psychopharmacology.

Under adequate precautions (in or out of an institution) and after proper consultation, addicted persons may be supplied with maintenance drugs if withdrawal represents a hazard to life. Oral medication with methadone will usually suffice.

All addicted persons including those under confinement should be given humane medical withdrawal under medical supervision. There is no excuse for the so-called cold turkey treatment.

Successful narcotic withdrawal involves four interacting factors (1) the degree of control afforded by the environment, (2) the skill and experience of the physician, (3) the patient and his attitude, and (4) the type of drug and degree of addiction.

Optimally, withdrawal is carried out in a closed, specialized narcotic treatment unit since it requires a drug-free environment.

Patients can also be withdrawn under suitable conditions in psychiatric wards of general hospitals or in selected wards of public or private mental hospitals if the drug-free situation can be attained. When cases number more than a few, consideration must be given to the development of special narcotic treatment units. If all factors are favorable, withdrawal may be possible in a general hospital or a private institution.

Withdrawal on an ambulatory basis is generally medically unsound and not recommended on the basis of present knowledge. A possible exception has been described.

Oral administration of methadone may be carried out on a daily-dose basis to protect an addict from withdrawal symptoms for a period up to 10 days or 2 weeks if the attending physician has confirmed the patient's acceptance for a facility for the treatment of narcotic addiction.

Long-term followup involves the mobilization of community resources for vocational and social rehabilitation. The physician's supervision and supportive role to this end are important.[4]

Addiction has the characteristics of a chronic relapsing psychiatric disorder and must be viewed in this perspective when the results of treatment are evaluated.

To promote better coordination between law enforcement and medical treatment, each State should develop responsible medical bodies to collaborate in the investigation of physicians under question concerning alleged irregularities of prescribing or dispensing narcotics. The medical profession recognizes this need and stands ready to cooperate with the Commissioner of the Bureau of Narcotics and appropriate State agencies.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 831

A need exists for the development of a national body to keep current the standards of ethical medical practice with relation to narcotics and narcotic addicts and to act in an advisory capacity to the Commissioner. The AMA and the National Academy of Sciences-NRC stand ready to cooperate with the Bureau of Narcotics in this regard.

Many of the restrictions on the use of narcotics in general medical practice may be properly modified for the purpose of carrying out bona fide research activities, since research creates special requirements. Such activities must, however, be carried out within the limits of ethical medical practice as applied to research.

American Medical Association Council on Mental Health

Committee on Narcotic Addiction

Dale C. Cameron, M.D., Chairman, Superintendent, St. Elizabeths Hospital, Washington 20, D.C.

Edward R. Bloomquist, M.D., 759 Avon Glen Terrace, Glendale 6, Calif.

Henry Brill, M.D., deputy commissioner, New York State Department of Mental Hygiene, 240 State Street, Albany 1, N.Y.

Robert H. Felix, M.D., Director, National Institute of Mental Health, Bethesda 14, Md.

Herbert A. Raskin, M.D. 18510 Meyers Road, Detroit 35, Mich.

National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council

Committee on Drug Addiction and Narcotics

Dale C. Cameron, M.D., Chairman, Superintendent, St. Elizabeths Hospital, Washington, D.C.

Raymond N. Bieter, M.D., professor of pharmacology and director of special educational services, 126 Millard Hall, University of Minnesota Medical School, Minneapolis, Minn.

Henry Brill, M.D., deputy commissioner, New York State Department of Mental Hygiene, 240 State Street, Albany, N.Y.

Isidor Chein, Ph. D., Research Center for Human Relations, New York University, New York, N.Y.

Jonathon O. Cole, M.D., Chief, Psychopharmacology Service Center, National Institute of Mental Health, Bethesda, Md.

Nathan B. Eddy, M.D., executive secretary, Committee on Drug Addiction and Narcotics, National Research Council, Room 328-A, National Bank Building, Bethesda, Md.

Marshall Gates, Ph. D., professor of chemistry, University of Rochester, Rochester, N.Y.

Joseph M. Hayman, M.D., dean, Tufts University School of Medicine, 136 Harrison Avenue, Boston, Mass.

Everett L. May, Ph. D., Chief, Section on Medicinal Chemistry, National Institute of Arthritis and Metabolic Diseases, Bethesda, Md.

Maurice H. Seevers, M.D., professor and chairman, Department of Pharmacology, University of Michigan, 6322 Medical Science Building, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Ralph G. Smith, M.D., Acting Director, Bureau of Medicine, Food and Drug Administration, Washington, D.C.

Issac Starr, M.D., 854 Gates Memorial Pavilion, Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa.

Francis N. Waldrop, M.D., Director of Professional Training, St. Elizabeths Hospital, Washington, D.C.

REFERENCES

1. Proceedings, White House Conference on Narcotics and Drug Abuse, September 27-28, 1962, appendix 1: Ad Hoc Panel Report, p. 221, Washington, D.C.: Government Printing Office.

2. Prescribing and Dispensing of Narcotics Under Harrison Narcotic Law, pamphlet 56, Treasury Department, Bureau of Narcotics, revised 1960.

3. Emerson, H., et al.: Report of Committee on Narcotic Drugs of Council on Health and Public Instruction, JAMA 78: 1669-1671 (June 11) 1921.

832 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

4. Minutes of 75th Annual Session of AMA held at Chicago June 9-13, 1924, JAMA 82: 1938 (June 14) 1924.

5. Statement prepared by Committee on Drug Addiction and Narcotics of National Research Council, with assistance of Dr. Harris Isbell, JAMA 149: 1220-1223 (July 26) 1952.

6. Report of Board of Trustees, JAMA 164: 54 (May 4) 1957.

7. Report of Narcotic Addiction, report of the Council on Mental Health, JAMA 164: 54 (May 4) 1957.

8. Recommendation of NRC Committee on Drug Addiction and Narcotics, News Report, National Academy of Sciences, National Research Council 9: 24 (March-April) 1959.

9. Joint Statement on Narcotic Addiction by AMA and NRC, New York Med 18: 561 (Aug. 20) 1962.

10. Expert Committee on Addiction-Producing Drugs, World Health Organization Technical Report, series No. 116, Geneva, 1957.

11. Regulations No. 5. Regulatory Taxes on Narcotic Drugs, Opium, Coca Leaves, Isonipicaine or Opiates, part 151 of title 26 (1954), Code of Federal Regulations, U.S. Treasury Department, joint regulations of Bureau of Narcotics and Internal Revenue Service, IRS publication No. 428 (6-59).

12. AMA Restates Position on Ambulatory Clinics for Addicts, JAMA 182: 30 (Oct. 13) 1962.

The foregoing statement discussing what the medical profession considers to be proper ethical medical practice with respect to narcotics and narcotic addicts is acceptable to the Federal Bureau of Narcotics.

HENRY L. GIORDANO,
Commissioner.

[Attachment E]

AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION,
Chicago, Ill., March 11, 1964.

HON. LYNDON B. JOHNSON,
*President of the United States,
The White House,
Washington, D.C.*

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: The American Medical Association is presently reviewing the final report of the President's Advisory Commission on Narcotic and Drug Abuse. We would like at this time to direct a few preliminary comments with respect to recommendations 7 and 9 contained in the report. We are concerned with these recommendations, which would transfer certain investigatory functions of the Department of the Treasury to the Department of Justice, and certain regulatory functions of the Department of the Treasury to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Although our comments are directed only to recommendations 7 and 9, it is not our intention to single them out as being of greater importance than others.

The recommendations would accomplish a transfer of enforcement functions, with relation to illicit traffic of narcotic drugs and marihuana, from the Department of the Treasury to the Department of Justice. If the recommendations are effected, the regulation of legitimate importation, manufacture, distribution, etc., of narcotic drugs and marihuana would be transferred from the Treasury Department to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. There would thus result a division of responsibility with respect to narcotics and marihuana.

The combined responsibility with respect to both the legitimate and illicit traffic of narcotic drugs and marihuana is now concentrated in the Bureau of Narcotics. It would seem manifest that the retention in one department of all functions pertaining to narcotic drugs and marihuana would have a salutary benefit. It would not only avoid duplication of effort and discontinuity of program, but it would continue the effective cooperation and understanding now existing.

Certain other agencies with which the Bureau of Narcotics must join forces, in order to conduct an effective program of control, are also in the Department of the Treasury. To be effective, a program of domestic control must be coordinated with one of control of illicit importation and smuggling, the latter being under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Customs. Narcotic control is also aided by cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service—also within the Department of the Treasury.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 833

Any inadequacy of the present program of investigation of illicit traffic in narcotics is recognized by the report as being attributable, at least in good measure, to understaffing and shortage of manpower within the Bureau of Narcotics. Recommendation No. 11 requests that when the transfer to the Department of Justice is effected, the number of Federal enforcement personnel be substantially increased. A fortiori, a similar addition to the personnel of the Bureau of Narcotics would result in greater achievement in a department having the experience and special training developed over a great number of years.

This association, being acutely aware of the abuse of narcotics, stands ready to further a cause which will ameliorate conditions out of which such abuse results. However, dismemberment of the Bureau of Narcotics would appear to be detrimental. The Bureau of Narcotics has established itself as an effective arm in the control of narcotic traffic. Over the years it has gained experience and insight into the problem, the benefit of which would be lost, or at least minimized, upon a transfer.

While the report of the Commission recommends the transfer of the investigatory function as logically being a police function and therefore more proper in the Department of Justice, the report does not question the competency of the Bureau. In fact it specifically states that the commission's recommendation is not to be viewed as a reflection upon the Bureau.

The competency of the Bureau has been established, and its rapport with local enforcement agencies recognized. This association does not believe that it would be in the best interests of this Nation to upset an established and well-organized arm of the enforcement agencies of our Government, and to thus lose the benefit of years of experience in combating the problem.

Lastly, but of no less significance, we wish to emphasize the important role that physicians must play in a program of eradicating the abuse in the use of narcotic drugs. This role has been recognized by the Bureau of Narcotics, which has also been cognizant of the significant and beneficial use of narcotic drugs in the practice of medicine. In recent years there have developed between the Bureau and the Nation's physicians a mutual trust and confidence which are manifest in the cooperation and rapport now existing in their relationship. This development should be fostered. It would be most unfortunate if an action were undertaken, the unknown consequences of which could result in a deterioration of this beneficial rapprochement.

Pending our review of all the recommendations, at this time we would respectfully urge, with respect to recommendations 7 and 9, that the present functions be retained in the Bureau of Narcotics within the Department of the Treasury.

Respectfully yours,

F. J. L. BLASINGAME, M.D.

[Attachment F]

Physicians convicted in the U.S. district courts since 1919

Year :	Number	Year—Con.	Number	Year—Con.	Number
1919.....	2	1935.....	117	1951.....	24
1920.....	6	1936.....	93	1952.....	26
1921.....	6	1937.....	67	1953.....	27
1922.....	11	1938.....	67	1954.....	12
1923.....	11	1939.....	63	1955.....	24
1924.....	13	1940.....	86	1956.....	10
1925.....	14	1941.....	49	1957.....	7
1926.....	15	1942.....	73	1958.....	2
1927.....	14	1943.....	60	1959.....	0
1928.....	16	1944.....	68	1960.....	1
1929.....	72	1945.....	60	1961.....	2
1930.....	89	1946.....	43	1962.....	1
1931.....	76	1947.....	26	1963.....	2
1932.....	48	1948.....	40
1933.....	73	1949.....	25	Total.....	1, 668
1934.....	105	1950.....	22

834 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

COMMENTS OF THE COMMISSIONER OF NARCOTICS ON THE "REPORT ON DRUG ADDICTION II" BY THE NEW YORK ACADEMY OF MEDICINE

The "Report on Drug Addiction II" by the New York Academy of Medicine is not an immoderate and impartial study of the problems of drug addiction and the management of drug addicts. It is a caustic condemnation of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, concentrating on the theme that the Bureau stands for defiance of the views of the entire medical profession and is blocking the way of scientific progress in the field of management of narcotic drug addicts.

The report contends, most ardently, that deterrence of addiction by police methods is an outmoded concept, and that individual physicians and clinics ought to be free to supply narcotic drugs to individuals in such quantities and for such periods of time as the physician may deem proper.

It is important to the well-being of this country that there should be an end to such extremism, and that there may evolve a better understanding of the Bureau's position. There has been a deplorable tendency on the part of a few articulate individuals on behalf of the academy to hurl brickbats at the Bureau of Narcotics despite repeated efforts by the Bureau to convince these persons that we do not advocate severe repressive measures against physicians who wish to treat addicts as sick persons. The purpose of this paper is to highlight some of the more serious charges and deviations from prevailing opinions and to give appropriate comment on each. We will not undertake to itemize and refute every vitriolic statement directed at the Bureau.

THE PROFIT FACTOR

One of the major points stressed in the report is that narcotic peddlers or pushers induce persons to use narcotics so that once addicted they will have a ready market for their product. The academy believes that profit is the main reason for the spread of addiction. On each of the thousands of addict forms which have been received by the Bureau, there is a space provided for setting forth the reason given by the addict during his interview as to the cause of his addiction. In virtually every case, the reason given is either "association with addict," "living with addict," "curiosity," "kicks," "association," "going along with gang," and so on. Seldom is there any claim by an addict that he was induced by a peddler intent upon exploiting him after causing him to become addicted. The U.S. Public Health Service recognized this fact more than 30 years ago, and in September 1962, the report of an ad hoc panel to the White House Conference on Narcotic and Drug Abuse stated the same fact; namely, that addiction is spread primarily by addicts.

HAS THERE BEEN A LACK OF RESULTS?

It is asserted that enforcement of the narcotic laws has fallen short of producing the expected results, since the punitive approach catches mostly the small fries and not the syndicate heads. This argument completely overlooks the fact that addiction in this country has been reduced from 1 in 400 in 1914, to 1 in 4,000 today. Moreover, the academy's statement indicates a lack of knowledge of the many conspiracy cases which have been developed for prosecution by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, resulting in convictions of dozens of top echelon violators in one sweep. The report completely ignores the cases in which ringleaders have been convicted, including such notorious violators as Vito Genovese, Carmine Galante, John Ormento, Joseph Valachi, Vincent Mauro, Frank Caruso, Marcantonio Orlandino, and Salvatore Maneri. Since 1956, we have developed 20 major conspiracy cases resulting in the convictions of 206 important gangsters. We are rightfully proud of these accomplishments.

DOES THE BUREAU IGNORE COURT DECISIONS?

The report accuses the Bureau of Narcotics of ignoring decisions of the Supreme Court and arbitrarily dictating the manner in which physicians should prescribe narcotics and treat addicts. The academy accuses the Bureau of defying, with impunity, the decision of the Supreme Court in C. O. Linder v. United States, 268 U.S. 5 (1925), thereby forcing physicians to abdicate their lawful position in the handling of drug addicts. Throughout the years, we have followed a course which is relatively flexible and adaptable and which is fully in line with several landmark decisions of the U.S. courts and the various policy statements of the American Medical Association and the National Research Council.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 835

In these comments, we will not discuss the legal ramifications of the Linder decision. It is sufficient to say only that many lawyers have reviewed the cases on the point and have concluded that there is no basis for holding that the Supreme Court would countenance the indiscriminate furnishing of narcotic drugs to addicts not on good faith but for the purpose of maintaining the addict's appetite for such drugs. We have found numerous cases decided by the various U.S. circuit courts of appeals which have been rendered on the very same point, and not one case has interpreted the Linder decision in support of the position of the academy's report. In fact, the Supreme Court has denied writ of certiorari in two of the circuit court cases. Surely, the Supreme Court would have reviewed the circuit court decisions if they had been considered inconsistent with the Linder case.

Moreover, the argument of the academy concerning the Bureau's interpretation of the laws and its application to the medical profession set forth a misconception of the Bureau's judicial responsibilities. The Bureau of Narcotics is an enforcement agency. We do not dictate to the courts our preferences as to which decisions we shall follow. In order to prosecute a defendant, the facts or evidence uncovered by our investigations must be referred to the appropriate U.S. attorney who must agree that an offense has been committed before proceeding with the prosecution. When the case involves a physician who maintains that the alleged violation occurred during bona fide treatment of an addicted patient, the Government is normally required to refute the defense with competent evidence as to what constitutes good medical practice. There is an unbiased U.S. district judge presiding who interprets the law and instructs the jury on the legal points involved. Upon appeal of a conviction by a physician, the Government's brief is reviewed by the appellate section of the Department of Justice and the case is decided by three judges of the U.S. circuit court of appeals. Upon further appeal to the Supreme Court, the brief of the Government would be submitted to the Court with the concurrence of the Solicitor General. Thus, it is literally impossible for any agency such as the Bureau of Narcotics to have imposed for about 40 years an erroneous interpretation of a Supreme Court decision. Since the Linder decision in 1925, there have been more than 1,600 convictions of physicians in U.S. district courts for violations of the Federal narcotic laws. To assert that the Bureau is responsible for erroneously causing these doctors to be prosecuted is tantamount to saying that we have been capable of dictating policy and law to each of the individual agencies and legal bodies involved in the judicial processes. Such an achievement is utterly impossible under our system of due process.

COLD TURKEY WITHDRAWAL

The academy report asserts that the Bureau of Narcotics believes only in the abrupt withdrawal or "cold turkey" treatment of addicts. The academy's statement is preposterous—nothing could be further from the truth. Historically, the Bureau has supported the U.S. Public Health Service in its institutional treatment of drug addicts, which treatment very often includes the gradual reduction procedure. The Bureau's offices throughout the country continue daily to advise and counsel interested persons on the procedures necessary to gain admission to institutions, either Federal, State, or private, where proper facilities are available for treatment.

It is significant to point out that our views on this aspect are seemingly very well known by other eminent medical groups. In the joint statement of the American Medical Association and the National Research Council in June 1963, it was plainly stated "There has never been any legal or medical question of the right and duty of a physician to administer limited quantities of narcotics for a few days in a hospital or other secure setting which is reasonably certain to be drug free in order to relieve acute withdrawal symptoms * * *. All addicted persons, including those under confinement, should be given humane withdrawal under medical supervision. There is no excuse for the so-called cold turkey treatment." Moreover, the AMA-NRC statement provides that "When the diagnosis of addiction has been established and the patient is awaiting admission to a treatment facility and the fact of his acceptance and the date of admission have been confirmed by the attending physician, oral dosages of methadone, preferably in liquid form, may be given on daily visits by the physician for not more than 10 days to 2 weeks. Needed dosage will be established by observation of response to medication. No more than 1 day's medication should be dispensed to the addict at one time." Since the Bureau of Narcotics has gone on record in approval of the AMA-NRC joint statement, this should leave no doubt about the Bureau's views as to abrupt withdrawal and the right of a physician to dispense narcotic drugs to an addict awaiting admission to a treatment installation.

836 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

ARE ADDICTS CRIMINALS?

The authors of the academy's report proclaim that the Bureau of Narcotics has created a sentiment that all addicts are criminals who should be jailed and should not be treated as sick persons. The Bureau of Narcotics has not advocated jail treatment of drug addicts, although we do believe that persons who commit crimes should not have immunity from prosecution simply because they happen to be addicts. We do advocate stringent penalties for the illicit trafficker whose illegal activities undermine our efforts to keep narcotic drugs away from persons with an addiction potentiality. We do not think that just because a person is addicted he thereby has a license to violate the law and be a peddler of narcotic drugs. We oppose any effort to bring about a change in the laws which would reduce the severity of punishment for a peddler or smuggler who is an addict.

On the other hand, the Bureau's officials have always favored treating addicts, who are not engaged in commercial selling or smuggling, as medical rehabilitation cases and not as criminals. We have supported proposed legislation which would provide that certain eligible addicts (not including sellers or smugglers) under charges of violating criminal statutes should be given an opportunity to submit to treatment and rehabilitation in lieu of prosecution for the criminal offenses. Of course, it would be more appropriate to administer a program calling for compulsory civil commitment of narcotic addicts for treatment and rehabilitation prior to the time they are apprehended for their criminal activities. This is a program the Bureau has urged upon States for many years.

As previously pointed out, the Bureau does not concentrate its efforts on making possession-type cases against narcotic addicts. The enforcement effort of the Bureau is directed against the international and the interstate traffickers. In fact, 85 to 90 percent of the defendants prosecuted in the U.S. district courts for narcotic violations involve the illegal sale or smuggling of narcotics. Of the remaining 10 to 15 percent of cases which involve possession of narcotics, the quantities indicate clearly that the defendant is a trafficker and not merely an addict in possession of his own supply. Moreover, approximately 60 percent of the defendants reported by the Bureau of Narcotics for prosecution are not addicted.

We completely repudiate the accusation in the report of the Academy of Medicine that the Bureau of Narcotics " * * * frowns upon all other modes of treatment," and we emphatically disclaim that our policies have " * * * held back progress in the conquest of addiction." We have not developed a stereotype policy which precludes medical judgment and flexibility. We have not dictated the proper practice of medicine and have not insisted on unsound treatment. We have endeavored to adjust our enforcement functions so as to avoid interference with, or harassment of any reputable physician who dispenses or prescribes narcotics: (1) To a person for the legitimate relief of acute pain; (2) To an aged or infirm person with addiction of long standing whose collapse and death might result from withdrawal of the narcotic; or (3) To a patient in the course of bona fide treatment for addiction.

In establishing the standards for such terms as "legitimate medical purposes," "course of professional treatment," and "good faith," we have been guided by the numerous pronouncements of such responsible medical groups as the American Medical Association and the National Research Council. It would appear that the New York Academy of Medicine is not in harmony with the joint statement of the AMA-NRC, but the academy apparently feels that the Bureau of Narcotics (which is in accord with the views of the AMA-NRC) is a more vulnerable target to attack.

As previously stated, we do support the position that addicts are proper subjects for medical treatment. However, the term "treatment" is accepted by the Bureau of Narcotics to mean, as generally interpreted, that which is designed to cure. Maintenance, such as that proposed by the authors of the academy's report could hardly be considered as a "cure." Such a plan of rationing narcotics to addicts on a regular and continual basis does not solve the fundamental problems which caused the addiction; it will not do away with the social, medical, and economic factors underlying addiction; it will not solve the addict's personality difference; and we have no data supporting a view that by giving addicts adequate supplies of narcotics, they would then stop their antisocial behavior and become useful, law-abiding, and productive citizens. Such an approach constitutes recognition that drug addiction is to be tolerated and, consequently, inevitably increased, representing a surrender to an evil which is unacceptable and repugnant to the moral principles of our people.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 837

The position of the Bureau of Narcotics has been supported by several intensive examinations by committees created for the purpose of reviewing and promoting this country's program of combating drug addiction. The two reports of the Interdepartmental Committee on Narcotics to the President of the United States, dated February 1956 and January 1961, concluded that addicts should be rehabilitated toward resuming a useful place in our society without dependence on narcotic drugs.

During 1955, a Senate Subcommittee on Improvement in the Federal Criminal Code pursuant to Senate Resolution 67 and Senate Resolution 166, the 84th Congress, invited the Nation's foremost authorities on drug addiction to attend a special hearing devoted exclusively to an intensive examination of the methods and facilities for treating and rehabilitating drug addicts. The 27 expert witnesses presented more than 2,000 pages of supporting material, and more than 1,000 pages of testimony. Following the hearing, the subcommittee reported that it was "unalterably opposed to * * * the 'clinic plan' proposed for supplying narcotic addicts with free or low-cost narcotic drugs.

This same conclusion was reached by the Subcommittee on Narcotics of the House Committee on Ways and Means in a report released May 10, 1956. The subcommittee reported " * * * treatment of drug addiction must be carried out in a drug-free environment, which makes institutional care essential." Additionally, the subcommittee reported " * * * that any attempt to treat drug addiction in any other manner, such as the currently suggested ambulatory means [clinic plan], is doomed to failure."

On September 27 and 28, 1962, a White House Conference on Narcotic and Drug Abuse was held in Washington, D.C. In a report of an Ad Hoc Panel on Drug Abuse submitted to the Conference, this panel agreed " * * * that ambulatory treatment for the addict population as a whole is unpromising and dangerous."

MAINTENANCE DOSAGE

The authors of the academy report would permit certain persons to receive narcotic drugs from physicians purely to sustain and gratify the person's appetite for the drugs. The idea of clinics to dispense narcotics to addicts is nothing new or novel in this country. From 1919 to 1925, clinics operated in 44 communities throughout the United States. However, they were finally abandoned on the advice of the most competent medical men of that era. They recognized one incontrovertible fact—addicts breed new addicts. Association of non-addicted persons with addicts is the primary triggering cause for drug addiction, regardless of the underlying sociological and psychological deficiencies.

It is our belief that drug addiction has many features of an infectious disease. It has been determined by competent authority that addicts have a desire to involve nonaddicts—a perverse inner need to turn their self-destructive drives against those around them. We are opposed to a program which would provide a segment of our population with a socially approved pharmacological crutch so they can continue to avoid personal responsibility, and to permit them to mingle with a population which includes a significant number of potential addicts looking for a similar method of escape from the pressures of reality. Moreover, we have found to be erroneous the idea that a man on continual injections of narcotics will try to function in a manner contributory to society. The addict, whether he is in the lowest depths of humanity or a person held in high esteem by his fellow men, lives only for one thing—his habit; when he is not experiencing his pharmacological oblivion to reality, he is looking forward to his next shot of narcotics. What possible position of trust or responsibility could be given to such a person whose objective is to do as he pleases? Also, in order to get the desired effect, the addict would need to have his dosage steadily increased because of the tolerance factor. The academy's report envisions that the majority of addicts take drugs primarily to prevent withdrawal symptoms and the majority of addicts would be content with the minimum quantity of drugs which would achieve this effect. This is doubtful. The legal outlet would become the addict's sure source of supply for all of the addict's requirements sufficient for him to experience the elusive euphoria he desires. Unless adequate drugs are furnished, the illegal traffickers will still be in demand to furnish him the excess he wants, and at prices which would still involve the addict in crime to secure money for its purchase. Even the least informed person on the question of a proper solution to the addiction problem can grasp with ease the premise that: You cannot stop taking narcotic drugs as long as you are getting them from a ready source.

838 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

BRITISH SYSTEM

The so-called British system is cited by the authors of the academy report as an example of the successful approach to maintenance dosage levels. The academy attacks Dr. Granville W. Larimore and Dr. Henry Brill, the authors of a report to Governor Nelson Rockefeller on a study of the British narcotic system. The academy of medicine chose to belittle the report of two eminent experts who are physicians specializing in mental health, and instead accepted a paper prepared by E. M. Schur, an assistant professor of sociology at Tufts University, who earned his doctorate on his study of the so-called British plan. We cannot dismiss so lightly the persuasive report of Dr. Larimore and Dr. Brill.

It should be remembered, however, that England never had a narcotic problem such as that of the United States beginning at the turn of the century when it was estimated there were 200,000 addicts. In the United States, the majority of addicts are described as "street addicts," the individuals who, in about 75 percent of the cases, were involved in prior criminal activity and who became addicted while in search of "kicks." England, on the other hand, has reported the "medical addict"—the person who became addicted as a result of treatment for a chronic illness or one of long, painful duration. They are completely different subjects for study.

One point we question from our experience is the claim that addicts who are maintained on narcotics live a useful and productive life. Physicians who have made such studies have found very little evidence to support such a theory. A case in point is the celebrated report of Dr. Larimore and Dr. Brill, who maintain the situation in England is vastly different from our own, and who have concluded that the so-called British system would not work in the United States. The Larimore-Brill report concludes that the English have a definite abhorrence of narcotic drug use, which has become incorporated into their mores and culture; that, in the epidemiology of drug addiction, England does not have the same susceptible individuals.

Before coming to any hasty conclusion that the British system is a magic panacea, it should be remembered that the same laws which govern narcotics in England are also in effect in the British crown colony of Hong Kong, where a serious narcotic problem exists. According to estimates released by Hong Kong officials 5 years ago there were approximately as many addicts in Hong Kong as there were in the United States at the turn of the century.

HAS PROHIBITORY APPROACH FAILED?

The academy's report connotes that since there is still drug addiction in the United States, the existing program has failed. This is answered simply by looking at the general decrease in addiction since the inception of the prohibitory approach.

Since enactment of the Harrison Narcotic Act in 1914, the record clearly indicates the incidence of drug addiction has been reduced from 1 in 400 to 1 in 4,000 persons. If the pre-Harrison Act estimated rate had continued unabated to the present time, we would now have 425,000 narcotic addicts. Instead, we now have an estimated 60,000 addicts in the United States. This is conservatively estimated to represent at least a 60-percent reduction in the estimated rate of addiction since enactment of the prohibition approach. It should also be noted that this downward trend in addiction has continued during periods of social unrest, migration, and poverty, and during a time when there has been a fourfold increase in the Nation's general crime rate.

Also, since enactment of the Boggs-Daniel Control Act of 1956, there has been an almost steady decrease in the number of new addicts being reported each year. Even more significant, perhaps, is the fact that heroin found on the street has been greatly adulterated. Equally as encouraging is the report of the President's ad hoc panel which stated that addicts being encountered in the institutions today do not undergo the classic withdrawal symptoms so prevalent a decade ago. There is no question about the fact that in many communities where a tremendous addiction problem existed, addiction has been reduced to an absolute minimum, and at the present time the major concentration of addicts is in less than 10 cities of the United States.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 839

SUMMARY

The report of the New York Academy of Medicine contains no new solution or thinking in the field of handling drug addicts. The report is based primarily upon commonly known selected material written by individuals who have long advocated repudiation of the existing prohibitory approach. Other materials, vital to the study, have been deemed to be of no significance. By the very nature of the material, by its extremely acrimonious attack of the Bureau of Narcotics, and by the failure to recognize as valid any other materials expressing opposite views, it appears that the authors of the academy's report were predisposed to minimize the efforts of the narcotic enforcement program and to propose the distribution of narcotics to addicts under the guise of "legitimate medical practice."

The important question is whether the plans of the academy would achieve their objective. Would they eliminate or reduce addiction? Would they eliminate the crime associated with addiction? Would they actually eliminate the narcotic traffic, or would the plans only make things worse and spread addiction?

We are not impressed by the argument that addiction is spread chiefly by deliberate proselyting of new addicts by peddlers to expand the illicit traffic markets. Recent epidemiological studies indicate that addiction spreads from person to person, with drugs being supplied to the neophyte by an addict. Making drugs readily available from legitimate sources will enhance the spread of addiction.

The claim that the enforcement methods snare only the minor violators is completely refuted by the cases which have been presented by the Bureau of Narcotics for prosecution. The enforcement efforts of the Bureau of Narcotics have been the subject of commendations by high government authorities and by various police officials throughout the world. The best evidence reveals that there has been a reduction of the incidence of addiction in the United States since enactment of stringent narcotic control measures.

There is no basis in fact for the comments of the academy that the Bureau of Narcotics has defied court decisions and will not allow physicians to treat addicts. The Bureau of Narcotics states most emphatically that there is nothing in the Federal narcotic laws or regulations which prohibits a physician from treating an addict. The Supreme Court has ruled that dispensing of large amounts of narcotics to addicts without efforts to cure the addict is not proper professional practice. No decision has ever held otherwise. The American Medical Association and the National Research Council have, in a sense, defined "professional practice" in their joint statements condemning any system of treatment which places drugs in the hands of addicts for self-administration. These interpretations in no way prohibit efforts at treatment of addicts—they only limit the way in which treatment may be carried out. If a physician furnishes narcotic drugs to an addict "in the course of professional practice only," he is acting within the limits imposed by the law and regulation.

It is almost incredible that the authors of the academy report accuse the Bureau of Narcotics of advocating the so-called cold turkey method of withdrawal. This is simply not true and needs no further discussion.

Statements such as "addicts are not criminals but emotionally sick people" should not be completely accepted without qualification. We believe that many addicts are proper subjects for treatment and rehabilitative methods. Some of them may even be suitable persons to be extended leniency by prescribing a compulsory course of treatment rather than criminal sanctions. However, we cannot overlook the fact that gross psychotic disturbances are found among addicts. Many of them definitely are the aggressive, antisocial, and hedonistic individuals who could be characterized as having criminal traits. In fact it has been established quite conclusively that three out of four addicts had experienced criminal aberrations preceding their active entry on the illicit narcotic scene. Moreover, we do not see any reason for affording leniency to a person who causes another to become addicted or to a seller or smuggler of narcotics simply because he happens to be an addict.

840 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Supplying addicts with drugs on a maintenance dosage level will not reduce the traffic and certainly will not encourage those persons to strive for a more normal existence. Psychiatrists, who are experienced in managing addicts, doubt that there would be any great success in persuading addicts to undergo withdrawal and to engage in psychotherapy as long as drugs are available to them. In fact, a large majority of addicts are poorly motivated for treatment and any plan of furnishing maintenance dosage levels would encompass nearly all of the addict population. Moreover, the basically hostile and antisocial psychopaths would continue their criminal activities regardless of whether they are getting drugs from a physician or from an illicit trafficker. The American Medical Association and the National Research Council consider as inadequate and medically unsound the proposition that addicts be maintained on stable dosage levels.

The so-called British system could not operate effectively in the United States. Whether there are persons who could lead a useful and relatively normal life under the constant influence of narcotic drugs is certainly a matter for debate. There are several factors which the proponents of such a plan fail to take into account. There are substantial differences in England's racial composition, the migration, attitudes, cultures, social unrest, economy, mores, and social traditions which all play a very important part in the situation.

I am convinced beyond all doubt that the controls this country has placed over narcotics have greatly mitigated the problem. I abhor the thought of what the addiction problem might be in this country today if we had no legal control over narcotics. We must heed the lessons of history.

[Bulletin on Narcotics, v. 14, No. 2: Apr. 11-June 18, 1962]

CONTROL AND TREATMENT OF DRUG ADDICTS IN ISRAEL

(By Z. W. Jermulowicz, M.D., district psychiatrist, Tel Aviv district, and director of Government hospital for mental patients, Bat-Yam and Mag. A. Turnau, district pharmacist, Tel Aviv and central districts, Ministry of Health)

In the Western cultural sphere the problem of alcohol-containing beverages has constituted a major social factor for many hundreds of years. In view of the special effect of alcohol it is customarily served at social gatherings in order to raise the spirits of those assembled. This effect of removing psychological inhibitions and raising one's spirits entrains certain psychological problems in that weaker characters tend again and again to resort to alcohol and thus become alcoholics.

The main psychological factors leading to this state of affairs are:

- (a) The desire to overcome feelings of lack of security and inferiority;
- (b) The desire to suppress or mute feelings of guilt or neurotic anxieties;
- (c) The desire to forget personal worries and escape from the world of hard reality to a happier and more pleasant world of the imagination;
- (d) Sometimes also certain states of depression.

Accordingly, addiction to alcohol in all countries of Western culture is very widespread, while drug addiction is relatively less frequent, and is restricted mainly to people who became addicted as a result of physical illness or to certain bohemian circles in search of special stimulation as well as, to a certain extent, to members of the underworld, especially sexually perverted psychopaths (homosexuals, etc.).

Among the Muslim peoples, whose religion forbids the use of alcohol, the various intoxicating drugs constitute the same social factor as does alcohol among Western peoples. The psychological causes leading to habituation or addiction to drugs are similar to those mentioned with respect to alcohol. In the Far East the use of opium was until recently still very common. In the Middle Eastern countries the use of opium and hashish is almost as common, whereas in Egypt the most widely used drug is hashish, while opium is used to a lesser extent. It should be pointed out that the Jews living in these countries adapted themselves to the prevailing habits and customs (although the Jewish religion does not proscribe the use of alcohol). Many Jews acquired the habit of using drugs, especially hashish and opium, in their country of origin at an early age. Naturally they continue using these drugs day in, day out, even after their immigration to Israel.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 841

In Palestine, during the period of the British mandate until the end of the war of liberation of 1948, neither drugs nor alcohol constituted a social or medical problem among the Jewish population. Indeed there were some Jews, especially from among the locally born, who jointly with the Arabs smuggled drugs, especially from Syria to Egypt. Among these there were some who themselves used drugs. This collaboration continued undisturbed even during the Arab anti-Jewish riots. During the Second World War the smuggling of drugs increased considerably with the aid of soldiers of the various armies at that time stationed in the country and deriving a rich source of income from this activity.

On the establishment of the State of Israel in 1948, the Department of Pharmacy was set up within the Ministry of Health, headed by the chief pharmacist. In 1949 the three district pharmacists were appointed to assist the chief pharmacist in his various functions. They started to carry out the systematic supervision of the use of dangerous drugs. Thus the drug addicts who received their drugs through doctors' prescriptions and pharmacies were discovered.

The duties of the district pharmacies include control of the stock of intoxicating drugs in private and public pharmacies, pharmaceutical factories, hospitals, and drug supply departments. This control comprises prescriptions for such drugs and the keeping of special registers, as well as the actual stock inventory (including particulars of production, consumption, and losses). The pharmacists in Israel submit regular reports to the district pharmacists on the repeated use of intoxicating drugs by a given patient. At the health offices a card index is kept on such cases, including the name of the patient, his address, the names of the physicians who wrote the prescriptions, the kind and quantity of the drugs and the dates at which they were taken, as well as the diagnosis of the disease. Every drug addict sent to a hospital to be cured of his addiction is registered at the Pharmacy Department of the Ministry of Health, where all the data of the Ministry of Health concerning the use and production of intoxicating drugs and of registered drug addicts are concentrated. Physicians and persons belonging to various medical professions were discovered who were themselves drug addicts. Prescriptions which had been forged by drug addicts were found, and both doctors and pharmacists were discovered who supplied these wretched people with drugs for large sums of money. Some of the drug addicts were hospitalized in mental hospitals which did not dispose of special departments for their cure. With the establishment of the State on May 15, 1948, and the mass immigration from the Arab countries, the use of drugs steadily increased, so that the problem of drug addiction started to assume serious proportions in Israel. No appropriate means were available to overcome the problem. Hospital facilities for drug addicts were extremely limited owing to the shortage of beds in mental hospitals and the lack of a special institution dealing with the cure of drug addiction. Those addicts who succeeded in being hospitalized were kept together with mental patients. This caused a strong resistance against the very idea of hospitalization among part of the addicts. At the beginning of 1950 the first drug addicts from Middle Eastern countries were admitted to Israel mental hospitals. In the course of that year several such new immigrants were hospitalized who used opium, while one of them was addicted to injections of morphine. At a later period a further dozen or so of drug addicts were hospitalized, including two physicians and two nurses. Until 1953 about 70 drug addicts were registered at the various health offices in Israel which applied to us for help. The overwhelming majority were medical cases; namely, people who had become used to taking drugs in the course of a physical illness. Until then only a few of those whose source of supply came from the underworld (i.e., all those who obtained the drugs through smuggling and illegal trade) had applied to us. When they did come they were in a state of serious physical and mental breakdown, so that immediate assistance was essential. From all the above it transpires that the number of known drug addicts until that time was still limited. Since immediate hospitalization, as required in most cases, was impossible owing to the shortage of hospital beds, and so as to help the drug addicts themselves and save them as well as their families from economic disaster, in 1952 the Ministry of Health, after profound deliberation, decided to allocate to these addicts drugs at official prices through the district health offices until they could be hospitalized. The physician of the health office issued an appropriate prescription—in particular for morphine injections—to the addict, and the district pharmacist linked him to a certain pharmacy from which he could obtain his drugs.

842 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

This arrangement prevented the drug addicts from being exploited by criminal suppliers of drugs, thus saving them from impoverishment, moral deterioration, and the ruin of their families, as stated above. It may be said that the method of official allocations served a vital function and achieved the goals we had set ourselves with respect to addicts who did not belong to the criminal underworld. In the course of time, however, when drug addicts belonging to this underworld started using this system to their advantage, the method proved to be a failure. In view of the large gap between the official price of drugs, especially ampoules, and their price on the black market, which was 20 times the official rate, there is serious ground to suspect that the drugs allocated by us were sold by some of the drug addicts at a high price, for part of which they then bought unrefined opium or hashish.

From 1953 onward, a steady stream of drug addicts from the underworld started applying to us, pretending they were anxious to be cured while well knowing that we did not dispose of sufficient hospital space. Their sole purpose was to receive from us an allocation of drugs. Not only did they exaggerate their own demands, but they also sent us drug peddlers who simulated addiction so as to obtain drugs for purposes of trade and sale. These people used every means at their disposal to achieve their ends and obtain as large a quantity of drugs as possible. They did not hesitate to raise a scandal, to threaten the employees of the health office with knives, etc. It became a dangerous job to work at the health offices, to the extent that it was hardly possible to carry out the work properly and a constant police guard was required. The number of drug addicts registered at the various health offices constantly grew, soon reaching about 200 in number. A further unfavorable effect of the official allocation of drugs was that people who had hitherto used only opium started going over to morphine injections, a more severe and acute form of addiction. In the light of these grave developments the factors concerned, psychiatrists, the staff of the Health Ministry, public attorneys, a representative of the prison authorities and senior police officers, convened for urgent consultation. In the course of these conferences the general opinion was reached that a special institution for the treatment of drug addicts was required.

On the proposal of one of the present authors¹ it was decided to open a special department of 20 beds for the cure of drug addicts at the Government Hospital for Mental Patients at Bat Yam. The preparation for the opening of this department lasted from the end of December 1955 until May 1, 1956. In the interim stage until the registered drug addicts could be hospitalized the method of providing drug addicts with injections at certain hospitals was substituted for the system used hitherto of supplying them with the drugs. The addicts had to appear twice or three times every 24 hours at the hospital in order to get their injection. A considerable number of addicts from the underworld absolutely refused to be weaned of their addiction in hospital, when their allocation of drugs was of course immediately stopped. The decision to open a special department for the cure of drug addicts was a major fundamental turning point in the handling of the problem. The implementation of the decision, the formation and the management of the department were entrusted to the director of the Government Hospital for Mental Patients in Bat Yam. It was a difficult and daring venture for a man who lacked experience in the organization and running of a department of this kind. From the start it became obvious that the functions of this department were much wider than those of an ordinary psychiatric ward, and that weaning as such constitutes only one of the tasks, and not even the main one, of a department of this kind. We considered it our duty to assist the patients in making up for their defective education, to teach them a trade and care for their rehabilitation. Moreover, we intended to care for the transfer of the cured addicts and their families to new and healthier surroundings. We imagined that most cases would be new immigrants, and that even where they had been living in the country for a number of years they had not become sufficiently integrated into the social environment of Israel. We considered it part of the function of the department to bring them closer to Hebrew culture, to teach them our language, etc. We therefore applied to the Ministry of Education to set up a small seminar for the study of Hebrew at the department to include lessons in Hebrew and lectures on the geography, history, and culture of the country, etc. Two special courses were set up for the vocational training of addicts, one of which was for home maintenance, including plumbing and general repairs. The intention was that people without trade qualifications would, after leaving our institution, be able to make a living for themselves and their families. It was agreed with the Ministry of Labor that suitable certificates be issued on completion of the course, enabling the cured addicts to find adequate work at their place of living or elsewhere, and that they be provided with bicycles and tools so as to facilitate their rehabilitation. It was obvious to us that we would not be able to keep these people at our institution for any length of time unless we provided a minimum livelihood for their families. The Ministry of Welfare promised financial support to the families of the hospitalized addicts in the same amount as allocated by the local welfare departments, as well as support and constructive aid to convalescents. The staff of the department was expanded, and in addition to a physician, a social worker and a psychologist were engaged. Considering goals we had set ourselves it was clear that the period of hospitalization should be at least 1 year.

¹ Dr. Z. W. Jermulowicz.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 843

In view of the prevailing state of affairs at the health offices and the special circumstances of the period as compared with the small number of beds available, we decided to limit the average period of hospitalization to no more than half a year. Unfortunately, we were not able even to keep up with this reduced demand, so that the average stay in hospital did not exceed 3 months.

One of the most serious problems we had to face during the preparatory period was the creation of an appropriate character and atmosphere for the department. Our goals were to a certain extent contradictory: on the one hand we wanted to assure strict adequate control of the patients, while on the other we intended to give them the greatest possible freedom of movement. As regards external circumstances the problem was easily solved. We set up the department in a separate pavilion which was closed on the outside, but provided full freedom of action and movement inside. The patients had at their disposal a spacious dining room, a dayroom which also served for group gatherings, a wireless set, a large number of newspapers and journals, a small special library, various games, including table tennis and sports appliances. We realized that even under such circumstances we would not be able to keep physically healthy and mentally alert people locked up for any length of time within the narrow confines of the department. We tried to provide the patients, under the supervision of male nurses, with suitable amusement such as trips to the sea in summer, short trips, and from time to time visits to the cinema or theater. While prior to the opening of the department the main stress had been laid on increasing the number of the personnel, we soon realized that physical force alone would hardly enable us to keep under control 20 or 30 people who mostly came from the underworld, with a criminal record and well versed in the use of both fists and knives. It is doubtful whether and to what extent even three to four times the number of staff at our disposal would have been able to maintain peace and order if such a course had been adopted. Hence from the very start we sought to create a spirit of cooperation and understanding among the patients and to a large extent relied on a system of self-government.

We set up a committee elected by the patients themselves, and indirectly tried to get some of the most difficult and undisciplined patients to sit on this committee. We were successful in establishing good relations with the patients and using the committee for our purposes. At a later period we got to such a stage that regardless of the number of male attendants, the committee maintained law and order and enforced the various rules and regulations on which it had resolved by itself with our consent and under our influence. It was customary for the patients' committee to receive each new addict on admission. The members of the committee persuaded him to obtain the required regulations at the department, to give his consent thereto and of his own free will to sign a pledge that he would stay at the institution for the period deemed necessary by the attendant physician. When after a certain time patients had to be given a short home leave, the members of the committee subjected them to a careful physical examination after their return to prevent drugs being smuggled into the hospital, the function of the nurses being merely to supervise such search. It happened that a patient did not return from home leave in time and then the members of the committee (who regarded themselves personally responsible for any leave granted) of their own initiative went to the man's home, accompanied by a sanitary officer, and returned him to hospital. At a joint meeting with the physician they also decided on punishments to be meted out for any breach of order or discipline which might have occurred. The most severe form of punishment consisted of a temporary transfer to another ordinary closed psychiatric ward. The committee was likewise responsible for the execution of the punishment. In this way we managed to avoid any serious outbursts or disturbances. While a certain number of patients did escape, they usually returned of their own free will within a couple of hours.

844 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

THE TREATMENT OF DRUG ADDICTS AT THE DEPARTMENT

It was decided from the first that drug addicts should be transferred to their own special ward only after termination of the first stage of physical weaning under strict control in an ordinary closed ward together with psychotic patients. This arrangement yielded excellent results. In their desire to be transferred as soon as possible to their own special ward, which seemed much more pleasant and convenient, the addicts tried to cooperate even during this preliminary period of weaning. Our method was at once to discontinue the administration of drugs including sodium pentobarbital, right from the moment of admission. This was successful in the overwhelming majority of cases (95 percent). Only in some cases, where the patients suffered from a heart condition or disturbances of the blood vessels or where their physical condition was extremely poor, the use of drugs had to be stopped gradually over a period of several days. In some cases which had been used to large doses of sodium pentobarbital over a prolonged period of time, a sudden stoppage of the administration of this drug brought an epileptic attack after 10 to 14 days and hence we went over to a method of gradual discontinuation of this drug. As is known from the literature, a sudden stoppage of the administration of sodium pentobarbital might cause slight delirium, especially at night, which passes after several hours. In our practice, however, we have not encountered this phenomenon. In the course of our treatment it was noted that the symptoms of physical weaning were very slight in our patients, and sometimes lasted no more than a few days. It should be noted that among the long-habituated addicts who had been used to large doses over many years there were several who underwent the period of weaning without any physical symptoms whatsoever. The average time spent by the addicts in the closed psychiatric ward did not exceed a fortnight, and only a few of them spent up to 3 weeks in that ward. Our success as regards physical weanings is to our mind largely due to the use of Largactyl (Thorazin). This preparation was administered to our patients from the first day of hospitalization, and the dose was rapidly increased from 150 mg. to an average of 400-500 mg. per day. It is to be assumed that, thanks to the use of Largactyl, the vegetative symptoms of weaning (such as diarrhea, abdominal pains, colds, etc.) which in the past had been so obstinate, became surprisingly slight in our department. We are still able to recollect cases where the vegetative symptoms of weaning lasted in acute form from 20 days to several months. Now these symptoms appear in a slight form for 2 or 3 days, and slightly longer in rare cases. Only in one patient, an addict of long standing aged about 60 who also suffered from severe diabetes and vascular disturbances, the signs lasted about 3 weeks. We have learned that the abdominal pains are to a large extent psychogenic and that one single injection, even of aqua distillata, is sufficient to provide relief as long as the patient is convinced he received a morphine injection.

As against the physical weaning symptoms, the psychological symptoms were more protracted and expressed themselves in stress and internal unrest that lasted for several weeks. Maximum stress was noted during the third week of hospitalization, when the addicts used every possible means, sometimes even force, to try to obtain the drugs they craved for. They resorted to every possible trick—either by attempting to obtain leave or otherwise as far as actual escape from hospital—to fulfill their craving. During this period they complained of various symptoms: ringing of the ears, headaches, general weakness, rheumatic pains, etc. Most of these physical signs were represented as a repetition of symptoms from which they had suffered in the past. After the termination of the physical weaning stage, the medical work at the drug addicts' department consisted mainly of psychotherapy—i.e., talks with the patients. Apart from regular group sessions the physician in charge of the department spent almost his entire day in talks with individual patients, the patients' committee and their families. It was found that a separation between administrative and psychotherapeutic functions was desirable. The physician engaged on psychotherapeutic tasks should not concern himself with administrative matters, since this interferes with medical treatment and the required spirit of understanding and cooperation between doctor and patient. It should be pointed out that these numerous talks, mostly based on persuasion, gave surprisingly good results.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 845

Even though the psychological complexes of the patients were not resolved from a psychoanalytic point of view, a "group super ego" was formed. A favorable therapeutic atmosphere was created which was greatly enjoyed by the patients, who were extremely proud of their cooperation with the medical staff. Under this favorable atmosphere even neurotics calmed down and left our institution in a satisfactory and stable mental state. To quote an example: a young man of about 30, an invalid of the war of liberation, who suffered from severe feelings of guilt because he had caused his younger brother to come to Israel contrary to the wishes of his parents—where he fell in the war of liberation. During the first months of hospitalization this patient caused a great deal of difficulty. He was riddled with doubts as to the value of our treatment and failed to cooperate. At the beginning of his period of hospitalization he tried in despair to commit suicide. After being made a member of the patients' committee and taking an active share in the work of the department he gradually calmed down and left our institution in a satisfactory and stable mental condition. He has been working for several years as a clerk, to the satisfaction of his superiors, and to the best of our knowledge no longer uses drugs. Another case is that of a patient, likewise about 30 years old, a native of the country, who owing to a severe and complicated heart condition which he contracted after his release from the army spent many months in the internal departments of various hospitals, where he became addicted to pantopon. When he needed the drug he entered a state of excitation followed by conditions of asthma cardiac. This patient had learned to use the psychosomatic mechanism in order to provoke serious attacks of asthma, thus forcing us to administer pantopon injections even during his period of hospitalization at the department. We regarded him as a lost case as far as a cure from addiction was concerned, and during an attack transferred him to a general hospital, where he stayed for some time and continued to receive drugs. A week after his release from the general hospital he applied to us again, asking once more for hospitalization. Despite our misgivings we agreed. This time he showed full cooperation, took part in the work of the patients' committee, calmed down generally and was weaned of his craving for drugs.

So far 274 drug addicts have been hospitalized at the department, of whom 106 were recidivists. Thanks to the activities of our department we were able to stop the supply of drugs to addicts by the health offices, thus putting an end to the trading with these drugs and the cheating connected therewith. Now that most of the addicts registered at the health offices have undergone curative treatment and the health offices no longer supply such drugs, the pressure on the department has decreased, so that the average number of addicts hospitalized at present does not exceed more than four or six people at a time. Whenever a patient was released from our institution we endeavored to maintain an adequate followup treatment. The addict was invited for repeat examinations at an outpatient clinic attached to the Bat Yam hospital. It should be pointed out that only the more positive elements maintained contact with us over a longer period of time for purposes of medical control; others used to appear from time to time to obtain various kinds of social aid. The majority disappeared immediately or after a short time and were seen no more. The means at our disposal did not enable us to trace addicts who had discontinued their contacts with us. It is intended to improve contacts with ex-addicts who have left our institution, through public social nurses. At present we are expanding the services of the outpatient department attached to the Bat Yam hospital, which will assist in the accomplishment of the more comprehensive followup aimed at.

THE EXPERIENCE OF THE DRUG ADDICTS DEPARTMENT

Our experience in the treatment of drug addicts has taught us that the most toxic drug of these used in Israel is pethidine, which is manufactured locally under the name "Dolestine." In addition to all the symptoms of drug addiction it also provokes a toxic stimulation of the brain. When used for an extended period of time (1 year to a year and a half) this toxic reaction leads to epileptic seizures. In some of the pethidine addicts it was these seizures which drew attention to their disease and led to their hospitalization. The relatively least serious among the drugs used in Israel is hashish. The number of cases who require psychiatric treatment owing to the use of this drug is so small (less than one per thousand of hashish smokers) that it might be said that it does not constitute a medical problem in Israel. It was noted that in the overwhelming majority of cases, hashish does not lead to addiction at all; nor does it produce signs of a "hunger," or craving after the drug. At the same time it is regarded as a kind of preparatory breeding ground for the use of other, more dangerous drugs.

846 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

It was noted that drug addicts of a higher standard of culture and intelligence (physicians, nurses, etc.) who appreciate the risks involved in the use of drugs and try to subsist on minimum doses, as far as possible avoiding any increase in the amount, have succeeded in continuing their work for many years without any serious hindrance. On the other hand we have found that primitive people of psychopathic character and a low standard of intelligence constantly increased the dose in a childish attempt to obtain the maximum pleasure. They furthermore tend to take the next dose before the effect of the previous one has worn off, in an exaggerated fear of the symptoms of drug "hunger." In this way they incur both physical deterioration and economic ruin within the short space of 1 to 1½ years. This was the state in which most addicts reached our institution. Most of them used to inject themselves intravenously with two ampoules of 0.02 gram each of morphine every 3 to 4 hours, and some even more. The average dose reached by the morphine addicts hospitalized in our department ranged from 8 to 12 ampoules of 0.02 gram morphine each per 24 hours. Some even exceeded this amount. Obviously, with such an exaggerated use of drugs, the addicts' entire care and attention was devoted to securing a sufficient supply of drugs, so as to avoid reaching a state of "hunger." In this state they are prepared to commit any and every act of forgery or theft, including breaking into pharmacies so as to obtain their drugs.

While we were successful in the physical weaning of the hospitalized addicts, we were less successful in the reeducation and rehabilitation of the patients. The reason for this lay in the fact that 98.5 percent were of clearly psychopathic character, of whom 90 percent were primitive people with the lowest possible standard of education, about 80 percent stemming from the underworld. Forty-three people reported being without a profession. These were obviously underworld characters, many of them pimps and brothelkeepers with a rich criminal past who had been imprisoned more than a dozen times for various offenses, both in Israel and abroad.

However, even those who presented themselves as belonging to various trades (port workers, tailors, porters, electricians, etc.) usually engaged only partly in their actual trade, being in one measure or another connected with the underworld. The most difficult to handle from an educational point of view were the unqualified illiterates who in their country of origin had become used to opium since the age of adolescence (16 to 18). Some of them had been using this drug for 20 to 30 years. Especially among the underworld characters there were many who were completely disinterested in learning a trade. Some of them earned a considerable amount of money without doing any work, as pimps. In people of this kind it is naturally difficult to awaken the desire to learn a trade or do any productive work whatsoever. Another sector that presented difficulties were those over the age of 45, who had never done any creative work in all their lives. Even in their country of origin they had been peddlers and the like, and were not prepared to change their way of life. A third much smaller group were those who did not need any vocational rehabilitation (doctors, nurses, clerks, a writer, etc.). It is encouraging to note that the patients did not include a single adolescent, either from among working youth or students.

THE RESULTS OF THE TREATMENT

A year after the concentrated effort at stopping the allocation of drugs by the health offices we were still convinced that we had achieved a stable cure of close to 20 percent of all hospitalized cases. About a year and a half after the treatment we still estimated the percentage at 15 percent. From then on this rate started to decline rapidly, and by now, after about 5 years have elapsed, we may state with certainty that those who have failed to relapse constitute no more than 2 to 3 percent.

CONCLUSIONS

It was found that a special department for drug addicts within the scope of a general mental hospital constitutes a disturbing and foreign element within the hospital.

The treatment of drug addicts requires an extremely strict discipline and general approach. This contradicts the liberal attitude prevailing at present in mental hospitals with respect to psychotic patients. It is obviously extremely difficult to adopt a twofold policy in one and the same hospital. Keeping the difficult human material represented by drug addicts from the underworld within the framework of a hospital ward, with all the dangers involved (organized breakouts, escapes, smuggling of drugs, attacks on female patients, etc.) constitutes a constant physical and mental strain for the entire personnel. The running of such a department constitutes a constant source of worry for everyone concerned at the hospital. It was felt that we were unable to maintain it permanently in the form given to the ward during the period of the "antidrug campaign" when a concentrated effort was made to stop the allocation of drugs. A further conclusion was that the treatment of drug addicts of a psychopathic character requires a hospitalization period of from 3 to 5 years in special institutions. The actual hospital is able to carry out merely the first phase of treatment (physical withdrawal and diagnosis of the personality in a mental hospital for a period of 4 to 6 weeks). Afterward drug addicts should be dealt with according to the psychological findings, according to which they divide into:

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 847

(a) Those whose chances of treatment of any kind are very slight in view of their severely antisocial psychopathic character. In case of any clash with the law their place is in prison.

(b) The large majority of drug addicts of psychopathic character who after a period of physical weaning should be transferred to a special institution of the nature of a work camp or a farm, far removed from any major community. There they should be kept under strict supervision by court order for a period of 3 to 5 years or for an unlimited period of time, with a possibility of release at the decision of a legal psychiatric commission.

(c) A small group of people, including members of the free professions and particularly those who became addicted as a result of physical illness. These should stay in hospital for a protracted period for both physical and psychological treatment. These include clearly neurotic cases which require psychotherapy that should be continued on an ambulatory basis also after their release from hospital for a prolonged period.

It is well known that the results of treatment against drug addiction are far from satisfactory all over the world. They are all the more disappointing in Israel, where apart from the small department at the hospital for mental patients in Bat Yam there are no other alternative institutions whatsoever for the treatment of persons of psychopathic character in general and drug addicts in particular. It is therefore obvious that curative action in Israel is quantitatively extremely restricted and that for these reasons the time of treatment is likewise limited. Consequently, therapeutical medical activities are confined mainly to physical withdrawal and superficial brief psychotherapeutic treatment. In the overwhelming majority of cases there is no possibility of providing basic psychotherapeutical treatment or proper reeducation. It is thus clear that all our efforts must be directed toward stopping the spread of the evil of drug addiction and its prevention.

THE USE OF THE VARIOUS DRUGS IN ISRAEL

This country has always constituted a transit route for the traffic of drugs among the neighboring countries. Smuggling of the various drugs through Palestine is a regular occurrence, and part of these drugs remain in the country for local use. Among the drugs employed by the addicts registered with us the first place is taken by hashish, followed by opium, heroin, morphine, and pethidine. We have not met with any cocaine addicts.

Cases of addiction to amphetamine are very rare. Throughout the years we have encountered only three or four such cases. Lately the use of sodium pentobarbital tablets has become widespread. It serves as an addition to other drugs and as a substitute for other more expensive drugs which are sometimes difficult to obtain. About 45 percent of addicts used this drug in tablets of 0.1 gram up to 20 tablets per day (4 to 6 tablets at a time). It is a typical phenomenon in Israel that drug addicts from amongst the underworld use any kind of drug they can lay their hands on, from opium and morphine down to heroin and sodium pentobarbital tablets. Among those who are addicted to synthetic drugs, such as pethidine and amidone, there is a relatively high percentage of physicians and medical workers, while the members of the underworld in Israel neither know of nor use these drugs.

848 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

THE PRESENT SITUATION

At present there are some three hundred drug addicts to all the various drugs registered at the health offices in Israel. These include almost all medical cases who started using drugs as a result of a physical illness and obtain them through doctors' prescriptions (about 25 percent) as well as the members of the underworld who applied to us either in consequence of a severe crisis or were sent to us by the police or else registered at the time in order to obtain drugs at the official price. The distribution by age of the drug addicts registered at the health offices is as follows:

Age:	Percent
20 to 30.....	20
31 to 40.....	35
41 to 50.....	15
51 to 60.....	25
Over 60.....	5
Total.....	100

Among the addicts discovered in 1960 there is a shift increasing the 20- to 30-year age group to 30 percent; on the other hand the 51- to 60-year age group has decreased to about 12 percent. The number of female addicts is relatively small, not exceeding 10 percent at most, of whom about 60 percent belong to the 20- to 40-year age group.

Furthermore, about 2,200 persons are known to the Israel police, against whom police files were opened in connection with drugs in the course of the years under review. Part of these are drug peddlers, while most of them are users. This number also includes persons who smoke hashish. A number of addicts who applied or were directed to the health offices appear in the registers both of the police and the health offices, so that the total is about 2,300 to 2,400, constituting $1\frac{1}{2}$ per thousand of the total Israel population. Persons who smoke hashish are generally not registered at the health offices, but only those who are addicted to more dangerous drugs, such as opium, morphine, heroin, pethidine, etc.

In the fight against drug addiction there exists the fullest cooperation between physicians, pharmacists, and the health authorities. Whenever an addict is discovered, he is registered at the health office. His anamnesis is taken by a team consisting of the medical officer of the health office and the district pharmacist, whereupon he is transferred to the care of the district psychiatrist.

According to the Law for the Treatment of Mental Patients published in Israel in 1955, the country, from a psychiatric point of view, is divided into three zones, each headed by a district psychiatrist. The function of the district psychiatrist is to exercise control over all Government psychiatric institutions, as well as the public and private institutions, within his zone, and to provide for the required hospitalization of mental patients. He is entitled by law to hospitalize mentally sick persons even against their own will if they constitute a danger to their surroundings or to themselves. The existing law makes no mention at all of the terms "drug addict" or "drug addiction." This constitutes a major obstacle in the hospitalization of drug addicts against their will and even more so in keeping them in a closed institution for a protracted period of time otherwise than on a voluntary basis. While as long as the addict is actually intoxicated by drugs he may be regarded as a mentally sick person, this is by no means the case after the preliminary period of withdrawal. It should be noted that not a single addict has been hospitalized against his own free will at the order of the district psychiatrist. From a legal point of view a drug addict may receive treatment at any open or closed psychiatric institution or even with a private physician. Experience has shown that the treatment of drug addiction is feasible only in a closed institution and over a protracted period of hospitalization. All ambulatory treatments or treatments in open institutions have generally proved useless. Since according to the Dangerous Drugs Ordinance in force in Israel a physician is not allowed to supply dangerous drugs to a patient, and may prescribe them only for purposes of bona fide treatment, a private physician treating a drug addict might come into conflict with the law if he yields to the demands and pressure of his patient.

Since the Government Hospital for Mental Patients at Bat Yam has, since 1956, constituted the center for the treatment of drug addicts in Israel, all addicts in need of hospitalization are directed by the health offices or the other district psychiatrists to the district psychiatrist of the Tel Aviv zone which comprises the hospital in Bat Yam). The addicts are examined at the outpatients' clinic of the Bat Yam hospital either by the district psychiatrist himself or by a psychiatrist authorized for this purpose.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 849

According to this examination it is determined whether hospitalization is of immediate urgency, when the addict is admitted immediately of his own free will, or whether hospitalization may take place at a later date. Of those addicts who have so far agreed to appear for examination no one has refused to enter the hospital for treatment. Even where admission has to be postponed, no allocation of drugs is made except in isolated instances where there is a clear medical indication in this respect in view of the physical condition of the addict.

Opinions are divided as to whether the problem of drug addiction in Israel has by now passed its peak or not. Developments during the next few years will depend on the nature of immigration to the country. With increased immigration from oriental countries the number of addicts is certainly likely to increase for a certain time. On the other hand, since there is a large measure of identification among oriental youth in Israel with Jews of Western European origin and their way of life, and since drug addiction among European Jews is negligible, the risk of any large-scale spreading of drug addiction is thus eliminated. It is interesting to note that none of the children of drug addicts brought up in Israel has become addicted.

By a comprehensive control of pharmacies and doctors' prescriptions, practically all medical cases of drug addiction are known to us, and their number is not very great. Drug addiction in Israel has thus become fundamentally a social problem among those who procure their drugs illegally. If we succeed in restricting the illicit trade in drugs—and most energetic steps are being taken in this direction—and if, in the course of time, we manage to localize the focuses of this evil, we shall be able to prevent the spreading of the problem.

The problem of drug addiction should be compared to the problem of alcoholism. While the problem of alcoholism is practically nonexistent in Israel, the problem of drug addiction does exist to a certain extent. From the point of view of the state it hardly matters which means are adopted by part of the population in order to arrive at a state of physical and economic ruin. There are countries, and particularly those of a high cultural level, where alcoholism constitutes a most serious social evil causing a considerable rate of invalidity toward middle age, with chronic cases of liver disease, gastritis, polyneuritis, delirium, etc. Alcoholics are always hospitalized on a background of physical illness or pronounced mental disturbances. Such is not the case with respect to drug addicts. We have found that drug addicts applied to us in low physical condition mainly because of lack of an adequate diet, but not because of any real illness resulting from the use of the drugs themselves. Some of them wanted to be hospitalized because they were unable to obtain their drugs (usually owing to lack of funds) or because of the pressure exercised on them on the part of their family, or in order to evade punishment when faced with a criminal suit for some offense or another. There are also quite a number who want to be weaned of the large doses to which they have become habituated in order afterward to start anew with smaller doses. We have noted that drug addiction leads to economic ruin at a much faster rate than alcoholism. The addict turns into an asocial element ruining the life of his family by his craving for the drug. The dependence on drugs is much greater than the dependence on alcohol. On the other hand, in the case of alcoholics who submit to treatment owing to physical complications the damage is, as a rule, too far gone to be completely cured and only limited improvement is possible. Not so in the case of drug addicts: even those who are admitted in an extremely low physical condition are completely healed in this respect within a relatively short period of 2 to 3 months, and leave the institution as physically and intellectually healthy persons even after a most extended use of drugs, over many years.

THE MEANS ADOPTED IN ISRAEL TO PREVENT THE SPREAD OF DRUG ADDICTION AND PLANS FOR THE FUTURE

Steps are being taken to achieve closer cooperation among all those concerned with the control of dangerous drugs, with addicts and the treatment of drug addiction; the various divisions of the Ministry of Health, the police, and the law courts. It is thus intended to intensify the fight against drug peddlers, middlemen, and drug salesmen in restaurants and various places of entertainment. Much heavier punishments are imposed for offenses against the dangerous drugs laws and long periods of imprisonment are ordered in this connection by the local courts. Severe measures must also be taken against the pimps in this connection, since they are one of the factors leading to the spread of drugs and addiction. Strict control is maintained over the sale of drugs, including preparations containing sodium pentobarbital, and energetic steps are being taken (as mentioned above) by the Israel police in combating the trade and use of illegal drugs. Adequate instruction and publicity activities are carried out among physicians and pharmacists in order to reduce the supply of drugs to the minimum. A proposed amendment of the law is under examination with a view to introducing special prescriptions for dangerous drugs bearing the seal of the Ministry of Health. If this amendment is passed we hope that it will contribute toward reducing the number of prescriptions for such drugs so as to prevent to some extent the danger of addiction.

850 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Our entire experience has taught us that the principal stress must be laid on the prevention of drug addiction, since psychological weaning of drug addicts depends on so many factors that its chances of success are hardly favorable.

[From the Lancet, London, Mar. 21, 1964]

OPIATE ADDICTION

The Interdepartmental Committee on Drug Addiction,¹ which reported in 1961, based its advice to the Minister of Health on official statistics which ran to the end of 1959 (the yearly figures quoted in the report are, in each case, those for 1 year earlier). After 4 years, there are good reasons for thinking that the problem of addiction is now more grave.

The committee's main conclusions were: (1) that "the incidence of addiction to drugs controlled under the Dangerous Drugs Act, 1951, is still very small, and traffic in illicit supplies is almost negligible, cannabis excepted. This is mainly due to the attitude of the public and to the systematic enforcement of the dangerous drugs legislation"; (2) that "the departmental arrangements insure that nearly all addicts to dangerous drugs are known"; and (3) that "addiction should be regarded as an expression of mental disorder, rather than a form of criminal behavior." With the last point there will be general agreement; and the incidence of addiction in this country is probably still rightly described as small. But then the reservoir of infection at the start of any epidemic is small. And it is clear that the number of addicts is, at the moment, increasing, and increasing rapidly; and the pattern of addiction also seems to be undergoing a disquieting change. Comparing successive yearly reports to the United Nations by Her Majesty's Government,² it is seen that the yearly number of new cases of addiction has risen from 90 in 1957 to 169 in 1962, and totals 728 in these 6 years. Although many cases may have been dropped (as inactive) from the Home Office index within this period, the proportion of recidivists amongst new addicts is only about 7 percent. The number of addicts known in 1957 was 359, and so, at the beginning of 1963, the number of people in the country at large who had had periods of addiction within the previous 5 years cannot have been appreciably less than 1,000. Even this figure is probably too small by about half. Many people with wide experience of this subject believe that it takes at least a year before an addict is listed through the rather ponderous police and regional medical machinery. Experience also suggests that a large number of addicts request a prescription for at least 4 times their own need. The doctor may divide this amount by 2 in the belief that he is calling the bluff, but this still leaves the addict enough to support at least one "friend" whom he maintains in his habit, and may indeed have introduced to it in the first place. Taken together, these indications point to a potential reservoir of addictive illness in Britain of probably not much less than 2,000. Allowing for differences in population size as well as definition, the problem is only a fifth the size of that in the United States of America; but this is small matter for congratulation.

¹ Report of the Interdepartmental Committee on Drug Addiction. H. M. Stationery Office, 1961.

² Reports to the United Nations by Her Majesty's Government on the working of the international treaties on narcotic drugs, 1957-62.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 851

The total number of addicts remained about the same in 1958 and 1959 (442 and 454); yet the numbers of cases removed from the index in these years were respectively 21 and 118. Of these, 11 were "cured" in 1958 and 10 died; in 1962, 61 were cured, 34 died and 12 "disappeared." The increased cure rate may be due to a change in definition, but it is hard to account for the disquieting increase in deaths.

Three further notable facts emerge from the reports.² Firstly, in 1958, about 80 percent of all cases had initially become addicted from medical causes; in 1962, this proportion had fallen to under 60 percent. Secondly, in 1959, only 11 percent of addicts were under 34 years of age; in 1962 this proportion had doubled (3, indeed, were under 20). Thirdly, in 1957, 43 out of 359 addicts indulged in mixed habits (morphine and pethidine, for example); in 1962, 148 out of 532 did so. The increase of 105 is almost exclusively due to the increase in "H and C"—the simultaneous intravenous injection of heroin with cocaine. Ninety-eight people had apparently learned to do this in 5 years, although the numbers taking heroin alone or cocaine changed little; 52 and 3, respectively, against 63 and 5. Of course, it is not absolutely certain from the figures that almost all the younger addicts are "nontherapeutic," and taking H and C; but this is the simplest hypothesis, because the number of drug users in all the other categories would have had to change widely for an alternative explanation to be tenable.

The problem of opiate addiction is thus certainly more serious now than it was in 1961, and it will grow still further if nothing is done. What can be done? The recommendations¹ of the Brain Committee declared: "compulsory committal of an addict to [a suitable] institution is not desirable"; "the establishment of specialized institutions * * * is not practicable. Initial treatment of an established addict is best undertaken in the psychiatric ward of a general hospital"; "a system of registration of addicts would not be desirable or helpful"; "a doctor should obtain a second medical opinion before deciding to prescribe a dangerous drug for a lengthy period; and should give only a limited supply * * * to a patient temporarily under his care in the absence of a letter from the patient's own doctor"; "student instruction * * * is generally adequate" but "the essential features of the Home Office memorandum on dangerous drugs could be presented in a more readable form. It should be sent to all doctors in practice"; "further statutory powers to control new analgesic drugs are not needed at present * * * any drug likely to be addictive should be tested for this possibility at the instance of the manufacturers before release." The implication is that students and doctors now know more about the dangers of addiction than they did (the declining incidence of addiction in medical practitioners supports this); but few practitioners are taught as students, or later, how to deal with addicts; and the Home Office memorandum has not yet been reshaped. A great many general practitioners have never seen an addict—though they seem more likely to do so in the future. For this reason, therefore, and because the Committee believed that "long-term results of the treatment of addiction appear to be disappointing" and "the information available is limited," the argument against setting up specialized treatment centers seems less tenable now than it was in 1961.

Again, it may be time to replace the Home Office file, laboriously and inconsistently compiled with police help, by a proper register, based on information statutorily required from the practitioner. After all, the problem is recognized in this country to be medical and not criminal, and it might therefore be advisable to give the responsibility for maintaining such a file to the Ministry of Health.³ But whoever is responsible, it should be open 24 hours a day for the transfer of confidential information in either direction. If addiction became a notifiable disease, it would be less necessary for the addict to carry a "license," as is sometimes proposed; he would be discouraged from collecting prescriptions under a variety of names, and the number of prescriptions written in excess of needs would be reduced.

Another proposal may be worth discussing. The addict, particularly in the early stages of his weaning, is particularly prone to relapse;⁴ and this may justify committing him, if only once, under section 26 of the 1959 Mental Health Act. Such committals could also be recorded on the central register, and would absolve addicts from further treatment of this kind after a specified number of failures, unless they voluntarily sought it.

² Baker, A. A., Lancet, 1963, II, 946. See also Stungo, E. ibid., p. 1386.

⁴ Volkman, R., Cressey, D. R., Amer. J. Sociol., 1963, 69, 129.

852 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

[Circular No. 25]

POLICE DEPARTMENT,
CITY OF NEW YORK,
OFFICE OF THE POLICE COMMISSIONER,
New York, June 26, 1964.

INSTRUCTIONS TO MEMBERS OF THE FORCE CONCERNING THE "STOP AND FRISK"
(CHAPTER 86) AND "NO KNOCK" (CHAPTER 85) LAWS

Two new statutes, with major impact on police authority, become effective in New York State on July 1, 1964.

These laws, if properly utilized, can be of considerable aid in safeguarding our communities. Their passage resulted in part from the combined strenuous efforts expended by New York State's various law enforcement agencies. As is the case with all other law enforcement powers, whether or not these sorely needed enactments will withstand the attacks that will be made upon their constitutionality, and will stand as laws upon the books of this State, will depend in large measure upon the fashion in which they are carried out. They should be enforced with full recognition that their purposes are to protect the community, while simultaneously protecting and treating fairly all persons in it.

Every member of the force has the responsibility of seeing to it that the powers conferred by these new statutes are used to further those purposes for which they were enacted. Some guidelines for proper conduct pursuant to these statutes are set forth herein:

I. THE "STOP-AND-FRISK" LAW (CHAPTER 86, LAWS OF 1964)

The new statute, which becomes § 180-a of the Code of Criminal Procedure, provides as follows:

§ 180-a. Temporary questioning of persons in public places; search for weapons.

1. A police officer may stop any person abroad in a public place whom he reasonably suspects is committing, has committed, or is about to commit a felony or any of the crimes specified in section 552 of this chapter, and may demand of him his name, address, and an explanation of his actions.

2. When a police officer has stopped a person for questioning pursuant to this section and reasonably suspects that he is in danger of life or limb, he may search such person for a dangerous weapon. If the police officer finds such a weapon or any other thing the possession of which may constitute a crime, he may take and keep it until the completion of the questioning, at which time he shall either return it, if lawfully possessed, or arrest such person.

A. General principles

1. The new law does not permit an officer to stop just any passer-by and search him, nor does it allow the search of any person merely because he has a criminal record.

2. The new law does not permit the stopping and searching of any person found in the vicinity of a crime scene, merely because he happens to be there.

3. The new law does not dispense with the need for adequate observation and investigation, depending upon all the circumstances, before a stop is made.

4. No officer should stop anyone, under the new law, unless he is prepared to explain, with particularity, his reasons for stopping such person.

5. No officer should stop anyone, under the new law, unless the crime he reasonably suspects is a felony or one of those misdemeanors listed in § 552 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

6. When a person is stopped under the new law, the officer—if not in uniform—must properly and promptly identify himself to the person stopped.

7. Not everyone stopped may be searched; searches are only permitted when the officer reasonably suspects that he is in danger.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 853

8. The right to stop provided in the new law in no way changes the previously existing authority of an officer to make an arrest without an arrest warrant, as provided by § 177 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The new rights to stop and to search, as defined in the new statute, are separate and distinct from the established right to arrest, as provided by existing law, and to make a complete search incident to such arrest.

9. Whether or not an arrest follows a stopping under the new law, whenever any force is used in stopping the suspect, or whenever any frisk or search is made, a written report shall be made to the officer's superior officer. Form for such reports, together with instructions for their use, will be distributed with separate orders.

B. The right to "stop"

1. "stop": The new statute gives the officer the right to stop a person under the indicated circumstances. If the suspect refuses to stop, the officer may use reasonable force, but only by use of his body, arms, and legs. He may not make use of a weapon or nightstick in any fashion. (Of course, if there is an assault on the officer or other circumstances sufficient to justify an arrest, the officer may use necessary force to effect that arrest.)

2. "abroad in a public place":

(a) For the purposes of practical enforcement procedures, this phrase is viewed as being restricted to public highways and streets, beaches and parks (to include outdoor facilities open to the public even though privately owned), depots, stations, and public transportation facilities.

(b) For the purpose of practical enforcement procedures, this phrase is viewed as not including the public portions of private buildings such as hotel lobbies, moving picture theaters, licensed premises, etc.

(c) Definitions of the words "public place" as found in other laws, such as those dealing with disorderly conduct, are not to be substituted for the strict definition of "abroad in a public place" as outlined above.

3. "whom he reasonably suspects":

(a) The words "reasonably suspects" are not to be lightly regarded; they are not just an incidental phrase; they have real meaning. "Reasonable suspicion" is clearly more than "mere suspicion." At the same time it is something less than "reasonable ground for believing" that a crime is being committed, as is necessary for an arrest.

(b) No precise definition of "reasonable suspects" can be provided, other than that it is such a combination of factors as would merit the sound and objective suspicions of a properly alert law enforcement officer, performing his sworn duties. Among the factors to be considered in determining whether or not there is "reasonable suspicion" are:

- (i) The demeanor of the suspect.
- (ii) The gait and manner of the suspect.
- (iii) Any knowledge the officer may have of the suspect's background or character.
- (iv) Whether the suspect is carrying anything, and what he is carrying.
- (v) The manner in which the suspect is dressed, including bulges in clothing—when considered in light of all of the other factors.
- (vi) The time of the day or night the suspect is observed.
- (vii) Any overheard conversation of the suspect.
- (viii) The particular streets and areas involved.
- (ix) Any information received from third persons, whether they are known or unknown.
- (x) Whether the suspect is consorting with others whose conduct is "reasonably suspect."
- (xi) The suspect's proximity to known criminal conduct.

(This listing is not meant to be all inclusive.)

(c) "Reasonable suspicion" of any crime at all does not afford a basis for stopping under the new law; there must be reasonable suspicion that the suspect is committing, has committed, or is about to commit either any felony or one of those misdemeanors enumerated in § 552 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. (These misdemeanors are weapons crimes, burglar's tools, receiving stolen property, unlawful entry, escape, impairing, carnal abuse, indecent exposure, obscenity and other indecency provisions, sodomy, rape, narcotics, amphetamines, and hypodermic needles.) Suspicion of disorderly conduct, an offense, is not for the purpose of practical enforcement procedures a basis for stopping.

854 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

C. The right to "question"

1. No questions are to be asked until the officer has, either by being in uniform or by showing his shield and stating he is a police officer, identified himself.

2. Promptly thereafter, the suspect should be questioned (and frisked, when appropriate) in the immediate area in which he was stopped.

3. Should the suspect refuse to answer the officer's questions, the officer cannot compel an answer and should not attempt to do so. The suspect's refusal to answer shall not be considered as an element by the officer in determining whether or not there is a basis for an arrest.

4. In ascertaining "his name" from the suspect, the officer may request to see verification of his identity, but a person shall not be compelled to produce such verification.

5. If the suspect does answer, and his answers appear to be false or unsatisfactory, the officer may question further. Answers of this nature may serve as an element in determining whether a basis for arrest exists. (But if an officer determines that an answer is "unsatisfactory" and relies upon this in part to sustain his arrest, he should be able to explain with particularity the manner in which it is "unsatisfactory.")

6. If, after he has been stopped and the officer has identified himself, the suspect attempts to flee from the officer, this fact may be an element in determining whether a basis for arrest exists. However, the officer should not resort to the use of a weapon or other extraordinary means to stop the flight unless he has information which now leads him to reasonably believe that the suspect has committed a felony.

D. The right to "search"

1. Clearly no right to search exists unless there is a right to stop.

2. Nor is a search lawful in every case in which a right to stop exists. A search is only justified under the new law when the officer reasonably suspects that he is in danger. This claim is not to be used as a pretext for obtaining evidence. In instances in which evidence is produced as a result of a search, the superior officers, the prosecutors, and—it is anticipated—the courts, will scrutinize particularly closely all the circumstances relied upon for justifying the stopping and searching.

3. No search is appropriate unless the officer "reasonably suspects that he is in danger." Among the factors that may be considered in determining whether to search are:

(a) Nature of the suspected crime, and whether it involved the use of a weapon or violence.

(b) The presence or absence of assistance to the officer, and the number of suspects being stopped.

(c) The time of the day or night.

(d) Prior knowledge of the suspects' record and reputation.

(e) The sex of the suspect.

(f) The demeanor and seeming agility of the suspect, and whether his clothes so bulge as to be indicative of concealed weapons.

(This listing is not meant to be all inclusive.)

4. Initially, once the determination has been made that the officer may be in danger, all that is necessary is a frisk—an external feeling of clothing—such as would reveal a weapon of immediate danger to the officer.

5. A search of the suspect's clothing and pockets should not be made unless something is felt by this frisk—such as a hard object that feels as if it may be a weapon. In such event, the officer may search that portion of the suspects' clothing to uncover the article that was felt.

6. If the suspect is carrying an object such as a handbag, suitcase, sack, etc. which may conceal a weapon, the officer should not open that item, but should see that it is placed out of reach of the suspect so that its presence will not represent any immediate danger to the officer.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 855

E. An example

An example may help to illustrate. Assume that a mugging has just occurred. The officer questions the victim. She says that her pocketbook was taken and she gives a description of the suspect stating, among other things, that he is about 6 feet tall and was wearing a brown leather windbreaker. While the victim is receiving medical treatment, the officer starts a search of the area. He sees a man hurrying down a dark street. The man's hand is clutching at a bulge under his brown windbreaker, and he glances back at the officer repeatedly. The suspect meets the description of the perpetrator except for one discrepancy: he is only five feet tall.

The officer does not have reasonable grounds to arrest the suspect for his description is clearly inconsistent with the victim's estimate of the perpetrator's height. However, from the officer's experience he realizes that victims of crime, in an excited condition, often give descriptions which are not correct in every detail. Although he lacks reasonable grounds to make an arrest, from all of the circumstances the officer "reasonably suspects" that the man he has spotted has committed the crime. Under the new law, the officer may stop this person, and may ask for his identification and an explanation of his actions. And because the crime involved violence and the suspect's windbreaker seems to conceal unnatural bulges, a frisk may be in order.

II. "THE NO-KNOCK" LAW. (CHAPTER 85, LAWS OF 1964)

The new statute amends section 799 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which will read as follows:

Section 799. Officer may break open door or window to execute warrant. The officer may break open an outer or inner door or window of a building, or any part of the building, or any thing therein, to execute the warrant, (a) if, after notice of his authority and purpose, he be refused admittance, or (b) without notice of his authority and purpose, if the judge, justice or magistrate issuing the warrant has inserted a direction therein that the officer executing it shall not be required to give such notice. The judge, justice or magistrate may so direct only upon proof under oath, to his satisfaction, that the property sought may be easily and quickly destroyed or disposed of, or that danger to the life or limb of the officer or another may result, if such notice were to be given.

A. General principles

1. Seeking to dispense with the usual notice requirements when executing search warrants should be the exception, not the rule. Stereotype forms should not be prepared that might encourage too ready use of this extraordinary procedure. When it is to be used, it should be upon carefully drafted papers.

2. The facts relied upon as indicating that "the property sought may be easily and quickly destroyed or disposed of, or that danger to the life or limb of the officer or another may result if such notice were to be given" should be spelled out in detail in the affidavits.

3. Every application for this type of search warrant should have the endorsement or approval of a superior officer, who must be satisfied that the case is of sufficient significance to justify this procedure, and that the danger or risk of destruction is soundly anticipated. In addition, wherever practicable, the superior officer of the officer making the application for this type of warrant shall accompany the officer to court and be present when the application is made to the Judge. Notation of this fact shall be made on the copy of the affidavit filed in the command.

4. When it is permitted, unannounced entry should be made with the least disruption possible. Often a passkey or the help of a superintendent may assist an officer to enter the premises with a minimum of disturbance. Every action possible should be taken to allay the fears of the occupants of the premises, or others, which may be occasioned by an unannounced entering.

5. Copies of all affidavits and court orders should be filed in the office or command of the executing officer.

6. Instructions for reporting on search warrants under revised section 799 C.C.P. will be published in separate orders.

MICHAEL J. MURPHY,
Police Commissioner.

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

856 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

ANALYSIS—NARCOTIC DRUG USERS ARREST, NEW YORK CITY, 1963 TO 1962

NARCOTIC AND DRUG USERS, COMPARED TO TOTAL ARRESTS, NEW YORK CITY,
1963 TO 1962

In 1963 there were a total of 206,248 arrests for all crimes compared to 207,615 arrests in 1962, a decrease of 1,367. Despite the decrease in total arrests, arrests of persons who are narcotic users increased to 14,345 in 1963 from 13,670 in 1962, an increase of 675 users.

In 1963 narcotic users made up 7 percent of the total persons arrested, while in 1962 narcotic users made up 6.6 percent of the total persons arrested.

Total juvenile arrests (under 16 years) decreased to 12,749 in 1963, from 13,727 in 1962, a decrease of 978 arrests; arrests of juveniles who are narcotic users decreased from 41 in 1962 to 36 in 1963, a decrease of 5 users.

Narcotic and drug users, compared to total arrests, New York City, 1963-62

	1963			1962			1963-62 comparison		Users, percent increase or decrease versus arrests
	All arrests	Narcotic users	Percent of arrests	All arrests	Narcotic users	Percent of arrests	Arrests, number increase or decrease	Users, number increase or decrease
Felonies.....	45,837	5,019	10.9	41,950	4,536	10.8	+3,887	+483	+0.1
Misdemeanors and offenses in sec. 552 Code of Criminal Procedure.....	13,805	6,139	44.5	13,653	5,860	42.9	+152	+279	+1.6
Other misdemeanors and offenses.....	130,480	2,970	2.3	135,513	3,015	2.2	-5,033	-45	-.1
F.O.A.'s.....	16,126	217	1.3	16,499	259	1.6	-373	-42	-.3
Total.....	206,248	14,345	7.0	207,615	13,670	6.6	-1,367	+675	+ .4

Source: Statistical and Records Bureau, Joseph P. Driscoll, inspector, Feb. 4, 1964.

NARCOTIC AND DRUG USERS, BY TYPE USED, NEW YORK CITY, 1963-62

Heroin accounted for 93.4 percent of the specific types used by narcotic users arrested in 1963, and 94.4 percent of all used in 1962. Heroin and marihuana combined accounted for 97.7 percent of all narcotics or drugs used by narcotic users in 1963, and for an equal percentage of 97.7 in 1962.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 857

An increase both numerically and percentagewise was found in the use of amphetamines, up from 81 to 123 or 42 additional users for a 51.9-percent increase; and the use of marihuana, up from 452 to 611 or 159 additional users for a 35.2-percent increase.

A decrease was found in the use of cocaine, down 14 users from 64 to 50 for a percentage decrease of 21.9.

Narcotic and drug users, by type used, citywide, 1963-62

	1963		1962		1963-62 comparison
	Narcotics users	Percent of total	Narcotics users	Percent of total	Numerical increase or decrease	Percent increase or decrease
Heroin.....	13,399	93.4	12,905	94.4	+494	+3.8
Cocaine.....	50	.3	64	.5	-14	-21.9
Morphine.....	16	.1	33	.2	-17	-51.5
Opium.....	14	.1	14	.1
Marihuana.....	611	4.3	452	3.3	+159	+35.2
Barbiturates.....	100	.7	86	.6	+14	+16.3
Amphetamines.....	123	.9	81	.6	+42	+51.9
Others.....	32	.2	35	.3	-3	-8.6
Total.....	14,345	100.0	13,670	100.0	+675	+4.9

Source: Statistical and records bureau, Joseph P. Driscoll, inspector, Feb. 4, 1963.

NARCOTIC AND DRUG USERS ARRESTED FOR CRIMES AGAINST PERSON—CRIMES AGAINST PROPERTY, SELECTED FELONIES

An analysis of narcotic or drug users arrested in 1963, and in 1962, reveals that users comprise a far higher percentage of persons arrested for crimes against property than for crimes against the person. In 1963, and 1962, 11.7 and 11.6 percent, respectively, of all persons arrested for selected felonies of crimes against property were users, while 1.2 and 1.8 percent, respectively, of all persons arrested for selected felonies of crimes against the person were users.

Crimes for which users comprised a high percentage of total persons arrested were burglary, grand larceny (except motor vehicle), criminally receiving, and forgery.

858 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Narcotic and drug users compared to arrests—Crimes against property, selected felonies, 1963-62

	1963			1962			Comparison, 1963-62
	Arrests	Narcotic users	Percent of users	Arrests	Narcotic users	Percent of users	Numerical increase or decrease, arrests	Numerical increase or decrease, users	Percent increase or decrease, users
Robbery.....	4,547	384	8.4	4,299	397	9.2	+248	-13	-0.8
Burglary.....	8,088	1,268	15.7	6,916	1,119	16.2	+1,172	+149	-5
Grand larceny (except motor vehicle).....	4,192	652	15.6	3,750	558	14.9	+442	+94	+7
Grand larceny (motor vehicle).....	5,121	198	3.9	4,441	149	3.4	+680	+49	+5
Criminally receiving.....	1,097	246	22.4	1,129	259	22.9	-32	-13	-5
Frauds and cheats.....	181	7	3.9	167	1	.6	+14	+6	+3.3
Forgery and counterfeiting.....	1,494	221	14.9	1,351	165	12.2	+133	+56	+2.7
Arson.....	274	4	1.5	277	1	.4	-3	+3	+1.1
Malicious mischief.....	221	5	2.3	231	7	3.2	-10	-2	-9
Extortion.....	270	3	1.1	277	2	.7	-7	+1	+4
Blackmail.....	1
Total.....	26,476	2,968	11.7	22,828	2,658	11.6	+2,648	+330	+1

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 859

Narcotic and drug users compared to arrests—Crimes against person, selected felonies, 1963-62

	1963			1962			Comparison, 1963 to 1962
	Arrests	Narcotic users	Percent of users	Arrests	Narcotic users	Percent of users	Numerical increase or decrease, arrests	Numerical increase or decrease, users	Percent increase or decrease, users
Murder and nonnegligible manslaughter	582	19	3.3	515	38	7.4	+67	-19	-4.1
Manslaughter by negligence	36	1	2.8	34	1	2.9	+2	-----	-----
Felonious assault	10,334	128	1.2	9,695	103	1.7	+639	-35	-3.5
Rape	1,130	7	.6	1,165	14	1.2	-35	-7	-6
Other sex crimes	430	-----	-----	423	2	.6	+7	-2	-6
Abortion	94	1	1.1	112	-----	-----	+18	+1	+1.1
Kidnaping	69	1	1.4	79	3	3.8	-10	-2	-2.4
Total	12,675	157	1.2	12,025	221	1.8	+650	-64	-6

Source: Statistical and records bureau, Joseph P. Driscoll, inspector, Feb. 4, 1964.

860

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Arrests of narcotics users in relation to total arrests by the New York City Police Department, 1962 and 1963

YEAR 1962

	Arrests				Drug, narcotic users				Percent users versus arrests
	Under 16 years	16 to 20 years	21 years and over	Total	Under 16 years	16 to 20 years	21 years and over	Total	Under 16 years	16 to 20 years	21 years and over	Total
1 Murder.....	23	110	356	499			8	30	38		7.3	8.4	7.6
2 Nonnegligent manslaughter.....			16	16									2.9
3 Manslaughter by negligence.....			30	34									1.2
4 Rape.....	122	213	830	1,165			2	12	14		9	3.3	1.4
5 Robbery.....	1,110	1,249	1,940	4,299	2	63	332	397		5.0	2.0	9.2	1.7
6 Felonious assault.....	1,186	1,680	6,829	9,695	4	23	136	163	0.3	1.4	31.2	16.2	16.2
7 Burglary.....	2,304	1,691	2,921	6,916	3	205	911	1,119	.1	12.1		14.9	3.4
8 Possessing burglar tools, felony.....			20	22				14				22.9	6.6
9 Grand larceny, except auto theft.....	686	549	2,515	3,750			52	506		9.5	20.1	12.2	12.2
10 Larceny of motor vehicle, felony.....	964	2,280	1,197	4,441			25	124		1.1	10.4	25.4	22.9
11 Criminal receiving stolen property.....	12	183	934	1,129			22	237				12.2	12.2
12 Frauds and cheats, felony.....		8	159	167				1				1.2	1.2
13 Forgery and counterfeiting.....	47	254	1,080	1,381	1		36	128	2.1	14.2		1.2	1.2
14 Arson.....	166	30	81	277				1
15 Prostitution and commercial vice, felony.....		15	11	26
16 Other sex offenses.....	110	50	265	425				2
17 Selling narcotic drugs, felony.....	13	238	1,834	2,085	1	139	1,427	1,567	7.7	59.7	77.9	75.3	75.3
18 Carrying et cetera, dangerous weapons, felony.....	170	324	571	1,065	1	7	37	45	.6	2.2	6.5	4.2	4.2
19 Driving while intoxicated, 2d offense.....			41	55
20 Abandonment of wife, children.....		14	71	85			1	6		2.4	6.1	3.2	3.2
21 Malicious mischief, felony.....	81	42	98	221			2	34		.8	.9	.8	.8
22 All other felonies, not included above.....	191	243	3,812	4,246
Total, felony arrests, misdemeanors in CCP 552.....	7,195	9,174	25,531	41,950	12	535	3,939	4,536	.2	6.4	15.4	10.8	10.8
8 Unlawfully entering a building.....	97	120	419	636			13	109	122		10.8	26.0	19.2
9A Possessing burglar tools.....	262	297	681	1,240			32	303	335		10.8	44.5	28.6
10 Jostling and pocket picking.....	30	115	937	1,082			9	116	125		7.8	12.4	11.5
11A Criminal record, stolen property, misdemeanor.....	98	166	464	708			21	161	182		13.5	35.5	26.7
12 Sex offenses, misdemeanor.....	433	928	1,103	2,464	4	3	7	14	.9	3.3	6.6	8.9	8.9
13A Illegal possession, narcotic drugs, misdemeanor.....	31	981	4,822	5,834	9	665	4,334	5,008	29.0	67.8	89.9	85.5	85.5
14 Carrying (etc.) dangerous weapons, misdemeanor.....	492	526	631	1,669	1	14	59	74	.2	2.7	9.1	4.4	4.4
15 Aiding an escaped prisoner.....
Total 552 CCP arrests.....	1,163	3,123	9,067	13,653	14	757	5,089	5,860	1.2	24.2	56.1	42.9	42.9

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 861

11	Petit larceny, except auto theft.....	875	1,022	3,404	5,301	1	73	691	765	.1	7.1	20.3	14.4
15A	Frauds and cheats, misdemeanor.....	2	15	251	288	---	---	1	1	---	---	.4	.4
18A	Prostitution and commercial vice.....	2	72	2,940	3,014	---	---	148	150	---	2.8	5.0	5.0
23	Assault, 3d degree.....	514	1,127	5,608	7,249	1	20	52	73	.2	1.8	.9	1.0
25	Other offenses against families and children.....	---	8	38	46	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---
26	Violation of liquor laws.....	1	10	979	990	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---
27	Driving while intoxicated, 1st offense.....	---	78	2,539	2,637	---	---	5	5	---	---	.2	.2
29	Violation of motor laws.....	9	107	521	637	---	---	9	10	---	.9	1.7	1.6
30	Intoxication.....	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---
31	Disorderly conduct and vagrancy.....	285	5,004	81,733	87,032	---	127	1,335	1,462	---	2.5	1.8	1.7
70	Disorderly persons.....	---	2	63	65	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---
33	Gambling, policy and lottery.....	3	175	7,042	7,220	---	1	26	27	---	.6	.4	.4
34A	Malicious mischief, misdemeanor.....	444	564	1,150	2,168	---	4	22	26	---	.7	1.9	1.2
35	Trespassing, private property.....	---	10	129	139	---	2	6	8	---	20.0	4.6	5.7
36	Corporal offenses, misdemeanor.....	---	17	84	101	---	1	---	1	---	5.9	---	1.0
90	Wayward minors (included in line 49).....	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---
38	All other misdemeanors not included above.....	594	1,346	1,646	3,586	---	55	382	437	---	4.1	23.2	12.2
49	Fugitives and FOA's.....	762	1,578	14,159	16,499	---	42	216	259	.1	2.7	1.5	1.6
	Total other misdemeanor and offense arrests.....	3,491	11,136	122,369	136,995	3	328	2,893	3,224	.1	2.1	2.4	2.4
	Total arrests not reported to State.....	1,878	396	13,043	15,017	12	9	29	50	.6	2.3	.2	.3
	Grand total arrests (all).....	13,727	23,828	170,060	207,615	41	1,679	11,950	13,670	.3	7.0	7.0	6.6

Prepared by Statistical and Records Bureau, Joseph P. Driscoll, Inspector, Jan. 27, 1964.

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

863

18A	Prostitution and commercial vice	7	203	3,096	3,306		5	139	144		2.5	4.5	4.4
23	Assault, third degree	639	1,384	5,398	7,419		6	46	52			.9	.7
25	Other offenses against family and children			22	28			1	1			4.5	3.6
26	Violation of liquor laws		19	969	988			4	4			.4	.4
27	Driving while intoxicated, 1st offense		105	3,958	4,063		1	3	4		1.0	1.1	1.1
29	Violation of motor laws	6	129	599	734			7	7			1.2	1.0
30	Intoxication
31	Disorderly conduct and vagrancy	262	5,471	77,495	83,218		109	1,021	1,130		2.0	1.3	1.4
70	Disorderly persons	1	1	40	42			2	2			5.0	4.8
33	Gambling, policy and lottery	6	188	7,053	7,247		16	142	158		8.5	2.0	2.2
34A	Malicious mischief, misdemeanor	411	686	1,202	2,239		2	20	22		.3	1.7	1.0
35	Trespassing, private property	4	34	125	163			12	12			9.6	7.4
36	Corporal ordinances, misdemeanor	1	21	79	101			1	1			1.3	1.0
90	Wayward minors (included in line 49)
38	All other misdemeanors not included above	593	1,298	1,805	3,786		63	433	497		4.9	22.8	13.1
49	Fugitives and FOA's	1,133	1,187	13,808	16,126		35	181	217		2.9	1.3	1.3
	Total other misdemeanors and offense arrests	3,854	12,079	119,474	135,407		346	2,738	3,087		2.9	2.3	2.3
	Total arrests not reported to State	55	823	10,321	11,199		51	45	100		6.2	.4	.9
	Grand total arrests (all)	12,749	26,470	187,029	206,248		1,911	12,388	14,345		7.2	7.4	7.0

○

PAGINA BIANCA

PART 4

(July 30, 1964)

PAGINA BIANCA

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

HEARINGS BEFORE THE PERMANENT SUBCOMMITTEE ON INVESTIGATIONS OF THE COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS UNITED STATES SENATE EIGHTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS FIRST AND SECOND SESSIONS PURSUANT TO SENATE RESOLUTION 278, 88TH CONGRESS

JULY 30, 1964

PART 4

Printed for the use of the Committee on Government Operations

U.S. GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE

24-366

WASHINGTON : 1964

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS

JOHN L. McCLELLAN, Arkansas, Chairman

HENRY M. JACKSON, Washington	KARL E. MUNDT, South Dakota
SAM J. ERVIN, JR., North Carolina	CARL T. CURTIS, Nebraska
HUBERT H. HUMPHREY, Minnesota	JACOB K. JAVITS, New York
ERNEST GRUENING, Alaska	JACK MILLER, Iowa
EDMUND S. MUSKIE, Maine	JAMES B. PEARSON, Kansas
CLAIBORNE PELL, Rhode Island
THOMAS J. MCINTYRE, New Hampshire
ABRAHAM A. RIBICOFF, Connecticut
DANIEL B. BREWSTER, Maryland

WALTER L. REYNOLDS, Chief Clerk

PERMANENT SUBCOMMITTEE ON INVESTIGATIONS

JOHN L. McCLELLAN, Arkansas, Chairman

HENRY M. JACKSON, Washington	KARL E. MUNDT, South Dakota
SAM J. ERVIN, JR., North Carolina	CARL T. CURTIS, Nebraska
EDMUND S. MUSKIE, Maine	JACOB K. JAVITS, New York
THOMAS J. MCINTYRE, New Hampshire
DANIEL B. BREWSTER, Maryland

JEROME S. ADLERMAN, *General Counsel*DONALD F. O'DONNELL, *Chief Counsel*PHILIP W. MORGAN, *Chief Counsel to the Minority*RUTH YOUNG WATT, Chief Clerk

CONTENTS

	Page
Appendix.....	945
Testimony of—
Belk, George M.....	911
Casey, Daniel P.....	911
Gaffney, George H.....	895
Pera, Martin.....	865
Ward, Charles G.....	911

EXHIBITS

	Introduced on page	Appears on page
2. History of narcotic traffic originating in Turkey, Syria, Lebanon.....	881	881
Backup material.....	881	945
2A. History of narcotic traffic originating in France.....	881	884
Backup material.....	881	952
2B. Photographs of laboratory operations in France.....	881	962
2C. History of narcotic traffic originating in Italy.....	881	890
Backup material.....	881	969
3. The illicit interstate narcotic traffic from New York City throughout the eastern seaboard of the United States.....	916	917
Backup material.....	916	1012
4. The illicit narcotic traffic from Chicago throughout the mid- western and southwestern United States.....	931	931
Backup material.....	931	1063
5. Organized crime and illicit traffic in narcotics, Los Angeles, area.....	941	1116
San Francisco area.....	941	1123
Seattle, Wash., area.....	941	1133
Portland, Oreg., area.....	941	1135
Denver, Colo., area.....	941	1138
Colorado area.....	941	1141
New Mexico, area.....	941	1144
Utah area.....	941	1145
Wyoming area.....	941	1147
6. Letter to Commissioner of Narcotics from George M. Belk, subject statistics on last 200 defendants reported in New Jersey cases.....	942	943
List of names mentioned in letter.....	943	(*)

CHARTS PRINTED IN THE RECORD

	Page
Routes used in transporting illicit narcotics in Europe and Asia and names of persons involved.....	Facing 876
Distribution of illicit narcotics in the United States and names of principal violators.....	Facing 912
Albert and Vito Agueci case.....	Facing 916
Carmino Galante-Mancino case.....	Facing 916
Proceedings of—
July 30, 1964 (afternoon).....	865

*May be found in the files of the subcommittee.

PAGINA BIANCA

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

THURSDAY (AFTERNOON), JULY 30, 1964

U.S. SENATE,
PERMANENT SUBCOMMITTEE ON INVESTIGATIONS
OF THE COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS,
Washington, D.C.

The subcommittee reconvened at 2:05 p.m., in room 3302, New Senate Office Building, pursuant to Senate Resolution 278, agreed to February 10, 1964, Senator John L. McClellan (chairman of the subcommittee) presiding.

Members of the subcommittee present: Senator John L. McClellan, Democrat, Arkansas; Senator Daniel B. Brewster, Democrat, Maryland; Senator Karl E. Mundt, Republican, South Dakota; Senator Carl T. Curtis, Republican, Nebraska; Senator Jacob K. Javits, Republican, New York.

Also present: Jerome S. Adlerman, general counsel; Paul E. Kamerrick, assistant counsel; LaVern J. Duffy, assistant counsel; Philip W. Morgan, chief counsel to the minority; Eugene J. Marshall, Bureau of Narcotics; Ruth Y. Watt, chief clerk.

The CHAIRMAN. The subcommittee will come to order.

(Members of the subcommittee present at time of reconvening: Senators McClellan and Curtis.)

The CHAIRMAN. Call your next witness.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Mr. Martin Pera.

The CHAIRMAN. Be sworn, please.

You do solemnly swear that the testimony you are about to give before this subcommittee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. PERA. I do.

TESTIMONY OF MARTIN PERA

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Pera, will you identify yourself for the record, please?

Mr. PERA. My name is Martin Pera. I am employed by the Office of Naval Intelligence. I was formerly employed by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics for 15 years, since 1948.

The CHAIRMAN. Since 1948 you have been with the Bureau of Narcotics. What is your position now?

Mr. PERA. With the Office of Naval Intelligence.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you been with the Office of Naval Intelligence?

Mr. PERA. For the past 9 months.

866 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. And you were with the Bureau of Narcotics?

Mr. PERA. For 15 years prior to that time I was employed by the Bureau of Narcotics.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have a prepared statement?

Mr. PERA. No, I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. If you care to, proceed on your own, if you wish, to make a statement of what you have in mind pertinent to this inquiry.

Mr. PERA. I will attempt to provide information concerning the sources of heroin which is smuggled into the United States going back to the points of origin where the opium is grown, through the various areas where it is processed first into morphine base and then into heroin, with some descriptions of the criminal groups that are involved in this operation, and some descriptions as to the smuggling techniques that are used.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well. You may proceed in your own way. You have charts, do you, by which you can illustrate?

Mr. PERA. Yes, I do.

The CHAIRMAN. Proceed.

Mr. PERA. The bulk of the heroin being trafficked in the illicit market in the United States has as its origin opium grown in Turkey. The Turks have cultivated the opium poppy for centuries and modern Turkey now ranks second among the four leading opium-producing nations.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Where is the center of the opium-producing area in Turkey?

Mr. PERA. There are some seven different provinces where opium is grown in Turkey. The most prominent of these is Afyon. The English equivalent of Afyon is opium, so the province is named after opium.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, the province is named opium and the Turkish name is Afyon?

Mr. PERA. That is right.

Cultivation of opium for the world illicit market is permitted by the Turkish Government in seven provinces. The greatest amount and probably the best quality is grown in the Province of Afyon. Control of opium production is the responsibility of the provincial technical agricultural office, and all legal purchasing of opium in Turkey is done by Toprak, which is equivalent to the Turkish Government opium monopoly.

The morphine content of Turkish opium ranges between 6 to 25 percent, depending on the point of origin. It is probably superior to any other opium grown anywhere else in the world.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you mean depending upon the land or the climate, the soil, or something where it is grown, it will have a different strength?

Mr. PERA. That is correct, Senator. The largest producer of legitimate opium in the world is India. But Turkish opium has consistently been of a higher quality than Indian opium. Turkish opium—of course the quality of opium is judged by its morphine content—has consistently had a relatively higher morphine content ranging from 10 to 18 percent. The Turkish farmer is free to plant opium provided his kaza or administrative district has been approved for that purpose.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 867

Opium cultivation is permitted in all the kazas of Afyon Province but in other provinces only a few are permitted opium cultivation. Following the planting of opium each season the farmer must declare to the agricultural office the amount of area under cultivation and his anticipated yield.

The CHAIRMAN. In planting, is it a large area? Compare it to a crop of tobacco in this country. How would this planting over there compare?

Mr. PERA. There is a considerable acreage involved.

The CHAIRMAN. More acreage involved in the raising of opium or the poppies than in the raising of tobacco?

Mr. PERA. The Senator will have to forgive me. I have absolutely no idea what acreage is involved in growing tobacco in this country. But I would imagine they are similar.

The CHAIRMAN. I am not an expert. But we grow a tremendous amount of tobacco on just a very few acres.

Mr. PERA. There is a high density of growth of the opium poppy. It is cultivated in high density.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you measure this by the ton or what? I don't know.

Mr. PERA. I can give you a figure. One dekar, which is approximately 10 square meters, will produce about 3 kilos of opium, something in that vicinity.

The CHAIRMAN. It is a minor detail, go ahead with your presentation. I just wondered. I have seen tobacco areas and they grow a tremendous amount of tobacco on a very few acres. I didn't know whether that was a comparable situation with respect to the poppy from which opium is taken.

Mr. PERA. I think it is. In traveling through these areas there are only fields of poppies—as far as you can see. I think the situation is similar.

Mr. ADLERMAN. A meter would be slightly larger than a yard?

Mr. PERA. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In this case, would you repeat the figures?

Mr. PERA. A dekar is approximately 10 square meters, and this will produce about 3 kilos of raw opium in total.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, 1 meter would be a little bit more than 3 feet?

Mr. PERA. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So that 35 square feet would produce about 3 kilos?

Mr. PERA. That is approximately.

There are controls extant for governing the cultivation. The farmer has to declare the amount of acreage he is going to cultivate and his anticipated yield. But in spite of this consistently through the years there has been an overproduction of opium. Historically Turkey has been one of the prime producers of opium that has entered both the illicit and the licit market. Centuries ago there were absolutely no controls. Like farmers all over the world, when controls did come about, the Turkish opium growers resisted the imposition of these controls and continued to manufacture as much opium as they could dispose of and make the greatest possible profit they could.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Does the Turkish Government endeavor to put strict controls on the growth of opium?

868 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do they provide for a licensing system for the growth of opium?

Mr. PERA. Precisely.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Or, rather, the growth of poppies?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And do they compel the farmer to give them an estimate of how much they are going to produce?

Mr. PERA. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And do they check up later on to find out whether he has produced less or more, and can they determine whether or not he is giving any out to the illicit market?

Mr. PERA. Yes, this procedure exists.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And the Government endeavors to control it by buying all the opium for the Toprak?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Toprak is a state-owned gathering agency for the opium?

Mr. PERA. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. However, there is an illicit or bootleg market?

Mr. PERA. Precisely.

The CHAIRMAN. As I understand you, it is the purpose of the Government, and the Government attempts, not only to regulate and control the amount that is planted, but also to dispose of it after it is grown, after it is produced?

Mr. PERA. That is correct. What is in effect a governmental opium monopoly is supposed to purchase all the opium produced.

The CHAIRMAN. So any illicit distribution or, I suppose, even processing, is done outside the Government and is not permitted or condoned by governmental action?

Mr. PERA. That is correct. And there are severe penalties provided for infractions.

The CHAIRMAN. May I ask you at that point does the Government seriously attempt, genuinely attempt, to enforce its laws in this respect?

Mr. PERA. To the extent of its enforcement capabilities in this area, the Government does a serious job.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean it does it in good faith. There is no subterfuge involved, where it condones or permits the illicit traffic knowingly.

Mr. PERA. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. They try in good faith to do a job of controlling it.

Mr. PERA. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Then they cooperate with us. The Turkish Government cooperates with us in this effort.

Mr. PERA. Yes. There is a mutual exchange in enforcement efforts directed toward apprehending traffickers in black market opium and so forth.

Despite all these measures Turkey through the years has experienced an unabated overproduction, and more opium continues to be sold to black marketeers through brokers who deal in this commodity. And many of these brokers are wealthy merchants from Istanbul or from the larger cities in Syria or Lebanon. These people contract to buy large quantities of opium and have it delivered to, let's say, Aleppo, Syria, or Beirut, Lebanon, via smugglers who are specialists in this enterprise.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 869

The CHAIRMAN. I assume they pay quite a premium over Government-established prices?

Mr. PERA. No, in terms of the money made in the traffic in the United States, the amount of money made in the black market or opium traffic in Turkey isn't that much. They may pay anywhere from, let's say, $5 to $10 over the current market price.

The CHAIRMAN. They do pay a premium.

Mr. PERA. Yes, they do.

The CHAIRMAN. That is in the black market.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It is a very small premium, however, is it not?

Mr. PERA. Yes, in comparison to the money made in the traffic in the United States.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Maybe it is only $5 a kilo more than they would get from the Government.

Mr. PERA. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Nevertheless, it is attractive to them to sell it and they do sell it.

Mr. PERA. Yes.

The routes taken——

Mr. ADLERMAN. First, hasn't the Turkish Government recently raised the price of legal opium in an endeavor to make it more attractive for the farmers to sell it to the Turkish Government?

Mr. PERA. Yes. The price of crude opium today, I believe, is about $12. This is licit opium we are speaking of. It is $12 per kilo, whereas, I believe, last year and the year before it was $10. It is $12.40 now whereas before it was $10.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, the licit price went up?

Mr. PERA. Yes, that is right.

Statements vary concerning the amount of Turkish opium going into the illicit market, but it is estimated that between 6 and 8 percent of the entire annual production goes to the illicit market in Turkey. During 1962, the opium production of Turkey, the licit opium production, was 310 metric tons.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Apropos of that figure for a moment, you say the total production ran somewhere around 300 tons?

Mr. PERA. 310 metric tons for 1962.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think earlier it was testified that the amount of illicit heroin that came into this country is estimated at 1,000 kilos.

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Does that figure strike you as the correct figure? In other words, that would be about 2,200 pounds, or about 1 ton of heroin a year?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It takes 10 tons of opium to make 1 ton of heroin, is that right?

Mr. PERA. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So that the amount of illicit heroin that is diverted and eventually winds up in the United States will be the equivalent to the smuggling of 10 tons of opium out of Turkey.

Mr. PERA. That would be correct.

870 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. And out of their total production of some 310 tons?

Mr. PERA. You have 10 tons reflected as being smuggled.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So even if the small amount of 10 tons is diverted and sold on the illicit market, that would reach the United States in the form of heroin, the 1,000 kilos.

Mr. PERA. That is correct. Of course, I don't think one can assume that the entire illicit opium of Turkey is going to the United States.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I did not mean that. I am just talking about the amount that would be smuggled to satisfy the needs of the illicit trade in the United States it would be the equivalent of 10 tons of opium.

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And, of course, there would be more that would be used for other areas of the world.

Mr. PERA. And the figure of 1,000 kilos of heroin is not inconsistent with the figures given for Turkish opium diverted.

As the illicit opium moves toward the Syrian border, and as it crosses the various border points, its value appreciates considerably. Once it crosses the Syrian border, it may be sold for four or five times the price a trafficker might pay for illicit opium in Turkey.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The figures that we have on the chart showing the price at the Syrian border, is that the price you are talking about?

Mr. PERA. I think you have there a figure for morphine base. You have $350 for morphine base in Turkey and Syria. We haven't come to morphine base yet, but we will.

I might point out that the groups involved in this smuggling are also, in turn, involved in the smuggling of consumer goods. Turkey has had a very tightly controlled economy, and these criminal smuggling groups are involved in multiple illicit operations.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Where is it smuggled from and to?

Mr. PERA. The opium is grown at points in Turkey, and these various other points, and taken across the Syrian border and into Lebanon.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The people of the area on the border of Syria and Turkey—that group is very much like the Turkish peasants who grow the opium.

Mr. PERA. Yes, there is a strong affinity between these people. They may be Arab speaking or Turkish speaking, but the people in the traffic have very close ties and their fathers and sons have very close ties. They have been in smuggling for many years, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The traffic between Syria and Turkey in illicit things like stockings and so forth—are these traded for opium?

Mr. PERA. There is a traffic in consumer goods in reverse of the opium flow.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is used to pay for the opium?

Mr. PERA. It is used to make money and some of this money may be invested in opium to make profits on the other end.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you trace what happens when it gets into Syria?

Mr. PERA. Yes. This opium might go to the ultimate purchaser or broker, and he will have someone extract the morphine from it. This is not too complex a process. For example, it may come by way of mule caravan or by way of automobile across the Turkish border to Syria.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 871

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is rather rough country up through there?

Mr. PERA. Yes, it is, and it is very closely patrolled. There the Turkish gendarmes do a very effective job and on the other side the Syrian forces attempt to close off the borders, too. It is not uncommon that a gunfight occurs between the smugglers and the patrol forces of either government. Some time ago the Turkish authorities mined the crossing points. Of course, it was not long before the smugglers used the method of employing sheep to detonate the mines.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, they would drive the sheep over the minefields and follow after that?

Mr. PERA. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is the opium put into any laboratory operations in Turkey itself?

Mr. PERA. A few years ago this was true. Progress has been made in enforcement in Turkey in various steps. Whereas, let's say, before the 1950's it was not uncommon to have large operations where morphine was extracted from opium in Turkey, this is quite uncommon today. The risk involved in this type of activity is much greater today than awhile back.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The punishment is much more severe.

Mr. PERA. Yes, the punishment is much more severe and the police activity is much more concentrated.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So now the opium is in Syria. What happens to it there?

Mr. PERA. It will go to a broker who ultimately has someone extract the morphine from this opium. Once the morphine is extracted the total space occupied by the article to be smuggled is one-tenth of that that it might have been previously. The extraction operation is relatively simple. A typical example of the operation would be to obtain a 50-kilo oil drum. A used one that is emptied out. Into this will be placed a quantity of opium and an excess quantity of calcium chloride. Water will be added and this mixture will be heated slowly over a fire and stirred. They have to be very careful not to overheat it because this will destroy the morphine in the opium.

After this mixture has been dissolved and heated for awhile, let's say several hours, it is allowed to settle. The undesirable material settles, the vegetable substances, leaves, twigs, et cetera, and all the other components of the opium except morphine. The morphine content and some small quantity of codeine remains in solution. The solution is poured off and allowed to evaporate and this leaves morphine base. This is partially clarified morphine.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That comes out in a powdered form?

Mr. PERA. That is right. When this is dried ultimately it comes out in a powdered form.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Who handles the laboratory operations in Syria?

Mr. PERA. In Syria the traffickers generally do. This isn't a very difficult or complex job. It is taught by one trafficker to another, and they handle this operation.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Where does it go from Syria?

Mr. PERA. From Syria this morphine base will find its way to Beirut, in all probability.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In Lebanon?

872 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. PERA. Or it might go to the port of Aleppo in Syria. If it goes to Beirut, it will be purchased by wealthy dealers in morphine base who have excellent ties with the traffickers in France.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What is the connection between the Beirut operators and the French operators?

Mr. PERA. Lebanon, years ago, was a French protectorate, and there have been very, very close ties established between Corsican underworld operators, in France, and those French-speaking Lebanese, who are in underworld activity, in Lebanon. Through these close ties and prior dealings in other illicit operations there has formed a basis for mutual exchange and trust among the criminal groups dealing in narcotics.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you name some of the large operators in the Beirut area who have financed and dealt in large-scale operations?

Mr. PERA. Yes; one of the most prominent is Samil Khoury. Also, Antoine Harrouk, Antoine Araman, Rached Kuleilat, Tanios Cortas, and Antranik Paroutian, who actually is from Marseilles but who also operated in Beirut. Mr. Mauricio Rosal, who was the Guatemalan Ambassador to the Netherlands and the low countries who traveled to Beirut. His function was as a smuggler of morphine base out of Beirut to France.

Mr. ADLERMAN. He is now in jail?

Mr. PERA. Yes. He is serving 15 years in the U.S. penitentiary. And Etienne Tarditi, who was involved with Rosal in that operation. Camille Choueri, and Jose Moubarak; and these are all people who have been consistently active in the traffic of morphine base.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And these men are well financed?

Mr. PERA. Yes; they are well financed. We know Choueri and the others are wealthy people. Paroutian was active in the United States as a smuggler and during 18 months, from 1956 to 1958, he sent a total of a half million dollars from banks in New York to coded Swiss bank accounts he maintained in Switzerland.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you have background material on these people—their records?

Mr. PERA. Yes; I have background information on them.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you put that into the record?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you do it at the present time?

Mr. PERA. I prefer to do it later.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you tell us what happens when the morphine base leaves Beirut, how it leaves Beirut, and what are the ties with any other routes as to where it may go?

Mr. PERA. The morphine base leaves Beirut packeted usually in waterproof containers in kilo lots.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Pardon me. We have not mentioned the Turkish operators. Can you name them?

Mr. PERA. Yes. These are Ali Csman Tuter, Huseyin Eminoglu, Ali Kambur, Hagi Kiver, Asim Bintepe, Ibrahim Sen, Muhtar Berk, Ali Celen, Durmus Topok, Antranik Paroutian—again, active in Turkey as well as Lebanon—Imirtziades, Ihsan Sekban, and Mehmet Hattatoglu.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you name the principal Syrian violators? Are they El Badawi, Taha, and Dahir?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 873

Will you supply the names at a later time?

Mr. PERA. Yes, I can.

Mahmoud El Badawi, Hasan Taha, and Dahir Khuder Dahir. These individuals have been active.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think you have already named the Lebanese.

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Will you proceed from there?

Mr. PERA. The French traffickers who are, for the most part, represented by the Corsican underworld, contract to have large amounts——

Mr. ADLERMAN. Will you discuss who are the French underworld? Whom does that group consist of and where do they come from?

Mr. PERA. For the most part, the French underworld involved in the heroin traffic originates from the island of Corsica. They have a strong affinity with the Mafia element in Sicily. As a matter of fact, these two people call themselves cousins in their correspondence. They are very closely allied in multiple underworld operations, including the traffic of heroin.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The French Corsican is not only a violator in heroin, but he is generally the criminal group in France; such as, we would have, say, the Mafia group in the United States?

Mr. PERA. Precisely. A few years ago they were involved in extensive armed robberies, so that the French police had to make a concerted effort to stop that type of banditry. They have been involved in counterfeiting operations, extortion plots, in thefts of very valuable paintings, in kidnappings. In all these crimes they have an organized operation, very similar to the Mafia activities.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do they have a discipline somewhat similar to the Mafia in that they have family or planned relationships that are very strong?

Mr. PERA. Yes; not only that but the most identifying thing about their operations is that they have a code of silence similar to that of the Mafia.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So there is a great deal of similarity between the French Corsican and the Mafia groups, whether in Italy or the United States or anywhere else in the world?

Mr. PERA. Precisely. I might also say that they both speak Italian. The Corsicans are bilingual and generally speak Italian as well as French.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The language is important here, is it not, because it allows them to deal with the Syrian or the Lebanese who are French speaking also?

Mr. PERA. I might also mention that many of the Corsicans settled in north Africa and developed very close ties with the Arab world, as did the Italians. In Algiers and Tunis you have had Mafia-type operations.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So you have the situation where the French Corsicans, or if you want to call it the Mafia group, have their tentacles out to the Near East and Africa the same as the Mafia groups in Italy have them in the United States?

Mr. PERA. It is a very similar situation.

874 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. To go a step further, and I am sure you will come to it later, the French groups also extend to the French Canadian areas, too?

Mr. PERA. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you want to proceed?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

The laboratory operators in France are also Corsican or Corsican racketeer financed. It is the Corsican underworld in France that finances them and sets them up. They contract for large quantities of morphine base to be procured in Lebanon or Syria. This is either flown to Marseilles, which is generally the clearing point for this morphine base, or comes by ship, smuggled in by ship to Marseilles, France.

When the morphine base arrives at the port of Marseilles, it is processed into heroin at the laboratory. Here the laboratory operation is a little more complex and requires competence on the part of the chemist if a fine quality of heroin is to be produced.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was this map prepared under your direction?

Mr. PERA. Yes, it was.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And does that show the routes of the different types of narcotics, for heroin and morphine base, and so forth?

Mr. PERA. Yes. We designate heroin by one color and morphine base by another, and the routes each take.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So you have your route in Syria, from Aleppo, and Beirut, going up to Marseilles, which is in the south of France?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What happens to it in Marseilles and why does it go to Marseilles?

Mr. PERA. The center of Corsican hoodlum activity is Marseilles. It is a seaport.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In France, that is the real center of criminality as far as organized crime goes?

Mr. PERA. Yes. Secondly, it is a port, a large seaport, and historically the movement has been by sea. So it is not only the center of hoodlum activity but also a seaport where this material arrives, where it is smuggled in. The operators in France may set up a laboratory in a slum section of Marseilles, or they may rent out a villa between, let's say, Nice and Marseilles, a villa in an isolated area, and furnish it with all the materials necessary for the conversion process.

The materials are not hard to obtain, the chemicals are not unusual, nor is the apparatus.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would you say it was similar to the former American bootlegging processes, where they would set up a still?

Mr. PERA. I think it is a little more difficult to make good heroin than it is to make good alcohol. It takes a little more experience on the part of the chemist. But it is essentially a bootlegging operation.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You have to have a little more skill and a little more technical knowledge to make the heroin from the morphine base than you do from opium to morphine?

Mr. PERA. Exactly. Particularly if the heroin is going to be of high quality, approaching pharmaceutical purity, and this type of heroin is in great demand by the addict market. Considerably greater skill is needed.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 875

Mr. ADLERMAN. Prices range, for the morphine base, to $3,500 per kilo in France?

Mr. PERA. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That would be the price of the heroin, rather.

Mr. PERA. Excuse me. About $350 is the value of the morphine base in Turkey or Lebanon. When the heroin is sold in France, it is sold for $3,500.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, after it is converted from the morphine base into heroin, it is then worth $3,500, and they bought it for $350.

Mr. PERA. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you go from there? What happens after that?

Mr. PERA. We can describe the laboratory operation. Heroin is diacetylmorphine, its technical name, and one acetylates morphine by having it react with acetic anhydride or acetyl chloride. The first thing that would have to be done with the morphine base arriving from Lebanon is to purify it further and remove foreign substances as much as possible. This is done with successive washings, with lamp black and acetone. These washings will whiten the morphine base and render it much more pure, so that when it is finally acetylated the resulting product will be of much greater purity.

Morphine base is then acetylated, being heated with acetic anhydride. Other materials used in this operation are solvents, such as ether, acetone, alcohol. Bone black is used to purify this material. Hydrogen chloride is used, or hydrochloric acid is used, in order to make the hydrochloride salt of heroin, because heroin can only be used for injection purposes once its salt is formed. Otherwise, it would be insoluble in water.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you name the principal French traffickers in the laboratory operations as well as in the sales?

Mr. PERA. Yes. Probably the most notorious laboratory operator in France through the years has been Dominique Albertini. We have Dominique Reissant who many years ago was very active in laboratory operations and in more recent years he has been more active in the traffic of morphine base.

Gabriel Carcassone, he and his brother Alexis, have been active in laboratory operations. I believe his brother is dead now.

Marius Ansaldi was active in laboratory operation and the French police apprehended him while he was operating a laboratory in a suburb of Paris during the early 1950's.

Jean Casanova is also a laboratory operator.

The traffickers involved in this activity are Robert LeCoat, who actually was a stockbroker in Paris. He financed the operation of Rosal, Tarditi, and Barnier. One of the important traffickers and a suspect in counterfeiting operations in France is Charles Marignani, and his associate, Jean Jacobetti. Marcel Franchi is active and so is Joseph Patrizzi, mostly in southern France. Gilbert Coscia is involved with Tarditi.

Mr. ADLERMAN. We have the chart you prepared. Does that chart show all of the people in the Marseilles area who are involved in the trafficking as well as the laboratory operations?

Mr. PERA. Yes; we have both the people in Marseilles and in Paris.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Those that have a single star in front of their names were deported from the United States at one time or another; is that right?

876 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. PERA. Yes. I was giving you the list from Paris.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Those that have the two stars in front of their names were principally involved in laboratory operations?

Mr. PERA. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The Paris list is the same way; is that right?

Mr. PERA. That is right. I was giving you the Paris list initially.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And the Le Havre list would also contain the names of those who are involved in the Le Havre area?

Mr. PERA. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Rather than go through a detailed description of each name, you do have the backup material and records on each of these people, do you not?

Mr. PERA. Yes. I have identifying information.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And we can put them in the record at the close of the hearing?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would like to have the map offered into evidence, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, the map will be printed in the record.

Mr. ADLERMAN. He need not repeat the list of all the names. We can show all the characters involved in this.

(The map referred to faces this page.)

(165)

Mr. ADLERMAN. There is an addendum on there containing the other names in New York.

Can you tell us what happens after it leaves there? Where does it go and whom does it go to?

Mr. PERA. There are several different routes heroin takes following its manufacture in France. It may go to the Mafia traffickers in Italy and Sicily and be rerouted from there to the United States.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The names of those involved in that traffic are also contained on the map under the names of Milan, Genoa, and Sicily; is that correct?

(166)

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And also the Naples area?

Mr. PERA. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And the Rome area?

Mr. PERA. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And the names of all these people that are listed in these areas are the ones that are engaged in the traffic in Italy?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do the Italian traffickers get their supplies directly from the French operators?

Mr. PERA. Since the early 1950's; yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They do not get it from Lebanon or Syria, or if they do it is a very small amount?

Mr. PERA. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The principal traffic, then, flows from Lebanon and Syria to Marseilles, to the Paris laboratories, and back down to Naples, Milan, Genoa, Sicily, Rome, and so forth, and from there where does it go?

(165) (166) Fra le pagine 876-877 del documento originale sono inserite due mappe che — contrassegnate, rispettivamente, con le lettere EE ed FF — sono pubblicate, insieme alle altre carte, nella Parte Terza del presente tomo. (N.d.r.)

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 877

Mr. PERA. From there it is shipped either to the port of New York or to Canada. It might enter Montreal.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are we talking now of the route from Italy down?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would that go to Montreal, too?

Mr. PERA. It can. It might go from, let's say, Sicily, the port of Palermo, to Montreal, or it might go directly to New York.

Mr. ADLERMAN. To New York?

Mr. PERA. Yes. Or other ports on the eastern seaboard. The bulk of the traffic is to New York.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Many of these people have been deported from the United States. Many of these or almost all of them have their Mafia ties, do they not?

Mr. PERA. Yes. Originally many of these people during the early prosecutions by the Italian authorities of the Mafia, in the late 1920's and the early 1930's, fled Italy and entered the United States. Here they set up Mafia-type operations and eventually came into conflict with the law. Some of them were deported later by excellent work done by the Immigration and Naturalization authorities, and returned to Italy where they organized this type of smuggling operation.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The Mafia groups in the Italian area, in the Sicily-Italian area—to whom do they dispose of their heroin in the United States?

Mr. PERA. Their counterparts in the United States involved in organized racketeering activities.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And you have that on the map, I believe, showing the New York area, also Montreal, Toronto, Canada, and Mexico City.

Many of these people in the New York area are French, those that you have listed there?

Mr. PERA. Some of them are French. The bulk are Mafia-type violators.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And many of them are Italians; is that right?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Some of these were connected with the Mafia groups in the United States?

Mr. PERA. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And they dealt directly with the Mafia groups in Italy?

Mr. PERA. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You have another route, do you not, going from France directly to Canada?

Mr. PERA. That is true. We haven't mentioned this.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What is the big area in Canada that it goes to?

Mr. PERA. Montreal, for the most part, Toronto, those two cities.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The flow to Canada, to Montreal—has that been increasing in recent years? Where it formerly went directly to New York, much of it now goes to Canada and down to New York?

Mr. PERA. Yes. Up to the very early 1950's the bulk of the flow went directly to New York. Subsequent to that, the flow of heroin, more and more, went to Montreal, to the Canadian ports.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So the French have assumed the more prominent role in the exportation and receiving of the narcotics in Montreal for further shipment to the United States?

878 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. PERA. Yes. Also we have Mafia groups in Canada as well that receive this drug.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You have Mafia groups in Canada?

Mr. PERA. Yes, such as the Agueci brothers in Toronto.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do they deal mostly with the Italians?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. But the French Canadians deal mainly with the French?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, they seem to have trust and confidence only in their own groups.

Mr. PERA. Yes. There has been considerable difficulty in assuring payments for narcotic drugs delivered in the United States.

The laboratory operators on several occasions have been swindled by the Italian racketeers in the United States, so it has been a practice with them to send along someone representing them with the drugs in order to assure payment for the heroin delivered. Sometimes even this has proven unsatisfactory and they have arranged that someone prominent in the French underworld accompany the shipments.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, they do have couriers and they have guards over the couriers to see that it gets there and that they get paid for it.

Mr. PERA. Mostly it is someone responsible to collect the moneys, yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They have a courier and a collector?

Mr. PERA. Precisely.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This requires some high finance, does it not?

Mr. PERA. Yes, it does.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And some of the amounts involved in the transactions on the wholesale level are rather large?

Mr. PERA. Yes, quite large.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And very frequently there are cash payments, unless they have a lot of confidence in the people they are delivering it to.

Mr. PERA. Faith doesn't go too far. It is mostly cash payments.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What are the sums that you would mention that would be involved in a fairly large shipment?

Mr. PERA. I gave one sum or mentioned one sum a little while earlier and that was in connection with the Paroutian operation. We recorded, during the period of 18 months between 1956 and 1958, a total of half a million dollars that went from banks in New York to coded accounts in Switzerland that were maintained by Paroutian and his associates. All this evidence was presented in Federal court in connection with the conviction of Paroutian.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This would be on a real high level of criminals involved where the value of the heroin would be between $10,000 in Canada and $16,000 or $18,000 in the United States. It would be at that level that we are talking about.

Mr. PERA. We are speaking of the wholesale level as described on the finance chart.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I do not want to go down through all these names, but I would like to have the record show—

The CHAIRMAN. That whole thing is already in the record.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 879

Mr. ADLERMAN. Yes, except that we have not discussed the Mexico City names.

The CHAIRMAN. They go into the record at the end of Mr. Pera's testimony. The list of names accompanying it should go into the record. (See fold-in on p. 876.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is there any other route by which heroin is sent from abroad which finds its way into the United States by way of Mexico?

Mr. PERA. Yes, there is.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What is the route on that?

Mr. PERA. The French traffickers have, during many bad experiences, found it necessary to establish an operating point in Mexico City because of seizures in both Montreal, Canada, and the United States. They set up operations in Mexico City whereby large amounts of heroin were sent to the United States by way of Mexico City. The French operators that established a sizable operation there include Paul Mondoloni, Jose Hawayer-Nayer, Roger Coudert, and Antonino Farina.

The CHAIRMAN. Are we the principal market for the illicit drug traffic in the world?

Mr. PERA. Yes, in the consumption of heroin.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Except for the Far East.

Mr. PERA. When we speak of the illicit production of Turkey, I believe we are the principal market for that illicit production. But we are not considering here the Far East.

The CHAIRMAN. Not what?

Mr. PERA. We are not considering here opium produced in the Far East, for the illicit production of Turkey.

The CHAIRMAN. As I understand these maps and charts, they simply deal with the opium production in Turkey, and you are tracing it.

Mr. PERA. Yes, the illicit opium production.

The CHAIRMAN. And we are, the United States, the principal market for that illicit production?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Who would be the second largest in the use of heroin? I am talking now of illicit heroin.

Mr. PERA. There is a substantial addict market in Canada.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would you say that their number of addicts is anywhere near as high as ours?

Mr. PERA. I don't believe so. I can't give an estimate as to the number of addicts in Canada.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There are some countries that use a great deal more narcotics than we do. For example, England uses much more narcotics than the United States.

Mr. PERA. The United Kingdom has a per capita consumption of licit narcotic drugs that is twice that of the United States.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is per capita?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Of course, in the Near East you have a very large use of heroin by Iran.

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What is the source of their supply? Would that be Turkey, also?

880 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. PERA. Years ago there was a tremendous amount of opium grown in Iran. There were consistent enforcement efforts directed toward lowering this opium production. These were successful. So today, Iran, instead of being an opium grower that furnishes the illicit market outside of Iran, has to go to other sources. The traffickers there have to go to Turkish sources in order to get opium to make heroin for their own uses.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So Iran may not be one of the biggest users but it is one of the larger?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And in the Far East you do have places like Hong Kong with over 150,000 addicts, or more than 3 times the number that we have in the entire United States.

Mr. PERA. The entire Far East is, by far, the world's greatest center for consumption of narcotic drugs. It doesn't compare to what we have in the United States.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You have various backup materials, notice, and you have information relating to particular cases which would show a pattern of traffic, and so forth. Rather than have you take the time of the committee in setting this forth orally, we would like you to submit that in writing. I think you have prepared some material along that line.

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Some of these outfits engaged in the heroin traffic are real bigtime criminal operators abroad. For example, I think the Paroutian outfit was engaged in very large-scale thefts that amounted to millions and millions of dollars.

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And some of the others have been involved in very large-scale operations, in thievery and counterfeiting, is that correct?

Mr. PERA. Yes. By far their total criminal operations would probably exceed in revenue the money they gain from the traffic of narcotics, if you considered the total criminal operations.

As an example, during the first few months of 1958 the Cotroni group, and those involved with it, were responsible for burglaries of Canadian banks of negotiable securities amounting to approximately $12 million or so.

Mr. ADLERMAN. We do have several other maps showing the paths of operations of the other gangs. I would like to offer those in evidence at this time, together with your backup material, if we can do that.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you prepared the maps?

Mr. PERA. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Are they self-explanatory, largely?

Mr. PERA. Largely they are; yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Together with the other material that he has.

Mr. PERA. Yes; I have written material that would explain them, too.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, they may all go into the record.

(The map may be found in the files of the subcommittee.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is there anything else that you feel you would like particularly to discuss in this area?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 881

Mr. PERA. With regard to the traffic; no, I think I have covered it. The CHAIRMAN. Are there any other aspects of this? Are there any other subject matters you would like to discuss?

Mr. PERA. No; I think that is all.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You think everything else will be covered by your written testimony?

Mr. PERA. Yes; and by succeeding witnesses.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you also have photographs of laboratory operations in France?

Mr. PERA. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can we include with exhibit No. 2 all of the backup material?

The CHAIRMAN. We will let the backup material, along with the photographs, be designated as exhibit Nos. 2, 2-A, 2-B, and 2-C and printed in the record.

(History of narcotic traffic follows. Backup material may be found in appendix on p. 945.)

EXHIBIT No. 2

NARCOTIC TRAFFIC ORIGINATING IN AND EMANATING FROM TURKEY, SYRIA, AND LEBANON

(Witness: A representative of the Bureau of Narcotics)

The Turks have cultivated the opium poppy (Papaver somniferum) for centuries. Modern Turkey ranks second among the four leading opium-producing nations. During 1962 Turkey produced 340 tons of licit opium, representing for that year approximately slightly over one-third of the world's medical and scientific needs.

The cultivation of opium for the world licit market is permitted by the Turkish Government in seven provinces; namely, Afyon, Eskisehir, Amasya, Kuhtahya, Malatya, Denizli, and Konya. However, the greatest amount of Turkish commercial opium is produced in Afyon Province. The control of opium production is the responsibility of the Provincial Technical Agricultural Office and all legal purchasing of opium is done by "Toprak" which is equivalent to the Turkish Government opium monopoly. The morphine content of opium ranges from 6 to 25 percent, depending upon the origin. Turkish opium is noted for its superior quality and the relatively high morphine content, which averages from 10 to 18 percent.

A farmer is free to plant opium provided his "kaza" or administrative district has been approved for that purpose. Opium cultivation is permitted in all "kazas" of Afyon but in the other provinces named only a few districts have been approved. Following the planting a farmer must submit a declaration to the agricultural office describing the location and the number of dekars (equivalent to 10 square meters) of opium planted along with an estimate of anticipated yield.

The agricultural office is responsible for the checking on these estimates and seeing to it that the declarations have been filed. The staff from this office goes from district to district inspecting fields. Under Turkish laws, farmers are subject to penalties of at least 3 months imprisonment if they underestimate the size of their crop or if they fail to deliver the amount of opium they have declared when "Toprak" purchases the crop.

One dekar produces in the vicinity of three kilos of raw opium and the income from this crop substantially exceeds that obtainable from the growth of grain or other crops. Furthermore, a greater labor force is required in the cultivation of opium and the relatively high income sustains increased employment in the localities where this crop is produced.

"Toprak" purchases opium from the Turkish farmers at a price that varies between $8 and $12 per kilogram. In recent years the number of farmers licensed to grow opium in Turkey approximates 100,000.

Despite these governmental measures, Turkey through the years has experienced unabated overproduction of opium. The farmers refuse to sell to the

882 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Government their entire output of opium, preferring to channel their excess supplies to the underworld, which affords them a higher price. The contraband opium buyer-traffickers pay the peasants from $1 to $5 more per kilogram than the price fixed by the monopoly.

Turk peasant producers and even the wholesalers who buy up quantities from groups of producers are often dealt with leniently when they are apprehended. Whereas traffickers dealing in morphine base and heroin have received substantial penitentiary sentences, the judiciary has meted out to opium traffickers minor prison sentences up to 6 months.

There are indications that the number of clandestine heroin conversion factories in Turkey has diminished. The heroin output in Turkey is more for national criminal consumption rather than for smuggling outside the country.

A substantial portion of the annual opium crop of Turkey is diverted to the illicit market by smugglers who purchase the farmers' excess production. Estimates of opium entering the illicit traffic vary between 6 and 8 percent of Turkish annual production.

The smuggling groups who purchase the farmers' overproduction are financed in many instances by wealthy merchants. As the opium moves toward and across the Syrian border, its value in the illicit market increases substantially. When first purchased from the farmer, the illicit raw opium may cost a dollar or two per kilo above what the Government monopoly may pay. Once it crosses this Syrian border it may be sold for four or five times that price.

The groups involved in this smuggling are, in turn, also responsible for the smuggling of consumer goods from Syria into Turkey. It should be remembered that Turkey for years has had a very tightly controlled economy and that black market has flourished in the face of these controls. As an example, one of the most important traffickers, one Huseyin Eminoglu, is reputed to be an extremely wealthy Turk. While he is described as one of the most important traffickers in smuggling opium, he at one time was implicated in smuggling charges involving tons of contraband coffee and English nylon.

Raw opium is smuggled over the Turkish border into Syria by several routes usually in groups or caravans. The groups of smugglers are usually armed and will not hesitate to exchange fire with the Turkish or Syrian patrols they might encounter. The smugglers may employ animals, such as mules or camels, or those having the means may use trucks or cars for the purpose.

In recent years the Turkish authorities have resorted to placing mines in the path of the routes used by the smugglers. However, the smugglers have devised countermeasures such as the herding of a flock of sheep ahead of them through a minefield in order to detonate mines planted and make the routes safe.

Because of the increased prices the smuggled opium fetches in Syria and Lebanon, this type of traffic has continued through the years and is engaged in by individuals with a variety of backgrounds. Some of this opium finds its way to Aleppo, Syria, where it is purchased by traffickers who extract from the raw opium a morphine base.

This is done with primitive equipment such as a used 50-gallon oil drum in which the opium is dissolved with water while being warmed over a fire. To the mixture is added chalk or calcium chloride precipitating the substances other than morphine. The filtrate, or liquid portion, is then poured off and allowed to evaporate leaving a residue which is partially clarified morphine base.

Ten kilograms of opium will make approximately 1 kilogram of morphine base. The conversion of opium into morphine base may also take place in Beirut, Lebanon, and the techniques used in this conversion are substantially the same.

Turkish authorities have stated that some 11 persons are killed each month in the smuggling operations over the Syrian border.

The General Directorate of the Security Forces of Syria reported during May of 1961 that in the course of the 5-year period from 1956 to 1961 the Syrian Security Forces seized some 15,800 kilograms of opium smuggled into that country from Turkey.

Most of the morphine base from Lebanon is smuggled into France, particularly Marseilles. In France there are clandestine laboratories which convert the morphine base into heroin. These clandestine laboratories are for the most part operated by French-Corsicans, who smuggle most of the heroin into the United States and Canada for eventual consumption in North America.

It is noteworthy that there is a close ethnic relationship between Syrian black marketeers and the Turkish families trafficking in opium. There is also a close personal association between the French-speaking Lebanese and Syrians and many of the French-Corsican narcotic traffickers of France. Most Lebanese and Syrian narcotic traffickers are unwilling to deal directly with European traffickers unless there has been evidence of past trustworthiness and rapport.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 883

The underworld elements in Turkey dealing in narcotics are for the most part organized groups which engage in multiple illicit operations. Despite the opium overproduction in Turkey, that country does not experience any overburdening, serious addiction problem, although addiction per se does exist there. There is a notable scarcity of addiction among the opium poppy farmers and in the opium producing areas. The penalties under Turkish law are somewhat harsh; however, the full implementation of these laws is rarely exercised.

The French police several years ago estimated that monthly there are smuggled into the United States approximately 100 kilograms of heroin from French clandestine laboratories. Most of this heroin is manufactured from morphine base derived of Turkish opium. This would mean that 1,000 kilograms of opium would have to be smuggled from Turkey each month in order to supply the French clandestine laboratories with the amount required for their output. On a yearly basis, about 10 metric tons of opium would have to be smuggled out of Turkey.

A vigorous enforcement program in Turkey during recent years has revised these estimates downward considerably. It should be borne in mind that these estimates are, at the best, only educated guesses and subject to the many changes in the patterns of the drug traffic.

ADDENDUM

Background sheets have been prepared on the following named individuals mentioned in this report:

- | | |
|-----------------------------|-------------------------------|
| 1. Alaouie, Mounir | 12. Kiyar, Hagi Ibrahim |
| 2. Araman, Antoine | 13. Makkouk, Omar |
| 3. Berk, Muhtar | 14. Paroutian, Antranik |
| 4. Berti, Enzo | 15. Patrizi, Joseph |
| 5. Bezal, Ali | 16. Pirico, Francesco |
| 6. Bezal, Sefer | 17. Rahmo, Fayssal |
| 7. Bourbonnais, Charles | 18. Rosal, Mauricio |
| 8. Graziani, Gabriel Lucien | 19. Saverino, Francesco Paolo |
| 9. Harrouk, Antoine | 20. Sen, Ibrahim |
| 10. Kevorkian, Hagop | 21. Soysal, Ahmet |
| 11. Khoury, Samil | 22. Tarditi, Etienne |

(Complete background sheets on above-named individuals may be found in the appendix on p. 945.)

ANTRANIK PAROUTIAN AND GABRIEL GRAZIANI

This case involves the international traffic in heroin by a group which participated in all phases of the traffic from the purchase of the opium grown in Turkey to the final distribution of heroin in the United States. The case also involves the first successful extradition of a narcotic violator to the United States from a foreign country, as well as the first and only exposure in the U.S. Federal court through the cooperation of the Swiss Government, and of Swiss bank accounts maintained by these defendants.

SUMMARY

During early 1958 there were a series of burglaries of Canadian banks in which approximately $12 million in negotiable securities were stolen. It was suspected that the Cotroni group of Montreal was responsible for these crimes. This group was known for years to have trafficked in heroin, of which they furnished to violators in the United States.

During April 1958, Graziani, a partner of Paroutian, was apprehended in Geneva, Switzerland, while he attempted to negotiate a number of securities which were part of those stolen from Canadian banks. The Swiss officials arrested Graziani and alerted both Canadian and United States authorities. It was learned that Graziani maintained an apartment in New York.

Subsequent investigation revealed that Graziani had resided with Paroutian in this apartment. Further, that they kept a secret compartment in the closet located there for the purpose of storing both heroin and stolen securities.

Subsequent search of this apartment disclosed a small amount of pure heroin to be hidden in the secret cache.

884 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Additional investigation also established that during the period of 18 months commencing from the latter part of 1956, Graziani and Paroutian had forwarded to coded numbered accounts in Switzerland a total of approximately one-half million dollars. It was also established that both Paroutian and Graziani operated in partnership with Giuseppe Cotroni, Rene Robert, and Peter Stepanoff, alias Peter the Russian, the latter subsequently identified as the perpetrator of some of the bank burglaries.

Paroutian and his associates would smuggle approximately 27 kilos of heroin at a time from France to Canada, secreting the drug in hidden compartments of automobiles which they had brought from France to Canada into the United States.

Following this investigation a Federal indictment was obtained charging Graziani and Paroutian with possession of narcotics and conspiracy to violate Federal narcotics acts. Both had returned to France where extradition was impossible.

During early 1960, Paroutian was apprehended by Lebanese authorities involving an investigation of some 10 kilos of morphine base seized in Lebanon. Investigation by Lebanese authorities and agents of the Bureau of Narcotics disclosed that Paroutian had traveled to Turkey where he negotiated the purchase of large quantities of opium and its subsequent conversion into morphine base in Lebanon. The morphine base seized was taken from underlings working for Paroutian. However, because several witnesses against Paroutian recanted in Lebanon, the case against him there was not prosecutable. He was held pending extradition proceedings initiated in the United States. The extradition was effected during June 1960 when he was brought to the United States to stand trial.

During this period of imprisonment, while awaiting trial, Paroutian by chance, had as a cellmate a Brazilian national who had just been apprehended on an attempt to sell a quantity of cocaine to a narcotic agent working undercover. Never at a loss to further his dealing in the traffic, Paroutian made close friends with the Brazilian and attempted to convince the latter that he should enter a partnership with him and supply cocaine from sources known to the Brazilian in Bolivia, to members of the Paroutian organization, who were to travel to South America posing as tourists with automobiles in which the cocaine was to be hidden and smuggled on the return trip to France.

Paroutian told the Brazilian that the market for cocaine in France and particularly in Lebanon would get them high prices in both of these countries. During this period the Brazilian related to Federal narcotic agents the conversations he had with Paroutian and subsequently testified in Federal court against Paroutian.

Following his trial in Federal court in the eastern district of New York, Paroutian was sentenced to 20 years in prison. The case was subsequently reversed by the court of appeals and Paroutian was retried.

Upon retrial before Hon. Jacob Mishler, U.S. district court judge, eastern district of New York, and most able prosecution by Mr. Joseph J. Marcheso, then deputy chief of the criminal division, eastern district of New York, this defendant was again convicted and since was sentenced to serve 20 years on two separate counts and fined $20,000 on each count.

Among Paroutian's outlets in the United States was the organization headed by Carmine Galante. Both Paroutian and Graziani, in addition to their activities in Canada and New York were equally active in Florida and Cuba.

EXHIBIT No. 2A

FRANCE

SUMMARY OF TESTIMONY

The bulk of heroin manufactured illegally in France is destined for consumption by the addict market in the United States. The French-organized underworld, composed predominately of Corsican gangsters, is responsible for the bulk of the manufacture of illegal heroin. The developments leading to the formation of underworld laboratory facilities in France and some details regarding the overall operation of the organized French underworld in narcotic traffic and their relationship with criminal groups from other countries in establishing the chain of flow of heroin being smuggled into the United States will be the subject of this report.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 885

FRANCE—THE CENTER OF ILLICIT HEROIN MANUFACTURE

Since the early 1950's France has been the center for the laboratory operations which produce heroin from morphine base smuggled into that country from illicit sources in the Near East. This laboratory operation is a most important link in the chain of flow of the heroin which arrives in the United States for consumption by the addict population in this country.

ROLE OF THE CORSICAN UNDERWORLD IN THE FRENCH TRAFFIC

An important element in the French narcotic traffic is the closely knit underworld organization composed of criminals of Corsican origin. Ethnically, this criminal group has much in common with its counterpart from the island of Sicily. Italian is the first language of both groups. On both islands conditions of poverty have existed for many years and there has been a migration toward a mainland in search of better opportunities. Both are seafaring people who have had a long history of smuggling activity. Both islands have produced a criminal fraternity which is strongly affected by family ties and clan influence. This criminal activity has a rigid code of its own which, within its limited sphere, makes it, in effect, a second government.

We have found in the past that Mafia elements from Sicily have referred to those in the Corsican underworld organization as "cousins." With the settlement of many Corsicans during years past in French possessions in North Africa and the Levant, there developed a trade, both licit and illicit, with French-speaking merchants in these areas.

INCEPTION OF ILLICIT LABORATORY ACTIVITY IN FRANCE

The traffic in illicit heroin during World War II was virtually nonexistent. Immediately following World War II, the heroin which was smuggled into the United States for illicit consumption was produced in licensed pharmaceutical laboratories in northern Italy and illegally diverted into Mafia channels in that country.

Following the exposure of this activity by the Italian authorities, assisted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics stationed in Italy, the Italian Government took forceful action. The manufacture of heroin was outlawed in Italy and during the early 1950's this source was eliminated.

The Corsican gangsters in France immediately recognized the lucrative possibilities of replacing the Italian sources and commenced the manufacture of heroin which was then directed to the Mafia outlets in Sicily.

The strong affinity between these two groups readily provided for a smooth-working organization which obtained massive quantities of morphine base from Lebanon and Syria. There French-speaking merchants contracted to accumulate large quantities of morphine base on orders placed by the Corsican racketeers with whom they had dealt in other commerce during previous years.

DESCRIPTION OF LABORATORY OPERATION IN THE MANUFACTURE OF HEROIN

The morphine base in most cases is provided French seamen couriers whose ships stop at ports of call at Beirut, Aleppo, or Istanbul. These seamen are in the employ of the Corsican gangs and smuggle the base into the port of Marseilles when their ships call there. Marseilles has long been the center of Corsican hoodlum activity. There the laboratory operators take delivery of the base and forward it to the location of their clandestine laboratory. Such a laboratory may be located in a villa near Marseilles, along the Cote D'Azur, or in a slum section of Marseilles. The locations vary and are changed from time to time to avoid detection by French police.

The equipment required in these laboratories is not elaborate but the technique in manufacturing a high purity heroin must be good and requires some skill. The partially clarified morphine base is purified by successive washings with acetone or similar solvent and the use of bone black or activated charcoal. Following its purification, the morphine is acetylated. This process requires the use of acetic anhydride, a chemical which has widespread use in industry, particularly in the manufacture of textiles.

Heroin, in actuality, is diacetyl morphine and the process by which morphine is acetylated is that by which heroin is manufactured. The basic heroin must then be transformed into the hydrochloride salt before it is usable by the addict as the heroin molecule itself is relatively insoluble in water and cannot be dissolved easily for injection purposes. The chemical operation is complete when heroin hydrochloride has been manufactured.

886 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Among the chemicals used in quantity in the manufacture of heroin are included acetic anhydride or acetyl chloride (either may be used for the purpose of acetylation.) Also used are solvents such as ether, acetone, alcohol, bone black or other forms of activated charcoal and hydrogen chloride. In addition to this, there is required laboratory paraphernalia including retorts, flasks, condensers, heating elements, thermometers, glass tubing, etc. The laboratory operations, not being particularly complex, may be moved from one place to the other.

The Corsican gangsters have through the years succeeded in corrupting professional chemists who have made heroin. These chemists have also taught some of the more adept hoodlums the operation and there are a number of gangsters who have become laboratory operators through the knowledge of chemistry acquired in this manner.

For every kilo of morphine base, under the best conditions and with very competent technique, approximately $1\frac{1}{3}$ kilos of heroin hydrochloride can be manufactured. Because clandestine laboratories often do not provide the most excellent conditions and because the operators are not always as technically competent as those employed by legitimate pharmaceutical houses, it can be estimated that the yield for 1 kilo of morphine base may be closer to an equal amount of heroin in the illegal conversion.

MANUFACTURED HEROIN ENTERS TRAFFIC

Following the manufacture of the heroin, the drug is packaged in kilo quantities in plastic bags (formerly in oil cloth watertight containers) and is placed in the hands of a courier who will deliver large quantities to the Mafia traffickers in Sicily for eventual distribution in the United States, alternately, it may be placed in the hands of a seaman courier who will deliver it to the Canadian traffickers in Montreal for eventual distribution through underworld channels in the United States. False bottom trunks, hidden compartments in automobiles, or other smuggling paraphernalia are often used for this purpose.

While most of the laboratories are located in the Marseilles area, some of the laboratory operators have set up facilities in the suburbs of Paris, another center of activity for the Corsican underworld.

It should be noted that those in the Corsican underworld often operate lucrative legitimate enterprises acquired from revenue from illicit sources. Some of these include industry, banking, import-export, and operation of night clubs and restaurants. Those in the Corsican criminal fraternity have been equally active in other organized criminal pursuits such as the traffic in counterfeit currency, the smuggling of contraband cigarettes, the theft and dealing in stolen paintings or objects of art, stolen gems, furs, and extortion. A few years ago this group was active in widespread armed robbery to such an extent that a concerted effort was made by the French police and severe measures were taken so that this menace was repressed.

The organized Corsican criminal element does not hesitate to work closely with other criminal groups or cooperate with criminals outside their sphere when opportunities promising a mutual advantage arise. In many aspects the organized underworld activity in France is similar to that existing in Italy and the United States.

FINANCIAL ASPECT OF FRENCH ILLICIT LABORATORY OPERATION

The scale and extent of the illicit laboratory operation in France require a considerable financial investment on the part of the laboratory operators and those backing such ventures. Exhaustive investigation conducted by the French police with the cooperation of Swiss authorities have shown large bank drafts between the major traffickers in France, the sources of morphine base in Lebanon, and the outlets for this heroin in Italy, Canada, the United States, and Mexico which occur through secret accounts maintained in Swiss banks.

One of the difficulties facing the French operators is the complete lack of guarantee of payment for heroin they deliver to the United States and Italy. Those engaged in this large-scale international crime do not always show integrity in their dealings.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 887

To guarantee that delivery of large shipments to Canada and the United States takes place and to supervise the collection of moneys, the French operators of times send a trusted confederate to New York or Montreal to guarantee the delivery and payment for it.

The traffickers in Montreal have established a considerably better record as to financial responsibility and are, therefore, more trusted by the French sources of supply. For this reason, the Canadian group has acted as brokers or intermediaries between the French sources and the New York outlets.

FRENCH SOURCES OF HEROIN FOLLOWING WORLD WAR II

Shortly following World War II, a laboratory for the conversion of heroin from morphine base was operated by Marius Ansaldi, an underworld chemist, and Dominique Reissant, both important figures in the French Corsican underworld fraternity. Their laboratory was located in the suburbs of Paris. Most of the heroin they manufactured was furnished by Francois Spirito, a notorious leader in the Corsican underworld of Marseilles. Spirito, alias Charles Faccia, had been closely associated with Mafia elements in the United States before his deportation from this country in 1953. He was equally familiar with the more important Canadian underworld figures in Montreal and Toronto, Canada.

Spirito's close associate in the narcotic traffic was Joseph Orsini, who traveled to the United States and Canada where he established outlets for the heroin from Ansaldi's laboratory. Spirito and Orsini worked closely with Antoine D'Agostino, alias Michelle Sisco, and the late Jean David, alias John Laget. Orsini, D'Agostino and their associates were well known to the French police. This group had been identified as collaborators during World War II and D'Agostino had been sentenced to death in absentia by the French courts as the result of a murder occurring during their wartime collaboration with the Germans.

This group was equally involved in a wide assortment of organized criminal activities in France during the war period, as well as the early postwar period. In order to escape arrest in France, several of them entered the United States illegally and assumed false identities in New York City where they immediately set up outlets for heroin produced by their associates in France.

Among those who established a working relationship with the Reissant-Ansaldi group were New York traffickers, Eugene Giannini, Giacomo Reina, and Salvatore Shillitani, alias Sally Shields. another New York outlet for this group was Saul Gelb for many years a notorious international trafficker.

As the result of the investigation conducted by the Bureau of Narcotics, indictments were secured at the southern district of New York implicating Giannini, Shillitani, Giacomo Reina, and others in a narcotics conspiracy case. A separate Federal narcotic conspiracy case was developed against Saul Gelb, Harry Stromberg, and their associates at the southern district of New York.

Working closely with the French police, agents of the Bureau of Narcotics succeeded in developing information concerning Marius Ansaldi. During June of 1952 French police culminated this investigation by raiding a villa in the Montbaron, a suburb of Paris, France. The villa was the site of Ansaldi's secret heroin laboratory. The raid resulted in the seizure of equipment and quantities of heroin and morphine base, as well as the arrest of Ansaldi and several of his associates.

Reissant was not implicated in this case and continues to be an important figure in the narcotic traffic in France to this date. His specialty now is the obtaining of large quantities of morphine base from sources in the Middle East for illegal heroin laboratories operated by his associates in France. During 1953, Marius Ansaldi was convicted of operating a clandestine heroin laboratory (prison term). The French police report that he died during 1960.

LABORATORY ACTIVITY AND NARCOTIC TRAFFIC IN FRANCE DURING RECENT YEARS—THE FOUR MAJOR GROUPS INVOLVED

As a result of close cooperation between the French police and agents of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, we have been able to obtain some excellent sources of information concerning the extent of the narcotic traffic and laboratory operations in France during recent years. This information specifies that the narcotic traffic in that country is controlled by four Corsican underworld groups.

The first is the organization of Francois Spirito which continues to function unabated to date. Spirito, through the years, has developed close association with major Mafia figures, both in Italy and the United States. He funnels heroin manufactured illegally in France to these Mafia outlets.

888 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

One of his principal associates in this traffic is Salvatore Caneba, a Mafia leader deported from the United States during 1953, who now resides in Rome, Italy. Caneba has been involved recently in a narcotic case developed jointly by the Italian police and agents of the Bureau of Narcotics working in Italy. He is, as well, subject of intensive investigation in the anti-Mafia drive now being waged by the Italian authorities.

Among Spirito's close Corsican criminal associates in Marseilles, France, is Dominick Venturi. The latter's brother, Jean Venturi, resides in Montreal, Canada. Persistent information from French underworld sources indicates that the latter is furnished large quantities of heroin by the Spirito-Venturi combine at Marseilles. The heroin is smuggled into Canada by Corsican seamen smugglers who sail aboard French-line ships plying the port of Marseilles and ports along the St. Lawrence Seaway and the Great Lakes. Also associated with the Spirito-Venturi organization and an understudy to the leader, is Marcel Francisi, an equally important figure in the French underworld.

According to knowledgeable underworld sources in France, the Spirito organization in recent years is responsible for the smuggling of approximately 50 kilograms of pure heroin monthly into the United States from France.

The second organization is headed by Charles Marigniani, alias Lolo. He is a Corsican about 60 years of age who now resides in Paris, France. He works closely with Jean Jacobetti, also a Corsican and a resident of Paris. Both Marigniani and Jacobetti have also been active traffickers in counterfeit currency and stolen objects of art. Leading members of this organization are Francois Franchi and Gilbert Coscia.

Coscia at the present time is under indictment at the southern district of New York in a case involving the largest seizure of heroin ever recorded. This seizure took place in New York during October 1960. Also implicated as defendants and convicted as a result of this seizure were Mauricio Rosal, former Guatemalan Ambassador to Belgium and the Netherlands, a paid courier and smuggler for the organization; Etienne Tarditi, a French national and member of the Corsican criminal element, who traveled to New York representing the French sources of supply; Charles Bourbonnais, U.S. citizen, an airline purser operating between Paris, France, and New York, N.Y., who was charged with the responsibility of delivering large amounts of money amounting to several hundred thousand dollars in payment of heroin received in New York to the organization at Paris, France; and Nicholas Calamaras, a lesser figure whose job it was to take delivery of the narcotic drugs for the Mafia outlets of New York.

Implicated with Coscia in France in the seizure of this heroin were Robert Lecoat, a stockbroker in Paris, France, and the financial manipulator for the underworld; Felix Barnier, the go-between for the Corsican underworld and Lecoat, and Gilbert Coscia. The Marigniani organization, according to information furnished, smuggles monthly into the United States approximately 50 kilograms of heroin from France.

The third organization is that operated by Joseph Patrizzi who works closely with Charles Peysson, a notorious Corsican violator who was implicated in the famous Aga Khan jewel robbery which took place on the French Riviera several years ago. This group utilizes the outlets for heroin in the United States, Canada, and Mexico established by their fellow Corsican trafficker, Paul Mondoloni. Working closely with Mondoloni in furnishing heroin to traffickers in New York via Florida, Mexico, and Canada are Jean Baptiste Croce and Ansan Bistoni. Equally active as outlets for the Patrizzi organization were Gabriel Graziani, and Antranik Paroutian, both of Marseilles, France. Paroutian was recently sentenced to 20 years for violation of the Federal narcotics laws at the eastern district of New York after his extradition from Beirut, Lebanon, during 1960. According to undercover sources, the Patrizzi organization was formerly headed by Dominique Nicoli, a Corsican underworld leader who was murdered in Marseilles.

The fourth group was active in France until it was disbanded as the result of a joint effort by the French police and agents of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics working in France and the United States. This group was composed of the Aranci brothers, Joseph, Marius, and George. These brothers specialized in furnishing heroin to American seamen smugglers for delivery to their underworld customers in New York.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 889

During April of 1960, the U.S. Narcotics Bureau agent working in an undercover capacity purchased heroin from Louis Santiago, one of these seamen, at New York, N.Y., and subsequently made arrangements for delivery of heroin by the latter's shipmate, Clarence Aspelund, also a seaman smuggler. A total of five kilograms were seized and, as a result of the investigation which followed, the Aranci brothers were implicated and were subsequently arrested in France.

While the Aranci brothers had not trafficked in massive quantities of heroin, they had, for over 20 years, been responsible for a smooth-running organization which, with regularity, smuggled substantial quantities of heroin by means of seamen couriers from France to the United States. Since the conviction of the Aranci brothers during 1960, this group has been disbanded.

The most important single operator of the clandestine laboratory in France is Dominique Albertini. A clever underworld figure, the latter learned the chemistry involved in the manufacture of heroin from morphine base and has been successful in this operation for a period of over 25 years. His success has been such that he has been able to furnish heroin he manufactures to several of the groups previously mentioned. Albertini operates this laboratory in the vicinity of Marseilles, France, and has been the subject of continuous investigation by the French police.

During 1952 he attempted to establish outlets in the United States for the heroin he was manufacturing and entered the United States illegally at Windsor, Ontario, for that purpose. He was apprehended and sentenced (to serve 2 years in the Federal penitentiary) under the immigration laws of the United States. Following the sentence he was deported to France where he resumed his activities in producing heroin for several of the Corsican organizations mentioned above on an even larger scale.

The total output of the illicit heroin for France destined for illegal consumption in the United States, on the basis of the information learned above, is in the vicinity of 150 kilos monthly. This coincides with recent estimates made by the French police.

FRENCH PENALTIES FOR NARCOTIC OFFENSES LESS SEVERE THAN IN THE UNITED STATES

While the coordinated effort by the French police and agents of the Bureau of Narcotics working overseas has done much to contain this activity, particularly when it has resulted in substantial prison sentences meted out such traffickers when they have been apprehended in the United States, it is apparent that the enormous profits accrued by the French criminal organizations engaged in this activity continues to make their participation in the narcotics traffic attractive to them.

Certainly if the traffickers who are apprehended after difficult and painstaking investigation by the French police were sentenced to long prison terms by the French courts, as they have been under the mandatory penalties in the United States, there might be reconsideration as to their participation because of the increased risks involved. The maximum penalty for trafficking in narcotics in France is 5 years imprisonment. More often than not, French courts have sentenced important violators to prison terms of 2 years or less.

MORE RECENT DEVELOPMENTS IN NARCOTIC TRAFFIC BETWEEN FRANCE AND THE UNITED STATES

During January of 1962 an investigation conducted jointly by the agents of the Bureau of Narcotics and the New York City Police Department resulted in the apprehension of Jacques Angelvin. The latter, a popular French television entertainer, was arrested following his arrival at New York when he smuggled approximately 50 kilos of heroin in hidden compartments in an automobile which he brought with him aboard ship from France. Investigation disclosed that Angelvin was closely associated with Francois Scaglia, a Corsican hoodlum from Marseilles and Paris, France. The latter was also arrested in New York with Angelvin. Involved in this operation were two other French nationals, Jean Jehan and Marius Martin. Both have been regarded for many years as major narcotic suspects operating between France, Montreal, Canada, and New York, N.Y.

Approximately 50 kilos of heroin was seized by New York City police and agents of the Bureau of Narcotics in connection with this case. Followup investigation in France indicated that the Charles Marignani organization was the probable source of supply of this heroin.

890 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The recruiting and employment of an important French entertainer as a smuggling vehicle by the French traffickers is an indication as to the care this group now exercises in effecting deliveries of heroin to their outlets in the United States. This has been necessary in view of the success had through the mutual enforcement efforts of the French police and the Bureau of Narcotics in recent years in breaking up other smuggling channels employed by the French underworld organizations.

ADDENDUM

Background sheets have been prepared on the following-named individuals mentioned in this report:

- | | |
|------------------------------|----------------------------------|
| 1. Albertini, Dominique | 18. Jehan, Jean |
| 2. Angelvin, Jacques | 19. Le Coat, Robert Leon Francis |
| 3. Ansaldi, Marius Jacques | 20. Marignani, Antoine Marie |
| 4. Aranci, Georges | 21. Martin, Marius Louis |
| 5. Aranci, Joseph | 22. Mondoloni, Paul Damien |
| 6. Aranci, Marius Antoine | 23. Orsini, Joseph |
| 7. Barnier, Felix Alfred | 24. Paroutian, Antranik |
| 8. Bistoni, Ansan Albert | 25. Patrizi, Joseph |
| 9. Bourbonnais, Charles | 26. Reina, Giacomo |
| 10. Caneba, Salvatore | 27. Reissant, Dominique |
| 11. Coscia, Gilbert Augustin | 28. Rosal, Mauricio Claudio |
| 12. Croce, Jean Baptiste | 29. Scaglia, Francois |
| 13. D'Agostino, Antoine | 30. Spirito, Francois |
| 14. David, Jean | 31. Stromberg, Harry |
| 15. Francisci, Marcel | 32. Tarditi, Etienne |
| 16. Gelb, Usche | 33. Venturi, Jean |
| 17. Graziani, Gabriel Lucien | 34. Venturi, Dominique |

(Complete background sheets on above-named individuals may be found in the appendix on p. 952.)

(Exhibit No. 2B, photographs of laboratory operations in France, may be found in the appendix on p. 962.)

ITALYEXHIBIT No. 2C*SUMMARY

Since the latter 1920's, Mafia groups in the United States have controlled the bulk of interstate distribution of heroin smuggled into this country.

This organization, since World War II, has looked toward the Mafia in Italy, with which it had been closely affiliated both through blood ties and mutual criminal endeavors, for its source of supply. The Italian Mafia during the early postwar period succeeded in corrupting some of the licensed pharmaceutical manufacturers in northern Italy and thereby acquired stocks of licit heroin which they diverted into the illicit traffic for eventual distribution in the United States.

When the Italian authorities sealed off this source, the Mafia traffickers in Italy obtained heroin from the French Corsican underworld organization which had set up laboratories for the manufacture of heroin. This pattern continues to date.

In recent years the Mafia in Italy has come under close scrutiny by Italian authorities. Because of an ever-continuing bloodbath for which the Mafia has been held responsible, strong governmental action in Italy has been underway and promises to contain the activities of this organization.

HISTORY OF MAFIA PARTICIPATION IN THE NARCOTICS TRAFFIC

As a result of anti-Mafia drives by the Italian authorities during the late 1920's and early 1930's, many of the important members of this criminal fraternity emigrated to the United States arriving here with the influx of Italian immigrants during that period. Unlike the great bulk of immigrants from Italy, many of these Mafiosi chose not to take advantage of the opportunities afforded them in the United States, but decided instead to continue their activities in the criminal fraternity of which they were part. This resulted in the creation of local Mafia-like organizations in the United States.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 891

During the late 1920's and early 1930's, the narcotic traffic in the United States was controlled primarily by the Jewish criminal organizations. The Jewish criminal elements at that time had access to their own smuggling channels. Toward the latter 1930's the Mafia group assumed control of the interstate channels of distribution and their well-organized underworld network provided a ready outlet for drugs throughout the country.

Prior to World War II, the sources of heroin being furnished Mafia outlets in the United States were located in France and the Near and Far East. During World War II, there was no appreciable traffic in narcotics and the flow of heroin and other drugs into the United States was at a standstill.

During the prewar period and immediately following the war, there were a number of important Mafia figures deported from the United States to Italy. Among these were included some of the most important narcotics violators of the day.

In 1937 Nicole Gentile was arrested at New York. While in the United States he traveled to New Orleans, Kansas City, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, New York, and various cities in Florida in pursuit of a scheme involving a large-scale distribution of heroin throughout the United States. Gentile was on equal footing with top Mafia leaders, Vito Genovese, the Mangano brothers, Salvatore Maranzano, Joseph Biondo, Salvatore Lucania, of New York, Sam Macea, of New Orleans, and equally important members of that criminal fraternity in Chicago and Kansas City.

Gentile fled prosecution in the United States and traveled to Italy during 1938 where he took refuge. Following Gentile's voluntary exile to Italy there were a number of other important Mafia figures in the United States who either fled to Italy to avoid prosecution or were deported to that country following the completion of prison terms. Among the postwar deportees were included Salvatore Lucania, Frank Callace, alias Chick 99, Dominick Petrillo, alias the Gap, Giuseppe Pici, Francesco Coppola, Sylvestro Carollo, and Salvatore Vitale. All the above were convicted narcotic violators or fled to Italy to escape prosecution for narcotic violations in the United States. Upon their arrival in Italy during the postwar period, these traffickers renewed ties with those of the Sicilian criminal fraternity with whom they had been acquainted years ago.

DEVELOPMENT OF PRESENT-DAY TRAFFIC FROM ITALY

During the early postwar period, this group impressed upon Mafia elements in Sicily and Italy the fact that they had ready outlets for heroin in the United States and that considerable profits were available to engage in this traffic. It was not long before, through the influence of Salvatore Lucania, there were formed agreements between these traffickers and certain corrupt officials of a number of Italian pharmaceutical firms in northern Italy. These firms had been licensed by the Italian Government to manufacture heroin for medicinal purposes.

Since 1950 agents of the Bureau of Narcotics have worked closely with the Italian police attempting to uncover the sources of heroin smuggled into the United States and distributed through Mafia channels in this country. This cooperation resulted in the exploitation of several seizures of heroin in Italy.

On June 25, 1949, some 9 kilos of heroin was seized at Rome, Italy, from one Vincent Trupia, a New York hoodlum. Associated with Trupia, but not apprehended at the time of seizure, was Joseph DiPalermo, notorious New York hoodlum with a lengthy criminal record. As a result of this seizure, a widespread investigation was conducted by the Italian police into the source of the 9 kilos of heroin seized. This investigation was expanded to include an inquiry into the activities of Salvatore Lucania.

Subsequently, a seizure of 3 kilos of heroin at the Rome airport was made from Frank Callace on April 6, 1951. This rekindled the investigation into the sources of supply. It was determined that Callace was associated with fellow deportees, Giuseppe Pici and Dominick Petrillo in the narcotic traffic. Further, it was noted that both had been seen in the company of Joseph Biondo, an important Mafia figure from New York, who also had visited both Salvatore Lucania and Nicole Gentile in the course of his trip to Italy during 1951.

892 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Continued investigation by the Italian police, working with agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, indicated that Lucania and Gentile had been in contact with one Edigio Calascibetta, a Sicilian, who was a resident of Milan. Calascibetta was involved in the operation of one of the pharmaceutical combines licensed to produce considerable quantities of heroin.

Further investigation disclosed that an estimated 800 kilos of heroin had been made available to Mafia channels in Italy by means of counterfeiting documents and falsifying records. Following these disclosures, the Italian Government took forceful action in bringing this enormous diversion under control and, in fact, outlawed the manufacture of heroin in that country altogether.

After the Italian Government prohibited the manufacture of heroin in Italy, alternate sources of supply had to be obtained by the Mafia hoodlums in this traffic. During this period the French Corsican criminal elements set up laboratories for the conversion of morphine to heroin. This heroin they supplied to Mafia elements in Sicily and Italy for eventual distribution to their outlets in the United States.

During March of 1952, Serafino Mancuso, notorious narcotic trafficker who had been deported to Italy from the United States during 1947, was arrested while he was in possession of a trunk which had false compartments in which a total of 6 kilos of heroin were concealed. Investigation by the Italian police, assisted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, indicated that this trunk was destined for delivery to Anthony Giordano, a trafficker from St. Louis, Mo., who had contracted for the obtaining of this quantity of heroin from Francesco Coppola.

Coppola, who had a lengthy criminal record in the United States, was allowed to leave this country voluntarily during 1948 following a warrant for his deportation. Later both Coppola and Mancuso formed a close association with Mafia elements in Sicily and in conspiracy with this group managed to obtain considerable quantities of heroin for delivery to their outlets in the United States. Among these were Raphael Quazarano, John Priziola, and Paul Cimino, of Detroit, Mich.; Giacomo Ammirato, alias James Emery, of Chicago Heights, Ill.; and Anthony Giordano, of St. Louis, Mo. Among the Mafia elements involved with Coppola in Sicily were included Mafia leaders, Salvatore Greco, Antonio Sorcio, and deportees, Salvatore Vitale and Sylvestro Carollo.

Also important sources of supply of heroin in Milan, Italy, were Francesco Perico and Francesco Severino. These two made available large quantities of heroin to various Mafia outlets with which they were associated. Among these outlets were Ugo and Salvatore Caneba. The alias of the former was John Sperandeo. The latter was a major trafficker and outlet for heroin in New York prior to his deportation to Italy in 1948. Upon his deportation he developed a close working relationship with the sources of supply of heroin provided by the Pirico-Severino group and later the French sources of supply.

The Pirico-Severino group of Milan, Italy, also supplied Eugene Giannini, a notorious New York Mafia outlet, up to the time of his murder in New York City during 1952. The Giannini case illustrates the operation of a top echelon Mafia trafficker during the early 1950's, obtaining heroin from sources in Italy and France. The duplicity shown by Giannini in dealing with his associates in the narcotics traffic may well have accounted for his murder (Giannini case).

Giuseppe Pici, who was associated with Frank Callace, Dominick Petrella, and Eugene Giannini, was also a close associate of Salvatore Lucania. He continued his activities in the narcotic traffic and alien smuggling until 1959 when he sold heroin to an agent of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, working in an undercover capacity in cooperation with the Italian police at Genoa, Italy. As a result of this case, Pici and those conspiring with him were arrested and sentenced by the Italian court for trafficking in narcotics.

TODARO-LOPICCOLO CASE

Associated with the Spirito organization in France, which has supplied traffickers in Italy, were Corsican violators Antoine Cordelani and Edouard Giribone, both of Marseilles, France. This group alone accounted for 50 kilograms of heroin furnished monthly to Italian Mafia outlets for eventual distribution in the United States. Their outlets in Sicily were Giuseppe Provenzano, Vincenzo Di-Trapani, and Giuseppe Mangianpane of Rome.

The principal traffickers in the United States for whom this heroin was earmarked were Vincent Todaro and Joseph LoPiccolo. This case illustrates the mechanics of the heroin traffic originating from the French sources, flowing through the Mafia channels in Sicily for eventual smuggling into the United States. This case will also serve to illustrate channels of distribution in the United States.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 893

THE AGUECI CASE

Following the seizure of the green trunk containing 6 kilograms of heroin from Serafino Mancuso during April 1952, the Italian police conducted an investigation which set responsibility for those involved in the seizure upon the Mafia organization of Salemi, Sicily. The leadership of this organization included Salvatore and Benedetto Zizzo, Settimo Accardo, and the Agueci brothers. This group continued trafficking in heroin and it was not until 1961 that they were implicated through joint investigation conducted by Italian and Canadian authorities and the Bureau of Narcotics in the United States. The Agueci case illustrates the close collaboration between Mafia elements in Sicily, Canada, and the United States.

MAFIA, SICILY ENGAGED IN MULTIPLE ILLICIT ACTIVITIES

This criminal organization has only during the postwar years, concentrated its activity in the narcotics traffic. During the same period they also engaged in extensive trafficking in other contraband. Pietro Davi, leading figure in the Palermo Mafia community for years, has been closely associated with some of the more important French and Sicilian narcotics traffickers, such as Rosario Mancino, Pascal Molinelli, an important Corsican trafficker, and Nicole Gentile.

The Davi group during the early postwar years created a smuggling organization which dealt in very large quantities of contraband American cigarettes. These were purchased by the group front organizations in Tangiers and subsequently loaded upon fast smuggling vessels, mostly surplus British warcraft and smuggled into various ports.

The organization took elaborate precautions to avoid detection and seizure by the Italian police. The smugglers used radar and operated illegal two-way radio transmitters in order to insure the safe landing of their cargo in Italy.

During 1950 Davi and several of his associates were denounced by the Italian authorities at Palermo for dealing in some 13 tons of contraband American cigarettes. He was sentenced to 3 years in prison following his trial, but was later acquitted by the Palermo Court of Appeals for lack of sufficient evidence.

During the prewar years the Mafia groups in Sicily confined their activities, for the most part, to such crimes as kidnapping and extortion. However, during the postwar years they expanded their activities to include, aside from trafficking in narcotics, the creation of powerful monopolies for controlling the produce and foodstuff markets throughout Italy; the contracting of buildings and roads, the sale and purchase of real estate in Sicily, the obtaining of concessions of special water supply points, and for exercising influence on an assortment of public works projects both in Sicily and elsewhere in Italy.

In this respect they expanded their spheres of influence much as has their counterpart underworld organization in the United States. In Italy, this has been accomplished through intimidation and coercion.

Since World War II there have been a total of some 540 murders attributed to Mafia activities throughout Sicily and Italy. Not all of these have occurred as a result of Mafia encroachment into other areas. Many are the result of factional disputes within the Mafia organization.

The Italian police agencies have conducted sporadic investigations into Mafia activities during this period. However, much of the success in bringing these violators to justice has been experienced in the field of narcotics investigations in which the agents of the Bureau of Narcotics have assisted. The most recent anti-Mafia drive by the Italian authorities was sparked during 1960 following an investigation into the sources of supply of 10 kilograms of heroin seized from an unwitting Sicilian immigrant couple at New York during November of that year. In the Italian police investigation that developed a thorough inquiry was initiated into various facets of Mafia activity throughout the country and has now resulted in the convening of an Interparliamentary Commission of the Italian Government to study and provide for possible legislation which might assist in disbanding this criminal group and eliminating their influence.

Concerted effort of the Italian authorities has brought striking results. As has occurred in the United States, following intensive police investigation, there have been factional disputes which have resulted in killings. The Gallo-Profaci war has had its counterpart in Sicily. Profaci's hometown of Villabate, Sicily, has been the center of interfactional Mafia disputes wherein some 21 persons were murdered during the first 6 months of this year.

894 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Public opinion in Italy was thoroughly aroused when some five police officers and two military experts were killed during June 1963 when a booby-trapped vehicle which they were searching exploded on the outskirts of Palermo. The explosion was blamed on the Mafia. The Interparliamentary Commission has continued to sit and vigorous police efforts are continuing in the present anti-Mafia drive in Italy.

ADDENDUM

Background sheets have been prepared on the following named individuals mentioned in this report:

- | | |
|-------------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| 1. Accardo, Settimo | 48. Guippone, Robert Angelo |
| 2. Agueci, Vito | 49. Laget, Jean (David, Jean) |
| 3. Amari, Filippo | 50. Levine, Sam |
| 4. Andreani, Jean Joseph | 51. Locascio, Carmine |
| 5. Ansaldo, Marius Jacques | 52. Loiacano, Angelo M. |
| 6. Baccarani, Gheo | 53. Lo Piccolo, Joseph Paul |
| 7. Badalamenti, Vito | 54. Lucchese, Gaetano |
| 8. Balzarini, Ugo | 55. Lucania, Salvatore C. |
| 9. Barilla, Giovanni | 56. Mancuso, Serafino |
| 10. Berti, Enzo | 57. Maneri, Salvatore Charles |
| 11. Biondo, Joseph | 58. Maugeri, Giovanni |
| 12. Bistoni, Ansan Albert | 59. Massi, James Leo |
| 13. Bonanno, Joseph | 60. Mauro, Vincenzo Francesco Angelo |
| 14. Bonventre, Giovanni | 61. Meltzer, Harold |
| 15. Buccola, Philip | 62. Mogavero, Rosario |
| 16. Buia, Angelo | 63. Orlando, Ignazio Lawrence |
| 17. Borelli, Frank | 64. Ormento, John |
| 18. Calascibetta, Egidio | 65. Orsini, Joseph |
| 19. Campisi, Charles | 66. Papalia, John |
| 20. Campisi, Thomas | 67. Pellegrino, Giuseppe |
| 21. Caneba, Ugo | 68. Pirico, Francesco |
| 22. Caneba, Salvatore | 69. Profaci, Frank |
| 23. Carpineti, Matteo | 70. Priziola, John |
| 24. Caruso, Frank | 71. Pici, Giuseppe |
| 25. Castaldi, Anthony | 72. Quasarano, Raffaele |
| 26. Ciccone, Anthony | 73. Renna, Vincent |
| 27. Cinquegrana, Benedetto F. | 74. Robert, Rene |
| 28. Costiglia, Francisco | 75. Robino, Calogero |
| 29. Cordoliani, Antoine | 76. Ruffino, Giuseppe |
| 30. Cotroni, Giuseppe | 77. Sancinella, Rocco |
| 31. Coppola, Francesco Paolo | 78. Scarpulla, Michele Giacomo |
| 32. Coudert, Roger Antoine | 79. Saverino, Francesco Paolo |
| 33. D'Agostino, Antoine | 80. Schiffman, Charles |
| 34. D'Ercole, Joseph | 81. Santagata, Aniello |
| 35. Di Palermo, Joseph | 82. Scopelliti, Rocco Eugenio |
| 36. Doto, Giuseppe Antonio | 83. Smith, David |
| 37. Eder, Max | 84. Sedotto, Michale |
| 38. Farina, Antonio | 85. Sorge, Santo |
| 39. Fiume, Armando | 86. Spirito, Francois |
| 40. Galante, Carmine | 87. Spitzer, Albert J. |
| 41. Gambino, Carlo | 88. Tantillo, Enrico Nicolo |
| 42. Garofolo, Frank | 89. Todaro, Vincent James |
| 43. Gamba, Costantino | 90. Tuminaro, Angelo |
| 44. Gelb, Usche | 91. Trupia, Charles Vincent |
| 45. Genovese, Vito | 92. Valachi, Joseph |
| 46. Giribone, Edouard | 93. Valenti, Salvatore |
| 47. Gentile, Nicola | 94. Vento, Joseph A. |

(Complete background sheets on above-named individuals may be found in appendix on p. 969.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. Thank you very much.

Senator CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, I do not have any questions, but I want to say that this has been a very valuable witness and I have been impressed by the thoroughness of his preparation.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 895

Mr. PERA. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. This takes a lot of work to get this material together, does it not?

Mr. PERA. Yes, it does, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Does it not become rather intriguing at times as you follow on these clues, and try to put the pieces together?

Mr. PERA. It is a fascinating enterprise, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. I think it is.

Thank you very much.

Call the next witness.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Mr. Gaffney.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you be sworn?

You do solemnly swear the evidence you shall give before this Senate subcommittee shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I do.

TESTIMONY OF GEORGE H. GAFFNEY

The CHAIRMAN. Will you identify yourself for the record, please?

Mr. GAFFNEY. My name is George H. Gaffney. I am the Deputy Commissioner of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you served in that capacity?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I have been the Deputy Commissioner since early this year, and I have been employed by the Bureau of Narcotics since 1949, approximately 15 years.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have a prepared statement?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No; I do not, Senator. I have some notes which I will refer to, which I prepared. But a formal statement, no.

The CHAIRMAN. You may add any background material. You are a graduate of the Naval Academy, I see.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, sir; I graduated from the Naval Academy in 1944. I served in the fleet for 4 years. Shortly after I resigned my commission, I went to work as an undercover agent for the Bureau of Narcotics in New York. I served in that capacity until about 1955 when I was appointed district supervisor in Atlanta, covering the Southeastern States. In 1958 I was appointed the district supervisor in New York, and I served there until 1962, when I came down to Washington as assistant to the Commissioner in Charge of Enforcement.

As I say, in 1964, earlier this year, I was appointed Deputy Commissioner.

The CHAIRMAN. I believe the burden of your testimony will be with respect to traffic between Canada and the United States.

Mr. GAFFNEY. And also Mexico.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well. You may proceed.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Mr. Pera has touched upon the sources of supply in France, and Mexico and Canada as with the United States have been mentioned as the principal points of entry of the heroin emanating from the clandestine laboratories in France.

To mention Mexico first, the importance of Mexico stems back to the early days of World War II. At that time, when our traffickers in the United States were relying upon European sources, they suddenly found themselves cut off as a result of the disruption of the normal oceangoing traffic. Of course, I don't believe there was much in the way of transatlantic plane flights in those days. We found then that the Mafia element in New York, particularly the younger members of what was then known as the 107th Street mob, who later became very important in these various family groups of the Cosa Nostra, went down in the Mexican border area and established contact with Mexican sources of crude opium, and managed to supply a limited quantity of crude opium or obtain supplies of limited quantities of crude opium, and set up within the United States, particularly within the New York area, clandestine laboratories.

896 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. When was that?

Mr. GAFFNEY. This was during the war years.

The CHAIRMAN. In the early 1940's?

Mr. GAFFNEY. In the early 1940's—1941, 1942, 1943, and so forth.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That was at the time that traffic had stopped between Italy, France, and the United States, and as far as the Mediterranean was concerned there was no flow of any traffic into the United States, so they couldn't smuggle the material in?

Mr. GAFFNEY. It was virtually cut off. As a matter of fact, the addicts in those days relied mainly on thefts from doctors' bags, from drugstores and wholesale houses. Some of them turned to disreputable physicians, and so forth.

Mr. ADLERMAN. During those years, as shown on the other diagrams of Mr. Giordano, we had a very sharp decrease in addiction because there was a lack of accessibility and availability of the drugs?

Mr. GAFFNEY. As a matter of fact, that is precisely the situation. Actually, what happened in the country from the time of the enactment of the Harrison Act of 1914 and the Jones-Miller Act of 1921, outlawing heroin, and the creation of the Bureau of Narcotics in 1930, was that you had a tremendous improvement in the addict situation, and I think it is demonstrated very dramatically by the statistics on draft rejections, the rejections from the draft for reasons of drug addiction.

For example, in World War I approximately 1 man out of every 1,100 was rejected for drug addiction. Yet the situation had improved so greatly by World War II that only 1 man out of every 10,000 was rejected for drug addiction.

As I say, during the war the situation improved even further by the lack of availability of the narcotic drug.

Following World War II, however, and with the diversion from the legitimate manufacturers in Italy, there was a resurgence of the heroin traffic emanating principally from Italy. This continued for a period of about 4 to 5 years at the most.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The flow from Italy, did that go principally to New York?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Principally to New York, yes. Canada didn't figure into it directly and Mexico did not either.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was it directly to the Mafia groups?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes. They had this thing sewed up. They stepped into a vacuum there and took it over completely.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you familiar with the map that is on the easel now?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 897

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was that prepared under your direction?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes. I assisted in its preparation.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Does that show the New York group that is principally involved in the narcotics traffic?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes. You have the setup in New York. They have four of the families mentioned, as I see them, the Gambino family, Lucchese family, Bonanno, and the Vito Genovese.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You are familiar with the Valachi hearings?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You played quite a part in the Valachi case, and you are one of those responsible for Valachi being in jail today?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I will put it this way. The agents of the New York office of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics developed evidence which convicted Valachi on not one occasion but two occasions.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You heard the testimony of Valachi describing the five family groups?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Does that coincide in large part with your own experience?

Mr. GAFFNEY. It does, but the course of Valachi went even further and he gave us a tremendous amount of information, intelligence information, which expanded our knowledge a great deal. He was very helpful.

The CHAIRMAN. Was his testimony, what he disclosed to you, very helpful in confirming information you already had, or did it give you new leads and expand your knowledge?

Mr. GAFFNEY. He gave us a great insight into questioned areas that we had information on and we had several theories. He gave us the correct interpretation of what actually happened in these various situations, dating back to the early 1930's.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, he had the answers to a lot of things that were speculative on your part?

Mr. GAFFNEY. He did. As a matter of fact, I am offering this out: I was quite disturbed by comments in several articles that I read which tended to discredit what he had to say. I can only say that we were greatly impressed. We found that he corroborated many things that we already knew and he cleared up these questioned areas where we had placed varied interpretations, and he gave us what we consider now, on the basis of further corroboration, the correct information.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, since he testified, or since you interrogated him, you have been able to check further and get corroboration?

Mr. GAFFNEY. We think now, and I believe this opinion is shared by other enforcement agencies, we have a better picture now of organized crime in the United States than we ever had at any time in the past. Of course, this is of inestimable benefit to law enforcement as a whole. I think it is fundamental that if you are going to attack a problem, you first have to recognize what that problem is and the extent of it. I think it is one of the major contributions that that man has made in this area.

I might also add that this committee has thrown the light on a heretofore rather dark corner.

898 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. For this period of time immediately after World War II when traffic flowed into the New York Harbor, enforcement then took its toll on many of the operators in this field, the illicit operators?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes. There were several major conspiracy cases developed during the war years involving the 107th Street mob, and they went to jail, a goodly number of them. There were conspiracy cases that I can recall just from reviewing the files that had as many as 37 to 40 defendants in them. Unfortunately, in those days the sentences that were meted out were so unrealistic that these people found themselves having served their terms and were back on the street by the time the case reports were written.

The Government and the police up there in New York found themselves having to cope with them all over again.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think Mr. Giordano put into the record copies of our original charts we used in the Valachi testimony showing the five families. I think it is well to mention now that you did cross out on each of these charts, by a mark, the persons in the Mafia groups that were convicted of narcotics trafficking, and there were quite a few of them. (Charts appear in part 3, p. 652.)

Mr. GAFFNEY. Approximately 20 percent of all five families. As I remember from looking at them, 40 percent of one of the families were convicted. In another family it was 19 percent, and in another family it was 20 percent. So we like to feel that this has demonstrated that our main interest, our main effort, has been directed against the highest echelon in the traffic, the comments of some persons notwithstanding.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Following this rigorous enforcement by the Bureau of Narcotics, did you find a change in the flow of traffic to Canada and to Mexico?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, we did. But initially when the source of supply was coming from the diversion from the legitimate wholesale houses and manufacturers in Italy, New York still seemed to be the main port of entry. As a matter of fact, in those days the Canadian addicts, the bulk of whom were centered in the Vancouver area, were actually supplied with heroin coming from Italy through New York and thence exported into Canada and transported to the west coast.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There has been a little bit of a reverse now?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is right. But then the situation changed quite dramatically. At the same time through the tremendous enforcement efforts of the Italian police, and the fact that we had set up offices up there and had our top people, one of whom has now retired and who is head of the Illinois Crime Commission, played havoc with the diversion in Italy.

Then the clandestine operation shifted to France, as Mr. Pera outlined. At that point, there was a change in the method of introduction, the points of introduction, in the United States. Canada; Montreal, became a point of entry, and the Canadian traffickers and the French Corsicans operating in Canada began supplying the drugs from France directly into Canada and thence down to the United States.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This was the first time that the French Corsicans dealt with the French Canadians?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I would say that is correct.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 899

Mr. ADLERMAN. Before that, all of the traffic flowed down to Italy. Now part of it goes to Italy and to the United States, and part of it goes through France, directly to the Canadian areas, and part down to Mexico.

Mr. GAFFNEY. But the Canadians didn't have to rely upon the United States any more. They took a portion of that coming into Canada, sent it out to the west coast, and the bulk came on down to the same Mafioso distributors in the United States.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They just changed the route?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is right. This is in the early 1950's. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police quickly got onto this. Our people went up into Canada and worked with them. They were very successful initially, and the Canadians developed evidence against some of the top people to such an extent that when they arrested them and set high bonds on them, these people jumped bond and fled first down to New York and then down to Mexico City.

What, in effect, they did was to shift their entire operation from Montreal to Mexico. They were the same people, the Corsicans allied with the Mafia distributors. Then say around 1952, 1953, and 1954 the emphasis seemed to shift to Mexico City. They would bring the drugs in from France to Mexico City and then bring them on up into the States.

I might mention that there were three principal methods of smuggling that were used during this entire period. When the Mafia people were actually doing the smuggling, they preferred New York, as I mentioned, as a port of entry, and they used unwitting immigrants coming in who carried with them elaborately constructed trunks containing false bottoms. They had no knowledge at all that they were being used by these travel agents and so forth in Palermo. But they brought in these quantities that way. When the Corsican gangsters actually took over the smuggling operation, they used two other means which we figure accounted for the biggest part of their traffic. They used automobiles with very cleverly constructed traps built into them, where they could carry upward of 50 kilograms at a time. Then, they turned to a much more refined and sophisticated method of smuggling and that was the use of the diplomats, diplomatic couriers.

This is how the pattern has changed from time to time. When things would get too hot for them in Montreal, they would move down to Mexico. When things got too hot in Mexico they would move back to Montreal. But the pattern has persisted.

(At this point Senator Mundt entered the hearing room.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would you discuss briefly, if you can, some of the diplomats that were involved and how they would be involved?

Mr. GAFFNEY. We have had two cases, really I suppose you would be correct if you defined them as one case, and the first one we stumbled on was in 1960. About midsummer in 1960 we received information from our agent stationed in Beirut that a Frenchman by the name of Tarditi was an active trafficker smuggling morphine base into France.

He was also suspected of bringing heroin into the United States. They had sketchy information at the time that he was closely associated with a diplomat who spoke either French or Spanish. I think the information we received on this was in June or July of 1960.

900 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

In August 1960, we received word from our agent in Paris who had been working with the French police that this fellow Tarditi—I think they said his name was Adolph at the time—had just arrived in Paris on a flight.

He had just arrived in Paris on a flight from New York. We knew the flight he had traveled on and we knew his last name. This was all the information we had. So, we dispatched our agents out to Idlewild Airport and in checking with the airline and so forth, we learned that when Tarditi traveled to France on that particular flight, he had a traveling companion listed. I understand this is done to expedite the grouping of baggage and so forth.

The traveling companion was identified as an M. Rosal. In checking further with the airline people, and we have to give them a great deal of credit for this, they indicated that he had received VIP privileges, limousine, and so forth. It was in this means that we identified the traveling companion as Mauricio Rosal, who was at that time the Guatemalan Ambassador to the Netherlands and Belgium.

Well, about a month went by.

I might mention in passing that not only did our people check the movements of these people, the hotels they stayed at, and so forth, in New York, but we checked their baggage declarations coming in and the weight of their baggage going out. While there was no appreciable change in the weights of the baggage that Tarditi had, we found that the Guatemalan Ambassador came in with 180 pounds of baggage and left with 80 pounds. So somewhere along the line, after a 2-day stay, there was 100 pounds difference in the weight of luggage. This of course, excited our suspicion.

We also found that when Tarditi came in, he preceded the arrival of the Guatemalan Ambassador by 2 days.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What would be the advantage of using an ambassador or somebody with embassy privileges as a courier?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, in the first instance, being an ambassador, a person having that status, would not ordinarily be suspect. Secondly, it is common in all countries, I believe, to have a certain amount of diplomatic courtesy. There is courtesy extended to diplomats. They are not people who would normally be subjected to the type of extensive search that you and I might encounter.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was this profitable to the Ambassador?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Mauricio Rosal, after he got caught, which I was going to relate later on, told me that he had received in commissions on three prior trips something like $26,000 or $27,000 as just his fees for bringing this in. As a matter of fact, when we arrested him in New York when he came in with the load that he was arrested with, as I recall, he had around the same amount of money in his suitcase.

The CHAIRMAN. What do you mean the same amount?

Mr. GAFFNEY. He had around $26,000 in his suitcase. I am not positive on the figures of before, but I know that he had about $26,000 in his suitcase which was the commission for bringing in the 100 kilos.

To make a long story short, as I say, a month after this initial information, we received word from the French that Tarditi was coming in, and we felt if the modus operandi held true, we could expect the arrival of the Guatemalan Ambassador, and that is exactly what happened. He came in 2 days later, and the two met in a hotel, with conversations back and forth. He indicated, incidentally, when he came in, and I think he did this for the purpose of having some kind of diplomatic immunity, that he was enroute to his home country of Guatemala. He was not accredited to this country, but as a diplomat in transit from Belgium to Guatemala, he did have a certain form of immunity. When we learned that he canceled his reservation to go back to Guatemala, we felt that he lost that immunity, and when he left the hotel with his four big bags and joined Tarditi and went on up on the East Side of New York, I think 72d Street and Lexington Avenue, he was joined by a steward from the airline and an underworld figure from New York, who was a contact with the mobs.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 901

We just moved in and arrested him and Tarditi in a taxicab and seized over 100 pounds of pure heroin. Questioning of these people quickly led us to the seizure of an additional 100 pounds of heroin which he had brought in about 6 weeks before.

MR. ADLERMAN. What was the total amount?

MR. GAFFNEY. There were a hundred and some kilos—I think 220 pounds of pure heroin, to be exact, and I think we also seized in the neighborhood of 70-some thousand dollars in cash, not only that the diplomat had, but which we found in the car of one of the mob in New York who was to receive these drugs.

MR. ADLERMAN. You found a pattern of using an Ambassador in another case, too?

MR. GAFFNEY. At the time of this arrest, we were quite elated and felt we had really thrown a monkey-wrench into this diplomatic operation until we started talking to an underworld figure who was doing time and who had been important in the traffic. He told us, "Well, you got one of them, but you haven't got the other one." He didn't know the man's name, but he said, "There is another one that is even bigger than he is."

He went on to tell us that this fellow was also from a Latin American country. He didn't identify the country. In questioning the various defendants in the case, and in tracing their movements, we then assigned agents, relieving them of all other duties and told them, "You have to check on all the diplomats that have been coming in." Of course, this meant that our agents had to go and check in Boston, in New York, in the various ports, all the immigration entry forms. Over a period of about a year and a half, they examined upward of a quarter of a million travel documents. By this means, they were able to determine or identify possible suspects, other diplomats whose movements corresponded to the movements of other suspects. As a result of that, in February of this year we arrested the Mexican Ambassador to Bolivia, and the Uruguayan Ambassador-designate to Colombia, using the identically same modus operandi. In this particular case, with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, we seized 138 pounds of pure heroin.

MR. ADLERMAN. What were the names?

MR. GAFFNEY. The Mexican Ambassador to Bolivia was Salvador Pardo-Bolland, and the Uruguayan Ambassador-designate to Colombia was Juan Aroosti. The French trafficker who was tied up with them in the case was a fellow named Rene Bruchon who had been convicted in the United States in 1954, was deported, and had the conviction reversed on some technicality.

902 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLEGAL TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

They were sentenced about 2 weeks ago. The Mexican Ambassador got 18 years, the Uruguayan Ambassador-designate got 10 years, and Bruchon, 15.

On the other one, the Guatemalan Ambassador received 15 years in the penitentiary. These were the two principal diplomat-smuggling operations.

In addition to that—

Senator MUNDT. These fellows who were sentenced—are they in jail or is there an appeal pending?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No; they are in jail. The Guatemalan Ambassador has already served 3 years, and he has another 12 to go before we have to worry about him again, if we ever have to worry about him.

Senator MUNDT. And these were convicted in February?

Mr. GAFFNEY. No; he was convicted in 1961 as a result of his arrest in 1960. But about 2 weeks ago the other ambassadors were convicted.

Going back for a minute into Mexico, to show you a pattern of the traffic as it shifted from Montreal to the same traffickers, we arrested a man in New York by the name of Jean Laget, a French trafficker. His real name is Jean David. He came to this country in 1939 after having murdered a bank messenger in France.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What was his name?

Mr. GAFFNEY. He went by the name of Jean Laget. His real name was Jean David. At the time of his arrest in 1953, we found a lot of correspondence, names, addresses, and so forth. One particular letter that was found in his possession when arrested in April 1963 was a letter from Mexico City addressed to him under an assumed name, addressed to his apartment, inquiring about the prices of linen in New York. The letter was written in French and said, "If the prices are any good, you can communicate with me in care of the restaurant Helena, Calle de Lerme No. 9, Mexico City."

Our agents in New York City looked at the letter and felt, "Well, perhaps this is a coded inquiry concerning the prices of narcotics." Laget was a Frenchman about 55 years old, 6 feet 2, a distinguished-looking gentleman. But he is in jail. One of our agents decided he would answer the letter. So in August of 1963, the agent sent a letter down in answer and said, "In reply to your letter of such-and-such, the price of linen is very good. If you want to get hold of me, you can reach me at my address," and he gave his own roominghouse in Brooklyn where he shared a room with another bachelor agent. In fact, he even signed the letter with his own name, his correct name, "Angelo Zoro."

Then I think he forgot about it and thought there was only one chance in a million of that paying off. But about 10 days later the roommate came into the roominghouse and the landlady said to him, "Mr. Taraglino, there is a gentleman here. I don't know where he is from, but he is a nice looking and respectful man. He wants to see Mr. Zoro very badly. I hope you don't mind, but I told him to wait up in your room."

Taraglino, of course, had no knowledge of this case at all, or letters being written, but he was a very clever, intelligent, and cautious individual. He went up and met this fellow who was later identified as Roger Coudert, another Frenchman. He spoke broken English but made himself understood. He said he just came in from Mexico and wanted to see Mr. Zooro on a matter of extreme emergency.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 903

Mr. Taraglino informed him that Mr. Zooro wasn't at home at the time, but they would get together later and he would arrange a meeting. After the Frenchman left and got into a cab, he quickly contacted our office and arranged a meeting for him up around 8th Avenue and 34th Street in New York City.

Of course, when Mr. Taraglino called the office of the Bureau of Narcotics and informed Mr. Zooro what happened, this created a rather interesting situation. We weren't sure whether the fellow was here to buy narcotics or here to sell them, but we felt anyone bringing narcotics into Mexico would be like bringing coals to Newcastle. We felt that in all probability this fellow Roger Coudert was here to sell narcotics.

The meeting was arranged in a bar up near 8th Avenue and 34th Street. We, of course, had surveilling agents around there at the time. Very quickly Mr. Coudert told Zooro that he had just come to this country, that he was anxious to do business on a large scale, and that he knew that Mr. Zooro was a good customer of long standing. He asked what the price of heroin was. Zooro told him at the time $8,000 a kilo. The Frenchman got very excited and said that he had been taken by the mob, that he had just brought in 6 kilograms from France, and he was going to go to the mob and get the 6 kilos back and sell it to our agent.

To make a long story short, he tried desperately, but the mob wouldn't give him back the heroin. In turn, he promised to produce an additional 5 kilos from Mexico. Unfortunately, at the same time—a member of the mob, one of two brothers who were fugitives from a Canadian case, the Malak brothers—one of them was arrested in New York by our people for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

The word got down to Mexico and they became fearful and sent word to Coudert to move back. At that time, we moved in and seized Coudert and his smuggling trunks, the evidence that he gave us, the samplings, and so forth, and all the cash from him that he had received from the mob for the 6 kilos they brought in several weeks before.

I might mention that, while here, our surveillance indicated that they were dealing with a man in New York—a fellow we knew by the name of John Sparadino. When we checked on him, we found out his real name was Ugo Caneba, and that he was here illegally, that he had a prior crime record in Italy.

So we picked him up. He was one of the quick deportations. He went back to Italy and resumed the traffic over there. So far as I know, he is still in the traffic.

One of the other defendants was a man by the name of Antonio Farina. He operated a shirt factory in Mexico City and since he spoke Italian fluently, he was the representative of the Corsicans in dealing with the Mafia in New York.

So this is a sort of capsule picture of it.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That pretty well shows the pattern of the operation and how they deal.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I wanted to come to another matter. There is a geographical distribution of addiction in most of the centers, in New York City, Chicago, and the Los Angeles area, is that correct?

904 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. GAFFNEY. That is correct. I would say the bulk of it is in five major cities in the United States.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There is also a band of addiction on the Mexican border, is there not?

Mr. GAFFNEY. You have a number of addicts in the Texas border area, and, of course, in southern California.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What is that due to? Is that due to the availability and accessibility?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, availability, of course, is always an important factor in any study of addiction. If we were to consider the traffic through Mexico, the bulk of the heroin coming out of Mexico is European heroin destined for the markets in the Midwest.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is the white heroin?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes. I would say that probably represents about 80 percent of all the heroin coming out of Mexico. It is French heroin in transit. The homegrown stuff, the brown heroin that has been described, is primarily distributed in the southern California area.

Mr. ADLERMAN. We would say it is about 20 percent of all of the heroin?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Twenty percent of all the heroin, yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The accessibility and availability on the border means that they can go right across the border and make contacts and get the drugs, and that leads to a band of addiction along the border.

Mr. GAFFNEY. I think it contributes to it, but it is not the only factor in the situation.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you have a list of the names of those who are involved in the traffic in Mexico?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes. I have this list here which, with your permission, I would like to have introduced.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can we put that into the record?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you have any other backup material?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, we do, and I would like to put that in at the same time.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would like to cover one more subject, native-grown poppy in Mexico. Where is it grown in Mexico?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Generally, it is grown in the remote mountain areas, very inaccessible. There are no roads into the area. The only way you can get up there is by plane and helicopter. It makes it a very difficult problem for the Mexicans.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is there a rapport between the Mexican police authorities and the European and American authorities to stamp this out?

Mr. GAFFNEY. We have a most splendid working relationship, I think, not only with the Mexicans but with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The Mexicans in recent years have gone all out to try to not only stop the flow of drugs coming through their country, but to destroy the opium poppy growth within the country.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What steps have been taken to destroy the poppies?

Mr. GAFFNEY. They have used helicopters and light planes to fly over and spot it. Then, they have to ship in very heavily armed contingents, army, mostly, to destroy it, because they encounter fierce resistance. As a matter of fact, I might mention that the Mexicans have had seven of their police officers killed in the last 5 years and three seriously wounded in trying to stamp out this.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 905

They are very sincere, and we think they are making a magnificent effort.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are they getting any aid from the United States?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes. I won't say we, the Bureau, but the U.S. Government has assisted them in terms of material, planes, one or two of our planes, and equipment like that. They utilize flamethrowers, incidentally, to burn these crops out.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Were it not for these efforts to restrain the growing of the poppy and so forth, would this be a much more fertile area for the export of illicit narcotics to the United States?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I think it could be. I think if this growth went unchecked, it could present a tremendous problem. I think it is a tribute to the Mexicans that they have been able to keep it down so that really, what they have been able to ship to us as homegrown represents, as I say, about 20 percent of the overall traffic.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There are just one or two other questions I have. They pertain to your experience in England and so forth, and particularly to the figures on the number of addicts that are reported in England. I think some 532 is the figure. Is this an official figure of the British Government?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I have heard this same magic figure of 475 to 500 addicts mentioned since I came on the Bureau and frankly, I think it is most unrealistic.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Were you in England at any time?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I was in England. I lived there approximately 6 months, but it had nothing to do with narcotics at the time. I was still in the Navy, a flight lieutenant at the time. But England's situation, I think, is a big question mark. I frankly don't think they know how many addicts they have. They don't have any enforcement in their country as we have here. They don't have any real compulsory reporting of these people. Their per capita consumption, as I believe Commissioner Giordano stated, is twice that of the United States.

I don't see how they can forget about it. I saw a recent article in "Lancet," the official journal of the British Medical Association, in which they estimate that a minimum of 2,000 of their people are addicted. Going even further, they have less than a dozen people attached to the Home Office who really pry into this or are involved in controlling the legitimate traffic.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Some eight in number?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I have heard several figures but I know it is less than a dozen. So, they don't have enforcement. In fact, frankly, I am inclined to think that they are like a bunch of ostriches. They stick their heads in the sand and feel what they don't see won't hurt them. But, I think if they ever go into this, and there is a considerable degree of agitation in the British Parliament to take a closer look at it, criticism of the judges, of some of the doctors about the indiscriminate manner in which they are handing out drugs to these people. There have been deaths from overdoses which were reported only the other day in the Herald Tribune.

I think the English have something to be alarmed about.

906 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. There is a constant figure in one class of addicts, and that is the physician addict, is there not?

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They are a known group because their contact with the drug probably gives them more addiction than any other group.

Mr. GAFFNEY. I have heard varying estimates from one-tenth of 1 percent to one-half of 1 percent.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There are slightly less than 100,000 doctors in England. Using your figures of one-half of 1 percent or one-tenth of 1 percent, would that almost equal the number of reported addicts?

Mr. GAFFNEY. That would amount to 500 right there, if the figure held true.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You would say, then, that the figure of 500 addicts would not be one that was reliable?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I would say, as an enforcement officer with 15 years experience, I think it is ridiculous.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are these 400 or 500 reported supposed to be medical addicts? By medical addicts, I mean—

Mr. GAFFNEY. Well, you are getting at the crux of the difference now between the situation in England and the situation here. An overwhelming majority of the addicts in England that they report have some underlying medical cause. As a matter of fact, I think this same "Lancet" article talked about the percentage in 1958. I think it said 80 percent of those reported had some underlying medical cause. That situation is quite different here.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I believe you supplied that "Lancet" article to me but I don't know if I can lay my hands on it. Can you produce it for the record?

Mr. GAFFNEY. I don't have it with me, unfortunately, but I shall certainly try to get it to the committee before the hearing ends.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It is an article which appeared in the official journal of the British Medical Society.

(Article referred to appears on p. 850, pt. 3.)

The CHAIRMAN. I don't know why you are going into so much detail about Britain.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It becomes very important in the further testimony next week, where there will be certain advocates of the so-called British system.

The CHAIRMAN. They will bring us their advocacy based on the low number of addicts?

Mr. ADLERMAN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well.

Mr. GAFFNEY. One of the things that we note in trying to analyze our situation here as compared to England is this: that practically every study that has been made in this country on the backgrounds of addicts that we have, the street addicts, from about 1949 to the present time, have had four to five independent surveys made. The Bureau of Narcotics conducted a survey in 1949. The Federal Probation Office in New York conducted a survey on the addicts on probation in 1955.

The California people under their parole system conducted studies. I have seen them dated 1961 and 1962. More recently, the FBI did a survey of the addicts reported to them in 1963.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLEGAL TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 907

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, you do make a strong effort to determine the number of addicts in the United States.

Mr. GAFFNEY. Yes, but in addition to that, we go further to try to find out something about them. One of the magic figures that seems to evolve is this figure of about three out of four addicts in the United States that we know of today have prior criminal records for nonnarcotic offenses before their first experience with a narcotic drug.

It is a great contrast to the situation that existed.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I believe you are making the point that one of the reasons they advocate giving the drugs to the narcotic addict free or without charge, or just a prescription charge is to maintain them on an ambulatory basis. The claim is that it would be attractive to eliminate the profit in the narcotic area, and if you take away the profit from it, you would lose the professional criminal in the process.

Mr. GAFFNEY. They claim that if you give drugs to addicts in the United States that they are not going to have to go out and rob and steal and prostitute in order to obtain the money to buy drugs. This might be. This theory might have some foundation, if it were not for the fact that three out of four of them were engaged in criminal activity before they became addicts and there is no reason to believe that by some magic panacea when you give them the drugs, they are going to stop stealing.

This is what they were doing before. This is the point. I think it has a great bearing on the various positions that are taken about giving away drugs. It would almost appear that the people that propose this consider drug addiction to be a crime or a problem, rather, only because of associated crime. They seem to forget completely about the moral and social decay and the fact that it is most difficult for these people to live useful and productive lives while addicted.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Those are all the questions.

(History of narcotic traffic follows. Backup material may be found in the appendix on p. 1000.)

MEXICO

The importance of Mexico in relation to the illicit traffic in drugs within the United States is based on three factors. For many years, the bulk of the marijuana distributed throughout the United States has been grown in that country and has been smuggled across the many border points stretching from the Gulf of Mexico to the Pacific Ocean.

During World War II, when the main supply of heroin from abroad was virtually cut off, the criminal element turned to Mexico where there was some cultivation of the opium poppy particularly in remote, inaccessible areas. During the early 1940's, conspiracy cases were developed resulting in the conviction of a considerable number of members of the infamous 107th Street mob who set up a rather elaborate system for smuggling and distributing both crude opium and heroin harvested and produced in Mexico. However, with the cessation of hostilities and the resumption of clandestine laboratory operations in Europe, principally in France, Mexico as Canada became an important point of transit for European drugs being shipped to the United States. We estimate conservatively that 80 percent of the heroin which has been smuggled into this country from Mexico is not of Mexican origin but instead is European.

It is significant to note that the Corsican gangster element who control the laboratories in France set up headquarters in Mexico City, which corresponded to similar operations in Montreal, Canada. As a matter of fact, the same people in charge would shift their headquarters back and forth between Montreal and Mexico City as the situations changed within those areas. In other words, when stepped-up enforcement activities in the Montreal area increased their risks, the group would move to Mexico City. When the Mexican authorities cracked down the violators moved back to Montreal. This has been the pattern since about 1958.

908 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The actual smuggling of the bulk quantities of heroin was usually accomplished by one of two means: first, involved the use of automobiles with hidden traps and the second involved the use of couriers with cleverly constructed suitcases with hidden compartments. In many instances, they used planes, both private and commercial.

There can be no doubt that the Mexican Government is increasing its efforts to suppress the traffic in drugs throughout their country. They have also embarked on programs designed to eradicate the growing of marihuana and opium poppy plants. In view of the remote and inaccessible locations of these crops it is a problem of great dimensions and involves the use of spotter planes and heavily armed military personnel equipped with flamethrowers. During the past 5 years seven Mexican officers have been killed in carrying out these programs.

Since January 1963, the Bureau of Narcotics has had several agents assigned to work with the Mexican authorities on the entire problem. The results they have achieved to date are most significant.

SALVADOR PARDO-BOLLAND, ET AL.

On October 3-5, 1960, our agents in New York City made a record seizure of 225 pounds of pure heroin. Arrested at the time were Mauricio Rosal, Guatemalan Ambassador to Belgium, Charles Bourbonnais, an airline steward, Etienne Tarditi, a French national who acted as the intermediary between the French traffickers and the New York receivers, and Nicholas Calamaris, a notorious New York hoodlum who represented the New York organization.

In a followup conspiracy investigation, our agents determined that another member of this group was a French national named Gilbert Coscia. Our investigation showed that Coscia made frequent trips to New York and Montreal from France. In fact, in tracing his movements we ascertained that he had made four short trips to New York City.

At about this very same time we received information indicating Coscia was associated with an unknown diplomat who served as a courier for this organization. We located Coscia's New York hotel and determined the dates he resided in that city. By utilizing these dates as a basis, we checked thousands of airline manifests and entry documents and obtained the names of all diplomats who arrived in New York either directly, or via Canada, in order to compare the dates with Coscia's arrivals. These names were cataloged in a special file.

Simultaneously, the French Surete Nationale had located Coscia living under an assumed name on the French Riviera. They were able to discreetly intercept a number of telegrams to Coscia from various parts of North and South America, all of which were signed in fictitious names. However, the texts of these cables, while in guarded language, gave certain clues as to the person's travel plans and enabled us to pinpoint the cities from which they were sent. Again we set out to examine the airline manifests and entry documents to correspond with the travel plans indicated in the cablegrams received by Coscia.

The names of all diplomats were carefully cataloged. I might add that our agents calculate that they examined over 1 million travel documents and names on various manifests in the period of almost 3 years of investigation.

By process of elimination, Salvador Pardo-Bolland, the then Mexican Ambassador to Bolivia, emerged as a principal suspect. Our suspicions were confirmed by the French Surete and Royal Canadian Mounted Police who both provided important documentation which left little doubt that Pardo-Bolland had been associated with an international narcotic trafficking organization for at least 8 years. The Mexican Federal Judicial Police provided equally important data collected in Mexico City.

From a circumstantial point, we were now in possession of facts and corroborative data strongly indicating Pardo-Bolland made periodic trips between his various posts of duty to France and delivered substantial quantities of heroin to the United States.

On February 6, 1964, Ambassador Pardo-Bolland arrived in Paris from Holland. He had been detected by an alert established on the French border and allowed to proceed. In Paris, he made surveillance a little more difficult by registering at a plush hotel with a false passport but within 1 day the French Surete located him by canvassing over 100 Paris hotels and examining all hotel registers and comparing the descriptions of new arrivals with that of the suspect. From that point on and for the next 2 weeks he was under constant surveillance by the French Surete and our agents who are stationed in Europe.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 909

On February 10, 1964, Pardo-Bolland left Paris and flew to the French Riviera, proceeding to a Cannes hotel and registered under his false name, Suarez De Mendoza. On the following morning, Pardo-Bolland was observed to meet an individual subsequently identified as Juan Arizti, a diplomat from Uruguay who was a member of the Uruguayan Foreign Ministry in Montivideo and who had also just arrived in France. For the next 2 days Pardo-Bolland and Arizti met frequently with Jean-Baptiste Giocobetti and Gilbert Coscia. Giocobetti and Coscia are two known French traffickers. On February 14, 1964, Pardo-Bolland left by air for Paris carrying two additional suitcases. As we suspected and now know, this was a less than clever maneuver to draw out any possible police surveillance for the two extra suitcases carried no contraband.

Surveillance was maintained on Arizti at the French Riviera. On February 15, 1964, he went to the Nice airport with his original two pieces of luggage but stopped at the baggage room and picked up an additional four suitcases. He booked this baggage through Paris to Montreal, Canada.

Pardo-Bolland went directly to New York on February 16, 1964, and Arizti directly to Montreal on February 15, 1964. Agents of our New York office flew to Montreal and assisted the RCMP's, prior to the arrival of Arizti.

Arizti arrived in Montreal by air and went immediately to the railroad station in Montreal and checked the four additional bags he had acquired in France. He remained in Montreal for 3 days, always under surveillance while continuous observation was maintained on the baggage lockers.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police, during the period of observations, surreptitiously examined the suitcases in the locker and determined they contained 135 pounds of heroin. Substituting identical packages of flour, the RCMP's seized all the heroin except two one-half pound packages which they left in the baggage.

On the evening of February 17, Arizti called for his bags and boarded a train for New York. On February 18, 1964, he arrived in New York under the joint surveillance of U.S. customs and narcotic agents, checked the four bags in the baggage room at Pennsylvania Station and went to a hotel. He checked into the same hotel at which Pardo-Bolland had registered 3 days earlier, following his arrival from Paris.

Arizti was seen to meet Pardo-Bolland and they conversed on a number of occasions. Surveillance of Pardo-Bolland produced excellent results. On February 20, 1964, our agents saw Pardo-Bolland meet with a French national who was identified as Rene Bruchon, who was determined to be the intermediary between the French and New York organizations. Bruchon has a record of two prior narcotic convictions, one in the United States and the other in Algeria. We have known him for more than 15 years as a persistent international narcotic trafficker.

Rene Bruchon was observed throwing a set of keys into a basket disposal in New York and they were quickly retrieved by the surveilling agents and determined to be the keys to the lockers in which Arizti had placed his suitcases.

On February 21, 1964, the agents moved in and arrested Pardo-Bolland, Arizti, and Rene Bruchon. The Mexican Government charged Pardo-Bolland with being absent from his post of duty at La Paz and condemned him for his atrocious action. Arizti, who had asked permission from the Uruguayan Government to travel to Canada for medical assistance, was equally disowned by his Government.

On June 16, 1964, in the southern district of New York, Pardo-Bolland, Arizti, and Bruchon were found guilty after a 3-week jury trial. On July 22, 1964, the Honorable Judge Canella sentenced Pardo-Bolland to 18 years in prison, Arizti to 10 years, and Bruchon received 15 years.

MAURICIO ROSAL, ETIENNE TARDITI, ET AL.

During August 1960, confidential information was developed by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics working in Europe and the Middle East relative to one Etienne Tarditi, a French national who was one of the principals of an underworld organization which supplied huge quantities of heroin to the illicit traffic in the United States.

910 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Agents of the Bureau of Narcotics working with French police overseas developed information which indicated that Tarditi's organization would utilize the services of an ambassador who was smuggling heroin into the United States under the cloak of diplomatic privilege. This information was relayed to the Bureau of Narcotics office in New York where agents following up this investigation determined that the Ambassador in question was one Mauricio Rosal, Guatemalan Ambassador to Belgium and the Netherlands. It was further determined that Tarditi and the Ambassador were to arrive in the United States on the first or second of October 1962.

As a result of the investigation that followed, a total of 52 milograms of heroin were seized from Tarditi and Rosal on October 3, 1960. Arrested with the latter two and also implicated in the seizure and conspiracy were Charles Bourbonnais, a TWA airline purser working on international flights between Paris and New York and Nicholas Calamaras, a representative of the underworld organization distributing the heroin smuggled by this group.

This seizure of heroin represented the largest ever recorded. In pursuing the investigative leads of this case, agents of the Bureau of Narcotics a week later seized from the same organization, an additional 50 kilograms of pure heroin which had been cached away. The investigation was sufficiently developed whereby Robert LeCoat, Felix Barnier, and Gilbert Coscia, all French nationals representing the sources of supply and those financing the manufacture in France and smuggling of this heroin into the United States, were indicted at the southern district of New York.

Continued investigation developed that Felix Barnier and Robert LeCoat, upon their visits to the United States during the past 10 years would confer with the head of the American organization distributing heroin smuggled in from France. These discussions concerned the accounting of moneys due for heroin delivery.

Also indicted were two other representatives of the organization distributing the heroin in the United States. These were identified only as John Doe and Richard Roe, alias "Robert." Since that time John Doe has been identified as Joseph Cahill of 25 Daffodil Street, Franklin Square, Long Island. The latter was arrested and has since been brought to trial on another important narcotic conspiracy case involving French sources of heroin.

Investigation has developed that both Cahill and Calamaras are closely associated with Joseph Armone, who has taken over the criminal activities of his brother Steve Armone since the latter's death on June 20, 1960. The criminal activities of the Armone group are headed by Joseph Biondo. Also associated with Armone and working under Biondo in the distribution of heroin smuggled into the United States is Andrew Alberti, N.L. No. 5, long known as an important trafficker operating out of New York.

On December 28, 1960, Joseph Cahill was placed under arrest at his home, 25 Daffodil Street, Franklin Square, Long Island. Following this, investigation developed information that Cahill's residence was actually owned by Biondo. The owners of record, however, are Anthony Graffino and Nettie Volpe of 109-04 Corona Avenue, Queens, New York City.

Upon questioning by narcotic agents at the time of his arrest, Cahill readily admitted that he knew and was on friendly terms with Joseph Biondo, Arnold Romano, N.L. No. 333, Joseph Armone, Eugene Tramaglino, N.L. No. 402, Nicholas Calamaras, defendant in Tarditi-Rosal case NY:S 10,787, and Frank Sherbice, criminal associate of Armone and Calamaras.

Among the papers and documents found in Cahill's home was a Christmas greeting card from the Cadillac Division of the General Motors Co., Detroit, Mich., addressed to Louise Biondo, 25 Daffodil Street, Franklin Square, Long Island. Further, it had been noted that Louise Volpe Biondo, wife of Joseph Biondo had a Cadillac automobile registered in her name at that same address.

On January 11, 1960, Ambassador Mauricio Rosal and Nicholas Calamaras were sentenced each to 15 years' imprisonment by Federal Court, at the southern district of New York. Etienne Tarditi and Charles Bourbonnais were sentenced to 9 years each by the same court.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 911

ADDENDUM

Profiles have been prepared on the following-named individuals mentioned in this report:

- | | |
|----------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| 1. Bellanca, Sebastiano | 19. Mauro, Vincenzo Francesco Angelo |
| 2. Bistoni, Ansan Albert | 20. Mazzie, Rocco |
| 3. Bonanno, Joseph | 21. Mondoloni, Paul Damien |
| 4. Borelli, Frank | 22. Orsini, Joseph |
| 5. Caneba, Salvatore | 23. Pagano, Pasquale Anthony |
| 6. Caneba, Ugo | 24. Paroutian, Antranik |
| 7. Consolo, Michael Joseph | 25. Pasqua, Frank Anthony |
| 8. Cotroni, Giuseppe | 26. Petrone, John Michael |
| 9. Cotroni, Vincenzo | 27. Pici, Giuseppe |
| 10. Coudert, Roger Antoine | 28. Pirico, Francesco |
| 11. Croce, Jean Baptiste | 29. Sansone, Carmelo |
| 12. Curcio, Charles | 30. Saverino, Francesco Paolo |
| 13. D'Agostino, Antoine | 31. Scalici, Frank |
| 14. Farina, Antoine | 32. Scarpulla, Giacomo Michele |
| 15. Galante, Carmine | 33. Squillante, Vincent James |
| 16. Guido, Alfred | 34. Strollo, Anthony C. |
| 17. Lucania, Salvatore C. | 35. Vitale, Salvatore |
| 18. Mancuso, Serafino | |

(Complete background sheets on above-named individuals may be found in the appendix on p. 1000.)

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any further questions?

If not, thank you.

Call your next witness.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Mr. Belk, Mr. Ward, and Mr. Casey, please.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you be sworn, please?

Do you and each of you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give before this Senate subcommittee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. BELK. I do.

Mr. WARD. I do.

Mr. CASEY. I do.

TESTIMONY OF DANIEL P. CASEY, GEORGE M. BELK, AND CHARLES G. WARD

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ward, will you identify yourself for the record, please, sir?

Mr. WARD. My name is Charles G. Ward. I am currently the district supervisor in Chicago, but prior to that, I started with the Bureau of Narcotics in 1942. Up until 1953 I was an agent. At that time I was made enforcement assistant to the supervisor in New York and I remained in that position until 1963 when I was transferred to Chicago.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Belk, will you identify yourself for the record?

Mr. BELK. My name is George M. Belk. I am presently district supervisor of New York City. Prior to that, I was district supervisor for 6 years in Chicago, Ill. The New York City office covers, in addition to New York City, New York State and 11 northeastern counties of New Jersey.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Casey?

Mr. CASEY. I am Daniel P. Casey, currently the district supervisor in Atlanta, Ga. Prior to approximately a year ago I served 12 years ago in San Francisco for the district comprising California, Arizona, and Nevada.

912 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. All right, Mr. Counsel.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Mr. Ward, are you familiar with the map on the easel there?

Mr. WARD. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was that prepared with your cooperation?

Mr. WARD. Yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would like to offer that chart in evidence.

The CHAIRMAN. That map may be printed in the record at this point.

(The chart referred to faces this page.)

(167)

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is the map of the United States which contains a chart of distribution of the narcotic traffic in the United States, with the principal violators, showing the pattern of operation and how distributed in the United States.

Mr. Ward is familiar with the east coast area, Mr. Belk with the Middle West area, and Mr. Casey with the Far West area. To try to complete the hearing today, I am going to ask them to cover briefly the areas that they are familiar with. They have some other material here, backup material, to submit.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well. We will start with you, Mr. Ward. You don't have a prepared statement, I assume.

Mr. WARD. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well. Describe what you know about the east coast.

Mr. WARD. District two, with headquarters in New York City, comprises the entire State of New York and the 11 northern counties of New Jersey. Within that area, there are approximately 20,000 to 23,000 addicts and it is the biggest troublespot in the United States insofar as narcotic addiction is concerned.

Of course, the reason for this is the large population. It is a financial center, an entertainment center. The shipping facilities are great there. It attracts many addicts from many parts of the country as well as the addicts who do reside in New York.

The CHAIRMAN. Why does it attract them from other parts of the country? Is it because it is accessible to them there?

Mr. WARD. Yes; narcotics are more available in New York and the price of narcotics is cheaper in New York. The further west or south you go, you will find that heroin is more adulterated and more coarse.

Senator CURTIS. The sentences are lighter, too.

Mr. WARD. Locally they are. Federally they are similar.

The bulk of the narcotic traffic in New York is controlled by the five major families of the Mafia listed on the board.

The CHAIRMAN. Are those the same families that Valachi described?

Mr. WARD. They are, sir. The most important one is the Vito Genovese family, the largest family. In narcotics, I believe that the Thomas Lucchese family is the most important. They have been in it the longest and it seems that more members of their organization are engaged in it, and also they are engaged in larger quantities.

Then, we have the Carlo Gambino family, the Joe Bonanno family, and the fifth family we do not know too much about, nor did Joe Valachi, except to say that Giuseppe Profaci was the leader.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 913

He died roughly about a year ago and was replaced by a fellow named Magliocco who recently died. At the present time, we are not positive but we believe that another racketeer has succeeded him by the name of Joe Colombo. But the true picture hasn't worked out yet because of the recent death of the former leader.

In that area, I would say 95 percent of the narcotics are controlled by these five mobs. The balance of the traffic is controlled by Jewish racketeers or by Negroes who might have contacts with the independent seamen, or Puerto Ricans who fall in the same category. Once in awhile, they make a connection with a seaman and they bring some narcotics into the country. By and large, the great problem is with the five families on the board.

The CHAIRMAN. The last you referred to you would call the unorganized or unsyndicated operation?

Mr. WARD. Yes, sir. Many years ago, going back into the 1920's, it was a different picture. The Jewish racketeers of New York almost exclusively controlled narcotics, but back in the 1920's, the leader at that time was Arnold Rothstein. He was murdered and the advent of the Italian racketeers taking over began. As time went on, they became more entrenched.

The CHAIRMAN. As I understand you, all but about 5 percent of the illicit traffic or drugs that are handled is controlled by these organized groups or families, the Mafia and the Cosa Nostra gangs.

Mr. WARD. Yes; I am speaking of heroin.

The CHAIRMAN. You are speaking of heroin?

Mr. WARD. Yes, sir.

Senator MUNDT. In the unfolding of this picture, in which you said earlier in the history of the narcotics traffic the Jewish mob with this Arnold Rothstein pretty much controlled the narcotics traffic but now the Italian mobs and families have replaced them, how did they maneuver the Jewish mobs out? Did they have a gang warfare or buy them out, or did they outmaneuver them? What transpired?

Mr. WARD. They outmaneuvered them with muscle. They killed quite a few of them, and forced them to do their bidding.

Senator MUNDT. It was a power play.

Mr. WARD. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Mr. WARD. The bulk of the heroin is assimilated right in New York City and its environs. But these mobs also have representatives in other cities or other families who they are closely allied with, and what they do in New York is a supply source for Chicago and Boston. What happens when the narcotics arrive in Chicago is that the Italians in Chicago service the Midwestern area.

Boston is not too much of a problem. There is one mob up there. There are not too many addicts. They are concentrated in the Boston area, but almost the entire New England area is almost void of addicts. Insofar as Philadelphia and New Jersey, because of its close proximity to New York, you don't any longer find much organized activity. It is cheaper for the addicts to jump on a Greyhound bus or the Pennsylvania Railroad and ride to New York and purchase narcotics from the lower echelon trafficker in that area.

Throughout the South, on the eastern seaboard, there is really no major problem there. The drugs that are used are diverted legiti-mate drugs, usually obtained from the burglary of drugstores or wholesalers.

914 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. What I don't understand about this racket is how it is sustained since its customers, its victims, are from the low economic status group. How do they get the money? You say some of them are engaged in prostitution and I understand they might make a little money. But the male addict, how does he get his money to purchase these?

Mr. WARD. I don't subscribe to the theory that because a person is from the lower economic group it would more or less make him more prone to narcotic addiction. I think there are more maladjusted people in that area because of stresses. But insofar as obtaining money, that is one reason why a lot of addicts head for New York.

They have what is known as a cannon, which is a pickpocket. It is much easier for him to pick pockets in New York than on a farm in Indiana.

The CHAIRMAN. Many of them are pickpockets?

Mr. WARD. Yes; and many of them are shoplifters. They have worked this down to an art where customers can actually order a size and color suit and in 5 minutes the pickpocket is in and out of R. H. Macy's or Gimbels with the size and color requested. That is one of the reasons many addicts flock to New York, because of the thousands of department stores, and the crowded subways. It makes it much easier for them.

The CHAIRMAN. When do they commit their crimes? Is it while under the influence of the drug? I understood it disabled them to some extent.

Mr. WARD. When they are under the influence of drugs, they are more or less placid. It is when they have the urge for the drug, as the shot is wearing off, that they become more alert, and that is when they go out and commit their crimes to get the money.

The CHAIRMAN. Would they buy it in quantities if they have the money?

Mr. WARD. If they have the money they will.

The CHAIRMAN. For instance, it was shown to us that you get a little package far smaller than the size of one of these sugar packages such as I am holding in my hand, which has just enough sugar to sweeten your coffee. They buy that for $5 or $10, to get a shot. Does the addict make four purchases a day if he uses four injections a day, or does he get enough for a dozen injections, enough to last 2 or 3 days, ordinarily, when he makes the purchase?

Mr. WARD. If he has the money, he will buy as much as his money will bear.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, when he makes a purchase, he invests all of his capital, to the full extent of what he can get?

Mr. WARD. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. That is generally true?

Mr. WARD. Yes, sir. I recall an addict in New York that committed quite an important jewel theft in the Essex House many years ago and immediately came to the attention of the underworld. I have forgotten the exact amount, but the value was in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. The mob immediately relieved him of it and gave him a few ounces of heroin. Once in awhile an addict makes what is called a good score and he will invest his entire earnings in narcotics immediately.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 915

Senator MUNDT. Would it cost an addict $20 a day to keep "hepped up" as the chairman suggested, at $4 or $5 doses? Would it cost that much?

Mr. WARD. It would cost him $20. But the thing to remember is if you have a very successful thief, his habit will naturally get larger because he has the money to buy more drugs. It is, in a sense, like an alcoholic; the more you offer him the more he is going to use. If an addict is a poor thief, of course, he is going to have a poor habit.

Senator CURTIS. Are you the one who is going to testify about the Midwest, the Kansas City-Omaha area?

Mr. WARD. No, sir. Mr. Belk will, on my left.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think you mentioned Philadelphia. Have you touched Washington, yet?

Mr. WARD. No. Baltimore and Washington more or less fall in the same category because of their proximity to New York City. At the present time, we are finding that the major traffickers in these areas, who are Negroes, are traveling to New York or, on occasion, the Negro traffickers in New York are traveling to Washington and Baltimore and effecting the deliveries.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What is the pattern of the operation in the traffic of narcotics in Washington? In whose hands are the operations? How large are they? How much is used here?

Mr. WARD. At the present time, there are roughly four pretty important traffickers in Washington, D.C., and what they do is they have a following, a clientele, of addicts.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Who are these four?

Mr. WARD. There is an Alphonso Turner, Edna Renolds, who is formerly from New York City but who eventually moved to Washington, D.C., and Jesse Greenweld. They are the three most important.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What was the Alphonso?

Mr. WARD. Alphonso Turner.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is he also known as "Catfish" Turner?

Mr. WARD. Yes. There is a fourth one in Washington under arrest at the present time. Litigation is pending against that individual. What they do is sometimes meet the source of supply in prison or at other times are introduced to them through mutual friends. But what they do is, as a general rule, they will journey to New York, either by car, train, or bus, and they will buy quantities ranging from 5 to 10 ounces of heroin. They will then return to Washington or have their couriers return it, and when it is brought down here it is diluted, packaged up and sold in decks of $3, $5, $10.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What would these 10 ounces be worth when they buy it?

Mr. WARD. I believe the present price in New York for an ounce of diluted heroin would run somewhere in the neighborhood of from $200 to $500, depending on the purity of it.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, they would go up there with $5,000 and buy the 10 ounces?

Mr. WARD. Yes.

916 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. I notice on the map you have some other names for the Washington area. These are people who have been in traffic in the past?

Mr. WARD. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And who are currently in the traffic?

Mr. WARD. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I notice you have Vincent Todaro down there, of Fairfax County. Who is he?

Mr. WARD. Vincent Todaro belonged to a major organization in New York and was primarily engaged in the smuggling of narcotics for the mobs in New York.

However, because of his affluency, he owned quite a nice home in Fairfax County—

Mr. ADLERMAN. He happened to be a resident of Fairfax County but his operations were in New York.

Mr. WARD. Strictly New York, yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Then, you have some of the operations down in Miami and some of the other areas nearby.

Mr. WARD. Miami, from time to time, is used as a port to introduce heroin. We find that quite a few of the New York racketeers who have accumulated money over the years in their trafficking and other illicit activities have moved to that area.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You also cover, I notice, Buffalo, and there you find Magaddino and Randaccio listed. They are pretty important, are they not?

Mr. WARD. They are. They are a separate organization that controlled the Buffalo-Niagara Falls area, as well as their sphere of influence extending up to Toronto. One of the major narcotic cases was made in 1960. As the story unfolded, it was disclosed that two of the Agueci brothers, Vito and Albert, immigrated from Sicily.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I notice you prepared a map of the Agueci case. They were involved in narcotics, were they not?

Mr. WARD. They were.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would like to offer this at this point.

The CHAIRMAN. It may be printed in the record at this point.

(The map referred to faces this page.)

(168)

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would also like to offer into evidence the map involved in another case, the Carmine Galante-Mancino case. Did you prepare this map also?

Mr. WARD. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well. That may be printed in the record with proper identification.

(The map referred to faces this page.)

(169)

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would also like to offer in evidence the backup material on the east coast.

The CHAIRMAN. That can be offered just as an exhibit, couldn't it?

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think this should be printed in the record.

The CHAIRMAN. Let it be printed in the record as exhibit No. 3.

(Document referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 3." History of narcotic traffic that follows backup material may be found in appendix on p. 1012.)

(168) (169) Fra le pagine 916-917 del documento originale sono inserite due mappe che — contrassegnate, rispettivamente, con le lettere HH ed II — sono pubblicate, insieme alle altre carte, nella Parte Terza del presente tomo. (N.d.r.)

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 917

EXHIBIT No. 3

THE ILLICIT INTERSTATE NARCOTIC TRAFFIC FROM NEW YORK CITY THROUGHOUT THE EASTERN SEABOARD OF THE UNITED STATES

ANNOTATION SHEET

This report was completed in November 1963. Since then, the following events have occurred.

1. Joseph Magliocco, who succeeded his brother-in-law, the late Joseph Profaci as head of the Profaci family, died on December 28, 1963, of a heart attack in Good Samaritan Hospital, West Islip, Long Island, N.Y.

2. On December 12, 1963, the following named defendants (N.Y.: S 11160) were acquitted in a trial by jury before U.S. District Judge Dudley B. Bosnal, Southern District of New York: Buia, Angelo; Castaldi, Anthony; Di Stefano, Albert; Ruffino, Giuseppe; Settecase, Anthony.

On January 20, 1964, U.S. District Judge Dudley B. Bosnal, Southern District of New York, sentenced the following defendants in N.Y.: S 11160:

Name	Sentence	Bail
Borelli, Frank.....	20 years. Fined $20,000.....	(¹)
Castiglia, Dominick.....	12 years.....	$45,000
Cinquegrana, Benedetto.....	8 years.....	40,000
Garibaldi, Thomas.....	2 years, concurrent with sentence now being served.....	(¹)
Locascio, Carmine.....	15 years. Fined $20,000.....	60,000
Loiacano, Angelo.....	7 years, consecutive to 20 years he is now serving.....	(¹)
Mogavero, Rosario.....	15 years. Fined $20,000.....	55,000
Sancinella, Rocco.....	12 years.....	40,000
Sedotto, Mike.....	10 years, concurrent to present sentence. (Convicted 1960—6½ years.).....	(¹)
Smith, David.....	17 years. Fined $20,000.....	50,000
Tantillo, Harry.....	10 years.....	35,000

¹ No bail set.

On July 31, the U.S. Court of Appeals, Second Circuit, reversed the decision of the U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York, in narcotic conspiracy N.Y.: S 11160. The case was remanded for retrial in U.S. district court.

The reversal was based on the following:

(1) It was not clearly demonstrated that the statute of limitations had not run.

(2) U.S. District Judge Dudley B. Bosnal did not adequately include in his charge to the jury the specific involvement of each defendant in the conspiracy.

BRIEF HISTORY OF ILLICIT INTERSTATE NARCOTIC TRAFFIC FROM NEW YORK CITY
THROUGHOUT EASTERN SEABOARD OF THE UNITED STATES

The port of New York encompasses that area in New York State from its southern boundary including Long Island, northerly to the southern boundary of Buffalo and St. Lawrence and in New Jersey that area including the counties of Sussex, Passaic, and Bergen, extending south to Union, Middlesex, and Monmouth Counties. The heart of the activity of the port of New York in New York City, Long Island and northern New Jersey areas. Here are located the largest and busiest shipping and airport facilities in the complex. The airports of the port of New York are International Airport and La Guardia Airport in New York City and the Newark Airport and the Teterboro Airport in New Jersey.

New York City with its superior facilities handles much of the freight for the entire Nation and also manipulates much of its narcotic traffic. New York City is the center of the illicit narcotic traffic for the eastern seaboard. The principal drag in this illicit interstate narcotic commerce is heroin. This heroin originates chiefly from European sources. Through the years many persons have engaged in this illegal, lucrative venture and a substantial number still are.

Currently, the narcotic traffic in this area is controlled for the most part by organized crime through several powerful New York City syndicates ruled by top echelon Italian racketeers of considerable international and nationwide underworld influence. The greater portion of the balance of this traffic is handled by important Jewish racketeers and several Puerto Rican, Cuban, and Negro violators who at times independently have foreign sources of supply of heroin of their own.

918 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

In recent years, most of the heroin handled in New York City has been smuggled by European sources through trusted couriers via air and sea routes to underworld Canadian sources who subsequently have sold this contraband to organized crime syndicate members, operating in New York City. The latter, through their underlings, distribute this heroin in local and interstate commerce. The traffickers on this level are astute criminals and by and large are not drug addicts.

Organized crime is largely responsible for channeling vast quantities of heroin from New York City to major cities in the eastern seaboard and to Chicago, Ill. From Chicago the narcotics are subsequently distributed by the underworld to leading cities in Midwestern and Southwestern United States. The heroin is smuggled interstate via air, railway, automobiles, trucks, mail, by trusted couriers or the out-of-town customers themselves.

The principal cities serviced by New York City in the eastern seaboard are Buffalo, Boston, Hartford, Philadelphia, Newark, Camden, Baltimore, Washington, D.C., Atlanta, and Miami. Leading criminal organizations in these cities distribute the narcotics in local and neighboring areas.

In the early part of October 1963, in testimony at Washington, D.C., before the U.S. Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations (McClellan committee), Joseph Valachi, FBI No. 544, stated that the principal underworld activities in the metropolitan area of New York City are controlled by five powerful criminal organizations, namely: (1) The Vito Genovese family, (2) the Carlo Gambino family, (3) the Thomas Lucchese family, (4) the Joseph Magliocco family, and (5) the Joseph Bonanno family. These criminal groups, referred to by Joseph Valachi as the Cosa Nostra, are composed of individuals of Italian extraction.

Information dated 1952, contained in the files of the Bureau of Narcotics, corroborates Valachi's contention as to the current existence of five major criminal organizations in New York City which control the major rackets in the metropolitan area. This information, received in 1952, by the Bureau of Narcotics from a confidential source, maintained the existence at that time of five leading underworld organizations in New York City. Source referred to these groups as members of the Mafia. Source identified these five gangs as follows: (1) The Frank Costello group, (2) the Vito Genovese group, (3) the Thomas Lucchese group, (4) the Joseph Profaci group, (5) the Albert Anastasia group, and the Joseph Buoncuore group.

Note: Vito Genovese has deposed Frank Costello as a boss. The Joseph Profaci (deceased) group is currently the Joseph Magliocco family. The Albert Anastasia (deceased) group is currently the Carlo Gambino family. Albert Anastasia was shot to death in New York City on October 25, 1957, allegedly on orders of Vito Genovese and purportedly with the approval of Anastasia's lieutenant, Carlo Gambino who succeeded to leadership of the family upon Albert Anastasia's death.

The five criminal syndicates currently in power in New York City have been engaged in and have controlled multiple lucrative illicit activities in and around the New York City area, including local and interstate trafficking of narcotics. It is noteworthy that many of the individuals identified by Joseph Valachi as members of these five criminal organizations have been engaged for a number of years in the smuggling and/or interstate distribution of narcotics.

The Italian element of organized crime did not emerge as the dominant factor in local and interstate narcotic traffic in the United States until the late 1930's and early 1940's. Prior to this time, in the early 1920's and the early 1930's, Jewish racketeers operating mainly in New York City, directed and influenced the major flow of narcotics throughout the United States. The leading racketeer in the New York City area in the 1920's was Arnold Rothstein who was murdered in 1928. His death left the underworld with a vacuum soon filled by rising Italian racketeers who subsequently seized control of the major rackets in New York City.

During the 1930's the Jewish racketeers in New York City obtained enormous quantities of narcotics from various sources in Europe, principal among these being the notorious Eliopoulos brothers, George and Elias, Greek nationals, the most important narcotic smugglers of all time. They were referred to as the "drug barons" of Europe and they virtually monopolized world narcotic traffic during the years 1929, 1930, and 1931. The Eliopoulos brothers smuggled tons of opium into China from their European factories, as well as enormous quantities into the United States. They achieved much of this through the machination of "fronts," that is, businessmen and bankers.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 919

The U.S. Bureau of Narcotics was subsequently successful in undermining the conspiratorial smuggling operations of the Eliopoulos brothers and incarcerated many of their confederates in the United States. With the advent of World War II, the Eliopoulos brothers fled to the United States where narcotic officers, upon learning of their presence in the United States, promptly assembled evidence against them. The indictment as to George and Elias Eliopoulos was dismissed in U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York, on October 31, 1947.

Among the more important American narcotic customers of the Eliopoulos brothers were members of Murder, Inc., such as, the late Louis Buchalter alias Lepke, Emanuel Weiss alias Mandy Weiss and their associates. Also included among their customers were the infamous Newman brothers (Charles, George, and Harry, true name: Reiditch). Jack Diamond alias Legs Diamond, Arthur Flugenhelmer alias Dutch Schultz, and many others. Also active in this period were Saul Gelb alias Solly Gordon, Harry Stromberg alias Nig Rosen, Harry Meltzer, Meyer Lansky and others.

During this period the Italian underworld element was undergoing internecine warfare among the powerful rival groups contending for absolute power. As a result of this gangland strife, the five principal syndicates now in power in New York City evolved as the uncontested rulers of the underworld in this area.

These five principal criminal syndicates soon controlled the major portion of the interstate narcotic traffic emanating from the New York City area. The flow of this traffic is effectively illustrated by a number of major substantive and narcotic conspiracy cases culminated in past years by the Bureau of Narcotics. In some instances these cases were conducted in cooperation with local law enforcement agencies. Discussed below are several important cases involving interstate narcotic traffic.

Of the five current ruling criminal syndicates in New York City, it appears that it was the Thomas Lucchese group which spearheaded their entry into the lucrative narcotic traffic on a vast scale. Elements of this group allied themselves with important Jewish racketeers who had sources of supply of heroin in Europe and in Mexico. The narcotics obtained from these sources soon found their way into local and interstate commerce.

The first significant onslaught by the Bureau of Narcotics against members of the Thomas Lucchese family occurred in the late 1930's and the early 1940's, when a vast narcotic conspiracy case was initiated against those individuals in U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York. This huge undertaking consumed several years of intensive investigation, involving cooperation with international law enforcement authorities. The conspiracy case hitherto mentioned is narcotic case SE 199.

Narcotic conspiracy case SE 199 had its inception in the notorious East 107 Street area of east Harlem, New York City where narcotics were sold and distributed in retail and wholesale lots to various traffickers who subsequently caused these narcotics to be introduced into local and interstate traffic. The narcotics received at this time by these important dealers were obtained in Mexico by the East 107 Street mob through the aid of several Jewish racketeers. A portion of the narcotics purchased in Mexico by the East 107 Street mob was seized in Reno, Nev.

Thomas Lucchese, the leading member of the East 107 Street mob, directed these activities but remained insulated from possible incrimination by delegating the implementation of these illicit operations to several of his lieutenants, such as John Ormento and Salvatore Santora alias Tom Mix. At times, it was not possible to obtain desired quantities of high-grade opium from Mexico. Consequently, these individuals covertly resorted to local purchases of huge quantities of acetic anhydride which they soon converted into heroin in their clandestine heroin producing laboratories located in the Metropolitan New York area. They distributed this heroin in local and interstate commerce.

The Jewish underworld element at this time controlled the market while the Italian racketeers attended to the conversion of the opium into heroin and the distribution of the finished product throughout the United States.

Convicted and sentenced to prison terms in SE 199 were the following: Joseph Gagliano alias Pip the Blind (deceased), John Schillaci, Charles Albergo, Joseph

920 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Spitalieri, Philip Lombardo, Frank Livorsi (currently incarcerated in an income tax evasion case), Dominick Petrelli (deceased), Salvatore Santora (currently incarcerated for violations of the Federal narcotic laws), Mariano Marsalisi, Pasquale Genese, and John Ricardulli. A no true bill was returned as John Ormento, Anthony Patricola, Frank Arra, Alfred Felice, and Rosario Coniglio.

The next significant narcotic case successfully culminated by the Bureau of Narcotics against members of the notorious East 107th Street mob was narcotic conspiracy case SE 204. In 1942 members of this mob obtained Mexican opium in California and transported this opium to New York City where it was converted into heroin for eventual distribution throughout the United States. Convicted in this case were Charles Alberio, Eugene Tramaglino, and Steve Armons.

The East 107th Street mob had attempted in 1940-41 to purchase narcotics and to establish a steady source of supply from the Bahamas and from Haiti via the Bahamas, Florida, and New York. In 1942, 31 members of this mob were indicted and in 1943, 17 were indicted in the United States and 106 confederates were arrested in Mexico in connection with this case.

Convicted and sentenced to prison terms in narcotic conspiracy case SE 204 were the following: Joseph Michael Dentico, Philip Albanese, Robert Cancellero, Frank Caruso alias Frankie the Bug, Alfred Criscuolo, Eugene Giannini (deceased), Joseph Marone, George Nobile alias Georgie Hooks, John Stoppelli (later released), Harry Tantillo, Anthony Toracco, and Eugene Uricola.

At the close of World War II, interstate narcotic traffic was not as active as in previous years. This was partly due to the fact that the racketeers in the United States consumed much time and effort to realign themselves substantially with foreign sources of supply for heroin.

It was not until 1948 when this commerce quickened its pace to an appreciable degree. A significant case made during this period was that against Joseph Basile. In 1949, Basile was arrested in New York City by agents of the New York City office of the Bureau of Narcotics and by members of the New York City Police Department in the possession of 105 ounces of heroin and 24 ounces of cocaine. This case culminated in the arrest of several important Jewish violators. Joseph Basile and his associates sold heroin to traffickers who caused it to be introduced in interstate traffic particularly the Philadelphia and Washington, D.C., areas.

The year 1951 witnessed the culmination of narcotic conspiracy case SE 226 which had its inception in 1944 and functioned until 1949 without detection or apprehension of the principals involved. The participants in this case were engaged in the importation of Mexican opium and converting same into heroin for introduction in interstate narcotic traffic. This conspiracy investigation extended throughout the United States, Mexico, Cuba, France, Italy, Turkey, and Greece. The key man in this conspiracy was Harold Meltzer who had important sources of opium in Mexico. Convicted in this conspiracy case were the following: John Ormento, Salvatore Santora, Joseph Vento, Harold Meltzer, Mario Livolsi, and others.

In 1951 the Bureau of Narcotics culminated narcotic conspiracy case N.Y.: S 8601 against Joseph Orsini, a French national, and several of his associates in the United States. Orsini's organization secured opium from a Yugoslav source and transported it into France where it was converted into heroin for eventual smuggling into the United States. This heroin from Paris and Marseilles entered New York City through couriers and the use of automobiles containing secret compartments. Convicted in this vast conspiracy were the following: Joseph Orsini, Salvatore Shillitani, Anthony Martello, Carmelo Sansone, Vincent Randazzo and one Marcello Anselmi.

In this case Orsini received his heroin from Francois Paoleschi, Jean Laget, and Lucien Ignaro, notorious French narcotic smugglers and traffickers. Numbered among their customers were Salvatore Shillitani and the late Eugene Giannini, both members of the Thomas Luchese organization. Another customer was Rosario Tornello who became a fugitive. He was finally apprehended by the Bureau of Narcotics after an intensive manhunt. Shillitani and Giannini sold large quantities of heroin from these sources which ended up in interstate traffic, particularly the New England area, Washington, D.C., and Chicago. From the latter point it was distributed to the midwestern and southwestern parts of the United States.

During 1952 one of the most persistent narcotic traffickers in the New York City area was Frank Pasqua, alias Frankie Page, who was one of the principal sources of supply of heroin for Chicago. In December 1952, an investigation by the Bureau of Narcotics resulted in the arrest at Chicago of at least 12 large-scale narcotic traffickers, including Jack Rizzo, Louis Anselmo, Joseph Di Caro, and Frank Panatera. Frank Pasqua was arrested in New York City in this case but managed to escape incrimination. To date, Pasqua, a soldier in the Carlo Gambino family, has not been convicted for violations of the Federal narcotic laws.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 921

In 1954 the Bureau of Narcotics initiated a narcotic conspiracy case involving nine important Cleveland racketeers, two leading Buffalo, N.Y., racketeers, and eight New York City racketeers. Those involved in this case were as follows: Salvatore Poliafico, Frank Consolo, Joseph Zingali, and Angelo Filicia, of Cleveland. Salvatore Pieri and Salvatore Rizzo of Buffalo, and Anthony Crisci, Anthony DeSimone, and Rocco Mazzie, of New York City. Mazzie was not convicted in this case because of failure of a witness to testify against him. Mazzie, a lieutenant of the Carlo Gambino family, is currently in Federal prison as a result of his conviction in the Vito Genovese narcotic conspiracy case in 1960. Shortly after the Cleveland case, Anthony DeSimone became the victim of a gangland slaying in New York City.

In 1954 the New York City office of the Bureau of Narcotics, in cooperation with members of the New York City Police Department, arrested notorious trafficker Saul Gelb, alias Solly Gordon, previously mentioned, in possession of a large quantity of heroin and prepared smoking opium. Gelb supplied heroin to customers who in turn introduced the narcotics in interstate traffic, especially Chicago, Detroit, and Washington, D.C. Saul Gelb obtained his supply of heroin from French-Corsican sources. He was active in the traffic since the early 1920's. Gelb was sentenced to 5 years in prison following his conviction in this case.

In 1955, shortly after Saul Gelb's arrest, the Bureau of Narcotics and members of the New York City Police Department arrested Nathan Behrman and Anthony Vellucci in New York City in possession of approximately 13 kilograms of pure heroin. This was the largest seizure in the United States until that time. Behrman and Vellucci received substantial State prison sentences in this case. They are currently incarcerated in State prison. Investigation determined that Behrman and Vellucci had carried on Gelb's narcotic business for him while the latter was incarcerated in Federal prison. The heroin handled by Behrman and Vellucci was introduced by their associates in interstate traffic, particularly Detroit, Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Cleveland.

Early in 1955 the Bureau of Narcotics received information that kingpin racketeer Settimo Accardo, alias Sam Accardi; Frank DiGregorio, and Joseph Russo were dealing in large amounts of heroin in New York City. Following several purchases of narcotics by U.S. undercover narcotic agents, Accardo, Russo, and DiGregorio were arrested. DiGregorio and Russo were sentenced each to 4 years in prison to be followed by 2 years probation.

Accardo jumped $75,000 bail and became a fugitive. After intensive search, Accardo was finally located in Italy. Accardo was returned to the United States on November 12, 1963, under extradition and will face charges for violation of the Federal narcotic laws, pertaining to the 1955 narcotic case aforementioned.

Accardo was closely associated in the narcotic traffic with Charles Campisi and Cristoforo Robino. The narcotics handled by Settimo Accardo and his associates entered the traffic in the eastern seaboard and midwestern cities. Robino remained a fugitive for approximately 2 years. He surrendered himself on December 11, 1957, and his bail was set at $35,000. Robino, a close associate of the late Salvatore Lucania, alias Lucky Luciano, was a participant in the notorious Apalachin meeting on November 14, 1957. Robino was killed in gangland fashion in New York City on July 18, 1958. Robino was highly placed in the narcotic traffic, being a representative of the late Salvatore Lucania and a soldier in the Joseph Profaci family (currently the Giuseppe Magliocco family). It appears that Robino represented Profaci in the narcotic traffic. The reason for his murder is unknown but evidently he transgressed against the code of the underworld.

Another significant case in 1955 involved Charles Campisi. Ugo Giampaoli, Aniello Santagata and Matildo Buia. They were implicated by several purchases of heroin by U.S. undercover narcotic agents. Santagata and Giampaoli were each sentenced to 4 years in prison in this case. Thomas Campisi, a brother of Charles Campisi, was indicted in this case for sale of heroin to a U.S. undercover narcotic agent. Charles Campisi was previously sentenced to 3 years imprisonment, sentence suspended. Later, he was reindicted in Brooklyn, N.Y., where he was sentenced on November 6, 1956, to 8 years in prison. Charles Campisi, Settimo Accardo and Cristoforo Robino were among the most active interstate traffickers at this time.

922 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

In 1955 the Bureau of Narcotics culminated a case against Charles Curcio, Benjamin Licchi and the latter's brother, Joseph Licchi, who were arrested on January 27, 1955, at Hackensack, N.J., where a clandestine heroin laboratory was found in the home of Joseph Licchi. The Licchi brothers are uncles of notorious narcotic trafficker Frank Borelli. Borelli became a fugitive in this case but was finally located and arrested in Chicago, Ill., on November 16, 1956. This organization, which supplied narcotics to Chicago and the eastern seaboard had in its employ one Dr. John E. Jackson, a competent chemist. Dr. Jackson manufactured heroin for Borelli et al. in this laboratory. Dr. Jackson was subsequently assaulted and died of cranial injuries. His death precluded prosecution against Frank Borelli, a principal suspect in this murder. Borelli, as of this writing, is currently standing trial in U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York, for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. This case involves Carmine Locascio and other important local and interstate narcotic violators.

An important interstate narcotic conspiracy case culminated in 1956 by the Bureau of Narcotics involved James Ewing, Florence Hart, Clarence E. Wilson, William Frank, and Henry Marzette, Jr. The latter three were members of the Detroit Police Department. The Detroit narcotic operations of this group were conducted by James Ewing, Florence Hart, David Robinson, and Thomas Allen, with active assistance by Wilson, Marzette, and Frank. The New York City sources of supply of heroin for this group were Anthony Vellucci, previously mentioned, George Vellucci, Carmine Siano, Frank Corona, and Dominick Tedesco. These defendants were subsequently tried in Federal court and most of them were given substantial prison sentences in the summer of 1956. Anthony Vellucci and his associates were subsequently involved in the Harry Stromberg narcotic conspiracy case in New York City. (This case will be discussed briefly below but a more comprehensive report concerning this case has already been submitted to the McClellan committee.)

In April 1956, agents of the Bureau of Narcotics, assisted by members of the New York City Police Department, arrested Michael Castaldo, Alfred Vollano, Ralph and Philip Armano and Elsie Williams in possession of 17 ounces of heroin. This investigation resulted in the arrest of notorious Angelo Tuminaro alias Angie. For the past many years Angelo Tuminaro was associated in the narcotic traffic with Anthony DiPabqua alias Bootsie. Angelo Tuminaro is a soldier of the Thomas Lucchese family. Tuminaro was a defendant in a subsequent narcotic conspiracy case, Carmine Galante et al., in which he was a fugitive for some time. He was subsequently located and arrested and is awaiting trial.

On September 15, 1959, the Bureau of Narcotics culminated narcotic conspiracy case N.Y.:S 9673 involving Harry Stromberg, Saul Gelb, Jean Baruche, Jean Aron, Anthony Vellucci, Nathan Behrman, and others. This case was an outgrowth of the Nathan Behrman-Anthony Vellucci case, the Clarence Wilson case and the Saul Gelb case, all previously mentioned.

Harry Stromberg, the principal figure in this conspiracy case, financed the narcotic operations of this syndicate. He amassed the necessary funds making possible the importation of vast quantities of heroin from Europe into the United States. This organization handled on an average of 50 kilograms of pure heroin a month. The sources of heroin in this case were some of Saul Gelb's French-Corsican associates. The heroin was paid for through financial machinations involving anonymous numbered Swiss bank accounts. The Stromberg organization distributed the heroin to Detroit, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, D.C., and as far south as Miami. Those receiving substantial prison sentences in this case were as follows. Harry Stromberg, Nathan Behrman, Saul Gelb, John Buccelli, Salvatore Maimone, Anthony Mirra, Stephen Puco, Henry Teitelbaum, Martin De Saverio, Nicholas and Daniel Lessa, and others. Also involved in this case was George Brisbois, a Canadian, who was one of the sources of supply of heroin for Saul Gelb and others. Brisbois was located after an extensive search and was extradited. He was sentenced to 3 years 6 months in this case. John Buccelli, a Boston source of narcotic supply and a suspect in the Brink's armored car holdup, was subsequently shot and killed.

On December 3, 1957, Helen Mack was arrested in Chicago for the sale of pure heroin to an undercover narcotic agent. Helen Mack is the wife of Nolan Mack. The latter was shot to death on October 25, 1963, by a U.S. narcotic agent following Mack's violent attempt to avoid arrest and engaging in a gun battle with arresting officers. (The details of this incident are included in a separate report available to the McClellan committee.) The major source of supply of heroin for Helen and Nolan Mack in 1957 and some time prior thereto was William Wright of Brooklyn, N.Y. Wright also supplied heroin to other traffickers in Chicago.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 923

An important interstate narcotic case culminated in 1959 by the Bureau of Narcotics involved Vincent Todaro and Joseph Lo Piccolo, and others. (A comprehensive report on this case has been submitted to the McClellan committee.) Briefly, this case involved Vincent Todaro, of Fairfax County, Va., formerly of New York City, who obtained heroin from important sources in Italy and France. Todaro and his associates, leading racketeers in Metropolitan New York City, effected the distribution of heroin to the Camden-Philadelphia area and other cities in the eastern seaboard. From these points the heroin entered into the traffic in local and surrounding areas. The principal defendants in this case, besides Vincent Todaro, were James Massi, Amelio D'Aria and Ignacio L. Orlando, Nassau County, Long Island, N.Y., Peter Casella and James Santore of the Philadelphia-Camden area, Frank Valli of Philadelphia, Joseph Lo Piccolo of New York City and Miami, and George Nobile of New York City. Nobile assisted Todaro in preparing smoking opium at the latter's residence.

A total of approximately 37 pounds of heroin and approximately 39 pounds of smoking opium were seized in this case. These individuals stood trial and received substantial prison sentences. Joseph Valachi has identified George Nobile, a persistent narcotic violator, as a soldier in the Vito Genovese family. Todaro and Nobile were sentenced on May 28, 1958, in Fairfax County, Va., to 10 years in State prison. James Massi had been associated with one Dante Gallo in the narcotic traffic until the latter succumbed to cancer of the throat. Massi then became active in the traffic with Frank Pasqua, previously mentioned, a soldier in the Carlo Gambino family.

The principal narcotic conspiracy case, culminated in 1958 by the Bureau of Narcotics, involved boss racketeer Vito Genovese, John Ormento, Natale Evola, and Rocco Mазzie. This conspiracy began in 1954 and involved the smuggling of large amounts of heroin into the United States via Cuba. The heroin handled by this organization was distributed from New York City to various points in the United States, including Cleveland, Chicago, Philadelphia, Las Vegas, and Los Angeles. This group handled at least 160 kilograms of heroin. Convicted in this case were the following: Vito Genovese, Natale Evola, Rocco Mазzie, Joseph Di Palermo, Nicholas and Daniel Lessa. These individuals received substantial prison sentences in this case. John Ormento and Carmine Galante were fugitives in this case at the time of trial. They were subsequently apprehended and were tried in another conspiracy case (Carmine Galante et al.) in which they were found guilty and were sentenced to prison. Recently the U.S. Supreme Court directed the Court of Appeals, Second Circuit, to reconsider its findings in the Genovese case. This matter is pending.

Also involved in this case were John Ormento and Carmine Galante but they had remained fugitives until after the trial. They were tried in this case. Ormento and Galante were convicted in a subsequent Federal narcotic conspiracy and are currently incarcerated. The Genovese case involved members of four of the five leading criminal syndicates in New York City, namely Vito Genovese himself, Ormento, a lieutenant of the Thomas Lucchese family, Rocco Mазzie, a lieutenant in the Carlo Gambino family, and Carmine Galante, chief lieutenant of the Joseph Bonanno family.

In 1959 the Bureau of Narcotics culminated several major narcotic cases resulting in the conviction of important violators. One such case involved Marc Antonio Orlandino and others. This investigation had its inception in January 1959 when U.S. undercover narcotic agents purchased two ½ kilograms of heroin from Sam Monastersky and Richard McGovern of New York City. Further investigation revealed that Monastersky was receiving heroin from Philip and Marc Antonio Orlandino. On February 14, 1959, U.S. narcotic agents and New York City police arrested Monastersky, McGovern, William Struzziery, and William Bentvena. That same evening officers arrested Philip and Marc Antonio Orlandino, seizing a total of 11 kilograms of heroin from the home of Philip Orlandino and the office of Marc Antonio Orlandino.

The latter search disclosed a Railway Express receipt for a package to one E. K. Brown, of Chicago. Upon receipt of this information, the Chicago office of the Bureau of Narcotics arrested Eula Brown and seized 1 kilogram 814 grams of heroin which she said she was holding for Wilbur Holmes, brother of notorious narcotic trafficker Auckland Holmes. Auckland Holmes was arrested on February 19, 1959, when he called for the package.

924 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Richard McGovern's body was later found in a ditch in Acapulco, Mexico, the victim of a gangland assassination. It is believed that he was murdered for having introduced a narcotic agent into the organization.

Another significant case made in 1959 by the Bureau of Narcotics involved John Freeman, an important Negro trafficker, Joseph Valachi, Michael Monica, and others. In May 1959 John Freeman, Jr., and Georgie Flood (female) were arrested in New York City as they were about to deliver 3 kilograms 430 grams of heroin to an undercover narcotic agent. Ralph Wagner, Herbert Sperling, and Emma Ward, members of this organization, were arrested for involvement in this case and 1½ kilograms of heroin were seized from them.

John Freeman, Sr., operator of two flower shops in New York City, supplied large quantities of heroin to the west Harlem section of New York City, the South Side of Chicago, Detroit, and Los Angeles. Freeman's principal source of heroin supply was Joseph Valachi. The latter was a fugitive in this case until he was arrested in November 1959 in Connecticut. Valachi was sentenced to 20 years in prison in this case, Freeman to 20 years, and Monica to 8 years. Monica was a narcotic courier for the late Pasquale Moccio (deceased), a soldier in the Vito Genovese family. Monica was purportedly the "plant man" for narcotic traffickers Michael Nicoline and Joseph Valachi.

Another case culminated in 1959 involved Anthony Pisciotta and Thomas Garibaldi of New York City. These individuals sold 485 grams of high grade heroin to a U.S. undercover narcotic agent who had penetrated the distributing organization in Chicago. Following a subsequent purchase of heroin, Pisciotta was arrested in December 1959. Pisciotta, who received a substantial prison sentence in this case, is a member of the Vito Genovese family.

The year 1960 witnessed the culmination of at least 3 major narcotic cases against individuals of high status in the narcotic traffic. Mentioned briefly below are the highlights of these cases.

On October 2, 1960, following information from the French Surete National and the Paris, France, office of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, French narcotic trafficker Etienne Tarditi, Guatemalan Ambassador to the Netherlands, Belgium, and Luxembourg; Maurice Rosal; TWA Purser Charles Bourbonnais, and pickup man, Nicholas Calamaras, of New York City were arrested by agents of the New York City office of the Bureau of Narcotics, and the Customs Agency Service in midtown Manhattan as Tarditi and Rosal were about to deliver a quantity of pure heroin to Calamaras and Bourbonnais. Seized from Tarditi and Rosal were 49,256 kilograms of pure heroin and $57,466. Seized from Calamaras was $51,549.

Tarditi was a member of a French organization smuggling huge amounts of pure heroin into the United States. Bourbonnais, a courier for this organization, had smuggled enormous amounts for this organization for the previous 10 years. Rosal, taking advantage of his diplomatic status, had been successful in smuggling heroin for this organization on previous occasions. Calamaras was a pickup man for New York City racketeers who were the intended recipients for 49,256 kilograms of heroin.

Four days later an additional 51.893 kilograms of pure heroin in a trunk were located and seized. This combined seizure is the greatest seizure of heroin made to date in the United States. Rosal and Calamaras were sentenced to 15 years in prison in this case. Bourbonnais and Tarditi each were sentenced to 9 years in prison.

Calamaras had succeeded one Joseph Cahill as pickup man for New York City racketeers. Calamaras was an associate of one Frank Sherbicki. Sherbicki and Cahill were associates of notorious traffickers Steve and Joseph Armone. The latter were closely associated with notorious Andre Alberti, a close associate of Joseph Biondo, chief lieutenant of Carlo Gambino. Armone, Alberti, and Biondo were not implicated in this case but it is suspected that Alberti and his associates were the intended recipients of this heroin. Alberti and Biondo are suspected of being engaged in interstate narcotic traffic.

Another important narcotic case culminated in 1960 was the narcotic conspiracy case involving Salvatore Rinaldo and others. In this case, on August 21, 1960, agents of the New York City office of the Bureau of Narcotics and Westchester police arrested Salvatore Rinaldo and Natteo Palmeri near Yonkers, N.Y., in possession of a specially constructed wooden trunk with a false bottom containing 10 kilograms of pure heroin. The officers had just followed Rinaldo and Palmeri from the SS Saturnia which had docked at a pier on the North

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 925

River. Rinaldo and Palmeri had loaded this trunk into a panel and were followed to the site where they had been arrested.

A search of Rinaldo's home disclosed a trap in a closet containing one-half kilogram of heroin and $21,450. A search of Rinaldo's sister's home revealed an additional one-half kilogram of heroin along with scales and testing paraphernalia.

Further investigation implicated Vincent Mauro, Frank Caruso, Robert Cuipone, Anthony Porcelli, Rocco Cancinella, Joseph Ragone, Salvatore Maneri, and Charles Schiffman. Heroin in this case originated in France and Italy and was distributed by the aforementioned individuals in interstate narcotic traffic throughout the United States.

Mauro, Caruso, and Maneri jumped bail and became fugitives in this case. Through the use of false passports they traveled to Europe via Nassau, Bahamas, Kingston, Jamaica, Caracas, Venezuela, Nice, France, London, England, Spain, Portugal, and the island of Majorca. The Bureau of Narcotics, in cooperation with the Spanish authorities, arrested Caruso and Mauro in Barcelona, Spain, and Maneri on the island of Majorca. They were subsequently returned to the United States where they pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York. Caruso, Maneri, and Mauro each received a 15-year prison sentence in this case and an additional 5 years in prison for jumping bail, to run concurrently.

Another major narcotic case culminated in 1960 was the Giuseppe Cotroni Narcotics Conspiracy case. This case followed the arrests and convictions of Giuseppe Cotroni and Rene Robert and the seizure of 6 kilograms of pure heroin in Canada in 1959. This resulted in the indictment of approximately 29 defendants in the southern district of New York on charges of narcotic conspiracy. The leading members of this conspiracy were Carmine Galante, John Ormento, Angelo Tuminaro, Frank Mari, Carlisle Di Pietro, Rocco Sancinella, Angelo Loiacano, and Frank Mancino. Anthony Di Pasqua, Charles Gagliodotto, Salvatore Giglio, and Louis Greco had eluded arrest during the roundup. Anthony Mirra, another defendant in this case, had been incarcerated as the result of the Harry Stromberg Narcotic Conspiracy case. The Cotroni Conspiracy case was tried in the southern district of New York and resulted in the convictions of the following: John Ormento, 40 years; Samuel Monastersky, 30 years; Joseph Fernandez, 35 years; William Bentvena, 35 years; Carlisle Di Pietro, 20 years; Carmine Galante, 20 years; Frank Mancino, 20 years; Anthony Mirra, 20 years; Carmine Panico, 12 years; Salvatore Panico, 20 years; William Struzzieri, and Angelo Loiacano, 20 years.

Represented in the Cotroni Conspiracy case were members of three of the five principal criminal organizations in New York City; namely, Carmine Galante, chief lieutenant of the Joseph Bonanno family; John Ormento and Angelo Loiacano of the Thomas Lucchese family; and Carlisle Di Pietro of the Vito Genovese family. These individuals distributed the heroin, obtained from the Cotroni organization, into local and interstate traffic.

The Salvatore Rinaldo-Matteo Palmeri case in 1960 resulted in significant developments in 1961. Briefly, they are as follows: Following the indictments in this case approximately 43 traffickers were denounced in Italy for being involved in the smuggling of large quantities of pure heroin from French clandestine heroin producing laboratories into the United States via Italy. These sources had supplied Rinaldo with sizable quantities of heroin.

An important defendant in N.Y.: S. 10795, Narcotic Conspiracy case, an outgrowth of the Rinaldo-Palmeri Conspiracy case, was one Alberto Agueci who had been released on $20,000 bail bond on September 18, 1961. On October 9, 1960, Alberto Agueci failed to appear in court and his bond was forfeited. On November 23, 1961, the body of Alberto Agueci was found in a field near Rochester, N.Y. His arms had been bound behind his back with wire and he had been strangled with a clothesline, his body doused with gasoline and set afire. Another defendant in N.Y.: S. 10795, William Holmes alias Shorty, considered by the other traffickers to be a weak link, also was murdered. His body was found on August 8, 1961, in the Bronx, N.Y., apparently a victim of gangland slaying.

Convicted in N.Y.: S. 10795, Narcotic Conspiracy case, were the following: Alberto Agueci, Vito Agueci, 15 years; Arnold Barbeto, Frank Caruso, pled guilty March 14, 1963, 15 years; Filippo Cottone, 5 years; Robert Guipone, 20 years; William Holmes; Luigi Le Bue, 15 years; Michael Maiello, 15 years, died later of a heart attack; Salvatore Maneri, pled guilty March 14, 1963, 15 years; Vincent Mauro, pled guilty March 14, 1963, 15 years; Matthew Palmieri, 20 years; John

926 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Papalia, 10 years; Anthony Porcelli, 15 years; Charles Shiffman, 25 years; Rocco Scopelitti, 10 years; Charles Tandler, 15 years, and Joseph Valachi, 20 years. Joseph Valachi's 20-year sentence was to run concurrently with the 20-year sentence he received in the John Freeman case, aforementioned. The principals in N.Y.: S. 10795 Conspiracy case sold huge amounts of heroin to traffickers who introduced the narcotics into interstate traffic in the eastern seaboard and Cleveland, Chicago, and other cities.

A significant case made in 1962 by the Bureau of Narcotics was Narcotic Conspiracy case, N.Y.: S. 11160, wherein the following named individuals were charged with violation of the Federal narcotic laws, conspiracy, title 21, sections 173 and 174; Frank Borelli, aforementioned; Angelo Buia, aforementioned; Anthony Castaldi, Anthony Ciccone, Benedetto Cinquergrana, Albert Di Stefano, Alfred Eppolito (deceased), Thomas Garibaldi, Carmine Locascio, Angelo Loiacano, Joseph Mogavero, Rosario Mogavero, Vincent Renna, Giuseppe Ruffino, Michael Sedotto, Anthony Settecase, David "Pop" Smith, Rocco Sanci-nella, Harry Tantillo, and John Doe alias Mickey Blair, later identified as Anthony Castiglia.

The principals in this case, especially Carmine Locascio, obtained large quantities of high-grade heroin from David "Pop" Smith and the latter's associate, Angelo Buia. Smith and Buia obtained their supplies from French sources. Angelo Buia, previously mentioned in this report, is a soldier in the family. Represented in this conspiracy were members of three of the five principal criminal organizations in New York City. Anthony Castaldi, Anthony Ciccone, Carmine Locascio, and Angelo Loiacano are members of the Thomas Lucchese family. Joseph and Rosario Mogavero are members of the Vito Genovese family. Michael Sedotto is a soldier of the Carlo Gambino family. Alfred Eppolito (deceased) was a lieutenant in the Carlo Gambino family.

This conspiracy had its inception in 1950 until the date of the indictment in 1962. This case went to trial on November 6, 1963, at U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York. As of this writing this trial is still in progress.

Outlined above are major cases involving interstate narcotic traffic emanating from New York City. Indicated briefly below are interstate cases in district No. 1, district No. 3, district No. 5, and district No. 6. This aforementioned district offices together with district No. 2 (New York and northern New Jersey) comprise the eastern seaboard headquarter offices of the Bureau of Narcotics).

District No. 1.—Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode Island

Massachusetts.—For the past 25 years the narcotic traffic in Massachusetts has been controlled by two major and several smaller independent groups. Their sources of supply on most occasions has been New York City. These two major groups have been operating on and off for the past 25 to 30 years. These two groups are the North End Italians (Frank Cucchiara being the most recent) and the Isabella family of Malden. Frank Cucchiara was allegedly obtaining heroin in New York City from the late Cristoforo Robino, previously mentioned, and the Carlo Gambino organization. The Isabellas of Malden are cousins of a notorious New York City narcotic trafficker, Florio Isabella.

It has been ascertained that New York City has been the principal source of supply of heroin for the smaller independent groups, the Edward Frank-Frank Cesario group and more recently the Edward Frank-Leonard Delmar group, as well as the Sylvester-Cesario-Delia group. The North End Italians, the Isabellas of Malden and New York City traffickers have been sources of supply of heroin for the Wady David group in Boston. Other traffickers in this area have been the late John Buccelli, Joseph Mofie, and Joseph Massa.

The more notable cases and violators have been as follows:

Year	Case number	Defendants
1952-55.....	Mass, 1851 and 1959.....	Nady David et al.
1955.....	Mass, 1949 and 1953.....	Peter Marinello.
1955.....	NY:S, 9673.....	Buccelli, Mofie and Marinello.
1956.....	Mass, 1975.....	Della, Sacoco and Russo.
1960.....	Mass, 1999.....	Webster Falge.
1961.....	Mass, 2016.....	Edward Frank and Leonard Delmar.
1962.....	Mass, 2043.....	Dominic Isabella and Charles Kintaris.
1962.....	NY:S, 10767.....	Joseph Sax and James Massa.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 927

Connecticut.—The narcotic traffic in Connecticut is not controlled by a tightly knit organization as it was 10 years ago. Currently, the majority of known traffickers in this area are Negroes who are addicted to heroin. These individuals travel to New York City by bus or train, obtain the heroin, and return to Connecticut where they resell it. Many of these persons are engaged in various types of crimes, many of them being pimps or thieves.

The most notable narcotic cases made by the Bureau of Narcotics in Connecticut within the past 10 years are as follows:

- 1952—Conn-474, defendants Raymond Maresca and Concetta Maresca.
- 1952—Conn-479, defendant Vincent Stancarone.
- 1953—Conn-498, defendant George Malloy, et al.
- 1954—Conn-502, defendant Dominick Paolantonio, et al.
- 1958—NY:S 10040, defendant Ignazio C. Marchese.
- 1960—Conn-572, defendant Clarence Aspelund, et al.
- 1961—Conn-589, defendant Ralph Cianchetti, et al.
- 1962—NY:S 11208, defendant Robert Ager, et al.

Narcotic arrangements in Connecticut involving organized peddling dropped off sharply after the arraignments and conviction of Raymond Maresca, Vincent Stancarone, George Malloy, and Dominick Paolantonio; however, within the past 3 years, important narcotic traffickers; such as, Clarence Aspelund and Ralph Cianchetti were arrested for involvement in narcotic smuggling. These individuals did not sell narcotics locally but engaged in traffic with important narcotic dealers. As matters stand, there is a vast potential capable of being engaged in large-scale narcotic traffic in Connecticut. Those suspected in such traffic are: Ippolito Paolo Agresta, Frank Piccolo, Frank Visone and Morris J. Salow.

Raymond Maresca is considered the leading racketeer in the Connecticut area. He gives the impression that he is not currently engaged in the narcotic traffic. Visone, Agresta, and Piccolo appear to control the numbers racket and book-making in the Fairfield County area. It appears that Agresta and Piccolo work for Visone.

Those suspected of being engaged in narcotic traffic in Hartford, Conn., are Dominick Paolantonio, Walter Fredericks, and Morris J. Salow. Salow was acquainted with the late Alfred Eppolito and has been acquainted with New York City narcotic suspect trafficker Andrew Alberti for a number of years.

District No. 3—Pennsylvania, New Jersey (except Fifth Internal Revenue District)

For the past decade the general source of supply of heroin for the Philadelphia area has been New York, N.Y. Due to continual pressure on the addict and the peddler by both the Philadelphia Police Department, Narcotic Squad; and the Special Investigations Squad, in cooperation with the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, the pattern of this traffic from New York to Philadelphia has changed from the beginning of the decade in that wholesale organized outlets for heroin in this city and its environs are a rarity.

In view of this development, the narcotic traffic in Philadelphia has now more or less stabilized to individual addicts or one individual addict acting for a group making trips irregularly to New York, N.Y., and obtaining either personal or group supplies of heroin; or addict peddlers making trips to New York, purchasing either the so-called "loads," consisting of 25 small packets, costing from $75 to $100, in addition to the so-called one-sixteenth, one-eighth, or one-quarter, and a very few who will occasionally purchase ounce quantities for distribution in Philadelphia. All of the above quantities are further adulterated and broken down, usually to the $5 or $10 packets, which are the items of traffic on the street in this vicinity.

This pattern has developed by reason of the high price of heroin at the addict level in Philadelphia which averages 30 mgm. or less of dilute heroin for $5, in contrast to New York City, where a $5 packet would run from 150 mgm. to 200 mgm. This price contrast follows through the one-sixteenth, one-eighth quantities even more so. The fact that New York City is only 90 miles away, with bus or train service averaging better than one trip per half hour, it pays the local narcotic violator to make these trips to New York and obtain supplies of heroin.

928 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The major violators in the Philadelphia, Pa., area are as follows: Harry Riccobene, Andrew B. Willis, Henry Staley, Jr., Dorothy Staley, Peter Casella, James J. Santore, Frank Malfi, and Frank Valli.

The major violators in the Pittsburgh, Pa., area are as follows: Stevenson Stone Bey, Edgar L. Butler, Estella Jane Byrd, Alvin Clark, William Clark, Alonzo Davis, Joseph Barker, George Mills, Hershel Smith, Edward Todd, Elmer Washington, and George Williams.

District No. 5—Maryland, Washington, D.C., North Carolina, Virginia, and West Virginia

The hub of the heroin traffic in District No. 5 is Washington, D.C., Baltimore, Md., the Norfolk-Richmond areas of Virginia, North Carolina, and West Virginia have comparative heroin problems in descending lesser degrees and in that order.

The primary source for heroin for the District of Columbia has been New York City. Most of these New York City sources have been discussed previously in this report. There have been instances of some heroin distribution in the District of Columbia which originated in Mexico and sporadically smuggled in small quantities by seamen or service personnel originally stationed in Korea. The heroin involved in the latter operation has appeared in U.S. Army installations in North Carolina. Attached as an addendum are background sheets on the principal violators in District No. 5.

District No. 6—Georgia, Florida, Alabama, South Carolina, and Tennessee

Three of the most important narcotic violators in Alabama for the past 10 years have been Wilburn Cary Gunter alias Bill Gunter (deceased); Eddie Brown Rich alias Brown Rich; and Rufus Howard Harden. Rich and Harden are currently incarcerated in Federal penitentiaries.

Most of the narcotics in Alabama entering into illegal channels were at one time in the illicit trade. Rarely some heroin gets into the trade in Alabama. Three cases involving heroin have been made in this State in the past 10 years. These involved the following: Eddie Brown Rich, Alabama 1076; Theoplis Simmons, Alabama 1101, and Nathaniel Steinback, Alabama 1129.

Attached in the addenda are brief background histories of Eddie Brown Rich and William Wilburn Cary Gunter, and Rufus Howard Harden. It is noteworthy that Harden is a known associate of New York City narcotic trafficker Florio Isabella.

Since 1952 approximately six cases of significance were made in Tennessee. They are as follows: Tennessee 1988, James Merritt; Tennessee 1989, Timothy S. Flanders; Tennessee 2022, George E. Duggins, and Cecil Nappier; Tennessee 2068, William E. Alley; Tennessee 2071, William Condon Graham, Grace Cunningham, and William Minnick. A brief synopsis of the aforementioned cases is included in attached addenda.

The Port of Miami, Fla., is a receiving point for heroin from Europe and for cocaine from South and Central America. Currently residing in the Miami area are retired leading racketeers from metropolitan New York City and Cleveland. Among these racketeers are Myer and Jake Lansky, Michael Coppola, Rocco Pellegrino, Philip Krovlick, Alfred Polizzi, Pasquale Erra, Joseph Falcone, and others.

The Tampa, Fla., area is controlled by Santo Trafficante, Jr., and his associates. The latter, a participant in the underworld meeting at Apalachin in 1957, has been active in the narcotic traffic for the past many years. Through the years, Trafficante has allegedly received large amounts of heroin from important New York City traffickers.

District No. 8—Michigan, Ohio, and Kentucky

The most prevalent drug in the illicit narcotic traffic throughout Michigan and Ohio is heroin. This is particularly true of the addict population of Detroit, Mich. The narcotic traffic in Ohio remains primarily restricted to the cities of Cleveland, Cincinnati, and Dayton, and to a lesser degree Columbus. Heroin traffic in Kentucky is virtually nonexistent.

Most of the heroin in Detroit comes from Chicago, with New York being the secondary source, however, New York City supplies Chicago with a greater portion of its heroin.

Until several years ago activities in Detroit would indicate the presence of possibly six or seven peddlers of sufficient stature to furnish wholesale quantities of heroin. It was the trend in 1962 for important Detroit narcotic violators to combine their activities, thus forming a more highly organized distribution of narcotics. It has been suspected that the reason for this trend was to minimize the risk of apprehension of the wrongdoers. It also has been indicated that these individuals, by pooling their funds, could obtain a more satisfactory buying power for their heroin in Chicago and New York.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 929

Today the Detroit narcotic trafficker has to bring his money usually to Chicago, and on a few occasions to New York, pay for the narcotics and transport the drugs back to Michigan themselves. Due to effective law enforcement by Michigan, Federal and city agencies, the organization and syndication in the illicit traffic in this area has been pretty well minimized.

One of the most important suspected narcotics traffickers in the Detroit area is Raffaele Quasarano. Quasarano has been active in the narcotic traffic for at least the past 10 years. During the early 1950's Quasarano made frequent trips to New York City allegedly for the purpose of obtaining heroin. Quasarano is the protégé of John Priziola, one of the most powerful criminal leaders in the Detroit area. Quasarano's father-in-law was the late Vito Vitale, a former top-ranking Mafioso who resided in Ostia, Italy, a suburb of Rome. Quasarano made several trips to Italy ostensibly to visit his sick father-in-law, but it is suspected that the real purpose for these trips was to make arrangements for obtaining large quantities of heroin and for the smuggling into the United States to the Detroit area. It appears that Quasarano has been the channel for the one independent source of heroin for Detroit.

There is no direct evidence that Quasarano has been engaged in interstate narcotic traffic, but it would appear that the amounts of heroin allegedly smuggled in by Quasarano would more than suffice for the Detroit area. Today, the heroin available in the streets of Detroit averages about 1 to 4 percent in purity. There are slightly less than 1,500 narcotic addicts today in Detroit. Erstwhile major traffickers such as Sam Caruso, Louis Oddo, Joseph Catalanotte, James Galici, Anthony Teramine, and many others have in recent years entered into some other field of criminal endeavor upon their release from prison.

Ohio, mentioned previously in this report, is the interstate narcotic case involving Salvatore Poliafico, of Cleveland, and Rocco Mazzie, of New York City, and others.

In the early 1950's there were at least 3,000 to 3,500 addicts in Cleveland, heroin being the drug of preference. During this period the narcotic traffic in this area was dominated by five separate and distinct criminal syndicates operated by elements of the Italian underworld. Those active in the traffic at this time were Salvatore Poliafico, Spitalieri brothers, John Montana, Sylvester Papalardo, and Joseph Fredericks. These organizations purchased the bulk of their heroin from New York City and Buffalo, N.Y. They sent couriers from Cleveland to the latter cities for the purpose of obtaining the heroin and transporting the narcotics back to Cleveland. This heroin, in 3 kilogram lots, averaged 10 to 30 percent in purity. In Dayton, Ohio, where there were previously 400 reported addicts, today there are less than 30 addicts. There appears to be no syndicated organization in the narcotic traffic today in Ohio. (Attached as an addendum to this report are reports from district No. 8.)

ADDENDUM

Listed below are the names of individuals contained in the appendix concerning whom background sheets are attached.

- | | |
|-------------------------|----------------------------|
| 1. Accardo, Settimo | 17. Campisi, Thomas |
| 2. Agresta, Ippolito | 18. Carlisi, Rosario |
| 3. Albanese, Philip | 19. Caruso, Frank |
| 4. Alberio, Charles | 20. Casella, Peter |
| 5. Alberti, Andrew | 21. Castaldi, Anthony |
| 6. Arnone, Joseph | 22. Catalanotto, Joseph |
| 7. Arnone, Stephen | 23. Catena, Gerardo |
| 8. Barbato, Arnold | 24. Ciccone, Anthony |
| 9. Bellanca, Sebastiano | 25. Cinquegrana, Benedetto |
| 10. Biondo, Joseph | 26. Coppola, Michael |
| 11. Boiardi, Richard | 27. Corona, Frank |
| 12. Bonanno, Joseph | 28. Costiglia, Francesco |
| 13. Borelli, Frank | 29. Crisci, Anthony |
| 14. Bufalino, Russell | 30. Criscuolo, Alfred |
| 15. Buia, Angelo | 31. Cucchiara, Frank |
| 16. Campisi, Charles | 32. Curcio, Charles |

930 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

- | | |
|--------------------------|---------------------------|
| 33. Denticio, Joseph | 92. Monica, Michael |
| 34. D'Ercole, Joseph | 93. Montana, John |
| 35. Di Carlo, Joseph | 94. Nicoline, Michael |
| 36. Di Palermo, Charles | 95. Nobile, George |
| 37. Di Palermo, Joseph | 96. Orlando, Ignazio |
| 38. Di Pasqua, Anthony | 97. Orlando, Lorenzo |
| 39. Di Pietro, Carlo | 98. Ormento, John |
| 40. Embarrato, Alfred | 99. Orsini, Joseph |
| 41. Eppolito, Alfred | 100. Pacella, Louis |
| 42. Erra, Pasquale | 101. Pacelli, Vincent |
| 43. Evola, Natale | 102. Pagano, Joseph |
| 44. Falcone, Joseph | 103. Pagano, Pasquale |
| 45. Felice, Alfredo | 104. Panatera, Frank |
| 46. Gagliano, Giuseppe | 105. Papalardo, Sam |
| 47. Galante, Carmine | 106. Papalardo, Sylvester |
| 48. Gallo, Joseph | 107. Pasqua, Frank |
| 49. Gallo, Lawrence | 108. Pellegrino, Rocco |
| 50. Gambino, Carlo | 109. Petrone, John |
| 51. Gambino, Paolo | 110. Piccolo, Frank |
| 52. Gelb, Usche | 111. Pieri, Salvatore |
| 53. Genese, Pasquale | 112. Pisciotta, Anthony |
| 54. Genovese, Vito | 113. Poliafico, Salvatore |
| 55. Gernie, Joseph | 114. Polizzano, Ralph |
| 56. Gigante, Vincent | 115. Polizzi, Alfred |
| 57. Giglio, Salvatore | 116. Priziola, John |
| 58. Granza, Anthony | 117. Profaci, Joseph |
| 59. Guippone, Robert | 118. Puco, Stephen |
| 60. Ignaro, Lucien | 119. Quasarano, Rattaele |
| 61. Indiviglio, Benjamin | 120. Ragone, Joseph |
| 62. Isabella, Florio | 121. Reina, Giacomo |
| 63. Leo, Arthur | 122. Ricardulli, John J. |
| 64. Lessa, Daniel | 123. Riccobene, Harry |
| 65. Licchi, Benjamin | 124. Rizzo, Jack |
| 66. Licchi, Joseph | 125. Rizzo, Salvatore |
| 67. Livorsi, Frank | 126. Sancinella, Rocco |
| 68. LoCascio, Carmine | 127. Sansone, Carmelo |
| 69. LoCascio, Peter | 128. Santagata, Aniello |
| 70. Lombardo, Philip | 129. Santoro, Salvatore |
| 71. LoPiccolo, Joseph | 130. Scarpulla, Michele |
| 72. LoProto, Salvatore | 131. Schiffman, Charles |
| 73. Lucania, Salvatore | 132. Schillaci, John |
| 74. Lucchese, Gaetano | 133. Sedotto, Michael |
| 75. Magaddino, Stefano | 134. Smith, David |
| 76. Magliocco, Giuseppe | 135. Squillante, Vincent |
| 77. Mancino, Frank | 136. Stopelli, Innocenzio |
| 78. Maneri, Salvatore | 137. Strollo, Anthony |
| 79. Maresca, Raymond | 138. Stromberg, Harry |
| 80. Mari, Frank | 139. Tantillo, Enrico |
| 81. Marinello, Peter | 140. Teramine, Anthony |
| 82. Marone, Joseph | 141. Todaro, Vincent |
| 83. Marsalisi, Mariano | 142. Tolentino, Nicholas |
| 84. Martello, Nicholas | 143. Tramaglino, Eugene |
| 85. Massi, James | 144. Tuminaro, Angelo |
| 86. Mauro, Vincenzo | 145. Valachi, Joseph |
| 87. Mазzie, Rocco | 146. Vellucci, Anthony |
| 88. Miranda, Michele | 147. Vento, Joseph |
| 89. Mirra, Anthony | 148. Vitale, Vito |
| 90. Moccio, Pasquale | 149. Zingale, Joseph |
| 91. Mogavero, Rosario | |

(Complete background sheets on above named individuals may be found in appendix on p. 1012.)

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 931

Mr. ADLERMAN. Your area covers as far west as New Orleans?

Mr. WARD. No. I am strictly along the east coast. I believe Mr. Belk will cover New Orleans.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is there anything in particular that you feel you ought to add in addition to the backup material and the other maps that have been placed into the record?

Mr. WARD. No, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I will proceed with Mr. Belk now.

Mr. Belk, you are presently Director in the New York Office?

Mr. BELK. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And formerly you were Director of the Chicago Office?

Mr. BELK. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You are familiar with the Middle West traffic in narcotics?

Mr. BELK. I am.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What area did you cover in the Middle West?

Mr. BELK. The Chicago Office actually covers the States of Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What cities did you cover in what States?

Mr. BELK. In those three States?

Mr. ADLERMAN. I mean what can you testify to?

Mr. BELK. I can cover west to Omaha and southwest—

Mr. ADLERMAN. Well, what is the source of supply of the narcotics coming into the Chicago area?

Mr. BELK. Primarily New York City.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It doesn't come down from Canada ordinarily even though it is adjacent to Canada, but the flow is from New York, from there and then flows westward?

Mr. BELK. Traditionally this seems to be the flow of the traffic.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And you have prepared some backup material on this area?

Mr. BELK. Yes; I have.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would like to offer that in evidence also.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be received and printed in the record as exhibit 4.

(Document referred to marked "Exhibit No. 4. History of Narcotic Traffic" follows. Backup material may be found in the appendix on p. 1063.)

EXHIBIT No. 4

THE ILLICIT INTERSTATE NARCOTIC TRAFFIC FROM CHICAGO THROUGHOUT THE MIDWESTERN AND SOUTHWESTERN UNITED STATES

Chicago, Ill., ranks among the major centers of distribution of the illicit narcotic traffic within the continental United States. It functions as the principal source for narcotics in the midwestern and southwestern sectors of the country. It is supplied primarily by New York City and, in turn, distributes to midwestern cities of secondary importance within the network of the narcotic traffic. Cities such as Omaha, Tulsa, Kansas City, Dallas, Houston, and St. Louis, are dependent on Chicago for the illicit narcotic drugs which are consumed locally and which are also distributed to neighboring areas. Chicago has occupied this position since the early 1930's.

Available data indicates that the flow of narcotics into and from Chicago is controlled by various criminal elements. There are Italian organizations, with sources of supply in New York, which distribute heroin to Italian violators of lesser importance and to major Negro violators. There are also independent

932 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Negro organizations which have Italian sources in New York and which transport heroin to Chicago for sale within their organizations. In addition, a Puerto Rican, Spanish-speaking element functions independently obtaining heroin, cocaine, and marihuana from Mexico for distribution to Spanish-speaking and Negro violators in Chicago and throughout the midwestern area.

The interstate and regional aspects of Chicago's position can well be illustrated by citing the activities of a combine comprised of Jack Roy Clayton, Samuel Carrola, Anthony Dichiarante, and Arthur Gasparro. In the early 1950's Clayton, a resident of Kansas City, Mo., was utilizing his private airplane to transport stolen merchandise from Chicago to Kansas City. He lived on a farm and a portion of his land had been converted into a landing strip. Clayton entered into an association with Samuel Carrola, of Kansas City, who was engaged in the narcotic traffic. They collaborated in the distribution of heroin in and from Kansas City. Clayton began to fly to Chicago, in Carrola's behalf, to obtain heroin in kilogram quantities from one Joseph Iacullo.

Joseph Iacullo, a trafficker of significance who was associated with the criminal element throughout the United States, was securing heroin from Anthony Castaldi (NL No. 62) and Anthony Tacoma (Ill.-337, deceased), both from New York City. He was of sufficient caliber to supply Carrola with approximately a kilogram of heroin on a monthly basis. He was arrested in 1954 for violation of the Federal narcotic laws (Ill. 7117) and was sentenced to 5 years imprisonment. Prior to beginning his sentence, he referred Clayton to Anthony Dichiarante as a source for heroine. Dichiarante and his associate, Arthur Gasparro, continued to supply Clayton and Carrola with narcotics.

Jack Clayton was later recruited by Dichiarante to fly to New York, and using this means of transportation, Dichiarante was securing 5 kilograms of heroin per trip from his New York source of supply (not identified). Some half a dozen such trips per year were made by Clayton with Dichiarante and/or Gasparro.

The heroin which originated from New York and which Samuel Carrola obtained via Dichiarante in Chicago was furnished by him to Ralph Goldstein, Dominick DiMaggio, Patsy Ventola, Anthony Marcella and Robert Cox, all of Kansas City, Mo. Marcella also had dealings directly with Dichiarante. He was arrested in California in 1959 for violation of the Federal narcotic laws and was sentenced to imprisonment for 40 years. Robert Cox allegedly made trips to Chicago by automobile to obtain heroin for Carrola. Harold "Fats" Wright, of Tulsa, Okla., and Frank J. Ellsworth, of Omaha, Nebr., were out-of-town customers of Carrola. On occasion, Clayton assisted Carrola in distributing ounce lots of heroin from Kansas City to Anthony Biase at Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Clayton, in addition to his activities with Carrola, had several customers of his own, in Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee, and Florida, whom he supplied with heroin. He was arrested in 1958 and charged with the sale of heroin to an undercover agent of the Bureau of Narcotics at Gurdon, Ark., for $2,000. He entered a guilty plea and was sentenced to imprisonment for a total of 20 years. Clayton is currently incarcerated at the U.S. Medical Center, Springfield, Mo.

In case Ill.-7863, reported in Chicago on March 1960, Anthony Dichiarante, Spartico Mastro, and Salvatore Pisano (deceased) were charged, as codefendants, with the sale of approximately 9 ounces of heroin to an undercover agent. Information available to the Bureau of Narcotics indicates that Dichiarante obtained this heroin from his New York source, John Doe or "Joe." This case is currently pending in Federal court.

The case of Clayton, et al. is but one of many examples which, though varying in detail, personalities, and locale, demonstrate the flow of narcotics in the Midwest as it has been outlined in preceding paragraphs. Additional and equally applicable cases will be incorporated below to show the various facets of the traffic under the scope of this report.

Joseph Bruno (NL No. 43) was considered the principal source for heroin in the Chicago area and the major distributor of narcotics in the Midwest prior to his arrest and conviction in 1958 for violating the Federal narcotic laws (Ill. 7495, Ill. 7510). Files of the Chicago office of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics mention Bruno as the supplier for many known traffickers since the early 1950's. He had dealings, in this capacity, with Rupert Kelly (NL No. 208), Archie Robinson (Ill. 7994), Charles Venton, Marvin Moses (Ill. 7994), Auckland Holmes, Dorothy Johnson, Moses Hightower, Harry Schennault (NL No. 335), Joseph Doyle, Ernest Brakens, Edgar Runell, Lucille Riles, Joseph C. Saddler, Melvin Harris, and Thomas Matas.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 933

Among Bruno's associates were Charles LaPaglia, Mike Condie, Frank Panatera (NL No. 307), John Tanno, Carlo Urbinati (NL No. 406), Joseph Bartuchi, Anthony Dichiarante, Anthony Marcella (NL No. 278), Carl Campise, Frank Coduto, and Armando Piemonte, all of whom are participants in the Chicago and midwestern traffic.

Bruno, throughout the years, had several New York sources for heroin. In the early 1950's he allegedly purchased heroin from Eddio Coco. In 1955, Frank Carbo and the Anglet brothers of New York are mentioned as his sources. In 1957, the Altimari brothers, John Ormento (NL No. 295) and Ronald Romano, all New Yorkers, are listed as suppliers.

On June 28, 1957, through two associates, Bruno sold 12 ounces of pure heroin to undercover agents of the Bureau of Narcotics. This led to his arrest and an 8-year prison term which he is currently serving at the Leavenworth Penitentiary.

John Paul Dispensa, an important figure in the interstate traffic of heroin between New York and Chicago, was considered one of the major wholesale suppliers of heroin in the Chicago area. In November 1958 and subsequent to months of surveillance and several purchases by undercover agents, Dispensa was arrested with fellow Chicagoans, Morris Rosengard and Phillip Vittoria (Ill. 7655). Also arrested were New York associates, Nicholas Esposito, Dominick Gentile, and Saverio Schifano. The latter were supplying Dispensa and others with what is estimated as 300 ounces of pure heroin per year. This significant quantity was destined for distribution throughout the Chicago and midwestern area.

On October 25, 1963, Nolan Mack was shot to death by a Federal narcotic agent whom he had engaged in a gun battle while attempting to resist arrest. Nolan Mack (FBI No. 2595072), murder suspect and a vicious criminal with a record dating back to 1939, was one of the most important Negro sources of supply in the Chicago area. A major distributor of heroin in Chicago's South Side, he was closely associated with major Italian suspects and violators. Prior to his death, he was free on bond after having been indicted for conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws (Ill. 8144, Ill. 8195). Mack's shooting and death occurred when agents attempted to arrest him after they had observed him receiving a delivery of heroin from an Italian violator currently under investigation (Ill. 8273).

Files of the Bureau of Narcotics, District No. 9, show Mack as the source of supply, in the mid-1950's, for Jack B. Madden (Ill. 7239 and Mo. 8450), Francis Baskerville (Ill. 7352), and Jesse Harris (Ill. 7396). In 1957, he was convicted for violation of the narcotic laws and was sentenced to prison for a term of 5 years (Ill. 7211). His codefendant (not convicted) was his wife, Helen Mack (NL No. 274), also an important violator. Mack's suppliers in this case were Medio Mancione and Joseph Iacullo.

Mack was also reported as the source of supply for James Goodar (Ill. 7459), Clifford Benton (Ill. 7463), Arthur Morse (who was supplying Ollie Brantley, of Detroit, Mich.), Robert Jordan, of Dayton, Ohio, Robert Cain, of St. Louis, Mo. (Mo. 8576), and Joseph Wilson and Finnell Lee, of Milwaukee, Wis. (Wis. 38-M).

William Wright, a significant violator in New York and a known supplier of large quantities of heroin to dealers in Chicago, was arrested upon his arrival in Chicago in October 1958. He had in his possession 9 ounces of pure heroin and an ounce of cocaine. Wright admitted that he was delivering the heroin to Nolan Mack. He was convicted in the Chicago municipal court for possession but the Illinois Supreme Court subsequently reversed the conviction.

After Nolan Mack's incarceration in May 1957, his wife, Helen (nee Kountis, white, female of Greek descent), assumed control of his business activities and soon became one of Chicago's important heroin dealers. She was reported in July 1957 as the source for Edward Williams of Indiana (Ind. 1011). In case No. Ill. 7506 (1957), Helen Mack, assisted by codefendants Samuel Morse, Robert Jordan, and Johnnie B. Cooper, sold 14 ounces of heroin to an undercover agent. After the agent placed an order with her for a quarter of a kilogram of heroin and paid her $2,500, in advance, for same, Helen Mack boarded a plane and met with William Wright in New York. She returned to Chicago and delivered the heroin to the purchasing agent. Two days later, agents in New York arrested William Wright and $2,095 of the money given by the agent to Helen Mack was recovered from Wright. Wright, though not successfully prosecuted in this instance, was later arrested and convicted in case No. Ill. 7924 as the New York source for Michael Carioscia.

934 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Helen Mack unwittingly introduced an undercover agent to her Chicago source, Armando Piemonte. Two purchases were made from Piemonte and he was later convicted in case No. Ill. 7565. It is believed that Arnold Romano of New York was Piemonte's source of supply.

Helen Mack was arrested as a defendant in cases Nos. Ill. 7521 and Ill. 7565. She was convicted and sentenced to 10 years imprisonment. She is currently in prison.

In October 1959, Carmine Desalvo of New York, defendant in NY: S. 10323, told an undercover agent that he had been the source of supply for William Wright and Helen Mack.

In recent months, case No. Ill. 8084 was developed and concluded in Chicago with the indictment of 41 defendants for conspiring to violate the Federal narcotic laws. This case, in which Michael DeMarco and Americo DiPietto are principal defendants, was developed from several significant cases reported in Chicago since 1960. DeMarco, and others were obtaining kilogram quantities of heroin from sources of supply in New York and were transporting it to Chicago where they sold it to prime distributors in one-eighth- and one-fourth-kilogram lots. These distributors, including Nolan Mack, Pat Cole (Ill. 8059), and Johnny Green (Ill. 8030), in turn, sold the heroin to local and out-of-town customers. George Farraco, a convicted narcotic violator with sources in Montreal, Canada, and associated with Roger Coudert, a French international trafficker, was one of DeMarco's New York sources of supply. He is missing and presumed dead—a victim of gangland violence.

William Wright, of New York, convicted in Ill. No. 7924 as the source of supply for Michael Carioscia, entered into association with DeMarco and participated, prior to beginning his sentence which had been deferred by appeals, in this traffic between New York and Chicago. One of the principal cases which led to the development of this conspiracy case was Ill. No. 8273. In Ill. No. 8273, Frank Carioscia, brother of Michael, was arrested following sales to an undercover agent of the Bureau of Narcotics. Related surveillance disclosed a definite connection between Carioscia and Michael DeMarco.

Violators in St. Louis, Mo., have been regularly supplied with heroin by sources in Chicago, Ill. In recent years and after passage of the Narcotic Control Act of 1956, the proportion of the traffic between Chicago, St. Louis, and Kansas City, Mo., has been considerably reduced. During the year 1960, Nathaniel Spurlack organization at Chicago was active in the traffic between Chicago and St. Louis. This Spurlark group supplied local dealers Earl Williams, Sam Mays, Waddell Buchanan, T. J. Ruffin, Willie F. Foster, Ollie Jackson, James Mitchell, and Barbara Brinkley. (Nathaniel Spurlark, possibly the most important Negro narcotic trafficker in Chicago, was prominent in the interstate commerce in narcotics and had New York sources of supply. In 1959, he was indicted in Chicago for conspiring to violate the Federal narcotic laws and was subsequently convicted and sentenced to 10 years imprisonment. He is currently free on bond pending appeal.)

Files of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics reflect that Marvin Moses, Willie Horn, Aukland Holmes, Wilburn Holmes, and Willie Bowen of Chicago were considered important suppliers of heroin to St. Louis in 1961. Through 1962 and part of 1963, prior to his arrest and conviction in Federal court, Marvin Moses continued as a chief source of supply. The late Nolan Mack was also reported to have been supplying dealers in St. Louis with ounce quantities prior to his death in October 1963.

In 1956 in Houston, Tex., case No. Tex-11965 was developed and concluded with the conspiracy indictment of 10 defendants. The case involved the trafficking of heroin and marihuana between New York City, Chicago, and Texas. The principal defendants were Vito Giordenello, his wife, Ardelle Giordenello, both of Houston, Tex., and Benny Indiviglio of New York. All defendants were convicted in the U.S. district court, Houston. The conviction was subsequently reversed by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Giordenello's were principal distributors of heroin in the Houston area. They secured heroin from dealers in Chicago and from Indiviglio in New York City. Giordenello was arrested following two purchases of heroin by an undercover police officer (Tex-11964). When arrested he had 5 ounces of heroin in his possession. Ardelle Giordenello was arrested in Dallas, Tex., following the sale of 6 ounces of heroin, which she had transported from Chicago by airplane, to an undercover agent. Benny Indiviglio, through the years, has been a persistent trafficker in local (New York) and interstate narcotic commerce.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 935

In Dallas, Tex., Aubrey Aeby (NL No. 2A) was a wholesale dealer in heroin, obtained in kilogram quantities from Chicago and New York, until the time of his conviction in 1952. He supplied John E. Miller, Olen Ray Tyler, John Willard Thompson (Tex-11689) and Nick Casio, all important traffickers in the Dallas area. After Aeby's imprisonment, Miller began to receive wholesale quantities from Aeby's sources and to distribute them within the Dallas-Fort Worth area. Miller died in June of 1963. Although investigation failed to prove the source for Aeby, reliable information indicates that Aeby purchased heroin from Charles Schiffman and Morris Taubman, both of New York. This heroin was reportedly delivered to Aeby by John Eder from Chicago.

In 1961 a conspiracy case was developed in Fort Worth, Tex. (Tex-12236) involving the transportation of heroin from Denver, Colo., to Fort Worth by James Glover, Jr., of Denver. Investigation disclosed that the heroin which was being sold by Glover had been obtained by him from sources in Chicago.

The Biase brothers, Anthony, Bernard, Louis, and Samuel, have long participated in the illicit narcotic traffic in Omaha, Nebr., and its environs. They have been closely associated with leading midwestern racketeers and have been steadily engaged in the large-scale distribution of narcotics to dealers in that area. They are known to have had heroin sources in New York, Chicago, and Kansas City.

In 1960 at Omaha, Anthony J. Biase sold a large quantity of narcotics to an undercover agent of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics. The narcotics in question had been burglarized from a drug manufacturer in Iowa. Biase was convicted and sentenced to 15 years imprisonment.

The Biase brothers are known associates of Samuel Carrola, Anthony Marcella, and Frank Ellsworth, all known narcotic violators. Anthony Biase had dealings with Jack Roy Clayton and was known to supply Harold Wright of Tulsa, Okla. Harold "Fats" Wright, a principal distributor in Oklahoma had also been receiving heroin from the Clayton-Carrola-Dichiarente organization of Kansas City, Mo., and Chicago, Ill.

The position of Detroit, Mich., and Cleveland, Ohio, in the interstate traffic will be discussed in the report regarding New York and the eastern seaboard States. Mention of these cities, however, is pertinent to this report since resident violators have been consistently securing heroin, in varying degrees, from sources in Chicago as well as New York. In recent years, the traffic of narcotics in Michigan and Ohio has been substantially diminished due to the passage of State laws stipulating severe mandatory sentences for violators. This is responsible for the dramatic change in the traffic as compared to the early 1950's when Italian dominated syndicates were importing and distributing large wholesale quantities of heroin.

Files of the Bureau of Narcotics reflect that Detroit peddlers Stanley Wood, Victoria Basemore, Lonnie Stigall, Frank Susser, and Cleveland dealers Paul Jerrells and Herbert Foreman were supplied with heroin by Jeremiah Pullings and associates. Pullings, one of Chicago's heroin sources of major significance and an important interstate trafficker, was indicted in Chicago in 1959, together with 20 other defendants, for conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws. These conspirators, including Nathaniel Spurlark and Armando Piemonte, were responsible for a large percentage of the heroin traffic in Chicago and were considered suppliers for major cities throughout the Midwest. Pullings was sentenced to 12 years in prison following conviction (Ill-7885).

Further, Nathaniel Spurlark associates William Rouzer, Gladys Davis, Woodrow Wilson, and Elaine Wilson are reported to have intermittently delivered illicit narcotic drugs to violators in the Detroit, Mich., area for the period from 1952 through 1959. Spurlark, mentioned above as a source for St. Louis, was also distributing to peddlers in Los Angeles, Calif., cities in Iowa, Milwaukee, Wis., and Indianapolis, Ind.

Miami, Fla., and Denver, Colo., are also related to Chicago in the flow of the interstate traffic. They are not, however, exclusively or principally dependent on Chicago as a source for illicit drugs. Miami shares a much closer association with New York, and Denver with Los Angeles, Calif. Accordingly, reports being submitted regarding the interstate traffic within the Eastern and Western sectors of the United States will deal, respectively, with Miami and Denver.

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

936 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

ADDENDUM

This addendum contains résumés or profiles of individuals whose names appear in the report or who are listed on the chart (Midwestern sector) which has been prepared to demonstrate the interstate flow of the illicit narcotic traffic.

PART I. NAMES MENTIONED IN REPORT AND/OR LISTED ON CHART

Chicago

1. Jesse Alexander
2. Joseph Bruno
3. Leonard Calamia
4. Jack Clayton
5. Rocco DeGrazia
6. Theodore DeRose
7. Anthony Dichiarante
8. Carlo Fiorito
9. Arthur Gasparro
10. George Ginnone
11. Dennis Green
12. Isaac Hill
13. Joseph Iacullo
14. John Iorio
15. Jacob Klein
16. Wesley Lewis
17. Orville Locke
18. Jake Marbray
19. Helen Mack
20. Nolan Mack
21. Frank Panatera
22. Salvatore Pisano
23. Jeremiah Pullings
24. Jack Rizzo
25. Junius A. Robinson
26. James Russo
27. Patrick Russo
28. Frank Santore
29. Harry Schennault
30. Otis Sears
31. Sam Serritella
32. Nathaniel Spurlark
33. Carlo Urbinati
34. Victor Zingarelli

Kansas City

35. Leonard Affronti
36. Sam Carrolla
37. Robert Cox
38. Dominick DiMaggio

Kansas City—Continued

39. Ralph Goldstein
40. Joseph Lascoula
41. Michael Lascoula
42. Anthony Marcella
43. Joseph Olivo
44. Kenneth Sheetz
45. Patsy Ventola

Houston

46. Biagio Angelica
47. Lonnie Bryant
48. Travis Burks
49. Vito Giordenello
50. Judson Henderson
51. Quincy Kennedy
52. Archie Sample
53. Clyde Tillman

Dallas

54. Nick Cascio
55. Angelo Casten
56. Frank Celli
57. Joseph Civello
58. John Thompson

St. Louis

59. Anthony Giardano
60. Anthony Lopiparo
61. John Vitale

Omaha

62. Anthony Biase
63. Louis Biase
64. Sam Biase

Tulsa

65. Harold Wright

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 937

PART II NAMES MENTIONED IN REPORT AND NOT LISTED ON CHART

66. Aubrey Aeby	84. Paul Jerrels
67. Michael Altimari	85. Rupert Kelly
68. Frank Carioscia	86. Spartico Mastro
69. Michael Carioscia	87. Marvin Moses
70. Anthony Castaldi	88. John Ormento
71. Frank Coduto	89. Armando Piemonte
72. Pat Cole	90. Arnold Romano
73. Gladys Davis	91. Morris Rosengard
74. Michael DeMaro	92. William Rouzer
75. Americo DePietto	93. Joseph C. Saddler
76. John P. Dispensa	94. Frank Sasser
77. Nicholas Esposito	95. Saverio Schifano
78. George Faracco	96. Charles Schiffman
79. Herbert Foreman	97. Morris Taubman
80. Dominick Gentile	98. Phillip Vittoria
81. Auckland Holmes	99. Elaine Wilson
82. Wilbert Holmes	100. Woodrow Wilson
83. Benny Indiviglio	101. William Wright

(Complete background sheets on above named individuals may be found in appendix on p. 1063.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. From Chicago, does the supply of narcotics flow out to other areas like Dallas, Houston, and Omaha?

Mr. BELK. Chicago is the secondary distribution point for heroin that is received from New York City, and it is a city, of course, where a large amount of heroin is consumed, in the Chicago area primarily, with traffickers operating out of Chicago furnishing midwestern cities such as Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis, Kansas City, Dallas, Houston, New Orleans.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And this map shows the names of the various parties?

Mr. BELK. Yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And you have backup material on the area?

Mr. BELK. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. One of the areas, I notice, is Omaha. I believe Mr. Curtis had some questions.

Senator CURTIS. I just wanted to develop that a little bit. This map shows Omaha with three names, the Biase family, Sam, Louis, and Anthony. Are you familiar with that case?

Mr. BELK. Yes, sir; I am.

Senator CURTIS. We had testimony earlier that in the State of Nebraska there were less than 100 addicts. What sort of an operation was this in Omaha?

Mr. BELK. It started out initially, but if the operation had continued to go it would have become quite an operation, but I think it was nipped at a time before it became a serious problem.

Senator CURTIS. It has been put out of business at the present time?

Mr. BELK. Completely.

Senator CURTIS. How long ago?

Mr. BELK. This case was concluded in March 1960.

Senator CURTIS. Was Omaha a central point or was it part of a Kansas City operation, insofar as narcotics were concerned?

Mr. BELK. In this particular case, Senator, it was rather a triangle. The sources of supply originated in Chicago, a trafficker there by the name of Anthony Dichiarante. He was the source of supply for a group operating in Kansas City, principally one Sam Carrola. Carrola had a working relationship with Anthony Biase in Omaha.

938 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Senator CURTIS. Sam Carrola is Kansas City?

Mr. BELK. A Kansas City character, yes. About 1952, 1953, and 1954, along in that area, the Kansas City group headed by Carrola was purchasing drugs in Chicago from one Iacullo. This individual was subsequently sent to the penitentiary for narcotics trafficking and Dichiarante took over the business.

Senator CURTIS. Is he on this map?

Mr. BELK. Yes, he is on the map, sir. Carrola had an associate of his, one Jack Clayton, also of Kansas City, who was a pilot, who owned a plane, and he would fly up to Chicago with Carrola and buy drugs. He would distribute these drugs to some of his own customers in various States, one of whom was Biase in Omaha. He would fly heroin to him.

Senator CURTIS. Which Biase?

Mr. BELK. Angelo.

Senator CURTIS. Were the other two connected with it?

Mr. BELK. We never were able to definitely state that they were involved with Biase in the active trafficking of drugs. We suspected that they were associated.

Senator CURTIS. Were they brothers?

Mr. BELK. Yes.

Senator CURTIS. And they had had some arrests for gambling and other offenses?

Mr. BELK. That is right. After Jack Clayton was arrested in Arkansas for the possession of 5 ounces of heroin, at Hope, Ark.—

The CHAIRMAN. What was he doing down there in that watermelon country? Very well.

Mr. BELK. Following Clayton's arrest, about simultaneous with that, the Chicago office effected the arrest of Dichiarante and his group following the sale of a quarter kilo of heroin. This cut off the heroin supply to Kansas City from this group and, thus, to Omaha. Biase being an enterprising fellow associated with some pretty good burglars that were burglarizing drug stores and wholesale houses and obtaining legitimate drugs by burglaries, and Biase was then selling this in 1958 and 1959.

Senator CURTIS. One of those principal drugs was the Morphy Drug Store at Council Bluffs.

Mr. BELK. Yes. And when he started selling diverted drugs we were able, with the cooperation of Kenneth B. Sheetz, a Kansas City character, to get an introduction to Biase in Omaha, and did make purchases of diverted drugs from him.

Senator CURTIS. Biase was supplying Sheetz?

Mr. BELK. That is right.

Senator CURTIS. Was Sheetz subsequently arrested? Did he sell to an agent or something of that sort?

Mr. BELK. Sheetz was arrested following sale to an agent in Kansas City. He furnished information to the Kansas City office concerning the operation of Biase. He did agree to introduce an agent to Biase and did, which subsequently resulted in making sales to the agent and he was later convicted.

Senator CURTIS. Biase made sales to the agent?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 939

Mr. BELK. Yes.

Senator CURTIS. Do you know how many times?

Mr. BELK. I believe he made four sales, Senator. In September 1959, he sold 163 tablets of morphine and 233 tablets of dilaudid to an undercover agent for $700.

Senator CURTIS. What is dilaudid?

Mr. BELK. A derivative of opium. On the same date, at 10 o'clock that night—the first sale was at 8 o'clock—he sold 196 tables of dilau-did to the same agent. On October 7, 1959, he sold the same agent 465 morphine tablets and 136 dilaudid tablets.

On December 3, 1959, he sold five 1-ounce bottles of codeine hydro-chloride to the same undercover agent.

Senator CURTIS. Were they stolen drugs?

Mr. BELK. Yes, sir.

Senator CURTIS. In all four instances?

Mr. BELK. In all four instances. We had all reason to believe at the time that these were drugs stolen from the Morphy Drug Co. However, they had stricken the control numbers off the drugs.

Senator CURTIS. And you got your lead on Anthony Biase from Kenneth Sheetz, of Kansas City?

Mr. BELK. That is correct.

Senator CURTIS. What happened to Sheetz?

Mr. BELK. Shortly after Biase's arrest in relation to these sales, Sheetz was attacked in Kansas City and he was shot and seriously wounded there by one Felix Barina and Anthony Cardarella. They were charged subsequently in State court for attempted murder. Sheetz didn't die, although he lost the sight of one eye, his gall bladder and kidney. He did identify his assailants. It was a mistrial the first time and the second time they went to trial they were acquitted.

Senator CURTIS. This was a State court?

Mr. BELK. Yes. And subsequently, however, both were indicted along with Biase for obstruction of justice in a Federal court. We were only able to do this, however, because Sheetz was under Federal subpena at the time. Had he not been, this case would have died at that time.

I think this graphically illustrates the Commissioner's testimony and need for legislation that would protect the witnesses from intimidation. I might add that following their conviction they were sentenced, I believe, to 10 years of imprisonment for obstruction of justice.

Biase was sentenced to 5 years to run consecutively with his 15-year sentence in the narcotics case. However, later the eighth circuit did reverse on Biase.

Senator CURTIS. His 15-year sentence was for selling narcotics?

Mr. BELK. Yes, sir.

Senator CURTIS. Was that a Federal case or a State case?

Mr. BELK. A Federal case.

Senator CURTIS. And that became final without an appeal?

Mr. BELK. It was appealed, but the appellate courts upheld.

Senator CURTIS. So he was convicted on December 12, 1960, and got 15 years?

Mr. BELK. He is still there.

Senator CURTIS. No attempt has been made to parole him.

940 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. BELK. Well, of course, under the control act, he assumes he is not eligible for parole under the law.

Senator CURTIS. Did you ever have any direct evidence or any evidence that the other two, Sam and Louis, were engaged in the narcotic business?

Mr. BELK. No, sir.

Senator CURTIS. Do you know their whereabouts now?

Mr. BELK. The last I heard of them they were still around Omaha.

Senator CURTIS. To the best of your knowledge and to the best information available to the narcotics agents, is there any narcotic operation at Omaha or anywhere in Nebraska now?

Mr. BELK. No, sir. I checked on that the other day. The last heroin case reported in Nebraska was 1961. It involved a very small amount. There is absolutely nothing out there now.

Senator CURTIS. And this apprehension, you feel, really put a stop to what could have become a sizable operation.

Mr. BELK. I am confident if we hadn't moved in at the time it would have gotten bigger.

Senator CURTIS. So the current situation with respect to heroin, morphine, and that sort of thing, there is no operation of any consequence that you know about?

Mr. BELK. Not at all, sir.

Senator CURTIS. How about marihuana?

Mr. BELK. There have been three marihuana cases reported in Nebraska during the past 18 months, I believe. The largest of these was about 6 grains, and this happened to be an itinerant musician from New York City who was playing an engagement in Lincoln.

(At this point Senator Mundt departed from the hearing room.)

Senator CURTIS. That involved a resident of New York?

Mr. BELK. Yes, that is correct.

Senator CURTIS. The other two, were they lesser cases?

Mr. BELK. Lesser, even lesser amounts.

Senator CURTIS. Do you recall whether they involved individuals from out of State?

Mr. BELK. I believe the latter two were Nebraskans.

Senator CURTIS. They may have been Mexicans? I don't mean to infer anything about them, but we do have a migration up there for the harvest and so forth, from Mexico.

Mr. BELK. That is right. I know I actually spent a year out there, and that was my district at one time. I covered Nebraska as well as North and South Dakota. But the itinerant Mexican farmworkers that came up there never constituted a problem.

Senator CURTIS. They are very high type people. They come to my hometown and their children attend schools there. They are very fine citizens. But because of the movements, I wondered if some might have slipped in to take advantage of the transportation. But that is not a problem.

Mr. BELK. No, sir; it isn't.

Senator CURTIS. In other words, there is no pattern of connection between Mexican migrant farm labor and the Mexican dope problem? There is no connection at all, is that right?

Mr. BELK. Not in that particular area, no, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 941

Mr. ADLERMAN. Mr. Casey, you have prepared some backup material, have you?

Mr. CASEY. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And you cover the west coast area?

Mr. CASEY. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Comprising California, Washington, Oregon, Arizona, Colorado, and New Mexico?

Mr. CASEY. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would like to offer this.

The CHAIRMAN. It may be received as exhibit 5 and printed in the record.

(Document referred to marked "Exhibit No. 5" and will be found in the appendix on p. 1116.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you tell me the extent of the addiction in the west coast area?

Mr. CASEY. In the Western United States, the problem of addiction is primarily centered in California, and in California two-thirds of that problem is in the Los Angeles area, as was testified earlier today. As far as the pattern of the traffic in the Western United States, since 1950 there has been a dramatic change in the pattern.

From approximately 1950 to 1958 the primary source of supply for the Western United States was the Far East, with Communist China being the principal violator, or the eastern crime syndicates.

Commencing in 1958, the emergence of Mexico as a source of supply became important. I don't mean to imply that Mexico was necessarily the producing agent in this instance because quite a bit of heroin of Middle Eastern origin has come in through there.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, there may be some of the French heroin, that is, coming from Turkey by way of Syria, and so on.

Mr. CASEY. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Eighty percent, I think, sent in from Mexico to the United States is of that origin and only 20 percent is grown in Mexico.

Mr. CASEY. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think it was testified earlier today that to a large extent the traffic in heroin in California and the Los Angeles area is not in the hands of organized crime, such as the Mafia in New York.

Mr. CASEY. That is correct. There are loose-knit groups but there is no organization.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That does not mean it is not in the hands of criminals, but it is not in the hands of large organized groups.

Mr. CASEY. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The source of supply is usually over the border in Mexico where the purchases are made and brought into the United States?

Mr. CASEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is there also a pattern of addicts getting together and chipping in whatever funds they may have and selecting one in the group to go down and make the purchase and come back and distribute it amongst themselves?

Mr. CASEY. Yes, sir; that is very commonplace.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That makes it doubly difficult to detect and stop.

Mr. CASEY. That is correct.

942 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. Then there are many that are involved rather than the few main or principal offenders?

Mr. CASEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The flow from Mexico also extends up to Portland, Seattle, and San Francisco?

Mr. CASEY. That is correct. At the present time, Mexico is practically the sole source of supply for Portland, Seattle, San Francisco, and even instances of Vancouver, in British Columbia.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Even though a good part of the flow may go into Montreal and Toronto, it doesn't flow westward.

Mr. CASEY. No, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So the Vancouver area is supplied from Mexico, through the United States on the west coast.

Mr. CASEY. That is right, with some isolated instances of movements from China.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You said prior to 1958 the major source of supply was Communist China.

Mr. CASEY. I would say Communist China and the Eastern United States constituted approximately 80 percent of the problem.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Before 1958, there was an indication in one case that almost a million and a half dollars had been available to Communist China for payment for these drugs.

Mr. CASEY. Yes, sir. That was in the George Poole Conspiracy case.

Mr. ADLERMAN. But this is no longer as big a problem?

Mr. CASEY. That is correct. There have been isolated instances where deliveries have come in from the Orient, usually to one particular customer. But no sustained, organized activity.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would like to ask Mr. Belk one or two questions. Have you recently concluded a study or survey as to the relationship between narcotics addiction and previous criminal records which were not for violations of the narcotics laws?

Mr. BELK. Yes, sir; I did. I did this for New York and the 11 counties that we cover in northern New Jersey.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was this survey put into the record?

Mr. BELK. It can be. The survey was made on 200 defendants that we had arrested in narcotic cases in northern New Jersey over the past 3 or 4 years, and of the 200 defendants that were reported and subsequently convicted we had 77.2 percent of these individuals who had prior criminal records.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, they were criminals before they became addicts?

Mr. BELK. 77.2 percent of them were.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Could you offer that into the evidence? I would like to make that a part of the record.

Mr. BELK. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. It will be printed in the record at this point.

(Document referred to marked exhibit No. 6.)

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 943

The letter follows and the list of names may be found in the files of the subcommittee.

EXHIBIT No. 6

MEMORANDUM

JULY 15, 1964.

To: Mr. Henry L. Giordano, Commissioner of Narcotics.

From: George M. Belk, district supervisor.

Subject: Statistics on last 200 defendants reported in New Jersey cases.

At the time the Narcotic Drug Study Commission of the New Jersey Legislature issued its interim report for 1963, I requested a survey be made of the last 200 defendants involved in New Jersey cases. These 200 defendants were to be broken down into addicts and nonaddicts. A further determination was to be made of the addict defendants to determine if their criminal record predated his addiction.

These statistics were obtained from a diligent search of the files of this office and the files of the Newark and Paterson branch offices. The Newark Police Department narcotic squad files were also reviewed. Of the 200 defendants checked, 158, or 79 percent, were addicts and the 42 remaining defendants were nonaddicts. Of the 158 addicted defendants, we were able to establish the fact 123, or 77 percent, had criminal records prior to addiction.

There were several instances of addiction and criminal records being dated the same year. Under these circumstances it was assumed the criminal record was the result of the addiction. An attempt to obtain juvenile records was frustrated by the courts refusal to give information on these youths. If it had been possible to obtain this information, undoubtedly the number of addicts with prior criminal records would have been larger.

GEORGE M. BELK, District Supervisor.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you have any information on organized traffic in the Newark, N.J., area, which is not in the Mafia or Cosa Nostra operation?

Mr. BELK. The drug addicts in the area purchase drugs in New York City, in amounts of $25 or $50 at a time, and return it to Newark, whether to use it or for resale. There is no organized effort in the Newark area on this level.

However, there are Cosa Nostra individuals that do live in the northern New Jersey area associated with these families. But they are not engaged directly on that level.

Mr. ADLERMAN. But they do deal with the New York area to get their supply, and they distribute it. It is on a different distribution level.

Mr. BELK. It is on the street, yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is the addict distribution level.

Mr. BELK. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I have no further questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Curtis.

Senator CURTIS. I do want to thank these witnesses. They have given us a good picture of the situation with some very valuable information.

The CHAIRMAN. When you get to examine these backup records, you will find that they present a pretty well documented story.

Gentlemen, thank you very much. The committee will stand in recess until 10:30, Tuesday morning.

(Whereupon, at 4:45 p.m., the committee recessed, to reconvene at 10:30 a.m., Tuesday, August 4, 1964.)

(Members present at time of recess: Senators McClellan and Curtis.)

PAGINA BIANCA

APPENDIX

EXHIBIT No. 2

MOUNIR ALAOUIE

Aliases: Mounir Alaouieh, Mounir Allaouie, Mounir Alawyye, Mouner Allouie, Mounir Alawieh, Negib Allaouie.

Description: Born December 21, 1929, Arnoun (Nabatleh), Lebanon; 5 feet 7 inches; 195 pounds; brown hair; ruddy complexion; race, Arab; nationality, Lebanese.

Localities frequented: France, Italy, Germany, Spain, Morocco, Libya, Kit-Kat Nightclub, Beirut; Casino du Liban, Beirut; Cave du Roi, Beirut, Joe's Bar, Beirut; Almuni Club & Sporting Club, Beirut; Cercle de l'Aviation, Paris.

Criminal associates: Samil Khoury, Antoine Araman, Edmond Azizi.

Criminal history: Alaouie was an officer in the Lebanese Sureté. He has been engaged in the international narcotic traffic since 1953; he used his post as an officer in the Sureté to further his own position in the narcotic traffic. Alaouie has traveled extensively through Europe and Africa as a representative of various gangs engaged in the international smuggling of narcotics, tobacco, and arms. ICPO-Interpol feels that he is one of the most active accomplices of the notorious drug trafficker Samil Khoury, and head of the Lebanese section of the latter's gang.

Modus operandi: Alaouie directs his current operations from an office on the Kit-Kat Nightclub. He usually confines his activities to acting as a mediator or negotiator between French and Arab smuggling combines. Alaouie also has current interest in tobacco smuggling and gambling. He is actively interested in Lebanese politics.

Agencies familiar with individual: ICPO-Interpol, French Services de Police Judiciaire, Italian police, Swiss police, Lebanon police, U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

Fingerprint classification: See ICPO-Interpol Circular No. 265/60 A 4425; ICPO 4041.

ANTOINE ARAMAN

Alias: Tony.

Description: Born on August 15, 1920, in Beirut, Lebanon; son of Caesar and of Victoria; 5 feet 8 inches; 165 pounds; black hair; brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Lives in Beirut, Lebanon. Travels to Italy, Switzerland, and other European countries, Near and Middle Eastern countries.

Criminal associates: Samil Khoury, Mounir Alaouie, Basil Trad, Tania Smaha (Cortas), Jean Lorenzi, Joseph Balerni, Arif Khader Saghir, Fayssal Rahmo, Agop Kevorkian, Haj Abou Selim, Fouad Sinno, Ghalb Aboukjaoude, Antoine Harrouk.

Criminal history: Former partner of notorious drug trafficker Samil Khoury and appears to have broken with him to form a gang with Agop Kevorkian and Antoine Harrouk. Is considered to be one of the main drug traffickers operating between the Near East and Europe.

Modus operandi: Araman purchases morphine base from Aleppo, Syria, either alone or in cooperation with other Lebanese gangsters and forwards it to France. The base is allegedly smuggled from Beirut to France by aircraft personally and diplomatic couriers. Araman or his brother, George, go to Europe and collect payment for the narcotics. It is believed that Araman is the biggest single exporter of base from Lebanon to France. In touch with the international drug trafficking world.

Agencies familiar with individual: Lebanese police, ICPO-Interpol, U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

946 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

MUHTAR BERK

Aliases: None.

Description: Born September 3, 1915, at Kilis, Turkey; 5 feet 10 inches; 172 pounds; gray eyes; gray hair.

Localities frequented: Resides Caylak mahallsi hasanbeysok No. 10, Kilis, Turkey; frequents Izmir, Turkey; Usak, Turkey; Kilis, Turkey.

Criminal associates: Suleyman Ersoy.

Facsimile of signature:

Criminal history: Arrested October 1960 by Turkish police and U.S. narcotic agent at Izmir, Turkey, in possession of 5 kilograms, 100 grams morphine base.

Modus operandi: An important morphine base source of supply in Turkey. Capable of selling large quantities of narcotics to foreign customers.

Agencies familiar with individual: Turkish police; U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

Fingerprint classification: 29 W1 20 20 Wo.

ENZO BERTI

Aliases: None.

Description: Born August 7, 1918, Pisa, Italy; 5 feet, 9 inches; 180 pounds; brown hair; brown eyes.

Localities frequented: At present in prison in Switzerland (1960).

Family background: Wife: Maria Giannullo; mother: Bruna Macchia; father: Luigi Enrico.

Criminal associates: Constantino Gamba, Francesco Saverino, Francesco Pirico, Hans Schlegel, Otto Herrmann, Salvatore Caneba, Ugo Caneba, Armando Fiume, Mehmed Hattatoglu.

Criminal history: 1958 convicted of narcotic trafficking in Switzerland.

Business: Merchant, doctors degree in philosophy.

Modus operandi: Together with Constantino Gamba, purchased morphine base from Turkish violators and converted same to heroin. This heroin was sold to Pirico and Saverino who then resold it to traffickers in the United States. Gamba and Berti were two of the largest clandestine laboratory operators in Europe.

ALI BEZAL

Aliases: None.

Description: Born 1923 at Rize, Turkey; white male; 5 feet, 7 inches; 180 pounds; black hair; brown eyes; black mustache.

Localities frequented: Resides Balat Ayan Cad. gergilli Sokak No. 7, Istanbul. Frequents Melek gambling club, Istanbul.

Criminal associates: Sefer Bezal (brother), Mustafa Ozer, Ramiz Zeren, Remzi Aslan, Mehmet Tavucku, Sevet Pazarkoy.

Criminal history: Arrested November 1962 by Istanbul police and U.S. narcotics agent, possession of 40 kilograms of pure morphine base.

Modus operandi: A member of the Ahmet Soysal narcotics smuggling organization operating in Turkey. Capable of converting opium to morphine base and heroin.

Agencies familiar with individual: Turkish police, U.S. Narcotics Bureau, Interpol.

Fingerprint classification: 5 uoo 16 4 W1.

SEFER BEZAL

Alias: Parlak Sefer.

Description: Born 1921 at Rize, Turkey; white; 5 feet, 8 inches; 160 pounds; brown hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Residence at Istanbul Balat Karabaz caddesi Salhane Sokak No. 2/4, Istanbul. Frequents Balat, Florya sections of Istanbul.

Criminal associates: Osman Hoge, Siddik Pamukcu.

Criminal history: Served 10-year sentence, violation of Turkish narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Wholesale dealer of heroin in Turkey.

Agencies familiar with individual: Turkish police.

Fingerprint classification: Turkish police fingerprint No. 96489.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 947

CHARLES BOURBONNAIS

Alias: Robert Norton.

Description: Male, white; born November 7, 1920, in Paris, France; 5 feet 11 inches; 180 pounds; blue eyes; black hair; fair complexion; neat dresser; slightly deformed left arm (unnoticeable). Naturalized American citizen.

Localities frequented: Currently incarcerated at Terminal Island, San Francisco, Calif., French restaurants, New York City; Los Angeles, Calif.; French Riviera, and Paris, France.

Criminal associates: Robert LeCoat, Joseph Sax, Mauricio Rosal, Etienne Tarditi, Nicholas Calamaras, Gilbert Coscia, Jean Ager, Robert Ager, Joseph Cahill, Felix Barnier.

Criminal history: Bourbonnais has no prior criminal record. Sentenced in January 1961 to 9 years imprisonment for his complicity in New York; E 1261 and New York; S 10787 which involved the seizure of over 100 kilograms of pure heroin.

Modus operandi: Subject utilized his position as a TWA airline purser to pass through cursory Customs inspection and smuggle large amounts of narcotics from France into the United States. In the same manner Bourbonnais carried moneys derived from the distribution of drugs back to the French sources of supply.

Agencies familiar with individual: Federal Bureau of Narcotics; New York City Police Department; U.S. Customs Agency Service.

Fingerprint classification: FBI No. 631 453 D; 19 L 30 W I MO; I 16 I OI.

GABRIEL LUCIEN GRAZIANI

Alias: Gaby.

Description: Born July 1, 1922, in Marseilles, France (French-Corsican), 5 feet 5 inches, 145 pounds, medium build, black hair, brown eyes, scar over right temple. I. and N.S. No. V-1832105.

Localities frequented: Resides 2A Rue Navarin, Marseilles, France. In United States resided at 118-09 83d Avenue, Queens, N.Y. Travels frequently between the United States, Canada, South America, and Europe.

Family background: Married to Georgette Marie Felizia; has one daughter; father, Pierre; mother, Assomption Rutali.

Criminal associates: Antranik Paroutian, Dominique Nicoli, Jean-Baptiste Croce, Marie Bernard, Casimir Guerazi, Roger Quendane, Andre Quendane—all of France. Giuseppe Cotroni, Joseph DiPalermo, Carmine Galante.

Criminal history: FBI No. 864135C. No record in United States. In 1958 was arrested in Switzerland while trying to negotiate stolen Canadian securities. He was released when Canada failed to extradite.

Business: Formerly ran the Bar de L'Avenir 13 Boulevard Danielle Casanova, Marseille. Also owned a grocery and a coffee-roasting shop. Coppersmith by trade.

Modus operandi: An international drug trafficker; closely associated with and trusted by top-level members of the Mafia. A courier for the Croce-Nicoli-Paroutian smuggling group. Travels frequently to major cities in the United States, Canada, South and Central America, and Europe making contacts for the organization.

ANTOINE HARROUK

Alias: Antoine Harrouk.

Description: Born in Zahle, Lebanon, in 1923; 190 pounds, 5 feet 11 inches; graying-black hair; brown eyes; Arabian; Lebanese nationality.

Localities frequented: Resides in Beirut, Lebanon; frequented Casino du Liban, Cave du Roi, Joe's Bar, Beirut; Cercle de l'Aviation, Paris, France.

Criminal associates: Samil Khoury, Antoine Araman, Agop Kevorkian, Fouad Sinno.

Criminal history: Harrouk was Samil Khoury's bodyguard until 1957. He joined the Antoine Araman organization in 1958 in a similar capacity. In 1959 at Beirut, Lebanon, was sentenced to 15 days imprisonment and a fine of LL150 plus customs fines of LL9,000 and an additional LL54,000 for trafficking in narcotics.

Modus operandi: Acts as a "strongarm" man. Works with major Lebanese narcotic traffickers. Currently sending small lots of hashish to Egypt.

Agencies familiar with individual: Lebanese police, ICOP-Interpol, French Services de Police Judiciaire, Italian Police, U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

Fingerprint classification: ICPO-Interpol No. 3/57 A.3973.

948 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

HAGOP KEVORKIAN

Aliases: Kirkorian, Bermond, Manoukian, Jacques, Jacky.

Description: Born on December 18, 1914, at Madin, Turkey; 5 feet 5 inches; 135 pounds, black hair; Armenian origin.

Localities frequented: Resides at 9 Square du Thimerais, Paris 17, France. Frequents the Paris and Marseilles areas. Also travels to the United States and Canada.

Criminal associates: Gilbert Coscia, Antoine Harrouk, Antoine Araman.

Modus operandi: This suspect is involved in the traffic of narcotics between Lebanon and France. He is now involved in the traffic between France, Canada, and the United States. He brings back the money from Canada which represents the payment for the narcotics sold in the United States.

Agencies familiar with individual: French Surete National, Interpol Paris, France, Federal Bureau of Narcotics.

SAMIL KHOURY

Aliases: Sami Khoury, Salim Khoury, Selim Khoury, Salim Alameddine, Sami El Houris, Samil El Khoury, Sami Salim Khoury.

Description: Arabian male born on May 7, 1927, at Zahle, Lebanon; son of Selim and of Wadia Moubarak; 5 feet 8 inches; 140 pounds; black wavy hair; brown eyes; dark complexion; Lebanese nationality speaks French and Arabic.

Localities frequented: Residence: Rue Badaro (no number), Beirut. Frequented Casino du Liban, Cave du Roi, Beirut, Egypt, Spain, Switzerland, Libya, Germany, Morocco.

Criminal associates: Nagulb Nahs (Frankfurt, Germany), Henri Abdil Jalil, Mounir Alaouie, Antoine Araman, Joseph Skaff, Richard Hadda, Omar Makkouk, Phillipe Leandri, Antoine Harrouk, Albert Ansn Bistone, Camille Choureri, Giuseppe Cotrone, Jean-Baptiste Croce, Haj Abou Selim, his wife Paulette Giudicelli alias Maria Vincent, a cabaret singer living in Paris.

Criminal history: Considered the most important drug trafficker working between the Near East and Europe. Many times has been prosecuted for drug trafficking and generally released for lack of evidence. In Egypt, convicted for hashish smuggling; in France for possession of counterfeit U.S. dollars; in Lebanon in 1959 for bribing a narcotics law-enforcement official to 4 months imprisonment; also in Lebanon for cigarette smuggling, and in Germany for possession of cocaine.

Modus operandi: Has a considerable number of people who carry the drugs hidden in places specially arranged in cars or on ships. Never smuggles drugs himself but acts through accomplices or agents. Travels frequently between Asia, Europe, and Africa as a spokesman for his criminal associates, arranging to smuggle tobacco, arms, and narcotics in exchange for money or other merchandise.

Agencies familiar with individual: Egyptian, Lebanese, German, Swiss, French Police; ICPO-Interpol, U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

HAGI IBRAHIM KIYAB

Alias: Yosuf Soken.

Description: Born July 16, 1909, at Divrig, Turkey; 5 feet 6 inches; 120 pounds; gray hair; brown eyes; gray moustache.

Localities frequented: Resides at Kiziz Toprak Sehir Kahya Sokak No. 29, Istanbul, Turkey.

Criminal associates: Osman Tuter, Huseyin Eminoglu, Lutfi Akarca, Muzaffer Akarca, Musa Kilic, Zeynep Anamurlar, Necati Incekara.

Criminal history: Arrested March 1961, by Istanbul police and U.S. narcotic agent in possession of 14 kilograms of morphine base.

Modus operandi: An important supplier of morphine base in Turkey. Capable of supplying large quantities of morphine base to foreign customers.

Agencies familiar with individual: Turkish Police; U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

Fingerprint classification: 13 Roi, 00 WMJ.

OMAR MAKKOUK

Aliases: Omar El Makouk, Omar Mahouh, Umar Maquq, Omar El Makkouk.

Description: Born 1911 in Beirut, Lebanon; 5 feet 4 inches; 155 pounds; grey hair (balding); brown eyes.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 949

Localities frequented: Resides in Beirut, Lebanon; frequents the Near East countries.

Criminal associates: Samil Khoury, Souhail Makkouk (son), Ismail Fakhoury, Chafic Hibri, Edmond Khouri, Mahfouz Shaer Shokri, Camil Eolmastri (Syria), Yousef Eletir.

Criminal history: Has been arrested twice for operating a clandestine laboratory. Was also sentenced July 2, 1959, to 6 months imprisonment for bribing an official responsible for combating illicit drug traffic.

Modus operandi: Considered to be one of the most important Lebanese drug traffickers specializing in manufacturing and converting drugs. Is the best clandestine chemist in Lebanon, perhaps in all of the Middle East. Makkouk and his son Souhail purchase morphine base from sources of supply in Aleppo, Syria, smuggle it to Lebanon, convert it to heroin for consumption on the local and other Middle East markets, i.e., Teheran, Iran.

Agencies familiar with individual: Lebanese Police, ICPO-Interpol, U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

ICPO-Interpol Circular No. 169/57; ICPO-Interpol Booklet on Near & Middle East Narcotic Drugs Traffickers DRMO 5-61.

ANTRANIK PAROUTIAN

Alias: Andre.

Description: White male born on April 3, 1925, at Gardanne, France; 5 feet 5 inches; 175 pounds; black hair; brown eyes; scar on the first phalanx, right middle finger; French national.

Localities frequented: Residence: 211 Promenade de la Corniche, Marseilles, France. Frequented the major cities of Turkey, Lebanon. Also frequented New York City; Miami, Fla.; Havana, Cuba; and Montreal, Canada.

Criminal associates: Cotroni brothers of Montreal, Canada, Gabriel Graziani, Carmine Galante, John Baptiste Croce, Paul Mondoloni, Albert Bistoni, Jean and Dominique Venturi.

Criminal history: Arrested, March 8, 1960, for violation of the Federal narcotic laws; convicted and sentenced to 20 years in Federal prison. He is believed to have had convictions in France which were amnestied, of which no official record is available.

Modus operandi: He arranged the smuggling of large quantities of heroin from France to the United States via Montreal, Canada. Also traveled to Lebanon and Turkey to secure large quantities of morphine base to be delivered to operators of clandestine laboratories in the Marseilles, France, area. Handled the transfer of large amounts of currency in payment for narcotic drugs from the United States to coded bank accounts under his control in Switzerland.

Agencies familiar with individual: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, U.S. Bureau of Customs, U.S. Immigration, Federal Bureau of Investigation, RCMP, French Surete, Lebanese Police, Interpol. FBI No. 520974D.

JOSEPH PATRIZI

Alias: Jo.

Description: Born on June 24, 1916; son of Ange and Josephine Preciozi at Ogliastro, Corsica, France; 5 feet 6 inches; brown hair; brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Residence: 54 Rue du Coq, Marseilles, France. Patronizes the Bar Artistic, Cours Joseph Thierry, Marseilles and the nightclub Maxims Place Massena at Nice, France. Travels frequently to Paris, France.

Criminal associates: Dominique Albertini, Jean-Baptiste Croce, Albert Bistoni, Jerome Leca, Paul Mondoloni.

Modus operandi: With Albert Bistoni and Jean-Baptiste Croce organizes the smuggling to the United States of large quantities of heroin produced in clandestine laboratories in France.

Agencies familiar with individual: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

FRANCESCO PIRICO

Aliases: Don Ciccio, Cheech.

Description: Born June 1, 1901, Palermo, Sicily, 5 feet 10 inches, 180 pounds, brown eyes, light brown hair, small mouth, usually wears glasses and moustache, has droopy right eyelid.

Localities frequented: Resides via Vincenzo Monte No. 34, Milan, Italy.

Family background: Father: Giovanni; mother: Angela Pirico (both deceased); son: Gianni.

950 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Giuseppe Pici, Nicola Gentile, Joseph Di Palermo, Albert Bistoni, Nicolo Di Giovanni, Francesco Saverino, Egidio Calascibetta.

Criminal history: Never in United States. Record in Italy dating back many years includes arrests for theft, gambling, fraud, and narcotic trafficking.

Business: Claims to be a businessman and tradesman.

Modus operandi: Important Mafia figure, 1948 to 1951 was distributor of large quantities of diverted heroin from the Schapparelli Pharmaceutical Co., supplying U.S. customers Frank Scalise, Joseph Di Palermo, Eugene Giannini and others. When diversion ceased he obtained French heroin for his American customers.

FAYSSAL RAHMO

Aliases: Mohammad Fayssal Abdellatif El-Ahmed El-Rahmou El-Chabi, Abi Latlouf, Fessal El Rahmou, Faical Rahmo, fayssal Mohammad Faycal El Ahmed, Mohammad Faycal El Rahmou, Faycal El Chehabi, Abi Latlouf, Abdul Latif.

Description: Syrian male born in 1919 at Bab, Syria; 5 feet 8 inches, 150 pounds; black hair; brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Travels mainly between Aleppo, Syria, and Beirut, Lebanon, as well as Turkey, United Arab Republic.

Criminal associates: Samil Khoury, Antoine Araman, Tanius Smaha (Cortas), Michel Smaha (Cortas), Agop Kouyoumdjian, Adib Abdel Hamid Yamout.

Criminal history: Trafficker in drugs and accomplice of Samil Khoury. Arrested in 1955 with his brother, Abdel, smuggling 144 kilos of opium from Syria to Lebanon.

Modus operandi: Responsible for organizing transportation of opium, morphine, or heroin between Turkey and Syria or Lebanon for transshipment to France. Works with his brother Mohammad Adel Abdellatif El Ahmed El-Rahmou El-Chehabi at Adel Rahmo.

Agencies familiar with individual: ICPO-Interpol No. 40/56 A.2483, ICPO-Interpol Booklet on Near & Middle East Narcotic Drugs Traffickers DRMO 5-61 Syrian and Lebanese Police, ICPO-Interpol, U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

MAURICIO CLAUDIO ROSAL

Aliases: None.

Description: White male, born on December 23, 1912, 5 feet 10 inches; 159 pounds; gray-brown hair; gray eyes.

Localities frequented: All of France, in particular Paris and Marseilles; New York City, Guatemala, Honduras, Lebanon.

Criminal associates: Robert LeCoat, Joseph Sax, Charles Bourbonnais, Etienne Tarditi, Nicholas Calamaras, Gilbert Coscia, Jean Ager, Robert Ager, Joseph Cahill, Felix Barnier.

Criminal history: Convicted December 1960; serving a 15-year sentence for his complicity in NYS 10787, which involved the seizure of over 50 kilograms of pure heroin.

Modus operandi: Rosal was the Guatemalan Ambassador to Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. He was in the employ of several leading French-Corsican narcotic smugglers and used his diplomatic status to smuggle large quantities of heroin into the United States for these individuals.

Agencies familiar with individual: Federal Bureau of Narcotics, New York City Police Department, U.S. Customs Service. FBI No. 627939D.

FRANCESCO PAOLO SAVERINO

Aliases: Don Ciccio, F. Saverino, Ciccio, Don Ciccio, Don Chicco, Saverino, Severino, Savarini.

Description: Born August 5, 1911, at Salemi, Trapani, Sicily, Italy; 5 feet 6 inches; 155 pounds; black hair; brown eyes; moustache; very good dresser.

Localities frequented: Residence, Viale Papignao No. 28, Milan, Italy; frequents better night clubs in Milan and also the cities of Rome, San Remo, and other major cities of Italy, including those in Sicily.

Criminal associates: Frank Pirico, Ugo Caneba, Serafino Mancuso, Alberto Bianciardi, Frank Coppola, Paolo Greco, Giuseppe Pici, Joseph Pellegrino, the late Eugene Giannini, Michael Cerami, Constantino Gamba, Dr. Enzo Berti, and all other major narcotic violators in Italy.

Criminal history: Naples, Italy, 1938, 9 months' imprisonment for fraud and breach of trust; Trapani, 1940, 7 months' imprisonment for fraud; Palermo,

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 951

1949, 1 month and 10 days imprisonment for drug trafficking; Palermo, 1951, 12 months' imprisonment for drug trafficking; warrant of arrest August 29, 1957, by Milan court (Italy) for drug trafficking between Turkey, Switzerland, and Italy. In 1958 arrested in Milan in connection with Enzo Berti et al. laboratory case, released October 17, 1958, on parole. Wanted in Switzerland on warrant of arrest issued August 7, 1958, by examining magistrate in Zurich for trafficking in drugs.

Modus operandi: Operates clandestine heroin laboratories in Italy. Is also supplied by Corsican gangsters in France. Distributes kilo lots of heroin to many important American gangs.

Agencies familiar with individual: Italian Questura Police, Guardia di Finanza, Carabinieri; Swiss, Turkish, French Police Service, ICPO-Interpol; U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

Fingerprint classification: ICPO-Interpol No. 278/49 A.2961. Scientific Police Milan No. 1610. 9 U 00 13. 6 U 00.

IBRAHIM SEN

Alias: Hajji.

Description: Born on February 4, 1928, at Tokat, Turkey; 5 feet 5 inches; 150 pounds, black hair; brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides at Tokat, Turkey.

Criminal associates: Necati Gurel, Lufti Eryilmaz, Halil Taskin, Sadik Basbayrak.

Criminal history: Arrested April 15, 1960, in Zile, Turkey, in possession of 140 kilograms of opium. Arrested in May 1960, by Turkish police and U.S. narcotic agent in possession of 301 kilograms of opium.

Modus operandi: One of the more important opium smugglers in Turkey. Capable of selling large quantities of opium to other narcotic violators.

Agencies familiar with individual: Turkish police. U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

AHMET SOYSAL

Aliases: None.

Description: Born 1928 at Kilis, Turkey; 5 feet 6 inches; 170 pounds; black hair; brown eyes; wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides Cifte Havuzlar Cad. No. 15, Kadikoy, Istanbul, Turkey. Frequents Sisli section of Istanbul; Melek Club.

Criminal associates: Huseyin Eminoglu, Sefer Bezal, Ali Bezal, Musrafa Ozer, Ramiz Zeren, Remzi Aslan, Alexandre Rosolacci, Mehmet Tavukcu, Ihsan Sekban, Sevet Pazarkoy.

Criminal history: Arrested 1951 for trafficking in heroin. Arrested 1957 in possession of 25 tons of contraband coffee. Arrested October 1962 for smuggling gold and watches. Arrested November 1962, by Istanbul police and U.S. narcotic agent in possession of 40 kilograms of pure morphine base.

Modus operandi: Should be considered most important international narcotics trafficker operating in Turkey. Has caused the delivery of large quantities of morphine base to Marseilles, France, for subsequent conversion to heroin destined for further delivery to U.S. market.

Agencies familiar with individual: Turkish police, French police, Italian police, Greek police, Interpol, Iran police, U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

Fingerprint classification: i viii 7. 1 ro.

ETIENNE TARDITI

Alias: Adolphe Tarditi.

Description: Born October 18, 1904; white male; 5 feet 6 inches; 180 pounds; brown eyes; gray hair (balding); light complexion; neat dresser; half-inch scar on bridge of nose. French citizen.

Localities frequented: All of France, in particular, Paris and Marseilles, New York City, Lebanon.

Criminal associates: Robert LeCoat, Joseph Sax, Charles Bourbonnais, Mauricio Rosal, Nicholas Calamaras, Gilbert Coscia, Jean Ager, Robert Ager, Joseph Cahill, Felix Barnier.

Criminal history: Sentenced January 1961, to 9 years in Federal prison for his complicity in NY:S 10787 which involved the seizure of over 50 kilograms of pure heroin in New York City. This heroin was supplied by the Robert LeCoat-Felix Barnier organization in France.

952 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Modus operandi: Tarditi was responsible for buying morphine base in the Near East and smuggling it into France where the morphine base was converted into heroin. He also served as liaison man between the French sources of supply and the American consumers.

Agencies familiar with individual: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, U.S. Bureau of Customs, New York City Police Department. FBI No. 627-966D.

Fingerprint classification: 15 M 13 R OIM 13. I 18 R OII.

EXHIBIT No. 2A

DOMINIQUE ALBERTINI

Alias: Charles Albert Albertini.

Description: Born April 2, 1908, Loretto DiGasceinca (Corsica), France; French (Italian descent) 5 feet 6 inches, 180 pounds, dark brown hair, brown eyes, stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides Boulevard DeLaCabane, Villa Pierrevette No. 15, St. Julien, Marseilles, France. Frequents Paris and other French cities, Milan, Ventimiglia, San Remo and other Italian cities.

Family background: Wife: Catherine Mastromauro; children: Anna Marie, Charles Albert, Richard, Dominique; father-in-law: Dominique Mastromauro.

Criminal associates: Paul Miccallief, Dominique Nicoli, Antoine Galiano, Alain LeRoy, Serge Sibille, Giovanni Salemi, Jean-Baptiste Crose, Ignazio Bracco, Peter Gaudino.

Criminal history: FBI No. 190608, convicted 1952 for illegal entry into United States and attempted bribery. Sentenced to 1 year and 1 day.

Business: Broker, industries-diffusion, 118 LaCanabiere, Marseilles, France.

Modus operandi: One of Europe's largest narcotic smugglers and wholesale dealers. Has operated heroin-processing laboratories in Marseilles and other French cities. Source of supply for U.S. Mafia narcotic distributors.

JACQUES ANGELVIN

Alias: Jock.

Description: Born August 5, 1914, in Marseilles (Bouche du Rhone) France; 5 feet 8 inches; 160 pounds; light brown hair, light complexion.

Localities frequented: Residence, 24 Boulevard de la Tour, Maubourg, Paris, France. Frequents nightclubs catering to the radio and television field in France, Club Ile D'Amour, at Chennevieres, France.

Criminal associates: Francois Scaglia, Jean Jehan.

Criminal history: Arrested in New York City January 18, 1962, by New York City Police Department for possession of narcotics.

Modus operandi: Purchased an automobile in France and smuggled large quantity of heroin into the United States concealed in automobile.

MARIUS JACQUES ANSALDI

Aliases: None.

Description: Born September 9, 1901, Toulon, France, French citizen.

Localities frequented: Resides 8 Alle De L'Alma, Perreux, Seine, France, frequents Hotel California, Cafe Murat, San Francisco Restaurant, and Carol Club, all in Paris, France.

Family background: Married Jeanne Masson; no children; father, Pierre; mother, Dominique Delfino.

Criminal associates: In United States Usche Gelb, Salvatore Shillitani, Nathan Behrman, and Joseph Orsini; in Europe Dominique Reissant, Dominique Baldini, Antoine Bergeret, Marius Reversac.

Criminal history: Never in United States, 1953 was sentenced to 4 years imprisonment and 1 million francs fine for operating a clandestine heroin laboratory in Paris, France. Appealed sentence, but lost and started serving February 6, 1957.

Business: When gainfully employed, works as a wine broker.

Modus operandi: Large-scale illicit heroin manufacturing laboratory operator. Supplies heroin to Mafia and other racketeers. Was the prime source for the Gelb-Behrman and Orsini-Shillitani organizations.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 953

GEORGES ARANCI

Alias: Mr. Georges.

Description: Born April 23, 1892, at Marseilles, France; 5 feet 5 inches; gray hair, almost bald.

Localities frequented: Resides at 3 Rue Barbaroux, Marseilles, France. Patronizes various bars in the old harbor section of Marseilles, France.

Family background: Father, Sauveur; mother, Marie-Jeanne Christofini.

Criminal associates: His brothers, Joseph and Marius Aranci, Antoine Cordoliani alias The Elder, Antoine Filippi, Ralph Cianchetti, Raoul Battestini.

Criminal history: Was arrested at Marseilles, France, in 1960, in connection with the seizure of 3 kilograms of heroin which he attempted to have smuggled to the United States. Subsequently sentenced to a 5-year prison term.

Business: None.

Modus operandi: With his brothers, purchases heroin from various clandestine suppliers at Marseilles and causes same to be smuggled to his customers in the United States.

JOSEPH ARANCI

Alias: Mr. Joseph.

Description: Born April 15, 1899, at Marseilles, France; 5 feet 5 inches; gray hair, almost bald.

Localities frequented: Resides at 34 Boulevard Perier, Marseilles, France. Patronizes various bars in the old port section of Marseilles, France.

Family background: Father, Sauveur; mother, Marie Jeanne Christofini.

Criminal associates: His brothers Georges and Marius Aranci, Antoine Cordoliani alias The Elder, Antoine Filippi, Ralph Cianchetti, Raoul Battestini.

Criminal history: Was arrested at Marseilles, France, in 1960, in connection with the seizure of 3 kilograms of heroin, which he attempted to have smuggled to the United States. Subsequently sentenced to a 5-year prison term.

Business: None.

Modus operandi: Purchases, with his brothers, heroin from various clandestine suppliers at Marseilles and causes same to be smuggled to his customers in the United States.

MARIUS ANTOINE ARANCI

Aliases: None.

Description: Born April 16, 1886, Marseilles, France, Corsican descent; 5 feet 6 inches, 170 pounds; gray hair, wears glasses, carries cane.

Localities frequented: Resides 37 Allees, Lean Gambetta, Marseilles. Frequents Bar La Daurade, rue Fortia, Marseilles, France.

Family background: Married Cesarine Benaglia; daughter, Jeanne (Mrs. Raoul Battestini), father, Sauveur; mother, Jeanne Christofini; brothers, George, Joseph.

Criminal associates: Antoine Cordoliani, Raoul Battestini, Salvatore Mancuso, Samil Khoury, Reza Samman Khalil.

Criminal history: Arrested in France 1929 in possession of 5 kilos of opium, 1934 in connection with 3,000 kilos of opium smuggled into France from Istanbul, and 1959 in possession of 5 kilos of heroin.

Business: Retired merchant mariner. From time to time has operated bars on the Marseilles waterfront.

Modus operandi: Over the past 35 years or more has supplied huge quantities of heroin to Mafia associates and other narcotic traffickers in the United States. In his younger days, while employed as a seaman, he acted as a courier. Now he and his organization operate their own laboratories for the conversion of morphine base to heroin.

FELIX ALFRED BARNIER

Alias: Pierre Renucci.

Description: Born January 19, 1917, at Lyon, France; 5 feet 11 inches; 185 pounds; brown hair, blue eyes. French national.

Localities frequented: Resides at 26 Avenue Lilly, Le Celle-Saint-Cloud (Seine et Oise), France. Frequents the Paris and Marseilles areas. Has also traveled to the United States and Canada.

Criminal associates: Robert LeCoat, Etienne Tarditi, Mauricio Rosal, Gilbert Coscia, Charles Bourbonnais.

Facsimile of signature: None.

Criminal history: None.

954 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Modus operandi: Barnier is a member of a large-scale drug trafficking gang operating between France and the United States. He supervises the shipment of heroin to the United States and assures the distribution of this heroin to the American recipient. Barnier is suspected of having supplied the 50 kilograms of heroin seized in New York on October 3, 1960, when his accomplices Etienne Tarditi and Mauricio Rosal were arrested.

Agencies familiar with individual: Interpol; French Surete National; Federal Bureau of Narcotics.

Fingerprint classification: 12 UOO 7; 25 WII.

ANSAN ALBERT BISTONI

Aliases: Monsieur Albert, Aga Khan, Albert Bistoni, Joseph Bistoni.

Description: Born November 21, 1911, Marseilles, France. Corsican descent, 5 feet 7½ inches, 175 pounds, dark brown hair, pale eyes.

Localities frequented: Sometimes resides 35 rue Victor Masse, Paris, and sometimes with mother at Carseilles. Frequents Bar Villa D'Esaste and Bar Washington, Paris, also Cuba, Mexico, and Canada.

Family background: Father, Attilion; mother, Ida Buonchristiani; mistress, Simone Prevost.

Criminal associates: Roger Coudert, Paul Mondoloni, Jean Baptiste Croce, Antoine Galliano, Cotroni brothers of Montreal.

Criminal history: Interpol Secretariat file No. 841/52. Arrested three times for narcotic trafficking; 1956 convicted of narcotic trafficking and sentenced to 3 years imprisonment and 5 years restricted residence.

Business: Believed to have interests in the Eve, Cupidon, and Pigalle night clubs, Havana, Cuba.

Modus operandi: Head of a large narcotic trafficking organization which smuggles morphine base into France and converts it to heroin, which is sent to the United States and Canada. Supplies several Mafia narcotic distributing organizations.

CHARLES BOURBONNAIS

Alias: Robert Norton.

Description: Male, white; born November 7, 1920, in Paris, France; 5 feet 11 inches, 180 pounds, blue eyes, black hair, fair complexion, neat dresser, slightly deformed left arm (unnoticeable). Naturalized American citizen.

Localities frequented: Currently incarcerated at Terminal Island, San Francisco, Calif., French restaurants, New York City; Los Angeles, Calif.; French Riviera, and Paris, France.

Criminal associates: Robert LeCoat, Joseph Sax, Mauricio Rosal, Etienne Tarditi, Nicholas Calamaras, Gilbert Coscia, Jean Ager, Robert Ager, Joseph Cahill, Felix Barnier.

Criminal history: Bourbonnais has no prior criminal record. Sentenced in January 1961 to 9 years imprisonment for his complicity in NY:E 1261 and NY:S 10787 which involved the seizure of over 100 kilograms of pure heroin.

Modus operandi: Subject utilized his position as a TWA purser to pass through cursory customs inspection and smuggle large amounts of narcotics from France into the United States. In the same manner Bourbonnais carried moneys derived from the distribution of drugs back to the French sources of supply.

Agencies familiar with individual: Federal Bureau of Narcotics; New York City Police Department, U.S. Customs Agency Service.

Fingerprint classification: FBI No. 631 453 D; 19 L 30 W I MO; I 16 W I OI.

SALVATORE CANEBA

Aliases: Toto, John Sperandeo.

Description: Born October 24, 1901, Palermo, Sicily, 5 feet 6 inches, 180 pounds, heavy build, black-graying hair, balding, brown eyes; poor English, fluent Italian-French.

Localities frequented: Resides via Priscioan No. 69, Rome, Italy, frequently travels to Palermo and Milan, Italy, also Germany, France, and Switzerland. Before deportation resided 3425 89th Street, Jackson Heights, N.Y., and frequented vicinities of First Avenue and 11th St., Second Avenue and 106th Street, New York City.

Family background: Married Irene Pluber (last reported living in New York City with their son); father, Giuseppe; mother, Marianna Ania (sister of late Pasquale Ania, former head of Mafia in Italy); brothers, Giosue, Giovanni, and Ugo.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 955

Criminal associates: William LoCasolo, Samuel Kass, Peter Kourakis, Sorci brothers (Palermo), Rosario Mancioni, Francois Paoleschi, Lucky Luciano, and Ugo Caneba (brother).

Criminal history: FBI No. 611860B. European record dates from 1918 and includes arrests for theft, criminal conspiracy, armed assault, receiving, etc., in Italy and France. Expelled from France 1936. Record in United States dates from 1950 and includes arrests for violation of Immigration and Federal Narcotic Laws; deported from United States 1954.

Business: Claims to be in finance and loan business.

Modus operandi: A prominent Mafia member. One of the largest narcotic smugglers and wholesale dealers in Italy, in partnership with his brother, Ugo, purchases pure heroin from major Corsican gangsters in Marseilles and Paris, France, and ships it to customers in the United States.

GILBERT AUGUSTIN COSCIA

Alias: Roby.

Description: Born October 18, 1907, at Volx (Basses Alpes), France. He is a French national; 5 feet 6 inches tall, 165 pounds; black hair; brown eyes; heavy build.

Localities frequented: Resides at 9 Quai Rauba Capeu, Nice, France. Frequent Paris and Nice, France.

Family background: Father, Augustin; mother, Laura Crocioni.

Criminal associates: Robert Le Coat, Felix Barnier, Antoine Marignagni, Jean Baptiste Giacobetti, Antoine Rinieri, Hagop Kevorkian.

Criminal history: None.

Business: None.

Modus operandi: Coscia is a member of an international narcotics trafficking organization operating between France and the United States. He is in charge of the transportation of the narcotics and the returning of the payments for the narcotics to France.

JEAN BAPTISTE CROCE

Aliases: None.

Description: Born April 9, 1920, Olmeto di Tuda, Bastia, Corsica, France; 5 feet 7 inches, 185 pounds, black hair, stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides at Marseilles, France, also 15 rue de Perre, Paris, France. Travels by air to Montreal and Havana, Cuba. Owns two nightclubs in Havana, Cuba.

Family background: Married; mistress, Catherine Maestraci; father, Dominique; mother's maiden name, Annonciade.

Criminal associates: Joseph Albert Bistoni, Dominique Albertini, Paul Mondoloni of Marseilles, Cotroni mob of Montreal.

Criminal history: FBI No. 394-335C. RCMP file No. 57HQ1180-4-Q7. Arrested in France for murder; in United States for immigration violation and smuggling investigation.

Business: Nightclub operator. Owns two nightclubs in Havana, Cuba.

Modus operandi: Top member of a group of French-Corsican narcotic traffickers who obtain large quantities of heroin from illicit laboratories in France and smuggle it to Mafia racketeers in the United States and Canada.

ANTOINE D'AGOSTINO

Aliases: Michel Sisco, Louis Floris, Antoine Scarfoni, Alberto Blasis, Albert DuJardin, Lunettes.

Description: Born December 8, 1914, Bone, Algeria, French citizen; 5 feet 7 inches, 177 pounds, heavy build, dark brown hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Marseilles, Paris, and Evreux, France; Montreal, Canada; French restaurant in New York City; Mexico City. Currently incarcerated in Canada (1960).

Family background: Married Suzanne Filleau; daughter, Michele Theresa; wife and daughter have taken name Filleau and reside in Mexico City; brothers, Albert and Stephen; father, Joseph; mother, Theresa Scarfoni. Both parents born Naples, Italy.

Criminal associates: Joseph Orsini, Carmelo Sansone, Francois Spirito, Paul Mondoloni, Marius Ansaldi, Salvatore Shillitani.

Criminal history: FBI No. 409989A. Record dates back to 1935 with arrests in Algeria and France for theft and treason. Federal narcotic conviction in United States, and narcotic conviction Canada for which sentenced to 3 years in 1958.

956 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Business: No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: A persistent large-scale narcotic trafficker. Closely allied with top Mafia members of Europe and North America and has supplied them with huge amounts of heroin, gold, and stolen jewelry.

JEAN DAVID

Aliases: Jean Laget, Silver Fox, Whitey.

Description: Born August 29, 1898, Arles Bouches Du Rhone, France; 5 feet 11 inches, 193 pounds, white wavy hair, gray eyes, ruddy complexion, French accent. I. & N.S. No. A-465-2328.

Localities frequented: Resided at 312 West 56th Street, New York City, frequented French restaurants in New York's midtown area. Currently (1960) incarcerated.

Family background: Married Simone Alice Marcelli; no known children; annulled December 6, 1943, in New York City; father, Pierre; mother, Marie Vidal; brothers, Vincent, Joseph, Marcel.

Criminal associates: Lucien Ignaro, Ugo Rossi, Andrew Alberti, Joseph Orsini, Antoine D'Agostino, Lucien Rivard, Paul Mondoloni, John Sperandeo, Frank Tornello, Joseph Basile, Henry Sauzet, Roger Coudert.

Criminal history: FBI No. 3654908. Arrests since 1921 include burglary, contempt of court, and narcotics. Wanted for murder in France committed in 1937. Currently serving a 10-year sentence at Leavenworth Prison. Eligible for parole at end of 1960. Subject to deportation.

Business: Was formerly a partner in Felice's Restaurant, 330 West 46th Street, New York City, and a partner of Alfred Letourneur in Letourneur Sulky Wheels, Inc., New York.

Modus operandi: Is an important member of a group which for years has smuggled large quantities of heroin into the United States for sale to top-level Mafia narcotic traffickers.

MARCEL FRANCISCI

Alias: Marcel.

Description: Born November 30, 1919, Ciamanacce, Corsica, France; 6 feet 1 inch, brown hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides at 108 Rue Sauchet, Paris, France. Has an alternate residence at 8 Rue Rochefort, Paris, France. Patronizes the Bar Artistic, Cours Joseph Thierry, Marseilles, and the Restaurant Fouquet's, Avenue des Champs Elysees, Paris, France.

Family background: Mother, Angele Santucci; father, Francois.

Criminal associates: Brothers Jean and Xavier Francischi, Dominique Venturi, Paul Mondoloni, Francois Spirito, Gabriel Carcassonne.

Criminal history: Has been the subject of various French customs investigations.

Business: None.

Modus operandi: Organizes the smuggling into France of morphine base produced in the Middle East.

USCHE GELB

Aliases: Solly Gordon, Saul Gelb, Kreisberg, King, Geld, Edward S. A. Jordon.

Description: Born March 27, 1897, Dembica, Austria, Jewish; 5 feet 7½ inches, 162 pounds, white hair, brown eyes, glasses. Illegal alien.

Localities frequented: Resides 545 West End Avenue, New York City. Frequented Lafayette Street machinery center, midtown restaurants and clubs. Summer home, Tennenah Lake, N.Y.

Family background: Married Ethel Egan; father, Tobias Samuel Gelb; mother, Feiger Krantz (both deceased); brother, Hyman; sisters, Mary, Belle, and Mrs. Bertha Sterza.

Criminal associates: Anthony Vellucci, Nathan Behrman, Jean Baruche, Joseph Orsini, Morris Taubman, Salvatore Shillitani.

Criminal history: FBI No. 35989. NYCPD No. B53908. Record dates from 1913 and includes arrests for juvenile delinquency, disorderly conduct, felonious assault, dangerous weapon, perjury, stolen bonds, Federal narcotics conviction. Currently incarcerated for narcotic conspiracy.

Business: Machinery salesman. Owned florist shop.

Modus operandi: In association with top-level Mafia racketeers, he operated a narcotic smuggling and distribution ring which supplied untold quantities of heroin throughout the United States; top echelon racketeer and drug trafficker for past 30 years.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 957

GABRIEL LUCIEN GRAZIANI

Alias: Gaby.

Description: Born July 1, 1922, Marseilles, France (French-Corsican), 5 feet 5 inches, 145 pounds, medium build, black hair, brown eyes, scar over right temple. I. & N.S. No. V-1832105.

Localities frequented: Resides 2A Rue Navarin, Marseilles, France. In United States resides at 119-09 83d Avenue, Queens, N.Y. Travels frequently between the United States, Canada, South America, and Europe.

Family background: Married to Georgette Marie Felizia; has one daughter; father, Pierre; mother, Assomption Rutali.

Criminal associates: Antranik Paroutian, Dominique Nicoli, Jean Baptiste Croce, Marie Bernard, Casimir Guerazi, Roger Quendane, Andre Quendane, all of France. Giuseppe Cotroni, Joseph DiPalermo, Carmine Galante.

Criminal history: FBI No. 864135C. No record in the United States. In 1958 was arrested in Switzerland while trying to negotiate stolen Canadian securities. He was released when Canada failed to extradite.

Business: Formerly ran the Bar de L'Avenir 13 Boulevard Danielle Cassanova, Marseilles. Also owned a grocery and a coffee-roasting shop. Coppersmith by trade.

Modus operandi: An international drug trafficker; closely associated with and trusted by top-level members of the Mafia. A courier for the Croce-Nicoli-Paroutian smuggling group. Travels frequently to major cities in the United States, Canada, South and Central America and Europe making contacts for the organization.

JEAN JEHAN

Aliases: Auguste Calmes, Steve Martin, Francis Stokam.

Description: French national, born September 2, 1898, Fourques, Oard France; 6 feet; 180 pounds, white hair, medium build, receding hair line.

Localities frequented: Resides 6805 21st Avenue, Rosemont, Quebec, Canada; Commodore Hotel, New York City; travels frequently to France.

Criminal associates: Marius L. Martin, Francois Scaglia, Angelo Tuminaro, Rosario Ippolito.

Criminal history: Suspected of homicide in France; associates with top echelon narcotics violators (1962) wanted by the New York City Police Department for violation of narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Arranges for the smuggling of narcotics into the United States in large quantities.

ROBERT LEON FRANCIS LE COAT

Aliases: None

Description: Born July 1, 1907, Rochefort Sur-Mer, France. Five feet 6 inches, 155 pounds, brown hair, French national.

Localities frequented: Resides at 68 Boulevard Malesherbes, Paris 17, France. Frequents the Pair and Le Havre areas.

Family background: Father, Guillaume; mother, Leoncie Dequesse.

Criminal associates: Felix Bernier, Mauricio Rosal, Etienne Tarditi, Gilbert Coscia, Jean Baptiste Giacobetti, Jean "Pio" Andreani, Charles Bourbonnais.

Criminal history: Has been associated with international narcotic traffickers for many years. Has never been condemned.

Modus operandi: Arranges the shipment of large quantities of heroin from France to the United States. He is said to be responsible for the transportation of 50 kilograms of heroin by suspects Charles Bourbonnais and Gilbert Coscia to the United States.

ANTOINE MARIE MARIGNANI

Aliases: Antoine Mariniani, "Lolo le Corse," Charles.

Description: Born March 4, 1906, at Ajaccio, Corsica; French National; 5 feet 6 inches, dark brown hair (balding), brown eyes. Tattooed: A heart and cross on the left forearm. A cross on the right forearm.

Localities frequented: Resides at 66 rue de Ponthieu, Paris 8, France. Frequent the Paris, Marseilles, and the Cote d'Azur areas.

Family background: Father, Sebastien; mother, Loetitia Polo DiBorgo.

Criminal associates: Francois Franchi, Jean-Baptiste Ciacobetti, Gilbert Coscia, Robert LeCoat.

Criminal history: Paris, France on June 6, 1952, 18 months prison and Fr50,000 fine for swindle and attempted swindle. Amiens on March 16, 1953, 18 months prison, default, for swindle. Germany has been requested to extradite him.

958 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Business: Previously director of casino.

Modus operandi: A financier of heroin sent to the United States. Is believed to be one of the owners of 50 kilograms of heroin sent to the United States through Robert LeCoat in 1960.

MARIUS LOUIS MARTIN

Aliases: None.

Description: Born May 15, 1900, at Salon De Provence (Bouches du Rhone), France; 5 feet 5 inches; 140 pounds; brown hair; brown eyes.

Localities frequented: France; New York, and California, United States; and Montreal, Province of Quebec.

Criminal associates: Roger Mollet, Cotroni Brothers (Vincent, Giuseppe and Frank), Edmond Martin (brother), Jean Antonin Jehan, Pasquale Fuca, Roger Denizet.

Criminal history: He has no record in Canada.

Modus operandi: Engaged in international drug trafficking between France, United States, and Canada.

Agencies familiar with individual: French Sureté Nationale.

PAUL DAMIEN MONDOLONI

Aliases: Paul Marie Bejin, Eduardo Dubian Chabolla, Jacques Desmarais, Paul Mondolini, Paul Madraleni, Jean Kraeber.

Description: Born September 27, 1916, Sartene, Corsica, France. French citizen, 5 feet 6 inches, 140 pounds, brown hair, blue eyes.

Localities frequented: Frequents Paris, Montreal, Mexico City, and gambling casinos in Havana, Cuba.

Family background: Mistress, Marcelle Senesi; father, Antoine; mother, Marie Giacomini.

Criminal associates: Jean Baptiste Croce, Roger Coudert, Marcelle Senesi, Nathan Behrman, Dominic Nicoli, Giuseppe Cotroni, Antoine D'Agostino.

Criminal history: FBI No. 564009-B. Arrested in United States for immigration violation and narcotic conspiracy, in France for aggravated theft and armed attack, and in Mexico (1960) for immigration violation.

Business: No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: Internationally known narcotic trafficker with associates in Canada, Mexico, Cuba, France, the United States, and elsewhere. Originally became notorious as a jewel thief. Closely associated with top Mafia racketeers.

JOSEPH ORSINI

Aliases: Joseph Casabianca, Joe Dorney, Francois.

Description: Born March 19, 1903; Bastia, Corsica, France; French citizen; 5 feet 8 inches; 170 pounds; brown eyes; gray hair; partly bald; medium build; tattoos on left arm.

Localities frequented: Now resides in France. Formerly resided at 26 West 85th Street, New York City and frequented French restaurants in the midtown area of New York City.

Family background: Mistress, Marcelle Ansellem; father, Louis, mother, Maria Leonetti.

Criminal associates: Antoine D'Agostino, Francois Spirito, Jean Laget, Jean Ager, Marius Ansaldi, Dominique Reissant, Saul Gelb, Edouard Giribone, Carmelo Sansone, Vincent Randazzo, Salvatore Shillitani.

Criminal history: FBI No. 708363-A. He has been convicted in France for fraud and robbery and collaboration with the Germans during World War II. Federal narcotic and counterfeiting convictions in the United States, for which sentenced to 10 years in 1951. Deported from the United States in 1958.

Business: Ex-seaman. No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: He was the Canadian-American representative for the Ansaldi group which operated a clandestine laboratory in France and smuggled heroin in large quantities to Mafia racketeers in the United States.

ANTRANIK PAROUTIAN

Alias: Andre.

Description: Born April 30, 1925, Gardonne (Bouches du Rhone), France. French-Armenian, 5 feet 8 inches, 190 pounds, dark-brown wavy hair, brown eyes, stocky build, round face.

Localities frequented: Resides 211 Promenade de la Corniche and frequents Place de L'Opera, both Marseilles, France.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 959

Family background: Unmarried; father, Ohannes (deceased); mother, Boyzar Armandjan (resides with Paroutian); brother, Sauren.

Criminal associates: Joseph DiPalermo, Carmine Galante, Ernesto Barese, Roger Guendane, Giuseppe DiGiorgio, Jean Baptiste Croce, Paul Mondoloni.

Criminal history: Arrested 1947 for violation of the French Price Control Act and 1949 as a violator of the French economic law. Federal narcotic conspiracy, 1960 (United States).

Business: Purports to be in the grocery business, operating under the name of Gabriel & Cie, No. 6 Rue Bussy l'Indien, Marseilles, France.

Modus operandi: Large-scale trafficker who obtains morphine base in Turkey, Syria, and Lebanon for conversion in illicit laboratories in France. Smuggles furnished heroin by way of Canada to Mafia traffickers in the United States.

JOSEPH PATRIZI

Alias: Jo.

Description: Born January 24, 1916, at Ogliastro, Corsica, France. Height, 5 feet 6 inches, brown hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides at 54 Rue du Coq, Marseilles, France. Patronizes the Bar Artistic, Cours Joseph Thierry, Marseilles, and the nightclub Maxims', Place Massena at Nice, France. Travels frequently to Paris, France.

Family background: Father, Ange; mother, Josephine Preciozi.

Criminal associates: Albert Bistoni, Jean Baptiste Croce, Dominique Albertini, Paul Mondoloni, Jerome Leca.

Criminal history: Was never arrested.

Business: Seaman.

Modus operandi: With Albert Bistoni and Jean Baptiste Croce organizes the smuggling to the United States of large quantities of heroin produced in clandestine laboratories in France.

GIACOMO REINA

Aliases: Jack Reina, Jack Ricca, Henry Reina.

Description: Born September 21, 1909, New York City, 5 feet 8½ inches, 155 pounds, brown eyes, black hair with gray streaks.

Localities frequented: Resides at 152 Kearny Avenue, Kearny, N.J., frequents bars at 49 Market Street, and 121 Mulberry Street, both in New York City.

Family background: Wife, Phyllis; brothers, Henry, Sam, John, and Bernard; sisters, Anna, Mildred Valachi (wife of Joe Valachi), Rose Bongrieco, Lucy Sterling; father, Gaetano; Mother, Angelina Olivera.

Criminal associates: Frank Caruso, Anthony Strollo, Vincent Mauro, Joe Orsini, Joe Valachi, all of New York City, Marius Ansaldi, Dominique Reissant, Francois Spirito, all of France.

Criminal history: FBI No. 193805, New York City Police Department No. B-73123, arrests from 1928 include felonious assault, robbery, conviction of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate business known.

Modus operandi: Wholesale smuggler, distributor of heroin with sources of supply in France. Has connections with most leading Mafia members of New York City.

DOMINIQUE REISSANT

Aliases: Niques des Carmes; Nickey.

Description: Born in Marseilles, France, on July 6, 1896. Male; white; 5 feet 6 inches tall; 150 pounds; medium build; black-gray hair; brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides at 40 Rue Bellevue, Fort Marly, S. & O., France. Frequents Hotel California; Carol Club; all Paris, France; Veau D'or Restaurant, New York City.

Criminal associates: Marius Ansaldi; Dominique Baldini, Francois Spirito; Joseph Orsini; Edouard Giribone; Giacomo Reina; Salvatore Shillitani; Pasquale Pagano.

Criminal history: Dates from 1917 and includes arrests for battery and assault; corrupting the morals of minors; illegally manufacturing gold coins. During World War II suspected of having collaborated with the Germans. Indicted May 1955 in Federal court at New York for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Directs international group (France and Italy) which imports opium and morphine base for conversion into heroin for ultimate distribution in the United States.

Agencies familiar with individual: French Sureté Nationale (police judiciaire); U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

960 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

MAURICIO CLAUDIO ROSAL

Aliases: None.

Description: White, male, 5 feet 10 inches, 159 pounds, gray eyes, gray-brown hair, medium build, fair complexion, neat dresser. Born December 23, 1912.

Localities frequented: All of France, in particular, Paris and Marseilles; New York City; Guatamala, Honduras, Lebanon.

Criminal associates: Robert LeCoat, Joseph Sax, Charles Bourbonnais, Etienne Tarditi, Nicholas Calamaras, Gilbert Coscia, Jean Ager, Rober Ager, Joseph Cahill, Felix Barnier.

Criminal history: Rosal has no prior criminal record. At the time of his arrest was the Guatamalan Ambassador to Belgium, Netherlands, and Luxembourg. FBI No. 627939D. Serving a 15-year sentence for his complicity in New York State: 19787 which involved the seizure of over 50 kilograms of pure heroin. Convicted in December 1960.

Modus operandi: Utilized his position as Guatamalan Ambassador to the Netherlands to pass through courtesy immunity of search granted by U.S. Customs to smuggle large amounts of narcotics from France into the United States.

FRANCOIS SCAGLIA

Aliases: Little Frank, Francois Barbier.

Description: Born August 4, 1927, Marseilles, France. French citizen; 5 feet 2 inches; 150 pounds; medium build, black hair, brown eyes, medium complexion.

Localities frequented: 82 Avenue Michelet; St. Ouen, Seine, France. The Les Trois Canards, located 48 rue de la Rochefoucauld, Paris. The Bouliste Bar, 82 Avenue Michelet, St. Ouen, Seine, France.

Criminal associates: Jacques Angelvin, Angelo Tuminaro, Jean Jehan, Pasquale Fuca, a member of the Corsican underworld, Gautan Alboreo, Marium Bertella, Francis Capezza.

Criminal history: Arrested March 1957 in France and sentenced to 2 months for leaving scene of accident. Known by French police to have kidnapped several people and held for ransom. NYCPD B No. 504481.

Modus operandi: Arranges for the importation of heroin into the United States from France, makes the contacts in the United States.

FRANCOIS SPIRITO

Aliases: Charles Henri Faccia, Le Grand, Big Frank, Charles Lamoss.

Description: Born January 23, 1900, Marseilles, France. French citizen; 6 feet, 170 pounds, gray hair, brown eyes, olive complexion, slender build.

Localities frequented: Resides Marseilles, France. In United States resided midtown New York City and Greenwood Lake, N.Y. Frequented New York City's French section, visited Montreal, Canada, and Cranston, R.I.

Family background: Son, Paul; daughter, Maria; father, Dominick; mother, Rosina DeNola; brother, John; sister, Angelina Corona; nephew, Anthony Palumbo, Cranston, R.I.

Criminal associates: Angelo Iandosco, Joseph Orsini, Salvatore Shillitani, Carmelo Sansone, Anthony Martello, and Antoine D'Agostino.

Criminal history: FBI No. 837850A. Lengthy record in France includes arrests for assault and battery, theft, smuggling, using false civil status, and attempt against security of state. Federal narcotic conviction in New York City in 1951.

Business: Bar owner and men's shop operator.

Modus operandi: Well-known international narcotic violator and member of one of the largest smuggling rings in France. Major source of narcotics for the Joseph Orsini narcotic smuggling organization.

HARRY STROMBERG

Aliases: Nig Rosen, Harry Rosen, Hyman Stromberg, Chaim Stromberg, the Mahoff, Joseph Bloom, Hyman Chaim.

Description: Born July 15, 1903, Sorokov, Russia, Jewish, 5 feet 8 inches, 190 pounds, gray hair, balding, brown eyes, dark complexion, neat, conservative dresser. Naturalized, New York City, August 6, 1945.

Localities frequented: Resided 420 East 55th Street, New York City, and 5196 Pine Tree Drive, Miami Beach. Frequented New York City garment district and better night clubs, Miami Beach and Philadelphia. Currently (1960) incarcerated.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 961

Family background: Divorced Silvia Cohen; adopted son, Joseph; remarried Gretchen Cershon; father, Harry; mother, Netti Cohen.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Francesco Costiglia, Giuseppe Doto, Gaetano Lucchese, Meyer Lansky, Mickey Cohen.

Criminal history: FBI No. 786309 New York City Police Department No. 57333. Arrests include robbery, illegal lottery, burglary, possession of a gun, violation of Federal liquor and narcotic conspiracy.

Business: Has been connected with the following garment houses: Studio Frocks, Dearest Miss, Jay & Lou Manufacturing Co., LouJay Dress Co., Judy Lee Fashions.

Modus operandi: Though non-Italian he is allied with top Mafia criminals in all types of illicit activity, including labor racketeering, gambling, and narcotic trafficking.

ETIENNE TARDITI

Alias: Adolphe Tarditi.

Description: Born October 18, 1904; white male; 5 feet 6 inches; 180 pounds; brown eyes; gray hair (balding); light complexion; neat dresser; half-inch scar on bridge of nose. French citizen.

Localities frequented: All of France, in particular, Paris and Marseilles; New York City; Lebanon.

Criminal associates: Robert LeCoat, Joseph Sax, Charles Bourbonnais, Mauricio Rosal, Nicholas Calamaras, Gilbert Coscia, Jean Ager, Robert Ager, Joseph Cahill, Felix Barnier.

Criminal history: Sentenced January 1961 to 9 years in Federal prison for his complicity in NY:S 10787 which involved the seizure of over 50 kilograms of pure heroin in New York City. This heroin was supplied by the Robert LeCoat-Felix Barnier organization in France.

Modus operandi: Tarditi was responsible for buying morphine base in the Near East and smuggling it into France where the morphine base was converted into heroin. He also served as liaison man between the French sources of supply and the American consumers.

Agencies familiar with individual: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, U.S. Bureau of Customs, New York City Police Department. FBI No. 627 966D.

Fingerprint classification: 15 M 13 R OIM 13 I 18 R OII.

JEAN VENTURI

Aliases: None.

Description: French; born Marseilles, France, September 18, 1921; 5 feet 9 inches, 185 pounds, black hair; brown eyes; medium complexion; heavy build; tattooed snake and eagle on right shoulder.

Localities frequented: Immigrated to Canada in 1952; resides 5080 Pie IX Boulevard, Montreal, Canada; frequents Montreal, Canada, and Marseilles, France.

Criminal associates: Joseph Cotroni, Vincent Cotroni, Gilbert Coscia, Dominique Venturi, Lucien Rivard, Lucien Ignaro, Jacques Mari, Albert Bistoni, Francois Spiritu, Paul Mondoloni, Robert Bianchi-Maliberno; Jean Baptiste Croce.

Criminal history: No criminal record in Canada, came to attention of Sureté Nationale, France, in 1955 as a suspected narcotic trafficker.

Modus operandi: Major distributor of French heroin into the United States; works very closely with his brother Dominique Venturi who resides in Marseilles and who is considered his major source of supply.

DOMINIQUE VENTURI

Alias: Nique.

Description: Born June 24, 1923, Marseilles, France, 5 feet 8 inches, brown hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 46 Avenue Marechal Foch, Marseilles, France. Patronizes the Bar Artistic, Cours Joseph Thierry at Marseilles, France. Travels frequently to Paris, France, and Geneva, Switzerland.

Family background: Mother: Catherine Paccini.

Criminal associates: Marcel, Xavier and Jean Francisci; Jean Pozzo DiBorgo, Achile Cecchini, Jacques Discepolo, his brother Jean Venturi.

Criminal history: Served a 4-month prison sentence for attempted robbery. Was sentenced on four different occasions for carrying a concealed weapon.

Business: Salesman.

Modus operandi: Organizes the smuggling to Canada of large quantities of heroin produced in clandestine French laboratories, utilizing the services of his brother Jean Venturi who resides in Canada.

962 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

EXHIBIT No. 2B

French police in the course of this investigation obtained a secret post of observation from which they photographed various suspects entering and leaving the villa. This photograph shows one of the suspects carrying two carboys of acetic anhydride to the laboratory.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 963

A carboy of acetic anhydride, one of the chemicals essential to the manufacture of heroin from morphine base. Surveillance of the laboratory operators following their purchase of this chemical led to the location of the laboratory.

964 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

▲ photograph taken inside the villa at the time the raids and arrests were effected by the French police. Inside is observed laboratory equipment and defendants, Ansaldo, Maysson, and Franchi.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 965

Photograph of Villa Castelran located at Montgeron, France, in the vicinity of Paris, site of a clandestine laboratory where heroin was manufactured from morphine base. The villa was raided by the French police following a prolonged investigation of Marius Ansaldi and his associates.

966 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

In the attic of the Villa Castelran there were special compartments used for secreting the manufactured heroin or morphine base. Such a compartment was exposed and appears in this photograph.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 967

Photograph at Villa Castelran of a dust mask. This must be used by laboratory operators who handle and package the heroin and morphine base, as handling causes small particles of the drug to appear in the air breathed in by the operators as dust. Prolonged inhalation of this dust might well cause addiction and the operator is protected against this by using such a mask.

968 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Additional laboratory equipment and chemicals photographed inside the Villa Castelran during the raid.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 969

Makeshift gas outlets supplying burners and heating elements used in the chemical operation at Villa Castelran during the raid.

EXHIBIT No. 2C

SETTIMO ACCARDO

Aliases: Sam Accardi, Big Sam, Giuseppe Accarobi.

Description: Born on October 23, 1902, in Vita, Sicily, 5 feet 9½ inches, 200 pounds, brown eyes, heavy build, black hair graying and receding.

Localities frequented: Family resides at 188 Franklin Street, in Bloomfield, N.J., he is currently (1959) a fugitive for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Family background: Married to Teresa Menio; has 3 sons, Salvatore, Carmine and Joseph; parents (dead) were Salvatore and Francesca Avila, sister: Pietra and brothers: Joseph and Frank (dead).

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Tom and Charles Campisi, Carmine Locascio, Joe Doto, Frank Costello, Tony Corallo, Tony Strollo, Cristoforo Rubino (dead) and all top Mafia leaders in New York and New Jersey.

Criminal history: FBI No. 683907, Newark Police Department No. 17577; arrests since 1928 include atrocious assault and battery, violation Federal narcotic laws (1955), is fugitive in this case, having jumped $92,500 bond.

Business: Was engaged in real estate and building construction in Newark, N.J., area.

Modus operandi: A very important top echelon Mafia leader from Newark area, who was engaged in international narcotic trafficking.

VITO AGUECI

Alias: None.

Description: Born on July 27, 1920, at Salemi, Trapani, Italy; 5 feet 5 inches; 154 pounds; black hair; brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Residence: 282 Westmoreland Avenue, Toronto, Canada.

Criminal associates: Albert Valenti, Albert Agueci, Rocco Scopellegtti.

970 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal history: Arrested on May 25, 1961, in Toronto, Canada, for conspiracy to traffic in narcotics; arrested on July 20, 1961, in New York City, for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Engaged in the smuggling of narcotics from Italy to Canada. With his brother and associates arrange for the eventual illegal sale and transporting of narcotics to wholesalers in the United States.

Agencies familiar with individual: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Metropolitan Police of Toronto, Canada. FBI No. 889944D, U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, N.Y.: S 10795, Metropolitan Police, Toronto, Canada, No. 1716/61.

FILIPPO AMARI

Aliases: Big Phil, Philip Amari.

Description: Born on December 16, 1899, in Ribera, Agrigento, Sicily, 6 feet, 200 pounds, stocky build, gray hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Formerly resided at 15 Q Betty Anne Drive, Raritan Township, N.J., now reported to be Ribera, Sicily. Passport lists permanent address as Mount Pleasant Road, Edison, N.J. Frequents Elizabeth, N.J., Newark, N.J., New York, N.Y., and Miami, Fla.

Family background: Married Maria Masapolli; daughters; Carmela, Confortino, and Sara; father, Giuseppe; mother, Carmela Truncale.

Criminal associates: Anthony Larasso, Frank Majuri, Emmanuel Riggi.

Criminal history: No known criminal record.

Business: Claims to own liquor store in New Jersey. Active in construction union activities.

Modus operandi: Important Mafia figure who backs Union County, N.J., gambling activities and through his union connections obtains employment for legal and illegal immigrants.

JEAN JOSEPH ANDREANI

Alias: Pio.

Description: Born on May 5, 1897, at Olmeta, Corsica, France; 5 feet, 9 inches; 170 pounds; gray hair (balding).

Localities frequented: Residence, 383 rue de Verdum, Le Havre, France. Frequents bars in Le Havre and Paris, France.

Criminal associates: Jean-Baptiste Peretti, Klevoulos Vafiadis, Thomas Hoag, Dan Martin, Charles Vincileoni, Auguste Paffenhoff, Antoine Coves, Albert D'Agostino, Albert Bistoni, Paul Mondoloni, Roger Coudert, Jean-Baptiste Croce.

Criminal history: Was convicted of violating the narcotic laws in France.

Modus operandi: Before World War II, he acted as a middleman for the international narcotic traffickers of Europe and the United States. It is believed he still operates in this capacity.

Agencies familiar with individual: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, French Police Judiciaire, Paris Prefecture of Police, French Surete Nationale.

MARIUS JACQUES ANSALDI

Aliases: None.

Description: Born on September 9, 1901, in Toulon, France; French citizen.

Localities frequented: Resides 8 Alle de L'Alma, Perreux, Seine, France. Frequents hotel California, Cafe Murat, San Francisco Restaurant and Carol Club all in Paris, France.

Family background: Married Jeanne Masson; no children; father, Pierre; mother, Dominique Delfino.

Criminal associates: In the United States, Usche Gleb, Salvatore Shillitani, Nathan Behrman, and Joseph Orsini; in Europe, Dominique Reissant, Dominique Baldini, Antoine Bergeret, Marius Reversac.

Criminal history: Never in the United States. In 1953 was sentenced to 4 years imprisonment and 1 million francs fine for operating a clandestine heroin laboratory in Paris, France. Appealed sentence, but lost and started serving on February 6, 1957.

Business: When gainfully employed, works as a wine broker.

Modus operandi: Large scale illicit heroin manufacturing laboratory operator. Supplies heroin to Mafia and other racketeers. Was the prime source for the Gelb-Behrman and Orsini-Shillitani organizations.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 971

GHEO BACCARANI

Aliases: Georgia Baccarani, Remo.

Description: Born in Laliera, Italy, on December 17, 1910; 5 feet, 11 inches; 185 pounds; brown eyes; gray hair; fair complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides at Largo Corsica No. 8, Modena, Italy. Owns the SICFA Chemical Co., Via della Zecca No. 1, Bologna, Italy, and a warehouse at Via Fallopia No. 22, Modena, Italy. He also frequents principal cities in Italy.

Criminal associates: Egidio Calascibetta, Armando Lodi, Cesare Melli, Guglielmo Ponomo, Richardo Morganti, Anacleto Facchini, Matteo Carpinetti, Dr. Georgia Aite, and Alarcio Valle.

Criminal history: On October 9, 1950, was arrested in Modena, Italy, for violation of narcotic laws. He was sentenced on November 26, 1952, in Trieste to a prison term of 2 years, 2 months.

Modus operandi: A pharmacist who operates a laboratory and supply house from which narcotics may be diverted to illicit channels.

Agencies familiar with individual: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, Criminal Investigation Division of the U.S. Army and Interpol.

VITO BADALAMENTI

Aliases: None.

Description: Born on September 16, 1913, in Cinisi, Sicily, Italy.

Localities frequented: Resides at Via Salvatore Badalamenti No. 24, Cinisi, Sicily, Italy. Frequents Palermo, Partinico, Alcamo, Trapani, Montelebre, and other Mafia strongholds in Sicily.

Family background: Father, Vito; mother, Giuseppa Spitaleri; brothers, Gaetano, Giuseppe (deceased); cousin, Cesare Badalamenti.

Criminal associates: Gaetano Badalamenti, Cesare Badalamenti, Silvestro Carollo, Procopio DiMaggio, Giuseppe Indelicato, Vencenzo Bello, Vincenzo Carollo, Calcedonio di Pisa, Giuseppe Spataro.

Criminal history: No known criminal record.

Business: Farmer.

Modus operandi: He and other members of his family are the ruling members of the Mafia in Cinisi dealing in narcotics and black market cigarettes and enforcing Mafia decrees regarding the control of the fruit and produce markets in the provinces of Palermo and Trapani.

UGO BALZARINI

Aliases: None.

Description: Born on January 7, 1903, in Milan, Italy, 5 feet 4 inches, 160 pounds, brown hair, balding, brown eyes, medium build, light complexion.

Localities frequented: Resided at Via Giulio Romano No. 15, Milan, Italy. Frequented Rome, San Remo, Genoa, and other cities in Italy.

Family background: Father, Pietro; mother, Ester Negri.

Criminal associates: Emilio Dicintio, Giovanni Barilla, Armando Fiume, Luigi Bicchieri, Augustine Giraud.

Criminal history: Has been arrested for trafficking in narcotics.

Business: No legitimate occupation known.

Modus operandi: With other Mafiosi he conducted a large-scale narcotic traffic in Italy, obtaining the narcotics from French violators which was in turn sold to trusted U.S. customers.

GIOVANNI BARILLA

Aliases: None.

Description: Born on October 21, 1910, in Archi, Reggio Calabria, Italy, 5 feet 9 inches, 175 pounds, brown eyes, brown hair graying, medium build, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resided at Via Nazionale, Reggio Calabria, frequented the cities of Milan, San Remo, Naples, Rome, Genoa, in Italy.

Family background: Father, Giuseppe; mother, Margherita Saracemo.

Criminal associates: Emilio Dicintio, Augustine Giraud, Armando Fiume, Luigi Bicchieri, Ugo Balzarini.

Criminal history: Has been arrested for trafficking in narcotics.

Business: Wholesale fruit and vegetable dealer.

972 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Modus operandi: Part of a Mafia group which conducted a large-scale narcotic traffic in Italy, obtaining same from French violators and disposing of it to trusted U.S. customers.

ENZO BERTI

Aliases: None.

Description: Born on August 7, 1918, in Pisa, Italy; 5 feet 9 inches, 180 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes.

Localities: At present in prison in Switzerland (1960).

Family background: Wife, Maria Giannullo; mother, Bruna Macchia; father, Luigi Enrico.

Criminal associates: Costantino Gamba, Francesco Saverino, Francesco Pirico, Hans Schlegel, Otto Herrmann, Salvatore Caneba, Ugo Caneba, Armando Fiume, Mehmed Hattatoglu.

Criminal history: In 1958 convicted of narcotic trafficking in Switzerland.

Business: Merchant; doctors degree in philosophy.

Modus operandi: Together with Costantino Gamba, purchased morphine base from Turkish violators and converted same to heroin. This heroin was sold to Pirico and Saverino who then resold it to traffickers in the United States. Gamba and Berti were two of the largest clandestine laboratory operators in Europe.

JOSEPH BIONDO

Aliases: "J.B.," Joe Bionda, "Little Rabbit," Joe Banti, Joe Bondi.

Description: Born on April 16, 1897, in Barcellona, Sicily; 5 feet 4 inches, 150 pounds, brown eyes, brown-gray hair, naturalized.

Localities frequented: Resides 77-12 35th Avenue in Jackson Heights, Queens, N.Y. Has summer home at Long Beach, Long Island, frequents area East 11th Street and 1st Avenue in Manhattan, and makes trips to Italy.

Family background: Married to Louise Volpe; brother, John, has a nephew, Vincent Manfredi.

Criminal associates: Eduardo Aronica, Frank Costello, Vito Genovese, Steve Armone, Thomas Lucchese, Andrew Alberti, Lucky Luciano, Joe Doto, and Nicola Gentile.

Criminal history: FBI No. 62666. New York City Police Department B No. 50466. Arrests since 1919 include drugs, homicide, revolver, extortion.

Business: Is vice president of See-Boro Forwarding Co., Inc., Queens, N.Y., and operates a real estate office at 84 Oswego Avenue in Long Beach, Long Island, N.Y.

Modus operandi: An international drug trafficker who is up among the higher echelon members of the Mafia in New York City.

ANSAN ALBERT BISTONI

Aliases: Monsieur Albert, Aga Khan, Albert Bistoni, Joseph Bistoni.

Description: Born on November 21, 1911, in Marseilles, France. Corsican descent, 5 feet 7¼ inches, 175 pounds, dark brown hair, pale eyes.

Localities frequented: Sometimes resides 35 Rue Victor Masse, Paris, and sometimes with mother at Marseilles. Frequents Bar Villa D'Esaste and Bar Washington, Paris, also Cuba, Mexico, and Canada.

Family background: Father: Attilion; mother: Ida Buonchristiani; mistress: Simone Prevost.

Criminal associates: Roger Coudert, Paul Mondoloni, Jean Baptiste Croce, Antoine Calliano, Cotroni brothers of Montreal, Canada.

Criminal history: Interpol Secretariat file No. 841/52. Arrested three times for narcotic trafficking. In 1956 convicted of narcotic trafficking and sentenced to 3 years imprisonment and 5 years restricted residence.

Business: Believed to have interests in the "Eve", "Cupidon" and "Pigalle" night clubs, all in Havana, Cuba.

Modus operandi: Head of a large narcotic trafficking organization which smuggles morphine base into France and converts it to heroin, which is sent over to the United States and Canada. Supplies several Mafia narcotic distributing organizations.

JOSEPH BONANNO

Aliases: Joe Bananas, Joe Bononno, Joe Bonnano, Joe Bouventre.

Description: Born January 18, 1905, Castellammare, Sicily, 5 feet 9 inches, 190 pounds, brown eyes, brown-gray hair, naturalized May 17, 1945, Brooklyn, N.Y.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 973

Localities frequented: Resides 1847 East Elm Street, Tucson, Ariz. Travels extensively about the United States and makes frequent trips to Italy.

Family background: Married Filippa LaBruzzo; daughter, Catherine; sons, Salvatore (married to Rosalie Profaci, niece of Giuseppe Profaci) and Joseph: father, Salvatore; mother, Catherine Bouventre; both parents deceased.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Francisco Costiglia, Giuseppe Profaci, Anthony Corallo, Thomas Lucchese, Carmine Galante.

Criminal history: FBI No. 2534540; NYCPD No. B-85172; I. & N.S. No. C-6602167. Record dating from 1930 includes arrests for grand larceny, possession of gun, transportation of machineguns, obstruction of justice.

Business: Has interests in Grande Cheese Co., Fond du Lac, Wis.; Alliance Realty & Insurance, Tucson, Ariz; and Brunswick Laundry Service, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Modus operandi: Attended 1957 Apalachin Mafia meeting and Binghamton (N.Y.) meeting in 1956. One of the most important Mafia leaders in United States and attends all top-level Mafia meetings. Makes trips to Italy to confer with Mafia leaders there and to negotiate for international narcotic trafficking. Heads the Joseph Bonanno organization in Brooklyn, N.Y.; one of the five principal criminal syndicates in New York City.

GIOVANNI BONVENTRE

Aliases: John Bonventra, Giuseppe Bonanno, Joe Bonventre, John Bonaventure.

Description: Born on April 18, 1901, in Castellammare, Sicily; 5 feet 5 inches, 180 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, naturalized on August 6, 1946, in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Localities frequented: Resides 115 Cleveland Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequents restaurant-bars at 180 Forsythe Street in New York City, 141 Central Avenue and 273 Central Avenue, both in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Family background: Married to Caterina Vitale: brothers, Antonio, Pietro, Ignazio; father, Martino; mother, Carmela Magaddino (both dead).

Criminal associates: Carmine Galante, James Zoleo, Frank Garafolo, Robert Dionisio, Frank Costello, Tom Lucchese, Lucky Luciano, Santo Sorge.

Criminal history: FBI No. 828984C; NYCPD No. B-215124; I. & N.S. No. 3301772. Arrests since 1943 include kidnaping and burglary, endangering health of a child.

Business: Has interests in Levine & Bonventre (ladies coat contractors) 91 Eastern Parkway and Green Garden Cafe, 141 Central Avenue, both in Brooklyn.

Modus operandi: Attended Binghamton Mafia meeting in 1956 and Apalachin Mafia meeting in 1957. With both his nephew Joe Bonanno and Joe Profaci, he is one of the heads of the Mafia in the United States.

PHILIP BUCCOLA

Aliases: Philip Bucollo, Phil Bucalo, Filippo Bruccola.

Description: Born on August 6, 1886, in Palermo, Sicily; 5 feet 7 inches, 167 pounds, medium build, brown-gray hair, brown eyes, dark complexion; naturalized in Boston, Mass., in 1927. Holds American passport No. 31902 as Filippo Bruccola.

Localities frequented: Resides Axienda Agricola, Sicilone, Via Magni 9, Pallavecino, Palermo, Sicily. When in Boston frequents Giro's Cafe and the European Restaurant.

Family background: Father, Vincent; mother, Nina Blandino (both dead), married to Rosena McDonough, has nephew, Joseph Buccola, and wife's nephew, Richard Hogan, are both pinball machine operators in Boston.

Criminal associates: Salvatore Lucania, Joseph Doto, Frank Cucchiara, Raymond Patriarca, Henry Selvitelli, John Guglielmo, Albert Santaniello, Joseph Lombardi, and all top-ranking hoodlums in the Boston area.

Criminal history: FBI No. 847638, Massachusetts State Police No. 138536. Was first arrested in 1923 for carrying a loaded weapon and paid $100 fine. Additional arrests for gambling and suspicion of murder.

Business: Owns shares Revere dogtrack and has money invested in the Hotel Bostonian.

Modus operandi: Went to Sicily in 1954. In Boston was the head of the New England Mafia. He came to Boston 2 weeks before the Apalachin meeting in 1957. Returned to Sicily shortly thereafter.

974 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

ANGELO BUIA

Aliases: Frenchie, Angelo Russo.

Description: Born on July 26, 1910, in Nice, France, of Italian parents; became an American citizen through the naturalization of his father; 5 feet 7 inches, 166 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair, dark complexion, neat dresser.

Localities frequented: Resided at 719 Lexington Avenue in New York City; frequented Greenwich Village area and Lower East Side of New York City.

Family background: Married to Mary McAvoy; father, Nicholas; mother, Amelia Buia; brother, Matildo.

Criminal associates: John Stoppelli, Aniello Santagata, Sam Accardi, Thomas and Charles Campisi, Matildo Buia (brother).

Criminal history: FBI No. 1641962, NYCPD No. B-125444. Arrest record dates back to 1934; two convictions for violation of Federal narcotic laws, in connection with one of which he is currently (1959) serving a term of 7 years in Federal prison.

Business: Machinist.

Modus operandi: He and his brother, Matildo, are members of the Accardi-Campisi Mafia organization and distribute heroin in kilogram lots.

FRANK BORELLI

Aliases: Frankie Gooks, Frank the Hawk.

Description: Born on June 19, 1925, in New York City; 5 feet 9 inches, 180 pounds, with black hair (thinning), and brown eyes, wears glasses with thick lenses, is a very dapper dresser.

Localities frequented: Frequents the East Harlem section of New York City, and spends some time in Chicago, Ill., resides with his wife at 2042 Second Avenue, Apartment No. 4 in New York City.

Family background: Is married to Mary DeGeorge, daughter of Angelo DeGeorge, a convicted East Harlem narcotic violator; his brother-in-law, Mario Colucci, is also a convicted narcotic violator.

Criminal associates: Charles Curcio, Joe Bendenelli, Rocco Maszie, Nick Tolentino, all narcotic traffickers and racketeers in East Harlem area in New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 3902235, NCYPD No. B-206594, includes arrests for assault and robbery, burglary, and violation of State and Federal narcotic laws.

Business: None at present.

Modus operandi: Wholesale trafficker in heroin to associates in New York, Chicago, Ill., and Cleveland, Ohio, and trusted member of the Mafia from East Harlem in the New York City area.

EGIDIO CALASCIBETTA

Aliases: None.

Description: Born on February 10, 1898, in Alimena, Palermo, Sicily, 5 feet 9 inches, 180 pounds, brown eyes, brown hair (graying), dark complexion, wears tinted glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides Via Vittoria Pisani No. 12 Milan, Italy. Travels to Naples, Torino, Trieste, and Rome, Italy.

Family background: Father, Pietro; mother, Lucia D'Amico.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Joseph Biondo, Joe Pici, Francesco Pirico, Francesco Paolo Coppola.

Criminal history: Never in the United States. Record in Italy, dating from 1931 includes arrests for bankruptcy and criminal use of rubber stamps, tobacco smuggling, fraud, forgery, and narcotic law violation.

Business: An important business man who, with Prof. Guglielmo Bonomo, owned Sace, a chemical corporation in Milan. Also headed an organization which included at least six pharmaceutical companies.

Modus operandi: Was responsible for the diversion of 716 kilograms of heroin from the Schiapparelli Co., to the Lucky Luciano mob which then smuggled it into the United States. He has continued close association with the Luciano mob and is, therefore, still a strong threat in the narcotic traffic.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 975

CHARLES CAMPISI

Aliases: Campi, Charles Campise.

Description: Born on October 16, 1912, in Newark, N.J., 5 feet 4 inches, 160 pounds, brown hair, gray eyes, stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides 118 Tuxedo Parkway, Newark, N.J. Frequents Atlantic City and Ventnor, N.J., and Miami, Fla.

Family background: Father, Pietro; mother, Fortunata Longo; wife, Rose; children, Peter, Mrs. Lois Sanitate; brothers, Tom, Gus, Salvatore, Biagio, Louis, and Anthony.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Tom (brother), Sam Accardi, Vito Genovese, and other well-known Mafia members in Newark, N.J., area.

Criminal history: FBI No. 652456; Newark, N.J., PD No. 17122. Arrests since 1932 include carnal abuse, grand larceny, aggravated assault, Federal liquor laws, and conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate business known.

Modus operandi: With brother Tom was one of the top echelon operators in the Mafia narcotic smuggling and distributing organization headed by Sam Accardi. One of the top hoodlums in the northern New Jersey area.

THOMAS CAMPISI

Aliases: Gasparo Campisi, Albert Campi, Thomas Campe, Tom Campise.

Description: Born on May 12, 1911, in Newark, N.J., 5 feet 4 inches, 185 pounds, gray eyes, wavy light brown hair, stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides 265 14th Ave., Newark, N.J. Frequents major race tracks in New York City, Atlantic City, and Miami.

Family background: Father, Pietro; mother, Fortunata Longo; wife, Christine; children, Fay, Lois, Connie, Peter, Thomas, Jr.; brothers, Gus, Charles, Salvatore, Biagio, Louis, Tony.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Sam Accardi, Joe Doto, Vito Genovese, George Scalise, Frank Borelli, Vincent Carrao.

Criminal history: FBI No. 148998; Newark, N.J. PD No. 19658. Arrests since 1928 include assault, kidnaping, liquor laws, and conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate business known.

Modus operandi: A leader in the Mafia narcotic smuggling and distributing organization headed by Sam Accardi of Newark, N.J., with his brother Charles is considered one of top hoodlums in northern New Jersey area.

UGO CANEBA

Aliases: None.

Description: Born on March 18, 1910, in Palermo, Sicily, Italy, 5 feet 4 inches, 140 pounds, brown eyes, brown hair, balding, dark complexion, medium build, skin discoloration right temple.

Localities frequented: Resides via Priscioan No. 69, Rome, Italy. Frequently travels to Palermo and Milan, Italy.

Family background: Married; father, Giuseppe; mother, Marianna Ania (sister of the late Pasquale Ania the former head of the Mafia in Italy); brothers, Salvatore, Giosue, and Giovanni.

Criminal associates: William Lo Cascio, Lucky Luciano, Serafino Mancuso, Rosario Mancino, Frank Locicero, Sorci brothers.

Criminal history: No FBI number. Arrested in Italy in 1955 for traffic in contraband and in 1957 in connection with the Berti-Gamba narcotic case.

Business: Claims to be in the finance and loan business.

Modus operandi: Prominent Mafioso. Was the Italian agent for his brother, Salvatore Caneba, while the latter was in the United States. Now in partnership with his brother. Purchases pure heroin from Corsican gangsters in France and ships it to customers in the United States.

SALVATORE CANEBA

Aliases: Toto, John Sperandeo.

Description: Born on October 24, 1901, in Palermo, Sicily, 5 feet 6 inches, 180 pounds, heavy build, black-graying hair, balding, brown eyes; poor English, fluent Italian-French.

976 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Localities frequented: Resides via Priscioan No. 69, Rome, Italy. Frequently travels to Palermo and Milan, Italy, also Germany, France, and Switzerland. Before deportation resided 3425 89th Street, Jackson Heights, N.Y., and frequented vicinities of First Avenue and 11th Street, Second Avenue and 106th Street in New York City.

Family background: Married Irene Pluber (last reported living in New York City with their son); father, Giuseppe; mother, Marianna Ania (sister of the late Pasquale Ania former head of Mafia in Italy); brothers, Giosue, Giovanni, and Ugo.

Criminal associates: William Lo Cascio, Samuel Kass, Peter Kourakis, Sorci brothers (Palermo), Rosario Mancini, Francois Paoleschi, Lucky Luciano, and Ugo Caneba (brother).

Criminal history: FBI No. 611860B. European record dates from 1918 and includes arrests for theft, criminal conspiracy, armed assault, receiving, etc., in Italy and France. Expelled from France in 1936. Record in the United States dates from 1950 and includes arrests for violation of immigration and Federal narcotic laws; deported from the United States in 1954.

Business: Claims to be in finance and loan business.

Modus operandi: A prominent Mafia member. One of the largest narcotic smugglers and wholesale dealer in Italy, in partnership with his brother Ugo, purchases pure heroin from major Corsican gangsters in Marseilles and Paris, France, and ships it to customers in the United States.

MATTEO CARPINETTI

Aliases: Matteo Carpinetti. Matteo Gabrosek.

Description: Born in Trieste, Italy, on June 15, 1899; 5 feet 6 inches; 165 pounds; brown eyes; gray hair; dark complexion; scar under right nostril; skin spotted.

Localities frequented: Resides at Via dei Fabbri, Trieste, Italy. Frequents Caffee "Espresso" and Fabbri of Trieste; Genoa; Padua; Milan; Turin; and other cities in Italy.

Criminal associates: Gheo Baccarani; Ricardo Morganti; Cesare Melli; Teodoro Dutti; Georgio Negrim; Ital Santoro; Carlo Trost.

Criminal history: Several arrests since 1924 in Vienna and Trieste on charges of smuggling narcotics. Apprehended on October 6, 1950, for selling narcotics. Sentenced on November 26, 1952, to serve a term of imprisonment of 5 years and to pay a fine of 50,000 lire.

Modus operandi: Large-scale smuggler of narcotics into Italy from other European and Middle East countries and arranges for the smuggling of drugs into the United States through the use of merchant seamen.

Agencies familiar with individual: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division, Interpol.

FRANK CARUSO

Aliases: Frankie the Bug, Frank Russo, Frank Ross, Frank Campo.

Description: Born on February 18, 1911, in New York City, 5 feet 7 inches, 190 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, heavy build.

Localities frequented: Resides 1579 81st Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequents area of Hester and Mulberry Streets, and Greenwich Village section, both in Manhattan.

Family background: Married to Josephine Oddo; son, Frank, Jr.; daughter, Mrs. Josephine Anne Morrongiello; father, Frank (dead); mother, Josephine; sister, Nancy; brothers, Joseph and Theodore.

Criminal associates: Tony Strollo, Phil Albanese, Joe Marone, John Ormento, Saro Mogavero, Tom Lucchese, George Nobile—all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 187656. New York City Police Department B No. 73604. Arrests since 1928 include robbery, assault, extortion, conviction for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Has interests in New York Carting Co., 643 East 13th Street and Pygmalion Restaurant, both in Manhattan.

Modus operandi: A trusted Mafia leader in the Tony Strollo organization and a wholesale narcotic trafficker.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 977

ANTHONY CASTALDI

Aliases: T. H., Tony Higgins, Tony Bones.

Description: Born on January 27, 1913, in New York City, 5 feet 10 inches, 219 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides 15 Princeton Avenue, Yonkers, N.Y. Frequents Jennie's Restaurant at 2036 Second Avenue, and midtown bars, and racetracks; all of New York City.

Family background: Wife, Jean Penosi (sister of Guido); sons, William and Andrew; father, Andrew; mother, Philomena DeLorenzo; brothers, John N., Lewis, James and Samuel; sisters, Mrs. Lillie DePalma, Mrs. Sadie Blumetti, Mrs. Rose Ciccone.

Criminal associates: Anthony Strollo, John Ormento, Salvatore Santoro, John Stoppelli, Vincent Mauro, Vincent Squillante, Sam Kass, Carmine and Pete Locascio, Anthony Ciccone, Guido Penosi.

Criminal history: FBI No. 546748; New York City Police Department No. B 101443. Arrests since 1932 include assault, robbery, extortion, robbery-gun, and Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Has interests in Jennie's Restaurant at 2036 Second Avenue, in New York City, and also in real estate in East Harlem area.

Modus operandi: One of the most active Mafia leaders in East Harlem area of Manhattan. A major interstate narcotic trafficker and close associate of most Mafia members in East Harlem area.

ANTHONY CICCONE

Aliases: Tony Moon.

Description: Born on July 18, 1918, in New York City, 5 feet 9 inches, 170 pounds, medium build, black hair, brown eyes, 2-inch scar on left cheek, 3-inch scar on left temple.

Localities frequented: Frequents Joe's Bar, 2062 First Avenue, Mickey Walkers, 1654 Broadway in New York City, present address 11 Center Drive, Whitestone, L.I., N.Y.

Family background: Married to sister of Anthony Castaldi, has two brothers, Salvatore and Joseph; sisters, Anna and Margaret; father, Sebastian; mother, Gelsamina Piccola.

Criminal associates: Anthony Castaldi, Salvatore Santora, John Ormento, Rocco Mazzie, Salvatore LoProto, Patsy Moccio, Vincent Mauro, and other of the East Harlem racketeers.

Criminal history: FBI No. 2526415; New York City Police Department No. B172419, includes arrests and convictions for violation of State and Federal narcotic laws, beginning in 1941.

Business: Employed in Fruit Exchange, 1981 First Avenue, in New York City.

Modus operandi: Is closely associated with most important Mafia narcotic traffickers in the New York City area, has large sources of supply and sells wholesale quantities of heroin into local and interstate traffic.

BENEDETTO F. CINQUEGRANA

Aliases: Vincent Grandi, Radio Red, Benedetto DiPalo, Chink.

Description: Born on January 6, 1913, in New York City, 5 feet 6 inches, 175 pounds, brown eyes, light brown hair, light complexion, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides at 166 Mulberry Street in New York City. Frequents Mulberry and Grand Streets (little Italy area) of Manhattan.

Family background: Married to Lucy DiPalo; son, Louis; daughter, Concetta; brother, Anthony; parents, Luigi and Concetta (both born in Italy).

Criminal associates: Frank Caruso, Philip Albanese, Patsy Polimena, Matthew Palmieri, Joe Marone, Tom Lucchese, John Ardito, Edward Shapiro, all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 444281; New York City Police Department B No. 93715. Arrests since 1932 include assault and robbery, criminally receiving stolen property, conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Partner in operation of Roma Cafe & Bakery, 385 Broome Street, in New York City.

Modus operandi: A major wholesale dealer in narcotics both local and interstate. Is a trusted associate of Mafia traffickers from whom he obtains his supply of narcotics.

978 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

FRANCISCO COSTIGLIA

Aliases: Francisco Castiglia, Frank Costello, Frank Saverio, Saveria.

Description: Born on January 26, 1893, in Calabria, Italy, 5 feet 7 inches, 155 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair, naturalized in New York City on September 10, 1925.

Localities frequented: Resides 115 Central Park West, apartment 18F, in New York City and has summer home at Sands Point, Long Island; frequents the Biltmore and Waldorf-Astoria hotels and most expensive nightclubs in Manhattan.

Family background: Married to Loretta Geigerman, have no children; father, Luigi; mother, Mary Sevarrio Aloisa; brother, Edward; sister, Marcellina.

Criminal associates: Michele Miranda, Giuseppe Profaci, Vito Genovese, Frank Erichsen, Phil Kastel, and almost every important racketeer in the United States; Giuseppe Doto, Lucky Luciano, Francesco P. Coppola, of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 936217; New York City Police Department No. B-38412. Arrests since 1908 include assault and robbery, concealed weapon, conspiracy, contempt, income tax evasion, deportation proceedings currently pending.

Business: President of 79 Wall Street Corp., and has numerous other interests in valuable real estate and nightclubs in New York City and elsewhere.

Modus operandi: One of the most influential and powerful Mafia leaders in the United States. He is one of the controlling factors in all types of commercial vice throughout the United States.

ANTOINE CORDOLIANI

Aliases: Cordolerini, Cordelliano.

Description: Born on February 22, 1890, in Brando, Corsica, France. French citizen, 5 feet 6 inches, 150 pounds, gray hair, balding.

Localities frequented: Resides 150B Rue Paradis, Marseilles, France. Frequent bars "La Daurade," "Rue Fortia," and other bars frequented by the underworld in Marseilles.

Family background: Married; daughters, Marthe, and Mrs. Antoine Cinti; son, Emile; father, Barthelemy; mother, Catherine Causti; both parents deceased.

Criminal associates: Marius Aranci, Raoul Noel Battestini, Salvatore Mancuso.

Criminal history: Several arrests in France, dating back to the 1930's, including two narcotic trafficking convictions, 1938, and 1959.

Business: No legitimate occupation. Former merchant seaman.

Modus operandi: For the past 30 years or more has been supplying heroin to Mafia and other narcotic traffickers. In his early days, when employed as a seaman, he acted as courier for narcotics, but more recently he and his associates have operated their own laboratories for the conversion of morphine base to heroin.

GIUSEPPE COTRONI

Aliases: Pepe, Joe Catrone, Catroni.

Description: Born on February 22, 1920, in Reggio, Calabria, Italy, 5 feet 6½ inches, 200 pounds, brown eyes, brown hair balding on top.

Localities frequented: Resides 3615 Ridgewood Street, apartment 104, Montreal, Canada. Frequent Metropole Club, Bonfire Restaurant and Jacques Cartier Motel, all in Montreal, Canada. Also Vivere Lounge on 2d Avenue, and Hotel Edison and Hotel Lexington in New York City.

Family background: Single; father, Giuseppe; mother, Maria Rosa Micholletti; brothers, Vincent, Frank, Michael; sister, Mrs. Marguerite Luca.

Criminal associates: Vincent Cotroni, Rene Robert, Joe Coccolichio, Lucien Rivard, Peter Stepanof, of Montreal; Carmine Galante, Salvatore Giglio, Angelo Tuminaro, Anthony DiPasqua, Frank Moccardi, Frank Mari, of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 164790 D, RCMP No. 608. Arrests since 1937 include theft and receiving, theft by breaking into, theft with violence, possession of stolen bonds. Convicted in 1959 for violation of Canadian narcotic laws.

Business: Restaurant operator in Montreal, Canada.

Modus operandi: Head of the largest and most notorious narcotic syndicate on the North American Continent. A supplier of major Mafia traffickers in the United States. Has direct French-Corsican sources of supply. Is a terrorist and vicious hoodlum in the Montreal area.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 979

FRANCESCO PAOLO COPPOLA

Aliases: Frank Coppola, Jim Barbero, Frank Loicono, Angelo Vota, Frank Lomonde, Don Ciccio.

Description: Born on October 6, 1899, in Partinico, Sicily, 5 feet 2 inches, 150 pounds, blue eyes, brown-gray hair, ring and little fingers of left hand amputated.

Localities frequented: Resides Localita San Lorenzo, Ardea, Rome, Italy, also in Partinico, Sicily. Has resided in Detroit, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Rock Island, Ill., also in Mexico. Deported from the United States on January 9, 1948.

Family background: Wife, Leonarda Chimenti; daughter, Pietra; father, Francesco; mother, Pietra Loicano; son-in-law, Giuseppe Corso, Jr.; Fay Tavo-lacci, his ex-mistress lives in Detroit, Mich.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Phil Kastel, Carlos Marcello, Sylvestro Carollo, Giuseppe Mangiapane, Giuseppe Corso, Sr.

Criminal history: FBI No. 549933. Suspect in several Mafia murders, fled from Sicily in 1926 to avoid prosecution. Record in the United States dates from 1931 and includes arrests for murder and bootlegging. Narcotic convictions in the United States and Italy.

Business: Claims to be a farmer and exporter-importer. Still receives money from illicit interests in the United States.

Modus operandi: Dangerous criminal and killer. In the narcotic traffic for many years and an important link in the international narcotic traffic. High Mafia leader who hears grievances, then orders restitution or assassination.

ROGER ANTOINE COUDERT

Aliases: Charles Conte, Paul Brown, Joseph Mireault, Roy Roger, Roger Davis, Pierre Arnault.

Description: Born on August 23, 1895, in Cognac, Charente, France. French citizen, 6 feet 2 inches, 189 pounds, gray hair, hazel eyes, ruddy complexion, burn scars about upper lip.

Localities frequented: Since 1954 incarcerated at Federal penitentiary in Atlanta, Ga. Previously frequented French quarter of New York City and traveled between New York City, Canada, France, Mexico, and California.

Family background: Married Jessie Kenmuir; father, Alexandre; mother, Lucie Nexon; no known brothers or sisters.

Criminal associates: Antoine D'Agostino, Paul Mondoloni, Antonino Farina, Ansan Bistoni, Stephano D'Agostino, Cotroni brothers.

Criminal history: FBI No. 959779; New York City Police Department No. E32883. Record dating from 1911 includes arrests for theft, vagrancy, fraud, assault, desertion, procuring, and conspiracy; 1954 sentenced to 10 years and $16,000 fine for violation Federal narcotic laws. Currently (1960) incarcerated.

Business: Has operated several cafes in Montmartre section of Paris.

Modus operandi: Part of a large-scale narcotic smuggling organization which supplied huge quantities of heroin to Mafia racketeers in the United States and Canada.

ANTOINE D'AGOSTINO

Aliases: Michel Sisco, Louis Floris, Antoine Scarfoni, Alberto Blasis, Albert Dujardin, Lunettes.

Description: Born on December 8, 1914, in Bone, Algeria. French citizen, 5 feet 7 inches, 177 pounds, heavy build, dark-brown hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Marseilles, Paris, and Evreux, France; Montreal, Canada; frequents French restaurants in New York City and Mexico City, Mexico. Currently (1960) is incarcerated in Canada.

Family background: Married Suzanne Filleau; daughter, Michele Theresa; wife and daughter have taken on name of Filleau and reside in Mexico City; brothers, Albert and Stephen; father, Joseph; mother, Theresa Scarfoni. Both parents were born in Naples, Italy.

Criminal associates: Joseph Orsini, Carmelo Sansone, Francois Spirito, Paul Mondoloni, Marius Ansaldi, Salvatore Shillitani.

Criminal history: FBI No. 409989-A. Record dates back to 1935 with arrests in Algeria and France for theft and treason. Federal narcotic conviction in the United States and a narcotic conviction in Canada for which sentenced to 3 years in 1958.

980 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Business: No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: A persistent large-scale narcotic trafficker. Closely allied with top Mafia members of Europe and North America and has supplied them with huge amounts of heroin, gold, and stolen jewelry.

JOSEPH D'ERCOLE

Aliases: Joe Z, Josey, Joe Morelli, Josie Romano.

Description: Born on November 16, 1911, in New York City, 210 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair, medium complexion, hoarse voice.

Localities frequented: Resides at 428 East 116th Street, apartment No. 18 in New York City. Frequents Delightful Luncheonette in New York City.

Family background: Married Helen Morelli; daughter, Rose Zanfardino; father, Domenico; mother, Rosalia Emanuele; brothers, Anthony, Louis, and Ignazio (deceased in 1952); sisters, Mary Chionchio, Bessie Dorio, Virginia Derio, and Theresa Ivonelle.

Criminal associates: Joe Rao, Mike Coppola, Joe Bendenelli, Nicholas Tolentino, John Ardito, Anthony Criscuolo, Joseph Teresky, DeMartino brothers, Nicholas and Daniel Lessa.

Criminal history: FBI No. 373891; New York City Police Department No. B-82879. Arrests since 1930 include robbery, assault and robbery, grand larceny, Dyer Act, and convictions for the Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Employed as manager and bouncer, at Delightful Luncheonette, 116th Street and First Avenue in New York City.

Modus operandi: Is one of the controlling Mafia members in the East Harlem section of New York City. Engages in any type of illicit activity; mainly narcotic wholesaling and large-scale auto theft.

JOSEPH DI PALERMO

Aliases: Joe Beck, Joe Palmer, Joe Palmero, Joe De Palermo.

Description: Born June 8, 1907, New York City, 5 feet 6 inches, 120 pounds, slim build, brown eyes, light-brown hair, balding, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides at 246 Elizabeth Street, New York City. Frequented Lower East and West Sides of Manhattan also makes trips to Italy.

Family background: Married to Mary Cattone; son, John; daughter, Mrs. Sarah Florio; brothers, Peter, Tony, Charles (all with criminal records).

Criminal associates: Carmine Galante, Frank Carofolo, Santo Sorge, Vito Genovese, Joe Bonanno, Natale Evola, all of New York City, Cotroni brothers of Montreal.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1519166, New York City Police Department No. B-203135, arrests since 1925 include narcotics (State), homicide, convictions for violating Federal liquor laws and counterfeiting laws. Sentenced to 15 years on April 17, 1959, for violation of Federal narcotic laws. He and Carmine Galante suspected of 1943 murder of Carlo Tresca in New York City.

Business: Has never engaged in any legitimate business.

Modus operandi: A most vicious criminal, international drug trafficker, and an "enforcer" for the Mafia in New York City. Attended Binghamton, N.Y., meeting in 1956.

GIUSEPPE ANTONIO DOTO

Aliases: Joe Adonis, Joe DeMio, Joe Arrosa, Joe Arressa, "Doto," James Arrosa.

Description: Born on November 22, 1902, in Montemarano, Avellino, Naples, Italy, 5 feet 9½ inches, 175 pounds, brown eyes, dark-brown hair, graying. Voluntarily left the United States on January 3, 1956, for Italy while deportation proceedings still were pending against him.

Localities frequented: Resides at Via Albricci 2, Milano, Italy. Owns a villa at Lake Como, Italy. Frequents the better restaurants and nightclubs in Milan, also the Hotel Francia and Excelsior Gallia Palace in Milan.

Family background: Married Jean Montimorano; son, Joseph A. Doto, Jr.; daughters, Maria Dolores, Ann Marie, and Elizabeth; father, Michael; mother, Maria DeVito; brothers, Antonio, Ettore, and Genesisio.

Criminal associates: Willie Moretti, Albert Anastasia, Philip Mangano, Frank Scalice, all of whom died by violence, Lucky Luciano, Anthony Strollo, Meyer Lansky, John Bart Salvo, Vito Genovese.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 981

Criminal history: FBI No. 500203. New York City Police Department No. B-64766. Record dates from 1926 and includes arrests for grand larceny, robbery, liquor smuggling, carrying a concealed weapon, kidnaping, extortion, assault, and others.

Business: Numerous business enterprises in the United States, Haiti, and Italy.

Modus operandi: Powerful Mafia figure, became wealthy through bootlegging, gambling, and narcotic trafficking, then put money and Mafia tactics into legitimate and semilegitimate enterprises. American Mafiosi going to Italy contact Doto for advice and assistance. Also bring him large sums of money obtained from his enterprises in the United States.

MAX EDER

Alias: Little Maxie.

Description: Born June 14, 1908, South Bend, Ind., Jewish, 5 feet 6 inches, 145 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair, medium build, fair complexion, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides at 86 West 179th Street, Bronx, N.Y. Frequent New York and Florida racetracks, 107th Street and 1st Avenue, and Delancey Street area in New York City.

Family background: Married Elizabeth Turrett; no children; father, Morris; mother, Sarah Meinhardt (both deceased); brothers, Saul, Nathan, Sidney, and Cornelius; sister, Sylvia Eder (a call girl involved in the 1949 Minot Jelke trial).

Criminal associates: Frank Livorsi, Michael Coppola, Alfred Felice, Pasquale Erra, Joseph Bendenelli, Mickey Cohen.

Criminal history: FBI No. 236413; New York City Police Department No. 96691. Record dating from 1925 includes arrests for burglary, gambling, vehicular homicide, and Federal narcotics conviction.

Business: No legitimate occupation known.

Modus operandi: Though Jewish he has for many years been affiliated with and highly trusted by Mafia racketeers and narcotic traffickers in New York's East Harlem. Narcotic smuggler and wholesale distributor.

ANTONIO FARINA

Aliases: Nino, Antonio Farina Bono.

Description: Born on June 3, 1912, in Palermo, Sicily, 5 feet 9½ inches, 221 pounds, black hair (bald), brown eyes, heavy build, speaks only Italian, 4-inch scar on right side of face from ear to neck.

Localities frequented: Resided Via Antonio Scioscia No. 1, Palermo, Italy, until the middle of 1959 when he disappeared. He is suspected of having clandestinely emigrated to Canada, South America, or Mexico. Before 1953 arrest, resided Paseo De la Reforma No. 489, Mexico City, and traveled frequently to the United States. Present whereabouts unknown.

Family background: Wife: Rosa resides in Sicily with their four children, Gioia, Bina, Massimo and Elvira; in Mexico had paramour Lina D'Orlando DiBello; father: Antonio; mother: Lucia Bono.

Criminal associates: Roger Coudert, Antione D'Agostino, Paul Mondoloni, John Sperandeo, Antonio Sorci, Antoine Cordoleani, Giuseppe Provenzano, and Paolo Greco, all of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 525025B. USM NY No. C-1652-53. Arrested in 1953 for violation Federal narcotic laws, sentenced April 1954 to serve 5 years and fined $10,000. In Italy has arrests since 1928 for living off profits of prostitution, violence, carrying a knife, and fraud.

Business: Owns real estate in Sicily. In Mexico operated dry goods store.

Modus operandi: Important Mafia narcotic trafficker. Acts as middleman between French and Italian sources of supply and customers in the United States.

ARMANDO FIUME

Aliases: None.

Description: Born on July 7, 1907, in Villa San Giovanni, Reggio Calabria, Italy, 5 feet 6 inches, 165 pounds, brown hair, graying, brown eyes, medium build, light complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides at Via Petrella No. 8, Milan, Italy. Frequent Genoa, San Remo, Rome, and other cities in Italy.

982 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Family background: Father: Giuseppe; mother: Carolina Cimino.
Criminal associates: Enzo Berti, Lamberto Canini, Emilio Dicintio, Giovanni Barilla, Augustine Giraud, Piero Mantica.
Criminal history: Has been arrested for narcotic trafficking.
Business: Clothing salesman.
Modus operandi: Part of a Mafia group which obtained heroin from French sources and disposed it to trusted customers in the United States.

CARMINE GALANTE

Aliases: Camillo Galante, Carmine Calanti, Carmine Galento, Joseph Russell, Louis Volpe.

Description: Born February 21, 1910, in New York City, 5 feet 5 inches, 168 pounds, gray hair balding, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 274 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y., frequents south New Jersey area, Miami, and Montreal, also makes trips to Sicily.

Family background: Married to Helen Marullo; son: James; daughters: Camilla and Angela; brothers: Sam and Peter; sisters: Mrs. Angela Volpe, Mrs. Josephine Volpe.

Criminal associates: Frank Garofolo, Joe Di Palermo, Vito Genovese, Joe Bonanno, Joe Profaci, Meyer Lansky, all of New York City, Joe Cotroni and Lucien Rivard of Montreal, Canada.

Criminal history: FBI No. 119495, New York City Police Department No. B66994. Arrests since 1921 include juvenile delinquency, robbery, assault, homicide. Federal narcotic laws. With Joe Di Palermo as an accomplice, believed to have murdered Carlo Tresca in New York City (1943).

Business: Operates Rosina Costume Co., Brooklyn, N.Y., and Latamer Shipping Co., Manhattan.

Modus operandi: Attended Binghamton, N.Y., Mafia meeting in 1956. An extremely important figure in the international drug traffic, and a high ranking Mafia member engaged in terrorist activities. In 1956 he was top representative of American racketeering activities in Montreal.

Carmine Galante is the chief lieutenant of Joseph Bonanno who is the head of the Joseph Bonanno organization of Brooklyn, N.Y., which is one of the five principal criminal syndicates in New York City. Galante is currently serving a prison sentence in Federal prison resulting from his recent conviction in a narcotic conspiracy case in the southern district of New York.

CARLO GAMBINO

Aliases: Carlo Gambirino, Don Carlo.

Description: Born August 24, 1902, in Palermo, Sicily, an alien, 5 feet 7 inches, 200 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair.

Localities frequented: Resides at 2230 Ocean Parkway in Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequents Carroll Paper Products Co., and Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn, also Italian section of East Bronx, and Miami, Fla.

Family background: Married to his first cousin, Vincenza Castellana; son, Tom, married to Frances Lucchese (daughter of Tom Lucchese); father: Thomas; mother: Felicia Castellana; brother: Paolo; sister: Mrs. Giuseppina Giammona.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano and Santo Sorge (deportees), Tom Lucchese, Hugo Rossi, Paolo Gambino (brother), Jack Scarpulla, Meyer Lansky, Scalice brothers, all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 334450, New York City Police Department No. B128760; arrests from 1930 include larceny, Federal liquor laws, and violation I&NS laws.

Business: Owns Carroll Paper Products Co., in Brooklyn, N.Y. Is a member of S.G.S. Associates, a labor consultant firm in Manhattan.

Modus operandi: Attended Apalachin Mafia meeting in 1957 as one of the Mafia leaders from New York City. One of the most powerful Mafia leaders in the United States. With his brother Paolo has been involved in large-scale narcotic and alien smuggling.

FRANK GAROFOLO

Aliases: Frank Carroll, Frank Garafola, Frank Garofola.

Description: Born on September 10, 1891, in Castellammare, Sicily, naturalized on September 8, 1931, in New York City; 5 feet 7 inches; gray hair, brown eyes; wears glasses; distinguished looking.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 983

Localities frequented: Resides at 339 East 58th Street in New York City and Post Office Box 1370 in Merced, Calif.

Family background: Father, Vincent; mother, Caterina Cocco (both dead); brother, Vincent.

Criminal associates: Robert Dionisio, Joe DiPalermo, William Tocco, Tom Lucchese, all Mafia members who attended Apalachin Mafia meeting in 1957.

Criminal history: Believed to have ordered the murder of Carlo Tresca at New York City in 1943. Arrested in 1926 in New York City for bootlegging.

Business: Owner of High Grade Packing Co., in Merced, Calif.

Modus operandi: Attended Binghamton, N.Y., Mafia meeting in 1956; is one of the top-ranking Mafia in the United States and Sicily, and was considered an enforcer and executioner.

CONSTANTINO GAMBA

Aliases: None.

Description: Born on February 14, 1915, in Flumeri, Avellino, Italy; 5 feet 7 inches; 185 pounds; brown eyes, dark brown hair, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resided at Via Brocchi No. 3, Milan, Italy. Frequented Milan, Rome, Genova, Italy, and Zurich, Switzerland.

Family background: Father, Giuseppe; mother, Maria Grella.

Criminal associates: Francesco Pirico, Francesco Saverino, Dr. Enzo Berti, Hans Schlegel, Mehmed Hattatoglu.

Criminal history: Never in the United States. Record dates from 1950, when he was arrested in Italy for trafficking in narcotics. At present is a fugitive from Swiss justice for the violation of their narcotic laws.

Business: Owned a pharmaceutical laboratory in Milan, Italy.

Modus operandi: Together with Dr. Enzo Berti, purchased morphine base from Turkish violators and converted same to heroin. This heroin in turn was sold to Pirico and Saverino who then resold it to traffickers in the United States. Gamba and Berti were two of Europe's largest converters of morphine base to heroin.

USCHE GELB

Aliases: Solly Gordon, Saul Gelb, Kreisberg, King, Geld, Edward S. A. Jordon.

Description: Born on March 27, 1897, in Dembica, Austria. Jewish; 5 feet 7½ inches; 162 pounds; white hair, brown eyes; wears glasses; illegal alien.

Localities frequented: Resides 545 West End Avenue in New York City. Frequented Lafayette Street machinery center, midtown restaurants and clubs. Summer home in Tennesse Lake, N.Y.

Family background: Married Ethel Egan; father, Tobias Samuel Gelb; mother, Felger Krantz (both deceased); brother, Hyman; sisters, Mary, Belle, and Mrs. Bertha Sterza.

Criminal associates: Anthony Vellucci, Nathan Behrman, Jean Baruche, Joseph Orsini, Morris Taubman, Salvatore Shillitani.

Criminal history: FBI No. 35989; New York City Police Department No. B-53908. Record dates from 1913 and includes arrests for juvenile delinquency, disorderly conduct, felonious assault, dangerous weapon, perjury, stolen bonds, Federal narcotic conviction. Currently incarcerated for narcotic conspiracy.

Business: Machinery salesman. Owned florist shop.

Modus operandi: In association with top-level Mafia racketeers, he operated a narcotic smuggling and distribution ring which supplied untold quantities of heroin throughout the United States; top-echelon racketeer and drug trafficker for the past 30 years.

VITO GENOVESE

Aliases: Don Vitone, "The Old Man."

Description: Born November 21, 1897, Roccarainola, Naples, Italy; 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair, wears glasses. Naturalized November 25, 1936, in New York City.

Localities frequented: Resides 68 West Highland Avenue, Atlantic Highlands, N.J. Frequents Greenwich Village area of New York City, Old Orchard Country Club, and Piano Bar, Atlantic Highlands, N.J.

Family background: Separated from wife, Anna Petillo; son; Philip; step-daughter: Mrs. Anna Simonetti; brothers: Michael and Carmine; father; Felice; mother: Nunziata (both deceased).

Criminal associates: Frank Costello, Tony Strollo, Tom Lucchese, Joe Blondo, Joe Stracci, Joe Doto, Lucky Luciano.

984 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLEGAL TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal history: FBI No. 861267; New York City Police Department No. B-59993. Extensive arrest record since 1917, including burglary, concealed weapons, auto homicide and murder; has conviction for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Has interest in Colonial Trading Co., Waste Paper Removal Co., Erb Strapping Co., Tryon Cigarette Service Co., and many night clubs, all in New York City.

Modus operandi: Attended Apalachin Mafia meeting in 1957. Financial backer for international narcotic smuggling. Is reputed Mafia head in New York City rackets, shares in gambling and other interstate rackets with deportee Lucky Luciano.

EDOUARD GIRIBONE

Alias: Edouard.

Description: Born on May 28, 1920, at Marseille, France; 5 feet 7 inches; brown hair; brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 57 Avenue Marechal Foch, Marseille, France; frequents the bar "Le Radar," Rue Gilbert Dru at Marseille, France. Travels frequently to Genoa and Milano, Italy.

Criminal associates: Antoine Cordoliani, Francois Spirito, Joseph Orsini.

Criminal history: Received an 8-month suspended sentence for having participated in a robbery in 1947.

Modus operandi: Is associated with Antoine Cordoliani in the direction of a criminal association producing heroin for various French traffickers, who smuggle the drug into the United States through Italy.

Agencies familiar with individual: French Surete Nationale; Italian Guardia di Finanza; U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. French Surete Nationale DI 176770.

NICOLA GENTILE

Aliases: Zio Cola, Nick, Don Cola, Cola Gentile.

Description: Born on June 12, 1895, in Siculiana, Agrigento, Sicily; 5 feet 6 inches; 160 pounds, chestnut eyes, gray hair, bald top.

Localities frequented: Resides Via Ammiraglio Gravina No. 2, Palermo, Italy. Occasionally visits Rome and Naples. Formerly resided in the United States at New York City, Pittsburgh, Detroit, New Orleans, and Houston, Tex.

Family background: Married and has several grown children, however, he now lives alone. Son is married to the daughter of Pietro Davi, notorious Palermo Mafioso. Father: Antonio; mother: Maria Zarbo.

Criminal associates: Joseph Biondo, Pasquale Siracusa, Pietro Davi, Eduardo Aronica, Lucky Luciano, Joseph Parlapiano.

Criminal history: FBI No. 138119. Record in both Italy and the United States dating from 1915 includes arrests for assault and battery, murder, extortion, and narcotic trafficking.

Business: Claims to be sales representatives, but in reality receives money from Pietro Davi and various American racketeers.

Modus operandi: Was an important smuggler and distributor of narcotics when in the United States. He was an adjudicator for the Mafia in the United States and is still highly regarded by both Italian and U.S. Mafiosi.

ROBERT ANGELO GUIPPONE

Aliases: Giapone, "Sonny," "Fat Sonny."

Description: Born on April 4, 1930, in New York City; 5 feet 8½ inches, 285 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, scar over left eye, mole left side of nose.

Localities frequented: Resides 2420 Cambreling Avenue, in Bronx, N.Y. Frequents 187th Street and Cambreling Avenue, the Capri Lounge, and Southern Boulevard and Fordham Road in the Bronx, N.Y.

Family background: Unmarried; father, Dominick; mother, Mary Cienelli; brother, Daniel; sister, Marie Muschio.

Criminal associates: Anthony Carminati, Michael Galgano, Anthony Castaldi, Rocco Sancinella, Joseph Ambrosini, Rocco Mazzie, Dominick Carminati, and Joseph Valachi.

Criminal history: FBI No. 535872A, New York City Police Department No. B-337619; arrests date from 1950, including counterfeiting, assault, and battery, and violation of New York State narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate business or employment.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 985

Modus operandi: A major wholesale interstate narcotic trafficker. Is one of the younger Mafia members controlling gambling and narcotics in the Bronx, N.Y. area.

JEAN DAVID

Aliases: Jean Laget, Silver Fox, Whitey.

Description: Born on August 29, 1898, in Arles Bouches Du Rhone, France; 5 feet 11 inches, 193 pounds, white wavy hair, gray eyes, ruddy complexion, French accent; I&NS No. A-4652328.

Localities frequented: Resided at 312 West 56th Street in New York City. Frequented French restaurants in New York City's midtown area. Currently (1960) incarcerated.

Family background: Married Simone Alice Marcelli; no known children; annulled on December 6, 1943, in New York City; father, Pierre; mother, Marie Vidal; brothers, Vincent, Joseph, and Marcel.

Criminal associates: Lucien Ignaro, Ugo Rossi, Andrew Alberti, Joseph Orsini, Antoine D'Agostino, Lucien Rivard, Paul Mondoloni, John Sperandeo, Frank Tornello, Joseph Basile, Henry Sauzet, Roger Coudert.

Criminal history: FBI No. 3654908; arrests since 1921 include burglary, contempt of court, and narcotics. Wanted for murder in France committed in 1937. Currently serving a 10-year sentence at Leavenworth Prison; eligible for parole at end of 1960; subject to deportation.

Business: Was formerly a partner in Felice's Restaurant, 330 West 46th Street in New York City, and a partner of Alfred Letourneur in Letourneur Sulky Wheels, Inc. in New York City.

Modus operandi: Is an important member of a group which for years has smuggled large quantities of heroin into the United States for sale to top level Mafia narcotic traffickers.

SAM LEVINE

Aliases: James Cromin, Red Levine, Joseph Brown, William Hayes.

Description: Born on March 28, 1903, in New York City; 5 feet 8 inches, 180 pounds, brown eyes, red hair, ruddy complexion, stout build.

Localities frequented: Residence, 30 Ocean Parkway, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequent Bohrer's Trucking Co., 99 Sullivan Street; Farber's Bar, Suffolk and Delancey Streets; R. B. Trading Co., 11 West 42d Street; all in New York City.

Criminal associates: Louis Cohen, Harry Stromberg, Saul Gelb, Jacob Schaeffer.

Criminal history: Dates from 1921 and includes arrests for vagrancy, perjury, gambling, burglary, grand larceny, felonious assault, homicide, robbery, and rape.

Modus operandi: A dangerous criminal closely associated with smuggling-distribution of narcotics. Uses violence and strong-arm methods to maintain organization for distribution of large quantities of narcotics. Has gambling interests and is an important member of the New York underworld on the lower East Side.

Agencies familiar with individual: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, New York City Police Department, FBI No. 255223, New York City Police Department No. B-63122.

CARMINE LOCASCIO

Aliases: Willie the Wop, Willie Orlando, William Locascio, Anthony Corona.

Description: Born on September 23, 1911, in New York City; 5 feet 8 inches, 200 pounds, gray-black hair, brown eyes, dark complexion, prominent double chin.

Localities frequented: Ciro's Pastry Shop, 41-19 National Avenue, Corona, Long Island, N.Y.; frequents Oldtimers Bar, 104th Street and Roosevelt Avenue, Corona, Queens, Prince and Sullivan Streets in Manhattan. Cheer Club, 58th Street and 2d Avenue; Cafe Roma, Broome and Mulberry Streets, alleged owner of Pepe's Restaurant, Forest Hills, Queens, N.Y. Resides at 5 Shore Avenue, Bayville, Long Island, and 144-58 10th Avenue, Malba, Queens.

Criminal associates: John Ormento, Sam Accardi, Peter Locascio (brother), Charles DeStefano, Solomon Kaplan, Saro Mogavero.

Criminal history: Dates from 1929 and includes arrests for vagrancy, bribing a Government agent, robbery, homicide, violation of Federal narcotic laws, sentenced on January 24, 1964, in the southern district of New York to 15 years imprisonment for violation of Federal narcotic laws (conspiracy).

986 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Modus operandi: One of the most important smugglers and source of supply for the United States; controls a large segment of the narcotic traffic in New York City.

Agencies familiar with individual: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, U.S. Bureau of Customs, New York City Police Department, FBI No. 246742; New York City Police Department No. B-159260.

ANGELO M. LOIACANO

Aliases: Angelo Puggino, Little Puggy.

Description: Born on June 23, 1913, in New York City, 5 feet 7 inches, 178 pounds, brown eyes, black hair with some gray, wears glasses occasionally.

Localities frequented: Resides 24-48 79th Street in Jackson Heights, Queens, N.Y. Frequents area 1st Avenue and East 107th Street in Manhattan.

Family background: Married to Mary Maccheroni and has two sons; sister, Kate; brothers, Stephen and John; father Carmelo (deceased); mother, Bessie Chabiro.

Criminal associates: John Ormento, Salvatore Santoro, Anthony Castaldi, Salvatore Lo Proto, Dominick Gangi, Frank Moccardi, all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4749853; New York City Police Department No. B-148746; arrests since 1935 include policy and conviction for New York State narcotic laws.

Business: Occasional employment as a plasterer.

Modus operandi: Wholesale narcotic trafficker who supplies large-scale dealers in East Harlem. Obtains his supply from the Mafia narcotic trafficking mob headed by John Ormento. Also engaged in illegal gambling activities.

JOSEPH PAUL Lo PICCOLO

Alias: Joe.

Description: Born on April 28, 1918, in Chicago, Ill., 5 feet 5½ inches, 218 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, scar on chin, heavy build.

Localities frequented: Resides 233 East 69th Street in New York City and 621 44th Street, Miami, Fla., frequented midtown area of New York City. Vesuvio Restaurant and Paddock Bar, 50th Street and Broadway in New York City; also Philadelphia, Chicago, and Miami Beach.

Family background: Wife, Carolyn Riggio; sons, Philip, Carl, Joseph; daughter, Margaret; father, Felippo (deceased); mother, Margherita Viso; brothers, Anthony and Frank; sisters, Loretta (Mrs. Dan) Ficarelli, and Carmella (Mrs. Nick) Ficarelli.

Criminal associates: Joseph Di Palermo, Santo Trafficante, James Massi, Angelo Loiacano, Vincent Todaro, Ignazio and Lorenzo Orlando.

Criminal history: FBI No. 790022C, no New York City Police Department number, Miami Beach Police Department No. A24278. Record consists only of an arrest for investigation in Miami and a Federal narcotic conviction. In August 1958 sentenced to 20 years on the Federal narcotic charge.

Business: Partner in Rock Creek Fluorspar Mining Co., Hardin County, Ill.

Modus operandi: An important member of the Mafia, instrumental in narcotic smuggling and wholesale distribution in association with other top echelon violators.

GAETANO LUCCHESI

Aliases: Tom Lucchese, Tom Brown, Tom Arra, "Three Finger Brown."

Description: Born December 1, 1899, in Palermo, Sicily, 5 feet 5 inches, 150 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, wears glasses, naturalized January 25, 1943, in New York City.

Localities frequented: Resides 74 Royale Street, Lido Beach, Long Island, N.Y. Frequents Miami Beach, garment district of Manhattan, various locations in Long Island and New Jersey.

Family background: Wife, Catherine; sons, Francis and Baldassari; brothers, Anthony and Joseph; sisters, Pietra, Mrs. Rosalie Rosato (wife of Joe Rosato), and Concetta; father, Baldassari; mother, Francesca.

Criminal associates: Joe Biondo, Anthony Corallo, Anthony Strollo, Joe Profaci, Frank Livorsi, Settimo Acardi, Joe Rao, Lucky Luciano, Joe Rosato (brother-in-law).

Criminal history: FBI No. 168275. NYCPD-B No. 68834. Arrests since 1921 include murder, grand larceny, receiving stolen goods.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 987

Business: Either owns or has interests in Braunell Ltd., Manhattan; Pleasant Coat Co., Pleasant, N.J.; Bob-France Coat Co., Queens, N.Y.; Fordam Hoisting Co., Bronx, N.Y.; and several other businesses.

Modus operandi: A capable and influential Mafia leader who has developed powerful friends in political circles and has used them at times in behalf of his Mafia associates.

SALVATORE C. LUCANIA

Aliases: Lucky Luciano, Charles Reid, Charles Luciano, Charles Lucania, Charles Ross.

Description: Born on November 24, 1897, in Lercara Friddi, Sicily; 5 feet 10 inches, brown eyes, black-gray hair, 140 pounds, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides 464 Via Tasso, Naples; frequents Zia Teresa, San Francisco and Giacomino's restaurants, all in Naples, also the Agnano Race Track in Naples.

Family background: Single; father, Antonio; mother, Rosalia Cafarella; (both deceased), brother, Bartolo (living in New York City).

Criminal associates: Vito Genovese, Joe Biondo, Joe Profaci, Joe Bonanno, Frank Costello, Meyer Lansky, all of the United States; Joe Doto, Joe Pici, Pietro Davi, Frank Pirico, all of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 62920. NYCPD-B No. 72321. Arrests since 1916 include assault and robbery, grand larceny, conviction of the Federal narcotic laws. Sentenced in New York City in 1936 to 30 to 50 years for compulsory prostitution; paroled and deported to Italy in 1946.

Business: Has interests in San Francisco Cafe and is secret owner of apartment building at 464 Via Tasso, both in Naples; also interested in a clinic at Cercola, a suburb of Naples.

Modus operandi: Is one of the highest ranking Mafia both in Italy and the United States. From Italy he participated in directing of American rackets and had regularly received his share of the profits through the Mafia couriers. Lucania died in Italy in 1961.

SERAFINO MANCUSO

Aliases: Pier DeStefano, Pierre De Stefano, Sam, Pierre Stefano.

Description: Born on April 5, 1911, in Alcamo, Sicily, 5 feet 7½ inches, 162 pounds, medium build, medium complexion, black hair, dark hazel eyes, vertical scar three-fourth inch on left temple.

Localities frequented: Deported from the United States (New York City) in 1947 and established residence in Alcamo. He has traveled much and has worked as a seaman on oceangoing ships.

Family background: Father, Francesco Paolo; mother, Vincenza Ferrara; brothers, Salvatore and Giuseppe Mancuso, well-known Mafia hoodlums and narcotic traffickers.

Criminal associates: Morris Shatz, Francesco Paolo Coppola, Vincenzo Rimi, Giuseppe Corso, Sr., Giuseppe Corso, Jr.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1191423; arrested in 1936 for smuggling narcotics into the United States and served 10 years in the Federal penitentiary. He was paroled and deported to Italy in February of 1947. Arrested and convicted in 1952 at Alcamo for possession of trunk containing 6 kilos of heroin he was shipping to the United States for Frank Coppola.

Business: With his brother Giuseppe, he operates a large farm near Alcamo, Sicily.

Modus operandi: With his brother Giuseppe he maintains close ties with French heroin suppliers furnishing to Mafia associates in the United States and Italy heroin which he obtains from the French.

SALVATORE CHARLES MANERI

Aliases: Salvatore Manera, Salvatore Piazza, Antonio Magana.

Description: Born on August 15, 1912, in Marineo, Palermo, Sicily, 5 feet 5 inches, 140 pounds, brown eyes, black hair, dark complexion, medium build.

Localities frequented: Resides Palermo, Italy. Before deportation from the United States resided in Brooklyn and Staten Island, N.Y.

Family background: Married Jennie Morello; sons, Michael; father, Michael-angelo; mother, Maria Gippetto; sisters, Cella Collecta and Anna Scorsone; brothers, Joseph and Philip.

988 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal associates: Ernesto Barese, Giuseppe DiGiorgio, Michael Spinella, Onofrio Minaudo, Gaetano Maiorana.

Criminal history: FBI No. 495856; New York City Police Department No. B-97217. Record dating from 1924 includes arrests for juvenile delinquency, truancy, petit larceny, grand larceny, burglary tools, theft from foreign shipment, and immigration violation.

Business: No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: Though himself a narcotic addict, Maneri engaged in large-scale narcotic smuggling, personally removing drugs from ships in New York harbor and also acting as contact man between French sources and the Joseph DiPalermo narcotic smuggling organization.

GIOVANNI MAUGERI

Aliases: Giovanni Mauceri, John, Johnny.

Description: Born on August 15, 1906, in Tunis, Tunisia, 5 feet 11 inches, 180 pounds, hazel eyes, black-gray hair, speaks Italian, French, Spanish, Arabic, and poor English.

Localities frequented: He lives in Milan, Italy. He was deported from the United States (New York City) in April of 1957 for illegal entry. He travels over most of Italy and southern France.

Family background: Married, but separated; has one daughter; father, Luigi; mother, Corradina Aparo; brother, Corrado.

Criminal associates: Dominique Albertini, Corrado Maugeri, Joe Pici, Herbert Blaschevitsch, Giuseppe Negrini, Pietro Sorci, Matthew Cuomo, Sebastiano Bellanca.

Criminal history: FBI No. 468582C. Has a long criminal record in Italy for murder, assault, theft, counterfeiting, and narcotics. He was deported from the United States in 1957 for illegal entry.

Business: No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: With his brother, Corrado, and other Mafiosi, has been for many years supplying heroin to the U.S. traffickers. Obtains supplies of heroin from French-Corsican mobs in France. Italian national.

JAMES LEO MASSI

Aliases: Jimmy Ward, Johnny Martino.

Description: Born on September 23, 1908, in New York City, 5 feet 7 inches, 208 pounds, black-gray hair, brown eyes, heavy build.

Localities frequented: Resided 1223 Waring Avenue in the Bronx, N.Y. Currently (1959) incarcerated in Federal penitentiary.

Family background: Married to Florence Manzi; sons, Michael and James; stepson, Stanley; brothers, Fred, Harry; sisters, Mrs. Rose Botta, Mrs. Lena Casella, Mrs. Fannie DiMonte, Mrs. Antoinette DeMartino; father, Joseph (dead); mother, Mary Loreto.

Criminal associates: Ben and Ted DeMartino, Rocco Mazzie, Emilio D'Aria, Joe Valachi, Rocco Barra, Frank Pasqua, all of the New York City area; James Santore and Peter Casella, of Philadelphia area.

Criminal history: FBI No. 495223; New York City Police Department No. B-97132. Arrests since 1925 include illegal possession of firearms, attempted robbery, conspiracy. Sentenced on July 31, 1958, to 10 years for Federal narcotic laws at New York City.

Business: No legitimate business or employment known.

Modus operandi: A large-scale interstate narcotic trafficker closely associated with known Mafia international traffickers and smugglers.

VINCENZO FRANCESCO ANGELO MAURO

Aliases: Vincent Murio, Vincent Maurio, Vincent J. Morrio, Vinnie Morrow.

Description: Born on February 26, 1916, in New York City, 5 feet 11 inches, 194 pounds, brown eyes, dark brown hair.

Localities frequented: Resides at 3824 Bronx Boulevard, in the Bronx, N.Y., and also at 22 King Street in Manhattan. Frequents Burke Bar and Ciro's Bar, both in the Bronx, and most nightclubs in midtown Manhattan and in Greenwich Village area.

Family background: Single; father, Salvatore; mother, Rafaela Criscuolo; sisters, Teresa and Amella.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 989

Criminal associates: Anthony Strollo, John Stoppelli, John Ormento, Salvatore Santoro, Patsy Moccio (dead), Anthony Mirra, Joe Valachi.

Criminal history: FBI No. 760950; New York City Police Department No. B115-392. Arrests since 1933 include robbery, burglary, Federal income tax evasion and Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Usually associates himself with some nightclub or bar which is under the control of the Strollo organization.

Modus operandi: A high-ranking member of the Tony Strollo-controlled Mafia organization, which is involved in narcotic trafficking, shylocking, policy rackets, and after hours "joints." Considered a merciless and vicious killer.

HAROLD MELTZER

Aliases: Harold Fried, Harold Mill, "Happy", Herbert Mason, Harry Levy, Allen McNeese, Harry Miller, Harry Hirsch.

Description: Born on January 16, 1908, in New York City, 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, walks with slight limp.

Localities frequented: Resides 6431 West 6th Street in Los Angeles, Calif. Frequents Enid, Okla.; Laredo, Tex.; Baltimore; Miami; Las Vegas; New York City; Boston; Canada; Mexico; Cuba; Hong Kong; Japan; Hawaii and the Philippines.

Family background: Married Dolores Fuller Moutner; two sons; father, David; mother, Celia Mason; brothers, Samuel and James.

Criminal associates: Mickey Cohen, Meyer Lansky, John Ormento, Louis Tom Dragna, Max Cossman, Louis Fiano.

Criminal history: FBI No. 113017, Los Angeles Police Department No. 96472, New York City Police Department No. B115520. Since 1920 he has been arrested for disorderly conduct, larceny, homicide, assault with intent to kill, possession of dangerous weapon, escapee, gambling, and violation of Federal narcotic and customs laws. Two Federal narcotic convictions.

Business: Partner with Louis Tom Dragna in California Sportswear Co., 1024 South Maple, Los Angeles, Calif.

Modus operandi: An international drug trafficker closely allied with top Mafia racketeers. Smuggled narcotics in large quantities from Mexico and Cuba to California and New York. Head of large bookmaking and prostitution syndicate in California. Associated with top labor organizers.

ROSARIO MOGAVERO

Aliases: Saro Mogavero, Saro Mogaveno, Saro Mugavero.

Description: Born on May 2, 1916 in New York City, 5 feet 6 inches, 168 pounds, blue eyes, brown hair.

Localities frequented: Resides 104 Madison Street in New York City. Frequents area of Madison and Pike Streets, in New York City and docks on East River.

Family background: Married to Mary Nanetakis and has four children; father, Salvatore; mother, Illuminata (both born in Sicily); brother, Joseph.

Criminal associates: John Ormento, Salvatore Santoro, Rocco Pellegrino, Phil Albanese, Sam Kass, Angelo Tuminaro, Anthony DiPasqua, Carmine Locascio, Joe Lapi, Angelo Lolacano, all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 895630; New York City Police Department No. B109163. Arrests since 1932 include burglary, felonious assault, harboring a fugitive, extortion.

Business: Was vice president of Local 856 of the International Longshoremen's Union in 1953 when he was sentenced in New York City for extortion.

Modus operandi: A major narcotic trafficker on New York's Lower East Side, and a feared Mafia leader in that area. A close associate of most top Mafia leaders in New York City.

IGNAZIO LAWRENCE ORLANDO

Aliases: Big Nose Larry.

Description: Born on October 24, 1924, in New York City, 6 feet 1 inch, 195 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, has large nose.

Localities frequented: Resided 16 Jacob Street in Elmont, Long Island, N.Y. Currently incarcerated in Federal penitentiary.

Family background: Married to Serafina Rescica; daughter: Rose; son: Lawrence; father: Lorenzo; mother: Rose.

990 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal associates: Lorenzo Orlando (father), Nick Tolentino, Emilio D'Aria, James Massi, Angelo Loiacano, Rocco Sancinella, Joseph Lo Piccolo, all of New York area, James Santore, Peter C. Casella, of Philadelphia area, and Vincent Todaro, of Virginia.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4369250. Record shows arrest and conviction as Army deserter in 1946. Arrested again in 1958 and sentenced to 17 years on July 31, 1958, for violation of Federal narcotics laws.

Business: Prior to arrest in 1958 he operated a laundry truck.

Modus operandi: A member of a Mafia-controlled international smuggling narcotic ring who acted as a courier and "plant man" for the ring.

JOHN ORMENTO

Aliases: John Ormando, John Forte, Big John, Governor.

Description: Born on August 1, 1912, in New York City, 5 feet 10 inches, 240 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, heavy build, sometimes wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides 118 Audrey Drive, Lido Beach, Long Island, frequents the East Harlem area and various New York City night clubs.

Family background: Married Carmela Mildred Forte; son: Thomas (married to Patricia Livorsi, daughter of the notorious Frank Livorsi); daughter: Connie.

Criminal associates: Gaetano Lucchese, Carmine Galante, Salvatore Santoro, Rocco Pellegrino, Frank Livorsi, John Dioguardi, Vincent Squillante, all of New York City, Joseph Ianni, of Texas, Diecidue brothers, of Tampa, Fla.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1321383; New York City Police Department No. B-158044. Arrests since 1937 include three convictions of Federal narcotic law violation. Convicted in 1960 of conspiracy to obstruct justice and sentenced to 5 years and a $10,000 fine.

Business: Has interest in the O. & S. Trucking Co., and the Long Island Garment Trucking Co., both in New York City.

Modus operandi: Attended 1957 Apalachin Mafia meeting. Is an important Mafia member and leader of the notorious "107th Street Mob" in New York City which for many years has been responsible for a large part of the narcotic smuggling and distribution in the United States.

JOSEPH ORSINI

Aliases: Joseph Casabianca, Joe Dorney, Francois.

Description: Born on March 19, 1903, in Bastia, Corsica, France, French citizen, 5 feet 8 inches, 170 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, partly bald, medium build, tattoos on left arm.

Localities frequented: Now resides in France. Formerly resided at 26 West 85th Street, in New York City, and frequented French restaurants in the midtown area of New York City.

Family background: Mistress: Marcellé Ansellem; father: Louis; mother: Maria Leonetti.

Criminal associates: Antoine D'Agostino, Francois Spirito, Jean Laget, Jean Ager, Marius Ansaldi, Dominique Reissent, Saul Gelb, Edouard Giribone, Carmelo Sansone, Vincent Randazzo, Salvatore Shillitani.

Criminal history: FBI No. 708363A. He has been convicted in France for fraud and robbery and collaboration with the Germans during World War II. Federal narcotic and counterfeiting convictions in the United States for which sentenced to 10 years in 1951. Deported from the United States in 1958.

Business: Exseaman. No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: He was the Canadian-American representative for the Ansaldi group which operated a clandestine laboratory in France and smuggled heroin in large quantities to Mafia racketeers in the United States.

JOHN PAPALIA

Alias: Johnny.

Description: White male of Italian extraction; born in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, on March 18, 1924; 5 feet 8 inches; 135 pounds; brown eyes; black hair; 1-inch scar on right eye; mole above right upper lip.

Localities frequented: Resident: 16 Railway Street, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada. Frequented the College Restaurant, Toronto, Canada. He was known to be connected with several illegal enterprises in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada and seen in many gambling clubs in that area.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 991

Criminal associates: Vincent Mauro, Frank Caruso, Vito Agueci, Stephan Magaddino.

Criminal history: Arrested on March 16, 1962, for violation of Federal narcotic laws. Plead guilty, sentenced to 10 years on March 11, 1963. Previously arrested for assault, breaking and entering, bootlegging, and bookmaking, all in Canada.

Modus operandi: Papalia was the intermediary for Buffalo-Toronto organizations with the New York organization. Collected money and made arrangements for transportation and delivery of narcotics to these above organizations. He also transmitted information for the same organization members.

Agencies familiar with individual: Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Federal Bureau of Narcotics, Federal Bureau of Investigation. FBI No. 818021-D. RCMP No. 568267.

GIUSEPPE PELLEGRINO

Aliases: Joseph Pelligrino, Joe Hardy, Frank Sciallo, Louis Carbonetti, Anthony Pellegrino.

Description: Born on November 3, 1902 in Teggiano, Campagna, Salerno, Italy; 5 feet 8 inches; 200 pounds; brown eyes; straight black hair; dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Deported from the United States in 1947. Resides via Alfaro No. 27, Salerno, Italy.

Family background: Father, Vincenzo; mother, Maria Tropiano; brothers, Anthony and Charles Pellegrino alias Tropiano; sisters, Mrs. Sam Monastersky and Mrs. Eugene Giannini.

Criminal associates: Eugene Giannini (deceased), Sam Monastersky, Giacomo Reina, Salvatore Shillitani, Francesco Saverino.

Criminal history: FBI No. 42935. New York City Police Department No. B-63160. Record dating from 1921 includes arrests for concealed weapon, robbery, homicide, assault, and robbery, grand larceny, and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Claims to be the manager of the Brazil Bar, Salerno, Italy.

Modus operandi: Was a member of the Mafia narcotic smuggling and distributing ring headed by the late Eugene Giannini. His task was to receive heroin from the suppliers, safeguard it and turn it over to couriers for delivery to the United States.

FRANCESCO PIRICO

Aliases: Don Ciccio, Cheech.

Description: Born on June 1, 1901, in Palermo, Sicily; 5 feet 10 inches; 180 pounds; brown eyes; light brown hair; small mouth; usually wears glasses and moustache; has droopy right eyelid.

Localities frequented: Resides via Vincenzo Monte No. 34, Milan, Italy.

Family background: Father, Giovanni; mother, Angela Pirico (both deceased); son, Gianni.

Criminal associates: "Lucky" Luciano, Giuseppe Pici, Nicola Gentile, Joseph Di Palermo, Albert Bistoni, Nicolo Di Giovanni, Francesco Saverino, Egidio Caslascibetta.

Criminal history: Never in the United States. Record in Italy dating back many years includes arrests for theft, gambling, fraud, and narcotic trafficking.

Business: Claims to be a businessman and tradesman.

Modus operandi: Important Mafia figure, 1948 to 1951 was distributor of large quantities of diverted heroin from the Schapparelli Pharmaceutical Co., supplying U.S. customers Frank Scalise, Joseph Di Palermo, Eugene Giannini, and others. When diversion ceased he obtained French heroin for his American customers.

FRANK PROFACI

Alias: Frankie.

Description: Born on April 15, 1907, in Villabate, Sicily, 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, naturalized on February 8, 1944, in the United States.

Localities frequented: Resides 3801 Avenue P in Brooklyn, N.Y. Is associated with the Newburg Coat Co., 1578 86th Street in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Family background: Married Vivenza Costello; sons: Salvatore, Ignazio, Emmanuel; father, Salvatore; mother: Rosaria Schillaci; brothers: Salvatore, Andrew, Joseph; sisters: Josephine Tipa and Sister Madelina of the Dominican Sisters of New York City.

992 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal associates: Joseph Profaci (brother), Frank Costello, Nicolo Gentile, Joseph Rinaldi, Frank Scalici (deceased).

Criminal history: No criminal record known.

Business: Associated with brother Joseph in Olive Oil Co., and clothing companies. Owns the Newburg Coat Co., 1578 86th Street in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Modus operandi: An underling of his brother Giuseppe Profaci, who is a top level international narcotic violator and high ranking Mafioso.

JOHN PRIZIOLA

Aliases: Papa John Priziola, John Braziola, John Barzziola, John Prisiola, John Peraziola.

Description: Born on January 12, 1893, in Partinico, Sicily, Italy, 5 feet 3½ inches, 165 pounds, brown eyes, gray-brown hair, balding, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides 1349 Devonshire Street in Grosse Pointe, Mich.

Family background: First wife, Thomasina, deceased, mother of Ninette (Mrs. Peter Tocco), Frances (Mrs. Frank Matranga), Angeline (Mrs. Michael Polizzi) and Josephine (Mrs. Joseph Matranga); second wife, Francesca, mother of Thomasina (Mrs. James D. Cammarata); father: Giuseppe; mother, Antonian Sciacchitana.

Criminal associates: All top ranking Detroit Mafiosi: Ralph Caleca and Anthony Giordano of St. Louis; John Ormento and Salvatore Santoro of New York City, Frank and Joseph Matranga of California; Salvatore Vitale, Francesco Coppola and Serafino Mancuso of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 783659-C. Detroit PD No. 10171. Record dating from 1917 includes arrests for grand larceny, prohibition law violation, concealed weapons, and murder.

Business: St. Clair Terrace Corp., royalties from P. & T. Oil Co., rentals from 16906 Harper, Detroit; Jon Car homes.

Modus operandi: One of the heads of the Mafia in the Detroit area. Engaged in large scale narcotic smuggling and distribution.

GIUSEPPE PICI

Aliases: Joe Picci, Peach, Pacey, Pisano, Chester Ricardi.

Description: Born on April 27, 1911, in Bovino, Foggia, Italy, 5 feet 7 inches, 165 pounds, brown eyes, black hair.

Localities frequented: Resided Via Aurelia No. 47, Bogliasco, Genoa, Italy. Before deportation from the United States in 1946 lived in Turtle Creek, Pa., and made frequent trips to Pittsburgh, Kansas City, and New York City. Currently (1959) incarcerated.

Family background: Wife: Enrica; two children of his deceased former wife, Joseph and Janet, live in Turtle Creek, Pa., father: Santo; mother: Teresa Carletto.

Criminal associates: "Lucky" Luciano, Carmine Tufarelli, Michele Cerami, Giovanni Gioia, Gaetano Ciofalo (deceased).

Criminal history: FBI No. 639336. Pittsburgh PD No. 26793. Record in the United States dates from 1932 and includes arrests for violation firearms act, white slavery, conspiracy, suspicious person, and violation immigration laws.

Business: Claims to be landowner and frequently invests in restaurant and bar enterprises.

Modus operandi: Important Mafia figure and wholesale supplier of heroin to smugglers. Organizes and finances other criminal activities, principally alien smuggling.

RAFFAEL QUASARANO

Aliases: Ralph, Gino, and James Quasarano, James Quasamoni.

Description: Born on December 20, 1910, in Mauch Chunk, Pa., 5 feet 8 inches, 160 pounds, medium build, black hair, blue eyes, glasses, numerous cyst scars on back of neck.

Localities frequented: Resides 20143 Doyle Court, Grosse Pointe, Woods, Mich. Frequents Michigan Mutual Distributing Co., in Detroit, Mich.

Family background: Married Giovanna Vitale; two children; father: Vincenzo (deceased); mother: Francesca; brother: Diego (resides in Italy); father-in-law: Vito Vitale.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 993

Criminal associates: Angelo Meli, John Priziola, Angelo Polizzi, Pietro Gaudino, Michael Polizzi and Salvatore Finazzo, of Detroit; John Ormento, Frank Livorsi, Francisco Costiglia, of New York; "Lucky" Luciano, Francisco P. Coppola, Giuseppe Corso, and Vito Vitale of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 736238. Detroit Police Department No. 40868. Record dating from 1931 includes arrests for disorderly conduct, armed robbery, shooting, wiretapping, gambling, and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Owns Motor City Barber Supply, Greenfield Furniture, Moravian Acres, and Motor City Arena and Gym, in Detroit, Mich.

Modus operandi: A top level Detroit Mafia member and international narcotic trafficker. His father-in-law, Vito Vitale, is a Mafia leader in Italy.

VINCENT RENNA

Aliases: Vincenzo Renna.

Description: Born in San Giorgio, Taranto, Italy, on July 25, 1904; 5 feet 6 inches; 140 pounds; black-gray hair; brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Residence: 3201 34th Avenue, Astoria, Long Island, N.Y. Frequented the lower East Side of New York City.

Criminal associates: Frank Caruso, Vincent Mauro, Charles Schiffman, Matthew Palmeree, Salvatore Rinaldo, Ugo and Salvatore Caneba, Vito and Albert Agueci, Rocco Scopelliti, Vincenzo Calalonotte, Frank Tarabella, Sonny Gulpone, John Papalia, Carmine Locascio.

Criminal history: Presently in jail in Italy for violation of the Italian national narcotic laws. No arrest in the United States; however, is also under indictment in the United States (Southern District of New York) for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: International seaman courier and smuggler for Caneba brothers and other Mafia organizations between Italy and the United States.

Agencies, familiar with individual: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, U.S. Treasury Department, Italian National Police, Rome, Italy.

RENE ROBERT

Aliases: Rene Martin, Bob.

Description: Born in Montreal, Canada, on October 23, 1925; 5 feet 11 inches; 200 pounds; brown hair with receding hairline; brown eyes; stomach scars, bullet hole on right leg; French-Canadian.

Localities frequented: Formerly resided at 2473 Rouan Street, Montreal, Quebec (1959). Frequents Romeo Cafe, Chez Paree, Metropole Club, and Jacques Cartier Motel, all in Montreal, Canada; also, Edison Hotel and Vivere Lounge, New York City.

Criminal associates: Giuseppe, Vincent, Frank and Michael Cotroni; Arthur David; Thomas Pytel; Jimmy Soccio; Frank Mancino; Frank Starr; Angelo Tuminaro and Carmine Galante.

Criminal history: Subject has a criminal record dating back to 1942, and shows arrest for theft, breaking into, narcotics, auto theft, lottery, and receiving.

Modus operandi: Sentenced July 9, 1959, to 8 years in prison in Canada for violating the narcotics laws. Prior to his arrest Robert was the bodyguard and deliveryman for Giuseppe Cotroni who was head of the largest and most notorious narcotic syndicates on the North American Continent.

Agencies familiar with individual: U.S. Treasury Department, Bureau of Narcotics, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Montreal Police Department.

CALOGERO RUBINO

Aliases: Caliddu, Calogero Rubino.

Description: Born on January 25, 1917, in Salemi, Trapani, Sicily, Italy; 5 feet 9 inches, 175 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, dark complexion, deep cleft in chin.

Localities frequented: Resides Via Marcona No. 9, Salemi, Italy. Frequents Palermo, Trapani, Alcamo, and other Italian cities.

Family background: Father: Santo; mother: Catherina Caruso; cousin: Cristoforo Rubino, the notorious narcotic trafficker who was slain in New York City in 1958.

Criminal associates: Giovanni Mira, Pietro Sorci, Pietro LaFata, Lucky Luciano.

994 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal history: Not known to have ever been in the United States. Arrested for nonpolitical crimes in Palermo and Trapani, confined and proposed for exile.

Business: Fruit and produce merchant.

Modus operandi: He and other Mafiosi in Italy comprise an organization which supplied 20 kilos of heroin per month to a distributing organization in the United States. Headed by his cousin, the late Cristoforo Robino.

GIUSEPPE RUFFINO

Aliases: Joseph Ruffino, Don Ruffino.

Description: Born in Palermo, Sicily, on May 16, 1886; Italian; white male; 5 feet 9 inches; 165 pounds; brown hair; brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Residence: 708 Garden Street, Bronx, New York, frequents 441 East 12th Street, New York, N.Y., lower East Side of New York and Syracuse, N.Y.

Criminal associates: Joseph Profaci (deceased), Joseph Gagliano, Marco Li-Mandri, Joseph D'Angelo, Vitale and Joseph Monchelli, William Locassio, Rosario Mogavero.

Criminal history: Arrested for violation of Federal narcotic laws in 1932. In 1940 was arrested in New York on gambling charge.

Modus operandi: Ruffino, a trusted courier for the Carmine Locascio-Rosario Mogavero organization, has traveled to Italy under pretext of visiting relatives. It is suspected that following these sojourns he causes heroin to be smuggled into the United States secreted in false-bottom trunks.

Agencies familiar with individual: New York City Police Department; Bureau of Narcotics, U.S. Treasury Department. FBI No. 466656, NYCPD No. B-107033.

ROCCO SANCINELLA

Aliases: None.

Description: Born on May 6, 1919, in New York City, 5 feet 9 inches, 185 pounds, dark complexion, brown hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 421 West 260th Street in the Bronx, N.Y. Frequent Anchor Bar at 76th Street and 2d Avenue, Green Open Kitchen, 77th Street and 1st Avenue, Wright's Coffee Shop, 86th Street and Lexington Avenue, all in New York City. Hi-Way Bar, 362 Metropolitan Avenue, in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Family background: Married Virginia Donofrio; father: Frank; mother: Carmela D'Orio (both born in Italy).

Criminal associates: Ignazio Orlando, Angelo Loiacano, Vincent Todaro, Charles Alberio, Frank Moccardi, Salvatore Santoro, Cotroni brothers (Canada).

Criminal history: FBI No. 5132291; NYCPD No. B213629. Record dates from 1943 and includes arrests for assault and robbery and violation of the narcotic laws.

Business: Operates a luncheonette at 4533 Third Avenue in the Bronx, N.Y.

Modus operandi: Member of a major Mafia group engaged in counterfeiting and in distributing huge quantities of heroin obtained from the Cotroni organization in Canada.

MICHELE GIACOMO SCARPULLA

Aliases: Giacomino, Jack Scarpulla.

Description: Born on May 16, 1899, in Palermo, Sicily, Italy; 5 feet 8 inches, 185 pounds, stout build, dark complexion, brown eyes, brown hair turning white.

Localities frequented: Resides 77 Winter Street in the Bronx, N.Y. Frequent the New Prosperity Meat Market, 284 Fifth Avenue, in Brooklyn, N.Y., and the Crescent Avenue section of the Bronx, N.Y.

Family background: Married Rosa Scalici (sister of the late Francesco); son, Angelo; daughter, Maria Anna; father, Giacomo; mother, Marion Quadri; Angelo married Rosemary Lapi, daughter of convicted counterfeiter Vincent Rocco Lapi.

Criminal associates: Frank Luciano, Carlo and Paul Gambino, Joseph Bisogno, Salvatore Caneba, Sebastiano Bellanca.

Criminal history: FBI No. 983998; NYCPD B-113221. Record dates from 1933 and includes arrests for grand larceny and bootlegging.

Business: He and son Angelo own and operate the New Prosperity Meat Market, 284 Fifth Avenue, in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Modus operandi: High echelon Mafioso, key member of the large-scale narcotic smuggling ring formerly headed by his brother-in-law the late Francesco Scalici.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 995

FRANCESCO PAOLO SAVERINO

Aliases: Don Ciccio, F. Severino.

Description: Born on August 5, 1911, in Salemi, Trapani, Sicily; 5 feet 6 inches, 155 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, thin build, mustache, very good dresser.

Localities frequented: Lives at Viale Papignao, No. 28, Milan, Italy; frequents better nightclubs in Milan and also the cities of Rome, San Remo in season, and other major cities of Italy and Sicily.

Family background: Father, Salvatore; mother, Alonza Gaspare, both born in Italy.

Criminal associates: Frank Pirico, Ugo Caneba, Sal Caneba, Alberto Bianciardi, Frank Coppola, Paolo Greco, Serafino Mancuso, Joe Pici, Joe Pellegrino, Eugene Giannini (dead), Michael Cerami, Costantino Gambi, Dr. Enzo Berti, and all other major narcotic violators in Italy.

Criminal history: Dates from 1938. At one time he was arrested for resisting a police officer. Arrested in 1949 for possession of 2 kilos of cocaine and convicted in 1950 in Palermo. In 1958 arrested in Milan in connection with the Enzo Berti et al. laboratory case.

Business: Operated a textile business on Via V. Hugo No. 2, Milan, Italy.

Modus operandi: Operates clandestine heroin laboratories in Italy. Is also supplied by Corsican gangsters in France. Distributes kilo lots of heroin to many important American gangs.

CHARLES SCHIFFMAN

Aliases: Charles Shipman, Schippman, Morris Feldman, Charles Harris.

Description: Born on September 14, 1903, in Wallington, N.J.; Jewish, 5 feet 6 inches; 156 pounds, brown-gray hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 79 Van Buren Street, Passaic, N.J. Frequents midtown New York City and northern New Jersey.

Family background: Single; father, Samuel; mother, Sarah Feldman (both deceased); sisters, Eva Sternberg, Esther Schiffman, and Ann Floff; brothers, Barney and Arthur.

Criminal associates: John Ormento, Salvatore Santoro, Moische Taubman, Marco Orlandino, Abraham Chalupowitz, Joseph Littman.

Criminal history: FBI No. 313781; NYCPD No. B-123114; Newark, N.J., PD No. 6034. Record dating from 1921 includes arrests for burglary, breaking and entering, drunkenness, robbery, concealed weapon, highway robbery, and three Federal narcotic convictions.

Business: No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: A confirmed and vicious criminal who for many years headed a gang of racketeers who engaged in every type of illicit enterprises in the northern New Jersey area. Is known to and allied with top Mafia criminals from all parts of the United States. Large-scale narcotic trafficker.

ANIELLO SANTAGATA

Aliases: Santagato, Joseph Ottieri, O'Maddalonese, Emmet Agato, Santo Emilio, Santiago Amella.

Description: Born on January 13, 1888, in Maddaloni, Caserta, Italy; 5 feet 6 inches, 198 pounds, gray hair, brown eyes, dark complexion. Naturalized in Newark, N.J., on October 3, 1928. No. C-493304.

Localities frequented: Resides No. 1 Kearney Avenue, Kearney, N.J. Frequents the 14th Avenue section of Newark, N.J.; Lower East Side of New York City; Wilson Avenue section of Brooklyn, N.Y.; New York area racetracks, and Mexico.

Family background: Married Grace Carbone in 1952 and she divorced him after he went to prison in 1955. He is again living with her. Father, Raphael; mother, Giovanna Della Rocco; sister, Lucidlle Carrolo.

Criminal associates: Salvatore Aniccone (Mexico), Ugo Giampaoli, Campisi brothers, Angelo Bula, Setimo Accardo.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1671607; NYCPD No. B-22389. Record dating from 1908 includes arrests for pickpocketing, larceny, kidnaping, bastardy, fornication, assault and battery, disorderly conduct, gambling, bootlegging, Federal narcotics conviction.

Business: Retired barber. Collecting social security.

996 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Modus operandi: An oldtime Mafioso who is highly regarded by other members. Has sources for narcotics in Italy, Mexico, and Canada and has been responsible for the smuggling and distribution of untold quantities of heroin. Recently (1960) perjured himself before a grand jury in an attempt to protect another Mafia member and narcotic trafficker.

ROCCO EUGENIO SCOPELLITI

Aliases: Not known.

Description: White male, of Italian extraction, born in Italy on January 1, 1935; 5 feet 6 inches, 158 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, 1-inch scar on left brow, red marks near left eye, rigid small finger left hand; naturalized Canadian citizen.

Localities frequented: Residence, 375 Manning Avenue, Toronto, Ontario, Canada; Via Stefano Romeo No. 69 Santo Stefano De Aspromonte Reggio Calabria; frequented clubs Lower East Side New York City.

Criminal associates: Vito Agueci, Vincent Mauro, Matthew Palmeri, Salvatore Rinaldi, Frank Caruso.

Criminal history: Arrested in 1961 for violation of the U.S. Federal narcotic laws; sentenced on February 13, 1962, to 10 years.

Modus operandi: Courier for large international smuggling ring. Scopelliti returned to Italy, picked up large quantities of heroin and delivered to the United States via Canada. This organization supplied large quantities of heroin for the Lower East Side distributors in New York City.

Agencies familiar with individual: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Royal Canadian Mounted Police. FBI No. 900811D.

DAVID SMITH

Aliases: John Payne, Pop Smith.

Description: Born on May 28, 1908, in New York City; 5 feet 8 inches, 200 pounds, stout build, black hair, brown eyes, ruddy complexion, tip of left index finger missing.

Localities frequented: Resides 92-40 Queens Boulevard, Rego Park, N.Y. Frequents 100th Street and First Avenue, 1885 Third Avenue, 1618 Westchester Avenue, Bronx, all in New York City. Visits Phoenix, Ariz.

Family background: Married Wanda Klein and has one child. Father, Joseph, born in England; mother, deceased.

Criminal associates: Rosario Rinaldi, Anthony Corallo, Joseph Stallone, Hyman Habler, Solly Kaplan.

Criminal history: FBI No. 747793; New York City Police Department No. B-121211. Record dating from 1934 includes arrests for felonious assault and violation of State and Federal narcotic laws. Federal narcotic conviction.

Business: Coowner with Joseph Costa of the New Third Avenue Bakery Shop 1909 Third Avenue, in New York City.

Modus operandi: Wholesaler of narcotics to interstate violators. Engages in the conversion of opium and morphine base. Though non-Italian he is accepted and trusted by top New York City Mafia violators.

MICHAEL SEDOTTO

Aliases: LaRocco, Sedetto; Mike-the-Geep.

Description: Born on February 22, 1920, in New York City; 5 feet 8½ inches, 185 pounds, medium build, gray hair (bald), blue eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 2715 DeWitt Place, Bronx, N.Y. Frequents 187th Street and Crescent, 187th Street and Cambreling Avenue in the Bronx, N.Y.

Family background: Married Dorothy Lauer; sons, Michael and Salvatore; father, Joseph; mother, Anna LaRocco (both deceased); brothers, Joseph, Patrick, and Anthony; sister, Mary Acvino.

Criminal associates: Alfred Maureillo, Jerry Santaniello, Joseph Barra, Rocco Mазzie, Vincent Panebianco, Anthony Allocco.

Criminal history: FBI No. 3242790; New York City Police Department No. B-246243. Record dates from 1937 and includes arrests for possession of burglary tools, felonious assault, perjury, and violation of probation, Federal narcotic case pending.

Business: Self-employed dress contractor.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 997

Modus operandi: A powerful Mafioso who controls policy and Italian lottery rackets in the East Bronx area of New York City. Also controls a wholesale narcotic trafficking combine.

SANTO SORGE

Aliases: None.

Description: Born on January 11, 1908, in Mussomeli, Caltanissetta, Sicily, Italy; 5 feet 10 inches, brown hair, brown eyes. Immigrated to the United States on February 3, 1941. Naturalized in New York City on June 7, 1948.

Localities frequented: Resides 222 East 57th Street in New York City. Frequents exclusive clubs and restaurants in New York City.

Family background: Married Bertha Kretschmer; father, Salvatore (deceased); mother, Rosena Gange, resides in Mussomeli, Sicily, Italy.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Carmine Galante, Calogero DiCarlo, Vito Genovese, Giuseppe Bonanno, Giuseppe DiPalermo, John Balsamo.

Criminal history: No record in the United States. Expelled from France in 1932. In 1939 the Italian Government convicted him, in absentia, of espionage and falsification of documents, arrested in 1948 in connection with this and later released.

Business: Managing director of the Rimrock International Oil Co., 680 Fifth Avenue in New York City. Member of the Foreign Economic Research Association.

Modus operandi: One of the most important Mafia leaders. Travels extensively between Italy and the United States in furtherance of ostensibly legitimate international ventures which probably cover for liaison duties between highest ranking Mafiosi in the United States and Italy. Has considerable political influence in Italy.

FRANCOIS SPIRITO

Aliases: Charles Henri Faccia, Le Grand, Big Frank, Charles Lamoss.

Description: Born on January 23, 1900, in Marseilles, France; French citizen; 6 feet, 170 pounds, gray hair, brown eyes, olive complexion, slender build.

Localities frequented: Resides Marseilles, France. In the United States resided in midtown New York City and Greenwood Lake, N.Y. Frequented New York City's French section; visited Montreal, Canada, and Cranston, R.I.

Family background: Son, Paul; daughter, Maria; father, Dominick; mother, Rosina DeNola; brother, John; sister, Angelina Corona; nephew, Anthony Palumbo, Cranston, R.I.

Criminal associates: Angelo Iandusco, Joseph Orsini, Salvatore Shillitani, Carmelo Sansone, Anthony Martello, and Antoine D'Agostino.

Criminal history: FBI No. 837850A. Lengthy record in France includes arrests for assault and battery, theft, smuggling, using false and civil status and attempt against security of the state. Federal narcotic conviction in New York City in 1951.

Business: Bar owner and men's shop operator.

Modus operandi: Well-known international narcotic violator and member of one of the largest smuggling rings in France. Major source of narcotics for the Joseph Orsini narcotic smuggling organization.

ALBERT J. SPITZER

Aliases: Albertus Spitzer, Abraham Spitzer, Charles Spitzer, Victor Spitzer, Al.

Description: Born on December 25, 1895 in New York City; American Jew; 5 feet 7½ inches; 153 pounds; blue-gray eyes; gray-brown hair; sallow complexion; wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Last known address Hotel Luxor, 46th Street and Broadway, New York City. Previous address Marcy Hotel, 95th Street and West End Avenue in New York City. Frequents midtown Manhattan and race-tracks.

Criminal associates: Joseph Roth, James Amendola, Benjamin Silver, Jack Sieman, William Vachuda, Abraham Stein.

Criminal history: Criminal history dates from August 13, 1908, when he was first arrested for juvenile delinquency. Since then he has been arrested for offenses such as disorderly conduct, burglary, safe robbery, grand and petit larceny, National Stolen Property Act, smuggling and attempting to smuggle narcotic drugs, sale and possession of narcotics, and forgery. He has served terms of imprisonment in both State and Federal institutions. His last arrest in New York City was on June 22, 1949, for receiving stolen property.

998 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Modus operandi: Prior to World War II, he was considered one of the most important, if not the most important, smuggler of narcotics in the United States. His method being to smuggle narcotics in shipments of merchandise and in the false bottoms of trunks. He also deals in stolen securities.

Agencies familiar with individual: Bureaus of Narcotics and Customs, U.S. Treasury Department. Canadian Department of National Health and Welfare. Rotterdam, Holland Police. FBI No. 365968, New York City Police Department No. B-34829, Rotterdam, Holland Police No. 6662.

ENRICO NICOLÒ TANTILLO

Aliases: Harry Tantillo, Blackie, Coco, Harry T. Cantillo.

Description: Born on January 28, 1916, in New York City, 5 feet 6 inches, 160 pounds, medium build, black hair, brown eyes, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides at 4303 Furman Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Frequents the Florence Lingerie Shoppe, 4148 White Plains Road, in the Bronx, N.Y., and vicinity of 106th Street and Second Avenue in New York City.

Family background: Wife, Matilda Manfredonia; father, Giuseppe; mother, Genoveffa Salerno (both born in Italy); brother, Alfred Tantillo; half brother, Frank Tantillo; sister Mary Lucchese; brothers-in-law, Richard, John, and Anthony Manfredonia.

Criminal associates: Joseph Marone, John Stoppelli, Vincent Mauro, Nicholas Tolentino, Fred Salerno, John Ormento.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1024285, New York City Police Department No. 137405; record dates from 1935 and includes arrests for possession of revolver, obstructing justice, influencing witness, and conviction for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Owns Dominick's Pastry Shop, 2058 Second Avenue in New York City.

VINCENT JAMES TODARO

Aliases: Charles Todaro, Frank Todaro.

Description: Born on January 8, 1914, in Palermo, Sicily, was naturalized in New York City, 6 feet 1 inch, 195 pounds, black hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides Herndon, Va. (Post Office Box 23, Merrifield), currently (1959) incarcerated.

Family background: Wife is Helen Fay; has 2 children; father, Andrea; mother, Filippina Ruoppola (both in Italy).

Criminal associates: George Nobile, James Massi, Ignazio and Lorenzo Orlando, Joe Lo Piccolo and Frank Moccardi of New York City, also Frank Coppola, Peter Licata, Antoine Cardoliani, and Charles Leca of Europe.

Criminal history: FBI No. 534748, Extensive criminal record since 1932, including robbery, concealed weapon, receiving stolen goods, counterfeiting OPA stamps, sentenced on May 20, 1958, to 10 years in Fairfax County, Va., violation of Virginia State narcotic laws.

Business: Landscaping and real estate dealer.

Modus operandi: An international narcotic trafficker with Mafia associates in Italy.

ANGELO TUMINARO

Aliases: "Little Angie," Angelo Tumenslo.

Description: Born on February 22, 1910, in New York City, 5 feet 2 inches, 135 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, cut scar near left eye.

Localities frequented: Resides at 24 Rutgers Street in New York City, frequents area of Madison and Pike Streets in lower Manhattan.

Family background: Married to Bella Stein; father, Pasquale; mother, Mary Presenzano; has seven brothers and five sisters.

Criminal associates: Anthony DiPasqua, Saro Mogavero, Al Embarrato, Frank Mari, Carli DiPietro, Nathan Behrman, all of New York City. Joe Cotroni of Montreal.

Criminal history: FBI No. 270010; New York City Police Department No. B-80192, several arrests since 1929 including grand larceny, assault and robbery, and violation of New York State narcotic laws.

Business: Has interest in Apollo Barber Shop at 144 Clinton Street in New York City.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 999

Modus operandi: Together with Anthony DiPasqua, is one of the largest wholesale narcotic traffickers in New York City, dealing with known Jewish traffickers, and having Mafia traffickers as a source of supply. Is suspected in some unsolved homicides in Manhattan.

CHARLES VINCENT TRUPIA

Aliases: Carlo Trupia.

Description: Born on November 26, 1923, in New York City, 5 feet 6 inches, 155 pounds, medium build, black hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides at 377 Broome Street in New York City. Frequent Towncrest Restaurant at 123 West 49th Street in New York City.

Family background: Single; resides with parents at 377 Broome Street; father, Vincenzo; mother, Carmela Celeste; brothers, Vincent and Angelo; sisters, Grace, Josephine (Mrs. Joseph) Dattalio.

Criminal associates: Joseph Di Palermo, Santo Sorge, Francesco Pirico, Peter Di Palermo.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4293745; New York City Police Department No. 305423. Record dates from 1945 when arrested for Army desertion. Convicted of narcotic trafficking in Italy and mail theft in the United States.

Business: Automobile mechanic, taxi driver.

Modus operandi: Trusted Mafia courier for money and narcotics.

JOSEPH VALACHI

Aliases: Joe Cago, Joe Cargo, Joe Kato, Joseph Siano.

Description: Born on September 22, 1903, in New York City, 5 feet 5 inches, 195 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides at 45 Shawnee Avenue, Yonkers, N.Y. Frequent the Belmont Avenue section of the Bronx, N.Y., and the Yonkers (N.Y.) Racetrack.

Family background: Wife, Mildred; son, Donald; father, Dominick; mother, Mary Casale (both dead); girl friend: Carol Jacobs Cuccuru.

Criminal associates: Anthony Strollo, John Stoppelli, Vincent Mauro, Arnold Romano, Salvatore Santoro, John Batista Salva, John Ormento, Giuseppe Doto, Fiore Siano, and Giacomo Reina.

Criminal history: FBI No. 544. New York City Police Department No. B-58458. Record dating from 1921 includes arrests for concealed weapon, burglary, robbery. Pleaded guilty to Federal narcotic law violation (1960).

Business: Formerly owned Lido Bar, 1362 Castle Hill Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Has part interest in jukebox firm and in several race horses.

Modus operandi: A trusted Mafia member and part of the Anthony Strollo narcotic smuggling and distributing organization. Wholesales heroin to major Mafia narcotic traffickers on the Upper East Side of New York City.

SALVATORE VALENTI

Alias: Turiddu.

Description: Born on June 16, 1907, in San Vito Lo Capo, Trapani, Sicily, Italy. Five feet 9 inches; 180 pounds; light complexion; gray-light brown hair; blue-gray eyes; has heart trouble.

Localities frequented: Resides Via Santuario No. 6, San Vito Lo Capo, Trapani, Sicily, Italy. Frequent Palermo, Naples, and all cities, towns, and villages in the Province of Trapani, Sicily. There have been instances where he has traveled to other parts of Sicily.

Criminal associates: Vincenzo Di Trapani, Leonardo Crimi, Agueci brothers, Francesco Paolo Fileccia, Giuseppe Palmieri, Benedetto Zizzo, Ernesto Marchese, Salvatore Marchese, Angelo and Salvatore La Barbera, Francesco Paolo Saverino.

Criminal history: No known previous criminal record, however, denounced in June 1961 for large-scale narcotic activities and is now awaiting trial in Italy.

Modus operandi: Valenti is one of the key members of the Mafia engaged in recruiting witting and unwitting couriers for large-scale shipment of narcotics to the United States and Canada. His position as a subagent for any number of freight forwarders makes him ideal as a courier spotter and anchor man for large-scale narcotic shipments destined for outside of Italy.

Agencies familiar with individual: Questura of Palermo, Questura of Trapani, Nucleo Polizia Tributaria, Palermo and Rome, Interpol, Rome, RCMP, French Surete, Arma Carabinieri in Italy, U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

1000 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

JOSEPH A. VENTO

Aliases: Babo, Sebastiano Vento.

Description: Born on February 8, 1913, in New York City; 5 feet 6½ inches, 165 pounds, medium build, brown hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides at 168-01 12th Avenue in Queens, N.Y. Frequent East Harlem area and vicinity of 50th Street and Broadway both in New York City. Helen Mar Hotel, Golden Nugget Hotel, Eden Roc Hotel, all in Miami, Fla.

Family background: Married to Mary Messina, has one daughter; brothers: Benjamin, Frank, and Jack; sisters: Nancy and Elizabeth; father: Louis; mother: Edmonda Schiletti.

Criminal associates: Salvatore Santoro, John Ormento, Salvatore LoProto, Alfred Felice, Pasquale Genese, John Schillaci, Harold Meltzer.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1432959; NYCPD No. B-103810, National List No. 408. Arrest record dates from 1932, and includes arrests for burglary, robbery, and violation of liquor laws. Conviction for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Salesman for Irving Lazarus Jewelers, 32 West 42d Street in New York City.

Modus operandi: A trusted member of the Mafia organization which controls the distribution of heroin in large quantities on the upper East Side of New York City. As a smuggler-distributor has been interested in clandestine laboratories.

SEBASTIANO BELLANCA

Aliases: Sebastiano Ballanca, Benny Bellanca, "The Bald Head," "Benny the Sicilian."

Description: Born January 6, 1904, Cattolica, Sicily; naturalized, January 8, 1931, New York City; 5 feet 4 inches; 165 pounds; build stocky, brown hair (graying) almost completely bald, eyes blue, medium complexion, scar on right cheek; sometimes wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Currently a fugitive, last known address 209 Tremont Avenue, Fort Lee, N.J. Frequented Guy's Restaurant, Astoria, N.Y., Montreal, Province of Quebec, and Windsor, Ontario.

Family background: Father was Pasquale, his mother Josephine Renda, wife is Jennie, has grown children.

Criminal associates: Frank Scalise (dead), Joe Pici, Peter Beddia, Jack Scarpulla, and Albert Anastasia (dead), Michele Sisco, Lucien Rivard, Sam Accardi.

Criminal history: FBI No. 797788, Ballanca has been convicted for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Last known business: Owner of Guy's Restaurant, Astoria, Long Island, N.Y.

Modus operandi: One of the most important international smugglers in the United States, and a top ranking Mafioso from the New York area; was originally a partner of Jack Scarpulla and Frank Scalise, he received narcotic supplies from the Coudert-Sisco combination of Montreal and France.

ANSAN ALBERT BISTONI

Aliases: Monsieur Albert, Aga Khan, Albert Bistoni, Joseph Bistoni.

Description: Born November 21, 1911, Marseilles, France. Corsican descent, 5 feet 7½ inches, 175 pounds, dark brown hair, pale eyes.

Localities frequented: Sometimes resides 35 rue Victor Masse, Paris, and sometimes with mother at Marseilles. Frequents Bar Villa D'Esaste and Bar Washington, Paris, also Cuba, Mexico, and Canada.

Family background: Father: Attilio; mother: Ida Buonchristiani; mistress: Simone Prevost.

Criminal associates: Roger Coudert, Paul Mondoloni, Jean Baptiste Croce, Antoine Galliano, Cotroni brothers of Montreal.

Criminal history: Interpol Secretariat file No. 841/52. Arrested three times for narcotic trafficking; 1956 convicted of narcotic trafficking and sentenced to 3 years imprisonment and 5 years restricted residence,

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1001

Business: Believed to have interests in the "Eve," "Cupidon," and "Pigalle" nightclubs, Havana, Cuba.

Modus operandi: Head of a large narcotic trafficking organization which smuggles morphine base into France and converts it to heroin, which is sent to the United States and Canada. Supplies several Mafia narcotic distributing organizations.

JOSEPH BONANNO

Aliases: Joe Bananas, Joe Bononno, Joe Bonnano, Joe Bouventre.

Description: Born January 18, 1905, Castellammare, Sicily; 5 feet 9 inches, 190 pounds, brown eyes, brown-gray hair; naturalized May 17, 1945, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Localities frequented: Resides 1847 East Elm Street, Tucson, Ariz. Travels extensively about United States and makes frequent trips to Italy.

Family background: Married Filippa LaBruzzo; daughter: Catherine; sons: Salvatore (married to Rosalie Profaci, niece of Giuseppe Profaci) and Joseph; father: Salvatore; mother: Catherine Bouventre; both parents deceased.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Francisco Costiglia, Giuseppe Profaci, Anthony Corallo, Thomas Lucchese, Carmine Galante.

Criminal history: FBI No. 2534540, NYCPD, No. B-85172, I&NS No. C-6602167. Record dating from 1930 includes arrests for grand larceny, possession of gun, transportation of machineguns, obstruction of justice.

Business: Has interests in Grande Cheese Co., Fond du Lac, Wis.; Alliance Realty & Insurance, Tucson, Ariz.; and Brunswick Laundry Service, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Modus operandi: Attended 1957 Apalachin Mafia meeting and Binghamton, N.Y., meeting 1956. One of the most important Mafia leaders in United States and attends all top-level Mafia meetings. Makes trips to Italy to confer with Mafia leaders there and to negotiate for international narcotic trafficking.

FRANK BORELLI

Aliases: Frankie Gooks, Frank the Hawk.

Description: Born June 19, 1925, New York City, 5 feet 9 inches, 180 pounds, with black hair (thinning), and brown eyes, wear glasses with thick lenses, is a very dapper dresser.

Localities frequented: Frequents the east Harlem section of New York City, and spends some time in Chicago, Ill., resides with his wife at 2042 Second Avenue, apartment 4, New York City.

Family background: Is married to Mary DeGeorge, daughter of Angelo DeGeorge, a convicted east Harlem narcotic violator, his brother-in-law, Mario Colucci, is also a convicted narcotic violator.

Criminal associates: Charles Curcio, Joe Bendenelli, Rocco Mазzie, Nick Tolentino, all narcotic traffickers and racketeers in east Harlem area, New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 3902235, New York City Police Department No. B206594, includes arrests for assault and robbery, burglary, and violation of State and Federal narcotic laws.

Business: None at present.

Modus operandi: Wholesale trafficker in heroin to associates in New York, Chicago, Ill., and Cleveland, Ohio, and trusted member of the Mafia from east Harlem, New York, area.

SALVATORE CANERA

Aliases: Toto, John Sperandeo.

Description: Born October 24, 1901, Palermo, Sicily, 5 feet 6 inches, 180 pounds, heavy build, black-graying hair, balding, brown eyes; poor English, fluent Italian and French.

Localities frequented: Resides Via Priscionano No. 69, Rome, Italy, frequently travels to Palermo and Milan, Italy, also Germany, France and Switzerland. Before deportation resided 3425 89th Street, Jackson Heights, New York, frequented vicinities of First Avenue and 11th Street, Second Avenue and 106th Street, New York City.

Family background: Married Irene Pluber (last reported living in New York City with their son); father: Giuseppe; mother: Marianna Anea (sister of late Pasquale Anea, former head of Mafia in Italy); brothers: Giosue, Giovanni, and Ugo.

1002 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal associates: William LoCascio, Samuel Kass, Peter Kourakis, Sorci brothers (Palermo), Rosario Mancini, Francois Paoleschi, Lucky Luciano, and Ugo Caneba (brother).

Criminal history: FBI No. 611860B. European record dates from 1918 and includes arrests for theft, criminal conspiracy, armed assault, receiving, etc., in Italy and France. Expelled from France 1936. Record in the United States dates from 1950 and includes arrests for violations of immigration and Federal narcotic laws; deported from the United States, 1954.

Business: Claims to be in finance and loan business.

Modus operandi: A prominent Mafia member. One of the largest narcotics smugglers and wholesale dealer in Italy, in partnership with his brother, Ugo, purchases pure heroin from major Corsican gangsters in Marseilles and Paris, France, and ships it to customers in the United States.

UGO CANEBA

Aliases: None.

Description: Born March 18, 1910, Palermo, Sicily, Italy, 5 feet 4 inches, 140 pounds, brown eyes, brown hair, balding, dark complexion, medium build, skin discoloration at right temple.

Localities frequented: Resides Via Priscioano No. 69, Rome, Italy, frequently travels to Palermo and Milan, Italy.

Family background, married; father: Giuseppe; mother: Marianna Anea (sister of late Pasquale Anea, the former head of Mafia in Italy); brothers: Salvatore, Giosue, and Giovanni.

Criminal associates: William LoCascio, Lucky Luciano, Serafino Mancuso, Rosario Mancino, Frank Locicero, Sorci brothers.

Criminal history: No FBI number. Arrested in Italy 1955 for traffic in contraband and 1957 in connection with the Berti-Gamba narcotic case.

Business: Claims to be in finance and loan business.

Modus operandi: Prominent Mafioso. Was the Italian agent for his brother, Salvatore Caneba, while the latter was in the United States. Now, in partnership with his brother; purchases pure heroin from Corsican gangsters in France and ships it to U.S. customers.

MICHAEL JOSEPH CONSOLO

Aliases: Mike Locaso, Anthony Leo, Michael Bruno.

Description: Born April 9, 1903, Siracusa, Sicily, Italy, naturalized 1944, 5 feet 8 inches, 175 pounds, stout build, black hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 61-05 76th Street, Rego Park, Queens, New York, maintains address: 35 East 25th Street, Bayonne, N.J. Frequents Mulberry and Worth Streets, New York City, Club Hoo-Ha, Bayonne, N.J., and Frankie's Auction Market, Lodi, N.J.

Family background: Wife: Mary Caso; daughter: Catherine; father: Salvatore; mother: Catherine Locaso; sisters: Connie Pagano and Anna Saturno; brother: Anthony.

Criminal associates: Carmine Galante, Joseph Zicarelli, Vito Genovese, Joseph Bonanno, Salvatore Giglio, Vincent Cotroni.

Criminal history: FBI No. 285487, New York City Police Department No. B59684, New Jersey State Police No. 399012. Record dates from 1915 and includes arrests for juvenile delinquency, vagrancy, robbery, grand larceny, homicide, and Federal alcohol laws.

Business: No legitimate employment known.

Modus operandi: Active in the leadership of the Galante-Zicarelli Mafia organization which carries on international and domestic narcotic traffic and large scale gambling operations.

GIUSEPPE COTRONI

Aliases: Pepe, Joe Catrone, Catroni.

Description: Born February 22, 1920, Reggio, Calabria, Italy, 5 feet 6½ inches, 200 pounds, brown eyes, brown hair, balding on top.

Localities frequented: Resides 3615 Ridgewood Street, apartment 104, Montreal, Canada. Frequents Metropole Club, Bonfire Restaurant, Jacques Cartier Motel, all in Montreal, also Vivere Lounge on Second Avenue, and Hotels Edison and Lexington in New York City.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1003

Family background: Single; Father, Giuseppe; mother, Mario Rosa Michelotti; brothers, Vincent, Frank, Michael; sister, Mrs. Marguerite Luca.

Criminal associates: Vincent Cotroni, Rene Robert, Joe Coccolichio, Lucien Rivard, Peter Stepanof, of Montreal; Carmine Galente, Salvatore Giglio, Angelo Tuminaro, Anthony DiPasqua, Frank Moccardi, Frank Mari of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 164790D, Royal Canadian Mounted Police No. 608. Arrests since 1937 include theft and receiving, theft by breaking into, theft with violence, possession of stolen bonds. Convicted in 1959, violation Canadian narcotic laws.

Business: Restaurant operator in Montreal, Canada.

Modus operandi: Head of the largest and most notorious narcotic syndicate on the North American Continent. A supplier of major Mafia traffickers in the United States; has direct French-Corsican sources of supply. Is a terrorist and vicious hoodlum in the Montreal area.

VINCENZO COTRONI

Aliases: Vincent Cotroni, Catroni, Catrone, Vic Cotroni.

Description: Born November 10, 1910, Marina, Reggio Calabria, Italy, 5 feet 5 inches, 170 pounds, blue-green eyes, black hair, stocky build, dark complexion. Naturalized Canadian.

Localities frequented: Resides 4800 Pie Neux Boulevard, Montreal, Canada. Frequents Chez Paree, Montreal; Sea Gulf Hotel, Miami; Hotel Nacional, Havana.

Family background: Married Maria Brisciani. Daughter, Rosina (Mrs. Frank Guzzo); father, Giuseppe; mother, Maria-Rosa Michelotti; brothers, Giuseppe, Frank, Michael; sister, Mrs. Marguerite Luca.

Criminal associates: Giuseppe Cotroni, Lucien Rivard, Carmine Galente, Rene Robert, Salvatore Giglio, Frank Moccardi.

Criminal history: FBI No. 415374D. Montreal Police FPE 183003. Record dates from 1928 and includes arrests for rape, false pretenses, counterfeiting, theft, receiving, felonious assault, and narcotic conspiracy.

Business: Owns Chez Paree and Vic's Cafe. Vice president of Servet Agencies, Ltd., pharmaceutical importing firm.

Modus operandi: He and his brother head the largest and most notorious narcotics syndicate in North America. Supplies major Mafia traffickers in United States with heroin obtained from French-Corsican sources. A vicious hoodlum who engineers varied major crimes.

ROGER ANTOINE COUDERT

Aliases: Charles Conte, Paul Brown, Joseph Mireault, Roy Roger, Roger Davis, Pierre Arnault.

Description: Born August 23, 1895, Cognac, Charente, France. French citizen, 6 feet 2 inches, 189 pounds, gray hair, hazel eyes, ruddy complexion, burn scars above upper lip.

Localities frequented: Since 1954 incarcerated at Federal Penitentiary, Atlanta Ga. Previously frequented French quarter of New York City and traveled between New York City, Canada, France, Mexico, and California.

Family background: Married Jessie Kenmuir. Father, Alexandre; mother, Lucie Nexon; no known brothers or sisters.

Criminal associates: Antoine D'Agostino, Paul Mondoloni, Antonio Farina, Assan Bistoni, Stephano D'Agostino, Cotroni brothers.

Criminal history: FBI No. 959779, New York City Police Department No. E-32883. Record dating from 1911 includes arrests for theft, vagrancy, fraud, assault, desertion, procuring, and conspiracy. In 1954 sentenced to 10 years and $16,000 fine for violation of Federal narcotic laws. Currently (1960) incarcerated.

Business: Has operated several cafes in Montmartre section of Paris.

Modus operandi: Part of large-scale narcotic smuggling organization which supplied huge quantities of heroin to Mafia racketeers in the United States and Canada.

JEAN BAPTISTE CROCE

Aliases: None.

Description: Born April 9, 1920, Olmeto di Tuda, Bastia, Corsica, France, 5 feet 7 inches, 185 pounds, black hair, stocky build.

1004 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Localities frequented: Resides at Marseilles, France. Also 15 rue de Perre, Paris, France. Travels by air to Montreal and Havana, Cuba. Owns two nightclubs in Havana, Cuba.

Family background: Married. Mistress, Catherine Maestracci; father, Dominique; mother's maiden name, Annonciade.

Criminal associates: Joseph Albert Bistoni, Dominique Albertini, Paul Mondolini of Marseilles, Controlli mob of Montreal.

Criminal history: FBI No. 394-335C. RCMP file No. 57HQ1180-4-Q7. Arrested in France for murder, in United States for immigration violation and smuggling investigation.

Business: Nightclub operator. Owns two nightclubs in Havana, Cuba.

Modus operandi: Top member of a group of French-Corsican narcotic traffickers who obtain large quantities of heroin from illicit laboratories in France, and smuggle it to Mafia racketeers in the United States and Canada.

CHARLES CURCIO

Aliases: Charlie Mouse, Charles Rossi.

Description: Born July 26, 1926, New York City, 5 feet 9 inches, 185 pounds, brown eyes, brown graying hair, medium complexion, heavy build.

Localities frequented: Resided at 33-18 159th Street, Flushing, N.Y., currently (1959) incarcerated.

Family background: Married to Rose Zaccardo. Children are Diane and Charles, Jr.; father, Anthony; mother, Mary Lemardo (both dead); brothers, Vincent, Anthony and Louis.

Criminal associates: Frank Borelli, Rocco Mазzie, Nick Tolentino, Joe and Ben Licchi, and most all narcotic traffickers in East Harlem, New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4226766, NYCPD No. B228844. Arrests date from 1944 and include burglary, larceny, State and Federal narcotic laws; sentenced May 24, 1957, Hackensack, N.J., 8 to 10 years, State narcotic violation.

Business: None.

Modus operandi: Associated with and received his narcotics from top echelon Mafia traffickers; a wholesale dealer both local and interstate, operated a clandestine laboratory.

ANTOINE D'AGOSTINO

Aliases: Michel Sisco, Louis Floris, Antoine Scarfoni, Alberto Blasis, Albert Dujardin, Lunettes.

Description: Born, December 8, 1914, Bone, Algeria. French citizen, 5 feet 7 inches, 177 pounds, heavy build, dark brown hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Marseilles, Paris, and Evereaux, France; Montreal, Canada; French restaurants in New York City and Mexico City. Currently (1960) incarcerated in Canada.

Family background: Married Suzanne Filleau. Daughter, Michele Teresa. Wife and daughter have taken name Filleau and reside Mexico City. Brothers, Albert and Stephen; father, Joseph; mother, Theresa Scarfoni. Both parents born Naples, Italy.

Criminal associates: Joseph Orsini, Carmelo Sansone, Francois Spirito, Paul Mondoloni, Marius Ansaldi, Salvatore Shillitani.

Criminal history: FBI No. 409989A. Record dates back to 1935 with arrests in Algeria and France for theft and treason. Federal narcotic conviction in United States and narcotic conviction in Canada for which sentenced to 3 years in 1958.

Business: No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: A persistent, large-scale narcotic trafficker. Closely allied with top Mafia members of Europe and North America and has supplied them with huge amounts of heroin, gold, and stolen jewelry.

ANTONIO FARINA

Aliases: Nino, Antonio Farina Bono.

Description: Born June 3, 1912, Palermo, Sicily; 5 feet 9½ inches; 221 pounds; black hair (bald), brown eyes, heavy build, speaks only Italian, 4-inch scar on right side of face from ear to neck.

Localities frequented: Resided Via Antonio Scioscia No. 1, Palermo, Italy, until the middle of 1959 when he disappeared. He is suspected of having clandestinely emigrated to Canada, South America, or Mexico. Before 1953 arrest, resided Paseo De la Reforma No. 489, Mexico City, and traveled frequently to the United States. Present whereabouts unknown.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1005

Family background: Wife, Rosa, resides in Sicily with their four children, Gioia, Bina, Massimo, and Elvira; in Mexico had paramour Lina D'Orlando DiBello; father, Antonio; mother, Lucia Bono.

Criminal associates: Roger Coudert, Antoine D'Agostino, Paul Mondoloni, John Soerandeo, Antonio Sorci, Antoine Cordoleani, Giuseppe Provenzano, and Paolo Greco, all of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 525025B. USM New York No. C-1652-53. Arrested in 1953 for violation Federal narcotic laws; sentenced April 1954 to serve 5 years and fined $10,000. In Italy has arrests since 1928 for living off profits of prostitution, violence, carrying a knife, and fraud.

Business: Owns real estate in Sicily. In Mexico operated drygoods store.

Modus operandi: Important Mafia narcotic trafficker. Acts as middleman between French and Italian sources of supply and customers in the United States.

CARMINE GALANTE

Aliases: Camillo Galentine, Carmine Galanti, Carmine Galento, Joseph Russell, Louis Volpe.

Description: Born February 21, 1910, in New York City; 5 feet, 5 inches; 168 pounds; gray hair, balding; brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 274 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y., frequents south New Jersey area, Miami, Montreal; also makes trips to Sicily.

Family background: Married to Helen Marullo; son, James; daughters, Camilla and Angela; brothers, Sam and Peter; sisters, Mrs. Angela Volpe, Mrs. Josephine Volpe.

Criminal associates: Frank Garofolo, Joe DiPalermo, Vito Genovese, Joe Bonanno, Joe Profaci, Meyer Lansky, all of New York City, Joe Controni and Lucien Rivard of Montreal.

Criminal history: FBI No. 119495, New York City Police Department No. B-66994, arrests since 1921 include juvenile delinquent, robbery, assault, homicide, Federal narcotic laws. With Joe DiPalermo as an accomplice, believed to have murdered Carlo Tresca in New York City (1943).

Business: Operates Rosina Costume Co., Brooklyn, N.Y., and Latamer Shipping Co., Manhattan.

Modus operandi: Attended Binghamton, N.Y., Mafia meeting 1956. An extremely important figure in the international drug traffic and a ranking Mafia member engaged in terrorist activities. In 1956 he was top representative of American racketeering activities in Montreal.

ALFRED GUIDO

Aliases: Ralph Petrolli, Iggy, Eggy.

Description: Born in New York City September 26, 1911; 5 feet, 8 inches; 160 pounds; medium build; black hair; brown eyes; sallow complexion; 3-inch scar right arm.

Localities frequented: Resides 2516 Bedford Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y., frequents lower East Side, New York City, also Turf Bar, 51st Street and Broadway, New York City.

Family background: Wife, Josephine Cuccinello; children, Katherine, Richard, Jessie; father, Angelo; mother, Catherine Signetti; father remarried to Rose Isola; half-brothers, Albert and Alex; half-sister, Marie.

Criminal associates: Arnold Romano, George and Tony Angelet, Joseph Tedesche, Salvatore Chellemi.

Criminal history: FBI No. 779756, New York City Police Department No. B-121495. Has a record dating from 1934 including arrests for violation National Motor Theft Act, forgery of U.S. bonds, and vagrancy; has two State and two Federal narcotic convictions.

Business: No legitimate employment.

Modus operandi: In association with other Mafiosi wholesales heroin on lower East Side of New York.

1006 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

SALVATORE C. LUCANIA

Aliases: Lucky Luciano, Charles Reid, Charles Luciano, Charles Lucania, Charles Ross.

Description: Born November 24, 1897, Lercara Friddi, Sicily; 5 feet 10 inches, brown eyes, black-gray hair, 140 pounds, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides 464 Via Tasso, Naples, frequents Zia Teresa, San Francisco and Giacomino's restaurants, all in Naples, also the Agnano race-track in Naples.

Family background: Single; father, Antonio; mother, Rosalia Cafarella (both deceased); brother, Bartolo (living in New York City).

Criminal associates: Vito Genovese, Joe Biondo, Joe Profaci, Joe Bonanno, Frank Costello, Meyer Lansky, all of United States; Joe Doto, Joe Pici, Pietro Davi, Frank Pirico, all of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 62920, New York City Police Department No. B-72321. Arrests since 1916 include assault and robbery, grand larceny, and conviction of Federal narcotic laws. Sentenced New York City 1936 to 30 to 50 years for compulsory prostitution; paroled and deported to Italy in 1946.

Business: Has interests in San Francisco Cafe and is secret owner of apartment building at 464 Via Tasso, both in Naples; also interested in a clinic at Cercola, a suburb of Naples.

Modus operandi: Is one of the highest ranking Mafia both in Italy and the United States. From Italy he participates in directing American rackets and regularly receives his share of the profits through Mafia couriers.

SERAFINO MANCUSO

Aliases: Pier DeStefano, Pierre De Stefano, Sam, Pierre Stefano.

Description: Born April 5, 1911, Alcamo, Sicily, 5 feet 7½ inches, 162 pounds, medium build, medium complexion, black hair, dark hazel eyes, vertical scar ¾ inch left temple.

Localities frequented: Deported from the United States of America (New York City, N.Y.) in 1947 and established residence in Alcamo. He has traveled much and has worked as a seaman on oceangoing ships.

Family background: Father, Francesco Paolo; mother, Vincenza Ferrara; brothers, Salvatore and Giuseppe Mancuso, well-known Mafia hoodlums and narcotic traffickers.

Criminal associates: Morris Shatz, Francesco Paolo Coppola, Vincenzo Rimi, Giuseppe Corso, Sr., Giuseppe Corso, Jr.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1191423, arrested in 1936 for smuggling narcotics into the United States of America and served 10 years in the Federal penitentiary. He was paroled and deported to Italy in February of 1947. Arrested and convicted in 1952 at Alcamo for possession of trunk containing 6 kilos of heroin he was shipping to United States for Frank Coppola.

Business: With his brother, Giuseppe, he operates a large farm near Alcamo, Sicily.

Modus operandi: With his brother, Giuseppe, he maintains close ties with French heroin suppliers furnishing to Mafia associates in the United States and Italy heroin which he obtains from the French.

VINCENZO FRANCESCO ANGELO MAURO

Aliases: Vincent Murio, Vincent Maurio, Vincent J. Morrio, Vinnie Morrow.

Description: Born February 26, 1916, New York City, 5 feet 11 inches, 194 pounds, brown eyes, dark brown hair.

Localities frequented: Resides 3824 Bronx Boulevard, Bronx, and also at 22 King Street, in Manhattan. Frequents Burke Bar and Ciro's Bar, both in Bronx, and most night clubs in midtown Manhattan and in Greenwich Village area.

Family background: Single, father: Salvatore, mother: Rafaela Criscuolo, sisters: Teresa and Amelia.

Criminal associates: Anthony Strollo, John Stoppelli, John Ormento, Salvatore Santoro, Patsy Moccio (dead), Anthony Mirra, Joe Valachi.

Criminal history: FBI No. 760750, New York City Police Department. B No. 115392. Arrests since 1933 include robbery, burglary, Federal income tax evasion and Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Usually associates himself with some night club or bar which is under the control of the Strollo organization.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1007

Modus operandi: A high ranking member of the Tony Strollo controlled Mafia organization, which is involved in narcotic trafficking, shylocking, policy rackets, and after hours "joints." Considered a merciless vicious "killer."

ROCCO MAZZIE

Alias: Rogie.

Description: Born February 25, 1916, Luzerne, Pa., 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, brown eyes, brown-gray hair.

Localities frequented: Resides 2332 Seymour Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Frequents East Harlem area of Manhattan.

Family background: Married to Anna Vacchi; daughter: Amelia; brothers: Ralph and James; sister: Mrs. Angelina Branca; mother: Amelia Pecoria; father: Angelo.

Criminal associates: Frank Borelli, Charles Curcio, John Ormento, Vincent Squillante, Steve Pucco, Frank Pasqua, Nick Tolentino, all of New York City; Salvatore Poliafico of Cleveland.

Criminal history: FBI No. 836192. New York City Police Department No. B-128301. Arrests since 1934 include robbery, assault and robbery, conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate business or employment known.

Modus operandi: A wholesale dealer in narcotics who has supplied many important traffickers throughout the United States. A close associate of known Mafia traffickers who are his source of supply.

PAUL DAMIEN MONDOLONI

Aliases: Paul Marie Bejin, Eduardo Dubian Chabolla, Jacques Desmarais, Paul Mondolini, Paul Madraleni, Jean Kroeber.

Description: Born September 27, 1916, Sartene, Corsica, France. French citizen, 5 feet 6 inches, 140 pounds, brown hair, blue eyes.

Localities frequented: Frequents Paris, Montreal, Mexico City, and gambling casinos in Havana, Cuba.

Family background: Mistress: Marcelle Senesi; father: Antoine; mother: Marie Giacomini.

Criminal associates: Jean Baptiste Croce, Roger Coudert, Marcelle Senesi, Nathan Behrman, Dominic Nicoli, Giuseppe Cotroni, Antoine D'Agostino.

Criminal history: FBI No. 564009-B. Arrested in United States for immigration violation and narcotic conspiracy, in France for aggravated theft and armed attack and in Mexico (1960) for immigration violation.

Business: No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: Internationally known narcotic trafficker with associates in Canada, Mexico, Cuba, France, United States, and elsewhere. Originally became notorious as a jewel thief. Closely associated with top Mafia racketeers.

JOSEPH ORSINI

Aliases: Joseph Casabianca, Joe Dorney, Francois.

Description: Born March 19, 1903, Bastia, Corsica, France, French citizen, 5 feet 8 inches, 170 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, partly bald, medium build, tattoos on left arm.

Localities frequented: Now resides in France. Formerly resided at 26 West 85th Street, New York City, and frequented French restaurants in the midtown area of New York City.

Family background: Mistress: Marcelle Ansellem; father: Louis; mother: Maria Leonetti.

Criminal associates: Antoine D'Agostino, Francois Spirito, Jean Laget, Jean Ager, Marius Ansaldi, Dominique Reissant, Saul Gelb, Edouard Giribone, Carmelo Sansone, Vincent Randazzo, Salvatore Shillitani.

Criminal history: FBI No. 708363-A. He has been convicted in France for fraud and robbery and collaboration with the Germans during World War II. Federal narcotic and counterfeiting convictions in United States, for which sentenced to 10 years 1951. Deported from United States, 1958.

Business: Ex-seaman. No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: He was the Canadian-American representative for the Ansaldi group which operated a clandestine laboratory in France and smuggled heroin in large quantities to Mafia racketeers in the United States.

1008 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

PASQUALE ANTHONY PAGANO

Aliases: Big Pat, Patsy Pagano.

Description: Born February 21, 1921, New York City, 5 feet 11 inches, 202 pounds, black hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 3023 Fish Avenue, Bronx, N.Y., frequented East Harlem section and night clubs in New York City.

Family background: Father, Donato; mother, Antoinette DiMasti; married to Laura Prete and has two children; brothers, Joseph, John.

Criminal associates: Tony Strollo, Steve Armone, Fiore Siano, Jack Scarpulla, Joe Pagano (brother), all of New York City; Pat Erra and Mike Coppola of Miami, Fla., Alfredo Badulati (France).

Criminal history: FBI No. 74687B, Jersey City Police Department No. 13856. Arrests since 1952 include atrocious assault and battery, conviction for bribing Federal officer, and conviction (1956) for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Was business agent for Local 59, International Bricklayer's Helpers, AFL prior to narcotic arrest; also a mason contractor, and New Jersey dock worker for Mafia chief Tony Strollo.

Modus operandi: An international and interstate smuggler and distributor of narcotics with his own source of supply in France. An up and coming Mafia leader in East Harlem, New York City.

ANTRANIK PAROUTIAN

Alias: Andre.

Description: Born April 30, 1925, Gardonne (Bouches du Rhone), France. French-Armenian, 5 feet 8 inches, 190 pounds, dark brown wavy hair, brown eyes, stocky build, round face.

Localities frequented: Resides 211 Promenade de la Corniche and frequents Place de l'Opera, both Marseilles, France.

Family background: Unmarried; father, Ohannes (deceased); mother, Boyzar Armandjan (resides with Paroutian); brother, Sauren.

Criminal associates: Joseph DiPalermo, Carmine Galante, Ernesto Barese, Roger Quendane, Giuseppe LiGiorgio, Jean Baptiste Croce, Paul Mondoloni.

Criminal history: Arrested 1947 for violation of the French Price Control Act and 1949 as a violator of the French economic law, 1960 Federal narcotic conspiracy (United States).

Business: Purports to be in the grocery business, operating under the name of Gabried & Cie, No. 6 Rue Bussy, l'Indien, Marseilles, France.

Modus operandi: Large-scale narcotic trafficker who obtains morphine base in Turkey, Syria, and Lebanon for conversion in illicit laboratories in France. Smuggles furnished heroin by way of Canada to Mafia traffickers in the United States.

FRANK ANTHONY PASQUA

Aliases: Frank Page, Frank Pasquale, Frank Hunt.

Description: Born January 13, 1923, New York City; 6 feet, 250 pounds, brown eyes, dark brown hair, heavy build.

Localities frequented: Resides 974 Rhineland Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Frequented area of East Harlem in Manhattan and Chicago, Ill. Currently (1959) incarcerated for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Family background: Married to Mildred Bartolamucci; sons, Richard and Frank; father, Natale; mother, Rose Comodeo.

Criminal associates: Jack Scarpulla, John Riccardulli, James Massi, Mike Galgano, Rocco Mазzie, Frank Corona, all of New York City; Frank Panatera and Jack Rizzo of Chicago, Ill.

Criminal history: FBI No. 241577B. Convicted April 25, 1958, to 4 years for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Was self-employed in the produce trucking business.

Modus operandi: Has been a major interstate narcotic trafficker in association with known Mafia traffickers from East Harlem area of Manhattan.

JOHN MICHAEL PETRONE

Aliases: John Bennett, John Michael, John Carrila.

Description: Born February 4, 1896, New York City, 5 feet 8 inches, 175 pounds, blue eyes, gray hair, left index finger amputated.

Localities frequented: Resides 1500 Rowland Street, Bronx, N.Y., frequents Pastry Shop, Elizabeth and Prince Streets, Michael Angelo Jewelry Shop, 37 West 47th Street, both in New York City, and Gondolfo Motors, Bronx, N.Y.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1009

Family background: Married to Mary Rose Cerrita; son: John; daughter: Annette Marie Mirrando.

Criminal associates: Salvatore Shillitani, Anthony D'Agostino, Charles and Joseph DiPalermo, Carmine Galanti, Mike Consolo, Albert Spitzer, Paul Gambino, Joseph Notaro and Charles Porcelli.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1474964. NYCPD No. B-408659. Arrests since 1938 include concealing assets in bankruptcy and conviction for counterfeiting.

Business: Has interests in Michael Angelo Jewelry Shop, 37 West 47th Street, New York City.

Modus operandi: An international narcotic trafficker who also deals in gold smuggling and counterfeiting. A close and trusted associate of high-ranking Mafia in New York City.

GIUSEPPE PICI

Aliases: Joe Picci, Peach, Pacey, Pisano, Chester Ricardi.

Description: Born April 27, 1911, Bovino, Foggia, Italy, 5 feet 7 inches, 165 pounds, brown eyes, black hair.

Localities frequented: Resided Via Aurelia No. 47, Bogliasco, Genoa, Italy. Before deportation from United States, in 1946 lived in Turtle Creek, Pa., and made frequent trips to Pittsburgh, Kansas City, and New York City. Currently (1959) incarcerated.

Family: Wife: Enrica; two children of his deceased former wife, Joseph and Janet, live in Turtle Creek, Pa., father: Santo; mother: Teresa Carletto.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Carmine Tufarelli, Michele Cerami, Giovanni Gioia, Gaetano Ciofalo (deceased).

Criminal history: FBI No. 639336. Pittsburgh PD No. 26793. Record in United States dates from 1932 and includes arrests for violation of firearms act, white slavery, conspiracy, suspicious person and violation of immigration laws.

Business: Claims to be landowner and frequently invests in restaurant and bar enterprises.

Modus operandi: Important Mafia figure and wholesale supplier of heroin to smugglers. Organizes and finances other criminal activities, principally alien smuggling.

FRANCESCO PIRICO

Aliases: Don Ciccio, Cheech.

Description: Born June 1, 1901, Palermo, Sicily, 5 feet 10 inches, 180 pounds, brown eyes, light brown hair, small mouth, usually wears glasses and mustache, has droopy right eyelid.

Localities frequented: Resides via Vincenzo Monte No. 34, Milan, Italy.

Family background: Father: Giovanni; mother: Angela Pirico (both deceased); son: Gianni.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Giuseppe Pici, Nicola Gentile, Joseph Di Palermo, Albert Bistoni, Nicolo DiGiovanni, Francesco Saverino, Egidio Calascibetta.

Criminal history: Never in United States. Record in Italy dating back many years includes arrests for theft, gambling, fraud and narcotic trafficking.

Business: Claims to be a businessman and tradesman.

Modus operandi: Important Mafia figure, 1948 to 1951 was distributor of large quantities of diverted heroin from the Schapparelli Pharmaceutical Co., supplying U.S. customers Frank Scalise, Joseph DiPalermo, Eugene Giannini, and others. When diversion ceased he obtained French heroin for his American customers.

CARMELO SANSONE

Aliases: Michel Nasone, Schnozzola.

Description: Born September 10, 1912, New York City; 5 feet 9 inches, 160 pounds, brown eyes, black hair, nose scars due to plastic surgery, tattoo of man's head on right forearm, tattoo of woman's head on left forearm.

Localities frequented: Resides 163 West 71st Street, New York City. Frequented French restaurants in vicinity 8th Avenue and West 47th Street in Manhattan.

Family background: Single; brothers, Joseph and Chalo; sister, Mrs. Angelo Ouvar; mother, Josephine Kanala (dead); father, Carmelo.

Criminal associates: Eugene Giannini (dead), Jean Laget, Lucien Ignaro, Giovanni and Corrado Maugeri, Francisco Pirico, Antoine D'Agostino, Francois Spirito.

1010 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal history: FBI No. 780875A. NYCPD B-299646. Arrests since 1951 include convictions for Federal narcotic laws. Currently (1959) awaiting trial for violation Federal narcotic laws at New York City.

Business: No legitimate business of employment known.

Modus operandi: An important Mafia narcotic trafficker who has direct sources of supply from international Corsican Mafia traffickers.

FRANCESCO PAOLO SAVERINO

Aliases: Don Ciccio, F. Severino.

Description: Born August 5, 1911, Salemi, Trapani, Sicily; 5 feet 6 inches, 155 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, thin build, mustache, very good dresser.

Localities frequented: Lives at Viale Papignao No. 28, Milan, Italy; frequents better nightclubs in Milan and also the cities of Rome, San Remo in season and other major cities of Italy and Sicily.

Family background: Father, Salvatore; mother, Alonza Gaspare, both born in Italy.

Criminal associates: Frank Pirico, Ugo Caneba, Sal Caneba, Alberto Bianciardi, Frank Coppola, Paolo Greco, Serafino Mancuso, Joe Pici, Joe Pellegrino, Eugene Giannini (dead), Michael Cerami, Constantino Gamba, Dr. Enzo Berti, and all other major narcotic violators in Italy.

Criminal history: Dates from 1938. At one time he was arrested for resisting a police officer. Arrested in 1949 for possession of 2 kilos of cocaine and convicted in 1950 Palermo. In 1958 arrested in Milan in connection with the Enzo Berti et al. laboratory case.

Business: Operated a textile business on Via V. Hugo No. 2, Milan, Italy.

Modus operandi: Operates clandestine heroin laboratories in Italy. Is also supplied by Corsican gangsters in France. Distributes kilo lots of heroin to many important American gangs.

FRANK SCALICI

Aliases: Scalise; Scalisi, Don Cheech.

Description: Born February 22, 1893; 5 feet 7 inches tall; 150 pounds; neat dresser; mustache; bald.

Localities frequented: Resides at 211 Kirby Street, City Island, Bronx, N.Y.; frequents Lower East Side of New York; the Delmont Bar, 180th Street and Hughes Avenue, Bronx, N.Y.

Criminal associates: Luigi Morici and Vincenzo Carona of Baltimore, Md. "Lucky" Luciano, Vincent Squillante, Anthony Strollo, Giacomo and Angelo Scarpulla, Rocco Mазzie, Pasquale Pagano, Benny Ballanca, Carlo Gambino, Roger Coudert.

Criminal history: No criminal record available. His fingerprints and records have been removed from the files of the various agencies.

Present modus operandi of criminal operations: He is an important figure in the Italian-American underworld. He arranges for the smuggling of narcotics into the United States and the distribution of these narcotics throughout the United States. He is the head of a syndicate that deals directly with European wholesalers of narcotics.

Agencies, familiar with individual: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

MICHELE GIACOMO SCARPULLA

Aliases: Giacomino, Jack Scarpulla.

Description: Born May 16, 1899, Palermo, Sicily, Italy; 5 feet 8 inches, 185 pounds, stout build, dark complexion, brown eyes, brown hair turning white.

Localities frequented: Resides 77 Winter Street, Bronx, N.Y. Frequents New Prosperity Meat Market, 284 5th Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y., and Crescent Avenue section of Bronx, N.Y.

Family background: Married Rosa Scalici (sister of late Francesco); son, Angelo; daughter, Maria Anna; father, Giacomo; mother, Marion Quadrini; Angelo married Rosemary Lapi, daughter of convicted counterfeiter Vincent Rocco Lapi.

Criminal associates: Frank Luciano, Carlo and Paul Gambino, Joseph Bisogno, Salvatore Caneba, Sebastiano Bellanca.

Criminal history: FBI No. 983998; NYCPD B-113221. Record dates from 1933 and includes arrests for grand larceny and bootlegging.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1011

Business: He and son Angelo own and operate New Prosperity Meat Market, 284 5th Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Modus operandi: High echelon Mafioso. Key member of the large-scale narcotic smuggling ring formerly headed by his brother-in-law the late Francesco Scalici.

VINCENT JAMES SQUILLANTE

Aliases: Jimmy Jerome.

Description: Born June 17, 1917, New York City; 5 feet 2 inches, 130 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, slight build, large horn-rimmed glasses, natty dresser.

Localities frequented: Resides 1962 Narragansett Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Frequents 106th Street and First Avenue, Jennie's Restaurant at 2036 Second Avenue, and midtown night clubs, all in Manhattan, 187th and Cambreling Avenue, and Bluebird Restaurant at 2890 Burke Avenue, Bronx, N.Y.; 1961 missing and underworld reports him dead.

Family background: Married Theresa Scialabba 1949 and had one child, Bedilia; divorced 1951 and married Olivia Hughes, by whom two daughters, Donna and Olivia; father, Louis; mother, Euthalia Alberti; brother, Nunzio; nephew, Jerry Mancuso; has seven sisters.

Criminal associates: Rocco Mazzie, Frank Borelli, Charles Curcio, Nunzio Squillante, Benjamin DiMartino, Anthony Sedotto.

Criminal history: FBI No. 700100C; Nassau County, N.Y. (N.Y.) PD No. 25155. Record dating from 1953 includes arrests for income tax violation, violation of probation and extortion.

Business: Holds position in numerous unions and had interests in several garment and surplus companies.

Modus operandi: Has risen from smalltime narcotics peddler to top racketeer and labor extortionist; is feared by lesser racketeers because of his powerful position in the Mafia. Finances narcotic smuggling ventures and controls garbage collection business in greater New York, through Mafia tactics. Claims to be godchild of the late Mafia leader Albert Anastasia.

ANTHONY C. STROLLO

Aliases: Tony Benda, Tony Bender.

Description: Born June 18, 1899, New York City, 5 feet 7½ inches, 156 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides at 1015 Palisades Avenue, Fort Lee, New Jersey, frequents Greenwich Village section of Manhattan and dock area in Newark and Hoboken, N.J.

Family background: Married to Edna Goldenberg and has three children; father, Leone; mother, Giovannina Nigro; brothers, Emilio and Dominick (both dead).

Criminal associates: Frank Costello, Joe Adonis, Vito Genovese, Vincent Mauro, Pat Pagano, Joe Valachi, Anastasia brothers, and most top racketeers in New York City and United States.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4282858, New York City Police Department No. B-64086. Arrests from 1926 include possession of a gun, conspiracy to contrive a lottery.

Business: Claims to be a real estate broker.

Modus operandi: One of most powerful racketeers in the United States, having control of northern New Jersey dock area. A recognized Mafia leader and head of a narcotic smuggling, distributing organization with several of his criminal associates who handle the distribution of narcotics.

SALVATORE VITALE

Aliases: Toto, Don Toto, the Short One.

Description: Born October 1, 1902, Partinico, Sicily, Italy, 5 feet 6 inches, 140 pounds, black hair, sharp features, long nose. Illegal alien.

Localities frequented: Resided at 5670 Mary Jane Drive, San Diego, Calif., disappeared May 1956, and has not since been located. Frequented Detroit and southern California.

Family background: Married Katherine Matranga; daughter, Rose Marie DeGregorio; son, Salvatore, Jr.; father, Francesco Paolo; mother, Rosa Arculeo.

Criminal associates: Francesco Paola Coppola, Lucky Luciano, Matranga family, Ralph Caneba, Dominic LiMandri.

1012 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal history: FBI No. 1209612. Detroit Police Department No. 53442. Criminal history dates from 1936 when convicted of Federal narcotics and liquor violations. Sentenced to 15 years; 1937 sentence commuted and permitted to depart United States voluntarily. Returned illegally, arrested and returned to prison 1952. Released 1954 on a technicality and was awaiting both new trial and deportation when he disappeared.

Business: Formerly operated Tropics Cafe, 122 Broadway, San Diego, Calif., owned by corporation consisting of his wife and brothers-in-law, Joseph and Gaspare Matranga.

Modus operandi: A top level Mafia narcotics violator who smuggled large quantities of heroin into the United States, for distribution in Detroit, California, and New Orleans.

EXHIBIT No. 3SETTIMO ACCARDO

Aliases: Sam Accardi, Big Sam, Giuseppe Accarobl.

Description: Born October 23, 1902, Vita, Sicily, 5 feet 9½ inches, 200 pounds, brown eyes, heavy build, black hair, graying and receding.

Localities frequented: Family resides at 188 Franklin Street, Bloomfield, N.J., he is currently (1959) a fugitive for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Family background: Married to Teresa Menio; has three sons, Salvatore, Carmine, and Joseph; parents (dead) were Salvatore and Francesca Avila; sister is Pietra; and brothers, Joseph and Frank (dead).

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Tom and Charles Campisi, Carmine Lo Cascio, Joe Doto, Frank Costello, Tony Corallo, Tony Strollo, Cristoforo Rubino (dead), and all top underworld leaders in New York and New Jersey.

Criminal history: FBI No. 603907, Newark Police Department No. 17577. Arrests since 1928 include atrocious assault and battery, violation Federal narcotic laws (1955), is fugitive in this case, having jumped $92,500 bond.

Business: Was engaged in real estate and building construction in Newark, N.J., area.

Modus operandi: A very important top echelon underworld leader from Newark area, who was engaged in international narcotic trafficking.

IPPOLITO PAOLO AGRESTA

Aliases: Paul Agresto, "Greaseball," "Kip."

Description: Born June 18, 1906, Gioia Tauro Calabria, Italy, 5 feet 6 inches, 155 pounds, black-gray hair, brown eyes, naturalized June 20, 1945, Bridgeport, Conn.

Localities frequented: Resides at 85 Steuben Street, Bridgeport, Conn. Frequents Hotel Savoy, Mento's Service Station, Ocean Sea Grill, all Bridgeport, Conn.

Family background: Married to Francesca Corica; brothers, Joseph, Vincent, Anthony, and Rocco; has several sisters also.

Criminal associates: Frank Piccolo, Philip Barrese, Larry Vastano, all of Bridgeport; Sam Accardi and John Ormento of New York area; Joe Doto and Vincent Speranza of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4862273. Arrested 1947 at Milford, Conn., for idleness, later changed to extortion, for which he received an 8-month sentence.

Business: Salesman for Columbia Motors (used cars), Bridgeport, Conn., which is owned by Frank Piccolo.

Modus operandi: A trusted associate of known underworld traffickers in New York City. Makes trips to Italy in connection with narcotic transactions. With Frank Piccolo he controls a good deal of the illegal gambling in Bridgeport area.

PHILIP JOSEPH ALBANESE

Aliases: Phil Katz, Philly.

Description: Born November 7, 1907, New York, N.Y.; 5 feet 9 inches, 180 pounds, brown eyes, dark-brown hair, sallow complexion, and stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides at 1108 Philip Court, Valley Stream, Long Island, N.Y. Frequents 121 Mulberry Street, 124th Street and 1st Avenue, and pier 28, North River, all in New York City.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1013

Family background: Divorced from Lillian Cappola in 1931. Currently married to Rose Russo. They have two children. Brothers, Joseph, Dominick, Anthony, and Rosario; and sister, Nancy; all residing in New York City.

Criminal associates: George Nobile, Joe Marone, Vito Tozzi, Eugene Uricola, Charles DiUmberto, and Frank Donato.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4042881, New York City Police Department No. B-262814. Dates from 1925 and includes robbery, income tax evasion, and violations of the narcotics laws.

Business: A public loader on the North River piers, New York, N.Y.

Modus operandi: A strong arm man for the underworld and reputed boss of New York City's fourth ward for this organization.

CHARLES ALBERO

Aliases: Charlie Bullets, Charles Rizzo, Albert Rizzo, Charles Crescenzo.

Description: Born April 26, 1902, New York City, 5 feet 7½ inches, 170 pounds, medium build, dark-brown hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 2390 Tiebout Avenue, Bronx, N.Y.; frequents Vinnie's Restaurant, Midnight Cafe, and Jenny's Restaurant, Bronx, N.Y., also racetracks.

Family background: Wife's name Dorothy; children are Charles, Jr., Franklin, and Madeline; is brother-in-law of Charles "Four Cents" Salerno.

Criminal associates: Joe Rao, Joe Marone, Mike Coppola, Joe Tocco, Joe Dentico, Steve Armone, Frank Livorsi, John Ormento, and all top hoodlums in East Harlem area, New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 69088, New York City Police Department No. 49903, arrests commence in 1941 and include concealed weapons, narcotics (New York State) grand larceny, rape, and conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Employed at Melrose Salvage Co., and Bridge Motors Inc., both in Bronx.

Modus operandi: Interstate and international narcotic trafficker, a leader of the underworld traffickers from New York's East Harlem area.

ANDREW ALBERTI

Aliases: Andy.

Description: Born October 15, 1920, New York City, 5 feet 5 inches, 175 pounds, dark-brown hair, brown eyes, stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides 2675 Henry Hudson Parkway, Bronx, N.Y., frequents area East 12th Street and 1st Avenue and most prizefights in New York City. Makes trips to Italy.

Family background: Married to Adele Serpentine, daughter, Marilyn, son, Andrew, Jr.; brother, James; father, Frank; mother, Domenica Cammarata (both dead).

Criminal associates: Steve Armone, John Laget, Hugo Rossi, John Ormento, Joe DiPalermo, Frank J. Valenti, Peter C. Valenti, Louis Saccaroma, Salvatore Mezzasalma.

Criminal history: FBI No. 345652B. Only arrest on April 23, 1953, on a complaint for violation Federal narcotic laws which was dismissed.

Business: Operates the Alberti Baking Co., 441 East 12th Street, New York City, with his brother James. Also has interests in prizefighters.

Modus operandi: Has taken over position of his deceased father in the underworld from the area of East 12th Street and 1st Avenue. Makes trips to Italy in connection with narcotic smuggling operations and together with Jean Laget and Steve Armone, constitutes a major source of supply for wholesale dealers in New York City.

JOSEPH ARMONE

Aliases: Piney, Shorty Armone.

Description: Born September 13, 1917, New York City, 5 feet 5 inches, 140 pounds, brown hair, gray eyes, medium complexion, small build.

Localities frequented: Resided 143 Jefferson Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequented Lulu's Bar, Second Avenue and 13th Street and area of East 14th Street and First Avenue. Currently (1959) incarcerated for New York State parole violation.

Family background: Married to Josephine DiQuarto and they have two children; father, Teri; mother, Anna (both dead); brothers, Steve, Frank, and Angelo; sisters, Angela, Florence, and Margarita.

1014 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal associates: Steve Armone (brother), Andrew Alberti, Angelo Meli, George Nobile, Eugene Tramaglino, Arnold Romano, all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 798682. New York City Police Department No. B-12581. Arrests since 1933 include robbery, felonious assault, homicide, and conviction of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate business or employment known.

Modus operandi: A member of the underworld trafficking organization in the vicinity of East 14th Street and 1st Avenue, New York City, which is headed by his brother Steve and Arnold Romano. Is a dangerous hoodlum.

STEPHEN ARMONE

Aliases: Stefano Armona, Frank Pizzo, Joe Marinello, 14 Street Steve, Frank Charmonte.

Description: Born November 17, 1899, Palermo, Sicily. 5 feet, 4 inches, 163 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair, limps due to fracture of left hip.

Localities frequented: Resides 98-05 63d Road, Queens, New York. Frequent East 14th Street, 1st to 37th Avenues, and the Alberti Baking Co., 441 East 12th Street, all New York City.

Family background: Father, Terenzio; mother, Anna Grammauta (both deceased); brothers, Joseph, Frank, Angelo; sisters, Angela, Florence, and Margarita.

Criminal associates: Andrew Alberti, Joseph Marone, Joseph Valachi, Arnold Romano, Eugene Tramaglino, Joseph Armone, Charles Albergo, Anthony Strollo.

Criminal history: FBI No. 320538 New York City Police Department No. B-86090. Arrests since 1918 include assault and battery with intent to kill, burglary, Federal narcotic law conviction.

Business: No legitimate business or employment known.

Modus operandi: A underworld leader in New York City's East 14th Street area. With Arnold Romano and other underworld members has been engaged in large-scale narcotic smuggling and wholesale distribution for many years.

ARNOLD BARBATO

Aliases: Wash, Curly, Anthony Barbato.

Description: Born January 30, 1911, New York City, 5 feet 7 inches, 140 pounds, black-gray hair, brown eyes, slim build, medium complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 2350 Beaumont Avenue, Bronx, New York, frequents East Harlem section of New York City, primarily the Blue Moon Bar, 115th Street and 1st Avenue.

Family background: Married Dorothy Sacco; children, Maria and Anthony; father, Anthony; mother, Maria Desimone; brothers, Sam, Michael, Joseph; sisters, Nettie Calvelli and Angela Barbato.

Criminal associates: Michael Corsaro, Joseph Marone, Joseph Rao, Michael Coppola, Calogero Lovetro.

Criminal history: FBI No. 751203, New York City Police Department No. B-107915. Record dates from 1932 and includes arrests for robbery, assault, alcohol violations, and Federal narcotic law violations.

Business: No legitimate occupation known.

Modus operandi: A member of the Mafia, particularly the "107th Street mob", supplies narcotics locally and interstate.

SEBASTIANO BELLANCA

Aliases: Sebastiano Ballanca, Benny Bellanca "The Bald Head," "Benny the Sicilian."

Description: Born January 6, 1904, Cattolica, Sicily, naturalized, January 8, 1931, New York City, 5 feet 4 inches, 165 pounds, build stocky, brown hair (graying) almost completely bald, eyes blue, medium complexion, scar on right cheek, sometimes wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Currently a fugitive, last known address 209 Tremont Avenue, Fort Lee, N.J. Frequented Guy's Restaurant, Astoria, N.Y., Montreal, Province of Quebec, and Windsor, Ontario.

Family background: Father was Pasquale, his mother Josephine Renda. Wife is Jennie, has grown children.

Criminal associates: Frank Scalise (dead), Joe Pici, Peter Beddia, Jack Scarpulla, and Albert Anastasia (dead), Michele Sisco, Lucien Rivard, Sam Accardi.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1015

Criminal history: FBI No. 797788, Bellanca has been convicted for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Last known business; owner of Guy's Restaurant, Astoria, Long Island.

Modus operandi: One of the most important international smugglers in the United States, and a top-ranking Mafioso from the New York area; was originally a partner of Jack Scarpulla and Frank Scalise, he received narcotic supplies from the Coudert-Sisco combination of Montreal and France.

JOSEPH BIONDO

Aliases: "J. B." Joe Bionda, "Little Rabbitt," Joe Banti, Joe Bondi.

Description: Born April 16, 1897, Barcellona, Sicily; is 5 feet 4 inches, 150 pounds, brown eyes, brown-gray hair, naturalized.

Localities frequented: Resides 77-12 35th Avenue, Jackson Heights, Queens, N.Y. Has summer home at Long Beach, Long Island. Frequents area East 11th Street and First Avenue in Manhattan and makes trips to Italy.

Family background: Married to Louise Volpe. Brother, John; has a nephew, Vincent Manfredi.

Criminal associates: Eduardo Aronica, Frank Costello, Vito Genovese, Steve Armone, Thomas Lucchese, Andrew Alberti, Lucky Luciano, Joe Doto, and Nicola Gentile.

Criminal history: FBI No. 62666. New York City Police Department No. B-50466. Arrests since 1919 include drugs, homicide, revolver, extortion.

Business: Is vice president of See-Boro Forwarding Co., Inc., Queens, N.Y., and operates a real estate office at 84 Oswego Avenue, Long Beach, Long Island, N.Y.

Modus operandi: An international drug trafficker who is up among the higher echelon members of the Mafia in New York City.

RICHARD BOIARDO

Aliases: Richie Boiardo, Ruggerio Boiardi, Diamond Boiardo.

Description: Born November 8, 1890, Naples, Italy; 5 feet 7 inches, 210 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, bullet scar on left cheek.

Localities frequented: Has residences in Newark, N.J., and Havana, Cuba. Frequents Newark, New York City, and gambling houses in Havana.

Family background: Married to Jenny Manfro (deceased). Son, Anthony; daughters, Marie and Rose.

Criminal associates: Sam Accardi, Gerard Catena, Tom Campisi, Charles Campisi, Charles Tourine, Paul Lombardino, Anthony Caponegro, all of Newark, N.J., area.

Criminal history: FBI No. 330595. Newark Police Department No. 9315. Arrests since 1921 include manslaughter, assault and battery, and carrying concealed weapons.

Business: Reputed to have interest in Sea Gull Hotel, Miami Beach, Fla.

Modus operandi: One of the underworld leaders from the Newark, N.J., area engaged in all types of illegal rackets; also active in gambling activities in Havana, Cuba.

JOSEPH BONANNO

Aliases: Joe Bananas, Joe Bononno, Joe Bonnano, Joe Bouventre.

Description: Born January 18, 1905, Castellammare, Sicily; 5 feet 9 inches, 190 pounds, brown eyes, brown-gray hair, naturalized May 17, 1945, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Localities frequented: Resides 1847 East Elm Street, Tucson, Ariz. Travels extensively about United States and makes frequent trips to Italy.

Family background: Married Filippa LaBruzzo. Daughter, Catherine; sons, Salvatore (married to Rosalie Profaci, niece of Giuseppe Profaci) and Joseph; father, Salvatore; mother, Catherine Bouventre; both parents deceased.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Francisco Costiglia, Giuseppe Profaci, Anthony Corallo, Thomas Lucchese, Carmine Galante.

Criminal history: FBI No. 2534540, NYCPD No. B-85172, I & NS No. C-6602167. Record dating from 1930 includes arrests for grand larceny, possession of gun, obstruction of justice.

Business: Has interests in Grande Chese Co., Fond du Lac, Wis.; Alliance Realty & Insurance, Tucson, Ariz.; and Brunswick Laundry Service, Brooklyn, N.Y.

1016 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Modus operandi: Attended 1957 Apalachin underworld meeting and Binghamton, N.Y., meeting 1956. One of the most important underworld leaders in United States and attends all top-level underworld meetings. Makes trips to Italy to confer with underworld leaders there and to negotiate for international narcotic trafficking.

FRANK BORELLI

Aliases: Frankie Gooks, "Frank the Hawk."

Description: Born June 19, 1925, New York City, 5 feet 9 inches, 180 pounds, with black hair (thinning) and brown eyes, wears glasses with thick lenses, is a very dapper dresser.

Localities frequented: Frequents the East Harlem section of New York City, and spends some time in Chicago, Ill. Resides with his wife at 2042 2d Avenue, Apartment 4, New York City.

Family background: Is married to Mary DeGeorge, daughter of Angelo DeGeorge, a convicted East Harlem narcotic violator. His brother-in-law, Mario Colucci, is also a convicted narcotic violator.

Criminal associates: Charles Curcio, Joseph Bendenelli, Rocco Mazzie, Nick Tolentino, all narcotic traffickers and racketeers in East Harlem area, New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 3902235, NYCPD No. B-206594, includes arrests for assault and robbery, burglary, and violation of State and Federal narcotic laws.

Business: None at present.

Modus operandi: Wholesale trafficker in heroin to associates in New York, Chicago, Ill., and Cleveland, Ohio, and trusted member of the underworld from East Harlem, New York City, area.

RUSSELL A. BUFALINO

Aliases: Ross Bufalino, Rosario Bufalino, Buffalino.

Description: Born October 29, 1903, Montedoro, Sicily; 5 feet 8 inches, 166 pounds, medium build, gray hair, hazel eyes, sallow complexion, left thumb and index finger amputated.

Localities frequented: Resides 304 East Dorrance Street, Kingston, Pa. Frequents the Medico Electric Motor Co., Pittston, Pa., and attends most championship prizefights.

Family background: Married Carolina Sciandra; brother: Charles; sister: Josephine; father: Angelo; mother: Maria Cristina Buccolliere (both deceased).

Criminal associates: Moesto Loquasto, William Medico, Santo Volpe, Sam Mannarino, Frank Carbo, James Plumeri, Al Polizzi, John Dioguardi, William Bufalino (cousin).

Criminal history: FBI No. 691589, Buffalo Police Department No. 18580. Arrests since 1927 include vagrancy, petit larceny, criminally receiving stolen property, and conspiracy to obstruct justice, for which sentenced (1960) to 5 years and $10,000 fine.

Business: Owns Penn Drape & Curtain Co., Pittston, Pa. Interest in other Pittston and New York City dress manufacturing companies.

Modus operandi: Arranged and attended the 1957 Apalachin Mafia meeting. One of the most ruthless and powerful leaders of the Mafia in the United States. Also engaged in narcotic trafficking, labor racketeering, and dealing in stolen jewels and furs.

ANGELO BUIA

Aliases: "Frenchie," Angelo Russo.

Description: Born July 26, 1910, Nice, France, of Italian parents, became an American citizen through the naturalization of his father; 5 feet 7 inches, 166 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair, dark complexion, neat dresser.

Localities frequented: Resided 719 Lexington Avenue, New York City, frequented Greenwich Village area and Lower East Side of New York City.

Family background: Married to Mary McAvoy; father: Nicholas; mother: Amelia Buia; brother: Matildo.

Criminal associates: John Stoppelli, Aniello Santagata, Sam Accardi, Thomas and Charles Campisi, Matildo Buia (brother).

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1017

Criminal history: FBI No. 1641962, NYCPD B-125444. Arrest record dates back to 1934; two convictions for violation of Federal narcotic laws, in connection with one of which he is currently (1959) serving a term of 7 years in Federal prison.

Business: Machinist.

Modus operandi: He and his brother, Matildo, are members of the Accardi-Campisi underworld organization and distribute heroin in kilogram lots.

CHARLES CAMPISI

Aliases: Campi, Charles Campise.

Description: Born October 16, 1912, Newark, N.J., 5 feet 4 inches, 160 pounds, brown hair, gray eyes, stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides 118 Tuxedo Parkway, Newark, N.J., frequents Atlantic City and Ventnor, N.J., and Miami, Fla.

Family background: Father: Pietro, mother: Fortunata Longo, wife: Rose; children: Peter, Mrs. Lois Sanitate; brothers: Tom, Gus, Salvatore, Biagio, Louis, and Anthony.

Criminal associates: "Lucky" Luciano, Tom (brother), Sam Accardi, Vito Genovese, and other well known Mafia members in Newark, N.J., area.

Criminal history: FBI No. 652456, Newark, N.J., PD No. 17122. Arrests since 1932 include carnal abuse, grand larceny, aggravated assault, Federal liquor laws, and conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate business known.

Modus operandi: With brother Tom was one of the top echelon operators in the underworld narcotic smuggling and distributing organization headed by Sam Accardi. One of the top hoodlums in the northern New Jersey area.

THOMAS CAMPISI

Aliases: Gasparo Campisi, Albert Campi, Thomas Campe, Tom Campise.

Description: Born May 12, 1911, Newark, N.J., 5 feet 4 inches, 185 pounds, gray eyes, wavy light brown hair, stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides 265 14th Avenue, Newark, N.J., frequents major racetracks in New York City, Atlantic City, and Miami.

Family background: Father: Pietro; mother: Fortunata Longo; wife: Christine; children: Fay, Lois, Connie, Peter, Thomas, Jr.; brothers: Gus, Charles, Salvatore, Biagio, Louis, Tony.

Criminal associates: "Lucky" Luciano, Sam Accardi, Joe Doto, Vito Genovese, George Scalise, Frank Borelli, Vincent Carrao.

Criminal history: FBI No. 148998, Newark, N.J., PD No. 10658. Arrests since 1928 include assault, kidnapping, liquor laws, and conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate business known.

Modus operandi: A leader in the underworld narcotic smuggling and distributing organization headed by Sam Accardi of Newark, N.J., with brother Charles is considered one of top hoodlums in northern New Jersey area.

ROSARIO CARLISI

Aliases: Roy Carlisi, Roy Caruso, Rosario Carlise.

Description: Born April 10, 1909, Chicago, Ill., 5 feet 9 inches, 175 pounds, brown eyes, brown-gray hair.

Localities frequented: Resides 20 Anderson Place, Buffalo, N.Y. Frequents Club 97, Hotel Richmond, and other clubs in downtown Buffalo area; also race-tracks.

Family background: Married to Phillipa Romano and has three children; brothers: Carmine and Alfonso; father: Joseph; mother: Calogera Casaro (both dead).

Criminal associates: Vincent Mauro, Sam Pieri, Stefano Magaddino, Antonio Magaddino, James LaDuca, John C. Montana, Frank Valenti.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1434575. Arrests since 1937 include Federal liquor laws, malicious mischief, gambling, contempt.

Business: Owned Club 97, Buffalo, N.Y., till 1958, and has been associated with wholesale seafood markets in the Buffalo area.

Modus operandi: Attended Apalachin underworld meeting 1957 with other members from Buffalo area representing the underworld controlled rackets in the Buffalo area.

1018 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICSFRANK CARUSO

Aliases: Frankie the Bug, Frank Russo, Frank Ross, Frank Campo.
Description: Born February 18, 1911, New York City, 5 feet 7 inches, 190 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, heavy build.

Localities frequented: Resides 1579 81st Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequents area of Hester and Mulberry Streets, and Greenwich Village section, both in Manhattan.

Family background: Married to Josephine Oddo; son: Frank, Jr.; daughter; Mrs. Josephine Anne Morrongiello; father: Frank (dead); mother: Josephine; sister: Nancy; brothers: Joseph and Theodore.

Criminal associates: Phil Albanese, Joe Marone, John Ormento, Tony Strollo, Saro Mogavero, Tom Lucchese, George Nobile, all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 187656. New York City Police Department No. 73604. Arrests since 1928 include robbery, assault, extortion, conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Has interests in New York Carting Co., 643 East 13th Street, and Pygmalion Restaurant, 1068 2d Avenue, both in Manhattan.

Modus operandi: A trusted underworld leader in the Tony Strollo organization and a wholesale narcotic trafficker.

PETER CASELLA

Alias: Pete Casela.

Description: Born August 28, 1907, St. Louis, Mo., 5 feet 9 inches, 220 pounds, heavy build, brown hair, hazel eyes, scar under right eyebrow.

Localities frequented: Resides 105 South Dorset Avenue, Ventnor, N.J., frequented J. & R. Flower Shop, Philadelphia, Pa., and Bamboo Club, Atlantic City, N.J.

Family background: Married to Julia Greenjack, has two brothers, Anthony and Sam; has one daughter.

Criminal associates: James Santore, Frank Malfi, Frank Palermo, Felix DeTullio, Patsy Massi, Felix Bocchicchio, James Massi, Joseph Lo Piccolo, Lawrence Orlando, Vincent Todaro, Marco Reginelli (dead).

Criminal history: FBI No. 894604, Philadelphia Police Department No. 74700, several arrests since 1927 including larceny, lottery, homicide; currently serving 40 years for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Was part owner of Ticket Grill, Philadelphia, Pa., and Bamboo Club, Atlantic City, N.J.

Modus operandi: Interstate narcotic trafficker; was a lieutenant of deceased underworld head, Marco Reginelli, in Philadelphia-Camden area.

ANTHONY CASTALDI

Aliases: T. H., Tony Higgins, Tony Bones.

Description: Born January 27, 1913, New York City, 5 feet 10 inches, 219 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides 15 Princeton Avenue, Yonkers, N.Y. Frequents Jennie's Restaurant, 2306 Second Avenue, and midtown bars, and racetracks, all New York City.

Family background: Wife: Jean Penosi (sister of Guido); sons: William and Andrew; father: Andrew; mother: Philomena DeLorenzo; brothers: John N. Lewis, James, and Samuel; sisters: Mrs. Lillie DePalma, Mrs. Sadie Blumetti, Mrs. Rose Ciccone.

Criminal associates: Anthony Strollo, John Ormento, Salvatore Santoro, John Stoppelli, Vincent Mauro, Vincent Squillante, Sam Kass, Carmine and Pete Locascio, Anthony Ciccone, Guido Penosi.

Criminal history: FBI No. 546748. NYCPD No. B101443. Arrests since 1932 include assault, robbery, extortion, robbery-gun, and Federal narcotics laws.

Business: Has interests in Jennie's Restaurant, 2036 Second Avenue, New York City, and also in real estate in East Harlem area.

Modus operandi: One of the most active underworld leaders in East Harlem area of Manhattan. A major interstate narcotic trafficker and close associate of most leading criminals in East Harlem area.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1019

JOSEPH CATALANOTTO

Aliases: Joe Contelanotte, Joe Catalanotte, Joe Catalonte, Joe Catonoo, Cock-eyed Joe, The Old Man.

Description: Born August 8, 1901, Salemi, Sicily, 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, medium build, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Former resident, Detroit, Mich., deported 1957 to Italy, returned clandestinely to United States, and Cuba, deported to Italy again 1959 from Cuba.

Family background: Married to Mary Ann Ruisi who lives in Windsor, Canada; two daughters, Virginia and Angela Marie; brother: Benedict; father: Liborio; mother: Vincenza Giacalone.

Criminal associates: William Tocco, John Priziola, Peter Lombardo, Peter Gaudino, Paul Cimino, John Ormento, Raffaele Quasarano, Frank Coppola.

Criminal history: FBI No. 3825453, Detroit Police Department No. 15656, numerous arrests since 1921 including assault with intent to kill, murder, extortion, and conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No known legitimate sources of income.

Modus operandi: An international trafficker of illicit drugs; a very important member of the Detroit underworld, who is expected to work with other underworld devotees in Italy in the international traffic.

GERARDO VITO CATENA

Aliases: Gerald Catena, Jerry Allen, Jerry Cutana, Jerry Catena.

Description: Born January 2, 1902, Newark, N.J., 5 feet 7 inches, 185 pounds, blue eyes, brown-gray hair.

Localities frequented: Resides 21 Overhill Road, South Orange, N.J. Frequents El Sorrento Cafe, Bleeker Club, Old Colonial Inn, all in Newark, and La Martiniere Cafe on Route 29, Mountainside, N.J.

Family background: Married to Catherine McNally; daughters: Patricia, Geraldine, Donna, Vicki; son: Richard; sisters: Mrs. Mary Frederico, Mrs. Sadie Dellasante; father: Francesco; mother: Donata Speciale.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano and Joe Doto of Italy, Frank Costello, Anthony Strollo, Michael Lascari, Angelo DeCarlo, Sam Accardi, Nick Delmore, Charles Tourine.

Criminal history: FBI No. 144036. Newark Police Department No. 9636. I & NS No. A1108677. Arrests since 1923 include robbery, hijacking, bribing a Federal juror, suspicion of murder.

Business: Has interests in People's Express Co., Advance Vending Co., Runyon Vending Sales Co., Kool-Vent Awning Co., all in Newark, N.J.

Modus operandi: Attended Apalachin underworld meeting 1957 with other underworld members representing the interests of the underworld-controlled rackets in northern New Jersey. Used strong-arm methods to gain control of vending machine industry in northern New Jersey.

ANTHONY CICCONE

Alias: Tony Moon.

Description: Born July 19, 1918, New York City, N.Y.; 5 feet, 9 inches; 170 pounds; medium build; black hair, brown eyes; 2-inch scar left cheek, 3-inch left temple.

Localities frequented: Frequents Joe's Bar, 2062 First Avenue, Mickey Walker's, 1654 Broadway, New York City; present address 11 Center Drive, White-stone, Long Island.

Family background: Married to sister of Anthony Castaldi, has two brothers, Salvatore and Joseph; sisters, Anna and Margaret; father, Sebastian; mother, Gelsamina Piccola.

Criminal associates: Anthony Castaldi, Salvatore Santora, John Ormento, Rocco Mazzie, Salvatore LoProto, Patsy Moccio, Vincent Mauro, and other East Harlem racketeers.

Criminal history: FBI No. 2526415, New York City Police Department No. B-172419, includes arrests and convictions for violation of State and Federal narcotic laws, beginning in 1941.

Business: Employed in Fruit Exchange, 1981 First Avenue, New York City.

Modus operandi: Is closely associated with most important underworld narcotic traffickers in New York City area, has large sources of supply and sells wholesale quantities of heroin into local and interstate traffic.

1020 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

BENEDETTO F. CINQUEGRANA

Aliases: Vincent Grandi, Radio Red, Benedetto DiPalo, Chink.

Description: Born January 6, 1913, New York City; 5 feet, 6 inches; 175 pounds; brown eyes, light brown hair, light complexion; wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides 166 Mulberry Street, New York City. Frequent Mulberry and Grand Streets (Little Italy area) in Manhattan.

Family background: Married to Lucy DiPalo; son: Louis; daughter: Concetta; brother: Anthony; parents: Luigi and Concetta (both born in Italy).

Criminal associates: Frank Caruso, Philip Albanese, Patsy Polimena, Matthew Palmiori, Joe Marone, Tom Lucchese, John Ardito, Edward Shapiro, all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 444281. New York City Police Department No. B-93715. Arrests since 1932 include assault and robbery, criminally receiving stolen property, conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Partner in operation of Roma Cafe & Bakery, 385 Broome Street, New York City.

Modus operandi: A major wholesale dealer in narcotics both local and interstate. Is a trusted associate of underworld traffickers from whom he obtains his supply of narcotics.

MICHAEL COPPOLA

Aliases: Trigger Mike, Mike Ross, Mike Russo, Mike Marino.

Description: Born July 20, 1900, Salerno, Italy; 5 feet, 5 inches; 155 pounds; brown eyes, black-gray hair, I. & N.S. file A-109292316.

Localities frequented: Resides 4431 Alton Road, Miami Beach, Fla. Frequent Collins Avenue and 23d Street, Miami Beach, and makes occasional trips to East Harlem area in Manhattan.

Family background: Parents: Giuseppe and Angelina (both dead); brothers: Ralph, John, Vincent, Louis; sisters: Mrs. Helen Multitillo, Mrs. Amelia Gallo, Mrs. Josephine Tufaro, Mrs. Mary Frediroso.

Criminal associates: Joe Rao, Joe Stracci, Tom Lucchese, Frank Costello, Tony Strollo, Meyer Lansky, all of New York City; Joe Mazzei, Fred Felice, Patsy Erra, all of Miami Beach, Fla.

Criminal history: FBI No. 677976, New York City Police Department No. B-54988. Arrests since 1914 include burglary, felonious assault, homicide, and Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Believed to have interest in Midtown Social Club, 21st Street and Collins Avenue, Miami Beach, Fla.

Modus operandi: Currently involved in gambling activities in Miami Beach. Has been a feared and powerful racketeer from East Harlem area, New York City, and has engaged in narcotic smuggling and distributing with top underworld associates.

FRANK CORONA

Aliases: Irish, Caruso.

Description: Born May 15, 1909, New York City, 5 feet 5 inches, 130 pounds, ruddy complexion, brown eyes, black hair, birth mark center forehead, always wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Currently (1960) incarcerated. Wife resides 208 East 134th Street, New York City. Frequent Merry Cottage Social Club, 116th and Paladino; Lizzie's Bar, 116 and Second; Tony's Bar, 129 West 72d Street; and Broadway from 96th to 125th Street, all New York City.

Family background: Married Mary Crisco; father: James; mother: Mary Calabrese (both deceased); brothers: Angelo and Samuel; sisters: Mrs. Jennie Mongelli, Mrs. Marie Sherwood, Mrs. Anedina Francia and Mrs. Anna Velluci, wife of narcotic trafficker George Vellucci.

Criminal associates: Anthony and George Vellucci, Anthony Castaldi, Matthew Picone, Joseph Marone, Daniel and Nicholas Lessa.

Criminal history: FBI No. 242674. New York City Police Department No. B68334. Record dates from 1927 and includes arrests for armed robbery, book-making, contempt of court. Federal narcotic conviction 1957 for which now serving 5 years.

Business: No legitimate occupation known.

Modus operandi: Part of an East Harlem, New York City, underworld drug distribution mob, supplying large quantities of heroin to local and out-of-State dealers.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLEGAL TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1021

FRANCISCO COSTIGLIA

Aliases: Francisco Castiglia, Frank Costello, Frank Saverio, Saveria.

Description: Born January 26, 1893, Calabria, Italy, 5 feet, 7 inches, 155 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair, naturalized September 10, 1925, New York City.

Localities frequented: Resides 115 Central Park West, Apartment 18F, New York City, and has summer home at Sands Point, Long Island, frequents Biltmore and Waldorf Astoria Hotels, and most expensive night clubs in Manhattan.

Family background: Married to Loretta Geigerman, have no children; father: Luigi; mother: Mary Sevarrio Aloisa; brother: Edward; sister: Marcellina.

Criminal associates: Michele Miranda, Giuseppe Profaci, Vito Genovese, Frank Erichsen, Phil Kastel, and almost every important racketeer in the United States; Giuseppe Doto, Lucky Luciano, Francesco P. Coppola, of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 936217. New York City Police Department No. B-38412. Arrests since 1908 include assault and robbery, concealed weapon, conspiracy, contempt, income tax evasion, deportation proceedings currently pending.

Business: President of 79 Wall Street Corp., and has numerous other interests in valuable real estate and night clubs in New York City and elsewhere.

Modus operandi: One of the most influential and powerful underworld leaders in the United States. He is one of the controlling factors in all types of commercial vice throughout the United States.

ANTHONY CRISCI

Aliases: Tony Carish.

Description: Born March 5, 1911, Beaverdale, Pa., 5 feet 8 inches, 205 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, dark complexion, stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides 171 Norfolk Street, New York City. Frequents Lower East Side, Lima's Bar and Grill, 58 Clinton Street, New York City. Owns summerhouse, 416 Thompson Street, Fort Jefferson, Long Island, N.Y.

Family background: Married Pauline Pavlishich; father: Salvatore; mother: Antonia Carluzzo (deceased); sister: Josephine Ciralo.

Criminal associates: Salvatore Rizzo, Salvatore Pieri, Salvatore Poliafico, Nunzio Romano, Rocco Mazzie, Michael Erra.

Criminal history: FBI No. 995937. New York City Police Department No. 74250. Record dates from 1929 and includes arrests for assault and robbery, robbery of truck and merchandise. Federal narcotic conviction, 1954, 5 years.

Business: Delivery truckdriver.

Modus operandi: An important Mafia narcotic trafficker supplying large amounts of high quality heroin to out-of-State dealers.

ALFRED CRISCUOLO

Aliases: Alfonso Criscuoli, Alphonse Criscuolo, Frank Romano, Ralph Esposito, Alfred Rocca, Alfred Tente, Frank Russo, Al, Goodlooking Al.

Description: Born January 23, 1911, New York City, 5 feet 7 inches, 170 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, medium build.

Localities frequented: Resides 353 Grove Street, New Milford, N.J. Frequents Rex Tavern, Negri Candy Store, and taverns on upper First Avenue, in vicinity of 123d Street, New York City.

Family background: Wife: Floria Hausa; son: Lewis; father: Francesco; mother: Maria Bello (both born in Italy); brothers: Steve, Larry, Albert; sister: Carmella.

Criminal associates: John "Buster" Ardito, Joseph Marone, Al Landi and Charles Alberio, Frank Livorsi, Joseph Vento.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1529336, New York City Police Department No. B-153956. Criminal record dates from 1934 and includes arrests for burglary, gambling, and violations of State and Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No known legitimate business.

Modus operandi: An important member of the old 107th Street Mafia group on New York's Upper East Side. Delivers large amounts of narcotics locally and interstate.

FRANK CUCCHIARA

Aliases: Frank Caruso, Frank Russo, Frank the Spoon.

Description: Born March 29, 1895, Salemi, Sicily; naturalized August 10, 1931, Boston, Mass., 5 feet 3½ inches, 156 pounds, stocky build, brown eyes, hair brown and graying, has 6-inch scar in palm of left hand.

1022 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Localities frequented: Resides 282 Common Street, Watertown, Mass., frequents Purity Cheese Co., European Restaurant, Giro's Cafe, Florentine Cafe, all in Boston.

Family background: Wife: Santa Lucy Giordano; no children; brother: Peter (Boston); sister in Italy; father: Vito; mother: Antonia Cardonna.

Criminal associates: Philip Buccola, Raymond Patriarca, John Guglielmo, Rocco Palladino, Henry Selvitella, Albert Santaniello, Frank Morelli.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4477, Boston Police Department No. 19057. Arrested 1925 Boston possession of morphine and dynamite, arrested again 1932 Boston suspicion of murder.

Business: Owns Purity Cheese Co., 55-57 Endicott Street, Boston.

Modus operandi: Attended Apalachin meeting 1957 as representative of the Mafia from the New England area; operates gambling joints in North End of Boston; finances narcotic transactions.

CHARLES CURCIO

Aliases: Charlie Mouse, Charles Rossi.

Description: Born July 26, 1926, New York City, 5 feet 9 inches, 185 pounds, brown eyes, brown graying hair, medium complexion, heavy build.

Localities frequented: Resided at 33-18 159th Street, Flushing, N.Y., currently (1959) incarcerated.

Family background: Married to Rose Zaccardo, children are Diane and Charles, Jr.; father: Anthony; mother: Mary Lemardo (both dead); brothers: Vincent, Anthony, and Louis.

Criminal associates: Frank Borelli, Rocco Mазzie, Nick Tolentino, Joe and Ben Licchi, and most all narcotic traffickers in East Harlem, New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4226766, New York City Police Department No. B-228844, arrests date from 1944 and include burglary, larceny, State and Federal narcotic laws; sentenced May 24, 1957, Hackensack, N.J., 8 to 10 years, State narcotic violation.

Business: None.

Modus operandi: Associated with and received his narcotics from top echelon Mafia traffickers; a wholesale dealer, both local and interstate, operated a clandestine laboratory.

JOSEPH DENTICO

Aliases: Joseph Dandia, Joe Bari, Dandio.

Description: Born October 5, 1898, Gioia Del Collo Calabria, Italy, 5 feet 7½ inches, 195 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, wears glasses, alien registration No. 534B654.

Localities frequented: Resides 2355 Prospect Avenue, Bronx, N.Y., frequents East Harlem section Manhattan.

Family background: Married to Theresa Romano; father: Vito Antonio; mother: Rose (both dead); brothers: Frank and Larry; sister: Mrs. Grace Doyle.

Criminal associates: Charles Albero, Joseph Marons, Joseph Tocco, John Ardito, Joe Rao, Alfred Criscuolo, all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 68636, New York City Police Department No. B45977, numerous arrests since 1916 including assault, grand larceny, burglary, conviction of Federal narcotic laws. Currently free on bail pending deportation proceedings.

Business: In the past has been interested in radio, phonograph and jukebox business.

Modus operandi: A member of the Albero-Marone organization which has been engaged in the smuggling and distribution of narcotics on a major scale. Is closely associates with most Mafia leaders in East Harlem area, New York City.

JOSEPH D'ERCOLE

Aliases: Joe Z. Josey, Joe Morelli, Josie Romano.

Description: Born November 16, 1911, New York City; 5 feet 7 inches, 210 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair, medium complexion, hoarse voice.

Localities frequented: Resides 428 East 116th Street, apartment No. 18, New York City. Frequents Delightful Luncheonette, New York City.

Family background: Married Helen Morelli; daughter, Rose Zanfardino; father, Domenico; mother, Rosalia Emanueto; brothers, Anthony, Louis, and

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1023

Ignazio (deceased 1952) ; sisters, Mary Chionchio, Bessie Dorio, Virginia Derio, and Theresa Ivonelle.

Criminal associates: Joe Rao, Mike Coppola, Joe Bendenolli, Nicholas Tolentino, John Ardito, Anthony Criscuolo, Joseph Teresky, DeMartino brothers, Nicolas and Daniel Lessa.

Criminal history: FBI No. 373891. New York City Police Department No. B-82879. Arrests since 1930 include robbery, assault and robbery, grand larceny, Dyer Act, and convictions for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Employed as manager and bouncer at Delightful Luncheonette, 116th Street and First Avenue, New York City.

Modus operandi: Is one of the controlling Mafia members in the East Harlem section of New York City, engages in any type of illicit activity, mainly narcotic wholesaling and large-scale auto theft.

JOSEPH J. DI CARLO

Aliases: Joe DeCarlo, Jerry the Wolf, Joe the Gyp.

Description: Born November 8, 1899, Vallerlunga, Sicily, Italy: 5 feet 6 inches, 175 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair. Derivative citizenship.

Localities frequented: Resides 530 South Shore Drive, Miami Beach, Fla. Frequents Esquire Smoke Shop, Carib Hotel, Tahiti Bar, and Grand Barber Shop, all in Miami Beach. Makes trips to Youngstown, Ohio, and Utica-Rochester area of New York State.

Family background: Married Elsie Pieri (sister of narcotics violator Salvatore Pieri) ; daughter, Vinnie; father, Joseph P.; mother, Florence Palmeri.

Criminal associates: Stefano and Antonino Magaddino, Salvatore Pieri, Salvatore Rizzo, Anthony Strollo, Cassandras Bonasera (brother-in-law), Joseph Massel, Angersola brothers.

Criminal history: FBI No. 286967; Buffalo Police Department No. 14592. Record dating from 1920 includes arrests for assault, coercion, intimidating witness, and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No known legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: A feared Mafioso, utilized as a killer by the Magaddino brothers of Buffalo, N.Y. Forced to leave the Buffalo area by police and is currently engaged in underworld controlled illegal gambling in the Greater Miami area.

CHARLES DiPALERMO

Aliases: Charlie Beck, Charlie Brody.

Description: Born February 15, 1925, New York City; 5 feet 8 inches, 140 pounds, slim build, brown eyes, black hair.

Localities frequented: Resides 260 Elizabeth Street, New York City; frequents Reno Bar, 168 Elizabeth Street, and Joy's Restaurant, 28 Spring Street, New York City, and College Pizzeria, 301 East 170th Street, Bronx, N.Y.

Family background: Wife, Marie Cuomo; daughter, Cheryl; son, John; father, John (deceased) ; mother, Sarah Floria; brothers, Anthony, Steve, Peter, Joseph.

Criminal associates: Florio Isabella, Joseph DiPalermo, Carmine Galante, Vito Genovese, Joseph Bonnano, Natale Evola.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4532585, New York City Police Department No. B-239114. Record dates from 1945 and includes arrests for burglary, perjury, burglary tools, violation of alcohol laws, unlawful entry, forgery; 1959 convicted of narcotic conspiracy and sentenced to 12 years. Now appealing this conviction.

Business: Owner of College Pizzeria, 301 East 170th Street, Bronx, N.Y.

Modus operandi: He and his brothers constitute the notorious "Beck brothers," all Mafiosi, led by Joseph DiPalermo. Charles DiPalermo, like his brothers, engages in narcotic trafficking and bootlegging on a major scale.

JOSEPH DiPALERMO

Aliases: Joe Beck, Joe Palmer, Joe Palmero, Joe DePalermo.

Description: Born June 8, 1907, New York City; 5 feet 6 inches, 120 pounds, slim build, brown eyes, light brown hair balding, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides 246 Elizabeth Street, New York City. Frequented lower East and West Sides of Manhattan, also makes trips to Italy.

Family background: Married to Mary Cattone; son, John; daughter, Mrs. Sarah Florio; brothers, Peter, Tony, Charles (all with criminal records).

1024 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal associates: Carmine Galante, Frank Carofolo, Santo Sorge, Vito Genovese, Joe Bonnano, Natale Evola, all of New York City; Cotroni brothers of Montreal.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1519166, New York City Police Department No. B-203135, arrests since 1925 include narcotics (State), homicide, convictions for violating Federal liquor laws and counterfeiting laws. Sentenced to 15 years on April 17, 1959, for Federal narcotic laws. He and Carmine Galante suspected of 1943 murder of Carlo Tresca in New York City.

Business: Has never engaged in any legitimate business.

Modus operandi: A most vicious criminal, international drug trafficker, and an "enforcer" for the Mafia in New York City. Attended Binghamton, N.Y., Mafia meeting in 1956.

ANTHONY DiPASQUA

Aliases: Bootsie.

Description: Born July 23, 1912, in New York City; 5 feet 7 inches, 135 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, medium build, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides, 58 Catherine Street, New York City. Frequents Mendel's Restaurant, Clinton and Broome Streets; Lower East Side area of New York City.

Criminal associates: Angelo Tuminaro, John Stoppelli, Frank Caruso, Florio Isabella, George Noble, Solly Kaplan.

Criminal history: Includes five convictions for violation of Federal and State narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: A wholesaler of heroin locally and into interstate traffic. Associated with both Jewish and Italian narcotic traffickers on lower East Side of New York City.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, New York City Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 78004, New York City Police Department No. B-121496.

CARLO DI PIETRO

Aliases: Cosco, Charlie, Charles.

Description: Born October 15, 1930, New York City, 5 feet 8 inches, 140 pounds, black wavy hair, brown eyes, ruddy complexion, scars under right eye and over lip.

Localities frequented: Resides at 1 Cardinal Hayes Place, New York City, Frequents Vivere Lounge, 199 Second Avenue, New York City, CIA Club, 72 Forsythe Street, and entire Lower East Side area of New York City.

Family background: Married; father, Rocco; mother, Rose Palermo; sisters, Mildred Mari (wife of narcotic violator Frank Mari) and Jean Menta; brother, Joseph.

Criminal associates: Frank Mari, Anthony Lisi, Pasquale Gigante, George Presto, Anthony DiPasqua, Angelo Tuminaro.

Criminal history: FBI No. 315537-A; New York City Police Department No. B-274644. Record dating from 1936 includes arrests for disorderly conduct, burglary, and criminally receiving stolen goods. Federal narcotic law conviction.

Business: Former professional boxer. Has interest in the Vivere Lounge, 199 Second Avenue, New York City.

Modus operandi: Part of a Mafia narcotic smuggling and distributing ring on New York's Lower East Side. Obtains supplies of heroin from the Cotroni organization in Canada.

ALFRED JAMES EMSARRATO

Aliases: Alfred Scalisi, Al Walker, Aldo Elvardo.

Description: Born November 1, 1909, New York City, 5 feet 7 inches, 165 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, tattoo "AJE" on right arm, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides at 43 Market Street, New York City. Frequents House of Chan, 52d Street, and area of Market and Madison Streets, all in New York City.

Family background: Married to Constance and has 3 children; father, Salvatore; mother, Mary.

Criminal associates: Frank Livorsi, John Catrone, Lucky Luciano, Florio Isabella, William Paradise, Carmine Locascio, Saro Mogavero, and Anthony Mirra (nephew).

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1025

Criminal history: FBI No. 776059; New York City Police Department No. B-94812. Arrests since 1930 include felonious assault and conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Usually employed on piers as a boss loader in New York City.

Modus operandi: An interstate and local narcotic trafficker closely allied with known Mafia traffickers. A strong-arm man who controls the worker of stevedores at Lower East Side piers so that shipping companies have to deal with him.

ALFRED EPPOLITO (DECEASED)

Aliases: Freddy, Big Freddy, Ippolito.

Description: Born September 19, 1919, New York City, 5 feet 11 inches, 205 pounds, heavy build, black hair, brown eyes, suffers from serious ulcer condition.

Localities frequented: Resides at 1727 Troy Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequents Gran Mark Bar, Grand St. and St. Marks Avenue, San Chel's Restaurant, 5000 Kings Highway and Colonial Enterprises, 605 Grand Avenue, all in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Family background: Married Lorraine Dasena; son, Louis; daughters, Lorraine and Marlene; brothers, James, Ralph, and Joseph.

Criminal associates: Andrew Alberti, John Robilotto (deceased), Gaetano Maiorano, Thomas Farula, Anthony Brandolino.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1924986; New York City Police Department No. B-276479. Record dates from 1936 and includes arrests for robbery, counterfeiting, felonious assault, and suspected murder. Was prime suspect in murder of John Robilotto, a high echelon underworld member.

Business: Owns Colonial Enterprises, 605 Grand Avenue, Brooklyn, a jukebox distributing firm.

Modus operandi: Finances wholesale smuggling and distribution of narcotics in collusion with the Andrew Alberti organization. Is an important underworld member and in addition to his narcotic interests is active in loansharking and gambling operations.

PASQUALE ERRA

Aliases: Pat Erra, Patsy Erra.

Description: Born November 29, 1915, New York City, 5 feet 5 inches, 140 pounds, brown eyes, black hair, mole at side of chin, dark complexion, and medium build.

Localities frequented: Resides at 3720 Chase Avenue, Miami Beach, Fla., frequents the Dream Bar, Hotel Albion, Hotel Fountainbleau, and Club LaRue, all of Miami Beach, Fla.

Family background: Separated from wife and child, father is Rocco Erra, mother's name is Assunta; has two brothers, Mike and Rocco, Jr.; his family resides at Astoria, Long Island, N.Y.

Criminal associates: Joe Massel, Mike Coppola, Joseph Indelicato, Charles Tourino, Fred Felice, and Terry Teriaca, of Miami, Fla., Joe Rao and Joe Valachi of New York City.

Criminal History: FBI No. 1593543, New York City Police Department No. B-151752. Arrest record dates from 1936, with convictions for auto theft and violations of the Federal narcotics laws.

Business: Is a partner in the Dream Bar and owns other Miami Beach real estate.

Modus operandi: Is the enforcer and right-hand man for Mike Coppola and an important member of the underworld in New York City and Miami, Fla.

NATALE JOSEPH EVOLA

Alias: Joe Diamond.

Description: Born January 22, 1907, New York City, 5 feet 10 inches, 190 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, balding.

Localities frequented: Resides at 972 Bay Ridge Parkway, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequents garment center of New York City.

Family background: Single; father, Felippo; mother, Francesca; brothers, Paul and Joseph; sister, Anna.

Criminal associates: Salvatore Santoro, Audimo Papaddio, Cassandros S. Bonasera, Joseph Stracci, James Plumeri, John Ormont.

Criminal history: FBI No. 449296, New York City Police Department No. E-8624. Record dating from 1930 includes arrests for coercion, possession of gun, Federal narcotic law conviction, and conspiracy to obstruct justice, for which sentenced (1960) to 5 years and $10,000 fine.

1026 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLEGAL TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Business: Owner of Belmont Garment Delivery and Amity Garment Delivery, both at 240 West 37th Street, New York City.

Modus operandi: Attended 1957 Apalachin Mafia meeting with other Mafia leaders from New York City. Is a major narcotic trafficker who also engages in labor racketeering in New York City's garment center.

JOSEPH FALCONE

Alias: Joe Falcone.

Description: Born November 6, 1925, Utica, N.Y.; 5 feet 7½ inches, 190 pounds, stocky build, blue eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 5609 NW. Seventh Avenue, Miami, Fla. Frequent NW. Seventh Avenue, Italian neighborhood of Miami, and travels to Tampa, Fla.

Family background: Father, Salvatore (1957 Apalachin delegate); mother, Josephine Provenzano; son, Joseph Salvatore Falcone.

Criminal associates: Decidue family of Tampa, Fla. Father, Salvatore Falcone.

Criminal history: No FBI Number assigned. Was arrested on May 27, 1959, Miami, Fla., charged with harboring his fugitive father Salvatore Falcone.

Business: Operates the Falcone & Sons Wholesale & Retail Italian Grocery, 5609 NW. Seventh Avenue, Miami, Fla.

Modus operandi: Joseph Falcone has no criminal record and is ostensibly a respectable businessman. He is, however, undoubtedly cognizant of his father's activities in the underworld and is considered a threat because of potential underworld influence through his father, one of the 1957 Apalachin delegates.

ALFREDO GEORGE FELICE

Aliases: Fred Franco, Freddy Red Shirt, Frank Graziano.

Description: Born October 5, 1912, in New York City; 160 pounds, 5 feet 8 inches; brown hair; brown eyes, half-inch scar center of forehead, cleft chin, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 1770 Normandy Drive, Miami, Fla. Frequent, La Rue Cafe, 23d Street and Collins Avenue, Miami; Jewelry Center, 46th Street and Sixth Avenue; and Forest Hotel, 224 West 49th Street, in New York City.

Criminal associates: Charles Rosenberg, Patsy Erra, Pasquale Fenese, Bum Brothers, Frank Loicano, Joseph Vento, Mike Coppolo.

Criminal history: Dates from 1931 and includes arrests for vagrancy, policy, possession of gun, and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Smuggles opium from Mexico. Interested in clandestine laboratories. Has organization for distribution of heroin in wholesale quantities.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. New York City Police Department. Miami Beach (Fla.) Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 951876; New York City Police Department; Miami Beach Police Department A-14019.

GIUSEPPE GAGLIANO

Aliases: Joseph Gagliano, Frank Costello, Frank Castelli.

Description: Born August 8, 1903, in Porto Empedocle, Province of De Agrigento, Sicily; 5 feet 8½ inches, 211 pounds, black hair.

Localities frequented: Deported to Italy December 23, 1955.

Criminal associates: Tommy Gagliano, Carlos Marcello, John Vaccaro, Julian Lopez, Anthony Carollo, all of New Orleans, La.

Criminal history: Includes arrests for theft, possession of stolen property, carrying a concealed weapon, and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: As a Sicilian underworld narcotic trafficker, with close associates in New York and New Orleans, is of continuing importance in the narcotic traffic.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice, New Orleans Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 786311, New Orleans Police Department No. 31956.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1027

CARMINE GALANTE

Aliases: Camillo Galante, Carmine Galanti, Carmine Galento, Joseph Russell, Louis Volpe.

Description: Born February 21, 1910, New York City; 5 feet 5 inches, 168 pounds, gray hair balding, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 274 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequents south New Jersey area, Miami, Montreal, also makes trips to Sicily.

Family background: Married to Helen Marullo; son, James; daughters, Camilla and Angela; brothers, Sam and Peter; sisters, Mrs. Angela Volpe, Mrs. Josephine Volpe.

Criminal associates: Frank Garofolo, Joe DiPalermo, Vito Genovese, Joe Bonanno, Joe Profaci, Meyer Lansky, all of New York City, Joe Cotroni and Lucien Rivard of Montreal.

Criminal history: FBI No. 119495; NYCPD No. B-66994. Arrests since 1921 include juvenile delinquent, robbery, assault, homicide, Federal narcotic laws. With Joe DiPalermo as an accomplice, believed to have murdered Carlo Tresca in New York City (1943).

Business: Operates Rosina Costume Co., Brooklyn, N.Y., and Latamer Shipping Co., Manhattan.

Modus operandi: Attended Binghamton (N.Y.) Mafia meeting 1956. An extremely important figure in the international drug traffic, and a ranking Mafia member engaged in terrorist activities. In 1956 he was top representative of American racketeering activities in Montreal.

JOSEPH GALLO

Aliases: Joe-the-Blonde.

Description: Born April 6, 1929, Brooklyn, N.Y.; 5 feet 6 inches, 145 pounds, slim build, brown hair, blue eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 639 East Fourth Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequents 108 Beverly Road and various sections of Flatbush, Brooklyn.

Family background: Single; father, Albert; mother, Mary Nunziato; brothers, Ralph and Lawrence; sisters, Carmela Froiera and Jacqueline Meyers.

Criminal Associates: John Oddo, Salvatore Pepitone, Carmine Lombardozi, Columbo Saggese, Dominic Sciala.

Criminal history: FBI No. 120842A; NYCPD No. B-250889. Record dates from 1947 and includes arrests for dangerous weapon, abduction, possession of gun, burglary, kidnaping and attempted sodomy and felonious assault on police officer.

Business: Claims to be manager of Jackie's Charcolette, 108 Beverly Road, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Modus operandi: Becoming powerful in the Mafia. A strong-arm man and labor goon, suspected murderer, and trafficker in small arms and narcotics.

LAWRENCE GALLO

Aliases: Larry.

Description: Born November 3, 1927, Brooklyn, N.Y., 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, dark hair, brown eyes, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 2031 East 67th Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequents 108 Beverly Road, Brooklyn, N.Y., and various sections of Flatbush, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Family background: Single. Father, Albert Gallo; mother, Mary Nunziato; brothers, Ralph Gallo and Joseph Gallo; sisters, Carmela Froiera, Jacqueline Myers.

Criminal associates: Angelo Luigi Perso, Carmine Lombardozi; Anthony Tuzio, Ernest Filocomo, John Oddo, Joseph Ravo, John Caruso, Salvatore Pepitone, Mario DeGrandis.

Criminal history: FBI No. 120842A; NYCPD No. B-250889. Record dates from 1944 and includes arrests for grand larceny, receiving stolen property, operating a lottery, consorting with criminals, vagrancy, felonious assault, and extortion.

Business: Claims to work as a counterman in Jackie's Charcolette, 108 Beverly Road, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Modus operandi: With his older brother, Joseph, and other underworld hoodlums, engages in gambling, narcotic trafficking, and numerous other illicit enterprises. Strong-arm man and suspected murderer.

1028 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

CARLO GAMBINO

Aliases: Carlo Gambirino, Carlo Gambrieno, Don Carlo.

Description: Born August 24, 1902, Palermo, Sicily; an alien, 5 feet 7 inches, 200 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair.

Localities frequented: Resides 2230 Ocean Parkway, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequenters Carroll Paper Products Co. and Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn; also Italian sections of East Bronx, and Miami, Fla.

Family background: Married to his first cousin, Vincenza Castellana. Son Tom married to Frances Lucchese (daughter of Tom Lucchese); father, Thomas; mother, Felicia Castellana; brother, Paolo; sister, Mrs. Giuseppina Giammona.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano and Santo Sorge (deportees), Tom Lucchese, Hugo Rossi, Paolo Gambino (brother), Jack Scarpulla, Meyer Lansky, Scalice brothers, all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 334450, NYCPD No. B-129760. Arrests from 1930 include larceny, Federal liquor laws, and violation I. & N.S. laws.

Business: Owns Carroll Paper Products Co., Brooklyn. Is a member of S.G.S. Associates, a labor consultant firm in Manhattan.

Modus operandi: Attended Apalachin underworld meeting 1957 as one of the underworld leaders from New York City. One of the most powerful underworld leaders in the United States. With his brother, Paolo, has been involved in large-scale narcotic and alien smuggling.

PAOLO GAMBINO

Aliases: Don Paolo.

Description: Born November 20, 1904, Palermo, Sicily; naturalized citizen, 5 feet 7 inches, 210 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair.

Localities frequented: Resides 1219 East 12th Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequenters East Bronx area of New York City and Coney Island area of Brooklyn. Make trips to Sicily.

Family background: Married to Caterina Castellana (who is his first cousin), has two sons and two daughters. Father, Thomas; mother, Felicia Castellana; brother, Carlo; sister, Mrs. Giuseppina Giammona.

Criminal associates: Hugo Rossi, Jack Scarpulla, Sam Accardi, Carlo Gambino (brother), Frankalice (dead), Joe Profaci, Willie Locascio, all of New York City. Lucky Luciano (deportee).

Criminal history: FBI No. 1667871, Yonkers, N.Y., PD No. 8164. Arrests since 1929 include suspicion of a felony and conviction for Federal liquor laws.

Business: Owns Blue Star Meat Market, 40-10 Main Street, Flushing, Long Island, N.Y.

Modus operandi: In association with top-level Mafia racketeers, he operated and important large-scale narcotic and alien smuggling suspects.

USCHE GELB

Aliases: Solly Gordon, Saul Gelb, Kreisberg, King, Geld, Edward S. A. Jordon.

Description: Born March 27, 1897, Dembica, Austria. Jewish, 5 feet 7½ inches, 162 pounds, white hair, brown eyes, glasses, illegal alien.

Localities frequented: Resides 545 West End Avenue, New York City. Frequenters Lafayette Street machinery center, midtown restaurants and clubs. Summer home Tennenah Lake, N.Y.

Family background: Married Ethel Egan. Father, Tobias Samuel Gelb; mother, Feiger Krantz (both deceased); brother, Hyman; sisters, Mary, Belle, and Mrs. Bertha Sterza.

Criminal associates: Anthony Vellucci, Nathan Behrman, Jean Baruche, Joseph Orsini, Morris Taubman, Salvatore Shillitani.

Criminal history: FBI No. 35989. NYCPD No. B53908. Record dates from 1913 and includes arrests for juvenile delinquency, disorderly conduct, felonious assault, dangerous weapon, perjury, stolen bonds, Federal narcotic conviction. Currently incarcerated for narcotic conspiracy.

Business: Machinery salesman. Owned florist shop.

Modus operandi: In association with top-level mafia racketeers, he operated a narcotic smuggling and distribution ring which supplied untold quantities of heroin throughout the United States; top-echelon racketeer and drug trafficker for past 30 years.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1029

PASQUALE GENESE

Aliases: Pat Genese, Patsy Genese, Patsy Jerome.

Description: Born March 3, 1911, in New York City; 5 feet 8 inches, 180 pounds, brown eyes, black hair, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 1219 Colgate Avenue, Bronx, New York City. Frequents Matty's Barber Shop, 1961 Third Avenue; Garden Drug Store, 50th Street and Broadway; political club on Second Avenue, between 115th and 116th Streets; all in New York City.

Criminal associates: John Ormento, Joseph Vento, Nicholas Martello, Bum brothers, Joseph Rao, Alfred Felice, Salvatore Santoro, Frank Luciano, Jacob Ziveter.

Criminal history: Dates from 1933 and includes arrests for sodomy, vagrancy, policy, and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: A trusted member of the Sicilian underworld. Deals in heroin in wholesale quantities.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, Bureau of Customs, New York City Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 1200745. NYCPD No. B113022.

VITO GENOVESE

Aliases: Don Vitone, "The Old Man."

Description: Born November 21, 1897, Roccarainola, Naples, Italy; 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair, wears glasses. Naturalized November 25, 1936, New York City.

Localities frequented: Resides 68 West Highland Avenue, Atlantic Highlands, N.J. Frequents Greenwich Village area of New York City, Old Orchard Country Club and Piano Bar, Atlantic Highlands, N.J.

Family background: Separated from wife, Anna Petillo; son, Philip; step-daughter, Mrs. Anna Simonetti; brothers, Michael and Carmine; father, Felice; mother, Nunziata (both deceased).

Criminal associates: Frank Costello, Tony Strollo, Tom Lucchese, Joe Biondo, Joe Stracci, Joe Doto, Lucky Luciano.

Criminal history: FBI No. 861267. New York City Police Department No. B-69993. Extensive arrest record since 1917, including burglary, concealed weapons, auto homicide, and murder; has conviction for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Has interest in Colonial Trading Co., Waste Paper Removal Co., Erb Strapping Co., Tryon Cigarette Service Co., and many nightclubs, all in New York City.

Modus operandi: Attended Apalachin underworld meeting in 1957. Financial backer for international narcotic smuggling. Is reputed underworld head of New York City rackets, shares in gambling and other interstate rackets with deportee Lucky Luciano.

JOSEPH GERNIE

Aliases: Joseph Yanni, John Gernie.

Description: Born August 4, 1921, at New York City; 5 feet 9 inches, 180 pounds, stocky build, brown hair, brown eyes, dark complexion, tattoos both arms.

Localities frequented: Resided at 336 East 120th Street, New York City, frequented vicinity of 76th and Broadway, 86th Street and Third Avenue, New York City.

Family background: Married to Mary Brancaccio; son, Joseph; daughter, Ann; mother, Erna Manone; sister, Frances Maresca; half-brother, Thomas Angelos; half-sister, Pauline Angelos.

Criminal associates: Anthony Strollo, George Agovino, Phillip Buzzeo, Michael Nicoline, Vincent Mauro.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1851322. New York City Police Department No. B-167697. Arrests since 1938 include felonious assault, burglary, larceny, gambling, and causing explosion with intent to kill. 1957 sentenced to 10 years for Federal narcotic violation at New York City.

Business: Had wartime employment as longshoreman, but no recent legitimate employment.

1030 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Modus operandi: An important member of the underworld narcotic trafficking and union racketeering organization in New York City and vicinity. Is a professional strong-arm man and suspected killer for the underworld mob controlled by Anthony Strollo.

VINCENT GIGANTE

Aliases: "The Chin," "Chin Chin."

Description: Born March 29, 1928, in New York City; 5 feet 11 inches, 263 pounds, brown hair and eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 206 Thompson Street, New York City. Frequent Lower East Side and Greenwich Village areas of New York City.

Family background: Married to Olympia Grippa; children, Yolanda Rose-Ann, Salvatore, Andrew; father, Salvatore; mother, Yolande Scotta; brothers, Pasquale, Mario, Ralph, Louis.

Criminal associates: Vito Genovese, Anthony Strollo, Michael Miranda, Gus Frasca, John Stoppelli, Carmine Galante.

Criminal history: FBI No. 5020214. New York City Police Department No. B-231328. Arrests since 1945 include grand larceny, criminally receiving, arson, and attempted murder.

Business: Former professional boxer. No legitimate current employment.

Modus operandi: A rapidly rising younger member of the underworld who has gained recognition by carrying out strong-arm assignments for underworld chief, Vito Genovese. In 1957 he was arrested for the attempted murder of the notorious Frank Costello.

SALVATORE GIGLIO

Aliases: King, Phillips, Gigli, Salvatore Galante.

Description: Born September 29, 1906, New York City, 5 feet 5 inches, 140 pounds, black-gray hair, brown eyes, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 2760 Grand Concourse, Bronx, N.Y. Frequent Manhattan News Co., 627 West 42d Street, New York City and Montreal, Canada.

Family background: Married to Mary Fanale, daughter Eileen, father is Joseph and mother is Caterina Tonuzzo, brothers, John, Charles, Jack, sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Gioia.

Criminal associates: Carmine Galante, Joe DiPalermo, John Petrone, Joe Notaro, all of New York City, Joe Cotroni and Lucien Rivard of Montreal, Joe Zicarolli of New Jersey, Rosario Mancuso of Utica, N.Y.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1967931, New York City Police Department No. B 154368. Arrests since 1937 include one conviction for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Official of E. & W. Trucking Co., 131 Varick Street, New York City, and salesman for Theta Electronics Co., Harrisburg, Pa.

Modus operandi: A major local and interstate narcotic trafficker who is closely associated with known underworld traffickers.

ANTHONY GRANZA

Aliases: Tony Skunge, Tony Scallo.

Description: Born March 25, 1915, Oneida, N.Y., 5 feet 3 inches, 140 pounds, black hair, gray eyes, medium build, medium complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 2854 Kingsbridge Terrace, Bronx, N.Y.; frequent East Harlem area of New York City, particularly 107th Street and First Avenue, 104th Street and First Avenue.

Family background: Wife, Fanny Bifano; daughters, Rosemarie and Theresa; father, Joseph; mother, Theresa Bieni (both deceased); brother, Frank; sisters, Nina Lovino and Mary Benintendi (wife of Joseph Benintendi).

Criminal associates: Joseph Benintendi, Joseph Casablanca, Nicholas Corsaro, Benny Coniglio, Rosario Rinaldi.

Criminal history: FBI No. 2042937, New York City Police Department No. B 224486. Record dates back to 1940 and includes convictions for violation of State and Federal narcotic laws. On parole until 1961 in connection with State narcotic conviction.

Business: Before incarceration in 1951 had no legitimate source of income. Now, for parole purposes, employed as general worker by Travel Craft Press, 830 Broadway, N.Y.

Modus operandi: A trusted member of the underworld who has been engaged in large-scale local interstate trafficking for many years. Since release from prison has been awarded a large area in which to carry on illicit activities including narcotics and gambling.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1031

ROBERT ANGELO GUIPPONE

Aliases: Giapone, "Sonny," "Fat Sonny."

Description: Born April 2, 1930 in New York City, 5 feet 8½ inches, 285 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, scar over left eye, mole left side of nose.

Localities frequented: Resides 2420 Cambreling Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Frequent 187th Street and Cambreling Avenue, the Capri Lounge, and Southern Boulevard and Fordham Road, Bronx.

Family background: Unmarried. Father, Dominick; mother, Mary Cienelli; brother, Daniel; sister, Marie Muschio.

Criminal associates: Anthony Carminati, Michael Galgano, Anthony Castaldi, Rocco Sancinella, Joseph Ambrosini, Rocco Mazzie, Dominick Carminati, and Joseph Valachi.

Criminal history: FBI No. 535872A. New York City Police Department No. B-327619. Arrests date from 1950, including counterfeiting, assault and battery, and New York State narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate business or employment.

Modus operandi: A major wholesale interstate narcotic trafficker. Is one of the younger underworld members controlling gambling and narcotics in the Bronx, N.Y., area.

LUCIEN IGNARO

Aliases: Lucian Vincent Ignaro, Lucien Collonna, Frenchy.

Description: Born May 10, 1903, Maurice, Constantine, Algeria, 5 feet 4 inches, 115 pounds, black hair, blue eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides in Algiers, Algeria. In 1953 deported from United States where resided at 112 West 82d Street, New York City, and 46 Vine Street, Roxbury, Mass.

Family background: Married Antoinette Navarro; no known children; father, Siro, born Algeria, deceased; mother, Angelina Califano, born Italy, deceased; sisters, Carmen Francisco, Mary Gentile, Vincenza Duquor, Daisire Perez; brother, Charles.

Criminal associates: John DiCarlo, Gennaro Caputo, Jean David, D'Agostino brothers, Frank Tornello, Salvatore Giordano, Ugo Rossi, Andrew Alberti, Henry Sauzet, Matthew Cuomo.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1009068, NYCPD No. B-139387. Record dating from 1935 includes arrests for narcotic trafficking, immigration law violation, and parole violation. Two Federal narcotic convictions and deported from United States three times.

Business: No recent legitimate employment.

Modus operandi: Has for many years been closely associated with top underworld members in the international narcotic traffic. Has caused untold quantities of heroin to be smuggled into the United States.

BENJAMIN INDIVIGLIO

Aliases: Benedetto Indiviglia, Benny Indiviella, Benny the Cringe.

Description: Born July 16, 1921, New York City, 5 feet 11 inches, 180 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, has acne marks on both sides of face.

Localities frequented: Resides at 353 West 44th Street, New York City. Frequent Dell's Cafe and Opera Inn, both in New York City.

Family background: father, Giuseppe; mother, Felicia (Fannie) Marino; living with paramour Rose Pizzaro Diaz; brothers, Joseph, John, and Salvatore.

Criminal associates: Joseph, John, and Samuel Indiviglio (brothers), Michael J. Costagliola, Salvatore Zarba, Carmelo DeVito, John Romagno, Stephen Della Cava, Michael Altimari, Nicholas Benina.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4333204, NYCPD No. B-227037. Arrests since 1945 include desertion, assault, felonious assault, and conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Owns and operates Dell's Cafe, 918 Eighth Avenue, and Opera Inn, 726 Eighth Avenue, both in New York City.

Modus operandi: With other underworld narcotic traffickers engages in narcotic smuggling and interstate distribution.

1032 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICSFLORIO ISABELLA

Aliases: Flo, Florindo, Pino, William Pino.

Description: Born March 30, 1911, New York City, 5 feet 9 inches, 165 pounds, blue eyes, black-gray hair, 1½-inch scar left forehead.

Localities frequented: Resided at 101 Chrystie Street, New York City. Frequented Lower East Side and Greenwich Village areas of New York City, Copacabana night club, New York City, Grand Mark Bar, St. Marks Avenue and Grand Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. Currently (1960) incarcerated.

Family background: Married Marsha Jones; father, Joseph Angelo (deceased); mother, Elizabeth Pino (remarried, now Mrs. Thomas Pennachio).

Criminal associates: Joseph and Charles DiPalermo, Anthony Mirra, Alfred Embarrato, Norma Hill.

Criminal history: FBI No. 467320. NYCPD No. B-105498. Record dates from 1932 and includes arrests for counterfeiting, receiving stolen goods, gambling, interstate theft. Three Federal narcotic convictions. Currently (1960) serving 15-year narcotic sentence.

Business: Operated luncheonette.

Modus operandi: With other important New York City Mafiosi, engaged in large-scale local and interstate narcotic traffic. Also had bookmaking and shylocking operations.

ARTHUR LEO

Aliases: Arthur Rocco, Chink, Mousie.

Description: Born March 27, 1924, New York City, 5 feet 10 inches, 195 pounds, dark-brown hair, brown eyes, ruddy complexion, husky build, considered to be a sexual deviate.

Localities frequented: Resides at 339 East 105th Street, New York City, frequents 2030 Second Avenue, Copacabana Night Club; Ciccone's Bar; 116th Street and 1st Avenue, and 105th Street and 2d Avenue, all in New York City.

Family background: Single; father, Jack; mother, Mary Del Rochio; brother, Jack; sister, Mrs. Marie Valenti.

Criminal associates: Fred and Angelo Salerno; Vincent Mauro, Anthony Strollo, Salvatore Santoro, John Ormento, Joseph Vento and Julie Podell.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4520053, New York City Police Department No. B-219461. Arrests since 1943 include policy, rape, impairing the morals of a minor, assault with knife, conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate employment.

Modus operandi: Associated with other New York Mafiosi in supplying narcotics to interstate traffickers.

DANIEL LESSA

Aliases: Mushky, Monzigi, Minzagee.

Description: Born November 25, 1915, New York City, 5 feet 5½ inches, 140 pounds, brown wavy hair, brown eyes, mole on left cheek, medium build, neat dresser.

Localities frequented: Resided at 2885 Sampson Avenue, Bronx, N.Y., frequents 117th Street and Paladino Avenue, East 109th Street, between Park and 3d Avenue, New York City. Currently (1960) incarcerated.

Family background: Married to Mary Jacobson; children: Lorraine and Daniel; father, Frank; mother, Mary (Della Foglia); sisters, Josephine and Mrs. Mary Wolfson; brothers, Frank, Louis, Nick and Dominick.

Criminal associates: Vincent Pacelli, Joseph D'Ercole, John Ardito, Dominick and Nick Lessa (brothers), Louis and Nick Tolentino, Steve Puco, Frank Pasqua, Michael Coppola, Joseph Rao, Rocco Mазzie, Joe DiPalermo, Martin DeSaverio, Carmine Polizano, Ralph Polizano, Frank Borelli.

Criminal history: FBI No. 101854G. New York City Police Department No. B-173869, criminal record includes rape, assault, second degree, and violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate employment.

Modus operandi: A very active interstate narcotic trafficker and a member of the underworld in East Harlem area, New York City.

BENJAMIN LICCHI

Alias: Benny.

Description: Born January 2, 1913, New York City, 5 feet 10 inches, 222 pounds, heavy build, gray-brown hair, balding, brown eyes, dark complexion, tattoos both forearms.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1033

Localities frequented: Resides 429 Parker Avenue, Hackensack, N.J. Frequent 107th Street and 2d Avenue, 116th Street and Pleasant Avenue, both New York City and Fairlawn, N.J. Currently incarcerated.

Family background: Wife, Marie Grantino; daughters, Marie Mayo, Mamie Borelli; father, Salvatore; mother, Marie Magistro; brothers, Joseph and Anthony; sister, Bessie Casimentl.

Criminal associates: Joseph Licchi, Frank Borelli, Charles Curcio, Rocco Mazzie, Vincent Squillante, Nicholas Tolentino.

Criminal history: FBI No. 614023, New York City Police Department No. B-103186. Record dates from 1932 and includes arrests for robbery, assault and robbery, grand larceny and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Operated small contracting business from residence. Is a plumber and mechanic by trade.

Modus operandi: Part of the underworld organization, headed by Frank Borelli, which produced heroin in large quantities in a clandestine laboratory in New Jersey. This heroin was then distributed in New York and Chicago, Ill.

JOSEPH ANTHONY LICCHI

Aliases: None.

Description: Born April 9, 1919, New York City, 5 feet 6 inches, 146 pounds, black, receding hair, brown eyes, dark complexion, mustache, deformed right little finger.

Localities frequented: Resides 1263 Third Street, Fairlawn, N.J., frequents Hackensack, N.J., First Avenue and 107th Street, New York City, 116th Street and Pleasant Avenue, New York City. Currently incarcerated.

Family background: Wife: Marie Pisamelo; no children; father: Salvatore; mother: Marie Magistro; sister: Bessie Casimentl; brothers: Benjamin and Anthony.

Criminal associates: Benjamin Licchi, Frank Borelli, Charles Curcio, Rocco Mazzie, Vincent Squillante, Nicholas Tolentino.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1182170, NYCPD No. B144035. Record dates from 1930 and includes arrests for assault and robbery. New Jersey State narcotic conviction 1957 sentenced to 5 to 7 years New Jersey State prison.

Business: Carpenter and mechanic. Worked for brother, Benjamin, in contracting business.

Modus operandi: Part of the underworld organization, headed by Frank Borelli, which produced heroin in large quantities in a clandestine laboratory in New Jersey. This heroin was then distributed in New York and Chicago, Ill.

FRANK S. LIVORSI

Aliases: Cheech, Ciccio, Frank Livolsi.

Description: Born November 10, 1903, Chicago, Ill., 5 feet 7 inches, 170 pounds, brown eyes, brown-gray hair thinning on top, cut-scar over right eye.

Localities frequented: Resides 15 Fulton Avenue, Atlantic Beach, Long Island, N.Y., and has winter home in Miami, Fla. Frequent East Harlem area and racetracks, New York City.

Family background: Married to Dorina Gassola, has five daughters: Rosemary (oldest) married to Tom Dioguardia (brother of notorious Johnny Dio); Dolores, married to Sam Meli (son of notorious Mafiosi Angelo Meli, Detroit); Patricia, married to Tom Ormento (son of John Ormento); father: Bartholomew; mother: Rosaria; has five sisters and three brothers.

Criminal associates: John Ormento, Salvatore Santoro, Mike Coppola, Vito Genovese, John Stoppelli, Charles Alberio, Sebastiano Vento, Johnny Dio, all of New York City, Meli family, Tocco family, and Rafaele Quasarano, of Detroit.

Criminal history: FBI No. 792029, NYCPD No. B-74349, arrests since 1927 include assault, homicide, Federal narcotic laws, sentenced on February 18, 1955, to 15 years New York City for fraudulent Federal income tax returns.

Business: No legitimate business known.

Modus operandi: For over a decade has been the dominating underworld leader, director, and financier of the East 107th Street mob of narcotic traffickers.

1034 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

CARMINE LOCASCIO

Aliases: Willie the Wop, Willie Orlando, Anthony Corona, Willie Brown, Willie LoCascio.

Description: Born September 23, 1911, New York City, 5 feet 7 inches, 204 pounds, gray-black hair, brown eyes, dark complexion, prominent double chin, build, stocky.

Localities frequented: Resides 144-58 10th Avenue, Malba, Queens, frequents Oldtimers Bar, 184th Street, and Roosevelt Avenue, Corona, Queens, Prince and Sullivan Streets, in Manhattan, One Forty Operating Corp., 140 West 44th Street.

Family background: Wife: Rose Orlando; daughter: Rachael; father: Giuseppe (deceased), brother: Peter; sister: Mrs. Rose Caronia.

Criminal associates: John Ormento, Sam Accardi, Joe and John Amici, Peter Locascio, Charles DeStefano, Charles Bracco, Salvatore Santora, Joe Marone, Charles Albero.

Criminal history: FBI No. 246742, New York City Police Department No. 159260, prior arrests since 1929, including robbery, homicide, bribing a Federal officer, bootlegging, harboring a narcotic fugitive, violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Alleged owner of Peppi's Restaurant, 70-30 Austin Street, Forest Hills, Queens, and of One Forty Operating Corp., 140 West 44th Street, New York City.

Modus operandi: An important New York underworld leader, supplier of local and interstate large-scale dealers in narcotics. Has direct foreign source of supply.

PETER JOSEPH LOCASCIO

Aliases: James Russo, John Russo, Mr. Bread.

Description: Born June 10, 1916, New York City; 5 feet 8 inches, 162 pounds, black hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 216 Audley Court, Copiague, Long Island, N.Y. Frequents Lower East Side (Little Italy) section of Manhattan.

Family background: Divorced from first wife Jean Rotandi and has two daughters by her; now married to Anna DiCarlo (sister of Angelo "Gyp" DiCarlo).

Criminal associates: Joe and Pete DiPalermo, John Ormento, Carmine Locascio (brother), Rocco Mazzie, James Picarelli, Sammy Kass, all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 980365; New York City Police Department B-180109. Arrests since 1935 include convictions for Federal liquor laws, conspiracy and New York State narcotic laws.

Business: Has interests in Ennis Construction Co., Lindenhurst, Long Island, N.Y., and Peppi's Restaurant, Forest Hills, Queens, N.Y.

Modus operandi: A trusted associate by high-ranking underworld in New York City. Engaged in narcotic trafficking with his brother Carmine. A vicious and feared hoodlum.

PHILIP LOMBARD

Aliases: Ben Grasso, Ben Turpin, Benny DeMaio, "Cockeyed" Phil.

Description: Born October 5, 1908, New York City; 5 feet 6 inches, 155 pounds, black hair, bald on top, brown eyes, small build, sallow complexion, left eye is crossed.

Localities frequented: Resides 1265 Olmstead Avenue, Bronx, New York. Frequents East Harlem area of New York City, Miami Beach, Fla.

Family background: Single; father, Filipe (deceased); mother, Eleanor Rotolo.

Criminal associates: Charles Albero, Salvatore Santoro, John Ormento, Pasquale Genese, Michael Coppola, Joseph Vento.

Criminal history: FBI No. 201426; New York City Police Department B-90771; Miami Police Department 4154, record dates from 1928 and includes arrests for attempted extortion, robbery with gun, possession of stolen car and consorting with known criminals. Two Federal narcotic convictions.

Business: No legitimate employment known.

Modus operandi: A respected and feared member of the underworld. Active in the wholesale distribution of narcotics throughout the United States. A one-time bodyguard for Michael Coppola, he has a reputation for violence.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1035

JOSEPH PAUL LO PICCOLO

Alias: Joe.

Description: Born April 28, 1918, Chicago, Ill.; 5 feet 5½ inches, 218 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, scar on chin, heavy build.

Localities frequented: Resides 233 East 69th Street, New York City, and 621 44th Street, Miami, Fla. Frequented midtown area of New York City. Vesuvio Restaurant, and Paddock Bar, 50th and Broadway, New York City; also Philadelphia, Chicago, and Miami Beach.

Family background: Wife, Carolyn Riggio; sons, Philip, Carl, Joseph; daughter, Margaret; father, Felippo (deceased); mother, Margherita Viso; brothers, Anthony and Frank; sisters, Loretta (Mrs. Dan) Ficarelli and Carmella (Mrs. Nick) Ficarelli.

Criminal associates: Joseph DiPalermo, Santos Trafficante, James Massi, Angelo Lolacano, Vincent Todaro, Ignazio and Lorenzo Orlando.

Criminal history: FBI No. 790022C; no New York City Police Department number; Miami Beach Police Department No. A-24278; record consists only of an arrest for investigation in Miami and a Federal narcotic conviction. In August 1958 sentenced to 20 years on the Federal narcotic charge.

Business: Partner in Rock Creek Fluorspar Mining Co., Hardin County, Ill.

Modus operandi: An important member of the Mafia, instrumental in narcotic smuggling and wholesale distribution in association with other top echelon violators.

SALVATORE LO PROTO

Aliases: Sally the Blonde, Sally Blue Eyes, Dennis the Menace.

Description: Born April 22, 1926, Lodi, N.J.; 5 feet 10 inches, 200 pounds, blue eyes, light brown hair, fair complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 397 Passaic Avenue, Lodi, N.J. Frequents area of East Harlem, the Vogue Room, the Copacabana, all in New York City.

Family background: Married to Mildred Pisciotta (killed in auto accident 1958), has three children.

Criminal associates: John Ormento, Salvator Santoro, Frank Livorsi, Angelo C. Salerno, Fred Salerno, all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 921798; New York City Police Department No. B-355232; arrests include bookmaking, possession of gun (felony) vehicular homicide. Arrested with John Ormento (1955) in possession of two loaded guns concealed in seat of a car, while apparently on their way to commit a Mafia-inspired crime.

Business: Purportedly employed as dispatcher by Frank Stamato & Co., Lodi, N.J.

Modus operandi: An important member of the John Ormento underworld controlled narcotic traffickers from East Harlem area, New York City.

SALVATORE C. LUCANIA

Aliases: Lucky Luciano, Charles Reid, Charles Luciano, Charles Lucania, Charles Ross.

Description: Born November 24, 1897, Lercara Pridi, Sicily; 5 feet 10 inches, brown eyes, black-gray hair, 140 pounds, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides 464 Via Tasso, Naples. Frequents Zia Teresa, San Francisco and Giacomino's restaurants, all in Naples, also the Agnano Racetrack in Naples.

Family background: Single; father, Antonio; mother, Rosalia Cafarella (both deceased); brother, Bartolo (living in New York City).

Criminal associates: Vito Genovese, Joe Biondo, Joe Profaci, Joe Bonanno, Frank Costello, Meyer Lansky, all of the United States, Joe Doto, Joe Picl, Pietro Davi, Frank Pirico, all of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 62920. New York City Police Department No. B-72321. Arrests since 1916 include assault and robbery, grand larceny, conviction on Federal narcotic laws. Sentenced, New York City 1936 to 30 to 50 years for compulsory prostitution; paroled and deported to Italy in 1946.

Business: Has interests in San Francisco cafe and is secret owner of apartment building at 464 Via Tasso, both in Naples; also interested in a clinic at Cercola, a suburb of Naples.

Modus operandi: Is one of the highest ranking underworld both in Italy and the United States. From Italy he participates in directing of American rackets and regularly receives his share of the profits through underworld couriers.

1036 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

GAETANO LUCCHESE

Aliases: Tom Lucchese, Tom Brown, Tom Arra, "Three-Finger Brown."
Description: Born December 1, 1899, Palermo, Sicily, 5 feet 5 inches, 150 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, wears glasses, naturalized January 25, 1943, New York City.

Localities frequented: Resides 74 Royale Street, Lido Beach, Long Island, N.Y. Frequents Miami Beach, garment district of Manhattan, various locations in Long Island and New Jersey.

Family background: Wife, Catherine; sons, Francis and Baldassari; brothers, Anthony and Joseph; sisters, Pietra, Mrs. Rosalie Rosato (wife of Joe Rosato), and Concetta; father, Baldassari; mother, Francesca.

Criminal associates: Joe Biondo, Anthony Corallo, Anthony Strollo, Joe Profaci, Frank Livorsi, Settimo Accardi, Joe Rao, Lucky Luciano, Joe Rosato (brother-in-law).

Criminal history: FBI No. 168274. New York City Police Department No. B-68534. Arrests since 1921 include murder, grand larceny, receiving stolen goods.

Business: Either owns or has interests in Braunell Ltd., Manhattan; Pleasant Coat Co., Pleasant, N.J.; Bob-France Coat Co., Queens, N.Y.; Fordham Hoisting Co., Bronx, N.Y.; and several other businesses.

Modus operandi: A capable and influential underworld leader who has developed powerful friends in political circles and has used them at times in behalf of his Mafia associates.

STEFANO MAGADDINO

Aliases: Stefano Magardino, Don Stefano.

Description: Born October 10, 1891, Castellammare, Sicily, 5 feet 6 inches, 200 pounds, gray hair and balding, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides Dana Drive, Buffalo, N.Y. Frequents Magaddino's Memorial Chapel and Camelia Linen Supply Co., both in Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Family background: Married; son, Peter; daughters, Josephine, who is married to Charles Montana (nephew of John C. Montana); Angelina, who is married to James LaDuca; and Arcangale, who is married to Vincent Scro; father, Giovanni; mother, Giuseppa (both dead); brother, Antonino.

Criminal associates: John C. Montana, James LaDuca, Antonino Magaddino (brother), Vincent Scro, Salvatore and Joe Falcone, Russell Bufalino, and Roy Carlsli.

Criminal history: FBI No. 778722C. New York City Police Department No. 3080. Arrested in 1921 by New York City Police Department for Avon, N.J., Police Department as a fugitive from justice (homicide).

Business: True owner of Magaddino Memorial Chapel, Inc., 1338 Niagara Street, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Modus operandi: He and his brother Antonino are the top underworld leaders in the Niagara Falls area. They control illegal gambling in the area and have been "muscling" in on legitimate oil- and linen-supply dealers.

GIUSEPPE MAGLIOCCO

Aliases: Joe Magliocco, Joe Magliocci.

Description: Born June 29, 1898, Portella di Mare, Sicily, 5 feet 9 inches, 245 pounds, brown eyes, brown-gray hair.

Localities frequented: Resides 279 Bay 11th Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. Summer home at Bay View Avenue, East Islip, Long Island. Frequents Sunland Beverage Co., Brooklyn, N.Y.

Family background: Married Rose Angelo; brothers, Anthony, Angelo, and Ambrosio; father, Giovanni; mother, Carmela Fontani; sister, Mrs. Nina Profaci (wife of Giuseppe Profaci).

Criminal associates: Sebastiano Nani and Lucky Luciano, of Italy, John Balsamo, Emmanuel Cammarata, Palo Gambino, Frank Livorsi, John Oddo, all of New York City area, Angelo Meli and William Tocco, of Detroit.

Criminal history: FBI No. 184224. Cleveland Police Department No. 32771. Record dating from 1928 includes arrests for concealed weapon and conspiracy to obstruct justice. In 1960 sentenced on latter charge to 5 years and $10,000 fine.

Business: Owns Sunland Beverage Co., Brooklyn, N.Y.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1037

Modus operandi: Attended Cleveland underworld meeting in 1928 and the 1957 Apalachin underworld meeting with brother-in-law, Giuseppe Profaci. Is one of the most powerful members of the underworld in the United States.

FRANCESCO JOSEPH MANCIO

Aliases: Frank Mancino, Chow, Joseph Barbera.

Description: Born October 25, 1906, New York City, 5 feet 5 inches, 204 pounds, black-gray hair, brown eyes, heavy build, sloppy dresser.

Localities frequented: Resides 44 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequents Hi-Way Bar, 362 Metropolitan Avenue, Orientale Bar, 40 Marcy Avenue, Mustang Social Club, 433 Metropolitan Avenue, all Brooklyn, N.Y.

Family background: Common law wife, Margaret Rodd; previous wives, Angelina Barbera, Beatrice Pulco, and Lillian Gorshenbaum; daughters, Apolnette McDough, Marie Bongiovanni; son, Anthony F.; father, Salvatore; mother, Maria Iolazzolo; sisters, Beatrice, Angelina Defiorra, Marv Russo, Vita LaSalle.

Criminal associates: Cotroni Brothers, Frank Moccardi, Salvatore Giglio, Luke Russo (brother-in-law), Anthony Di Pasque.

Criminal history: FBI No. B-48817. New York City Police Department No. B-78209. Record dating from 1929 includes arrests for assault and robbery, grand larceny, robbery, burglary, armed robbery, and violation Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: Part of a large-scale underworld narcotic smuggling and distributing group. Acted as courier for large quantities of heroin furnished by the Cotroni organization in Canada to underworld mobs in United States.

SALVATORE CHARLES MANERI

Aliases: Salvatore Manera, Salvatore Piazza, Antonio Magana.

Description: Born August 15, 1912, Marineo, Palermo, Sicily, 5 feet 5 inches, 140 pounds, brown eyes, black hair, dark complexion, medium build.

Localities frequented: Resides Palermo, Italy. Before deportation from United States resided in Brooklyn and Staten Island, N.Y.

Family background: Married Jennie Morello; son, Michael; father, Michaelangelo; mother, Maria Gippetto; sisters, Celia Collecta and Anna Scorsone; brothers, Joseph and Philip.

Criminal associates: Ernesto Bareso, Giuseppe DiGiorgio, Michael Spinella, Onofrio Minaudo, Gaetano Maiorana.

Criminal history: FBI No. 495856. New York City Police Department No. B-97217. Record dating from 1924 includes arrests for juvenile delinquency, truancy, petty larceny, grand larceny, burglary tools, theft from foreign shipment, and immigration violation.

Business: No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: Though himself a narcotic addict, Maneri engaged in large-scale narcotic smuggling, personally removing drugs from ships in New York Harbor and also acting as contactman between French sources and the Joseph DiPalermo narcotic smuggling organization.

RAYMOND MARESCA

Aliases: "Lemons," Thomas Del Monto.

Description: Born January 19, 1903, New Haven, Conn.; 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, brown eyes, gray-black hair, middle finger left hand amputated.

Localities frequented: Resides 549 Valley Street, New Haven, Conn. Frequents Carson's Restaurant, Lip's Bar & Grill, and parking lot at 1172 Chapel Street, all in New Haven.

Family background: Married to Concetta DePalma; has a daughter; father, Leonard; mother, Felice; sisters, Alice and Anna; brother, Eugene.

Criminal associates: Carmine Locascio, Vincent Squillante, Anthony Spalena, all of New York City; James and William Conforte of New Haven, Conn.

Criminal history: FBI No. 26808. New Haven Police Department No. 2696. Arrests since 1923 include breaking and entering, robbery with violence, carrying concealed weapons, and convictions for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Employed at 1172 Chapel Street (parking lot), New Haven, Conn. Also believed to have interest in Valley Supermarket, New Haven, Conn.

Modus operandi: Major distributor of narcotics in New Haven area and close associate of known underworld traffickers in New York City from whom he obtained narcotics. Also engaged in loan shark business and any illegal activity available.

1038 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

FRANK MARI

Aliases: Frankie T., Frank Russo.

Description: Born September 3, 1926, Scilla, Reggio, Calabria, Italy; 5 feet 7 inches, 185 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, medium build, sharp dresser. Schizophrenic. Derivative citizenship.

Localities frequented: Resides 20 Monroe Street, New York City, formerly 68 Forsythe Street and 124 Forsythe Street, New York City. Frequents CIA Club, 72 Forsythe Street, Vivere Bar, 192 Second Avenue, Sugar Bowl, 305 Broome Street, Mott Street and Mulberry Street areas, all New York City.

Family background: Married Mildred DiPietro (sister of narcotic violator Carli DiPietro); son, Matthew; brother, Rocco; sisters, Antoinette Rando, Adeline Rando (not related to Antoinette's husband), and Minnie Tortorelli; father, Matteo; mother, Concetta DeFranco.

Criminal associates: Anthony DiPasqua, Angelo Tuminaro, Salvatore Giglio, Frank Mancino, Anthony Lisi, Carmine Gaiente.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4371934, New York City Police Department No. 233493. Record dates from 1945 and includes arrests for felonious assault, possession of weapons, grand larceny and vagrancy, suspect in two homicide investigations.

Business: No legitimate employment.

Modus operandi: Large-scale underworld narcotic trafficker obtains narcotics from Tuminaro and DiPasqua, who, in turn obtain their supply from the Cotroni smuggling organization in Canada.

PETER ANTHONY MARINELLO

Aliases: Pete Mello, Charles P. Mello.

Description: Born April 20, 1911, Boston, Mass. 5 feet 8 inches, 170 pounds, brown eyes, black hair.

Localities frequented: Currently (1959) a fugitive. Used to frequent Malden, Revere, and Boston, Mass., area, also carnivals and racetracks.

Family background: Married to Carolyn Copson; father: Leo (dead); mother: Victoria Zittola; sisters: Mrs. Mary Capello and Mrs. Rose Glachinta; brothers, Louis, Dominick, Anthony, Michael, and Frank.

Criminal associates: Florio Isabella, Joe Basile, Tony Vellucci, Nathan Behrman, all of New York City; Wady David, Charles Robinson, William Marino, Edward Biscoe, all of Boston area.

Criminal history: FBI No: 1432750. Boston Police Department No. 48953. Arrests since 1927 include grand larceny, assault and battery, breaking and entering. Currently (1959) wanted for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate business known.

Modus operandi: Engaged in illegal activities most of his life. A wholesale distributor of narcotics for the underworld controlled Behrman-Vellucci organization of New York City.

JOSEPH MARONE

Aliases: Joe Marone.

Description: Born February 11, 1904, in New York City; 5 feet 8 inches; 150 pounds; black hair; brown eyes; sallow complexion; medium build.

Localities frequented: Resides 1815 Grand Concourse, Bronx, New York City. Frequents 434 Revere Avenue, Bronx; barbershop, 3594 East Tremont Avenue, Bronx; upper East Side of New York City; all in New York City.

Criminal associates: Charles Albero, Alfred Criscuolo. Knows every major racketeer on the upper East Side of New York City.

Criminal history: Dates from 1928 and includes arrests for disorderly person, assault, robbery, and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: A notorious dominating criminal and racketeer on the upper East Side of New York City who sells narcotics to large-scale dealers locally in New York City and in other cities. Associated with a group of smuggling distributing traffickers with sources of supply in Europe.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. Police departments of New York City, N.Y., and Jersey City, N.J.

Identification: FBI No. 318702. New York City Police Department No. B-57799.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1039

MARIANO MARSALISI

Aliases: Mariano Marsalise.

Description: Born October 21, 1879, Palermo, Sicily, Italy; 5 feet 6¼ inches; 160 pounds; medium build; gray hair; brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 662 Manida Street, Bronx, and seldom leaves there due to his advanced age.

Family background: Father, John; mother, Sarah Griffo (both deceased); brothers, Luciano, Harry, Charles; sister, Lucy; children, John, Charles, Ammo, Mary Leonardi, Lucy Collica, Sarah Caruso, Tina Lynch, Eleanor Terico.

Criminal associates: Frank Caruso (son-in-law) not "Frankie the Bug," Joseph Doto, Vito Coniglio, Jerry Feraci, Lucien Ignaro.

Criminal history: FBI No. 455409, no New York City number, was first arrested in Istanbul, Turkey, in 1932 for narcotic smuggling. In 1942 he was convicted of narcotic conspiracy.

Business: None.

Modus operandi: Has been an underworld leader for many years. At one time he headed what was considered to be the largest heroin smuggling ring in existence. Due to his advanced age he has apparently retired from active participation in illegal activities and confines his activities to counseling younger underworld members.

NICHOLAS MARTELLO

Aliases: Bulldog Nick, Nick Marrone.

Description: Born April 7, 1907, Brooklyn, N.Y., 5 feet 5 inches, 160 pounds, black and gray hair, stocky build, brown eyes, cleft chin.

Localities frequented: Resides at 42-06 25th Avenue, Astoria, Long Island, N.Y., frequents Paisano Bar, 304 East 14th Street, New York, N.Y.

Family background: Father's name, Sylvester, mother's name, Mary, wife's maiden name, Alvino, two brothers, Fred and Carmine Martello.

Criminal associates: Joe Rao, Mike Rubino, Arnold Romano, Victor Eugene Tramaglino, John Ormento, Salvatore Santora, Harry Tantillo.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4716, NYCPD No. B-64621 dates from 1926 and includes arrests for rape, assault, robbery, grand larceny, extortion, conviction for Federal narcotic laws; arrested on October 15, 1958, for conspiracy to violate Federal narcotic laws (pending).

Business: Was the owner of the Paisano Bar, 304 East 14th Street, New York City, at the present time believed to be in partnership with his father; Martello & Son Shoe Repair, 25-02 Steinway Street, Astoria, Long Island, N.Y.

Modus operandi: An important trafficker in the East Harlem section of New York and on the Lower East Side; a leader of the underworld, in charge of narcotic distribution for a group of these traffickers operating on the Lower East Side and in the East Harlem section of New York, N.Y.

JAMES LEO MASSI

Aliases: Jimmy Ward, Johnny Martino.

Description: Born-September 23, 1908, New York City, 5 feet 7 inches, 208 pounds, black-gray hair, brown eyes, heavy build.

Localities frequented: Resided at 1223 Waring Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Currently (1959) incarcerated in Federal penitentiary.

Family background: Married to Florence Manzi; sons, Michael and James; stepson, Stanley; brothers, Fred, Harry; sisters, Mrs. Rose Botta, Mrs. Lena Casella, Mrs. Fannie DiMonte, Mrs. Antoinette DeMartino; father, Joseph (dead); mother, Mary Loreto.

Criminal associates: Ben and Ted DeMartino, Rocco Mazzie, Emilio D'Aria, Joe Valachi, Rocco Barra, Frank Pasqua, all of New York City area; James Santore and Peter Casella of Philadelphia area.

Criminal history: FBI No. 495223. NYCPD No. B-97132. Arrests since 1925 include illegal possession firearms, attempted robbery, conspiracy. Sentenced July 31, 1958, to 10 years for Federal narcotic laws at New York City.

Business: No legitimate business or employment known.

Modus operandi: A large-scale interstate narcotic trafficker closely associated with known underworld international traffickers and smugglers.

1040 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

VINCENZO FRANCESCO ANGELO MAURO

Aliases: Vincent Murio, Vincent Maurio, Vincent J. Morrio, Vinnie Morrow.
Description: Born February 26, 1916, New York City, 5 feet 11 inches, 194 pounds, brown eyes, dark-brown hair.

Localities frequented: Resides at 3824 Bronx Boulevard, Bronx, and also at 22 King Street, in Manhattan. Frequents Burke Bar and Ciro's Bar, both in Bronx, and most nightclubs in midtown Manhattan and in Greenwich Village area.

Family: Single, father, Salvatore; mother, Rafaela Criscuolo; sisters, Teresa and Amelia.

Criminal associates: Anthony Strollo, John Stoppelli, John Ormento, Salvatore Santoro, Patsy Moccio (dead), Anthony Mirra, Joe Valachi.

Criminal history: FBI No. 760950, NYCPD No. B-115392. Arrests since 1933 include robbery, burglary, Federal income tax evasion, and Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Usually associates himself with some nightclub or bar which is under the control of the Strollo organization.

Modus operandi: A high-ranking member of the Tony Strollo controlled underworld organization, which is involved in narcotic trafficking, shylocking, policy rackets, and afterhours "joints." Considered a merciless and vicious "killer."

ROCCO MAZZIE

Aliases: Rogle.

Description: Born February 25, 1916, Luzerne, Pa., 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, brown eyes, brown-gray hair.

Localities frequented: Resides at 2332 Seymour Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Frequents East Harlem area of Manhattan.

Family background: Married to Anna Vacchi; daughter, Amelia; brothers, Ralph and James; sister, Mrs. Angelina Branca; mother, Amelia Pecoria; father, Angelo.

Criminal associates: Frank Borelli, Charles Curcio, John Ormento, Vincent Squillante, Steve Puco, Frank Pasqua, Nick Tolentino, all of New York City, Salvatore Poliafico, of Cleveland.

Criminal history: FBI No. 836192. NYCPD No. B-128301. Arrests since 1934 include robbery, assault and robbery, conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate business or employment known.

Modus operandi: A wholesale dealer in narcotics who has supplied many important traffickers throughout the United States. A close associate of known underworld traffickers who are his source of supply.

MICHELE MIRANDA

Aliases: Mike Mirandi, Mr. Big, Frank Russi.

Description: Born July 26, 1896, San Giuseppe Vesuviano, Naples, Italy, 5 feet 5 inches, 160 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair, naturalized in New York City on May 16, 1932.

Localities frequented: Resides at 167 Greenway North, Forest Hills, Long Island. Summer home, 629 East Olive Street, Long Beach, Long Island. Frequents lower East Side and garment district of New York City, travels to Florida, Cuba, Canada, and Italy.

Family background: Married Lucy DeLorenzo; son, Anthony Michael; sister, Mrs. Anna Flavio; brothers, Pasquale and Antonio (dead); father, Vincenzo; mother, Carmela Bifulco.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Giuseppe Doto, and Calogero Iacono, of Italy, Francisco Costiglia, Anthony Strollo, Carmine Galente, Joseph Stracel, and Meyer Lansky.

Criminal history: FBI No. 91524, NYCPD No. B-129648. Record dating from 1915 includes arrests for murder, disorderly conduct, vagrancy, and conspiracy to obstruct justice (for which sentenced 1960 to 5 years and $10,000 fine).

Business: Cadillac salesman for Huntoon & Raffo, New York City.

Modus operandi: Attended 1957 Apalachin underworld meeting as a leader from New York City area. One of the most feared and ruthless Mafiosi in the United States. Has engaged in narcotic smuggling, murder, extortion, and is one of the controlling racketeers in New York City's garment industry.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1041

ANTHONY MIRRA

Aliases: Anthony Mirro.

Description: Born July 18, 1927, New York City, 6 feet, 210 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, medium build.

Localities frequented: Resides 115 Madison Street, New York City, frequents LaComedie Restaurant, Manhattan, and 42 College Place, Yonkers, N.Y.

Family background: Single, father's name Albert; mother's name is Millie Embarrato.

Criminal associates: Alfred J. Embarrato (uncle), William Paradise, Angelo Tuminaro, Anthony De Pasqua, Joe Latona, Vincent Mauro.

Criminal history: FBI No. 393845C, NYCPD No. B-233768, dates from 1948 and includes arrests for possession of a gun, assault, and conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Commission salesman for Pure Stone Construction Co., 221 Palisades Avenue, Garfield, N.J., alleged owner of LaComedie Restaurant, East 46th Street, New York City, together with Ann Dedon, paramour and owner of record.

Modus operandi: A wholesaler of narcotics in large quantities. Trusted member of the underworld. Was purchasing narcotics from the Behrman and Velucci organization in New York City and delivers locally and also into interstate traffic.

PASQUALE MOCCIO

Aliases: Moccia, Pat, Little Pat, Paddy Mush, Paddy Mush, Patsy.

Description: Born January 10, 1918, in Bronx, New York City; 5 feet, 4 inches; 170 pounds; stocky; black hair, balding; brown eyes; dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Residence: 95 Kimball Avenue, Yonkers, New York. Sentenced April 23, 1956, to 5 years for violation Federal narcotic laws. Frequented Mickey Walker's Glove & Palette, 1654 Broadway, New York City.

Criminal associates: Tony Bender, Vinny Mauro, Pasquale Pagano, John Stoppelli, Joseph Valachi, Giacomina Reina, Larry Quartiero, Joseph Marone, John Ardito, Thomas Mile, Joseph D'Ercole.

Criminal history: Dates from 1934 and includes arrests for gambling, policy, grand larceny, burglary, and violation of Federal narcotic laws. Sentenced April 23, 1956, to 5 years for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Directs smuggling activities for the Anthony Strollo organization. Recruits seamen and longshoremen for the actual smuggling of narcotics. Deals in kilogram quantities through trusted lieutenants.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, Federal Bureau of Investigation, New York City Police Department, Jersey City, N.J., Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 706840, New York City Police Department No. B-130737.

ROSARIO MOGAVERO

Aliases: Saro Mogavero, Saro Mogavero, Saro Mugavero.

Description: Born May 2, 1916, New York City; 5 feet, 6 inches; 163 pounds; blue eyes, brown hair.

Localities frequented: Resides 104 Madison Street, New York City. Frequents area of Madison and Pike Streets, New York City, and docks on East River.

Family background: Married to Mary Nanetakis and has four children; father: Salvatore; mother: Illuminata (both born in Sicily); brother: Joseph.

Criminal associates: John Ormento, Salvatore Santoro, Rocco Pellegrino, Phil Albanese, Sam Kass, Angelo Tuminaro, Anthony DiPasqua, Carmine Locascio, Joe Lapi, Angelo Loiacano, all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 895630, New York City Police Department No. B-109163. Arrests since 1932 include burglary, felonious assault, harboring a fugitive, extortion.

Business: Was vice president of Local 856 of the International Longshoremen's Union in 1953 when he was sentenced in New York City for extortion.

Modus operandi: A major narcotic trafficker on New York's lower East Side, and a feared underworld leader in that area. Close associate of most top underworld leaders in New York City.

1042 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

MICHAEL MONICA

Aliases: Gigs, Gigi, Giggy.

Description: Born January 12, 1917, New York City; 5 feet, 6 inches; 193 pounds; brown eyes, brown hair, light complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides with sister at 3655 Willett Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Frequents Sawdust Inn at 3131 White Plains Road, Maple Tavern at 578 East Fordham Road, and Burke's Bar, 3204 White Plains Road, all in Bronx, N.Y.

Family background: Single; father: Joseph; mother: Margaret Movigan; brother: Anthony (recently deceased); sisters: Mrs. Mary Sassano and Lucille Regante.

Criminal associates: Michael Nicoline, Thomas Milo, Joseph Valachi, Dominick Carminate, Robert Guippone.

Criminal history: FBI No. 811538, New York City Police Department No. B-220924. Record dating from 1934 includes arrests for assault and robbery with gun, vagrancy, rape, jostling police and felonious assault. Currently (1960) defendant in important narcotic case.

Business: No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: For many years has operated as "plant man" maintaining caches of narcotics for underworld narcotics distribution organizations headed by the late Pasquale Moccio and currently Joseph Valachi.

JOHN MONTANA, JR.

Alias: Curley.

Description: Born September 18, 1918, in Cleveland, Ohio; 5 feet 10 inches; 160 pounds; brown hair; hazel eyes; medium build.

Localities frequented: Residence: 11130 Magnolia Drive, Cleveland, Ohio. Frequented: Victory Lounge Bar, West 65th Street, and Detroit Avenue; Cadillac Hotel, Walnut Street; Pic-a-Bone Cafe, Mayfield Road; all in Cleveland, Ohio.

Criminal associates: Sam and Studo Papalardo, Frank Livorsi, Louis De Gregorio, Alex Clarco, Carmen Lavelle, Rudy Valent, Joseph Zoray, Frank Borelli, Charles Curcio, Stanley Secunda.

Criminal history: Dates from 1939 and includes arrests for burglary, robbery, and violation of Federal narcotic laws. Sentenced November 21, 1956, in Cleveland, Ohio, to 7 years for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: One of the most important narcotic wholesale dealers in Midwest working as the leader and trusted member of an organization with sources of supply into the underworld smuggling-distributing traffickers in New York City. Employs extreme violence to maintain organization.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. Cleveland, Ohio, Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 1369462. Cleveland Police Department No. 47448.

MICHAEL NICOLINE

Aliases: Marco Ceritelli, Mark, Mike.

Description: Born in 1914 in New York City; 5 feet 6 inches; 175 pounds; brown hair; brown eyes; stocky; medium complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides: 3674 White Plains Road, Bronx, N.Y. Frequents: Porcharo's Luncheonette, 3630 Holland Avenue; 3515 White Plains Road; Gun Hill Tavern, 720 East 214th Street, Castle Hill Diner, Tremont and Castle Hill Avenues: all in Bronx, N.Y.

Criminal associates: Rocco Mазzie, John Stoppelli, Charles Curcio. Known to all members of Anthony Strollo organization.

Criminal history: Dates from 1930 and includes arrests for jostling, policy, grand larceny, burglary, and robbery.

Modus operandi: Controls the distribution of wholesale quantities of narcotics for the Anthony Strollo organization.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, U.S. Bureau of Internal Revenue, and New York City Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 481939; New York City Police Department No. B93747.

GEORGE NOBILE

Aliases: Georgie Hooks, George Noble, George DeGaetano, Joe Rizzo.

Description: Born April 26, 1910, New York City, 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, brown eyes, dark brown hair, small mole on left cheek.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1043

Localities frequented: Resided 130 Baxter Street, New York City. Frequented area of Mulberry and Hester Streets, Manhattan, made trips to Florida, and Virginia.

Family background: Married to Isabella DeGaetano and has no children; brother: John; sisters: Mrs. Rose Barniere, Anna, and Mrs. Lena Rapalone.

Criminal associates: Vincent Mauro, Frank Caruso, John Stoppelli, Angelo Tuminaro; Anthony DiPasqua, Arnold Romano, Philip Albanese, all of New York City, Vincent J. Todaro, of Virginia.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1379511: New York City Police Department No. B-161699. Arrests since 1937 include policy, conspiracy to obstruct justice and convictions for both New York State and Federal narcotic laws. Sentenced May 20, 1958, to 10 years State prison, Virginia, for violation Virginia State narcotic laws.

Business: Has never maintained any legitimate business or employment.

Modus operandi: A major local and interstate narcotic trafficker and trusted associate of known underworld traffickers from whom he obtained his supply of narcotics. Working with underworld associates he acts as chemist in conversion narcotic drugs for the illicit market. Is also known as a strong-arm man.

IGNAZIO LAWRENCE ORLANDO

Alias: Big Nose Larry.

Description: Born October 24, 1924, New York City, 6 feet 1 inches, 195 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, has large nose.

Localities frequented: Resided 16 Jacob Street, Elmont, Long Island, N.Y. Currently incarcerated in Federal penitentiary.

Family background: Married to Serafina Rescica; daughter: Rose; son: Lawrence; father: Lorenzo; mother: Rose.

Criminal associates: Lorenzo Orlando (father), Nick Tolentino, Emilio D'Aria, James Massi, Angelo Loiacano, Rocco Sancinella, Joseph Lo Piccolo, all of New York City area; James Santore, Peter Casella, of Philadelphia area; Vincent Todaro, of Virginia.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4369250. Record shows arrests and conviction as Army deserter in 1946. Arrested again 1958 and sentenced to 17 years on July 31, 1958, for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Prior to arrest in 1958 he operated a laundry truck.

Modus operandi: A member of an underworld controlled international smuggling narcotic ring who acted as a courier and "plant man" for the ring.

LORENZO ORLANDO

Aliases: Lorenzo Rizzo, Lawrence Rizzo.

Description: Born February 10, 1901, New Orleans, La., 5 feet 7 inches, 195 pounds, heavy build, black hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resided 164 Hill Street, Elmont, N.Y.; currently (1959) incarcerated.

Family background: Married to Rose Orlando (his cousin); son: Ignazio Lawrence Orlando; sisters: Nina, Rosalie; father: Vito; mother: Settima M. Lafuira.

Criminal associates: James Santore, Peter Casella, Nicholas Tolentino, Anthony Napolitana, Joseph Lo Piccolo, Angelo Loiacano, Vincent Todaro.

Criminal history: FBI No. 511557, arrests date back to 1928, largely for alcohol violations. In 1958 convicted of Federal narcotic law violation and sentenced to a total of 17 years.

Business: No legitimate occupation known.

Modus operandi: Part of an underworld controlled organization which smuggled narcotics into the United States and distributed to interstate violators. Orlando was entrusted with the storage of the narcotic drugs and then delivery to the interstate violators.

JOHN ORMENTO

Aliases: John Ormando, John Forte, Big John, Governor.

Description: Born August 1, 1912, New York City; 5 feet 10 inches, 240 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, heavy build, sometimes wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides 118 Audrey Drive, Lido Beach, Long Island. Frequents East Harlem area and various New York City nightclubs.

1044 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Family background: Married Carmela Mildred Forte; son: Thomas (married to Patricia Livorsi, daughter of the notorious Frank Livorsi); daughter: Connie.

Criminal associates: Caetano Lucchese, Carmine Galante, Salvatore Santoro, Rocco Pellegrino, Frank Livorsi, John Dioguardi, Vincent Squillante, all of New York City; Joseph Ianni of Texas, Rafaele Quasarano and Angelo Mell, of Detroit; the Diecidue brothers, of Tampa, Fla.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1321383; New York City Police Department B-158044. Arrests since 1937 include three convictions of Federal narcotic law violation. In 1960 convicted of conspiracy to obstruct justice and sentenced to 5 years and $10,000 fine.

Business: Has interest in O. & S. Trucking Co. and Long Island Garment Trucking Co., both in New York City.

Modus operandi: Attended 1957 underworld Apalachin meeting. Is an important underground member and leader of the notorious "107th Street Mob" in New York City, which for many years has been responsible for a large part of the narcotic smuggling and distribution in the United States.

JOSEPH ORSINI

Aliases: Joseph Casabianca, Joe Dorney, Francois.

Description: Born March 19, 1903 Bastia, Corsica, France, French citizen, 5 feet 8 inches, 179 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, partly bald, medium build, tattoos on left arm.

Localities frequented: Now resides in France. Formerly resided at 26 West 85th Street, New York City, and frequented French restaurants in the midtown area of New York City.

Family background: Mistress, Marcelle Ansellem; father, Louis, mother, Maria Leonetti.

Criminal associates: Antoine D'Agostino, Francois Spirito, Jean Laget, Jean Ager, Marius Ansaldi, Dominique Reissant, Saul Gelb, Edouard Giribone, Carmelo Sansone, Vincent Randazzo, Salvatore Shillitani.

Criminal history: FBI No. 708363A. He has been convicted in France for fraud and robbery and collaboration with the Germans during World War II. Federal narcotic and counterfeiting convictions in United States, for which sentenced to 10 years 1951. Deported from United States, 1958.

Business: Ex seaman. No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: He was the Canadian-American representative for the Ansaldi group which operated a clandestine laboratory in France and smuggled heroin in large quantities to underworld racketeers in the United States.

LOUIS PACELLA

Aliases: Louis Dome.

Description: Born October 28, 1921, New York City, 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, brown eyes, black hair, olive complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 322 East 116 Street, New York City; frequents Sonny's Bar at 104th and First Avenue, Lizzi's Restaurant, at 116th and 2d Avenue, and 118th Street, and Paladino Avenue, all New York City.

Family background: Married Jennie Gerardi, no children; father, Anthony; mother, Marie Lamonico.

Criminal associates: Joseph D'Ercole, Pasquale Pagano, Sidney Ginsberg, Alexander Rosso, Giacomo Reina.

Criminal history: No FBI No. assigned. New York City Police Department No. B8347933. Only arrest was for grand larceny (automobile) in 1954.

Business: Reported to be employed at Napoli Restaurant, 141 Rockaway Boulevard, Belle Harbor, N.Y.

Modus operandi: With other important underworld in New York area. Engaged in large-scale distribution of pure heroin. Has made trips to Europe to further his illicit activities.

VINCENT JOSEPH PACELLI

Aliases: Picelli, Bacile, Pacoli, Joe Maci, Anthony Vincent Pacelli.

Description: Born June 13, 1921, New York City, 6 feet 0 inches, 175 pounds, brown eyes, dark brown hair.

Localities frequented: Resides 422 East 118th Street, New York City, frequents East 117th Street and Paladino Avenue, New York City, also makes trips to Los Angeles.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1045

Family background: Wife, Mildred; Father, Michael; mother, Aureba; brothers, Frank and Anthony; sister, Anna.

Criminal associates: John Ormento, Edward Sandello, Lessa brothers, Salvatore Santora, Joe Bendenelli, all of New York City, Megan King and Mose Stevens of Los Angeles.

Criminal history: FBI No. 2034716, New York City Police Department No. B3361, arrest record from 1940 includes burglary and conviction of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate means of employment.

Modus operandi: An interstate narcotic trafficker, working directly under underworld associate Joe Bendenelli. Is a trusted member of the organization.

JOSEPH LOUIS PAGANO

Aliases: Joe, Joey.

Description: Born August 28, 1928, New York City, 5 feet, 9 inches, 140 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, slender build, sallow complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 323 East 115th Street, New York City, frequents Santoro's Bar and Grill and Lizzie's Clam House, both in New York City.

Family background: Wife, Theresa; father, Donato; mother, Antoinette Dimasi; brothers, John and Pasquale.

Criminal associates: John and Pasquale Pagano (brothers), Salvatore Mezzasalma, Arthur Repola, Fiore Siano, Joseph Ragone, Peter Contes and Achilles Abbamonto.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4674260. NYCPD No. B246200. Arrests since 1946 include attempted robbery, assault and robbery, and conviction for Federal narcotics laws.

Business: Alleged to be manager of Lizzie's Clam House, East 116th Street and Second Avenue, New York City.

Modus operandi: Associated with other important underworld, including the Joseph Valachi organization, which is part of the Anthony Strollo combine, in the local and interstate narcotic traffic.

PASQUALE ANTHONY PAGANO

Aliases: Big Pat, Patsy Pagano.

Description: Born February 21, 1921, New York City, 5 feet, 11 inches, 202 pounds, black hair, brown eyes.

Family background: Father, Donato; mother, Antoinette Dimasi; married to Laura Prete and has two children; brothers, Joseph and John.

Criminal associates: Tony Strollo, Steve Arnone, Fiore Siano, Jack Scarpulla, Joe Pagano (brother), all of New York City; Pat Erra and Mike Coppola of Miami, Fla.; Alfredo Badulati (France).

Criminal history: FBI No. 74687B. Jersey City PD No. 13866. Arrests since 1952 include atrocious assault and battery, conviction for bribing Federal officer, and conviction (1956) for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Was business agent for Local 59, International Bricklayer's Helpers, AFL prior to narcotic arrest; also a mason contractor, and New Jersey dockworker for underworld chief Tony Strollo.

Modus operandi: An international and interstate smuggler and distributor of narcotics with his own source of supply in France. An up and coming underworld leader in East Harlem, New York City.

FRANK J. PANATERA

Aliases: None.

Description: Born in 1926 in Chicago, Ill.; 5 feet, 8½ inches; 190 pounds, brown eyes, black hair, stocky.

Localities frequented: Resides 2956 South Wallace Street, Chicago, Ill. Frequents Phil's Tavern, 2956 South Wallace, Spotlite Tavern, 3113 Broadway, Silver Bar Club, 3200 South Halsted Street, 26th and Union, Ciro's, 817 North Wabash; all in Chicago, Ill.

Criminal associates: Robert Payne, Jack Rizzo, Peter Gushi, James Cordavana, all of Chicago, Ill. Frank Pasqua of New York City.

Criminal history: Dates from 1952 and includes a conviction for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

1046 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Modus operandi: Wholesaler of heroin in large quantities in Chicago and into interstate traffic. Has source of supply for pure heroin in New York City.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. U.S. Secret Service. Chicago, Ill., Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 301390B. Chicago Police Department E-458.

SAM PAPALARDO

Aliases: Sam Papp.

Description: Born August 23, 1909, Cleveland, Ohio; 5 feet 7 inches, 150 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, sallow complexion, sharp weasel features, medium build, wears sport clothes.

Localities frequented: Resides 4119 East 176th Street, Cleveland, Ohio, frequents Victory Lounge Bar, 6605 Detroit Avenue, and night clubs on Short Vincent Street.

Family background: Single. Father is Rosario, sister is Mrs. Josephine Rini, widow of Gus J. Rini, brother Sylvester, alias Studo.

Criminal associates: Sylvester Papalardo, John Montana, Jr., John DeMarco, Sam Poliafico, Frank Brancato, Frank Liosi, Anthony and Charles Spitalieri, all of Cleveland; Frank Borelli, Charles Curcio, Rocco Mazzie, Vincent Squillante, all of New York City; Salvatore Pieri, Salvatore Rizzo, Nicholas Tutino, all of Buffalo; Joseph Licavoli, of Detroit.

Criminal history: FBI No. 118998, Cleveland Police Department No. 28652, criminal record dates back to 1927. Sentenced in May 1927, for rape, from 8 to 10 years; has been picked up numerous times in connection with murder and narcotics; was acquitted on February 13, 1958, at New York City, for conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Owns and manages, by proxy, the Victory Lounge Bar, West 65th Street, and Detroit Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

Modus operandi: Major interstate narcotic trafficker, alleged to be the "bank-roll" for the John Montana organization; considered to be an important member of the underworld at Cleveland, Ohio.

SYLVESTER PAPALARDO

Aliases: Studo.

Description: Born November 27, 1910, in Cleveland, Ohio; 5 feet 7½ inches, 188 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, stocky build, small moles on both sides of face.

Localities frequented: Resides 17620 Walden Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, frequents Victory Lounge Bar and various nightclubs on Short Vincent Street, Cleveland.

Family background: Married Katherine Frisina; sons: Russell and Fred; father: Rosario; brother: Sam; sister: Mrs. Josephine Rini.

Criminal associates: Sam Papalardo, Sam Poliafico, John Montana, Jr., Frank Liosi, William Basile, Angelo Lavelle, all of Cleveland; Rocco Mazzie, Vincent Squillante, of New York City; Salvatore Rizzo, Salvatore Pieri, all of Buffalo, N.Y.

Criminal history: FBI No. 463957, Cleveland Police Department No. 33941, record dating from 1932 includes arrests for burglary, robbery, narcotics, and homicide; currently incarcerated at the United States penitentiary, Leavenworth, Kans., having been sentenced on August 14, 1953, to 15 years for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate occupation. Derives income from narcotic trafficking and gambling.

Modus operandi: Major interstate narcotic trafficker, large scale gambler and ranking member of the underworld in Cleveland, Ohio.

FRANK ANTHONY PASQUA

Aliases: Frank Page, Frank Pasquale, Frank Hunt.

Description: Born January 13, 1923, New York City; 6 feet, 250 pounds, brown eyes, dark brown hair, heavy build.

Localities frequented: Resides 974 Rhinelander Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Frequented area of East Harlem in Manhattan and Chicago, Ill. Currently (1959) incarcerated for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Family background: Married to Mildred Bartolamucci; sons, Richard and Frank; father, Natale; mother, Rose Comodeo.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1047

Criminal associates: Jack Scarpulla, John Riccardulli, James Massi, Mike Galgano, Rocco Mazzie, Frank Corona, all of New York City; Frank Panatera and Jack Rizzo of Chicago, Ill.

Criminal history: FBI No. 241577B. Convicted April 25, 1958 to 4 years for violation of Federal narcotic laws.— (Reversed?)

Business: Was self-employed in the produce trucking business.

Modus operandi: Has been a major interstate narcotic trafficker in association with known underworld traffickers from East Harlem area of Manhattan.

ROCCO PELLEGRINO

Alias: The Old Man.

Description: Born April 13, 1889, Calabria, Italy, 5 feet 6 inches, 139 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides 20 Carrigan Avenue, White Plains, N.Y.; frequents Pellegrino Bakery, White Plains, N.Y.

Family background: Married to Elizabeth Rabasco, four sons and four daughters, Carmine, Sam, Peter, Frank, Mary (wife of Vincent Genari), Cecelia, Elizabeth, Elinore (engaged to son of Saro Magavero); father, Carmine; mother, Maria Violanti.

Criminal associates: Saro Magavero, Michael Clemente, Gaetano Maiorano, Albert Anastasia (dead), Anthony Strollo, Mickey Bowers, Al De Brizzi, John Ormento, Joe Civello.

Criminal history: New York City Police Department No. E3530, was arrested for assault in 1918 for which he received a sentence of 1½ years; arrested November 6, 1922, for violation of Volstead Act, fined $850. Deportation proceedings pending against him.

Business: Owns Pellegrino Bakery, 16 Barker Avenue, White Plains, N.Y.

Modus operandi: Head of underworld in Westchester County; involved in gambling and waterfront activities in New York City, with sons was source of supply of narcotics for Italian violators in Dallas, Tex.

JOHN MICHAEL PETRONE

Aliases: John Bennett, John Michael, John Carrila.

Description: Born February 4, 1896; 5 feet 8 inches, 175 pounds, blue eyes, gray hair, left index finger amputated.

Localities frequented: Resides 1500 Rowland Street, Bronx, N.Y. Frequents pastry shop, Elizabeth and Prince Streets, Michael Angelo Jewelry Shop, 37 West 47th Street, both in New York City, and Gondolfo Motors, Bronx, N.Y.

Family background: Married to Mary Rose Cerrita; son, John; daughter, Annette Marie Mirrando.

Criminal associates: Salvatore Shillitani, Anthony D'Agostino, Charles and Joseph DiPalermo, Carmine Galante, Mike Consolo, Albert Spitzer, Paul Gambino, Joseph Notaro, and Charles Porcelli.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1474964; New York City Police Department No. B-409659. Arrests since 1938 include concealing assets in bankruptcy and convicted for counterfeiting.

Business: Has interests in Michael Angelo Jewelry Shop, 37 West 47th Street, New York City.

Modus operandi: An international narcotic trafficker who also deals in gold smuggling and counterfeiting. A close and trusted associate or high-ranking underworld in New York City.

FRANK LOUIS PICCOLO

Aliases: Frank Lanza, Bob Brooks.

Description: Born July 2, 1921, New York City; 6 feet, 200 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, husky build.

Localities frequented: Resides 188 Peace Street, Stratford, Conn. Frequents Columbia Motors, Ocean Sea Grill, Hotel Savoy, all in Bridgeport, Conn.

Family background: Married to Virginia Paglinco and has four children; father is Francesco; mother is Fannie Lanza.

Criminal associates: Paolo Agresta, Ignazio C. Marchese, Larry Vastano, Philip Barrese, all of Bridgeport area; Michele Marchese of Los Angeles; Anthony Castaldi and Rocco Mazzie of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 428348A; Bridgeport Police Department No. 7637. Arrests since 1947 include gambling, assault, income tax evasion.

1048 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Business: Has interest in Columbia Motors (used car lot), Bridgeport, Conn.
Modus operandi: Associated with major underworld traffickers from New York's East Harlem area; believed to be engaged in interstate traffic; also engaged in all illegal gambling rackets in Bridgeport area.

SALVATORE PIERI

Aliases: Sam Pieri, Samuel Jones.

Description: Born January 29, 1911, in Buffalo, N.Y.; 5 feet 8 inches, 148 pounds; black hair, brown eyes; medium build.

Localities frequented: Residence, 63 Claremont Avenue, Buffalo, N.Y. Frequenters Cleveland, Ohio. Sentenced December 17, 1954, to 10 years for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Criminal associates: Salvatore Poliafico, Salvatore P. Rizzo, Frank Consolo, Edward Stampfel, Angelo Felicia, Alex Clarco, Carmen Lavelle, Sylvester Papalardo.

Criminal history: Dates from 1928 and includes arrests for burglary, grand larceny, carrying firearms, robbery, automobile theft, and violation of Federal narcotic laws. Sentenced December 17, 1954 to 10 years for violation of Federal narcotic laws. Begain serving sentence August 31, 1956 after appeal denied.

Modus operandi: A trusted underworld member who, with other racketeers in this organization, controls narcotic distribution in Buffalo, N.Y., and Cleveland, Ohio. Uses extreme violence and murder to maintain organization.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. Police Departments of Cleveland, Ohio; Buffalo, Rochester, and New York City, N.Y.

Identification: FBI No. 182971; Buffalo Police Department No. 20699; Rochester Police Department No. 9847; Cleveland Police Department No. 45301.

ANTHONY PISCIOTTA

Alias: Tony.

Description: Born February 16, 1923, New York City; 5 feet 11 inches, 210 pounds, heavy build; brown hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 288 Brinsmade Avenue, and 1923 Third Avenue, both New York City. Frequenters Skyway Bar, East Elmhurst, N.Y., Barge Restaurant, Ten Pin Bar and Jacks Restaurant, all Bronx, N.Y.; Copacabana Club, New York City; Roosevelt and Yonkers Raceways.

Family background: Wife, Rose DeCaro; sons, Anthony and Charles; father, Nicholas; mother, Geraldine Passanondi; brother, Rosario; sisters, Rose Luceretta, Vivian Milazzo.

Criminal associates: Thomas Garibaldi, Salvatore LoProto, Frank Borelli, Michael Altimari, Victor Tramaglino, Charles DeCaro.

Criminal history: FBI No. 592746A; no NYCPD number. Criminal record consists of two arrests by Federal Narcotic Bureau, May 25, 1951, sentenced to 9 years followed by 5 years probation. On probation until 1965. Second case now (1959) pending.

Business: Has an interest in the Skyway Bar, East Elmhurst, N.Y.

Modus operandi: Is engaged, with other important mafiosi in the wholesale narcotic traffic, supplying heroin to dealers from all sections of the United States.

SALVATORE F. POLIAFICO

Aliases: Sylvester Poliafico, Sam Polo.

Description: Born June 7, 1911, Cleveland, Ohio; 5 feet 7 inches, 150 pounds, medium build; black hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Residence, 3309 Milverton Road, Shaker Heights, Ohio. Frequented Khoury's Nightclub and various other nightclubs on Short Vincent Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

Family background: Married to Judy Lascko on September 9, 1935, at Cleveland, Ohio; has two sons, Joseph and Dominic; sister Mary is married to John DeMarco; father, Joseph, resides with John DeMarco in Cleveland.

Criminal associates: Anthony Crisci, Anthony Naselli, Michael Erra, Salvatore Lazzaro, Nunzio Romano, all of New York City; Salvatore Pieri, Salvatore Rizzo, all of Buffalo, N.Y.; John DeMarco, Sam and Sylvester Papalardo, all of Cleveland, Ohio.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLEGAL TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1049

Criminal history: FBI No. 1482222; Cleveland Police Department No. 36451; arrest record dates back to 1930, when he was acquitted of murder, incarcerated at U.S. Penitentiary, Leavenworth, Kans., on April 23, 1957, in connection with a 15-year sentence received for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Nightclub manager, operator of TV repair service shop, with partner David L. Zallan.

Modus operandi: A major interstate drug trafficker, operating from Cleveland, Ohio; brother-in-law of John DeMarco; a strongarm member of the underworld in the Cleveland area.

RALPH POLIZZANO

Aliases: None.

Description: Born May 16, 1922, New York City, 5 feet, 10 inches, 210 pounds, medium build, black hair, brown eyes, fair complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 57 East Fourth Street, New York City, frequents Squeeze Inn Bar, 57 East 4th Street, New York City, also the Club 82, East 4th Street, New York City. Currently incarcerated.

Family background: Wife: Marion Labarbera; son: Charles; father: Charles; mother: Mary Antonelli; brothers: Carmine and Charles; sisters: Frances and Rose.

Criminal associates: Carmine Polizzano, Joseph DiPalermo, Alfred Aviles, Vito Genovese, Charles DiPalermo, Jack Russo, Charles Barcellona.

Criminal history: FBI No. 736566-C, New York City Police Department No. B-397206. Record commenced 1957 with an arrest and conviction for State narcotic law violation; 1959 convicted of Federal narcotic law violation and sentenced to 7 years.

Business: Owns Squeeze Inn Bar, 57 East Fourth Street, New York City.

Modus operandi: Part of the Vito Genovese-Joseph DiPalermo mob. Distributes large quantities of illicit heroin.

ALFRED POLIZZI

Aliases: Albert Allen, Al Polizzi, Alfonzo Polizzi, Big Al.

Description: Born March 15, 1900, Siculiana, Sicily, naturalized June 8, 1928, Cleveland, 5 feet, 10 inches, 170 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair.

Localities frequently: Resides 6857 Granada Boulevard, Coral Gables, Fla. Frequents area of 23d Street and Collins Avenue, Miami Beach, Fla.

Family background: Married to Philomena Valentino; daughter: Joanne; sons: Raymond A., Nicholas G.; father: Alphonse; mother: Giovanna Indelica.

Criminal associates: Angersola brothers and Jose Massei, of Miami, Joe Doto and Lucky Luciano, of Italy, Frank Costello and Joe Profaci, of New York City, John DeMarco and John Scalish, of Cleveland, Frank Milano, of California.

Criminal history: FBI No. 118357. Cleveland Police Department No. 32332. Arrests since 1920 includes robbery, Prohibition Act, Internal Revenue Act, suspicion of murder.

Business: Has an interest in the Thompson-Polizzi Construction Co., Coral Gables, Fla.

Modus operandi: One of the most influential members of the underworld in the United States. Was leader of the underworld in Cleveland before moving to Florida. Is associated with international narcotic traffickers; and engaged in illicit gambling activities in the Miami area.

JOHN PRIZIOLA

Aliases: Papa John Priziola, John Brazziola, John Barzziola, John Prisiola, John Peraziola.

Description: Born January 12, 1893, Partinico, Sicily, Italy; 5 feet 3½ inches, 165 pounds, brown eyes, gray-brown hair, balding, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides 1349 Devonshire Street, Grosse Pointe, Mich.

Family background: First wife, Thomasina, deceased, mother of Ninette (Mrs. Peter Tocco), Frances (Mrs. Frank Matranga), Angeline (Mrs. Michael Polizzi), and Josephine (Mrs. Joseph Matranga); second wife, Francesca, mother of Thomasina (Mrs. James D. Cammarata); father: Giuseppe; mother: Antonina Sciacchitana.

1050 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal associates: All top ranking Detroit Mafiosi; Ralph Caleca and Anthony Giordano of St. Louis; John Ormento and Salvatore Santoro of New York City; Frank and Joseph Matranga of California; Salvatore Vitale, Francesco Coppola and Serafino Mancuso of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 783659-C, Detroit Police Department No. 10171. Record dating from 1917 includes arrest for grand larceny, prohibition law violations, concealed weapons, and murder.

Business: St. Clair Terrace Corp., royalties from P. & T. Oil Co., rentals from 16906 Harper, Detroit; Jon Car Homes.

Modus operandi: One of the heads of the underworld in the Detroit area. Engaged in large-scale narcotic smuggling and distribution.

GIUSEPPE PROFACI (DECEASED JUNE 7, 1962)

Aliases: Joe Proface.

Description: Born October 1, 1897, Villabate, Sicily, 5 feet 6 inches, 180 pounds, gray hair, brown eyes, glasses, naturalized Brooklyn, September 27, 1927.

Localities frequented: Resided 8863 15th Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y. Frequents his place of business.

Family background: Married Nina Magliocco (sister of Giuseppe Magliocco); daughters, Carmela (married to Anthony Tocco, son of William Tocco, Detroit), Rosalie (married to Anthony Zerilli, son of Joseph Zerilli, Detroit); sons, John, Dominick, and Joseph; brothers, Frank and Andrew; sisters, Mrs. Josephine Tipa, Mrs. Providence LoCastro, Mrs. Paolina Savone, and Sister Marie Madelena, a nun; father, Salvatore; mother, Rosaria Schillaci.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Sebastiano Nami, Nicholas Impastato (all deportees), Francisco Costigila, Joseph Stracci, John Oddo, Gaetano Lucchese, Frank Livorsi.

Criminal history: FBI No. 362142-A, NYCPD No. B-13328. Record in United States dating from 1928 includes arrests for gun, suspicion of murder, income tax evasion, and conspiracy to obstruct justice on which sentenced 1960 to 5 years and $10,000 fine. Also has criminal record in Italy.

Business: Owned Carmela Mia Packing Co., and many other firms.

Modus operandi: Attended 1928 Cleveland and 1957 Apalachin underworld meetings. One of most powerful underworld leaders in United States.

STEPHEN MARTINI PUCO

Aliases: Steve the Bug, Steve Nose, Daniel Puco.

Description: Born April 12, 1918, in New York City, 5 feet 10 inches, 160 pounds, brown hair, balding, brown eyes, medium build, medium complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 323 Paladino Avenue, New York City. Frequents DeMartino Restaurant, 320 East 117th Street; 326 East 117th Street; 325 Paladino Avenue; 2d Avenue and 109th and 110th Streets; 501 East 116th Street, all in New York City.

Criminal associates: Tony Bellito, Rocco Mазzie, Salvatore Barbato, Joe Bruno, Nicholas Tolentino, John Ormento, Andrew Puco, Joe Babs.

Criminal history: Dates from 1935 and includes arrests for possession of a gun, assault and robbery, and violation of Federal narcotic laws. Latest narcotic arrest September 13, 1957, for violation Federal narcotic laws. Disposition pending.

Modus operandi: A trusted member of the Joe Babs underworld group trafficking in narcotics in wholesale quantities. Transactions are confined to Paladino Avenue area in New York City.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics; Federal Bureau of Investigation; New York City Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 971099, NYCPD No. 137105.

RAFFAELE QUASARANO

Aliases: Ralph, Gino, and James Quasarano, James Quasamoni.

Description: Born December 20, 1910, Mauch Chunk, Pa., 5 feet 8 inches, 160 pounds, medium build, black hair, blue eyes, glasses, numerous cyst scars on back of neck.

Localities frequented: Resides at 20143 Doyle Court, Grosse Point Woods, Mich. Frequents Michigan Mutual Distributing Co., Detroit, Mich.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1051

Family background: Married Giovanna Vitale; two children; father, Vincenzo (deceased); mother, Francesca; brother, Diego (resides Italy); father-in-law, Vito Vitale.

Criminal associates: Angelo Meli, John Priziola, Angelo Polizzi, Pietro Gaudino, Michael Polizzi, and Salvatore Finazzo, of Detroit; John Ormento, Frank Livorsi, Francisco Costiglia, of New York, Lucky Luciano, Francisco P. Coppola, Giuseppe Corso, and Vito Vitale, of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 736238, Detroit PD No. 40868. Record dating from 1931 includes arrests for disorderly conduct, armed robbery, shooting, wire tapping, gambling, and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Owns Motor City Barber Supply, Greenfield Furniture, Moravian Acres, and Motor City Arena and Gym, Detroit.

Modus operandi: A top-level Detroit underworld member and international narcotic trafficker. His father-in-law, Vito Vitale, is an underworld leader in Italy.

JOSEPH RAGONE

Aliases: Joe Ragone.

Description: Born September 4, 1918, New York City, 5 feet 7½ inches, 155 pounds, medium build, brown eyes, brown hair.

Localities frequented: Resides at 1639 Colden Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Frequenters Parma Cafe, 364 West 57th Street, 2067 Second Avenue, New York City. 2d Avenue and 136th Street, all New York City. Capri Bar, Ten Pin Bar, and Fordham section of the Bronx; owns Bluebird Bar on Buhre Avenue in the Bronx.

Family background: Married Helen DeLuca; father, Emilio; mother, Mary Ippolito (both deceased); brothers, Gaspere, Albert, Michael, Anthony.

Criminal associates: Angelo DeGeorge, Paul Zerbo, Anthony Vanacore, Joe Valachi and Gaspere Ragone.

Criminal history: FBI No. 688161-B. Arrested August 2, 1954, for violation of the Federal narcotic laws; sentenced on November 27, 1954, to serve 3½ years in prison and 5 years probation. No other arrests.

Business: Works with brother Gaspere Ragone in vending machine business and has interests in Bluebird Bar on Buhre Avenue in the Bronx, N.Y.

Modus operandi: Ragone is a large-scale narcotic violator and an influential Mafia member in the New York City area.

GIACOMO REINA

Aliases: Jock Reina, Jack Ricca, Henry Reina.

Description: Born September 21, 1909, New York City, 5 feet 8½ inches, 155 pounds, brown eyes, black hair with gray streaks.

Localities frequented: Resides at 152 Kearny Avenue, Kearny, N.J., frequents bar, at 49 Market Street, and 121 Mulberry Street, both in New York City.

Family background: Wife, Phyllis; brothers, Henry, Sam, John and Bernard; Sisters, Anna, Mildred Valachi (wife of Joe Valachi), Rose Bongrieco, Lucy Sterling; father, Gaetano; mother, Angelina Olivera.

Criminal associates: Frank Caruso, Anthony Strollo, Vincent Mauro, Joe Orsini, Joe Valachi, all of New York City, Marius Ansaldi, Dominique Reissant, Francois Spirito, all of France.

Criminal history: FBI No. 193805, New York City Police Department No. B-73123, arrests from 1928 include felonious assault, robbery, conviction of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate business known.

Modus operandi: Wholesale smuggler, distributor of heroin with sources of supply in France. Has connections with most leading underworld members of New York City.

JOHN J. RICCARDULLI

Aliases: Johnny Schlitz, Slits, Freddie, Ronnie.

Description: Born January 29, 1912, New York City, 5 feet 2 inches, 144 pounds, brown eyes, brown hair, medium stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides at 974 Rhinelander Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Frequenters 3d Avenue, 102d to 105th Streets, Harlem Social Club, 222 East 104th, Jim's Bar, 309 East 104th and 336 East 119th Streets all in New York City.

Family background: Single, father, Leonard (deceased); mother, Maria Vito; sisters, Anna and Virginia Riccardulli, Frances Velliare; brothers, Paddy and Tony.

1052 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal associates: Anthony DePerna, Frank Pasqua, George Velluci, Anthony Castaldi, Stephen Puco.

Criminal history: FBI No. 2453962, New York City Police Department No. E-12678. Has only one arrest which was for violation of Federal narcotic laws. He was convicted and served 2 years in Federal prison.

Business: No known legitimate employment at this time.

Modus operandi: Has been a large-scale local and interstate narcotic trafficker for over 20 years in close association with important Mafiosi.

HARRY RICCOBENE

Aliases: Anthony DeMarco, Little Harry, Hunchback Harry.

Description: Born July 27, 1909, in Italy, 5 feet 136 pounds, dark-brown eyes, brown-gray hair, balding, slender build.

Localities frequented: Residence, 728 Carpenter Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Sentenced in 1956 to 7½ to 15 years for violation State narcotic law in Cleveland, Ohio, to be followed by 2½ years for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Criminal associates: Salvatore Poliafico, Frank Consolo, Anthony Crisci, Papalardo brothers.

Criminal history: Dates from 1930 and includes arrests for carrying a concealed weapon, auto larceny, and violation of State and Federal narcotic laws. Sentences in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1956 to 7½ to 15 years for violation of State narcotic laws, to be followed by a 2½-year sentence for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: An important Midwest narcotic wholesale trafficker operating with other racketeers in Cleveland, Ohio, with source of supply for pure heroin in New York City.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. Police Departments of Cleveland, Ohio and Philadelphia, Pa.

Identification: FBI No. 470924; Philadelphia, Pa., PD No. 89592.

JACK RIZZO

Aliases: None.

Description: Born September 18, 1923, Chicago, Ill.; 5 feet 10 inches, 175 pounds, Brown eyes, black hair, swarthy complexion and medium build.

Localities frequented: Resides at 2748 West Belmont, Chicago, Ill. Frequents Kelly's Lounge, Racine and Wilson Streets; Harry's New Yorker Bar, 900 Rush Street; The Fountainebleau Tavern, 624 West Division Street; and the Spotlight Tap Room, 3113 North Broadway Avenue, all of Chicago, Ill.

Family background: Marital status, single.

Criminal associates: Patrick Russo, Charles Bartoli, James Cordovano, Peter Guschi, and Frank Panatera, all of Chicago, Ill.; and Frank Pasqua of New York City, N.Y.

Criminal history: FBI No. 281857B. This subject has a record of one felony conviction for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Reportedly owns an interest in Kelly's Lounge, The Fountainebleau Tavern, and Harry's New Yorker Bar, all of Chicago, Ill.

Modus operandi: With Mafia associates is engaged in the wholesale distribution of heroin in Chicago, Ill.

SALVATORE PETER RIZZO

Aliases: Sam Rizzo.

Description: Born August 14, 1913, Buffalo, N.Y., 5 feet 6 inches, 156 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, medium build.

Localities frequented: Resides 12 Brayton Street, Buffalo, N.Y. Frequents Santores Restaurant, and Park Edge Restaurant, in downtown Buffalo, Crystal Beach, Ontario, Canada, Cleveland, Ohio, and Rochester, N.Y.

Family background: Marriage annulled 1947, no children. Father: Pietro; mother: Concettina Nugello (both deceased), were born in Italy; brother: Angelo; sister: Miss Mary C. Rizzo.

Criminal associates: Salvatore (Sam) Pieri, Maggadino brothers, John C. Montana, Carmen Lavalie, Papalardo brothers, Angelo Felicia.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4449035. Buffalo PD No. 46193. Record dates from 1942 and includes arrests for larceny, robbery, gambling, and violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Silent partner of the Huron Smoke Shop, 86 West Huron Street, Buffalo, N.Y.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1053.

Modus operandi: An important Mafia member and wholesaler of narcotics supplying upstate New York and Midwest cities. Operates with other Mafiosi in Cleveland, Ohio, and Buffalo, N.Y. Has sources of supply for pure heroin in New York City.

ROCCO SANCINELLA

Aliases: None.

Description: Born May 6, 1919, New York City, 5 feet 9 inches, 185 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 421 West 260 Street, Bronx, N.Y. Frequents Anchor Bar at 76th and Second Avenue, Green Open Kitchen, 77th and First Avenue, Wright's Coffee Shop, 86th and Lexington, all New York City, Hi-Way Bar, 362 Metropolitan Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Family background: Married Virginia Donofrio; father, Frank; mother: Carmela D'Orio (both born Italy).

Criminal associates: Ignazio Orlando, Angelo Loiacano, Vincent Todaro, Charles Alberio, Frank Moccardi, Salvatore Santoro, Cotroni brothers (Canada).

Criminal history: FBI No. 5132291, New York City Police Department No. B-13629. Record dates from 1943 and includes arrests for assault and robbery and violation of the narcotic laws.

Business: Operates a luncheonette at 4533 Third Avenue, Bronx, N.Y.

Modus operandi: Member of major Mafia group engaged in counterfeiting and in distributing huge quantities of heroin obtained from the Cotroni organization in Canada.

CARMELO SANSONE

Aliases: Michael Nasone, "Schnozzola."

Description: Born September 10, 1912, New York City, 5 feet 9 inches, 160 pounds, brown eyes, black hair, nose scars due to plastic surgery, tattoo of man's head on right forearm, tattoo of woman's head on left forearm.

Localities frequented: Resides 163 West 71st Street, New York City. Frequents French restaurants in vicinity 8th Avenue and West 47th Street in Manhattan.

Family background: Single; brothers: Joseph and Chalo; sister: Mrs. Angelo Ouvar; mother: Josephine Kanala (dead); father: Carmelo.

Criminal associates: Eugene Giannini (dead), Jean Laget, Lucien Ignaro, Giovanni and Carrado Maugeri, Francisco Pirico, Antoine D'Agostino, Francois Spirito.

Criminal history: FBI No. 780875A. NYCPD No. B-299646. Arrests since 1951 include convictions for Federal narcotic laws. Currently (1959) awaiting trial for violation Federal narcotic laws at New York City.

Business: No legitimate business of employment known.

Modus operandi: An important Mafia narcotic trafficker who has direct sources of supply from international Corsican Mafia traffickers.

ANIELLO SANTAGATA

Aliases: Santagato, Joseph Ottieri, O'Maddalonese, Emmet Agato, Santo Emilio, Santiago Amelia.

Description: Born January 13, 1888, Maddaloni Caserta, Italy, 5 feet 8 inches, 198 pounds, gray hair, brown eyes, dark complexion, naturalized Newark, N.J., October 3, 1928, No. C-493304.

Localities frequented: Resides 1 Kearney Avenue, Kearney, N.J. Frequents 14th Avenue section of Newark, N.J., Lower East Side of New York City, Wilson Avenue, section of Brooklyn, N.Y., New York area racetracks; Mexico.

Family background: Married Grace Carbone 1952 and she divorced him after he went to prison in 1955. He is again living with her: father: Raphael; mother: Giovanna Della Rocco; sister: Lucille Carrolo.

Criminal associates: Salvatore Amicone (Mexico), Ugo Giampaoli, Campisi brothers, Angelo Buia, Settimo Agardo.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1011607. NYCPD No. B-22389. Record dating from 1909 includes arrests for pickpocket, larceny, kidnaping, bastardy, fornication, assault and battery, disorderly conduct, gambling, bootlegging, Federal narcotics conviction.

Business: Retired barber. Collecting social security.

Modus operandi: An old time Mafioso who is highly regarded by other members. Has sources for narcotics in Italy, Mexico, and Canada and has been responsible for the smuggling and distribution of untold quantities of heroin. Recently (1960) perjured himself before a grand jury in an attempt to protect another Mafia member and narcotic trafficker.

1054 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

SALVATORE T. SANTORO

Aliases: Tom Mix, Salvatore Santora, Arthur Ricco.

Description: Born November 18, 1915, 5 feet 9 inches, 200 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, stout build.

Localities frequented: Resides 132 Longview Street, Leonia, N.J., frequents East Harlem area and midtown Manhattan.

Family background: Married to Mary Zangaglia and has one child, father: Antonio, mother: Teresa Borgio.

Criminal associates: John Ormento, Sal LoProto, Frank Livorsi, Charles Alberio, Joe Marone, Angelo C. Salerno, Joe Rao, all of New York City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 838426, New York Police Department No. B-128622. Arrests since 1933 include attempted grand larceny, 1897 Public Law of New York, and two convictions for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Associated with John Ormento in trucking concern, and a produce salesman.

Modus operandi: A notorious underworld associate of John Ormento in the smuggling and distributing of narcotics from the East Harlem area of New York City.

MICHELE GIACOMO SCARPULLA

Aliases: Giacomino, Jack Scarpulla.

Description: Born May 16, 1899, Palermo, Sicily, Italy, 5 feet 8 inches, 185 pounds, stout build, dark complexion, brown eyes, brown hair turning white.

Localities frequented: Resides 77 Winter Street, Bronx, N.Y. Frequents New Prosperity Meat Market, 284 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y., and Crescent Avenue, section of Bronx, N.Y.

Family background: Married Rosa Scalici (sister of late Francesco); son: Angelo; daughter: Maria Anna; father: Giacomo; mother: Marion Quadrini; Angelo married Rosemary Lapi, daughter of convicted counterfeiter Vincent Rocco Lapi.

Criminal associates: Frank Luciano, Carlo and Paul Gambino, Joseph Bisogno, Salvatore Caneba, Sebastiano Bellanca.

Criminal history: FBI No. 983998. New York City Police Department No. B-113221. Record dates from 1933 and includes arrests for grand larceny and bootlegging.

Business: He and son Angelo own and operate New Prosperity Meat Market, 284 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Modus operandi: High echelon Mafioso. Key member of the large scale narcotic smuggling ring formerly headed by his brother-in-law the late Francesco Scalici.

CHARLES SCHIFFMAN

Aliases: Charles Shipman, Schippman, Morris Feldman, Charles Harris.

Description: Born September 14, 1903, Wallington, N.J., Jewish, 5 feet 6 inches, 156 pounds, brown-gray hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 79 Van Buren Street, Passaic, N.J., frequents midtown New York City and northern New Jersey.

Family background: Single: father: Samuel; mother: Sarah Feldman; (both deceased); sisters, Eva Sternberg, Esther Schiffman and Ann Floff; brothers: Barney and Arthur.

Criminal associates: John Ormento, Salvatore Santoro, Moische Taubman, Marco Orlandino, Abraham Chalupowitz, Joseph Littman.

Criminal history: FBI No. 313781. New York City Police Department No. B-123114. Newark, N.J. Police Department No. 6034. Record dating from 1921 includes arrests for burglary, breaking and entering, drunkenness, robbery, concealed weapon, highway robbery and three Federal narcotic convictions.

Business: No legitimate occupation.

Modus operandi: A confirmed and vicious criminal who for many years headed a gang of racketeers who engaged in every type of illicit enterprise in the northern New Jersey area. Is known to and allied with top underworld criminals from all parts of the United States. Large scale narcotic trafficker.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1055

JOHN SCHILLACI

Aliases: Frank Coniglio; John Tanza; John Longo; Frank Lonza; Thomas Coniglio; Frank Alberto; Al Brown; Frank Long.

Description: Born in Cirleone, Italy 48 years old (1950); height 5 feet 5 inches; weight 175 pounds; build stocky; hair, brown-gray; partially bald; eyes, brown; complexion, dark.

Localities frequented: Deported to Italy in 1947; resided at 15 Bajart Place, Yonkers; frequented Greenwich Village; 116th Street and First Avenue, New York City; Graden Pharmacy, 50th Street and Broadway, New York City.

Criminal associates: Charles Alberio; Dominick Petrelli; Frank Livorsi; Salvatore Santore; Philip Lombard; Charles Luciano.

Criminal history: Criminal history includes 11 arrests since May 4, 1921 for assault and robbery, burglary, robbery, and narcotics. He has served two terms of imprisonment, nine of the charges having been dismissed. Deported to Italy on April 2, 1947, however, there are reports that he has illegally re-entered the United States.

Modus operandi: Before his deportation he was one of the leaders of the upper East Side group in New York City which finances the wholesale distribution and smuggling of opium and heroin from Mexico.

Agencies familiar with individual: Bureaus of Narcotics and Customs, U.S. Treasury Department. New York City Police Department.

MICHAEL SEDOTTO

Aliases: LaRocco, Sedetto, Mike the Geep.

Description: Born February 22, 1920, New York City, 5 feet 8 inches, 185 pounds, medium build, gray hair (bald), blue eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 2715 DeWitt Place, Bronx, N.Y., frequents 187th and Crescent, 187th and Cambreling, Bronx, N.Y.

Family background: Married Dorothy Lauer; sons: Michael and Salvatore; father: Joseph; mother: Anna LaRocco, (both deceased); brothers: Joseph, Patrick and Anthony; sister: Mary Acvino.

Criminal associates: Alfred Mauriello, Jerry Santaniello, Joseph Barra, Rocco Mazzie, Vincent Panebianco, Anthony Allocco.

Criminal history: FBI No. 3242790, New York City Police Department No. B-246243, record dates from 1937 and includes arrests for possession of burglary tools, felonious assault, perjury and violation of probation, Federal narcotic case pending.

Business: Self-employed dress contractor.

Modus operandi: A powerful Mafioso who controls policy and Italian lottery rackets in the East Bronx area of New York City. Also controls a wholesale narcotic trafficking combine.

DAVID SMITH

Aliases: John Payne, Pop Smith.

Description: Born May 28, 1908, New York City; 5 feet 8 inches, 200 pounds, stout build, black hair, brown eyes, ruddy complexion, tip index finger missing.

Localities frequented: Resides 92-40 Queens Boulevard, Rego Park, N.Y. Frequents 100th Street and First Avenue, 1885 Third Avenue, 1618 Westchester Avenue, Bronx, all in New York City. Visits Phoenix, Ariz.

Family background: Married Wanda Klein; has one child; father, Joseph, born in England; mother, deceased.

Criminal associates: Rosario Rinaldi, Anthony Corallo, Joseph Stallone, Hyman Habler, Solly Kaplan.

Criminal history: FBI No. 747793, New York City Police Department No. B-121211. Record dating from 1934 includes arrests for felonious assault and violation of State and Federal narcotic laws. Federal narcotic conviction.

Business: Coowner with Joseph Costa of the New Third Avenue Bakery Shop 1909 Third Avenue, New York City.

Modus operandi: Wholesaler of narcotics to interstate violators. Engages in the conversion of opium and morphine base. Though non-Italian he is accepted and trusted by top New York City underworld violators.

1056 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

VINCENT JAMES SQUILLANTE

Aliases: Jimmy Jerome.

Description: Born June 17, 1917, New York City; 5 feet 2 inches, 130 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, slight build, large horn rimmed glasses, natty dresser.

Localities frequented: (Missing). Resided at 1962 Narragansett Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Frequents 106th Street and First Avenue, Jennie's Restaurant, at 2036 Second Avenue, and midtown night clubs, all in Manhattan, 187th and Cambrelling Avenue, and Bluebird Restaurant, at 2890 Burke Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. 1961 missing and underworld reports him dead.

Family background: Married Theresa Scialabba, 1949, and had one child, Bedilia; divorced, 1951, and married Olivia Hughes, by whom two daughters, Donna and Olivia; father, Louis; mother, Euthalia Alberti; brother, Nunzio; nephew, Jerry Mancuso; has seven sisters.

Criminal associates: Rocco Mазzie, Frank Borelli, Charles Curcio, Nunzio Squillante, Benjamin DiMartino, Anthony Sedotto.

Criminal history: FBI No. 700100C. Nassau County (New York) Police Department No. 25155. Record dating from 1953 includes arrests for income tax violation, violation of prohibition, and extortion.

Business: Holds positions in numerous unions and has interests in several garment and surplus companies.

Modus operandi: Has risen from smalltime narcotics peddler to top racketeer and labor extortionist; is feared by lesser racketeers because of his powerful position in the underworld. Finances narcotic smuggling ventures and controls garbage collection business in Greater New York, through underworld tactics. Claims to be godchild of the late underworld leader Albert Anastasia.

INNOCENZIO STOPPELLI

Aliases: John Stoppelli, Johnny the Bug

Description: Born April 10, 1907, New York City, N.Y.; 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, medium build, black graying hair, brown eyes, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides, 153 Madison Street, New York City, frequents 191 Prince Street, Prince and Sullivan Streets, Bleecker and Sullivan Streets, Milady's Bar, 167 Bleecker Street, Tony Pastor's Club, 130 West Third Street, Tommy's Bar, 171 Bleecker Street, all New York City.

Family background: Wife, Marion Groger; father, Rocco; mother, Carmela Miraglio; brother, Caesar; sister, Margaret.

Criminal associates: Anthony Strollo, Joseph Morone, Vincent Mauro, Frank Caruso, Charles Albero, Joseph Valachi, Harry Tantillo.

Criminal history: FBI No. 67649, New York City Police Department No. B-67307. Record dates from 1924 to 1948, and includes arrest for possession of a gun, robbery, bribing a Government officer, and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Alleged to be in partnership with Tommy Annichiario, owner of Tommy's Bar, 171 Bleecker Street, New York City, N.Y.

Modus operandi: Trusted inner circle underworld leader in the Anthony Strollo organization. One of the most active large scale wholesale narcotic traffickers in the United States.

ANTHONY C. STROLLO

Aliases: Tony Banda, Tony Bender.

Description: Born June 18, 1899, New York City; 5 feet 7½ inches, 156 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resided, 1015 Palisades Avenue, Fort Lee, N.J. Frequents Greenwich Village section of Manhattan and dock area in Newark and Hoboken, N.J. (Missing.)

Family background: Married to Edna Goldenberg and has three children; father, Leone; mother, Giovannina Nigro; brothers, Emilio and Dominick (both dead).

Criminal associates: Frank Costello, Joe Adonis, Vito Genovese, Vincent Mauro, Pat Pagano, Joe Valachi, Anastasia brothers, and most top racketeers in New York City and United States.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4282858, New York City Police Department No. B-64086, arrests from 1926 include possession of a gun, conspiracy to contrive a lottery.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1057

Business: Claims to be a real estate broker.

Modus operandi: One of most powerful racketeers in United States, having control of northern New Jersey dock area. A recognized underworld leader and head of a narcotic smuggling-distributing organization with several of his criminal associates who handle the distribution of narcotics.

HARRY STROMBERG

Aliases: Nig Rosen, Harry Rosen, Hymian Stromberg, Chaim Stromberg, The Mahoff, Joseph Bloom, Hyman Chaim.

Description: Born July 15, 1903, Sorokov, Russia; Jewish, 5 feet 8 inches, 190 pounds, gray hair, balding, brown eyes, dark complexion, neat, conservative dresser. Naturalized New York City, August 6, 1945.

Localities frequented: Resided 420 East 55th Street, New York City, and 5196 Pine Tree Drive, Miami Beach. Frequented New York City garment district and better night clubs, Miami Beach and Philadelphia. Currently (1960) incarcerated.

Family background: Divorced Silvia Cohen; adopted son: Joseph; remarried Gretchen Gershon; father, Harry; mother, Netti Cohen.

Criminal associates: Lucky Luciano, Francesco Costiglia, Giuseppe Dotto, Gaetano Lucchese, Meyer Lansky, Mickey Cohen.

Criminal history: FBI No. 786309. New York City Police Department No. 57333. Arrests include robbery, illegal lottery, burglary, possession of a gun, violation of Federal liquor and narcotic laws; 1958, sentenced to 5 years on Federal narcotic conspiracy.

Business: Has been connected with the following garment houses: Studio Frocks, Dearest Miss, Jay & Lou Manufacturing Co., Lou-Jay Dress Co., Judy Lee Fashions.

Modus operandi: Though non-Italian he is allied with top underworld criminals in all types of illicit activity, including labor racketeering, gambling and narcotic trafficking.

ENRICO NICOLÒ TANTILLO

Aliases: Harry Tantillo, Blackie, Coco, Harry Cantillo.

Description: Born January 28, 1916, New York City, N.Y., 5 feet 6 inches, 160 pounds, medium build, black hair, brown eyes, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 4303 Furman Avenue, Bronx, N.Y., frequents Florence Lingerie Shoppe, 4148 White Plains Road, Bronx and vicinity, 105th and 2d Avenue, New York City.

Family background: Wife: Matilda Manfredonia; father: Giuseppe; mother: Genoveffa Salerno (both born Italy); brother: Alfred Tantillo; half brother: Frank Tantillo; sister: Mary Lucchese; brothers-in-law: Richard, John and Anthony Manfredonia.

Criminal associates: Joseph Marino, John Steppelli, Vincent Mauro, Nicholas Tolentino, Fred Salerno, John Ormento.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1024285, NYCPD No. 137405, record dates from 1935 and includes arrests for possession of revolver, obstructing justice, influencing witness, and conviction for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Owns Dominick's Pastry Shop, 2058 Second Avenue, New York City.

Modus operandi: A trusted member of the Mafia inner circle. Supplies wholesale quantities of heroin to local and out-of-town customers.

ANTHONY TERAMINE

Aliases: Tony Termain, Tony Termine, Black Tony, Tony Tuttsen.

Description: Born February 16, 1906, Detroit, Mich., 5 feet 8½ inches, 160 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, heavy build, ruddy complexion.

Localities frequented: Resided 3948 Harvard, Detroit, Mich. Frequents Gratiot Central Market, Tuller Hotel, 5847 Mitchell, all in Detroit and also visits Chicago, Ill., and California.

Family background: Divorced from Mrs. Lillian Einkorn and has son, Irvin; father: Savillio; mother: Mary; brother: Joseph; sister: Mrs. Mamie Puglia; girl friend: Grace Slater, 5847 Mitchell; all of Detroit; and common law wife: Joyce Tollis, of Chicago, Ill.

Criminal associates: Frank LeMedico, Raffaele Quasariano, Toto DiGiovanni, Joe Russell, all of Detroit; Frank and Joseph Matranga of California; and Joe Catalanotte.

1058 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal history: FBI No. 649176. Detroit Police Department No. 24030. Arrests since 1922 include armed robbery, gambling, defrauding hotel, State liquor laws, and two convictions for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate employment or business known. On occasion works with brother Joseph with fruit business at Gratiot Central Market in Detroit.

Modus operandi: A major violator of the narcotic laws and is closely associated with Mafia leaders in Detroit.

VINCENT JAMES TODARO

Aliases: Charles Todaro, Frank Todaro.

Description: Born January 8, 1914, Palermo, Sicily, naturalized New York City, 6 feet 10 inches, 195 pounds, black hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides Herndon, Va. (Post Office Box 23, Merrifield), currently (1959) incarcerated.

Family background: Wife is Helen Fay, has two children, father is Andrea and mother is Filippina Ruoppolo (both in Italy).

Criminal associates: George Nobile, James Massi, Ignazio and Lorenzo Orlando, Joe LoPiccolo and Frank Moccardi of New York City, also Frank Coppola, Peter Licata, Antoine Cordoliani, and Charles Leca of Europe.

Criminal history: FBI No. 534748, extensive criminal record since 1932, including robbery, concealed weapon, receiving stolen goods, counterfeiting OPA stamps, sentenced June 20, 1958, to 10 years in Fairfax County, Va., violation Virginia State narcotic laws.

Business: Landscaping and real estate dealer.

Modus operandi: An international narcotic trafficker with Mafia associates in Italy.

NICHOLAS TOLLENTINO

Alias: Nick Tollentino.

Description: Born February 10, 1909, New York City, 5 feet 8 inches, 165 pounds, brown eyes, medium build, black-gray balding hair, wears glasses.

Localities frequented: Resides 350 Pleasant Avenue, Apartment 9, New York City. Frequents Parnell Social Club, 224 East 112th Street; Square Deal Pet Shop, 2133 First Avenue; Mollie's Restaurant, 2126 First Avenue; all in New York City.

Family background: Married to Mary Avalino; brothers: Anthony, James, Martin, and Thomas; sister: Lucy; father: Anthony; mother: Rose Canzoni.

Criminal associates: Joseph Foti, Arnold Barbato, Theodore Orzo, John Ormento, Frank Borelli, Charles Curcio, and Harry Tantillo.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1352699. New York City Police Department No. B-68336. Arrests since 1920 include robbery, assault and robbery, and convictions for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: No legitimate business or employment known.

Modus operandi: Wholesale dealer in interstate narcotic traffic and is closely associated with underworld traffickers in East Harlem section of Manhattan.

EUGENE TRAMAGLINO

Aliases: Genoa, Joseph Mariono, Eugene Romano, Eugene Traumaglino, Gino.

Description: Born November 5, 1915, New York City; 5 feet 5½ inches, 150 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, sallow complexion, scar over left eye, plastic surgery, straightened nose (1950).

Localities frequented: Resides 1621 Saint Marks Place, Brooklyn, frequents 13th Street and 2d Avenue, New York City.

Family background: Parents Lorenzo and Amalia, deceased; brothers: Victor, Alemondo, John, and George; sister: Margaret; wife: Madeline Wojtowicz; daughters: Barbara and Delores.

Criminal associates: Stephen Arnone, Eugene Monaco, Arnold Romano, Cosmo Franco, Joseph Valachi, and his brothers.

Criminal history: FBI No. 588015. New York City Police Department No. B-147997. Criminal record dates back to 1932 and includes numerous arrests for grand larceny, counterfeiting, intimidation of witnesses, Federal liquor laws, and conviction for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Operates Margene's Lunch Room, 193 Second Avenue, New York City, owned by his wife, Madeline.

Modus operandi: A key member of the Arnold Romano underworld gang which distributes wholesale quantities of heroin in New York and interstate.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1059

ANGELO TUMINARO

Aliases: "Little Angie," Angelo Tumensio.

Description: Born February 22, 1910, New York City, 5 feet 2 inches, 135 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, cut scar near left eye.

Localities frequented: Resides 24 Rutgers Street, New York City, frequents area of Madison and Pike Streets, in lower Manhattan.

Family background: Married to Bella Stein; father, Pasquale; mother, Mary Presenzano; has seven brothers and five sisters.

Criminal associates: Anthony DiPasqua, Saro Mogavero, Al Embarrato, Frank Mari, Carli DiPietro, Nathan Behrman, all of New York City; Joe Cotroni of Montreal.

Criminal history: FBI No. 270010, New York City Police Department No. B-80192; several arrests since 1929 including grand larceny, assault, and robbery, New York State narcotic laws.

Business: Has interest in Apollo Barber Shop, 144 Clinton Street, New York City.

Modus operandi: Together with Anthony DiPasqua, is one of the largest wholesale narcotic traffickers in New York City, dealing with known Jewish traffickers, and having underworld traffickers as a source of supply. Is suspected in some unsolved homicides in Manhattan.

JOSEPH VALACHI

Aliases: Joe Cago, Joe Cargo, Joe Kato, Joseph Siano.

Description: Born September 22, 1903, New York City, 5 feet 5 inches, 195 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 45 Shawnee Avenue, Yonkers, N.Y., frequents the Belmont Avenue section of Bronx, N.Y., and Yonkers (N.Y.) Racetrack.

Family background: Wife, Mildred; son, Donald; father, Dominick; mother, Mary Casale (both deceased); girlfriend, Carol Jacobs Cuccuru.

Criminal associates: Anthony Strollo, John Stoppelli, Vincent Mauro, Arnold Romano, Salvatore Santoro, John Batista Salvo, John Ormento, Giuseppe Doto, Fiore Siano, and Giacomo Reina.

Criminal history: FBI No. 544, New York City Police Department No. B-58458. Record dating from 1921 includes arrests for concealed weapon, burglary, robbery, Pleaded guilty to Federal narcotic law violation (1960).

Business: Formerly owned Lido Bar, 1362 Castle Hill Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Has part interest in jukebox firm and in several racehorses.

Modus operandi: A trusted Mafia member and part of the Anthony Strollo narcotic smuggling and distributing organization. Wholesales heroin to major Mafia narcotic traffickers on the Upper East Side of New York City.

ANTHONY J. VELLUCCI

Aliases: Tony Vellusi, Anthony Velluccia, Tony Miserable.

Description: Born December 18, 1924, New York City, 5 feet 9 inches, 185 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, two small scars on forehead, stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides 310 E. 112th Street, New York City, frequents East Harlem area of New York City, currently incarcerated.

Family background: Wife, Jennie Spada; daughters, Valerie and Janet; father, Vincent; mother, Clementine Ogero (now remarried to Angelo Corona); uncle, George Vellucci and Jumbo.

Criminal associates: Nathan Behrman, Dominick Tedesco, Anthony Mirra, Anthony Ciccona and Tony Moom, George Vellucci (uncle).

Criminal history: FBI No. 2858768, New York City Police Department B-208187. Arrests since 1939 include juvenile delinquency, unlawful entry, attempted grand larceny, violation and conviction of State and Federal narcotic laws, 1955 sentenced to 14 to 15 years for State narcotic violation.

Business: No legitimate employment known.

Modus operandi: An important member of the underworld in the East Harlem section of New York City. Was the key figure in a multimillion-dollar ring that smuggled narcotics into the United States and Canada from Europe and Cuba from 1950 to 1955.

1060 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

JOSEPH A. VENTO

Aliases: Babo, Sebastiano Vento.

Description: Born February 18, 1913 New York City, 5 feet 6½ inches, 165 pounds, medium build, brown hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides at 168-01, 12th Avenue, Queens, N.Y., frequents East Harlem area and vicinity of 60th Street and Broadway, both in New York City. Helen Mar Hotel, Golden Nugget Motel, Eden Roc Hotel, all in Miami, Fla.

Family background: Married to Mary Messina; has one daughter; brothers, Benjamin, Frank, and Jack; sisters, Nancy and Elizabeth; father, Louis; mother, Edmonda Schiletti.

Criminal associates: Salvatore Santoro, John Ormento, Salvatore LoPrato, Alfred Felice, Pasquale Cenese, John Schillaci, Harold Meltzer.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1432959, New York City Police Department No. B-103810, national list No. 408. Arrest record dates from 1932, and includes arrests for burglary, robbery, violation of liquor laws, and conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Salesman for Irving Lazarus Jewelers, 32 West 42d Street, New York City.

Modus operandi: A trusted member of the underworld organization which controls the distribution of heroin in large quantities on the Upper East Side of New York City. As a smuggler-distributor has been interested in clandestine laboratories.

VITO VITALE

Aliases: Don Vito.

Description: Born August 24, 1885, at Castellamare, Trapani, Sicily, 5 feet 2 inches, 135 pounds, brown-gray hair, brown eyes, dark complexion, medium build (photo over 30 years old).

Localities frequented: Resides Corso Regina Maria Pia No. 21C, Astia, Italy. Frequents Rome and suburbs, Ostia and Ardea. Also Palermo Castellamare, Partinico, and Alcamo in Sicily, all Italy.

Family background: Father, Antonino; mother, Giovanna Giaravino; son, Michelangelo; daughter, Giovanna (married to Raffaele Quasarno of Detroit).

Criminal associates: Francesco Coppola, Giuseppe Mangiapana, Giuseppe Maninni, Vincenzo Rimi, Giuseppe Corso, Serafino and Giuseppe Mancuso.

Criminal history: Has never been in America. Criminal records in Italy dates back to 1918 and includes arrests for alien smuggling, bootlegging, and murder.

Business: Owns property in Rome and Palermo areas.

Modus operandi: Regarded as a top leader and arbitrator of Mafia in Italy and arranges money transfers from America to Italy regarding narcotic and other illicit transactions. Introduces American gangsters to Sicilian and Corsican narcotic suppliers.

JOSEPH ZINGALE

Aliases: None.

Description: Born April 7, 1922, Cleveland, Ohio, 5 feet 8½ inches, 225 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, dark complexion, stocky build.

Localities frequented: Resides at 4429 Warner Road, Cleveland, Ohio.

Family background: Married to Lucille C. D'Alessio; daughter, Mary Ann; sisters, Angela and Lucille; brothers, Thomas and Frank; father, Salvatore William; mother, Marianne Srzozurello.

Criminal associates: Alex Calarco, Angelo Pillicia, Joseph Fredericks, Sam Paliatico, all of Cleveland, Ohio.

Criminal history: FBI No. 352422-D, Cleveland PD No. 66551. Record dates from 1948 and includes arrest for homicide. Federal narcotic conviction.

Business: Truckdriver for the Hunkin-Conkey Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

Modus operandi: Lower echelon Mafioso. Considered a prime suspect for burglaries, strong-arm robberies, and gambling in the Cleveland area.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1061

FAMILIES

The five principal underworld organizations currently controlling the major portion of the illicit narcotic traffic in and from New York City are the following:

1. Joseph Bonanno family.
2. Carlo Gambino family.
3. Vito Genovese family.
4. Thomas Lucchese family.
5. Profaci-Magliocco family.

NOTE.—Giuseppe Magliocco, who succeeded his brother-in-law, the late Giuseppe Profaci, as head of the Profaci family, died on December 28, 1963, of a heart attack at Good Samaritan Hospital, West Islip, Long Island, N.Y.

Magliocco's successor, if indeed one has emerged, is not known to law enforcement agencies as of this writing.

NEW YORK CITY

JOSEPH BONANNO FAMILY

Chief Lt.: Galante, Carmine

MEN

Consolo, Michael	Mancino, Frank
DiPietro, Carl	Mari, Frank
Giglio, Salvatore (missing, fugitive)	Petrone, John
Lisi, Anthony	Presinzano, Angelo

CARLO GAMBINO FAMILY

(Formerly headed by the late Albert Anastasia (murdered))

Chief Lt.: Biondo, Joseph; Lt. Mazzie, Rocco; Lt. Robilotto (murdered)

MEN

Alberti, Andrew	Leo, Arthur
Armone, Joseph	Nani, Sebastiano (deported)
Armone, Steve (deceased)	Pasqua, Frank
Bisogno, Joseph	Porgelli, Anthony
Carminati, Anthony	Ragone, Joseph
Crisci, Anthony	Robino, Cristoforo (murdered)
DiSimone, Anthony (murdered)	Romano, Arnold
Erra, Michael	Scarpulla, Giacomo
Guipponi, Ralph	Squillante, Vincent (missing)
Indiviglia, Benjamin (fugitive)	Tranaglino, Eugene

VITO GENOVESE FAMILY

Chief Lt.: Catena, Gerardo

Lieutenants: Boiardi, Richard; Miranda, Michael; Strollo, Anthony

MEN

Accardo, Settimo	Maneri, Salvatore
Albanese, Philip	Mauro, Vincent
Altamari, Mike	Nobile, George
Bellaanca, Sebastiano (missing)	Pagano, Joseph
Bonino, Nick	Pagano, Pasquale
Buia, Matilde	Panica, Victor
Campisi, Charles	Pisciotta, Anthony
Campisi, Thomas	Sone-so, Angel (missing)
Caruso, Frank	Varghi, Joseph
Celi, Arthur	Vecchio, Joseph (killed)
Curcio, Charles	Zaccaro, Patsy
Guido, Alfred	Zicarelli, Joseph

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

1062 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

THOMAS LUCCHESE FAMILY

Lieutenants: Corallo, Anthony; Ormento, John; Scalice, Frank (murdered)

MEN

Barbato, Arnold	Luciano, Frank
Bendenelli, Joseph	Martello, Nicholas (missing)
Callace, Frank (murdered)	Monastersky, Samuel
Corrao, Vincent	Pacelli, Vincent
DeMarco, Joseph (murdered)	Petrelli, Dominic (murdered)
D'Ergole, Joseph	Reina, Giacomo
DiPalermo, Joseph	Salerno, Angelo
Giannini, Eugene (murdered)	Santoro, Salvatore
Guarino, Joseph	Scalice, Joseph
Isabella, Florio	Tolentino, Nicholas
LoProto, Salvatore	Zerbo, Paul

PROFACI-MAGLIOCCO FAMILY

The Profaci-Magliocco family was represented in the narcotic traffic by the late Christopher Robino who was slain in gangland fashion in New York City on July 18, 1958.

Robino was a close associate of the late Salvatore Lucania alias "Lucky" Luciano from whom Robino allegedly obtained narcotics for the Profacio-Magliocco family.

Robino reputedly acted as liaison between Salvatore Luciana and top echelon criminals in the United States, particularly the metropolitan area of New York City.

ATLANTA, GA.

Fouts, J. D.	Landers, Clifford A.
Fouts, Robert	Fatty, Chester

BALTIMORE, MD.

Greenberg, Thomas	Rollins, Charles J.
Parker, Raymond A.

BOSTON, MASS.

Buccelli, John	Frierson, Brother
Buccola, Philip	Marinello, Peter
David, Wady	Paige, Webster
Delia, Anthony	Russo, Frank Placido

BUFFALO, N.Y.

Agro, Ignatius	Pieri, Sam
Carlisi, Roy	Randaccio, Frederico
Cassaro, Charles	Rizzo, Sam
Magaddino, Stefano	Salsanese, Daniel, Sr.

CONNECTICUT

Agresta, Ippolito	Diccolo, Frank
Barese, Ernesto	Marchese, Ben
Conforte, William	Maresca, Raymond

MIAMI, FLA.

Diognardi, Frank	Ritchie, Robbie S.
DiPalermo, Joseph	Seto, Leo
Felice, Alfred	Shields, Claude
Fowler, Robert	Todaro, Vincent
Jackson, James	Trafficante, Santo, Jr.
LoPiccolo, Joseph	Wyld, Willie May

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1063

PHILADELPHIA-CAMDEN

Casella, Peter
Potnick, Morris

Riccobene, Henry
Santoro, James

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Brown, Lamar
Morrison, Michael Parker, Nell
Randolph, Clinton

Roberts, James Milton
Toland, James
Williams, Robert
Wong Sing, Lee

FAIRFAX COUNTY, VA.

Todaro, Vincent.

EXHIBIT No. 4

CHICAGO

JESSE ALEXANDER, FBI No. 1655045

Jesse Alexander, alias Big Jess: FBI No. 1655045; Chicago Police Identification number C-90877; Federal Bureau of Narcotics National List No. 4 is a Negro male, 6 feet 3 inches tall, weighing 260 pounds, born at Webb, Miss., on May 18, 1911. He has black hair, brown eyes, stout build, and has a dark brown complexion. His last address in Chicago, Ill., was 4323 South Forrestville Street. He is presently incarcerated in a Federal penitentiary, believed to be at Sandstone, Minn.

Federal Bureau of Narcotics files indicate the first mention of Alexander in Chicago, Ill., was when he and Larry Cunningham were listed as the source of supply of narcotics for William McCoy, case Ill-5517. Alexander, Cunningham, and Leroy Martin were then listed as "runners" for Amos Jones, NL No. 197, now deceased. All of the latter four were charged and convicted in Federal court at Chicago, Ill., for sale of narcotics, and Alexander was sentenced to 2 years in prison.

In 1947 Alexander was listed as the source of supply of narcotics for Oscar Pierce, NL No. 16; and in that same year it was reported that Alexander was obtaining his narcotics from John Rogers, NL No. 331, now deceased. Oscar Pierce is presently incarcerated for a narcotic violation. In 1949 Alexander was reported to be the source of supply for Morris Taylor, case Ill-6201. In case Ill-6599, reported in 1951, Jesse Alexander, Burnett Carter, Paul Joseph, Jr., Fannie Alexander, and Lela Willis were charged for violation of the narcotic laws. All except Fannie Alexander, Jesse's wife, and Lela Willis, Fannie's mother, were convicted. Jesse Alexander was sentenced in Federal court to 3 years in prison for this conviction.

In 1955 Jesse Alexander was listed as the source of supply for Irene and James Hairston of St. Louis, Mo., the latter two were defendants in case Mo-8427. Also, in 1955 Alexander was reportedly obtaining his supply of cocaine from Ahmad Khatab Salim, of New York City. On November 22, 1955, Alexander appeared before the Price Daniels hearings of the Subcommittee on Improvements in the Federal Criminal Code of the Committee on the Judiciary of the U.S. Senate, 84th Congress, 1st session. Alexander refused to answer the majority of the questions put forth to him. He was subsequently charged for contempt of the Senate, and was later acquitted on February 3, 1959, by Federal Judge Michael Igoe at Chicago, Ill.

During the latter part of 1955 Alexander was reported as the source of supply of narcotics for defendants: Louis Davis, case Ill-7327; Waddell Scales; Mabel Peterson; and a special employee reported that he had purchased heroin from Alexander, which he resold in Cleveland, Ohio. Information in the files indicates that Sam Serritella, NL No. 356, supplied narcotics to Alexander at one time.

In 1956 a narcotic agent made a purchase of heroin from Ella Baugh, case Mo-8471, which Baugh was delivering to St. Louis, Mo., for Jesse Alexander. Subsequent development of this case resulted in the indictment of Alexander, and on July 2, 1956, he entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to 12 years in prison, and was fined $2,000. He is presently incarcerated on this case.

1064 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

After the conviction of Jesse Alexander, it appears that his narcotic business was continued by his wife, Fannie Alexander, and her sister, Marie Walker. The files indicate that the latter two supplied heroin to the following: Farris Walker, exhusband of Marie Walker, case Ill-7391; Henry Williams, case Ill-7674, alleged that he could obtain cocaine from Fannie; Edgar Powell, case Ill-7726; James Gibson, case Ill-7752; and Marion Hortense Bryant, arrested at Detroit, Mich., with 5 ounces of heroin in case Mich-4226, which she was delivering for Fannie Alexander.

In case Ill-7849, Fannie Alexander and Marie Walker were charged and convicted for sale and conspiracy in Illinois State court. Both were sentenced as second offenders to 10 years on May 4, 1960. They appealed, the conviction was affirmed, and they began serving their sentences on October 25, 1961.

In 1961, December, Defendant Samuel Parker was arrested with narcotics at Minneapolis, Minn., in case Minn-1142, and his source of supply for heroin was identified as Willie Willis, brother of Fannie Alexander, and released from prison on a prior narcotic conviction on August 17, 1961. On December 30, 1961, a case, Ill-8090, was initiated against Willis at Chicago, Ill., through the purchase of a quantity of heroin. This case is presently pending in Federal Court at Chicago, Ill.

It would appear from the above background information that Jesse Alexander, his family, Fannie Alexander, and his in-laws Marie Walker and Willie Willis will devote all their efforts, while not incarcerated, toward the sale and distribution of narcotics; and will never be satisfied to earn their living in a legitimate manner.

JOSEPH BRUNO, ALIAS GARDINI, ALIAS GIARDINI—FBI No. 1828913

Joseph Bruno, alias Joseph Gardini, alias Joseph Giardini; FBI No. 1828913; Federal Bureau of Narcotics national list No. 43, is a white male of Italian descent born November 22, 1912, at Boston, Mass. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighs about 180 pounds, has black hair, brown eyes, swarthy complexion. His last known address at Chicago, Ill., was 3540 North Newcastle Street. He is presently incarcerated at Leavenworth Penitentiary. Bruno has the following prior record for Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Division violations: case Ill-N-2637, August 7, 1940, sentenced to 6 months in jail; case Ill-N-3128 and Ill-N-3016, sentenced June 14, 1942, to serve 1 year and a day concurrent on the above two cases; case Ill-N-5135, sentenced June 13, 1949, to 2 years in prison.

The files at Chicago, Ill., list Joseph Bruno as the source of supply for heroin in the early 1950's for the following known narcotic traffickers: Rupert Kelly, NL No. 208; Archie Robinson (presently a defendant in case Ill-7994; Charles Venton; Marvin Moses (presently a defendant in case Ill-7994); Auckland Holmes; Dorothy Johnson; Moses Hightower; Harry Schennault, NL No. 355 (presently incarcerated); Delphine McGee (paramour of Harry Schennault, now deceased); during the early half of 1950's Bruno, Charles Lapaglia, and Mike Condic were alleged to have an interest in two drugstores at 4300 South Drexel and at 239 East 51st Street. These stores were allegedly used by Bruno to obtain quantities of quinine and milk sugar for mixing with heroin.

Bruno and Frank Panatera, NL No. 307, were alleged to be the source of supply for heroin for Joseph Doyle. In April 1953 John Tanno was in New York attempting to purchase Amidone, a synthetic drug. Tanno was then reported as an associate of Bruno, Carlo Urbinati, NL No. 406; Joe Bartuchi. Tanno and Bruno were reported to be major suppliers of cocaine in the Chicago, Ill., area. The source of supply of heroin for Bruno was alleged to be Eddie Coco, alias Killer, fight manager of New York.

About 1955 Bruno was indicated as the source of supply for Ernest Brackens; Edgar Powell and Lucille Riles; Joseph Scudero (not positively identified nor apprehended); Joseph C. Saddler (presently incarcerated); and in this same period of time Bruno allegedly accompanied Anthony Dichiarinte (presently a defendant); Anthony Marcella, NL No. 278; and Carl Campise to Indianapolis, Ind., where they met with Orville Drake (a known trafficker now deceased). Bruno's source of supply during this time, 1955, was allegedly Frank Carbo and the D'Angelot brothers of New York. On November 22, 1955, Joseph Bruno appeared before the Price Daniels Senate subcommittee investigating narcotic trafficking. He was subsequently cited for contempt of the Senate for failure to answer questions, and on July 8, 1957, Federal Judge Julius Hoffman dismissed the contempt charges at Chicago, Ill.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1065

In April 1957 an agent in New York purchased a quantity of heroin from Joseph Altimari, during which transaction, Altimari asked the agent if he knew Bruno from Chicago, stating that Bruno was buying kilo amounts of heroin in New York and owed "the boys" $18,000.

In June 1957 Bruno was named as Melvin Harris' source of supply, after Harris had been arrested, and a seizure of 110 ounces had been made. In April, May, and June 1957 case Ill-7495 was developed and Joseph Bruno, Thomas Matas, and Carlo Urbinati. All above three were found guilty and Bruno was sentenced to 8 years in prison in June 1958. He began serving the sentence on October 10, 1958. Bruno was also indicted in case Ill-7510, in which case a special employee ordered 12 ounces of heroin from Bruno and it was later delivered by two unidentified males. Bruno entered a plea of guilty to this indictment and was sentenced to serve another 8 years concurrent with Ill-7495. Bruno's source of supply in 1957 was listed in the files as: the Altimari brothers; John Ormento, NL No. 295; Arnold Romano, NL No. 333; and later a French-Canadian smuggling group, possibly the Cotronis.

Bruno was allegedly close to Fred Coduto, and Armondo Piemonte, all of whom are now incarcerated. It was alleged after Piemonte went to prison that one of his brothers would continue in the narcotic traffic. It was reported in 1958 that Grace Pine, operating the drugstore located at 4300 South Drexel (purportedly owned by Bruno), had taken over Bruno's heroin business. The information alleged that Pine had made several trips to Canada to pick up heroin in kilo lots for Bruno. Pine was purportedly once the wife of Bruno's associate Mike Condie. Pine was arrested once in 1958 after arriving from Canada to Chicago, Ill. She had $4,500 on her person, but no narcotics. She admitted not having paid income tax for a number of prior years; and the money was turned over to the Internal Revenue Service. Information was later received that Pine wound up paying an additional $18,000 for back taxes.

In the development of case Ill-7863, defendant Anthony Dichiarante was seen on August 27, 1959, with Arthur Gasparro (purportedly Dichiarante's associate in the narcotic traffic). Gasparro was driving a 1959 Ford registered to V. Lucania, 6901 West Belmont. Vincent Lucania was a member of the Illinois State Legislature and was the alleged owner of the Montclare Funeral Home, 6900 West Belmont. Surveillance during May 1957 had disclosed Joseph Bruno to frequent the Montclare Funeral Home, 6900 West Belmont. It was never ascertained what association Lucania had with the above narcotic traffickers, if any. An attempt was made in May 1961 to interview Joseph Bruno at the Leavenworth Penitentiary regarding his cooperation and testimony in the anti-racketeering campaign initiated by the Attorney General's Office. Bruno refused to be interviewed.

Joseph Bruno, at the time of his conviction in 1958, was considered to be the major distributor of narcotics in the Midwest, and the principal source of supply of heroin for the Chicago area. Information has been received to the effect that Grace Pine has been entrusted to look after his financial interests while he is in prison, and that he expects to have accumulated $1 million by the time he is released from the penitentiary. There is no doubt that Bruno could furnish a considerable amount of information concerning the narcotic traffic in the United States, and he should be considered as a witness to be called, however, he undoubtedly would be uncooperative.

LEONARD CALAMIA, FBI No. 366116

Leonard Calamia, alias Calamis, alias Calam, alias Culanis, FBI No. 366116; Chicago Police identification No. C-35054; Federal Bureau of Narcotics national list No. 54, is a white male of Italian descent. He is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs about 145 pounds, brown hair, blue eyes, medium dark complexion. Calamia was born January 2, 1911, at Kansas City, Mo.

Calamia was arrested and charged in 1932 for the murder of Ralph Fanara, and he was subsequently acquitted of this charge. He was charged for violation of the Federal narcotic laws in case Ill-4072 and was sentenced on September 6, 1935, to 3 months in jail. In 1936 he was again charged for violation of the narcotic laws in case Ill-4377 with a codefendant Mike Bucaro. Bucaro was discharged by the U.S. commissioner; however, on May 29, 1936, Calamia was sentenced to 1 year and 1 day in prison.

Calamia was questioned in 1945 regarding the murder of Carl Carranusa. He was added to the list of 15 most important narcotic violators in 1946.

1066 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

In 1947 he was living in San Francisco, Calif. Calamia was arrested December 23, 1948, at Albuquerque, N. Mex.; charged with the murder of Mike De John. The codefendants were named as Sabastiano Nani; Michael Abata, and Frank Scappatura, and Tona Lima. All of the above defendants were subsequently dismissed of the murder charge.

Investigation at Chicago, Ill., in 1959 disclosed that Catherine F. Tañone was living at 1119 West Drummond, Chicago, Ill. Calamia's whereabouts are not presently known; and there appears to have been no recent mention of him in the files at Chicago, Ill., as being involved in the narcotic traffic.

JACK CLAYTON, FBI No. 2909025

Jack Roy Clayton, alias Jack R. Rogers; FBI No. 2909025; Kansas City, Mo., Police identification No. 81637, is a white male, 6 feet tall, 190 pounds, brown eyes, brown hair (balding in front) muscular build, born January 2, 1918, at Wichita, Kans. Subject's address before incarceration was Route No. 2, Box 279, Blue Springs, Mo.

The files at Chicago, Ill., contains a report dated November 10, 1953, from Kansas City, Mo., identifying Clayton as a subject living outside Kansas City on a farm with an airplane and landing strip. Clayton was reported as an associate of a Leo Hallak. Hallak's ex-wife, Evelyn, was interviewed, and stated that in February of 1952 she began to realize that Hallak and Clayton were transporting stolen goods from Chicago, Ill., to Kansas City, Mo.; including such items as jewelry, household appliances, clothes, and even automobiles. Clayton had purchased a motorcycle agency from Hallak, and alleged to other people that the trips were for auto parts.

Evelyn also related that in April 1952 she accompanied Hallak, Clayton, and Clayton's wife Betty to Chicago when they met with a subject named "Little Joe" (Joseph Iacullo), whom they identified as their "connection." Evelyn stated that she knew Clayton and Samuel Carrola were associated, and were making trips together to Chicago by airplane.

In case Ark-1868, reported September 8, 1958, Jack R. Clayton was charged with the sale of heroin to a special employee at Curdon, Ark., on May 27, 1958, for $2,000. On October 24, 1958, Clayton entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to serve a total of 20 years by Federal Judge Albert Ridge at Kansas City, Mo. On March 22, 1961 Clayton's attorney made a motion to have the plea of guilty set aside on the grounds that Clayton was mentally incompetent at the time. On May 18, 1961 Judge Ridge denied the above motion. Clayton is presently incarcerated at the U.S. Medical Center, Springfield, Mo.

In June 1959, subsequent to Clayton's being sentenced, he was interviewed by a Federal narcotic agent, and related the following information, which is here-with summarized for brevity: Clayton stated he began associating with Samuel Carrola, of Kansas City, Mo., around the fall, of 1952. Clayton first considered Carrola dealt primarily in stolen cars, but later learned he "fenced" all types of stolen merchandise. About a year later he learned Carrola was also in the narcotic traffic.

Carrola subsequently induced Clayton to fly him to Chicago, Ill., where they met with Joseph Iacullo, obtained a quantity of narcotics, and returned to Kansas City, Mo. (Information reported in 1953 by Leo Hallak's wife, preceding page, indicated Clayton knew Iacullo in April 1952.) Clayton stated that after the first trip, he started making the flights himself, monthly, picking up a kilo of heroin each time from Iacullo, and returning it to Carrola at Kansas City, Mo. Iacullo later told Clayton he was going to have to go away on a "rap" (records indicate Iacullo went to prison June 21, 1955) and introduced Clayton to his "partner" Tony D. (Anthony Dichiarante) (presently a defendant in pending case Ill.-7863). Clayton continued picking up heroin at Chicago for Carrola, from Dichiarante, and after a few months, Dichiarante introduced Clayton to his "partner" Arthur Gasparro. About this time Clayton stated Dichiarante purchased the Meadowbrook Lounge, just outside Chicago.

Subsequently, Dichiarante induced Clayton to fly him to New York to obtain narcotics. After that, Clayton began buying heroin for his own customers in 5- and 10-ounce lots, in addition to the heroin he was transporting to Sam Carrola. Clayton stated that he was making six or seven trips a year to New York, sometimes with Dichiarante and sometimes with Gasparro. He believed that they usually picked up about 5 kilos of heroin per trip.

Clayton also stated that shortly after first entering this venture with Carrola, he was introduced to Anthony Biase at Council Bluffs, Iowa, and that he subsequently delivered 25 to 30 ounces of heroin every 6 weeks to 2 months, on orders from Carrola. Clayton knew Biase was selling heroin to Walter Wilmering, of Amarillo, Tex. (prior to the time Clayton began supplying heroin to Wilmering); Biase was also supplying a banker and his wife at Omaha, Nebr.; and an unidentified gambler at Council Bluffs, Iowa.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1067

Carrola had also furnished heroin to Ralph Goldstein, Dominick DiMaggio (Carrola's nephew); Patsy Ventola; Anthony Marcella; and Robert Cox, all of whom were then from Kansas City, Mo. Carrola later took Marcella to Chicago and introduced him to Dichiarante, so he could buy heroin direct; and had also taken DiMaggio to Chicago to meet Iacullo, for the purpose of his buying counterfeit money. Clayton stated that Cox had been making the trips to Chicago for Carrola by auto, before he met Carrola. Clayton also mentioned out-of-town customers of Carrola as: Harold "Fats" Wright, of Tulsa, Okla.; and Hank J. Ellsworth, of Omaha, Nebr.

Clayton recalled attending a prize fight at Chicago with Iacullo and Carrola, after which they went to a funeral home to meet a good friend of Iacullo, reportedly an Italian, and a State of Illinois representative or senator. The Italian was not there, however a heavy set Greek, reportedly the Italian's partner was there. (Iacullo, subsequently identified Kringas and Marzullo, 5400 West Harrison in his later application for parole from prison.)

Clayton's information was considered the basis for an excellent conspiracy case against the persons named above in this report, however, much of the information extended beyond the statute of limitations, and the majority of the persons had subsequently been charged or convicted on substantive narcotic violations. In addition to this, Clayton was not deemed an acceptable witness, after making his allegations of mental incompetency.

ROCCO DE GRAZIA, FBI No. 389499

Rocco De Grazia is identified by FBI No. 389499, and Chicago police identification No. D-26847. The last address mentioned in the files for De Grazia is dated 1946, and was then reported at 1040 North Elmwood, Oak Park, Ill.

Rocco De Grazia was the brother of Andrew De Grazia, National List No. 96, now deceased. In case Ill-5909 a pharmacist named James Dwyer was found to have diverted a large quantity of legitimate narcotics over a period of time to Rocco and Andrew De Grazia, Mike Stacey, alias Sam Moreno. The pharmacist alleged that the narcotics were diverted to the above for gambling debts that Dwyer had incurred with the De Grazia's.

An indictment was obtained against the above defendants, and Andrew De Grazia was arrested in possession of a quantity of opium. He allegedly admitted to being an opium smoker. Trial of the conspiracy case involving all of the defendants took place in 1947, and the defendants were acquitted by a directed verdict of Federal Judge Elwyn R. Shaw, at Chicago, Ill. Andrew De Grazia, however, was found guilty on the substantive count involving the narcotics found in his possession. The conviction was appealed and affirmed on May 28, 1948. Andrew De Grazia was sentenced to 1 year and 1 day in prison.

Rocco De Grazia and his brother Andrew, while living, owned and operated the Lumber Garden Tavern, later called the Casa Madrid Night Club, by which it is now known, at 25th and Lake Streets, Melrose Park, Ill. This location is alleged to be one of the principal locations for syndicate gambling in Cook County; and is frequently raided by the local authorities.

THEODORE DE ROSE, FBI No. 1009801

Theodore De Rose, alias Ted De Rose, FBI No. 1009801; Chicago police identification No. E-49038 is a white male of Jewish descent. He is about 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs about 140 pounds; has gray hair, brown eyes, slender build, walks with a limp, and has allegedly been operated on for knee trouble. De Rose was born October 22, 1906, at New York, N.Y. He alleges that his occupation is that of a salesman.

De Rose is alleged to know Jake Klein; and was a former associate and "runner" for Patrick Russo, both of whom are well known in the narcotic traffic at Chicago, Ill. De Rose has a reputation for being a "confidence man."

In 1959 a Federal narcotic agent obtained an introduction to De Rose, through a special employee, and subsequently effected the purchase of one-half kilo of heroin from De Rose and Carl Fiorito, reported in case Ill-7873, on August 15, 1959. De Rose and Fiorito were convicted on February 16, 1961, and De Rose was sentenced to 10 years by Federal Judge Julius Miner at Chicago. The case was appealed, and on March 19, 1962, the Seventh Circuit Appellate Court reversed the above conviction and remanded the case back to the district court for retrial. The case involving De Rose and Fiorito is presently pending and is scheduled for trial in January or February 1963 at Chicago, Ill.

1068 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The special employee, William Skaley, utilized for the initiation of this case was murdered on January 5, 1960. Fiorito is suspected of having committed the murder, though it could not be proven.

The source of supply for the heroin sold by De Rose and Fiorito was believed to have been Frank Borelli, of New York; however, this was not positively ascertained.

ANTHONY JOSEPH DICHIARENTE, FBI No. 1797682

Anthony Dichiarante; alias Tony D; alias Tony Dicci; alias Tony Decca; alias Anthony Costello; alias Dechiarinte; FBI No. 1797682; Chicago Police Identification No. E-53845. is a white male of Italian descent, 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighs 215 pounds, brown hair, blue eyes, medium complexion, heavy build. Born May 5, 1918, at St. Paul, Minn. Presently a defendant in case Ill-7863.

Dichiarante's record indicates that in August 1939 he was sentenced to a term of 1 to 5 years for armed robbery. He was discharged April 30, 1943, at Chicago, Ill. He was again sentenced on January 17, 1952, to a Federal prison for 3 years on a charge of possession of goods stolen from interstate shipment.

It is suggested that you refer to the reports on Arthur Gasparro, Joseph Iacullo, and Jack R. Clayton, to better understand the part played by Anthony Dichiarante. Clayton provided information that upon Iacullo's incarceration in 1955, Clayton was introduced by Iacullo to Dichiarante, who then became the source of heroin at Chicago, Ill., for Clayton, et al. Dichiarante later introduced Gasparro as his partner, and Clayton was subsequently induced to even fly Dichiarante and Gasparro to New York where they picked up their supply of heroin. The trips to New York number six and seven a year; and allegedly involved 5 kilos of heroin at a time. Clayton's association with this group would have ended in the latter part of 1958 when he was arrested.

In April 1958 during the development of case Cal-5507, at Los Angeles, Calif.; involving defendants Jesse del Bono and a codefendant named Marchese, del Bono was found to have been mailing packages to "Tony Dicci" 6224 West Fletcher, at Chicago, Ill. A toll call check on the telephone of "Dicci" indicated a long-distance call to Del Bono's residence dated March 26, 1958, at California. Del Bono refused to make any statement after his arrest and no further information was developed to indicate or clarify the above association. "Dicci" was identified as Anthony Dichiarante.

In March 1959 during the development of case Cal-5681, involving Anthony Marcella, National List No. 278, and previously from Kansas City, Mo.; toll calls on Marcella's phone indicated a call November 20, 1958, to ME 7-4607 to "Tony." This phone is listed at Chicago, Ill., to the Eat a Bit Restaurant, 6001 West Grand, allegedly managed then by Dichiarante and known as a hangout for him and his associates. Another number called by Marcella at Chicago was TU 9-8265, which was listed to Josephine Cullotta, 1833 North McVicker Street. Telephone records at Chicago indicated in April 1959 that this subscriber had moved to 8221 Forest Preserve Drive. This latter address was reported in 1957, with telephone number TU 9-8023, as a number and address left by Joseph Bruno, National List No. 43; as a forwarding address when he left Chicago, Ill., in 1957. This information had also been found on the person of Bruno at the time of his arrest. In 1957 TU 9-8023 was listed to Sarah Rinanardi. In April 1959 the TU 9-8023 number had been changed to NA 5-5018 and was listed then to Sarah Rinardo at 8221 Forest Preserve Drive. Autos in front of that address were listed to Sarah Bacino, 8221 Forest Preserve Drive and Frank Cullotta, 1833 North McVickers. Marcella was convicted and sentenced August 14, 1959, to 40 years, and afterward admitted knowing Bruno, but denied trafficking in narcotics.

In August 1959 a report was made of information from a special employee at Los Angeles, Calif., resulting in the following: The special employee and Marcella flew to Chicago on October 21, 1958, and stayed at the Caffarello Motel. On October 23, 1958, they met with a man identified as Charles LaPaglia and went to dinner at the home of a woman identified as alias Josie (believed to be Josephine Cullotta), LaPaglia's girl friend. That evening, LaPaglia, Josie, and

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1069

Marcella left the house and returned with 27 ounces of heroin and 6 ounces of cocaine, which the special employee and Marcella transported back to California.

A second trip was described by the special employee around November 27, 1958, to Chicago with Marcella for heroin. Because Charles LaPaglia allegedly did not receive his supply of heroin from New York, a Jane Doe, alias Mary assisted in obtaining an amount believed to be a kilo of heroin, and they took this back to California. Mary spoke of LaPaglia as her uncle, however, subsequent efforts to identify her proved futile. It should be noted that the telephone calls listed to Marcella's residence at California to "Tony" at the Eat A Bit Restaurant and to the suspected residence of Josephine Cullotta, were dated November 20, 1958, just 1 week before the above trip.

A report dated September 18, 1962, lists information from a special employee at Chicago, Ill., that he knew a person named Orville Drake (now deceased) a narcotic trafficker who lived at Indianapolis, Ind. That Drake was an associate of Anthony Marcella, and in the mid-1950's Marcella, Joseph Bruno, Anthony Dichiarante, and Carl Campise (purported former business partner of Dichiarante, and allegedly the person who started Dichiarante in the narcotic traffic) all went to Indianapolis, Ind., and had a meeting with Drake.

In case Ill-7863, reported at Chicago, Ill., March 21, 1960, Anthony Dichiarante is a defendant with Spartico Mastro, and Salvatore Pisano (now deceased). They are charged with selling heroin, approximately 9 ounces, to an agent and special employee on August 8, 1959, at Chicago. This case is presently pending in Federal court. The source of supply for Dichiarante is only known as "Joe" in New York, according to information from Clayton.

In 1962 Dichiarante was named at New York as a coconspirator (not a defendant) in a basketball game "fixing" conspiracy. Dichiarante was reportedly the "field man" for the Chicago mob, it being his job to gather money from the Chicago "mobsters": Fiore Buccieri, Sam "Mooney" Giancana, Sam Battaglia, Marshall Caifano, Albert Frabbotta, and Phil Alderisio. He reportedly worked closely with Norman (Lefty) Rosenthal, whose assignment was to line up basketball players willing to cooperate by shaving points. Rosenthal was a known associate of Dichiarante, and was with him at the time of his arrest.

Since the arrest of Dichiarante in March 1960, certain papers denoting financial assets of Dichiarante were made available to the Internal Revenue Service at Chicago, Ill. An investigation was initiated by their office, which is believed to possibly result in a charge against Dichiarante in the near future for income tax evasion. One of the Internal Revenue agents working on this investigation once reported that he had located a joint checking account in the name of Dichiarante and Joseph Bruno, which had once showed a balance of $100,000, but had since been abandoned.

It should be reiterated that Dichiarante is presently a pending defendant in narcotic case Ill-7863 at Chicago, Ill., and is awaiting trial.

CARLO FIORITO, FBI No. 3110979

Carlo Fiorito, FBI No. 3110979, Chicago Police Identification No. 52183 is a white male of Italian descent. He is 5 feet, 6 inches tall, weighs about 155 pounds, is of medium build, has black hair, brown eyes, and a sallow complexion. He has a tattoo on his right forearm. Fiorito was born at Chicago, Ill., on November 15, 1923. He is presently incarcerated in the Illinois State Penitentiary at Joliet, Ill.

Fiorito has long been known in the Chicago area as a burglar and robber. He is allegedly associated with members of the Chicago crime syndicate hierarchy, including some of the most well known in the Chicago, Ill., area. He is alleged to have committed burglaries and robberies throughout the United States. On April 22, 1959, Fiorito was found guilty in Illinois State court of receiving stolen property, in that he had been arrested with part of the proceeds from a $400,000 robbery of the Harry Winston Jewelry Store at Chicago, Ill. None of the other loot from this robbery was recovered, nor was Fiorito identified as one of the robbers. Fiorito was sentenced to serve 4 to 6 years in the Illinois State Prison.

Fiorito appealed the above conviction, and remained out on bond. Through negotiations with Theodore De Rose, a Federal narcotic agent, on August 15, 1959, made a purchase of one-half kilo of heroin from Fiorito and De Rose for $6,000. It is believed that Fiorito discovered that the special employee in this case had "set him up" and on January 5, 1962, the special employee, William Skally was found in his car fatally shot in the head. Meanwhile, Fiorito's appeal on the receiving stolen property charge had been affirmed, and on January 6, 1960 Fiorito turned himself in to the State authorities and began serving his 4- to 6-year sentence.

1070 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

On February 16, 1961, Fiorito and De Rose were found guilty for the sale of the half kilo of heroin, case Ill-7873, by Federal Judge Julius Miner at Chicago, Ill., and Fiorito was sentenced to 20 years in prison. This conviction was appealed and was reversed and remanded for a new trial. The case is now pending at Chicago, Ill., and should be retried in January or February of 1963. It was always assumed that Fiorito murdered Skally, though it could not be proven. Fiorito is alleged to have angered Sam Giancana and Sam Battaglia for the above murder, because, Skally purportedly was in debt to the above two, and with the murder, they stood no chance of collecting their money.

ARTHUR GASPARRO, FBI No. 1117545

Arthur Gasparro, alias Arthur Gastarro, alias Arthur Gasperro, FBI No. 1117545; Chicago Police Identification No. D-54455; is a white male of Italian descent. He was born July 8, 1910. There is no physical description presently available of this subject. He was last reported living at 6735 West Wellington, Chicago, Ill.

Gasparro's criminal record indicates that he was convicted and sentenced at Chicago, Ill., to 1 year to life for armed robbery. He was paroled May 10, 1943.

To understand Gasparro's part in the narcotic traffic, it is suggested that you refer to the reports on Joseph Iacullo and Jack Roy Clayton. After Iacullo went to prison in 1955, and introduced Clayton to his "partner" Anthony Dichiarante, subsequently, Clayton stated that Dichiarante introduced him to his "partner" Gasparro. Arthur Gasparro was Dichiarante's brother-in-law. After meeting Gasparro, Clayton related that he sometimes received heroin from him, and sometime from Dichiarante, for transportation back to Kansas City, Mo. Also, after Clayton began flying Dichiarante to New York for his supply of heroin; on occasions Gasparro went instead of Dichiarante.

In 1958, during the development of cases Ark-1868 and Tex-12106, in which a special employee and narcotic agent were negotiating with Clayton for the purchase of heroin, the following events took place: On July 9, 1958, Clayton left his residence at Blue Springs, Mo., and went to a nearby public telephone where he telephoned TU 9-5369 at Chicago, Ill. (listed to the name of Arthur Gasparro, 6735 West Wellington). Clayton returned to his farm after making this call at 6:18 a.m., in which he had called Gasparro and ordered a quantity of narcotics. He then left the farm, via his airplane, and flew to Joliet, Ill.; where he met Gasparro, and obtained from him 6 ounces of heroin.

On the morning of July 10, 1958, the narcotics agents working on this case received $2,500 in advance funds from the Texas office of the Bureau of Narcotics. They placed this in an envelope, had it properly postmarked as being from Texas, and turned it over to the postal inspector for delivery that morning to Clayton. Clayton was observed removing this envelope from his mailbox that morning; and later he left his house and drove to Independence, Mo., where he mailed a package to the undercover agent at Mount Pleasant, Tex. The package contained approximately 5 ounces of heroin, as was previously ordered by the agent.

In 1959, during the development of case Ill.-7863, presently pending against Dichiarante at Chicago, Ill., surveillance in the vicinity of the Eat A Bit Restaurant, 6001 West Grand, reportedly managed by Dichiarante, disclosed Gasparro to be a frequent associate of Dichiarante and others who were observed "hanging" around this location, including Salvatore Pisano, and Spartico Mastro; codefendants with Dichiarante in the above case.

On one such occasion, Gasparro was observed driving an automobile registered to V. Lucania, 6901 West Belmont; Vincent Lucania is allegedly the owner of the Montclair Funeral Home, 6901 West Belmont, and was once an Illinois State representative or senator. Surveillance in 1957 disclosed Joseph Bruno, national list No. 43, to frequent this same funeral home on numerous occasions. The associations of Lucania with these narcotic traffickers was never investigated. Gasparro was also observed on numerous occasions driving an automobile with dealer plates, listed to A. & S. Auto Sales, 601 Madison, Oak Park, Ill. This firm was found to have gone out of business August 18, 1959, which was just prior to Gasparro having been seen in this auto.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLEGAL TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1071

When interviewed in 1958, after his arrest, Clayton mentioned the fact that Gasparro always used cars with dealer's plates whenever he met with him to deliver narcotics. This was also mentioned by Clayton in regard to the delivery of 6 ounces by Gasparro at the airport in Joliet, Ill., on July 9, 1958. This practice of using autos with dealer's plates was also a method of operation utilized by Iacullo, during the development of case Ill.-7117. In this manner they had available to them a variety of cars, which was the case in regard to Gasparro, according to Clayton.

Gasparro has never been approached regarding his participation in the narcotic traffic with the above individuals. There is no investigation presently pending against him in the office of the Bureau of Narcotics at Chicago, Ill. If it were possible to have him called as a witness before the committee, his answers might be very interesting, though it is assumed he would be hostile. It would also be necessary to question him without divulging information regarding the pending case against Dichiarante.

GEORGE GINNONE, FBI No. 1359607

George Ginnone, alias Gannone, alias Giannone, alias Gennone, Romano, alias Georgiano Iannini, alias Gregorio Iannone; FBI No. 1359607; Federal Bureau of Narcotics Mafia book No. 145; is a white male, of Italian descent, 5 feet, 5 inches tall, weighing 182 pounds, stocky build, dark complexion, black hair, brown eyes. Ginnone was born July 17, 1907, at Staletti, Catamaro, Italy. Subject entered the United States in 1923, and was naturalized a U.S. citizen in the year 1931 at Chicago, Ill.

In case Ill-6254 at Chicago, Ill., George Ginnone was listed as a defendant with Salvatore Pisano, national list No. 316a (now deceased); James Bowman, and William McNairy; charged with conspiracy to sell and possess narcotics. Ginnone and Pisano were tried, found guilty in Federal court, Chicago, Ill., and on March 27, 1951, Ginnone was sentenced to serve two 5-year sentences, consecutively. He was released from the penitentiary on parole January 18, 1958.

In case Ill-6348 at Chicago, Ill., Ginnone, Pisano, and Bowman were listed in 1950 as the source of supply for narcotics for defendant Maurice and Alpha Koen.

There appears to be no mention of Ginnone in the files of district No. 9 regarding his activity in the narcotics traffic, since his conviction in the above case in 1951.

DENNIS GREEN, JR., FBI No. 920117-A

Dennis Green, Jr., FBI No. 920117-A; Chicago police identification No. D-88824; Federal Bureau of Narcotics national list No. 169; is a Negro male, 5 feet, 6 inches tall, weighing about 145 pounds. Green has black hair, brown eyes, born June 30, 1929, at Chicago, Ill. Green's most recent address is listed as 4526 Mount Vernon Drive, Los Angeles, Calif.

Green's activities in the narcotics traffic date back to the 1950's in the files of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics at Chicago, Ill. He later became a partner and associate of Nathaniel Spurlark, national list No. 377, and under Spurlark, Green supplied virtually all the Negroes on the West Side of Chicago, Ill., with heroin. Green's principal "runners" were Arthur Faulkner, Willard Evans, alias "Dub," and James White.

In 1952 Green was charged with sale of narcotics in Illinois State court in case Ill-6745. He was acquitted June 5, 1952.

On September 2, 1959, Green was indicted at Chicago, Ill., and charged in Federal Court with conspiracy to violate the narcotic laws. The codefendants in this case were Nathaniel Spurlark, Edward R. Gayles (former narcotic agent), Willard Jones, Cornelius Mack, Percy Johnson, Floyd Williams, and Gladys Davis. On March 8, 1962, at the conclusion of the above trial, the defendants Green, Gayles, Davis, Jones, and Spurlark were found guilty by a jury. Green was subsequently sentenced to 5 years in prison and is presently free on appeal bond. Green's source of heroin was Spurlark. Nathaniel Spurlark obtained his narcotics from a person or persons unknown in New York.

ISAAC HILL, FBI No. 213772

Isaac Hill, alias Golly Drop, FBI No. 213772; Chicago police identification No. E-55597; Federal Bureau of Narcotics national list No. 182a, is a Negro male, 5 feet 10 inches tall; weighing about 200 pounds, with brown eyes, black hair, medium brown complexion, and heavy build. Hill was born March 24, 1907, at Memphis, Tenn. His most recent address was 5034 South Woodlawn, Chicago, Ill., where he was living with Helen Dixon.

1072 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Hill was first reported in the files of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics at Chicago, Ill., under case Ill-575, dated May 10, 1928. He was found guilty of violating the narcotic laws and sentenced to 1 year and 1 day on June 26, 1928, in Federal court. His second conviction came in case Ill-3404, when he entered a plea of guilty on April 6, 1934, and was sentenced in Federal court to 90 days in the Lake County jail. In this case he was a codefendant with Mack Thomas, national list No. 393d. In case Ill-4077 Hill was charged with Dave Chapman, Mack Thomas, and Anthony Chambers. Thomas and Chambers were dismissed by the U.S. Commissioner on August 27, 1935. Hill was found guilty on October 2, 1935, and was sentenced to 6 months in Milan by Federal Judge John P. Barnes at Chicago, Ill. Motion for a new trial was made and granted, and on March 31, 1936, Hill was found not guilty by Federal Judge William Holly.

In 1936 Hill was reported as the source of supply of heroin for cases Ill-4474 and Ill-4771. In cases Ill-4888 Hill was again a defendant with George Booker and Robert Stevenson. Hill was found guilty on March 2, 1939, his third narcotic conviction, and was sentenced that date to 16 years in prison by Federal Judge John Barnes at Chicago, Ill. Hill was conditionally released from the above sentence on January 6, 1949. Hill was also listed as a defendant in case Ill-4919 in 1939 with 21 other defendants; however, the U.S. attorney dismissed the charges against Hill before he went to trial.

Isaac Hill was reported as the source of supply for heroin in the following cases: Ill-7506, for defendant Amos Jones, national list No. 197, now deceased, case dated August 1957; Ill-7650, for defendant Thomas Flynt, reported October 1, 1958; Ill-7698, for defendants John E. Jackson and Amos Jones reported September 1958; Ill-7903, for defendant Albert Williams, reported October 1959. Hill has been named as source of supply and associate of Harry Schennault, national list No. 355, now incarcerated, in 1957 and 1958. He was also referred to as the source of supply for William Frierson, national list No. 150 in 1959. Perrin Stewart of St. Louis, Mo., reported that he had made purchases of heroin from Hill occasionally. Hill was also reported as source of supply in case Ill-18078.

In 1957 Hill was reportedly receiving his narcotics from Patrick Russo, national list No. 338. Information in 1960 indicated his source of supply was Rocco Infelice, manager of the Lido Motel on Mannheim Road. In case Ill-7994 Hill has been charged with codefendants Marvin Moses, Archie Robertson, Michael Battiese. This case is presently pending at Chicago, Ill. Source of supply in this case is allegedly Morris Taubman and Charles Schiffman of New York.

JOSEPH IACULLO, FBI No. 1868453

Joseph Iacullo, alias Joseph Petrino, FBI No. 1868453; Chicago police identification No. E-4857; is a white male of Italian descent, 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighing 130 pounds; medium build, brown hair, and brown eyes. He was born May 3, 1919, at Chicago, Ill.

A report from Kansas City, Mo., listed telephone toll calls for the phones Linwood 9448 and Benton 5909; the business and unlisted residence telephone respectively of Samuel Carrola, known underworld character. The toll calls listed for July and December 1953 indicated telephone contact with Joseph Iacullo at Chicago, Ill.

In case Ill-7117, reported at Chicago, Ill., April 5, 1954, Joseph Iacullo was charged with seven codefendants for violation of the Federal narcotics laws. Iacullo was convicted and sentenced to 5 years on June 21, 1955. This sentence was reduced to 4 years on April 30, 1956. Codefendants Anthony Pape and Frank Coduto were murdered prior to the final disposition of this case. Iacullo, Pape, and Anthony Sperna were allegedly partners, obtaining their heroin from Anthony Tacoma, international list No. 337, now deceased; and Anthony Castaldi, national list No. 62. Iacullo was released on April 26, 1958. He reportedly now lives at 3428 West 59th Place, Los Angeles, Calif.

Iacullo was reputedly associated with members of the criminal element all over the United States: Samuel Carrola, of Kansas City, Mo.; Anthony Castaldi and Anthony Tacoma, both of New York; Daniel De Nunzio, reported to be Iacullo's uncle, Los Angeles, Calif.; and Anthony Accardo, Chicago, Ill. Iacullo and Anthony Sperna were alleged to have participated in the murder of Anthony Ragucci, a Chicago hoodlum.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1073

In case Ill-7150, reported August 23, 1954, Iacullo was again listed as a defendant with four codefendants. Prosecution in this case was declined, due to the fact that Iacullo was prosecuted in case Ill-7117. In case Ill-7238, naming Robert Wells, James A. and Irene White; Joseph Iacullo and Anthony Schullo were reported to be the source of supply of heroin for the above three. Wells and the Whites were not prosecuted in this case due to the fact that they were charged and convicted in other cases.

A report of July 17, 1954, alleges that Anthony Accardo asked Joseph Iacullo to move out of the immediate vicinity of his, Accardo's, neighborhood.

As early as 1953 Iacullo was reported as the source of supply for heroin, and stolen merchandise, for Jack R. Clayton and Samuel Carrola of Kansas City, Mo. In 1958 Jack Clayton was charged with sale of heroin in case Ark-1868. He entered a plea of guilty on October 24, 1958, and was sentenced to 20 years. Clayton became cooperative in furnishing information, and the following was related by him to a narcotic agent in a series of interviews, while he was incarcerated.

Clayton related that in 1952 he began associating with Samuel Carrola, believed by him to be dealing primarily in stolen cars and other merchandise. Around the fall of 1952 Clayton flew Carrola to Chicago, Ill. where they met with Joseph Iacullo, and obtained a quantity of heroin, which they transported back to Kansas City, Mo. Clayton continued making these trips, averaging one a month, obtaining a kilo of heroin each time for Carrola. Subsequently, Clayton stated that Iacullo expected to go to prison and introduced him to his partner, Tony D. (Anthony Dichiarante, presently a defendant in pending case Ill-7863 at Chicago, Ill.).

Clayton continued the monthly trips, and after a few months, Dichiarante introduced him to his partner, Arthur Gasparro. After this, Clayton obtained heroin on his trips from either of the above two persons. Clayton subsequently began flying Dichiarante and Gasparro to New York where they picked up their supply of heroin, believed to be in 5-kilo amounts. Clayton did not know the name of their source of heroin in New York, except by the nickname, "Joe."

Clayton also related that soon after his first trip to Chicago, Ill., for Carrola, he began delivering 25- to 30-ounce quantities of heroin every 6 weeks to 2 months to Tony Biase at Omaha, Nebr. He knew Biase was supplying Walter Wilmering of Amarillo, Tex.; a banker and wife in Omaha; and an unidentified gambler in Council Bluffs, Iowa. He also knew that Carrola had supplied heroin to Ralph Goldstein; Carrola's nephew Dominick Dimaggio; Patsy Ventola; Anthony Marcella; and Robert Cox, all of Kansas City, Mo. Cox had previously been making the trips to Chicago for Carrola by automobile.

Clayton knew also that Carrola had introduced Marcella to the "people" in Chicago, so he could deal "direct." Carrola had introduced Dimaggio to Iacullo so Dimaggio could buy counterfeit money from Iacullo. It was Clayton's understanding that Iacullo's principal business was counterfeit money and State cigarette stamps; and that narcotics were a sideline with him.

Clayton recalled attending the Wilcox-Marciano title fight at Chicago, Ill. (May 15, 1953), with Carrola and Iacullo. After the fight Iacullo took Clayton and Carrola to a large funeral home owned by a heavy-set Greek and an Italian, then State representative or senator. Iacullo stated that the Italian was a good friend of his. The Italian was not at the funeral home, so they left. (It is believed this was the Kringas & Marzullo Funeral Parlor, 5400 West Harrison; mentioned later by Iacullo in his applications for parole from prison.)

Jack R. Clayton is presently incarcerated at the U.S. Medical Center, Springfield, Mo.; and his defense attorneys have alleged that he was mentally incompetent when he entered a guilty plea to the charges for which he is presently incarcerated. Federal Judge Ridge has denied a motion by Clayton to set aside his plea of guilty on the above allegation of mental incompetency.

JOHN IORIO, FBI No. 46976

John Iorio, alias John Pincus; FBI No. 46976 is a white male of Italian descent; 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighing 135 pounds, brown eyes, black hair, and slender build. He was born July 21, 1903, at New York.

Iorio's first offense reported at Chicago, Ill., is designated as case Ill-5701, reported May 17, 1943. This lists Iorio as a defendant with Arthur Kupsnecker, now deceased. Kupsnecker was listed as the source of supply for Iorio in this case; his source was not known. Iorio was sentenced January 14, 1944, to 18 months in prison. He was released March 27, 1945. Iorio had a prior State and Federal narcotic conviction in New York prior to the above case.

1074 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

In 1943 Iorio was listed at Chicago, Ill., as 1 of 15 most important narcotic violators. In 1946 he was reported as an associate of Frank Cohen and Thomas de Santo.

In case Ill-6231, reported December 31, 1948, Iorio again was charged with violating the narcotic laws at Chicago. Again his source was believed in New York but was not identified. He entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to 3 years on June 21, 1949. He was released October 10, 1951. In case Ill-7035, reported March 10, 1953, defendant Jack Faulkner's source of heroin was listed as Iorio.

Case Ill-7118, reported March 22, 1954, listed Iorio again as a defendant. He was sentenced January 14, 1955, to 15 years in prison. Iorio was also listed as a defendant in case Ill-7204, reported September 29, 1954; and on January 14, 1955, he also entered a plea of guilty in this case and was sentenced to 15 years to run concurrent with that sentence meted out in case Ill-7118, above. Iorio's source of supply this time was determined to be Theodore Ferrara of New York. As a result of information furnished from Chicago, agents in New York arrested Ferrara with 22 ounces of heroin.

In case Ill-7225, reported December 20, 1954, defendant Dominick Conde's source of supply for heroin was reported to be Iorio.

JACOB KLEIN, FBI No. 554296

Jacob Klein, alias Jake Klein, alias Joe Gold, alias Jack Klein, FBI No. 554296, is a white male of Jewish descent. He is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 190 pounds, is balding with gray hair on the sides, heavy build, brown eyes, and was born June 6, 1903, at Brooklyn, N.Y. The last known residence of Klein is reported as 1128 Pratt Boulevard, Chicago, Ill. Klein is listed in the Bureau of Narcotics Mafia book under No. 148.

The files at Chicago, Ill., indicate that Jacob Klein and Harry Lerner were codefendants in case Ill-5072, initiated October 1, 1938. Klein was found guilty of sale of narcotics and was sentenced to 8 years in prison. Lerner was acquitted.

On October 6, 1939, Hymen Rubin was arrested and charged for violation of the narcotic laws in case Ill-5298, having been in possession of approximately 2 ounces of heroin. The reports indicate that Rubin was associated with Jacob Klein and Irving Kushner. Rubin was sentenced to 1 year and 1 day on November 21, 1939, in Federal court at Chicago, Ill.

In Illinois case Ill-6481, defendants Nathan Chiarelli and Sam Serritella were charged with violation of the Federal narcotic laws as the result of a seizure of heroin made from them by the Chicago Police Department. A report in this file indicates that the involved police officers had been offered $500 by Jacob Klein to "forget Chiarelli and Serritella's case." Chiarelli and Serritella were sentenced to 3 and 5 years respectively on March 9, 1951, in this case in Federal court at Chicago, Ill.

Reports indicate that in September and October 1954 an informant in New York was negotiating with a Jane Doe, Clara, and Jacob Klein for the purchases of kilogram amounts of heroin. Klein arranged a meeting between the informant and John Mugavero, of New York, to conduct further negotiations. These meetings were under the surveillance of Agents Angelo Zurlo and B. J. Fitzgerald. The above endeavor was closed by district No. 2 based on information that Klein was unwilling to meet and negotiate with Agent Zurlo.

In case Ill-7399, defendants Sam Serritella, Nathan Chiarelli, and Salvatore Nugara were arrested on January 8, 1957. An address book seized from Serritella contained the name Jake Klein, 6814 North Lolita, Lincolnwood, Ill. Nugara, Serritella, and Chiarelli were sentenced June 25, 1957, to 5, 10, and 10 years, respectively.

In a report dated March 15, 1957, it is alleged that Klein, Isadore Kayne, and Moe Biegler were partners in Lakeside Liquors, 4675 South Lake Park, Chicago, Ill. It was reported January 31, 1958, by former Agent Jack Love that Biegler, Klein, and John Mugavero, of New York, were seen together at the Sheridan Bar, Sheridan and Irving Park Streets, Chicago, Ill. In May of 1958, Klein is reported to have owned a one-quarter interest in the Flamingo Motel at River Road and Milwaukee Avenue, Wheeling, Ill.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1075

A report dated July 1958, from district No. 2 requested a photo of Klein to determine possible involvement as a defendant in case NY:S-10047, John Ormento, et al. No further correspondence appears at Chicago to indicate any final identification or inclusion as a defendant, in that case.

In a report dated March 18, 1959, by former Agent Samuel Newey, he mentions negotiations then taking place between an informant, Theodore de Rose, and Agent James Attie to obtain a kilogram of heroin. De Rose intimated that his source of supply was a man known to the informant named "Jake" and that he owned a motel. A subsequent case evolved, Ill-7873, after De Rose and Carl Florito sold one-half kilogram of heroin to Agent Attie. Subsequent investigation did not implicate Klein and the source of this heroin was never definitely ascertained. Florito was arrested December 11, 1959, and on January 6, 1960, the informant in this case, William Skally was found murdered. Florito immediately surrendered himself to Illinois State authorities to begin serving a sentence imposed for receiving stolen property.

On February 16, 1961, Florito and De Rose were sentenced to 20 and 10 years, respectively. A subsequent appeal resulted in both being granted a new trial by the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, but the new trial has not yet taken place. De Rose is now indicted as a coconspirator in case Ill-8084. To my knowledge, Florito is still in custody of the State authorities.

There is no recent specific information in the files of district No. 9 to indicate that Jacob Klein has been active in the narcotic traffic at Chicago, Ill.

WESLEY LEWIS (DECEASED), FBI No. 518493

Wesley Lewis, alias Trap; FBI No. 518493; Chicago Police identification No. D-58421; Federal Bureau of Narcotics National List No. 253; was a Negro male, 5 feet 10 inches tall; weighing 197 pounds, stocky build, dark brown complexion, gray-black hair, and brown eyes. Lewis was born December 13, 1893 at New Orleans, La. He died September 25, 1962, at Chicago, Ill.

The files at Chicago, Ill., disclose that Lewis was named as a defendant in the following cases: Ill-967, reported November 30, 1928, in which Lewis was fined $500 on March 23, 1931; case Ill-2638, reported March 18, 1932, in which Lewis was a codefendant with Wilbert McNeal, and was sentenced May 17, 1932, to 2 years in prison; case Ill-3806, in which Lewis was a defendant with eight other persons and was sentenced April 7, 1943, on a plea of guilty to serve 1 hour in the custody of the U.S. marshal.

In cases: Ill-3966, reported in 1935; Ill-3987; Ill-5148, and Ill-5195, Lewis was reported as the special employee who assisted the Bureau of Narcotics in their initiation. In case Ill-5383 Lewis and two other defendants were reported in 1940, and he was found guilty and sentenced to 5 years in prison January 9, 1941. Lewis was named as a defendant in case Ill-6444, reported January 4, 1950, but was acquitted October 24, 1950. Lewis was again convicted in case Ill-6717 on November 6, 1951, and was sentenced to 10 years in prison. He was released on parole December 25, 1957.

In case Ill-7350 defendant Harry Lewis, alias Little Trap; son of Wesley Lewis, was sentenced July 26, 1956, to 10 years in prison. He has since been released. Wesley Lewis was reported as the source of supply of narcotics for Leslie Borum, case Ill-7707, in 1958; Milton McSmith, case Ill-7689, in 1958; and for Herbert Foreman, case Ill-7802, in 1959.

In August, 1959, Wesley Lewis assisted the Bureau of Narcotics by making a purchase of heroin from Salvatore Pisano, National List No. 316A. Surveillance disclosed Pisano to receive these narcotics from Anthony Dichiarante and Spartico Mastro; listed at Chicago as case Ill-7863. This case is presently pending at Chicago, Ill., awaiting trial. Pisano died April 5, 1962.

Wesley Lewis, alias Trap knew and was known by every major, and many minor narcotic peddlers in the Chicago, Ill., and neighboring States area.

ORVILLE LOCKE, FBI No. 13175

Orville Locke, alias Oliver Locke, alias Kelly; FBI No. 13175; Chicago Police Identification No. E-22407; Federal Bureau of Narcotics National List No. 260, is a Negro male, 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing about 200 pounds, with black-graying hair, brown eyes, medium brown complexion. Locke was born April 27, 1900 at Kansas City, Mo. Locke's last known address was 5038 South Drexel, Chicago, Ill., where he lives with Virginia Kelly.

1076 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Locke's record discloses that in 1924 he was sentenced at Jefferson City, Mo., to 12 years in prison for first degree robbery. In case No. 6044, Locke was charged in 1933 at Kansas City, Mo., for possession of morphine. The charges were dismissed by the U.S. commissioner in that same year. A report in the files at Chicago, Ill., reports that a John Doe, alias Locke, was the most active narcotic peddler on the South Side of Chicago in 1947.

In 1949 Locke was identified as the source of supply in case Ill-6298 for defendant Major Gibson, at Chicago, Ill.; in case Minn-1080, he was source of supply for Robert Peoples of Minneapolis, Minn., 1952; and in case Ill-6936 at Chicago, Ill., as source of supply for defendant Madero Dawson, in 1953. Locke was also mentioned as source of supply in case Mich-3307, for defendants Alice West, Nathaniel Williams, and James Owens, who were arrested at Detroit, Mich. Locke was mentioned during the early 1950's as the manager of the DuSable Hotel Tavern, 39th and Cottage Grove Streets; Chicago, Ill.

Locke was also mentioned as the source of supply in cases: Mo-8141, Joe Rucks, 1950; Mo-8175, Sam Walders; Mo-8361, Clarence Nelms, Mo-8369, Claude Maddox; Mo-8376, Richard Lee Wallace, Mo-8485, John E. Mitchell and John H. Bluford. Locke has purportedly been furnishing heroin to the Kansas City, Mo., area for 10 years prior to 1954. Locke was reported in 1951 in case W. Va-22-M, by defendant Fred Gamble, as having been a source of marihuana for him at one time. Locke is also mentioned as the source of heroin at Chicago, Ill., in cases Ill-7368, for Robert Anderson; Ill-7441, Louis Davis. In case Ill-7243 a special employee made a purchase of heroin from Locke at Chicago, Ill., in 1955, however, the case was closed without prosecution. In 1957 Locke was known to purchase cocaine from Helen Mack, National List No. 274.

Locke knows and is known by every major narcotic peddler in the Chicago area. He allegedly deals only with out-of-town customers, and only "steers" them in to other peddlers, without ever transacting the deals himself. He alleges a living from gambling proceeds.

JAKE MARBRAY (DECEASED), FBI No. 555674

Jake Marbray, alias Jacob Marberay, alias Jake Mabry, alias Jake Maravy; FBI No. 555674; Chicago Police Identification No. D-51908; Federal Bureau of Narcotics National List No. 271; was a Negro male, 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing about 168 pounds; black-graying hair; brown eyes; dark brown complexion, thin build. He was born December 17, 1902, and is presently deceased.

The files at Chicago, Ill., indicates that Marbray was a defendant in two cases in 1924, one for sale and one for possession. He was sentenced to 6 months in one case and 30 days in the other. In case Ill-73, he was sentenced November 21, 1927 to 1 year and 1 day. In case Ill-2067 he was sentenced on September 23, 1930, to 9 months.

Marbray was again reported as a defendant at Chicago, Ill., in case Ill-2724, in which he was sentenced April 25, 1932 to 2 years. In case Ill-5522 he was sentenced December 15, 1941, to 5 years' probation by Federal Judge Michael J. Igoe at Chicago, Ill.

Last report of Marbray was case Ill-6737 reported July 1951. The charges in this case were dismissed due to the fact that Marbray had been convicted of possession of narcotics in the Illinois State Court, and was sentenced on March 7, 1952, to a sentence of 5 years to life. Marbray subsequently died.

HELEN MACK, FBI No. 946551-B

Helen Mack, nee Kountis: FBI No. 946551B: Federal Bureau of Narcotics National List No. 274 is a white female of Greek decent. She is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 179 pounds, stout build, light complexion, brown eyes, and brown hair. She was born at Chicago, Ill., on November 8, 1919. She was living with, and purportedly married to Nolan Mack in early 1950.

On September 28, 1953, Nolan and Helen Mack were observed to meet with Medio Mancione, a known narcotic trafficker, during the development of case Ill-7119. It is reported in the files that on January 29, 1954, a search warrant was served by the Chicago Police Department at 211 East 48th Street and a quantity of narcotics was found. Arrested at that address was Charles Bradford, Thurman Wyatt, Rose Austin, Robert Austin, and Helen Mack. No results of prosecution are shown in the files regarding the above arrests.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1077

In case Ill-7211, reported June 29, 1955, Helen Mack was named as a defendant with Nolan Mack and James Fields. Helen Mack entered a plea of guilty in this case and was sentenced to 2 years. She subsequently appealed on the allegation that she was wrongfully counseled by her attorney. The cause was remanded for rehearing, but was later dismissed due to a sentence received in another case.

In case Ill-7352 Nolan and Helen Mack were listed as the source of supply for heroin for Francis Baskerville. After the incarceration of Nolan Mack, in May 1957, in case Ill-7211, Helen Mack actively took over his business and soon became one of the largest heroin dealers on the South Side of Chicago during this period. She was reported by Edward Williams as the source of his heroin in case Ind-1011, reported July 1957, involving him and four other defendants.

On July 11, 1957, a Federal narcotic agent at Chicago, Ill., developed a case against Amos Jones, National List No. 197, now deceased, case Ill.-7506, and induced Jones to unwittingly introduce him to Helen Mack. Subsequently, the agent initiated case Ill.-7521, in which Helen Mack, assisted by codefendants Samuel Moore, Robert Jordan, and Johnnie B. Cooper sold a total of about 14 ounces of heroin from July to August 1957, to the agent. Exhibit No. 5 in this case was about 7 ounces, for which the agent had paid Helen Mack $2,500, when she stated she was going to New York for a new supply of heroin, and ordered a quarter of a kilo of heroin for himself.

Helen Mack was observed boarding the plane for New York. Was observed arriving at New York and meeting with William Wright. She returned July 31, 1957, and delivered exhibit No. 5 to the agent. On August 2, 1957, agents in New York arrested Wright and recovered $2,095 of the money given her by the agent at Chicago, Ill. Wright was not successfully prosecuted on this charge at New York.

The narcotic agent at Chicago and the special employee subsequently induced Helen Mack to introduce them to her source of supply at Chicago, Ill., Armando Piemonte. Two purchases were made from Piemonte and he was later convicted and sentenced in case Ill-7565. Toll calls during this period of Piemonte's residence disclosed a call to Arnold Romano, National List No. 333 of New York. It was believed that Romano may have been Piemonte's source of supply. Piemonte was called before the Federal grand jury at Chicago in September 1959, but refused to testify and was cited for contempt, and sentenced to a consecutive 18 months.

Helen Mack was arrested December 3, 1957, as a defendant in both above cases, Ill-7521 and Ill-7565. On June 19, 1958, she was convicted and sentenced to 10 years in prison in case Ill-7521. She also entered a plea of guilty in case Ill-7565, as a codefendant with Piemonte, and was sentenced to 10 more years, concurrent with the above. She is now in prison.

Helen Mack is also reported in case Ill-7566, as the result of Chicago police officers executing a search warrant on her residence on November 26, 1957. This case was nolle prossed in Illinois State court after her 10-year sentence above. During development of case Ill-7885 in 1959 Otis Sears, now deceased, gave testimony to the effect that Police Officers Cooperman and Teller, who took part in the above execution of the search warrant, had sold him heroin, which they stated they had seized from Helen Mack. The above officers were later acquitted by Federal Judge Perry in the above case.

In case Ill-7731, reported December 19, 1958, defendant Cornelius M. Webb related that from September 1956, to August 1957, he had purchased about 1 ounce of heroin every other day from Helen Mack. In case Ill-7476, reported January 3, 1958, defendant Ulysses Cougis had obtained his heroin from Helen Mack, and had formerly been a "runner" for Nolan and Helen Mack. Helen and Nolan Mack were also reportedly suppliers of heroin to Joseph Wilson and Finnell Lee, reported in case Wis-38-M; and Donald L. Grady, reported in case Mo-8656, in 1958.

A report dated October 1959, relates that defendant Carmine De Salvo, of New York, NYS: 10323, told an undercover agent he had been the source of supply for William Wright and Helen Mack.

NOLAN MACK, FBI No. 2595092

Nolan Mack, FBI No. 2595092, Chicago Police identification No. D-96186 is a Negro male, 6 feet tall, weighing 180 pounds. He is of medium build, of medium brown complexion, with brown eyes, and black hair. He was born November 5, 1924, at Memphis, Tenn.

1078 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mack's criminal record dates back to 1939 when he was fined $50 for attempted robbery and carrying a concealed weapon at Memphis, Tenn. In 1942, at Lake County, Ind., he was placed on 3 years probation on a charge of burglary. In 1943 Mack was sentenced to 1 to 20 years at Joliet Penitentiary for two charges of robbery. In 1947 he was paroled. In 1949 he returned for violation of parole, and was reparaoled in October 1952.

During the development of case Illinois-7119, involving defendant, Medio Mancione, Mack was observed meeting with Mancione on occasions. Mack was cited in the files as the source of supply for Jack B. Madden, cases Illinois-7239 and Missouri-8450; for Francis Baskerville, in case Illinois-7352; and for Jesse Harris in case Illinois-7396.

In case Illinois-7211, reported June 29, 1955, Nolan Mack was a codefendant with James Fields, and Helen Mack, national list No. 274. Nolan Mack was sentenced May 24, 1957, to 5 years in prison. Helen Mack entered a plea of guilty, but later appealed the sentence she received. The cause was subsequently dismissed due to her having been convicted on another case. The source of supply for Nolan and Helen Mack in the above case was listed as Medio Mancione and Joseph Iacullo. Mack was released from prison on March 6, 1961.

Arthur Hunt was arrested at Detroit, Mich., as a fugitive from Chicago, at which time he was in possession of 12 ounces of heroin which he stated he had obtained from Nolan Mack. In case Illinois-7406 William Wright was arrested October 1, 1956, upon his arrival from New York, and was found in possession of 9 ounces of heroin, 99 percent pure, and 1 ounce of cocaine. Wright admitted he had brought the heroin to deliver to Nolan Mack. Wright was convicted in Chicago Municipal Court for possession; however, the Illinois Supreme Court later reversed the conviction.

In April 1957 Mack was reported as source of supply for defendant James Goodab, in case Illinois-7459; and for Clifford Benton in case Illinois-7463. He was also named as source of heroin for Arthur Morse, who, in turn, was supplying Ollie Brantley of Detroit, Mich. In May 1957 Robert Jordan, arrested with heroin at Dayton, Ohio, stated his source of supply was Mack. Richard Cain and five others arrested in St. Louis, Mo., case Missouri-8576, had obtained their heroin from Nolan Mack. In case Wisconsin-38-M, reported May 21, 1958, at Milwaukee, Wis., defendants Joseph Wilson and Finnell Lee stated that they had obtained narcotics on prior occasions from both Nolan and Helen Mack.

On June 18, 1961, Shelby Faulk, a known narcotic trafficker at Chicago, Ill., was found shot to death. Information later developed to indicate that Faulk and Mack had pooled their money to make a purchase of narcotics, and it was believed that Faulk may have been robbed of the money and shot. Mack was also suspected of this murder.

Mack is presently known to be in the narcotic traffic at Chicago, Ill., and is believed to be supplied by Italian suspects in this area. Evidence is now being assimilated, and it is hoped a case will be developed to involve Mack as a defendant in the very near future. None of the information thus far known and being developed will be herein reported, as it might jeopardize this investigation. It is anticipated that the case will have to be developed along the lines of a conspiracy indictment, due to the fact that Mack is very cautious and appears to be dealing only through known and trusted "runners." Most persons who are approached with the idea of assisting in the initiation of a case against Mack, express fear of being killed by Mack, and refuse to cooperate in such an endeavor.

FRANK JOSEPH PANATERA, FBI No. 301396B

Frank Joseph Panatera, FBI No. 301396B; Chicago Police identification No. E-458; and Federal Bureau of Narcotics national list No. 307, is a white male, of Italian descent. He is 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighs 204 pounds, has dark brown hair, brown eyes, medium complexion, and heavy build. He was born August 24, 1926, at Chicago, Ill.

In the files of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics at Chicago, Ill., Panatera and Charles Bartoli were reported in September of 1951 to be "runners" for Jack Rizzo in the narcotic traffic. In case Illinois-6751, reported April 1952, Panatera was named as the source of supply for defendant, Joseph Doyle. Panatera was also listed in case Illinois-6869, reported December 1952, as the source of supply for Peter Gushi and James Cordovano. Panatera has also been mentioned as a partner in a tavern located at 2600 South Wallace, with James Cordovano.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1079

In case Illinois-6856, reported January 2, 1953; Frank Panatera, Joseph DiCaro, and Frank Pasqua (of New York), were named as defendants. This case involved purchases totaling about 26 ounces at Chicago, Ill. On May 18, 1954, Panatera pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 2 years; DiCaro was sentenced to 3 years on that date; and on June 28, 1954, Pasqua was found not guilty. Pasqua was reported as the source of supply in this case, and his source was listed as Vince Liberti and Joe Rossi of New York City. While this case was pending, awaiting trial, Panatera was severely beaten, allegedly by Joey Pacella, Angelo La Pietra, and Anthony Maenza, reportedly on orders from Frank Pasqua because Panatera had cheated him out of some money. Pacella was later shot and wounded, an act attributed to Panatera in retaliation for the beating.

In case Illinois-7154 reported December 17, 1953, Anthony Annerino was named as the source of supply for Marvin Moses, and his source was named as Panatera and Pasqua.

On October 6, 1958, a special employee met with Panatera and Cordovano at the Nightingale Tavern, 2600 South Wallace. He attempted to engage the above two in a conversation regarding the supply and sale of heroin; however, they would have no part of this conversation, alleging they were no longer engaged in the traffic, since their convictions. Panatera is still to be seen in the area of 26th and Wallace, associating with the same persons formerly convicted for narcotic violations in that area. He is regarded by the Chicago police as a hijacker and interstate shipment thief; as are his associates, Cordovano, Gushi, DiCaro, and others.

SALVATORE PISANO (DECEASED), FBI No. 765916

Salvatore Pisano, alias Solly, alias One-eyed Solly, FBI No. 765916; Chicago police identification No. E-53844; Federal Bureau of Narcotics national list No. 316A, and Mafia Book No. 156, was a white male of Italian descent, 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighing 250 pounds, heavy build, ruddy complexion; black-graying hair and balding, with brown eyes, the left one was false. He was born November 6, 1906, at Chicago, Ill.

In case Illinois-5926, reported December 26, 1945, Salvatore Pisano and Frank Accettura are listed as defendants. Pisano was convicted and sentenced April 15, 1946, to 3 years. There was no mention in this case as to Pisano's source of heroin. In case Illinois-6218, reported October 10, 1948, defendants Joseph Daley and Harry Winefield were reported to have obtained their heroin from Pisano. Case Illinois-6201, reported February 3, 1949, listed Pisano as the source of heroin for defendant in this case, Morris Taylor.

Case Illinois-6254, reported January 17, 1950, listed Pisano and five co-defendants, one of whom was George Ginnone. Two indictments appeared to have resulted from this case against Pisano. On March 27, 1951, Pisano was sentenced to 5 years in Docket No. 50-CR-369; and on May 23, 1951, he was sentenced to serve another 5 years consecutive with the above, in Docket No. 50-CR-407. Pisano appealed and, on January 4, 1952, he surrendered for service of the above total 10-year sentence. Ginnone stated the source of supply was a John Doe, alias Jerry, from New York. Investigation indicated the source was James Sherry, alias Jerry and James Cippolaro, both of New York.

In case Illinois-6348, reported February 6, 1950, Maurice and Alpha Koen were reported as defendants. The source of heroin for the above defendants was listed as J. B. Bowman, reputed "runner" for Pisano.

In case Illinois-7863, reported March 21, 1960, and presently pending, a purchase of approximately 9 ounces of heroin was made by a special employee for $6,000 from Salvatore Pisano. Surveillance agents observed defendants Spartico Mastro and Anthony Dichiarante deliver the above narcotics to Pisano, prior to his delivering them to the special employee. Salvatore Pisano died on April 5, 1962. This case is yet to be tried at Chicago, Ill., in Federal court.

JEREMIAH HOPE PULLINGS, FBI No. 2747798

Jeremiah Hope Pullings, FBI No. 2747798; Federal Bureau of Narcotics National List No. 322; Chicago Police Identification No. E-22316, is known to have used the aliases of James V. Evans; Gerald Wright; and Gerald Wilson and is a Negro male. He is 6 feet tall, weighs 225 pounds, has black-graying hair, brown eyes, medium brown complexion; and heavy build. He was born

1080 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

September 24, 1918, at Wilmington, Ohio. He is now believed to be living at 949 East 84th Street, Chicago, Ill., under the alias of Gerald Wilson, with his girl friend Dolores Keeby.

In the year 1951 Pullings was reported to the Chicago, Ill., office as a defendant in case Ohio-3689, which had been initiated at Dayton, Ohio. Codefendant in this case with Pullings was his paramour, Marie Gilmore, alias Mona Evans. Both were wanted as fugitives from Ohio for the above case. On August 17, 1954, both Pullings and Gilmore were arrested at Chicago, Ill. They had been living at 9413 South Vernon, and Pullings had been managing a Standard gasoline service station under the name of James Evans, at 400 East 95th Street. Pullings was dismissed from this case and Gilmore was found guilty and sentenced to 2 years in prison.

It was about 1954 that Pullings was alleged to be partners with William Evans, known narcotic trafficker, later convicted in California in case California-5400. Prior to Gilmore going to prison, Dolores Keeby came to live with them as a housekeeper at 9413 South Vernon, at which time she began assisting Pullings and Gilmore in the narcotic distribution. She continued in this capacity after Gilmore went to prison and ultimately lived common law with Pullings. In 1956 Pullings entered into a partnership with Morris Roller and Bondsman Winston Mardis in the Artistic Builders, specializing in construction subcontracting and home modernization.

This company soon became a "front" for Pullings' narcotic business. Calls would be received at this location, after which Keeby would contact the customers, take their orders, and make delivery. From 1954 to 1958 Pullings, et al., was known to be supplying heroin to James and Gladys White, Lee Shorten, Jesse Maroy, and Lydia and Maple Shorten. Cases were ultimately developed against all of these defendants, the latest being Lydia Shorten, in the first part of 1958. After Gilmore's release from prison in 1957 she and Florine Johnson began selling heroin with Pullings and were supplying Stanley Woods and Victoria Basemore, and Loretta and Frank Sasser, all of Detroit, Mich.

In the latter part of 1957 and early 1958 purchases were made from Pullings, Alice Gilmore, and Florine Johnson by special employee Victoria Basemore and a narcotic agent. Subsequent investigation and development of information resulted in an indictment September 2, 1959, using the evidence and testimony from the case against Lydia Shorten, who corroborated the prior dealings of Pullings with Maroy, and James and Gladys White. The case, Illinois-7885 named Pullings, Gilmore, Johnson, Morris Roller, Keeby, James and Gladys White, Chicago Police Officers Sheldon Teller, Miles Cooperman, and Richard Austin; Armondo Piemonte, and William Jones, alias Bilbo. All were charged in a conspiracy count to violate the narcotic laws.

The trial commenced in February 1961. Stallsworth had died; Roller became a witness for the Government and was dismissed as a defendant. On March 1, 1961, Piemonte was dismissed when witness Otis Sears failed to identify him as the source of supply introduced to him by the police officers. William Jones was found not guilty on March 18, 1961. This same date Federal Judge Joseph Perry, during jury deliberations, took it upon himself to dismiss Cooperman, Teller, and Austin by granting a directed verdict of acquittal. James and Gladys White were found guilty and were granted new trials by Judge Perry.

Pullings was convicted and sentenced to 12 years and fined $10,000; Keeby was convicted and sentenced to 6 years and fined $5,000. Johnson was convicted and sentenced to 8 years and it was later reduced to 5 years with no fine. Gilmore was convicted and sentenced to 10 years, no fine. Pullings, Keeby, and Gilmore filed an appeal which is presently pending.

In case Illinois-8102, three purchases of heroin were made by a special employee from Charles Spencer, a known associate of Pullings, during February and March 1962. During negotiations for the third purchase, March 2, 1962, Pullings was observed in the area and accompanied Spencer to Spencer's residence after Spencer received the money for the purchase. Pullings was also seen in the area of the "plant" of narcotics, after Spencer had left it with exhibit No. 3. He appeared to be looking the area over. Spencer was arrested subsequent to this purchase, and Pullings then could not be located. No narcotics were found in the "plant" and no marked money was found on Spencer. It is believed that Pullings may have had the money.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLEGAL TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1081

Spencer's trial commenced September 25, 1962, and the special employee refused to acknowledge even knowing Spencer. After good corroborative testimony was given by the surveillance agents regarding the purchases, Federal Judge Richard Austin found Spencer not guilty. It is still felt that Spencer is in the traffic; and Pullings is either supplying him or has made arrangements to have him supplied.

JACK MARTIN RIZZO, FBI No. 281857B

Jack Martin Rizzo, FBI No. 281857B; Chicago Police Identification No. D-98576; Federal Bureau of Narcotics National List No. 329B; is a white male of Italian descent, 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing about 175 pounds, with black hair, brown eyes, and dark complexion. He is of medium build and was born September 18, 1923, at Chicago, Ill.

The files at Chicago, Ill., Federal Bureau of Narcotics indicates the early mention of Rizzo as the source of supply for heroin for defendant Paul Joseph, reported January 4, 1951, in case Ill-6599.

Subsequently, in case Ill-6763 reported December 30, 1952, Rizzo was named as a defendant with Lewis Anzelmo and Negro peddler Robert Payne. This case was developed through purchases of approximately 25 ounces of heroin during a period from September 1951 to December 1952 from the above defendants. Rizzo pleaded guilty on October 14, 1953, and was sentenced to 3 years in prison and fined $600. The heroin purchased in the above case was alleged to have been obtained by Rizzo from Frank Pasqua of New York. Rizzo was also alleged to have obtained heroin on occasions from Patrick Russo, National List No. 338. During this period Charles Bartoli and Frank Panatera, National List No. 307 were alleged to have been runners for Rizzo.

In 1952 Rizzo purportedly owned an interest in two used-car lots located at 3901 and 3629 North Western; Chicago, Ill. He also reputedly had an interest in a tavern at 624 West Division, which was operated by his codefendant Robert Payne; and an interest in the Spotlight Tap, 3113 North Broadway.

In case Ill-7458 Rizzo was reported to have been the source of supply for defendant Sabastian Cannata, reported February 26, 1957. In this period he was also reported as source of supply for Stanley Kapsalis of Chicago and Sam Gadds of Detroit, Mich.

In 1958 Rizzo reportedly had an interest in the Fountainbleau Tavern, 3920 North Broadway; Kelly's Lounge, Wilson and Broadway; and Harry's New Yorker Bar, 900 North Rush Street. As recent as October 1962 Rizzo was reported to have an interest in the Spotlite Motors Garage, 713 West Diversey, and is suspected of using this location to strip stolen autos. He reportedly now lives at 1458 West Wilson with his father.

Attempts by narcotic agents and special employees from 1958 to 1960 to meet with Rizzo and discuss narcotic trafficking have proved futile. No information has appeared in the files of late to indicate that Rizzo has reentered the narcotic traffic.

JUNIUS ROBINSON (DECEASED), FBI No. 367698A

Junius Robinson, alias Junior Robinson, alias Junior Robertson, alias Robert Lee, alias Stale Bread; FBI No. 367698A; New Orleans Police Identification No. 81083; Federal Bureau of Narcotics National List No. 334. Robinson was a Negro male, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing 160 pounds, he had maroon eyes, black hair, medium build. He was born November 15, 1926, at New Orleans, La.

This violator was principally known as a trafficker at New Orleans, La. The only information connecting him with Chicago were reports from New Orleans regarding his frequent trips to Chicago and the toll call listings on his residence phone indicating calls to Chicago.

During 1957 the above toll calls indicated very frequent contact with one Violetta Foster, then living at 601 East 36th Street, Chicago, Ill. It was felt that Foster was either Robinson's source of heroin, or that she was making contact for Robinson with his source of heroin at Chicago. Foster did not appear to be in the narcotic traffic to the extent that she could have kept Robinson supplied with his supply.

A report of July 30, 1958, indicated that information was received about a George Williams being Robinson's source of heroin. Later investigation of the Williams mentioned, did not indicate him to be of a caliber that could supply Robinson either. There was another George Williams in the Chicago, Ill., area who may have been capable of being Robinson's source of supply, however.

1082 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

No definite information or leads were ever developed to positively identify Robinson's source of heroin. Robinson died November 1, 1958, at New Orleans, La.

JAMES VINCENT RUSSO, FBI No. 3811016

James Vincent Russo, FBI No. 3811016, Chicago Police identification No. D-74854; Federal Bureau of Narcotic National List No. 337, is white male of Italian descent, 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighing 165 pounds, with brown eyes, black-graying hair, medium build, and a paralytic right leg. He was born March 12, 1915, at Chicago, Ill.

Russo was reportedly involved in an internal revenue liquor law violation in 1944, in which he was convicted and sentenced to 18 months. In case Ill-6481, reported March 3, 1950, by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, defendants Nathan Chiarelli and Sam Serritella, both known narcotic violators, while awaiting trial in this case, were both observed associating with James Russo and Oscar Spruett, also a known Negro narcotic violator. When Chiarelli and Serritella went to prison in March 1951 for this case, they reportedly turned their narcotic business over to James Russo and John Dispensa. Dispensa is presently in prison as a result of being convicted in case Ill-7655, reported in December 1958.

In case Ill-6606, reported December 14, 1950, defendant Oscar Pierck, national list No. 316, revealed that he had obtained his heroin from Nathan Chiarelli, and also admitted having made purchases of heroin from Serritella and James Russo. In case Ill-6845, reported April 20, 1952, defendant Gerard Nisivaco was reputedly obtaining his heroin from Russo. In case Ill-7177, reported August 25, 1955, Russo was listed as the source of supply for defendant Ernest Williams.

In case Ill-7184, reported August 1, 1955, Russo was a defendant with Louis Manella, and August Lo Coco. Russo entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to 5 years in prison on January 11, 1956. Minella and Lo Coco were dismissed. Russo was released in August 1959. The source of supply for Russo in this case was reported to be Joey Pacella, an associate of Frank Pasqua.

PATRICK RUSSO FBI No. 690068

Patrick Russo, FBI No. 690068, Chicago Police identification No. C-50547; Federal Bureau of Narcotics National List No. 338 and Mafia Book No. 160, is a white male of Italian descent, 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing 225 pounds. He has brown-graying hair, hazel eyes, is of dark complexion and heavy build. He was born May 17, 1904, at Chicago, Ill.

In the year 1941 Russo was reported on a list of the 15 most important narcotic violators in the Chicago, Ill., area. In the early 1950's Russo was reported to have been the source of supply of heroin for Jack Rizzo, national list No. 329B. Theodore De Rose, now reported as a defendant in pending case Ill-7873, was once alleged to have been a runner for Russo.

A special employee reported in 1958 that back in 1950 he was introduced to Joseph Bruno by Marvin Moses. That he bought heroin from Bruno until 1953, after which he met alias Joe, whom he identified as Patrick Russo. That he continued buying heroin from Russo until about 1957 (having it delivered by other persons), after which, Russo changed his operation, and would telephone the special employee, take his order, and Isaac Hill, national list 182A, would deliver the heroin and collect the money.

In 1958 Frank Borelli, national list No. 38, an associate of Anthony Pisciotta and Thomas Garibaldi, both of New York, was a defendant in a case in New Jersey and was in Chicago fighting removal proceedings. While at Chicago on bond, the bonding company had only the phone and address of the Hub Tavern, owned and operated by Russo, by which to contact Borelli. Borelli was later reported to have spent a lot of time at this tavern associating with Russo.

In November 1959, a special employee and narcotic agent met with Russo at the Hub Lounge. They approached Russo on the subject of narcotics and Russo alleged that he had been out of the business for the past 7 years, on orders from the syndicate. He also told the special employee that Frank Borelli in New York might help them or introduce them to someone in New York who could supply them with heroin. Russo never subsequently contacted the special employee to fulfill his intention of introducing him to Frank Borelli.

The file of Chicago, Ill., Federal Bureau of Narcotics do not reveal that Russo was ever charged or reported as a defendant in a narcotic case.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1083

FRANK SANTORE, FBI No. 731130A

Frank Santore, FBI No. 731130A, Federal Bureau of Narcotics National List No. 350, and Mafia Book No. 161; is a white male of Italian descent. He is 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs 167 pounds, has brown eyes, dark brown hair, swarthy complexion, and medium build. He was born January 23, 1915, at Melrose Park, Ill.

In case Ill-6710, reported June 5, 1951, defendant Frank Santore, Anthony Santore, Frank Laino, and Eugene Burton were charged with purchases and seizures amounting to over 11 ounces. Frank Santore was found not guilty on January 3, 1952. Laino and Burton were dismissed on January 11, 1952. Anthony Santore was found guilty and was sentenced to 5 years in prison on January 30, 1952. The source of supply for heroin in this case was listed as Rocko and Andrew De Grazia. The initial meeting of a narcotic agent and Anthony Santore took place in the Lumber Gardens Lounge, Melrose Park, Ill.; this was the forerunner of the Casa Madrid Lounge, and was even then operated by the De Grazia's.

The Santore brothers were once believed to have been the source of supply for heroin for Nathaniel Spurlark, national list No. 377. No information has appeared in the files at Chicago, Ill., since the above dated case, to indicate that Frank Santore has continued in the narcotic traffic.

HARRY SCHENNAULT, FBI No. 624023

Harry Schennault, FBI No. 624023; Chicago Police Identification No. D-81892; Federal Bureau of Narcotics national list No. 355 is a Negro male 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighing 170 pounds, with brown eyes, black-graying hair, thin build, medium brown complexion. He was born May 31, 1901, at Tulsa, Okla.

Harry Schennault was first mentioned in the files of the Chicago office of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics as follows: In case Ill-6487, reported February 28, 1950, he was reported as the source of supply for defendant Delphine McGee, who later became his paramour. In case Ill-6566, reported June 28, 1950, Schennault was reported as the source for defendant Edwin Perkins and Robert F. Riley. In case Ill-6676, reported June 12, 1951, he was reported as the source for Marie and Michael Battiesse. In case Ill-6700, reported May 16, 1951, defendant Jean Gibson was arrested and about 13 ounces of heroin were found in her apartment. She stated she had been living with Schennault for the prior 2 weeks, and the heroin was his.

In case Ill-6732 reported November 15, 1951, Schennault was charged with a 13-count indictment for heroin purchased from him, seized from him, and that heroin seized from Jean Gibson in the above case Ill-6700. Schennault was found not guilty on counts 10 and 11 on February 20, 1952, by Federal Judge Sullivan. He was found guilty by Federal Judge Patrick Stone on February 28, 1952, on counts 12 and 13, and was sentenced to 5 and 7 years to run consecutively with a fine of $7,000. Schennault appealed and it was affirmed. Schennault began serving sentence on May 13, 1953, and on April 5, 1954, Judge Stone amended the sentence by suspending the 7-year sentence, and replacing with 7 years probation.

In case Ill-6797, reported January 15, 1952, Schennault was listed as the source for defendant Margaret Weaver. Case Ill-7017, reported July 27, 1953, involved defendant Brutus Lewis. Lewis was always considered a "runner" for Schennault, and was alleged to have been an illegitimate son of his. Lewis is now deceased. Case Ill-7245, reported June 26, 1956, again involved defendant Delphine McGee. Her source again was listed as Schennault, who was now considered her paramour. In case Ill-7300, reported September 28, 1955, Joseph C. Saddler was reported to have taken over all the narcotic customers of Schennault, after his incarceration, on May 13, 1953.

Case Ill-7623 was reported April 10, 1958, charging a violation against Comfort Fairley. His source of supply for heroin was Harry Schennault, and he elected to cooperate in the initiation of a case against Schennault, which was reported as case Ill-7627.

In case Ill-7627, reported June 4, 1958, special employee and defendant, Comfort Fairley, cooperated and made a purchase of heroin from Harry Schennault. Schennault was convicted on this charge on October 28, 1958, and was sentenced to 10 years, and fined $100. Prior to the conviction of Schennault the Special Employee Comfort Fairley was wounded by a shotgun blast from an unidentified assailant. He recovered and subsequently testified against Schennault in court.

1084 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

There is no information to indicate who the source of supply for heroin for Schennault was. Delphine McGee was fatally shot on October 25, 1958, at Chicago, Ill. It was strongly suspected that Schennault shot her over an argument for her to relinquish money which he had entrusted with her, so that he could prolong a court fight in regard to the above case Ill-7627. Nothing could be proven against Schennault in the above shooting.

In case Ill-7573, reported May 5, 1958, defendant Marie Battiesse again named Schennault as her source of supply for heroin. Case Ill-7667, reported October 14, 1958, charging defendant Harry Arthur Lewis, Schennault was listed as the source of supply. In case Ill-7698, defendant Melvin Cross was listed as having secured his heroin from Schennault.

Schennault was known to every major narcotic trafficker in the Chicago, Ill., area; including both Negro and Italian. Harry Schennault is presently incarcerated.

OTIS SEARS (DECEASED), FBI No. 4852051

Otis Sears, alias Otis Scales, FBI No. 4852051, was a Negro male, 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighed 215 pounds, had black hair, brown eyes, dark brown complexion, stocky build. He was born December 20, 1914, at Hattiesburg, Miss.

Otis Sears is first mentioned in the files of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics at Chicago, Ill., in case Ill-6002. This case, reported June 20, 1947, lists defendants Otis Sears and Robert Wolfe. Sears was acquitted October 17, 1947. Wolfe was reported in this case as a "runner" for Sears. The source of supply of heroin for Sears in this case was Ralph Alexander.

In case Ill-6133, Otis Sears was reported April 16, 1948, as a defendant with five other codefendants, including his source of supply Ralph Alexander. Alexander and Ross Robinson were convicted and sentenced in this case. The other defendants, including Sears, were dismissed. Alexander's source of heroin was reported in this case to have been Morris Taubman, Isadore Kayne, William Murphy, and Salvatore Pisano at different periods of time.

In case Ill-6256, reported March 4, 1949, Sears was listed as a defendant with Curtis Little. Sears entered a plea of guilty in this case and was sentenced December 8, 1949, to 1 year and 1 day in prison. Case Ill-6400, reported October 20, 1949, listed defendants Otis Sears and Ella Mae Long. This case was dismissed as to Sears, after he had entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced in case Ill-6256. Sears was released from the above sentence on October 13, 1950.

In case Ill-6767, reported January 15, 1952, Sears was again charged for violation of the narcotic laws. It was brought out by Sears' attorney that the Bureau of Narcotics had told Sears they would make a recommendation on his behalf to the U.S. Attorney's office, if he would cooperate. This recommendation had actually been made. However, while this case was pending, Sears was again arrested for violation of the narcotic laws in case Ill-6999, so the Bureau withdrew their recommendation on behalf of Sears. When Judge Sullivan was apprised of the fact that a recommendation had been made, he found Sears not guilty. Sears had cooperated and initiated cases against Madison Young and John Thomas at New York in case New York State 8907; and against O. C. Campbell, of Detroit, and Frank Preston of New York; both were reported in case New York State 8908.

SAM SERRITELLA, FBI No. 2677927

Sam Serritella, FBI No. 2677927: Chicago Police Identification No. D-57540; Federal Bureau of Narcotics national list No. 356 is a white male of Italian descent. He is 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighs 175 pounds, has brown eyes, black hair, is of dark complexion, and medium build. He was born July 24, 1921, at Chicago, Ill. Serritella is presently incarcerated.

In 1942 Serritella was placed on 1-year probation after he pleaded guilty to a charge of violating the Internal Revenue liquor laws. Again, in 1944, on a plea of guilty he was sentenced to 3 years in prison. In 1946 the Federal Bureau of Narcotics considered Serritella 1 of the 15 most important narcotic violators in the Chicago, Ill., area.

In case Ill-5552, reported at Chicago on April 23, 1943, Serritella and 18 other defendants were charged with violating the Federal narcotic laws. This case involved the purchases and seizures of approximately 150 ounces of heroin from January 1942, to February 1943. Serritella was convicted and sentenced June 29, 1944, to 1 year and 1 day on three counts of this indictment. The sentence was to run concurrent with that received for the above-mentioned liquor law violation. The source of supply of heroin for Serritella in this case was not shown. Serritella was paroled June 3, 1946.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1085

In case III-6481, reported March 3, 1950, Sam Serritella and Nathan Chiarelli were named as defendants and were charged for possession of about 6 ounces of heroin. Serritella and Chiarelli were convicted March 9, 1951, and were sentenced to 5 and 3 years in prison, respectively. The source of this heroin was not determined; however, while the case was pending, known narcotic violator, Jake Klein, was reported to have approached two Chicago police officers and asked if anything could be done for Chiraelli. The case was originally initiated by the Chicago Police Department.

On July 17, 1950, narcotic agents stopped Sam Serritella, James Russo, national list No. 337; and Oscar Spruell who were seen together in an automobile. Spruell is a known Negro narcotic violator, presently incarcerated. In case III-6606, reported December 14, 1950, defendants Oscar Pierce, national list No. 316 and Isabelle Thomas were charged with the possession of 26 ounces of heroin. Pierce admitted his source of supply for the above seizure was Nathan Chiarelli and that he had bought heroin from Sam Serritella and James Russo on prior occasions.

In case III-7309, reported January 24, 1956, defendant Mack Thomas, national list No. 393D allegedly had obtained his heroin from Serritella and Chiarelli on occasions. In case III-7387, reported September 7, 1956, defendant Simon Stalls-worth, now deceased, named Chiarelli and Serritella as his source for heroin; and cooperated in the initiation of case III-7399 against the above two defendants.

Case III-7399, reported January 17, 1957, named Serritella, Chiarelli, and Salvatore Nugara as defendants. Serritella was convicted June 25, 1957, and was sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $2,000 and costs. Chiarelli was also sentenced to 10 years, and Nugara to 5 years. In case III-7427, reported December 20, 1956, Serritella was named as the source of heroin for defendant Thomas Lee.

In 1958 Lawrence Lemons, then a defendant, related that he had attended grade school with Serritella; and that he started buying heroin from him in the early 1940's. When Serritella and Chiarelli were convicted in case III-6481, Serritella, before going to prison in March 1951, introduced Lemons to James Russo and John Dispensa, both of whom were to take over the business. In 1953, Lemons went to prison in case III-6760, and upon his release in 1956 he resumed contact with Serritella and Chiarelli and purchased narcotics from them until June 1957 when they were convicted and sentenced in case III-7399.

Prior to being sentenced on this occasion, Serritella introduced Lemons to Armondo Piemonte for his heroin. Lemons made only one buy from Piemonte after which Serritella related that he could not trust Piemonte (it was believed Piemonte was not furnishing Serritella with a share of his profits). Serritella then turned his business over to Dispensa and his partner Phillip Vittoria. Dispensa had been convicted with Serritella in 1944 for a liquor law violation. Piemonte was subsequently convicted and is now incarcerated from case III-7565.

In case III-7655 Dispensa became a defendant with Vittoria, and with Dispensa's source of supply in New York: Nicholas Esposito, Saverio Schifano, and Dominick Gentile. All were convicted and sentenced to prison. Morris Rosenguard, of Chicago, was also convicted and sentenced in this case. Serritella is listed in the Federal Bureau of Narcotics Mafia Book as No. 162.

From his record, it would appear that Serritella, like most other prominent narcotic traffickers, is a confirmed peddler and will never engage in any legitimate endeavor to earn a living.

In case III-6999, reported November 19, 1952, Sears was convicted and sentenced December 26, 1956, to 5 years. Sears appealed this case, and the appellate court affirmed the conviction. Sears then appealed to the Supreme Court, and the case was remanded to the district court for "clarification of the finding of fact" directing this order to remarks made by the trial judge, Joseph S. Perry, which appeared not consistent with the finding of guilty. Judge Perry, on August 18, 1958 made a "clarification of the finding of fact" and reduced the sentence from 5 to 2 years and 6 months. Sears again appealed, and the appellate court, on April 13, 1959, remanded the case back to the district court for a new trial. This indictment was dismissed on September 14, 1959, due to the fact that Sears had been granted immunity to testify in case III-7885.

1086 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Sears was reported June 4, 1959, in case NYS-1219 at New York as a defendant in a conspiracy case naming Sears' sister Emma Ward, and eight other defendants, including the source of supply for Chicago Narcotic peddlers Sears, Nathaniel Spurlark, and Rupert Kelly; Joh Freeman and Freeman's source of heroin Joseph Valachi, both of the latter being from New York.

In case Ill-7885, reported at Chicago, Ill., on January 29, 1960, Sears was one of the principal witnesses, and was named a coconspirator not charged. The case included three Chicago police officers: Sheldon Teller, Miles Cooperman, and Richard E. Austin with 10 other defendants. Sears' testimony evolved around monthly "protection" payments he had been making to the above officers, purchases of heroin he had made from them, and an introduction by them of him to a "connection" for heroin, Armando Piemonte. Sears testimony was partially corroborated by his paramour Earthie Lee Grace.

During the trial Judge Joseph Perry moved that all of Sears' testimony be stricken, due to the fact that he questioned Sears ability to tell the truth. (Sears had testified in his own behalf before Judge Perry in his own case Ill-6999, and had denied under oath that he was a narcotic peddler.) The trial of this case took place in March 1961. Judge Perry dismissed the police officers, a directed verdict of acquittal, which he had reserved ruling on, while the jury in this case was in the middle of deliberations.

The files reflect that in case Ill-6025, reported May 23, 1947, Sears was alleged to be the source of heroin for defendant in this case, Queen Sanders. In case Ill-6193, reported October 11, 1948, Sears was reported to be the source for defendant Guy Berry. In case Ind-854, reported September 13, 1949, Sears was named as the source of defendant in this case by Sylvester Williams of Gary, Ind. In case Ill-6192, reported May 12, 1949, Sears was named as source for Maurice Koen, defendant in this case. In case Ill-7250, reported February 25, 1956, Sears was listed as the source for defendant James Clark.

In case Ill-7665, reported July 16, 1958, Sears was named as source for defendant Richard Burke. In case Ill-7733, reported December 29, 1958, listed defendants Elinor Smith, Geraldine Wood, and Robert Jackson. Wood was obtaining heroin for the above from Earthie Lee Grace, who was the paramour and "runner" for Otis Sears. Wood assisted in the initiation of case Ill-7748 against Earthie L. Grace. Wood also gave information to the effect that police officers Cooperman and Teller had originally introduced her to Sears so she could purchase heroin to satisfy her habit.

In case Ill-7748, reported December 22, 1958, defendant Earthie L. Grace stated her source was Otis Sears. Grace agreed to cooperate and testified in case Ill-7885, regarding her knowledge of the activities of police officers Cooperman, Teller, and Austin, in regard to the monthly payoffs and their deliveries of heroin to Sears. The above case against Grace, also resulted in Sears offering his cooperation in case Ill-7885. Sears was also reported to be the source of supply for heroin for defendant Chester Brown, case Ill-7768, reported February 17, 1959.

Sears died of natural causes on December 14, 1961, at Chicago, Ill.

NATHANIEL SPURLARK, FBI No. 335266D

Nathaniel Spurlark, alias Ted Spurlark, alias John Spurlark, FBI No. 335266D; Chicago Police Identification No. E-35821; Federal Bureau of Narcotics National List No. 377 is a Negro male 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing 200 pounds, with black hair, brown eyes, medium build, and medium brown complexion. He was born October 11, 1909, at Pickens, Miss.

In case Ill-6982, reported November 12, 1952, charged Nathaniel Spurlark and Troy McClain with violating the narcotic laws. This case was dismissed as to Spurlark on February 19, 1954, due to a change of testimony by former Narcotic Agent Edward Gayles. Spurlark was again charged in case Ill-7055, reported January 4, 1954. Charges were subsequently dismissed by the U.S. attorney's office due to the lack of corroborating testimony. The source of supply for heroin for Spurlark in this case was alleged to have been William DiGiovanni, then a defendant in case Ill-7039.

Spurlark was listed as the source of supply for William Kelly and Julius Johnson case Ill-7187, reported September 29, 1955. The above defendants received their heroin from Noble Thigpen, who was then a "runner" for Spurlark. In case Ill-7872, reported October 2, 1958, defendant Noble Thigpen admitted his source of heroin was Nathaniel Spurlark. Thigpen later testified in case

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1087

Ill-7884, in which Spurlark was ultimately convicted. A report of 1958 alleges that Spurlark's source of heroin was John Foreman (known as John Formosa), of Gary, Ind. No information was ever developed to substantiate this allegation.

In case Iowa-642, reported September 25, 1958, defendant Mannette Maljohn, of Davenport, Iowa, named Spurlark as her source of heroin. She also later testified in the prosecution of Spurlark in case Ill-7884. In December 1958 Spurlark is mentioned as the source of supply for Leon Jones, alias Lightening. Later information indicated that Leon Jones actually took over as Spurlark's principal "runner" and "plant" man after the incarceration of Willard Jones. Willard Jones had taken over this position from Katie B. Lewis, who died in 1956. Leon Jones has never been a defendant.

In case Ill-7879, reported October 5, 1959, defendant Willard Evans named Dennis Green, National List No. 169, as his source of supply. Green's source of heroin was Spurlark. Evans also testified in case Ill-7884 against Green, Spurlark, Arthur Faulkner, and former narcotic agent Edward Gayles. All were convicted.

In case Ill-7910, reported February 8, 1961, the defendant was William Smith, a customer of Spurlark. Smith also appeared and testified against Spurlark in case Ill-7884. Spurlark was also reported on December 2, 1960, as the source of supply in case Ill-7913. Williams was indicted in case Ill-7884, with Spurlark et al., however, he was dismissed, due to the fact that testimony against him might have been prejudicial to other defendants and jeopardize proper presentation of the case. Williams was convicted and sentenced in this case, Ill-7913, and was sentenced to prison.

In case Ill-7918, reported August 31, 1960, the defendants are James A. White and Joel Bridgeforth, this case presently pending. On prior occasions White was known to have obtained heroin from Spurlark, and may have on this violation. White's paramour, Gladys Davis, had been assisting Spurlark distributing heroin from 1958. She also was convicted in case Ill-7884 with Spurlark, et al. In 1959 William Rouzer, presently incarcerated, was obtaining his supply of heroin from Spurlark and did testify in case Ill-7884.

Case Ill-7884 resulted from an indictment returned September 2, 1959, charging Nathaniel Spurlark, Edward Gayles (former narcotic agent), Dennis Green, Arthur Faulkner, Willard Jones, Gladys Davis, Floyd Williams, Percy Johnson, and Cornelius Mack, with conspiring to violate the narcotic laws. Investigation had disclosed that Spurlark was probably the biggest Negro narcotic trafficker in Chicago, Ill. Through Dennis Green, Arthur Faulkner, and Willard Evans, Spurlark controlled the major supply of heroin to Chicago's West Side. Through Noble Thigpen, Willard Jones, Katie B. Lewis, Otis Sears (now deceased), Gladys Davis, Spurlark managed to almost completely monopolize the narcotic supply to the South Side of Chicago, also.

Through legal and operating advice of Edward Gayles, former narcotic agent, and later a defense attorney specializing in narcotic cases, principally on behalf of Spurlark, et al. and customers, through the services also of Attorney Joseph Clayton, now deceased, who also specialized in narcotic cases; and through a planned payoff system to Chicago narcotic officers; Spurlark managed to thrive in the narcotic traffic, virtually untouched, from about 1952 until indicted in 1959. Spurlark was once alleged to receive his narcotics from Harry Tantillo. His more recent source of heroin was from New York, but was not identified.

Spurlark is known to everyone in the Chicago area connected in any way with narcotics. He is alleged to have had interests in the following: A tavern called the Rodeo Club, later changed to Kim's Lounge, 1240 East 47th Street, more recently used by Spurlark as Martell's Toggery, a men's clothing store; the "311 Club" a tavern at 311 East 47th Street, the P. & T. Amusement Co., 342 East 43d Street, renting out jukeboxes and selling records and appliances, used as a "front" for collecting narcotic money from his "runners" and customers; the H. & G. Tavern, 47th and Calumet Street; Martell Products, Inc., 6236 South Cottage Grove Street, manufacturing and distributing cosmetic products; the three-story flat building located at 4131 South Drexel, where Spurlark once lived; a house and lot in Pickens, Miss., valued at $12,000; and part interest in a gambling location at 3600 Block Street, Indiana Harbor, Ind.

On March 8, 1962, Spurlark, Gayles, Green, Faulkner, Jones, and Davis were convicted in case Ill-7884. Spurlark was sentenced May 22, 1962, to 10 years in prison. All six were released on appeal bonds, and the appeal is presently pending. Defendants Johnson, Mack, and Williams had been severed or dismissed.

1088 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

CARLO URBINATI, FBI No. 1065767

Carlo Urbinati, alias Urbanati, alias Joe Bananas, FBI No. 1065767; Chicago Police identification No. C-69016; Federal Bureau of Narcotics national list No. 406, is a white male of Italian descent, 5 feet 11 inches tall, 175 pounds, hazel eyes, black-graying hair, ruddy complexion, medium build. He was born January 22, 1917, at Chicago, Ill.

A report dated April 15, 1953, listed information from New York to the effect that John Tanno was there attempting to obtain a quantity of Amidone, a synthetic drug. It was determined that Tanno was an associate of Joseph Bruno and a John Doe, alias Carl; identified as Carlo Urbinati. In 1954 a special employee reported that Carlo Urbinati was in the narcotic traffic and had Pasquale Clementi as a "runner" for him. Both were alleged to frequent the Derby Lounge, 2356 Mannheim Road, Elmwood Park, Ill. Urbinati was then reported to have a source of supply for heroin in New York. It was later determined that Urbinati was the manager of the Derby Lounge.

In 1958 Urbinati was found to be married to Grace English, sister of Charles (Chuck) and Sam English. Charles is the operator of the Lormar Record Distributing Co., 5954 West Roosevelt Road, and is alleged to be in the gambling and "policy" racket in the Chicago, Ill., area.

In case, Ill-7495, reported at Chicago, Ill., September 8, 1957, Urbinati was reported as a defendant with Thomas Matas and Joseph Bruno, charged with participation in the sale of heroin and conspiracy. Urbinati was convicted on May 20, 1958, and was sentenced to 5 years. He was released January 20, 1962, after which he was to serve a 30-day probation sentence which had been imposed in 1958 for his being an accessory after the fact to the shooting of a narcotic agent by Dominick Argentine. The agent had followed Urbinati to the Triangle Inn Tavern, managed by Argentine, and was shot at that location.

It is alleged in the files that in 1954 three major groups existed on Chicago's West Side in the narcotic traffic, consisting of Carlo Urbinati and Patrick Clementi; Joseph Bruno, Charles La Paglia, and Mike Condic; John Tanno and Joseph Catalana. In 1956 Condic and La Paglia allegedly had a "falling out" with Bruno, after which Bruno became active with Urbinati and Tanno.

Urbinati is presently believed to be assisting his brother-in-law, Charles English, in the "policy" racket.

VICTOR ZINGARELLI, FBI No. 2064998

Victor Zingarelli, alias Victor Alioto, alias Victor Vistarelli, alias Victor Hamilton, FBI No. 2064998; Chicago Police Identification No. D-82389, is a white male of Italian descent, 5 feet 3½ inches tall, weighs 153 pounds, dark complexion, medium build, brown eyes, black hair. He was born October 13, 1915, at Chicago, Ill.

The files of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics at Chicago, Ill., list case Ill-5411, reported January 13, 1941, with defendants Victor Zingarelli, Ben Scardina, and Leo Tavolacci. Zingarelli entered a plea of guilty on May 14, 1941, and was sentenced to 1 year and 1 day in prison. Zingarelli's source of heroin in this case was alleged to have been Benny Morreale.

In case Ill-7022, reported December 30, 1952, Defendants Harold and Beverly Ballard at St. Louis, Mo., were believed to have been obtaining their heroin from Victor Zingarelli, alias Victor Hamilton. In Case Ill-7057, reported March 21, 1953, defendant Richard McGuire named his source of heroin as Victor Zingarelli. McGuire assisted in the initiation of case Ill-7076 against Zingarelli.

In case Ill-7076, reported April 3, 1953, Victor Zingarelli and a female, Lee Hamilton, are listed as defendants. On January 5, 1954, Zingarelli entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to 10 years. The source of supply for Zingarelli was listed in this as Jack Rizzo or Carl Florito. A report of August 20, 1953, relates that Herman Fatchett, of St. Louis, Mo., was obtaining his heroin from Zingarelli.

In October 1958 it was reported that Victor Zingarelli was out of prison and was supplying heroin to Joseph Galassi. Attempts were made to locate Galassi, but were negative. A narcotics agent talking with Anthony Pisciotta of New York determined that Pisciotta knew Zingarelli from prison. Further attempts were made in Chicago to locate and make contact with Zingarelli; however, these efforts proved to be futile.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLEGAL TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1089

KANSAS CITY

LEONARD AFFRONTI

Aliases: Lonnie, Albert Leonard, Joseph Fradella.

Description: Born May 24, 1898, Canada, 5 feet 7 inches, 155 pounds, brown eyes, grey hair, dark complexion, stout build.

Localities frequented: Resided at 514 Gillis, Kansas City, Mo.; currently incarcerated U.S. Penitentiary, Leavenworth, Kans.

Family background: Married to Billie Leroy; father, Antonio; mother, Antonina Fradella; five sisters, all married, one of them to Tудie Lascuola.

Criminal associates: Mike, Joe, Tудie Lascuola, Joe Olivo, Angelo Nigro, Jack Ancona, Frank Crapisi, all of Kansas City.

Criminal history: FBI No. 189847, Kansas City Police Department No. 66036, numerous arrests since 1919 including, highway robbery, murder, and two convictions Federal narcotic laws; currently serving 20-year sentence (narcotics); possible release in 1968.

Business: None.

Modus operandi: Interstate narcotic trafficker; a killer and strong-arm man for the underworld in the Missouri area.

SAMUEL CARROLLO

1. This subject is the younger brother of Charles Vincent Carrollo who for more than a decade was an important underworld figure in Kansas City, Mo. During the late 1920's and through the 1930's, Charles V. Carrollo was the "collection man" for the local crime syndicate and as a result of his prominence his brother, Sam, was granted certain concessions in the underworld. These gratuities consisted of "pieces" or interests in several syndicate crap games which were prevalent in Kansas City during that era. This lucrative income continued from the date that same attained manhood until Charles V. Carrollo was sentenced to 8 years' imprisonment in 1939 for perjury in connection with an income tax matter. At about the time of this conviction, Charles V. Carrollo fell into disrepute with the syndicate and Sam's interest in the gambling enterprises was terminated.

2. Following this loss of income, Sam began to deal in stolen merchandise, first by engaging as a "fence" for shoplifters and later extending his activities to the point where he was purchasing loot from burglaries in truckload lots.

3. In 1946, Sam Carrollo opened a used car lot on Truman Road in Kansas City, Mo., and used this establishment not only as a front for his fencing activities but also as an outlet for stolen automobiles which he allegedly obtained from a group of Minneapolis, Minn., auto thieves. In 1949, Sam purchased some real estate at 3520 Prospect Avenue in Kansas City, Mo., and moved his used car lot to this location where he continued his activity. By this time, Sam had acquired a wide reputation as a "fence" for stolen merchandise and was "in solid" with a number of "big time" thieves from Oklahoma, Texas, Nebraska, Iowa, and Illinois.

4. A short time later or during the early 1950's, Sam began to deal in heroin which he obtained through his close personal friend, Joe Iacullo, a well-known narcotic trafficker and professional killer of Chicago, Ill. In the beginning, the majority of Sam's narcotic activities were limited to bartering heroin to addict burglars and thieves for stolen merchandise. Later, Sam branched out in the drug traffic to the extent that he was supplying such notorious dealers as Tony Biase of Omaha, Nebr., and Harold "Fats" Wright of Tulsa, Okla., with heroin in wholesale quantities. During the interim, Sam became acquainted with Tony Dichiarante and Arthur Gasparro, associates of Iacullo in the narcotic traffic at Chicago, Ill., and continued to utilize this group as his source of supply throughout his career in the narcotic traffic. Carrollo terminated his narcotic activities when it appeared that "the heat" was on as a result of the arrest of an associate, Jack Roy Clayton of Kansas City, Mo., in September 1958, and has since contented himself with his fencing activities.

5. Throughout the years that Sam Carrollo was engaged in the narcotic traffic, he dealt with a highly select clientele and maintained such secrecy in his operations that not only were law enforcement officers unaware of his activities but he succeeded in keeping this knowledge from the local crime syndicate. This latter accomplishment was a necessity in view of the fact that in 1951 the syndicate forbade any member or associate in the Greater Kansas

1090 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

City area to traffic in narcotics for the reason that such activity brought undue "heat" upon gambling, the organization's most lucrative producer of income.

6. The subject resides with his wife and adopted son in the second floor apartment of a duplex which he owns at 3930 Saint John Avenue, Kansas City, Mo. Sam's present wife is an Iowa farm girl whom he met while on a pheasant hunting trip. This marriage, according to acquaintances, occurred a year or so after Sam was divorced from his first wife in 1949.

Personal description. Samuel Carrollo, FBI No. 3018274, Kansas City Police Department No. 33154. Subject is a white male, Italian descent, born at Kansas City, Mo., on August 21, 1914, height 5 feet 9 inches, weight 170 pounds, black hair, complexion dark, and build stocky.

ROBERT GARVER COX

1. The subject, Robert Garver Cox, was born and reared at Kansas City, Mo. He began his crime career at an early age and on March 31, 1939, was sentenced to 5 years in the Missouri State Penitentiary for robbery, attempted escape, and attempted sodomy. Shortly after his release on these charges, Cox married Marie Parker, a widely known shoplifter who was convicted for violation of the narcotic laws in 1929. During a portion of World War II, Cox served in the U.S. Army and upon his return from the service, he and Marie "fleeced" a wealthy Kansas City businessman out of a considerable sum of money. With this money, they purchased a $42,500 duplex at 2813 Meyer Boulevard, at Kansas City, Mo. Sometime later Cox became infatuated with a young prostitute, Darlene Joyce Debauch, and after several estrangements, divorced his wife and married Darlene.

2. For the next several years, Cox spent considerable time away from Kansas City, while his wife plied her trade in houses of prostitution at Omaha, Nebr., Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Hot Springs, Ark. During this time, Cox was closely associated with a number of widely known thieves including such notorious characters as Ray Wilson, Frank Ellsworth, and Charles J. Ellsworth of Omaha, Nebr. Also listed as associates in Cox's police records are Samuel Carrollo, Charles Caccioppo, James and Dave Bonadonna, all of Kansas City, Mo. While residing elsewhere, Cox is alleged to have made a number of trips to Kansas City to negotiate with Sam Carrollo for the disposition of loot obtained in out-of-town burglaries and to obtain narcotics for friends and acquaintances who were addicted to the use of drugs.

3. During the spring of 1958, Darlene and Robert Cox moved to Kansas City, Mo., where they purchased the furnishings and leased the commercial hotel at 1104 Broadway Avenue. The Coxes then began fencing and disposing of stolen merchandise on a sizable scale and within a relatively short time were well established in this business. A few months later, after their arrival in Kansas City, the Coxes purchased a 3-bedroom ranch-style bungalow at 11201 Herick Avenue in nearby Hickman Mills, Mo., and for a period of time appeared to prosper. However, on September 14, 1959, Cox was arrested for the interstate transportation of stolen property and on April 1, 1960, was sentenced by the U.S. district court to 10 years' imprisonment.

4. Criminal record: Robert G. Cox has a previous record of 47 arrests dating to November 23, 1938, on such charges as robbery, holdup, burglary, possession of stolen merchandise, receiving and concealing stolen property, shoplifting, possession of burglary tools, operating bawdy house, and interstate transportation of stolen property with three felony convictions as follows: March 31, 1939, 5 years, Missouri State Penitentiary, for robbery, attempted escape, and attempted sodomy; 1951, 3 years in Wisconsin State Prison for receiving and concealing stolen property; April 1, 1960, sentenced to 10 years by the U.S. district court, Kansas City, Mo., for interstate transportation of stolen property.

DOMINICK DiMAGGIO

1. The subject, Dominick DiMaggio, first came to the attention of the Bureau of Narcotics at Kansas City, Mo., on April 8, 1949, when it was determined that he was the source of supply of defendants in our case file Mo-8048. This investigation involved the transportation and distribution of large quantities of quarter-grain morphine sulfate hypodermic tablets, in vials of 20 tablets each, with counterfeit strip stamps attached, and bearing the spurious labels of a highly reputable manufacturer. Subsequent investigations disclosed that the tablets were manufactured in a clandestine laboratory for introduction into the illicit narcotic traffic. Although a strenuous effort was made at that time to obtain sufficient evidence to substantiate a criminal prosecution case against DiMaggio, these endeavors met with negative results.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1091

2. Near the conclusion of the investigation of our case Mo-8048, information was received from the principal defendant that DiMaggio had been strongly admonished by his brother-in-law Charles V. Carrola when the latter learned that the subject was engaged in the narcotic traffic. It is believed that this criticism, together with DiMaggio's indebtedness to Carrola for loans and other gratuities, resulted in his decision to discontinue his narcotic activities.

3. No further rumors were received by the district headquarters office of the Bureau of Narcotics, Kansas City, Mo., that the subject was again engaged in the illicit narcotic traffic until June 1959, when an investigation conducted at Chicago, Ill., disclosed that DiMaggio had in recent years been a heroin customer of the Iacullo-Dichiarente-Gasparro combine in that city. However, the findings failed to disclose that DiMaggio was then engaged in the heroin traffic and an investigation conducted at Kansas City, Mo., at that time was concluded with negative results.

4. DiMaggio resides at 3930 Norledge Avenue, Kansas City, Mo., and for the past several years has been engaged as an independent building contractor.

5. Criminal record: Dominick DiMaggio has a previous record of 26 arrests by the Kansas City Police Department, dating from February 24, 1936, on such charges as liquor violations, holdup of a bank messenger, burglary, and robbery, with three convictions as follows:

Kansas City, Mo., March 12, 1936, 5 months in the county jail for violation of Internal Revenue laws (liquor).

Kansas City, Mo., January 12, 1938, 6 months in the Platte County jail for violation of the Internal Revenue laws (liquor).

Kansas City, Mo., June 10, 1941, 5 years in the Missouri State Penitentiary, Jefferson City, Mo., for robbery, first degree.

6. Personal description: Dominick DiMaggio, alias Joseph Matico, alias Joe Mattio, FBI No. 1062046, Kansas City Police Department No. 23618. Subject is a white male of Italian descent born December 28, 1919, at New York City, N.Y. Height 5 feet 9 inches, weight 195 pounds, brown eyes, brown hair, complexion dark, and build stout.

RALPH GOLDSTEIN

Aliases: None.

Description: White male of Jewish extraction, born at Kansas City, Mo., on September 4, 1905; height 5 feet 5 inches, weight 140 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, complexion ruddy, and build small.

Localities frequented: Resides at apartment 308, Villa Rita Apartments, 420 West 46th Terrace, Kansas City, Mo. Frequents the Warner Plaza Drug Store, 3233 Main Street, and the LaLouisane Restaurant, 3251 Main Street, both in Kansas City, Mo.

Family background: Subject is a bachelor. His mother Jennie and his father Joseph Goldstein are both deceased. A brother Harry Goldstein is also deceased. A sister, Mrs. Mary Hulda Johnson resides at 4816 Campbell Street, Kansas City, Mo.

Criminal associates: Louis Planzer, Barney Gershon, Louis Lavine, and Sam Terino, all of Kansas City, Mo.

Criminal history: Kansas City Police Department No. 83128; no FBI number available. Although the subject is known to have an arrest record dating to 1931, the record of these early arrests together with fingerprints and photographs were removed from the files of the Kansas City Police Department. More recent arrests include gambling, improper vehicle license and traffic with no felony convictions.

Business: For the past 12 years Goldstein has been employed as a part-time clerk at the Warner Plaza Drug Co., a drug sundry store located at 3233 Main Street, Kansas City, Mo.

JOSEPH LASCOULA

Aliases: Joe School, Joe Lascoula, Machinegun Joe.

Description: Born January 1, 1897, Termini, Palermo, Sicily, 5 feet 8 inches, 190 pounds, gray hair, brown eyes.

Localities frequented: Resides 1910 East 72d Street, Kansas City, Mo. Frequents North Side Democratic Club, Bridge Club & Artcraft Store Equipment Co., Kansas City.

Family background: Wife: Pauline; father: Giacomo; mother: Saveria Sansone; brothers: Michael, Philip, Henry, and James.

1092 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal associates: Michael Lascoula (brother), Tudie Lascoula (cousin), Joe Oliver, Carl and Nick Civello, Joe Filardo, all of Kansas City, John Vitale and Anthony Giordano, of St. Louis, and Nick Impastato, of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 467361; Kansas City Police Department No. 9257. Arrests since 1919 include National Prohibition Act, carrying concealed weapon, trafficking in narcotics, and associating with thieves.

Business: With brother, Michael, operates clubs at 121½ East Fifth Street and 4229 Main Street and has interest in Artercraft Store Equipment Co., all in Kansas City, Mo.

Modus operandi: A prominent member of the underworld organization in Kansas City which distributed narcotics in the Midwest. Is respected and feared by the underworld in Kansas City. Has acted as "fence" for stolen jewelry.

MICHAEL LASCOULA

Alias: Mike School.

Description: Born May 19, 1906, Kansas City, Mo., 5 feet 8 inches, 168 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 6744 Montgall Avenue, Kansas City, Mo., frequents the Artercraft Store Equipment Co., Inc., the Fifth Street Drug Store, both of Kansas City.

Family background: Married Clara O. Monsen; father, Giacomo; mother, Saveria Sansone; brothers: Joseph, Phillip, Henry and James.

Criminal associates: Joseph Lascoula (brother), Tudie Lascoula (cousin), Joseph Olivo, Carl and Nicholas Civello, Joseph Filardo, all of Kansas City, Mo.; John Vitale, of St. Louis, Mo.; Nicolo Impastato and James DeSimone, both of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1806821. Kansas City Police Department No. 17588. Record dates from 1929 and includes arrests for gambling, armed robbery, and violation of the narcotics laws.

Business: Operates gambling casino at 121½ East Fifth Street, Kansas City, Mo.; has interest in gambling place called the Bridge Club, owns stock in the Artercraft Store Equipment Co., Inc., Kansas City, Mo.

Modus operandi: A member of the underworld organization for distribution of narcotics throughout the Midwest with sources of supply in New York City, N.Y., Chicago, Ill., and New Orleans, La.

ANTHONY F. MARCELLA

1. Anthony Frank Marcella was born at Kansas City, Mo., on December 29, 1904, the son of Mary and Rocco John Marcella. He attended public schools in Kansas City, Mo., and attained manhood during the prohibition era. He then entered into the bootlegging business and for a period of approximately 25 years was connected with the liquor business, both legally and illegally. During the greater part of this period, Marcella's principal business was either the transportation, or the supplying to runners, of liquor destined for the neighboring dry States of Oklahoma and Kansas. However, the subsequent legalization of liquor in these States terminated the lucrative trade that Marcella had established in these areas.

2. In the spring of 1954, information was first received that Marcella was engaged in the illicit narcotic traffic. This change of occupation for this veteran bootlegger was obviously due to two reasons. First, the loss of income resulting from the repeal of prohibition in the State of Kansas, and, secondly, that the local "crime syndicate" had failed to resume their narcotic activities at Kansas City, Mo., following the conviction of several prominent members in 1943. In the years that followed, several investigations were conducted by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics at Kansas City, Mo., relative to Marcella's activities but in each instance the subject proved very elusive. Although he maintained a residence at 400 East 70th Terrace at Kansas City, Mo., from September 1956 until the fall of 1958, he was observed only on occasions in that city. During this period, it was rumored that Marcella had been seen in Fort Worth and Dallas, Tex.; Reno and Las Vegas, Nev.; Phoenix, Ariz.; and Los Angeles, Calif. Finally in February 1959, agents of district No. 14 determined that Marcella was operating a restaurant and bar equipment company in Los Angeles, Calif., and was residing in a home he had just purchased at nearby Sherman Oaks, Calif. Less than 1 month later while investigation of the subject was in progress, a disgruntled customer of Marcella voluntarily surrendered to the district headquarters office in San Francisco 5 ounces of heroin and 4 ounces of cocaine. Subsequent inquiry revealed that this individual, together with two associates in North Hollywood, Calif., had been purchasing drugs from Marcella in 16-ounce quantities, and that the trio had a disagreement with the subject over a shipment of heroin of inferior quality. Criminal action predicated upon this evidence was filed in the U.S. district court at Los Angeles, Calif., against Marcella and on August 14, 1959, this subject was sentenced to 40 years' imprisonment.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1093

3. Criminal record: Marcella has a previous record of 17 arrests on such charges as violation of the National Prohibition Act, violation of the internal revenue laws, fighting, peace disturbance, common assault, traffic, and narcotics, with two felony convictions as follows: 1929—sentenced to 2 years in the Federal reformatory, Chillicothe, Ohio, for violation of the National Prohibition Act; 1950—sentenced to 2 years in the Federal penitentiary, Leavenworth, Kans., for conspiracy to engage in the wholesale liquor business. August 14, 1959—sentenced to 40 years' imprisonment by the U.S. district court at Los Angeles, Calif., for violation of the narcotic laws.

JOSEPH OLIVO

Aliases: Joe Oliver, Joe Olive.

Description: Born February 14, 1899, Kansas City, Mo., 5 feet 9 inches, 170 pounds, brown eyes, gray hair, medium build, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 3035 North 18th Street, Kansas City, Kans. Frequents the Olympic Stadium, Fifth Street Drug Store, and Nigro Service Station, all Kansas City, Mo.

Family background: Father, Giuseppe; mother, Louise; brother, Stephen; sisters, Mary (Mrs. Peter DiGiovanni), Fannie (widow of James Arnone), and Delia (Mrs. Mario Balistreri) of Santa Clara, Calif.

Criminal associates: Angelo, Otto, and Salvatore Nigro, Michael and Joseph Lascoula, Nicholas and Carl Civello, all of Kansas City, Mo.; John Vitale, Anthony Lopiparo, and Anthony Giordano, of St. Louis; Nicolo Impastato, of Italy.

Criminal history: FBI No. 81060, Kansas City Police Department No. 10971. Record dating from 1921 includes arrests for burglary, robbery, and grand larceny and three narcotic convictions.

Business: Owns a one-fourth interest in the Olympic Stadium, Kansas City, Mo.

Modus operandi: A trusted member of the underworld narcotic distributing organization operating in the Midwest, with sources of supply in New York City and Europe.

KENNETH BRUCE SHEETZ

Aliases: None.

Description: White male, born December 12, 1920, at Camp Lee, Va., height 5 feet 11 inches, weight 190 pounds, brown eyes, brown hair with gray temples, build medium, and complexion fair.

Localities frequented: Last residence address in Kansas City, Mo., was 4501 Michigan Avenue.

Family background: Wife, Katherine, age 43. No information available in the files of the district headquarters office at Kansas City, Mo., as to other members of the subject's family.

Criminal associates: Carl DeJuna, James and Samuel Palma, George and Joseph Harris, Carlton Young, and Robert Pinkerman.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1883546, Kansas City Police Department No. 87508. Criminal record dates to May 5, 1939, and includes arrests for unauthorized use of automobile, possession of burglar tools, burglary, housebreaking, grand larceny, unlawful flight to avoid apprehension, and violation of the Federal narcotic laws, with two felony convictions for burglary.

PATSY VENTOLA

1. During the investigation of the Clayton-Carrolla-Dichiarente combine of Kansas City, Mo., and Chicago, Ill., in 1959, it was disclosed that Samuel Carrollo had, in prior years, supplied heroin to several Kansas Citizens as well as out-of-town clientele. Among these local customers was Patsy Ventola who during the late 1930's and early 1940's was actively engaged in the narcotic traffic at Kansas City, Mo.

2. The subject, Patsy Ventola, first came to the attention of the Bureau of Narcotics on February 22, 1940, when he and his brother, Louis Ventola, were apprehended at Kansas City, Mo., in possession of 13 ounces of heroin and 5½ ounces of morphine hydrochloride. These arrests culminated 3 months of intensive investigation during which 13 1-ounce purchases of heroin were made from three codefendants; namely, John Molinaro, Steno Lamento, and Joseph F. LaSalle, our case file Missouri-7539. The Ventolas were the source of supply for this group and their involvement and apprehension were the result of the surveillance of these customers.

1094 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

3. Subsequent investigation of the principals in the above-mentioned case resulted in the reporting of a conspiracy case on April 10, 1940, which involved these same individuals together with 11 additional defendants, our case file Missouri-7567. On May 28, 1940, Patsy Ventola entered a plea of guilty in the U.S. District Court at Kansas City, Mo., in connection with this case and was sentenced to 2 years' imprisonment. This sentence was later reduced to 1 year and 1 day by the court.

4. No further information was received regarding the narcotic activities of Patsy Ventola until the early part of March 1951 at which time an individual who had been designated a major violator, Bureau of Narcotics National List No. 103, was apprehended and subsequently convicted at Kansas City, Mo. When interrogated concerning narcotics activities, this defendant named two national list violators of Chicago, Ill., as his source of supply and stated that he had recently heard that heroin could be purchased locally from an individual called "Patsy," but that he had never met this person or had any dealings with him. At that time, the defendant furnished the investigating officers with a card bearing the notation "Patsy" and a telephone number. This telephone number checked to a restaurant and cocktail lounge at 608 West Sixth Street Trafficway in Kansas City, Mo., known as Patsy's Chop House and owned by Patsy Ventola.

5. During the early part of 1952, Patsy Ventola closed his restaurant and cocktail lounge and for the next several years operated a package liquor store known as the Stop and Shop Tobacco and Liquor Store at 427 West Sixth Street Trafficway. Later Ventola was employed as an assistant manager of a wholesale necktie firm known as Jack Steinberg Neckwear at 908 Broadway Avenue.

In recent years, Ventola has been gainfully employed at Kansas City, Mo., as a sales representative for a nationally known firm manufacturing coin-operated laundry and drycleaning equipment.

6. Patsy Ventola is related by marriage to a very prominent, wealthy Kansas City family. However, he is said to receive no assistance from his in-laws and his personal income is relatively small. His criminal pursuits have always been of an independent type and he has never been a member of the underworld syndicate at Kansas City, Mo.

Personal description: Patsy Ventola, FBI No. 1948062. Subject is a white male of Italian descent, born May 3, 1910, at Kansas City, Mo., height 5 feet, 5 inches, weight 175, black hair, brown eyes, stout build.

HOUSTONBIAGIO ANGELICO

Aliases: Biaggio Angelico, Blasco Moscato, Big Angelo.

Description: Born May 18, 1907, New York City, 5 feet, 7½ inches, 192 pounds, brown eyes, wears glasses, black-gray hair, balding.

Localities frequented: Resides 3925 Avenue R, Galveston, Tex. Frequents Galveston and Houston, Tex.

Family background: Married, son, Vincent, father, Vincenzo, mother, Theresa.

Criminal associates: Louis Marino, Vitor Maddi, Joseph Lucca, Joseph Civallo, Vincent A. D'Inglanni, all of Texas; Alfonso Attardi, of New York City; and August Simoncini, of Italy (deportee).

Criminal history: FBI No. 541336, Houston Police Department No. 16323. Record dating from 1930 includes arrests for armed robbery, extortion, kidnapping, and conviction for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Operates M. & M. Music Co., 2114 Market Street, Galveston, Tex., in partnership with Louis Marino.

Modus operandi: An influential and feared member of the underworld in the southeast Texas area. Member of a large-scale narcotic trafficking ring which smuggled heroin into the United States and distributed it in Texas and other Southern States.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLEGAL TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1095

LONNIE ROBERT BRYANT

Aliases: Eddie Wilson, Bill Bryant, Slim Bryant.

Description: Born May 24, 1926, in Beaumont, Tex.; Negro; 6 feet; 175 pounds; black hair; maroon eyes; light brown complexion; slender; right little finger amputated.

Localities frequented: Resides: 4805 Hutchins Street and 12519 Safeguard Street, Houston. Sentenced March 8, 1957, to 15 years in Federal prison for violation of narcotic laws.

Criminal associates: Dessara Christopher, Quincy Lee Kennedy, Woodrow Wilson, Joe Wilson, Lillie Mae Benjamin, Staveson Benjamin.

Criminal history: Dates from 1943 and includes prison terms for robbery and mail theft. Sentenced March 8, 1957, to 15 years in Federal prison for violation narcotic laws. Appeal pending in September 1957.

Modus operandi: Wholesales heroin and travels to Nuevo Laredo to obtain the contraband. Maintains organization for distribution.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, Secret Service, Post Office Department. Police Departments of Houston and Beaumont, Tex.

Identification: FBI No. 4006476. Houston Police Department No. 44214.

TRAVIS BURKS

Aliases: None.

Description: Born November 10, 1928, in Franklin, Tex.; 156 pounds; 5 feet 9½ inches; maroon eyes; black hair; medium build.

Localities frequented: Residence: 2415 Pannel Street, Houston, Tex. Makes trips to Mexican border and to eastern cities. Sentenced March 15, 1955, to 6 years in Texas State court for theft.

Criminal associates: Judson and Leona Henderson, Johnnie Gates, Clyde Tillman, Archie and Louise Sample, R. G. Tyson, Billy Richardson.

Criminal history: Includes numerous arrests for investigation and theft, and one conviction in 1952 for violation of Federal narcotic laws. Sentenced March 15, 1955, to 6 years in Texas State court for theft.

Modus operandi: Supplies wholesalers with heroin and marihuana which he obtains from sources of supply on Mexican border.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. Houston, Tex. Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 275192A. Houston Police Department No. 43090.

VITO GIORDENELLO

Alias: Vito Giordenello.

Description: Born September 11, 1925, in Hammond, La.; 5 feet 5 inches, 130 pounds; black hair; brown eyes; slight build; medium complexion.

Localities frequented: Residence: 2901 Airline Road, Houston, Tex. Sentenced December 14, 1956, to 10 years for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Criminal associates: Benny Indiviglio and Rose Diaz, New York City; Eugene Howell, Chicago, Ill.; Titus Thomas, Joe S. Aguilar, Anthony P. Kolm, Rodney H. Peevey, Donovan E. Hoge, Frank T. Freeman, Robert C. Adams, Leland E. Smith, Connie Thompson, Joe B. Killian, Daniel and Juanita Mitchell, all in Texas.

Criminal history: Dates from 1941 and includes convictions for violation of Federal narcotic laws. Sentenced to 10 years December 14, 1956, for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Wholesale dealer in marihuana and heroin locally and into interstate traffic. Has heroin sources of supply in New York City and Chicago.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, Police Departments of Houston and Beaumont, Tex. and New Orleans, La.

Identification: FBI No. 3254832. Houston Police Department No. 27631.

JUDSON R. HENDERSON

Aliases: None.

Description: Born August 7, 1919, in Richards, Tex.; 6 feet 1 inch; 150 pounds; black hair, maroon eyes, medium build, brown complexion; Negro.

Localities frequented: Residence, 3104 Clinton Drive, Houston, Tex. Frequent Kopa-Ka-Bana Night Club, 3104 Clinton Drive, Houston, Tex. Makes trips to colored Harlem, New York City.

1096 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal associates: Travis Burks, Andrew Jenkins, Archie Sample, John Calvin Young, Johnnie W. Gates, Elisha Levi Brice, John Edward Smith, Leona Henderson (wife).

Criminal history: Includes arrests for theft and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Wholesale narcotic trafficker with heroin and marihuana sources of supply on Mexican border. Has heroin source of supply in New York City to which area he ships large quantities of marihuana.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, Bureau of Customs, Houston, Tex. Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 478851A. Houston Police Department No. 50757.

QUINCY LEE KENNEDY

Alias: Soldier Boy.

Description: Born February 2, 1920, in Smith County, Tex., 5 feet 7 inches, 181 pounds, black hair, maroon eyes, dark brown complexion, heavy build, Negro.

Localities frequented: Residence, 2111 Rothwell Street, Houston, Tex. Frequenters: Colored wards and waterfront, Houston, Tex.

Criminal associates: Dessara Christopher, Jessie Hargrove, Woodrow Wilson, Lonnie R. Bryant, Marshal Bingham, Dorothy Cooper.

Criminal history: Dates from 1951 and includes arrests for violation of State barbiturate laws and Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Source of supply includes seamen couriers entering the port of Houston. Delivers in wholesale quantities to other traffickers.

Agents with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. Police Department of Houston, Tex.

Identification: FBI No. 904742A. Houston Police Department No. 49511.

ARCHIE SAMPLE

Alias: Buster Sample.

Description: Born March 23, 1916, in Brazoria County, Tex.; 6 foot; 170 pounds; black hair; maroon eyes; dark brown complexion; muscular build; Negro.

Localities frequented: Resides, 3019 Arbor Street, Houston, Tex.; frequents Third and Fifth colored wards, Houston. Visits New York City and other eastern cities.

Criminal associates: Louise Sample (wife), John Calvin Young, Elmer Moore, Hamp Trottie, Horace Murphy, Travis Burks, Elisha Levi Brice, Moses Randle, Thomas Kirby, J. W. Brady.

Criminal history: Dates from 1940 and includes arrests and convictions for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: A large-scale wholesale and interstate narcotic trafficker. On occasions exchanges large quantities of marihuana for heroin from sources of supply in New York City.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, U.S. Bureau of Customs, Houston, Tex., Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 3066807. Houston Police Department No. 48381.

CLYDE TILLMAN

Aliases: Chube, Chubby.

Description: Born February 6, 1918, in Madon, La.; five feet 9 inches; 133 pounds; medium-brown complexion; slender; black kinky hair; maroon eyes, Negro.

Localities frequented: Residence, 30 Artesian Street, Houston, Tex. Frequenters Mexican border points, New York City, and Galveston. Sentenced March 13, 1954 to 7 years for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Criminal associates: John Edward Smith, Edward Price, Judson and Leona Henderson, Travis Burks, Archie and Louise Sample, Lavern Moten, John Calvin Young.

Criminal history: Dates from 1940 and includes arrests for violation of State and Federal narcotic laws. Sentenced March 13, 1954, to 7 years for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Wholesaler of heroin and marihuana. Makes trips to Mexican border and New York City. Has sources of supply for heroin both on Mexican border and in New York City. A source of supply for marihuana in New York City.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1097

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. Police Departments of Houston and Galveston, Tex.

Identification: Federal Bureau of Investigation No. 4013744, Houston Police Department No. 20230, Galveston Police Department No. 13371.

DALLAS

NICK CASCIO, FBI No. 692074

Nick Cascio, Federal Bureau of Investigation No. 692074, Dallas Police Department No. 11976, is a white male of Italian descent. He was born in Shreveport, La., on April 28, 1913. He is 5 feet 11½ inches tall, weighs 217 pounds, has receding brown hair, hazel eyes, and fair complexion. Cascio is last reported to be residing in Euless, Tex., and reportedly owns and operates a used car dealership in the Dallas area.

Cascio has an extensive criminal record dating from 1933 which includes arrests for theft, burglary, receiving and concealing stolen merchandise, threats, violation of the Federal Explosive Act, narcotic violations, robbery, and possession of burglary tools.

Although never prosecuted for violation of the Federal narcotics laws, Cascio has been a close associate of prominent narcotic violators in the Dallas area. During 1951, 1952, 1953, Cascio was associated with Aubrey Aeby (NL No. 2A) of Dallas who was his principal source for narcotics. After Aeby's arrest and imprisonment, Cascio became a principal dealer for John E. Miller. Cascio is said to have discontinued dealing in narcotics when Miller was convicted in 1955, except for a few occasions when he would purchase large quantities of tax-paid narcotic drugs which had been burglarized and resell them for a quick and sizable profit.

Listed among Cascio's criminal associates are Leroy Pannell, John Williard Thompson, of Dallas, Tex., and Angelo T. Casten, of Alamogordo, N. Mex.

ANGELO CASTEN

Alias: Angelo Casten.

Description: Born January 15, 1919, in Dallas, Tex.; 167 pounds; 6 feet one-half inch; brown eyes; dark brown hair; dark complexion; medium build.

Localities frequented: Resides 1114 North Clinton, Dallas, Tex. Frequents Irving, Tex., a suburb of Dallas.

Criminal associates: Jettie Bass, Nick Cascio, R. D. Matthews, Sammy Sloan. Criminal history: Includes arrests for theft and burglary, and theft of interstate shipment; also a conviction for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Maintains sources of supply out of the State to supply wholesale organization for narcotic distribution within the State.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. Federal Bureau of Investigation. Police departments of: Houston, Tex., San Antonio, Tex., Oklahoma City, Okla.

Identification: FBI No. 1265707. Dallas Police Department No. 16184.

FRANK CELLI, FBI No. 1054852

Frank Celli, FBI No. 1054852, Fort Worth Police Department No. 13669, was born in Galveston, Tex., on August 28, 1917. He is a white male, 5 feet 5¼ inches tall, weighs 164 pounds, has medium-dark chestnut hair, hazel eyes and medium complexion. He currently resides and operates a liquor store in Fort Worth.

Approximately 20 years ago, Celli was associated with important heroin traffickers in the Galveston area. In 1936, he was defendant in Tex-2556 and later in 1936, was a defendant in Tex-8911. There has been no information or evidence that Celli has been active in the narcotic traffic during the past 15 or 20 years.

Frank Celli's criminal record shows arrests for armed robbery in 1936 and again in 1943. He is known to have been an associate of Nick Cascio and Angelo Casten.

1098 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICSJOSEPH F. CIVELLO

Alias: Joe Civillo.

Description: Born February 3, 1902, Port Allen, La.; 5 feet 11 inches, 163 pounds, blue eyes, gray hair, wears glasses, slender build.

Localities frequented: Resides 5311 Denton Drive, Dallas, Tex. Frequents Civello's Fine Foods, Dallas, and makes trips to New York City.

Family background: Wife, Mary; father, Joseph; mother, Catherine; brother, Charles; sisters, Mrs. Frances Musso, Mrs. Anna Cangelosi, Mrs. Phyllis Ginestra, Mrs. Margaret Polito.

Criminal associates: Rocco and Peter Pellegrino of New York City, Frank Torticelli, Biagio Angelica, Joe Ianni and Joe Glaviano of Texas, Nicholas Impastato (deportee), Joseph Filadro and Joseph DeLuca, of Kansas City, Mo.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1222605; Dallas Police Department No. 7265. Record dating from 1928 includes conviction for Federal narcotic law violation and conspiracy to obstruct justice (for which sentenced (1960) to 5 years).

Business: Operates Civello's Fine Foods & Liquor, 4236 Oak Lawn Avenue, Dallas, Tex.

Modus operandi: Attended the 1957 Apalachin Mafia meeting as the leader from the Dallas area. Controls all rackets in Dallas and vicinity.

JOHN WILLARD THOMPSON

Alias: John Willard Thompson.

Description: Born May 15, 1915, in Ellis County, Tex.; 160 pounds; 5 feet 8½ inches; brown eyes; black hair; medium build; medium complexion.

Localities frequented: Residence: 3001 Harvey Street, Dallas, Tex. Frequents Austin Cafe and Burt's Place on Singleton Boulevard; Abe's Industrial Garage, 1821 Industrial Boulevard; all in Dallas, Tex.

Criminal associates: Glenn Wilfred, Glen Roach, R. D. Matthews, Aubrey Aeby.

Criminal history: Dates from 1932 and includes arrests for burglary, auto theft, theft of interstate shipment and violation of State and Federal narcotic laws. Sentenced May 11, 1953, to 8 years for violation Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Wholesales narcotics locally in Dallas and also into interstate traffic.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, Federal Bureau of Investigation, police departments of Dallas, Sherman, Houston, Greenville, Waxahachie, Austin, and Tyler, Tex.

Identification: FBI No. 1076157; Dallas Police Department No. 10415.

ST. LOUISANTHONY GIARDANO

Aliases: Tony, Anthony Giordano, Tony G.

Description: Born June 24, 1914, St. Louis, Mo.; 5 feet 8½ inches; 182 pounds; black hair; blue eyes; medium build; dark complexion; tattoo on right arm.

Localities frequented: Resides at 6901 Roland Boulevard, St. Louis County, Mo.

Family background: Wife, Catherine; father, Vincent; mother, Mary; brothers, Joseph and Sam; sisters, Pearl Tocco, Josephine Trupiana, all of St. Louis, Mo., Phyllis Fontana, another sister of Detroit, Mich.

Criminal associates: John J. Vitale, Anthony Lopiparo, Rocco Vitale, Ralph Caleca, Anthony Rizzo, Marvin Paul Michaels, Isadore Londe, and Anthony Giammanco, all of St. Louis, Mo.; Sam Vitale, New Orleans, La.; and Ralph Quasarano, Detroit, Mich.; Frank Coppola of Sicily.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1624141, St. Louis Police Department No. 43407, dates back to 1938, and includes arrests for carrying concealed weapon, robbery, holdup, income tax evasion, and counterfeit tax stamps; sentenced to 4 years imprisonment on the latter charge on September 28, 1956.

Business: Anthony Novelty Co., 3401 Kienlen, St. Louis County; Anthony Discount Co., same address; Greene Fluorspar Mining Co., Elizabethtown, Ill.; Twin-City Distributing Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Modus operandi: One of the trusted members of the St. Louis Mafia with associates in New Orleans, La.; Detroit, Mich.; and Sicily.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1099

ANTHONY JOSEPH LOPIPARO

Aliases: Tony Lopiparo, "Tony the Pip."

Description: Born January 19, 1914, St. Louis, Mo. 5 feet 11 inches, 190 pounds, muscular build, brown hair, graying, bald in front, brown eyes, prominent round nose, bushy eyebrows.

Localities frequented: Resides 5881 Highland, St. Louis, Mo., frequents Anthony Novelty & Vending Co., Anthony Discount Co., both at 3401 Kienlen, St. Louis County, Greene Fluorspar Mining Co., of Elizabethtown, Ill.

Family background: Married Rose Marie Migini, January 21, 1947, and divorced September 21, 1949, Lopiparo adopted two children of Rose, James Anthony and Jovena; married Bonnie D. Cardwell, October 21, 1949, Yuma, Ariz., divorced second wife and remarried first wife, Rose; father, Joseph, and mother, Catherine, both deceased; brothers, Nick and Sam; sisters, Mary Dailey and Mamie Dailey; in addition to two adopted children Lopiparo has two sons, Joseph, 4, and Sam, 5 months.

Criminal associates: John J. Vitale, St. Louis, Vincent Todaro of Virginia, Joseph LoPiccolo of New York, Anthony Giardano, Ralph Caleca and Isadore Londe, of St. Louis.

Criminal history: FBI No. 710969, St. Louis Police Department No. 32943, has a lengthy arrest record dating back to 1931, and has served sentences for criminal contempt, and evasion of income tax.

Business: Associated with John Vitale and Anthony Giardano in the Anthony Novelty & Vending Co., and the Anthony Discount Co., St. Louis; has an interest in the Greene Fluorspar Mining Co., Elizabethtown, Ill.

Modus operandi: An important member of the St. Louis Mafia.

JOHN JOSEPH VITALE

Aliases: Johnny V., John Vitali.

Description: Born May 17, 1909, in St. Louis, Mo. 5 feet 11 inches, 208 pounds, black-gray hair, balding, brown eyes, heavy build, ruddy complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides: 3725 Avondale Avenue, Arbor Terrace, Mo. Frequents: Anthony Novelty Co., 3401 Kienlen Avenue, Pine Lawn, Mo.

Criminal associates: Joe Palazzolo, Isador Londe, Joseph Costello, Joe Licavoli, Jack Joseph, Gregory Moore, Anthony, Joseph and Sam Giardano, Tony Lopiparo, Joe and Mike Lascoula, Joe Olivero, Nicolo Impastato, Sam Vitale.

Criminal history: Dates from 1920 and includes arrests for carrying concealed weapon, forgery, robbery with firearms, receiving stolen property, murder, and violation of Federal narcotics laws.

Modus operandi: A member of the Mafia narcotic trafficking organization in the Midwest with sources of supply for pure heroin in New York City and through other ports in the United States. Finances large scale illicit narcotic transactions.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. Police Department of St. Louis, and Clayton, Mo.

Identification: FBI No. 793259; St. Louis Police Department No. 36177.

OMAHA

ANTHONY JOSEPH BIASE

Aliases: Tony Biase, Tony DiBiase.

Description: Born September 6, 1908, Omaha, Nebr., 5 feet 3 inches, 160 pounds, heavy build, black-gray hair, waves and thinning in front, hazel eyes, dark complexion, 3 inch diagonal scar on right cheek.

Localities frequented: Resides at 2207 Mason Street, Omaha, Nebr., frequents Owl Smoke Shop, 610 South 16th Street, Omaha, Nebr.

Family background: Marital status unknown, is a brother of Sam, Benny, and Louis, of Omaha, Nebr.

Criminal associates: Sam, Louis, and Benny (brothers), Frank Ellsworth, Victor Bonnaci, John Trovato, Lawrence Boylan, Tony Scavio, Benny Barone, all of Omaha, Nebr., Samuel Carrollo, Kansas City, Mo., Anthony Marcella, Rosario Lantieri, California.

1100 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal history: FBI No. 36521, Omaha Police Department No. 9839, has been arrested for burglary, theft, and numerous times for bookmaking.

Business: Partner in Owl Smoke Shop, 610 South 16th Street, Omaha, Nebr.

Modus operandi: Interstate narcotic trafficker, bookmaker and gambler and an influential member of the Mafia at Omaha, Nebr.

LOUIS BIASE

Aliases: Louie Biase, Louis DiBiase.

Description: Born February 1, 1916, Omaha, Nebr.; 5 feet 4 inches, 180 pounds, brown eyes, black wavy hair, dark complexion, and stout build.

Localities frequented: No permanent address. Travels throughout the United States attending horseraces at the various tracks. Frequents the Owl Smoke Shop and the Newhall Hotel when in Omaha, Nebr.

Family history: Marital status unknown. Subject is a brother of Tony, Sam, and Benny Biase of Omaha, Nebr.

Criminal associates: Tony, Sam, and Benny Biase (brothers), John Travato, Victor Bonnaci, Tony Scavio, Benny Barone and Frank Ellsworth, all of Omaha, Nebr.; Samuel Carrollo, Kansas City, Mo.; Louis Ventola, Las Vegas, Nev.; Anthony F. Marcella and Rosario Lantieri of California.

Criminal history: FBI No. 1298537, Omaha Police Department No. 16921. Dates from 1932 and includes robbery, possession of burglar tools, resisting arrest, and operation of bunco game.

Business: Not engaged in legitimate business.

Modus operandi: Interstate narcotic trafficker, bookmaker, and horserace enthusiast. A member of the Mafia organization at Omaha, Nebr.

SAMUEL BIASE

Alias: Sam Biase.

Description: Born November 6, 1913, Omaha, Nebr., 5 feet 6½ inches, 150 pounds, brown eyes, brown wavy hair, and dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides at 1014 South 27th Street, Omaha, Nebr., frequents Owl Smoke Shop and Newhall Hotel, Omaha, Nebr.

Family background: Married. Is a brother of Anthony, Benny, and Louis Biase, of Omaha, Nebr.

Criminal associates: Anthony, Benny, and Louis Biase (brothers); John Travato, Tony Scavio, Victor Bonnaci, Benny Barone, and Frank Ellsworth, all of Omaha, Nebr.; Samuel Carrollo, Kansas City, Mo.; John B. Trilliegi, Milwaukee, Wis.; Anthony Marcella, and Rosario Lantieri, of California.

Criminal history: FBI No. 157566, Omaha Police Department No. 12338, record reflects 24 arrests dating to 1924 with 2 felony convictions for robbery.

Business: Partner in Owl Smoke Shop, 610 South 16th Street, Omaha, Nebr.

Modus operandi: Interstate narcotic trafficker, bookmaker, and fence; and important member of the Mafia at Omaha, Nebr.

TULSAHAROLD HUGH WRIGHT

1. Harold Hugh Wright first came to the attention of the Bureau of Narcotics in September 1930 when a case involving the sale of sizable quantities of diverted tax-paid drugs was made at Tulsa, Okla., against this subject. Wright subsequently received a 60-day jail sentence in connection with these violations, our case Okla-2633.

2. In December 1943, a criminal case was developed against Wright and an associate, William E. Peck, of Tulsa, Okla. This case was predicated upon the seizure of 14 pounds marihuana from Peck and Wright which was shipped from Carlsbad, N. Mex., to Tulsa, Okla., at the instance of Wright. On February 11, 1954, Wright was sentenced to 2 years' imprisonment on these charges by the U.S. district court, Tulsa, Okla., our case Okla-113-M.

3. In June 1951, an investigation was conducted by the Oklahoma City office of the Bureau of Narcotics relative to the alleged smuggling of narcotics into the Oklahoma State Penitentiary at McAlester, Okla. The major suspects in this investigation were Harold H. Wright and his brother, Glen Roy Wright who was then an inmate of the institution and several convict associates. This investigation resulted in the seizure of a quantity of narcotics within the prison but the circumstances were such that it was impossible to definitely establish that Glen Roy Wright was the owner of the drugs or that the contraband had been smuggled into the institution by Harold Wright.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1101

4. At the time of the above-mentioned investigation, Harold H. Wright was one of the major suspects in the burglaries of several wholesale drug companies in Oklahoma, Iowa, and South Dakota in which large quantities of tax-paid drugs were stolen. Wright is believed to have actively participated in two or more of these robberies and is known to have been the recipient of a portion of the narcotics from all of these burglaries.

5. In September 1954, a criminal case was developed by the Oklahoma State Narcotic Bureau against James William Fletcher of Oklahoma City, Okla. In this investigation, Fletcher sold quantities of heroin to a special employee. Following his arrest in this case, Fletcher admitted that his source of supply was Harold H. Wright, and that he had been purchasing heroin from this subject at the rate of $450 per ounce.

6. During the investigation of the Clayton-Carrolla-Dichiarente combine of Kansas City, Mo., and Chicago, Ill., in 1959, it was ascertained that Harold H. Wright's source of supply for heroin in recent years had been Samuel Carrolla of Kansas City, Mo. It was also disclosed that on occasions Wright had purchased sizable quantities of diverted tax-paid drugs from Anthony Biase of Omaha, Nebr.

7. Throughout the past 35 years, Harold Wright's criminal activities have been very diversified. He began his career at Tulsa, Okla. during the late 1920's as a pool and card "hustler" but soon extended these activities to narcotics and the fencing of stolen merchandise for shoplifters and petty thieves. As the years passed, Wright continued these pursuits and increased his status in the underworld to such an extent that he became known as a professional gambler and fence for big-time thieves. During the scarcity of automobiles in World War II, Wright associated himself with a young and very able mechanic, John Gibson Dillon, in the garage business in Tulsa, Okla. This garage was utilized for the transfer of motors, repainting, and changing of motor and serial numbers of stolen automobiles which were bought and disposed of by Wright and his partner. This partner is the John Gibson Dillon who is presently a fugitive in our case Okla-4229 and is now on the Federal Bureau of Investigation's list of 10 most wanted criminals.

8. In the late 1940's, Wright began a new phase of his career by establishing himself in the liquor business. Within a relatively short time, Wright acquired the reputation of being a large-scale bootlegger and continued this activity up until the repeal of prohibition in the State of Oklahoma on April 9, 1959.

9. Wright is believed to have discontinued his narcotic activities during the investigation of the Clayton-Carrolla-Dichiarente combine in 1959 when he became aware that he, too, was under scrutiny by the Bureau of Narcotics. Since that time, Wright has apparently contented himself with his fencing activities and the playing of balk-line billiards at which he is considered a semi-professional.

Personal description: Harold Hugh Wright, alias "Fats," alias "Killer," FBI No. 766759—Tulsa Police Department No. 7189. Subject is a white male, born at Malvern, Ark., on June 26, 1907, height 5 feet 7 inches, weight 185 pounds, brown eyes, gray-brown hair, complexion fair, and build stocky.

PART II. NAMES MENTIONED IN REPORT AND NOT LISTED ON CHART

AUREY AEBY

Alias: Big Abe.

Description: Born January 14, 1908, in Royce City, Tex., 5 feet 11 inches, 185 pounds, brown hair, blue eyes, medium build, sallow complexion.

Localities frequented: Residence, 2615 Ledbetter Drive, Dallas, Tex. Sentenced September 18, 1952, to 20 years for violation of Federal narcotic laws. Frequented Abe's Industrial Garage (owner), 1821 Industrial Boulevard, Dallas, Tex.

Criminal associates: Norene Aeby (wife), Nell Aeby (brother), Johnny Miller, John Willard Thompson.

1102 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal history: Dates from 1925 and includes arrests for theft, burglary, robbery, assaulting a Federal officer, and violation of State and Federal narcotic laws. Sentenced September 18, 1952, to 20 years for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Wholesaler of heroin in large quantities in the Midwest with sources of supply for pure heroin in Chicago and eastern cities. Maintains organization for distribution of heroin. A fence for stolen property.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. Dallas (Tex.) Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 50226. Dallas Police Department No. 5114.

MICHAEL PETER ALTIMARI

Aliases: Mike; Big Mike.

Description: Born November 1, 1913, New York City, 5 feet 5½ inches, 215 pounds, heavy build, blue eyes, black-gray receding hair, cleft in chin, double chin, fair complexion.

Localities frequented: Resided at 186 Brinsmade Avenue, Bronx, N.Y., and frequented the Fountain Blue Bar, Playhouse Bar, Opera Inn, and Ten Pin Bar, all in New York City. Currently (1960) incarcerated.

Family background: Single; father, Frank; mother, Mary; both parents deceased; brothers, John, Joseph, Ernest, and Paul.

Criminal associates: Nicholas Bonina, Nicholas Martello, Anthony Marcella, Alfred Sacco, Victor Panica, Frank Borelli, Anthony Pisciotta, Joseph Valachi and Anthony Carminati.

Criminal history: FBI No. 2603611 New York Police Department No. B-202795. Record dating from 1937 includes arrests for murder, gambling, and three convictions for Federal narcotic law violation. Sentenced to 12 years for Federal narcotic violation.

Business: No legitimate employment.

Modus operandi: A trusted Mafioso who has engaged in large-scale local and interstate narcotic trafficking all of his adult life.

FRANKLIN CARIOSCIA

Alias: Frank.

Description: Born July 22, 1938, at Chicago, Ill. White male of Italian extraction, 5 feet 8 inches tall, 170 pounds, brown eyes, brown hair, medium build, sallow complexion. Operates Star Lite Tavern, 1101 South Loomis, Chicago, Ill.

Localities frequented: Residence, 1813 North 38th Street, Stone Park, Ill.; 851 South Racine Street (parent's residence); Star Lite Tavern, 1101 South Loomis; Burgundy Lounge, 2235 North Clark Street; Andy's Grill, 2250 North Clark Street; all above at Chicago, Ill.

Criminal associates: Michael Carioscia (brother now incarcerated); Michael De Maro; Joseph Battiato; Arthur Faulkner; Theodore De Rose; Anthony Passini.

Criminal history: Carioscia has only two prior arrests for investigation dated in 1961, one shows he was released, the other shows no disposition. Franklin Carioscia was arrested at Chicago, Ill. by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics on October 29, 1963, for violation of the Federal narcotic laws, case Ill-8273. He has been indicted as a coconspirator at Chicago, Ill., with 21 other defendants charged under a composite case file, Ill-8084. This case now pending.

Modus operandi: It appears that Franklin Carioscia took over the narcotic business left after his brother Michael was incarcerated. Franklin operates the Star Lite Lounge, 1101 South Loomis. He formerly supplied heroin to Arthur Faulkner. In the pending case, an informant would call Franklin at the tavern, meet him and pay for prior deliveries of heroin, order more narcotics at the same time. Franklin would then drive to the area of North Clark and Belden, meet with Michael De Maro or his half brother, Joseph Battiato, or both, pay them the money and obtain more narcotics, which Franklin would then deliver that same night to the informant back in the area of the Star Lite Lounge.

Agencies with information: Chicago Police Department; Federal Bureau of Narcotics, Chicago, Ill.

Identification: FBI No. 9-380-E.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1103

MICHAEL CARIOSCIA

Aliases: Mickey; M. Luna.

Description: Born March 18, 1933, at Chicago, Ill. White male, 6 feet, 178 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, slender build, ruddy complexion.

Localities frequented: Presently incarcerated. Formerly lived at 851 South Racine Street, Chicago, Ill. Ashland and Taylor Streets, Chicago, Ill. North Avenue Steak House, 8500 West North Avenue, Melrose Park, Ill.

Criminal associates: William Wright, Michael De Maro, Franklin Carioscia (brother), Armando Pennachio, Ben Pennachio, Virge Bolden, Arthur Faulkner.

Criminal history: Arrested December 23, 1950, on charge of armed robbery, three counts. Sentenced July 19, 1951, to 2 years to life; paroled November 17, 1954. Carioscia was arrested on September 6, 1960, at Chicago, Ill., by Federal narcotic agents and was charged in case Ill-7924 with sale and conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws. Codefendants in this case were Armando Pennachio, Ben Pennachio, and William Wright. Carioscia entered a guilty plea in the above case and on October 27, 1961, he was sentenced to 5 years in Federal prison. Carioscia is presently charged as a defendant in case Ill-8084 with 21 other defendants. This case now pending.

Modus operandi: Michael Carioscia and Armando Pennachio obtained their heroin from William Wright. They frequently met Wright at the North Avenue Steak House, and on one known occasion Carioscia accompanied Wright to New York, purportedly for heroin. Ben Pennachio assisted his brother, Armando, in the last purchase of heroin made from this group; however, Ben was acquitted in a jury trial at Chicago, Ill. This group furnished heroin to Negro violators at Chicago, Ill.; namely, Arthur Faulkner, and Virge Bolden.

Agencies with information: Chicago Police Department; Federal Bureau of Narcotics at Chicago, Ill.

Identification: FBI No. 622-871-A; Chicago Police No. E-48814.

ANTHONY CASTALDI

Aliases: Tony Higgins, T. H.

Description: Born January 27, 1913, in New York City, 5 feet 10 inches, 219 pounds, light-brown hair, brown eyes, stocky, olive complexion.

Localities frequented: Residence, 15 Princeton Avenue, Yonkers, N.Y. Frequents Jennie's Restaurant, 2036 Second Avenue, Mickey Walker's Restaurant, 1654 Broadway, both in New York City.

Criminal associates: Anthony Ciccone (Tony Moon) is his brother-in-law. Anthony Pinto is his front man. He is a Mafia leader and knows every important racketeer in the United States.

Criminal history: Includes arrests for assault, robbery, extortion, and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: One of the top Mafia leaders and narcotic traffickers in the United States. A member of the 107th Street organization. A wholesaler of heroin into local and interstate traffic with a distributing organization.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, New York City Police Department.

Identification: Federal Bureau of Investigation No. 546748, New York City Police Department No. B-101443.

FRANK PHILLIP CODUTO (DECEASED)

Aliases: Shorty.

Description: Born October 14, 1907, at Hibbing, Minn. He was a white male, of Italian extraction, 5 feet 1 inch tall, 120 pounds, olive complexion, brown thinning hair, brown eyes, medium build, was married to Antoinette at 3056 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill. Murdered at Chicago on May 14, 1954, by unknown assailants.

Criminal associates: Anthony Schullo, Joseph Lucullo, Anthony Sperna, Roy Pinna, Anthony Ponzi, Anthony Pape (also murdered), Adeline Lafrano.

Criminal history: Dated back to January 31, 1925, when sentenced to 1 year for larceny at Chicago, Ill. On November 17, 1928, sentenced to 1 to 14 years for assault to rob, paroled June 18, 1932; returned September 23, 1935, for parole violation; reparaed November 26, 1935. Discharged January 19, 1937. Numerous arrests for investigation, including possession of goods stolen from interstate shipment. Arrested March 16, 1954, in case Ill-7117 charged with violation of Federal narcotic laws along with those persons listed above as "Criminal associates." Coduto was murdered May 14, 1954, while the above case was pending, as was Anthony Pape, also a defendant in this same case.

1104 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Agencies with information: Chicago Police Department, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Federal Bureau of Narcotics; at Chicago, Ill.

Identification: Federal Bureau of Investigation No. 591-559; Chicago Police No. D-87599.

OPAL (PAT) COLE

Aliases: Opal Mae Mason; Opal Jones, Opal May Battle, Opal Robinson, Theopal Johnson; Patricia Opal Smith; Patricia Johnson, Pat Cole.

Description: Born April 13, 1928, at Oklahoma City, Okla., Negro female, five feet 5 inches tall, 200 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, medium brown complexion, heavy build. Gives occupation as a beautician.

Localities frequented: Residence, 310 East 90th Place, Chicago, Ill.; Impala Lounge, 71st and Michigan, Chicago, Ill.; Clark and Belden, Chicago, Ill.

Criminal associates: Charles Cole (husband, separated), Chester Jones, LaFauncie Johnson, Maceo Thomas, Dolores Watkins, Michael DeMaro, Joseph Battiato, Theodore DeRose, William Wright, Americo DePietto, and numerous other principal Negro narcotic traffickers in the Chicago, Ill. area.

Criminal history: Record dates back to 1942 with numerous arrests by Oklahoma Police for disorderly conduct, assault, keeping house of ill fame (Los Angeles, Calif.); prostitution and sodomy (Sheriff's Office, Tacoma, Wash.). Her first penitentiary sentence appears July 11, 1956, 1 year and 1 day at Chicago, Ill., for obtaining money by means of confidence game. Arrested December 12, 1961, by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics at Chicago, Ill., for sale of heroin, case Ill.-8059. This case was subsequently developed into a conspiracy indictment and combined into case Ill.-8084 and she is now a defendant with 21 other persons. This latter case pending.

Modus operandi: Obtained heroin from William Wright, and Michael DeMaro both in Chicago and New York and sold same to various Negro traffickers in Chicago. Was apparently introduced to DePietto, DeMaro, and Wright through her husband Charles Cole. Opal Cole is known to have dealt in amounts as high as 5 kilograms of heroin at one time; and in sums of money of amounts up to $100,000.

Agencies with information: Oklahoma City (Okla.) Police Department; Los Angeles (Calif.) Police Department; sheriff's office, Tacoma, Wash.; Chicago, (Ill.) Police Department; Federal Bureau of Narcotics at Chicago, Ill.

Identification: FBI No. 2-823-954; Chicago Police No. E-21038; Oklahoma City Police No. 39671.

GLADYS DAVIS

Aliases: Gladys Dyse; Gladys White.

Description: Born November 24, 1930, at Meridian Miss. Negro female, 5 feet 5 inches tall, 150 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, medium brown complexion, plump build. Last known to be living with James A. White.

Localities frequented: Residence, last known address, 4828 South Forestville, Chicago, Ill.

Criminal associates: James A. White, Nathaniel Spurlark, Jesse Maroy, Jeremiah Pullings, NL No. 322, Mona Evans, Dolores Keeby, William Rouzer, Florine Johnson, Edward Gayles, Frank Sasser, Loretta Sasser, and numerous other narcotic traffickers in the Chicago, Ill., area.

Criminal history: Convicted May 10, 1955, at Chicago, Ill., for violation of the Federal narcotic law, with codefendant James A. White in case Ill-7241, and sentenced to 2 years. After an unsuccessful appeal, Davis surrendered to the U.S. marshal on February 8, 1956, to serve her sentence. She was released on September 3, 1957. She was indicted at Chicago, Ill., on September 2, 1959, for conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws in two cases; Ill-7884 and Ill-7885 with 21 other defendants in all. In a jury trial in case Ill-7885 she was found guilty on March 18, 1961; however, Federal Judge J. Sam Perry subsequently granted her and James White a new trial in this case. The next court date for the above new trial is set for February 3, 1964, but it is doubtful she will be retried in that she was convicted on May 22, 1962, in the second case, Ill-7884, and was sentenced to 10 years in prison. She is presently appealing the latter conviction and is out on bond.

Modus operandi: Prior to her incarceration in 1956 in case Ill-7241, Davis lived with White and assisted him in the narcotic distribution at Chicago, Ill. Their heroin was purchased from Jeremiah Pullings, and they sold to various peddlers in Chicago including Jesse Maroy. After her release from prison in 1957 she appears to have taken up with Mona Evans, of the Pullings' organization; assisting in the delivery of heroin to customers in Detroit, Mich; namely, Victoria Basemore, and Loretta and Frank Sasser. Subsequently, she appeared with the Nathaniel Spurlark group at Chicago, assisting in the distribution of heroin for him to customers, including William Rouzer of Detroit and Noble Thigpen of Chicago. When James White was released in the latter part of 1958, she rejoined him.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1105

Agencies with information: Chicago Police Department; Federal Bureau of Narcotics at Chicago, Ill.

Identification: FBI No. 822-682-B.

MICHAEL DE MARO

Aliases: Mike De Marco, Mike Battiato, Michael De Demaro, Michael De Demarco.

Description: Born May 30, 1915, at Chicago, Ill. White male of Italian extraction, 5 feet 7 inches tall, 190 pounds, black hair (balding), brown eyes, ruddy complexion, heavy build, large stomach.

Localities frequented: Residence, 2300 North Commonwealth Street, Chicago, Ill. Burgundy Lounge, 2335 North Clark Street; Andy's Grill, 2350 North Clark Street; other taverns in the area of Clark and Fullerton, Clark and Belden, and Clark and Diversey.

Criminal associates: William Wright, Americo De Pietto, Anthony Passini, Theodore De Rose, Joseph Battiato, Bill Gold, Chester Jones, Charles Cole, Opal (Pat) Cole, Dolores Watkins, Nolan Mack (deceased), Armando Pennachio, Michael Carioscia, Franklin Carioscia.

Criminal history: Dates back to 1939 and includes sentence of 3 years probation on May 28, 1940, for liquor law violations, case Indiana-N-754. Sentenced at Chicago, Ill., on May 14, 1941, to 14 years for charge of accessory to murder. Sentenced in 1954 to 4 years for uttering counterfeit obligations or securities. Numerous arrests for liquor violations, robbery, passing counterfeit money, confidence game, grand larceny, and transporting false securities in interstate commerce.

De Maro was arrested at Chicago, Ill., on December 12, 1961, for conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws, case Illinois-8084. Presently under indictment at Chicago, Ill., for the above case which has been developed and expanded to now include 21 other codefendants. This case now pending.

Modus operandi: Formerly associated with William Wright and appears to be taking care of Wright's narcotic business since Wright's incarceration. Obtains his narcotics from New York and supplied Charles Cole, Opal (Pat) Cole, Chester Jones, Dolores Watkins, Frank Carioscia, Theodore De Rose, Anthony Passini, and Nolan Mack (now deceased), all of Chicago, Ill. De Maro was assisted by his half brother, Joseph Battiato. De Maro is charged as conspiring in the narcotic traffic with Americo De Pietto and 21 other defendants, case Illinois-8084.

Agencies with information: Chicago Police Department; ATTU at Indianapolis, Ind.; U.S. Secret Service, at Chicago, Ill.; Federal Bureau of Narcotics, at Chicago, Ill.

Identification: FBI No. 1-746-141; Chicago Police No. E-53238.

AMERICO DE PIETTO

Aliases: None known.

Description: Born March 31, 1914, at New York, N.Y. White male of Italian extraction, 5 feet 8 inches tall, 200 pounds, gray hair, brown eyes, stocky build, ruddy complexion.

Localities frequented: Residence, 3001 North Mannheim Road, Leyden Township, Ill. Local racetracks in the Chicago, Ill., area.

Criminal associates: All major local hoodlums in the Chicago, Ill., area. Also, William Wright, Ernest (Rocco) Infelice, Michael De Maro, Opal (Pat) Cole, Charles Cole, Nolan Mack (deceased).

Criminal history: Dates back to 1935. Includes arrests for assault, larceny, flight to avoid prosecution of murder, interstate transportation of stolen goods, armed robbery. Arrested October 30, 1963, at Chicago, Ill., by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, charged in case Illinois-8084 with conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws with 21 other defendants. This case pending.

1106 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Modus operandi: Believed to have been in the narcotic traffic with William Wright, and to have somewhat taken over since Wright's incarceration, as supplier and/or "overseer" of Michael De Maro, et al., organization at Chicago, Ill. Was operating the North Avenue Steak House, 8500 West North Avenue, Melrose Park, Ill. during 1960 when Wright was meeting with and supplying heroin to Armando Pennachio, and Michael Carioscia. The North Avenue Steak House was believed to actually have been owned by Sam Giancana. It has since burned to the ground. De Pietto is suspected of being implicated in several restaurant taverns around Chicago, Ill., that have mysteriously burned down within the past 3 years, and in which it appeared he had some monetary interest.

Agencies with information: FBI at Chicago, Ill., Intelligence Division of the Internal Revenue Service at Chicago, Ill., Intelligence Bureau of the Chicago Police Department, New York Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 1-639-023, Chicago Police Department No. E-41629, New York Police No. B-133486.

JOHN PAUL DISPENSA, FBI No. 3845561

John Paul Dispensa, FBI No. 3845561, Chicago Police Identification No. E-41907, is a white male of Italian descent. He is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, of small build, with gray hair and brown eyes. He was born February 6, 1920, at Chicago, Ill. His last address was an apartment in back of a pizzeria restaurant he and his wife operated at 3224 West 103d Street, Evergreen Park, Ill. Dispensa is now incarcerated.

The FBI record disclosed that Dispensa was sentenced June 12, 1944, to two concurrent 1-year sentences for violation of the alcohol tobacco tax laws, cases Illinois-N-4047 and Illinois-N-4142 and on this same date was sentenced to 2 years concurrent with the above, on a charge of resisting and assault of a Government officer, case Illinois-N-4172. Dispensa was reportedly a codefendant in the above cases with Sam Serritella.

In 1958 Lawrence Lemons, FBI No. 165802, then a defendant, related that he had attended grade school with Serritella, and that he started buying heroin from him in the early 1940's. When Serritella and Chiarelli were convicted in case Illinois-6481, Serritella, before going to prison in March 1951, introduced Lemons to James Russo and John Dispensa, both of whom were to take over the business. In 1953 Lemons went to prison in case Illinois-6760 and upon his release in 1956 he resumed contact with Serritella and Chiarelli and purchased narcotics from them until June 1957, when they were convicted and sentenced in case Illinois-7399.

Prior to the above sentencing and incarceration of Serritella, he introduced Lemons to Armando Piemonte (it was believed Piemonte was not furnishing Serritella with a share of his profits) and Serritella subsequently turned his business over to John Dispensa and his partner, Phillip Vittoria, FBI No. 930-199-B. Dispensa had been convicted with Serritella in 1944 for a liquor law violation. Piemonte was subsequently convicted and is now incarcerated as a result of case Illinois-7565.

In case Illinois-7655, initiated at Chicago, Ill., in 1958, the following information appears. John Dispensa and Phillip Vittoria were in the narcotic traffic at Chicago, Ill., furnishing heroin to Morris Rosenguard, FBI No. 910-066 (operator of a drug store); Lawrence Lemons, and Herman Franklin (now deceased). Dispensa obtained his heroin via a "runner" of his named James V. Chiaro. Dispensa would send Chiaro to New York and there Chiaro would, through prearrangements by Dispensa, obtain half and kilogram amounts of heroin from Nicholas Esposito, FBI No. 723-541-A; Saverio Schifano, FBI No. 2-289-700; and Dominick Gentile, FBI No. 909-875-B.

In the Federal court prosecution of the above case, Docket No. 58-CR-693; Dispensa, Rosenguard, Vittoria, Gentile, Esposito, and Schifano were listed as defendants. Chiaro cooperated and testified for the Government. On February 3, 1960, the New York defendants, Schifano, Esposito, and Gentile all entered pleas of guilty, this was on the 3d day of trial. They were sentenced on March 1, 1960, to 10, 20, and 7 years, respectively. Also on February 3, 1960, the defendants, Dispensa and Rosenguard entered pleas of guilty and were sentenced on March 1, 1960, to 12 and 5 years, respectively. Phillip Vittoria was found guilty by a jury trial on March 1, 1960, and was sentenced March 5, 1960, to 12 years. Vittoria subsequently appealed this conviction and it was affirmed in the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals on December 15, 1960.

Dispensa is presently incarcerated.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1107

NICHOLAS RALPH FOSPOSITO

Alias: Nick.

Description: Born May 10, 1922, at New York City, N.Y. White male of Italian extraction, 5 feet 10 inches tall, 157 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, slender build.

Localities frequented: Residence: Presently incarcerated, formerly lived at 2162 East Second Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y., 112th Street and Second Avenue; 86th and Lexington Streets, New York.

Criminal associates: Saverio (Sam) Schifano, Dominick Gentile, Sam Serri-tella, John Dispensa, Phillip Vittoria.

Criminal history: Convicted in 1951 for violation of the Federal narcotics laws, conspiracy, at New York, case New York-S-8522, and sentenced to 5 years. Paroled March 20, 1954, returned for parole violation July 13, 1955. Discharged April 25, 1957. Arrested November 20, 1958, at New York for conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotics laws, case Illinois-7655, for which he had been indicted at Chicago, Ill. Entered plea of guilty and sentenced March 1, 1960, to 20 years at Chicago, Ill.

Modus operandi: Believed to be the "ringleader" of defendants, Shifano, Gentile, and himself; supplying narcotics to John Dispensa, et al., at Chicago, Ill.

Agencies with information: New York Police Department, Federal Bureau of Narcotics, at Chicago, Ill., and New York City, N.Y.

Identification: FBI No. 723-541-A. This defendant was principally known as a violator at district No. 2, New York, where he has been named as a defendant in cases New York-S-8505 and New York-S-8522; and where he furnished the heroin to a "runner" of John Dispensa who, in turn, transported it to Chicago.

GEORGE FARACCO

George Faracco was born on March 6, 1922, in New York City, N.Y. He is a white male of Italian descent, weighs approximately 180 pounds, is 5 feet 7 inches tall, has brown eyes, black hair, medium build, and dark complexion.

Faracco has a criminal record dating back to 1939 which includes arrests for burglary, grand larceny, robbery, and counterfeiting. He was arrested twice for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. In case No. New York-S-7764, Faracco was sentenced on December 29, 1949, to serve 1 year and 1 day at the Federal Correction Institute, Milan, Mich. On October 2, 1953, in the U.S. district court, Detroit, he was sentenced to 10 years imprisonment in case No. Michigan-3677. This case involved the transportation of heroin from New York to Detroit. Faracco served his sentence at the Federal Penitentiary, Atlanta, Ga. He was released on October 16, 1959.

On May 31, 1962, Faracco left his home at 341 Pleasant Avenue, New York City reportedly to buy a newspaper and was never seen nor heard from again. He is presumed dead, a victim of gangland violence.

George Faracco was an important and persistent violator. He took part in an organization which distributed narcotics in the retail and interstate traffic. He had sources of supply in Montreal, Canada, and was associated with international traffickers.

Faracco was mentioned as the source of supply in New York-S-7557—Dominick Dovico and New York-S-7689—Benjamin DiFonzo. He was a known associate of Louis Pellechio, Albert Pierro, Michael DeMaro, Roger Coudert, and Dominick D'Ercole (NL No. 117).

HERBERT HOWARD FOREMAN

Herbert Howard Foreman, alias Slim, alias George Wilson, was born on June 2, 1919, at Memphis, Tenn. He is a Negro male, 6 feet 4 inches, weighs 178 pounds, has a slender build and a medium-brown complexion.

Foreman is known to and identified in the files of the following police organizations: Chicago, Ill., Police Department No. D-21348, Grand Rapids, Mich., Police Department No. 16045, Cleveland, Ohio, Police Department No. 81621, and FBI No. 3919607. In 1947, he was convicted at Grand Rapids, Mich., of assault to rob while armed and received a 2- to 10-year sentence. In 1955, he was sentenced to 2 years in Federal prison for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. At the time of Foreman's arrest for violation of the Federal narcotic laws in 1955 at Cleveland, Ohio, he was residing at the Sans Souci Hotel, East 112th Street and Superior Avenue. He gave his home address as 6203 South Ada Street, Chicago, Ill.

1108 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Foreman first came to the attention of the Cleveland, Ohio, branch office, district No. 8, during January of 1955 when agents developed information that Herbert Howard Foreman was selling heroin in bulk quantities on the East Side of Cleveland, Ohio, to the extent of about 10 ounces per week. Investigation indicated that he and Paul Jerrels had arrived in Cleveland, Ohio, from Chicago, Ill., and were attempting to organize the street narcotic peddlers into an organization dependent upon Foreman as the source of supply. Acting on this information, agents made 2-ounce purchases of heroin from Foreman and Jerrels and seized from Foreman at the time of his arrest on April 20, 1955, 4 ounces of heroin. Foreman, as a result, received the above-mentioned 2-year sentence in Federal penitentiary. Foreman subsequently testified before the Senate subcommittee headed by Senator Price Daniels when this committee held hearings in Detroit, Mich.

Foreman was associated in the narcotic traffic with John Pringleton, Paul Jerrels, William "Butch" Evans, and Josephine Evans. All of these persons are considered major interstate violators.

DOMINICK FRANK GENTILE

Alias: Dom.

Description: Born August 12, 1923, at New York City, N.Y. White male of Italian extraction, 5 feet 11½ inches tall, 198 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, ruddy complexion, and stocky build.

Localities frequented: Presently incarcerated. Formerly lived at 198 Brinsmade Street, Bronx, N.Y.; 118th Street, 86th and Lexington Streets, 112th and 2d Avenue, all in New York.

Criminal associates: Saverio (Sam) Schifano, Nicholas Esposito, John Dispensa.

Criminal history: Gentile's record shows only one prior arrest for petty larceny at New York, no disposition. On November 21, 1958, Gentile was arrested at New York by Federal narcotic agents for a charge of conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws as a result of being indicted at Chicago, Ill., in case Ill-7655. He was a codefendant with Nicholas Esposito, Saverio Schifano, John Dispensa, Phillip Vittoria, and Morris Rosengard. On February 3, 1960, Gentile entered a plea of guilty in Federal court at Chicago and was sentenced March 1, 1960, to 7 years in prison.

Modus operandi: Participated with Saverio Schifano at New York delivering half kilogram quantities of heroin for Nicholas Esposito, to John Dispensa, et al., of Chicago, Ill.

Agencies with information: New York City Police Department; Federal Bureau of Narcotics at New York and at Chicago, Ill.

Identification: FBI No. 909-875. This defendant operated exclusively at New York.

WILBERT ORLANDO HOLMES

Aliases: None known.

Description: Born November 2, 1924, at Chicago, Ill. Negro male, 5 feet 8 inches tall, 190 pounds, husky build, black hair, brown eyes, dark brown complexion.

Localities frequented: Residence: 6956 South Anthony; Chicago, Ill.

Criminal associates: Auckland Holmes (brother); Earl Williamson, alias Big Moody; Fred Anderson; Attorney Julius Echeles.

Criminal history: Sentenced June 2, 1942, at Chicago, Ill., to 20 years for murder. Paroled December 17, 1951. Holmes was arrested February 19, 1959, at Chicago, Ill., charged with conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws in case Ill-7775 with codefendant Marc Antonio Orlandino, of New York. Holmes was acquitted by a jury on February 23, 1960, at Chicago, Ill.

Modus operandi: Wilbert Holmes had requested a Miss Eula Brown to accept a Railway Express package for him. The package had been sent by Marc Antonio Orlandino, receipt of which had been discovered at New York when Orlandino was arrested on a case in that city. The package was intercepted at Miss Brown's residence in Chicago and was found to contain almost 2 kilograms of very-high-grade heroin. When Wilbert Holmes came to pick up the package, he was arrested. There is no doubt that Wilbert was acting in behalf of his brother Auckland, and that the heroin was actually meant for Auckland. The above narcotics allegedly came from the Morris Taubman organization at New York.

Agencies with information: Chicago Police Department; Federal Bureau of Narcotics at Chicago, Ill.

Identification: FBI No. 2-669-438; Chicago police No. E-29382.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1109

BENJAMIN INDIVIGLIO

Aliases: Benedetto Indiviglia, Benny Indiviglia, Benny the Cringe.

Description: Born July 16, 1921, New York City, 5 feet 11 inches, 180 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, has acne marks on both sides of face.

Localities frequented: Resides 353 West 44th Street, New York City. Frequenters Dell's Cafe and Opera Inn, both in New York City.

Family background: Father, Giuseppe; mother, Felicia (Fannie) Marino; living with paramour Rose Pizzario, alias Diaz; brothers, Joseph, John, and Salvatore.

Criminal associates: Joseph, John, and Samuel Indiviglio (brothers), Michael J. Costagliola, Salvatore Zarba, Carmelo DeVito, John Romagno, Stephen Della Cava, Michael Altimari, Nicholas Bonina.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4333204, New York City Police Department B No. 227037. Arrests since 1945 include desertion, assault, felonious assault, and conviction for Federal narcotic laws.

Business: Owns and operates Dell's Cafe, 918 Eighth Avenue, and Opera Inn, 726 Eighth Avenue, both in New York City.

Modus operandi: With other Mafia narcotic traffickers engages in narcotic smuggling and interstate distribution.

PAUL JERRELS

Paul Jerrels was born in Chicago, Ill., on April 21, 1923. He is a Negro male, 5 feet 3 inches tall with a medium-brown complexion. His last known address is 6955 Perry Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

He is known to the following police agencies: Michigan City (Ind.) Police Department No. 0946; Chicago, (Ill.) Police Department No. D-42218; Cleveland (Ohio) Police Department No. 81619; and FBI No. 3800799. Jerrels' FBI record indicates an arrest on April 5, 1946, for possession of marihuana and possession of burglar tools at Chicago, Ill., no disposition given. On December 9, 1955, Jerrels was sentenced to 3 years in Federal prison for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Paul Jerrels first came to the attention of the Cleveland (Ohio) District No. 8 Branch Office sometime in January of 1955, when he and Herbert Howard Foreman came to that city from Chicago, Ill., for the express purpose of setting up an organization to sell bulk quantities of heroin. During April of 1955, agents at Cleveland, Ohio, made several ounce purchases of heroin from Jerrels and Herbert Howard Foreman and seized from them 4 ounces of heroin. As a result, Foreman received the aforementioned 3-year sentence for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Paul Jerrels is considered a major interstate trafficker. He is a resident of Chicago, Ill., and travels to Michigan and Cleveland, Ohio, to dispense quantities of heroin. He has been identified as a main outlet for heroin for Jeremiah Pullings and William "Butch" Evans, Chicago, Ill.

RUPERT KELLY

Alias: Robert Johnson.

Description: Born January 26, 1906 in Alton, La.; 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, black hair, black eyes, bald, medium build, dark brown complexion, Negro.

Localities frequented: Residence, 8324 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Frequenters Archway Lounge, 356 East 61st Street, Chicago, Ill.

Criminal associates: Orville Locke, Harry Schennault, Mack Thomas, Archie Robinson, Lawrence Lemons, John Rector.

Criminal history: Dates from 1938 and includes arrests for violation of liquor laws and Federal narcotics laws.

Modus operandi. Wholesale dealer of heroin in Chicago and into interstate traffic.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Unit; police departments of Detroit, Mich., Chicago, Ill., Los Angeles, Calif., Washington, D.C.

Identification: FBI No. 1666712; Chicago Police Department No. D-7053.

SPARTICO MASTRO

Aliases: Spartilo, Sparky.

Description: Born May 24, 1917, at Chicago, Ill. White male of Italian extraction; 5 feet 7 inches tall, 180 pounds, brown eyes, black hair, medium complexion and build. Gives occupation as a steelworker.

1110 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Localities frequented: Residence, 834 North Harlem, River Forest, Ill. Eat-A-Bit Restaurant, Grand and Austin, and Gateway Bowling Alley, Chicago, Ill.

Criminal associates: Anthony Joseph Dichiarante; Arthur Gasparro; Norman Rosenthal; Salvatore Pisano (deceased).

Criminal history: Arrested March 9, 1960, as a codefendant with Salvatore Pisano, NL No. 316A (deceased); and Anthony J. Dichiarante charged with conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws at Chicago, Ill., in case Ill-7863. This case is pending.

Modus operandi: Assisted Anthony Dichiarante in delivery of one-quarter kilogram of heroin to Salvatore Pisano, who in turn sold same to an informant and narcotic agent.

Agencies with information: None known.

Identification: FBI No. 443065-D.

MARVIN MOSES

Aliases: Marvin Mosley, Marvin Mosses.

Description: Born July 3, 1903, at New Orleans, La. Negro male, 6 feet tall, 200 pounds, black graying hair, brown eyes, light brown complexion, heavy build.

Localities frequented: Residence, 4454 South Greenwood, Chicago, Ill. Also appears to have residence at Route No. 2, Box 17-B, Alton, La. Owns L. & M. Hotel, 515 W. Englewood, Chicago, Ill.

Criminal associates: Isaac Hill, NL No. 182A; Archie Robinson; Michael Battiesse; Broadway Arrington; Moses Hightower; Oscar Pierce, NL No. 316, Rupert Kelly, NL No. 208; all of Chicago, Ill.; Morris Taubman, NL No. 393B, Charles Schiffman, both of New York; Henry Thomas, of New Orleans; Jesse McShan, of Davenport, Iowa. Moses is associated with most of the major Negro narcotic traffickers in Chicago.

Criminal history: Dates back to 1931 including the following convictions: March 31, 1931, receiving stolen property, sentenced to 1 year probation at Chicago, Ill.; March 19, 1935, violation of Internal Revenue laws, sentenced to 3 years' probation; December 3, 1937, violation of liquor laws, Gary, Ind., fined $210; November 29, 1939, violation of Internal Revenue laws, sentenced to 1 year and 1 day; December 27, 1950, violation of Federal narcotic laws, sentenced to 3 years, case Ill-6314; November 14, 1955, violation of Federal narcotic laws, sentenced to 5 years and $100 fine, case Ill-7154.

The record also indicates that on September 23, 1955, Moses was sentenced to 6 months and 1 year for violation of the Michigan State drug law and bribing a police officer at Detroit, Mich. Numerous other arrests for violation of Internal Revenue laws and narcotic investigations. Moses was recently indicted at Chicago, Ill., for violation of the Federal narcotic laws, however, on June 5, 1963, the indictment was dismissed in case Ill-7884 due to Moses' cooperation and testimony resulting in conviction of Isaac Hill, Michael Battiesse, Archie Robinson, and Broadway Arrington.

JOHN ORMENTO

Aliases: Big John, John Forte, Governor.

Description: Born August 1, 1912, in New York City; 5 feet 10 inches, 240 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, heavy build, dark complexion.

Localities frequented: Resides 118 Audrey Drive, Lido Beach, Long Island, N.Y. Frequents 107th Street and Second Avenue; Copacabana, 10 East 60th Street; Vogue Room, 120 East 57th Street; all New York City. Visits 15 Fulton Avenue, Atlantic Beach, Long Island, N.Y.

Criminal associates: Salvatore Santora, Frank Livorsi, Rocco Pellegrino, Mike Lascoula, Carmine Galantè, Joe Bonnano, Frank Garafolo, Vincent and Joseph Catrone, Charles Luciano.

Criminal history: Dates from 1937 and includes arrests for bookmaking, and violation of State and Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: A notorious leader in the Sicilian-Mafia organization, and through the 107th Street group of traffickers in New York City controls the distribution of large quantities of narcotics. Closely associated with top Mafia traffickers and racketeers including Carmine Galante, Joseph Bonnano, Frank Garafolo, Joe Barbara, Vincent Catrone, Joseph Catrone, and Charles Luciano.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics, U.S. Bureau of Customs, New York City Police Department.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1111

Identification: FBI No. 1321383; New York City Police Department No. B-158044.

ARMANDO PIEMONTE. ALIAS MIKE FALONE

Armando Piemonte is a white male of Italian extraction, born March 15, 1915, at Chicago, Ill., 5 feet 9 inches tall, 200 pounds, and heavy build. This subject was a major wholesale supplier of high-grade heroin in ½ kilogram lots at Chicago, Ill. He was a codefendant with Helen Mack in Ill.-7565 at Chicago, Ill., in which he sold large quantities of heroin to an undercover agent of the Bureau of Narcotics. His primary outlet was Negro peddlers on the South and West Sides of Chicago, Ill. He was associated with Arnold Romano, N.L. No. 333, Helen Mack, N.L. No. 274, Harry Schennault, N.L. No. 355, and Fred Coduto.

Piemonte was a defendant in Ill.-7565 at Chicago, Ill., and was charged with violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

November 28, 1958, Piemonte was sentenced in Federal court at Chicago, Ill., to a term of 6 years. August 18, 1959, Piemonte was sentenced, at Chicago, Ill., to an additional 18 months for refusing to answer questions of a Federal grand jury at Chicago, Ill.

FBI No. 757537; Chicago Police Department No. 9461.

ARNOLD ROMANO

Aliases: Allie, Aniello, Gaetano Romano, Anthony Cacia.

Description: Born May 4, 1914, in New York City; 5 feet 3 inches; 140 pounds; black hair; brown eyes; dark complexion; Roman nose; medium build.

Localities frequented: Residence: 200 Mott Street, New York City. Frequenters: Paisano Bar, 14th Street and Second Avenue; Tell Tea Room, 13th Street and Second Avenue; both in New York City.

Criminal associates: Steve Arnone, Cosmo Franco, Charles Conti, Eugene and Victor Tramaglino, Solomon Kaplan, Alfred Guido, Salvatore Schillitani, Nick Martello.

Criminal history: Dates from 1933 and includes arrests for grand larceny, assault and robbery, robbery, attempted robbery, and violation of State and Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: A wholesale distributor of heroin who controls the traffic in the East 14th Street area of New York City. Supplies wholesale dealers from the Midwest and Texas.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. Police departments of New York City, N.Y.; and Philadelphia, Pa.

Identification: FBI No. 698634; New York City Police Department No. B-116989.

MORRIS R. ROSENGARD

Alias: Morrie.

Description: Born January 4, 1908, at Chicago, Ill. White male of Jewish extraction, 5 feet 9 inches tall, 180 pounds, brown hair, blue eyes, stout build, light complexion. Married to Albina Rosengard.

Localities frequented: Residence: 2534 West Marquette Road, Chicago, Ill. Formerly operated the Unity Drug Store, 3037 South Wentworth Avenue (has since been demolished).

Criminal associates: John P. Dispensa; Phillip Vittoria; Grace Pine; Peter Gushi; and many other known hoodlums of minor importance in the Chicago area.

Criminal history: Dates back to 1935. Sentenced February 5, 1937, to 5 years at Leavenworth for theft from interstate shipment. No arrest to November 21, 1958, when he was charged with conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws at Chicago, Ill., in case Ill.-7655 with codefendants John Dispensa, Phillip Vittoria, both of Chicago, Ill., and Nicholas Esposito, Saverio Schifano, and Dominick Gentile, of New York City, N.Y. Rosengard was sentenced March 1, 1960, to 5 years on a plea of guilty to the above charge. He has since been released.

Modus operandi: Operated Unity Drug Store while licensed as an assistant pharmacist in the State of Illinois. Was purchasing heroin from Dispensa and Vittoria and selling to various customers in the Chicago area. Was also known as a "bookmaker," "fence," and underworld "fixer" for minor arrests by the Chicago Police Department.

Agencies with information: FBI; Chicago Police Department; Federal Bureau of Narcotics at Chicago, Ill.

1112 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Identification : Chicago Police Group Photo No. 7889 ; FBI No. 910-066.

WILLIAM ROUZER

Aliases : None known.

Description : Born October 14, 1914, at Baltimore, Md. Negro male, 5 feet 9 inches tall, 210 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, 2-inch scar on forehead, rough, pitted face. Medium brown complexion, stocky build.

Localities frequented : Presently incarcerated ; Jackson, Mich., State Prison.

Criminal associates : Nathaniel Spurlark, Gladys Davis and others known to Detroit office of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics.

Criminal history : Convicted and sentenced at Detroit, Mich., in Federal Bureau of Narcotics case Mich-4106. Convicted in State court at Detroit, Mich., on May 10, 1960, and sentenced to 7½ to 10 years for possession of heroin. On March 1, 1962, Rouzer appeared at Chicago, Ill., and testified against Spurlark and Gladys Davis in conspiracy case Ill-7884, which ultimately resulted in their conviction.

Modus operandi : Rouzer obtained narcotics from Nathaniel Spurlark, who was assisted by Gladys Davis ; at Chicago, Ill. Rouzer distributed these narcotics to various peddlers at Detroit, Mich. Above period of activity appears to have been during 1958.

This subject only appeared as a witness for the Chicago, Ill., office of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics and testified regarding his association with Spurlark during 1958. Further information and history may be contained in the Bureau files at Detroit, Mich.

Agencies with information : Detroit Police Department, Federal Bureau of Narcotics at Detroit, Mich.

Identification : Federal Bureau of Investigation No. 5063627 ; Detroit Police No. 80067.

JOSEPH CLEVELAND SADDLER, ALIAS J.C.

Joseph C. Saddler is a colored male, born December 1, 1925, at Port Arthur, Tex., 5 feet 11½ inches tall, 200 pounds, dark complexion, and medium build. Saddler was a known major violator in interstate trafficking in heroin. For a number of years, he supplied all of the heroin at New Orleans, La. He was closely associated with major violators Joseph Bruno, N.L. No. 43, Nathaniel Spurlark, N.L. No. 377, Auckland Miles, Dutch Evans, and Jeremiah Hope Pullings, Ill-7300, this subject was charged with possession of over ounces of high-grade heroin.

Saddler was a defendant in Ill-7300 at Chicago, Ill., and was charged with violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

June 24, 1957, Saddler was sentenced in Federal court at Chicago, Ill., to a term of 10 years.

Federal Bureau of Investigation No. 3708437 ; Chicago Police Department No. 45392.

FRANK SASSER

Frank Sasser was born in Bloomburg, Tex., on July 1, 1922. He is a Negro male, 6 feet 1 inch tall, weighs 200 pounds, is of stocky build, has brown eyes and black hair. He resides with his wife, Loretta, at 5537 Pacific Street, Detroit, Mich.

Sasser is currently incarcerated for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. Prior to his conviction, he frequented the 12th Street area of Detroit, the Visger Road section of Ecorse, Mich., and the south side of Chicago. He was actively engaged in the narcotic traffic in Detroit. He was assisted in this endeavor by his wife, Joseph House, and Joseph Lowery. His Chicago associates were James White alias Freckle Face Jimmy, Theorus Bankhead alias Rick, Jeremiah Pullings, and Nathaniel Spurlark, major narcotic traffickers.

Frank Sasser is identified in the files of the following police agencies : FBI No. 393691-A, Detroit Police Department No. 95574, Ecorse, Mich., Police Department No. 1663, and Oklahoma City Police Department No. 64227. Frank Sasser's criminal history dates back to 1950, when he was arrested and convicted at Oklahoma City, Okla., for operating a disorderly house, carrying a concealed weapon, and possession of whiskey. He was convicted on January 30, 1956, for violation of the Federal narcotic laws, and sentenced to 4 years in a Federal prison. On November 28, 1960, he was sentenced to 12 years in the Federal penitentiary for violation of the Federal narcotic laws. During the same period of the sentence in Federal courts, he was convicted in recorder's court, Detroit, Mich., for conspiracy to commit murder and assault with intent to commit murder and received respective sentences of 1 to 5 years and 5 to 10 years to run concurrent.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1113

In the past, Frank Sasser purchased wholesale lots of narcotics at Chicago, Ill., for redistribution through his wife Loretta Sasser and others at Detroit and River Rouge, Mich. While Frank Sasser was serving a Federal prison term in 1956, his wife Loretta assumed his position in the narcotic traffic. In 1958, Loretta Sasser received a 2-year sentence in Federal court for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Sasser is considered a ruthless chieftain in the colored underworld and enforces his will through the use of hired gunmen as exemplified in his attempt to kill a Government witness in 1960 for which he received the above-mentioned sentence in recorder's court.

SAVERIO GAETANO SCHIFANO, JR.

Alias: Sam.

Description: Born February 7, 1923, at New York City, N.Y. White male, of Italian extraction, 5 feet 11 inches tall, 170 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, dark complexion, slender build.

Localities frequented: Presently incarcerated. Formerly resided at 2966 Coddington, Bronx, New York.

Criminal associates: Dominick Gentile, John Dispensa, Phillip Vittoria, Nicholas Esposito.

Criminal history: Defendant in ATTU case NYS-3307 for alcohol tax violation. Sentenced December 29, 1948, to 1 year probation at New York. Sentenced June 28, 1955, to 1 year and 1 day for having an unregistered still. Numerous other arrests for ATTU violations. Arrested November 21, 1963, at New York as a defendant in case Ill-7655. Entered plea of guilty at Chicago and sentenced to 10 years on March 1, 1960, for conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Participated in the narcotic trafficking at New York with Dominick Gentile and Nicholas Esposito supplying heroin to John Dispensa, et al., at Chicago, Ill.

Agencies with information: ATTU, New York; Federal Narcotics Bureau, New York.

Identification: FBI No. 2-289-700.

This defendant was principally known to have operated and resided in district No. 2, New York.

CHARLES SCHIFFMAN

Aliases: Charles Shiffman, Morris Feldman, Charles Schippman, Charles Harriss.

Description: White male, born September 14, 1903, at Wallington, N.J., 5 feet 6 inches tall, 160 pounds, brown eyes, black-gray hair, medium build, ruddy complexion.

Localities frequented: Resided at 337 West 23d Street, New York City; frequented racetracks in the New York area and midtown Manhattan.

Criminal associates: Frank Caruso, Vincent Mauro, Charles Tandler, Isaac Hill, Abe Chapman, Morris Taubman.

Criminal history: FBI No. 313781. New York City Police Department No. B-123114. Arrests since 1924 include robbery, carrying concealed weapon, and narcotic violations. He is currently incarcerated for violation of the Federal narcotic laws and is serving a 25-year sentence (NY:S-10795).

Modus operandi: A major source of supply for dealers in Chicago, Ill. Wholesaler of large quantities of heroin to interstate dealers.

MORRIS TAUBMAN

Aliases: Morris Tennenbaum, Morris Tannenbaum, Jack Davis, L. Galloway, Morris Gold, Morris Galloway, Moe, Doc.

Description: Born September 16, 1904, in Poland-Russian corridor; 5 feet 9 inches; 200 pounds; brown eyes; black hair, balding; stocky; tattoo right arm; two 17-inch scars on back.

Localities frequented: Resides: 325 East 23d Street, New York City. Frequents Chicago, Ill., and Miami, Fla.

1114 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal associates: Barney Gold, Betty Miller, Jockey Joe Miller, Nathan Banks, Saul Gelb, Max Gerstenfeld, Leslie Williams.

Criminal history: Dates from 1915 and includes arrests for burglary, assault and battery, robbery with a gun, highway robbery, and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: A major source of supply for dealers in Chicago, Ill. Wholesaler of large quantities of heroin to interstate dealers.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics. Police departments of New York, N.Y., and Chicago, Ill.

Identification: FBI No. 19874, NYCPD No. B-59828, Chicago Police Department No. C-86356.

PHILLIP JOSEPH VITTORIA

Alias: Phil.

Description: Born October 15, 1915, at Chicago, Ill. White male of Italian extraction, 5 feet 1 inch tall, 170 pounds, black hair (balding), brown eyes, stout build, ruddy complexion.

Localities frequented: Residence. 256 West 23d Place, Chicago, Ill. Known to frequent "Chinatown" area of Chicago. Presently incarcerated.

Criminal associates: John P. Dispensa, Morris Rosengard, Phillip Cassatta, Sam Serritella, Lawrence Lemons, Peter Gushi, Leo Boney.

Criminal history: Charged with violation of Federal narcotic laws, case Ill-7258, with Phillip Cassatta. Vittoria sentenced in this case January 5, 1956, to 2 years. Sentenced March 1, 1960 to 12 years in Federal Court at Chicago, Ill., after being found guilty by a jury for violation of the Federal narcotic laws in case Ill-7655. Codefendants in the latter case were Morris Rosengard, John Dispensa, Saverio Schifano, Dominick Gentile, and Nicholas Esposito (the latter three being from New York).

Modus operandi: Acted as partner of John Dispensa in the distribution of narcotics at Chicago, Ill., which were brought from New York.

Identification: FBI No. 930-199-B.

ELAINE WILSON

See report on Woodrow L. Wilson. Elaine Wilson is the wife of Woodrow Wilson, living somewhere in Michigan. Elaine Wilson lived with and assisted Woodrow Wilson in his trafficking in narcotics during the period of about 1952 to 1957 at Chicago, Ill.; St. Louis, Mo.; Des Moines, Iowa; and Detroit, Mich.

There is no specific identifying information in the files of District No. 9, Chicago, Ill., except as relates to and is reported about Woodrow L. Wilson. Elaine Wilson also testified at Chicago, Ill. in case Ill-7884 and corroborated Woodrow Wilson's testimony regarding his association and dealings with Nathaniel Spurlark, et al.

WOODROW LEO WILSON

Aliases: Woody; Chicken.

Description: Born September 25, 1925, at Kansas City, Mo. Negro male, 5 feet 11½ inches tall, 155 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, slender build, medium brown complexion. Married to Elaine Wilson.

Localities frequented: Residence: Formerly lived at 5012 South Drexel Boulevard, Chicago, Ill. Now believed living in Michigan.

Criminal associates: Nathaniel Spurlark, Katy B. Lewis (deceased); Dennis Green, national list No. 169; Willard Jones; Vernelet Peters; Henry Layden; Edward Gayles; Dorothy Johnson; Dolores Doyle; Elaine Wilson (wife).

Criminal history: Convicted for violation of Federal narcotic laws on June 17, 1957, at St. Louis, Mo., and sentenced to 5 years in prison. Named as a defendant in case Ill-763-M at Springfield, Ill., however, this latter case was dismissed in view of the above conviction and sentence. Wilson testified for the Government in early 1962 during the prosecution of case Ill-7884, at Chicago, Ill., against defendants Nathaniel Spurlark, Willard Jones, Dennis Green, and Edward Gayles.

Modus operandi: From 1952 until 1955 Wilson purchased the majority of his narcotics from Nathaniel Spurlark, directly or through Spurlark's "runner" Katy B. Lewis. After discharge from the Army in October 1955 he continued buying narcotics from the Spurlark organization, particularly, Dennis Green and Willard Jones. Wilson supplied narcotics as follows: to Calvin Waugh, defendant at Detroit, Mich., in case Mich-592-M, 1954; to Mildred Clark and Elijah Hampton, Chicago, Ill., case Ill-7247, 1955; Henry Layden, St. Louis,

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1115

Mo., case Mo-8519; Grady Mosley, Mo-8524, 1957; Dorothy Johnson, Des Moines, Iowa, case Iowa-631.

Agencies with information: Milwaukee, Wis., Police Department, St. Louis, Mo., Police Department, Federal Bureau of Narcotics at St. Louis, Mo., and Chicago, Ill.

Identification: FBI No. 632103-B; Milwaukee Police No. 56061; St. Louis Police Department No. 75880.

WILLIAM ERNEST WRIGHT

Aliases: New York Bill; J. Burns; J. Harris.

Description: Born August 14, 1916, at Syracuse, N.Y. White male, 6 feet tall, 200 pounds, brown thinning hair, blue eyes, heavy build, claims self-employment as a jewelry salesman.

Localities frequented: Presently incarcerated. Residence address: 288 Maple Street, Fort Lee, N.J. Frequented the North Avenue Steak House, 8500 West North Avenue, Melrose Park, Ill. (Has since burned down.)

Criminal associates: Armando Pennachio, Michael Carioscia, Ben Pennachio, (codefendants with Wright in case Ill-7924), Americo De Pietto, Ernest (Rocco) Infelice; Michael De Maro, alias De Marco; John Schivarelli; Nolan Mack (deceased); Helen Mack (incarcerated); Charles Cole; Opal Cole; Chester Jones.

Criminal history: Arrest record dates back to 1932. Sentenced September 30, 1938, to 30 years for murder at Chicago, Ill. Paroled October 30, 1950, returned June 1, 1951, as a parole violator. Sentence commuted by Governor to 25 years on September 8, 1952. Released on expiration of sentence September 8, 1953. Arrested November 16, 1953, by the New York Police on a warrant charging assault and robbery with a gun of a residence. Wright was turned over to the sheriff's office of Miami Beach, Fla. There is no disposition shown for this arrest. Wright was again arrested by New York Police on January 28, 1955, for grand larceny of scrap metal. This charge was dismissed on March 2, 1955. Wright was again arrested on October 1, 1956, at Chicago, Ill., for possession of narcotics in case Ill-7406. (He had 9 ounces of heroin to deliver to Nolan Mack.) Wright was found guilty of the above charge at Chicago, sentenced to 2 years on February 20, 1959, appealed, and on January 27, 1961, the conviction was reversed.

Wright was again arrested on December 6, 1957, by Federal Bureau of Narcotic agents at New York in case NY:E-1185. This indictment was subsequently dismissed. Wright was next arrested September 12, 1960, by Federal narcotic agents at Chicago, Ill., in case Ill-7924. In this case Wright was charged with conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic law with codefendants Armando Pennachio, Ben Pennachio, and Michael Carioscia. Wright was sentenced in this case on October 27, 1961, to 5 years in prison.

Modus operandi: Information from Wright at the time of his arrest in 1956 indicated he obtained his narcotics from Tony Carminati and Robert Guippone of New York. Wright was transporting narcotics from New York to Chicago for Nolan Mack, subsequently to Helen Mack, national list No. 274, after Nolan was incarcerated, and later to Michael Carioscia and Armando Pennachio, codefendants with him in case Ill-7924.

Wright, it appears, was also furnishing heroin to Michael De Maro, alias De Marco; who in turn supplied Opal Cole, Charles Cole, Chester Jones, Frank Carioscia, and Nolan Mack. These latter defendants are all now named in a conspiracy case, Ill-8084, at Chicago, Ill. This case now pending.

During the development of case Ill-7924 Wright always frequented the North Avenue Steak House, 8500 West North Avenue, while he was in Chicago. This restaurant was then operated by Americo De Pietto and Ernest Infelice (purportedly for Sam "Mooney" Giancana). The pending conspiracy case, Ill-8084, names De Pietto as a coconspirator along with Charles Cole and 20 other persons.

Agencies with information: Chicago Police Intelligence Unit; New York Police Department; Miami Beach, Fla., Police; Federal Bureau of Narcotics at Chicago and New York.

Identification: FBI No. 1-610-173; Chicago Police No. D-82729; New York Police No. B-334508; Miami Beach Police No. A-32245.

1116 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

EXHIBIT No. 5

LOS ANGELES AREA

WALTER LEE CARLTON

Aliases: None.

Description: Born December 25, 1915, Mobile, Ala.; Negro male; 5 feet 9½ inches tall; weighs 160 pounds; black hair; brown eyes; dark complexion; medium build.

Criminal associates: Louis Fiano; Michael Fiano.

Criminal history: Dates from 1939 and includes arrests for Federal liquor laws, burglary, gambling, State narcotic laws, battery, and two convictions for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Wholesale heroin dealer in Los Angeles area. Sole distributor for Louis Fiano and eastern mobsters.

Identification: FBI No. 1745844.

Summary of activity

Walter Lee Carlton was a coconspirator and partner of Louis Fiano. Fiano received shipments of heroin from the east coast syndicate in lots of 6 and 7 pounds. Carlton was the only distributor for Fiano in California. The amount of heroin that Carlton distributed in 1957; 1958; and 1959 must of necessity run to values of several hundreds of thousands of dollars.

On January 26, 1959, Carlton entered a plea of guilty to violation of the Federal narcotic laws, and on February 16, 1959, he was sentenced to 12 years in the Federal penitentiary.

JESSE MARVIN DEL BONO

Alias: Edward Strauss.

Description: Born December 20, 1922, Arma, Kans.; white male, Italian extraction; 5 feet 9 inches tall; weighs 185 pounds; black hair and brown eyes.

Criminal associates: Benjamin Marchese, Michele Marchese, Tony Dichiarente.

Criminal history: Dates from 1940. He has been arrested for breaking and entering, gambling, bookmaking, and violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Associated with Michael Marchese in Los Angeles, Calif., in the wholesale distribution of heroin of New York origin.

Identification: FBI No. 414-841A.

Summary of activity

On March 13, 1958, Federal narcotic agents and California authorities arrested Michele Marchese and Jesse Marvin Del Bono, and seized 921 grams (32½ ounces) of heroin which Marchese had delivered. In Del Bono's garage arresting officers found 85 grams (3 ounces) of heroin and some packaging equipment. The arrests and seizures climaxed 3 months of investigation, during which Marchese made two sales totaling 113 grams (4 ounces) of good quality heroin.

Marchese, considered one of the largest distributors of heroin on the west coast, had been associated with major narcotic violators on the east coast, and was known as a supplier of heroin to several other narcotic dealers in the Los Angeles area. On June 16, 1958, Federal Judge Thurmond Clarke of Los Angeles sentenced Marchese to 10 years in prison.

Investigation disclosed that Michele Marchese and Jesse Del Bono had numerous sources of supply both in New York City and Chicago, Ill. Benny Marchese, the uncle of Michele, supplied large amounts of heroin from syndicated narcotic traffickers in New York City. Investigation also disclosed that Del Bono was mailing registered packages from California to Tony Dichiarente, Chicago, Ill. These packages were believed to contain moneys in payment for deliveries of heroin from the Chicago syndicate. It was established that Marchese was a close friend and associate of major trafficker Anthony Castaldi of New York City.

LOUIS FIANO

Aliases: Louis Friedman, Louis Frano.

Description: Born December 25, 1914; white male, Italian extraction, 5 feet 9½ inches tall, weighs 200 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes.

Criminal associates: Walter Lee Carlton, Joseph DiPalermo, Vito Genovese, Rocco Mazzie.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1117

Criminal history: Numerous arrests and convictions for bribery of a Secret Service agent, Dyer Act, larceny, forgery, robbery, felonious assault, and one conviction of violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Associate of top Italian racketeers in New York and Los Angeles. Wholesale interstate heroin dealer.

Identification: FBI No. 619247, CII No. 543424.

Summary of activity

On May 14, 1958, Federal narcotic agents at Los Angeles, Calif., arrested Louis Fiano, alias Louis Friedman, after an undercover investigation of about 3 months. On April 7, 1958, Fiano sold one-half kilogram (17 ounces) of pure heroin to an undercover narcotic agent. On July 28, 1958, Federal Judge Peirson Hall at Los Angeles sentenced Fiano to 20 years in prison and imposed a fine of $20,000. This sentence was later reduced to 7 years. Fiano, one of the most important narcotic dealers in Los Angeles, was involved in a narcotic conspiracy which operated between New York City and other cities.

Shortly before Fiano's sentence in the above case, he was indicted by a Federal Grand Jury in New York City in an indictment naming 37 defendants in a gigantic conspiracy to violate the Federal narcotic laws. The conspiracy began in 1954 and involved the smuggling of heroin in kilogram lots from Europe to the United States via Cuba. Fiano was the west coast distributor for this organization. On April 3, 1959, after 13 weeks of trial, a guilty verdict was returned against all of these conspirators in this case with the exception of Fiano. Fiano was acquitted because the Government was unable to corroborate the testimony of a coconspirator relative to a large delivery of narcotics made to Fiano in Las Vegas, Nev., in 1955. The source of supply for Fiano was identified as Joseph Di Palermo, of the New York syndicate, headed by the notorious Vito Genovese.

LEROY JEFFERSON

Aliases: None.

Description: Born February 1, 1919; Warren, Ark.; 5 feet 10½ inches tall, weighs 175 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, dark complexion, medium build.

Criminal associates: Rodolfo Arriola, Nelson Hermida, Clarence Criss, and many others.

Criminal history: Record dating from 1936 includes arrests for robbery, pimping, and violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: A persistent and large-scale interstate and international trafficker in California, with sources of supply in New York City and Mexico.

Identification: FBI No. 2028068.

Summary of activity

From 1957 to January 1959, the largest individual narcotic trafficker in the Western United States was Leroy Jefferson. Three separate conspiracy investigations were initiated against this prominent Negro trafficker, who in turn, was the source of supply for other top echelon Negro traffickers in the States of California, Oregon, and Washington.

From the Nelson Hermida organization operating out of New York City, Jefferson received deliveries of pure heroin. For cocaine, Jefferson utilized the Rodolfo Arriola organization, operating out of Villa Acuna in the Mexican State of Coahuila. The smallest narcotic delivery received by Jefferson was one-half kilo, while the largest was 5 kilos.

On February 18, 1959, an indictment was returned in San Francisco, Calif., against Jefferson and 16 codefendants who lived in Washington; Oregon; Oakland and Los Angeles, Calif.; Chicago, Ill.; New York, N.Y.; and Villa Acuna, Coahuila, Mexico, with whom Jefferson had narcotic transactions.

From information learned following the arrests of those defendants indicted on February 18, 1959, an extensive investigation followed, which led to the indictment of 27 defendants including members of both the Hermida and Arriola organizations, by the Federal grand jury in San Francisco, Calif., on March 25, 1959.

It is interesting to note that prior to Jefferson's entrance into the narcotic traffic during 1957, he derived his income from living with and accepting earnings from prostitutes. During his 2-year tenure in the narcotic traffic, he was able to rise from a panderer to an extremely wealthy individual. He was distributing such vast quantities of narcotics on the west coast, that several New York Italian groups were actually "fighting" to get him as a customer. He became personally acquainted with the large narcotic traffickers, both Negro and Italian, in New York City, Chicago, and Los Angeles.

1118 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Jefferson traveled extensively throughout the United States and Europe, and was known to literally carry thousands of dollars on his person. When Jefferson was arrested in Seattle, Wash., on August 22, 1957, he had over $5,000 on his person. Then on June 2, 1958, Jefferson and his common law wife, Delores Mitchell, were arrested by officers of the Los Angeles Police Department. On Jefferson's person, $32,430 was found. On Mitchell's person, the officers found an additional $5,765.

On May 25, 1959, Jefferson was sentenced in Federal court at Los Angeles, Calif., to a term of 20 years imprisonment for his participation in case Cal-5634. Then on June 12, 1959, in Federal court at San Francisco, Calif., Jefferson received another 20-year sentence for his participation in case Cal-5630. This second 20-year sentence is to run concurrently with the 20-year sentence imposed at Los Angeles, Calif.

With the conviction of Jefferson, and several other prominent codefendants in the three California conspiracy cases, the Jefferson organization was completely broken up.

MORRIS JOSEPH

Alias: Fat Joe.

Description: Date of birth, June 24, 1926, New Orleans, La., Negro male, 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 200 pounds, heavy build, dark-brown complexion, brown eyes, black hair. Has a 4-inch cut scar over left eye.

Criminal associates: Edward McCray, James Glover, Jr., Norman E. Smith, Randolph Patterson, Milton Beasley, Vase Valrie, Warren Harris.

Criminal history: Dates from 1944 and includes four convictions under the Federal narcotics and marihuana laws. Currently serving a total of 80½ years following convictions for violation of the Federal narcotic laws in Texas, Colorado, and California.

Identification: FBI No. 4-394-479, Denver Police Department No. 61945, Chicago Police Department No. E-4413, Beaumont Police Department No. 10282; State Police, Hartford, No. G-1630-E/75336.

Summary of activity

Notorious narcotic trafficker Morris Joseph, over a period of years, operated in complete defiance of the narcotic laws. In Chicago, he maintained ready sources of unlawful narcotics in wholesale quantities to supply a distribution system extending into Texas, Colorado, and California.

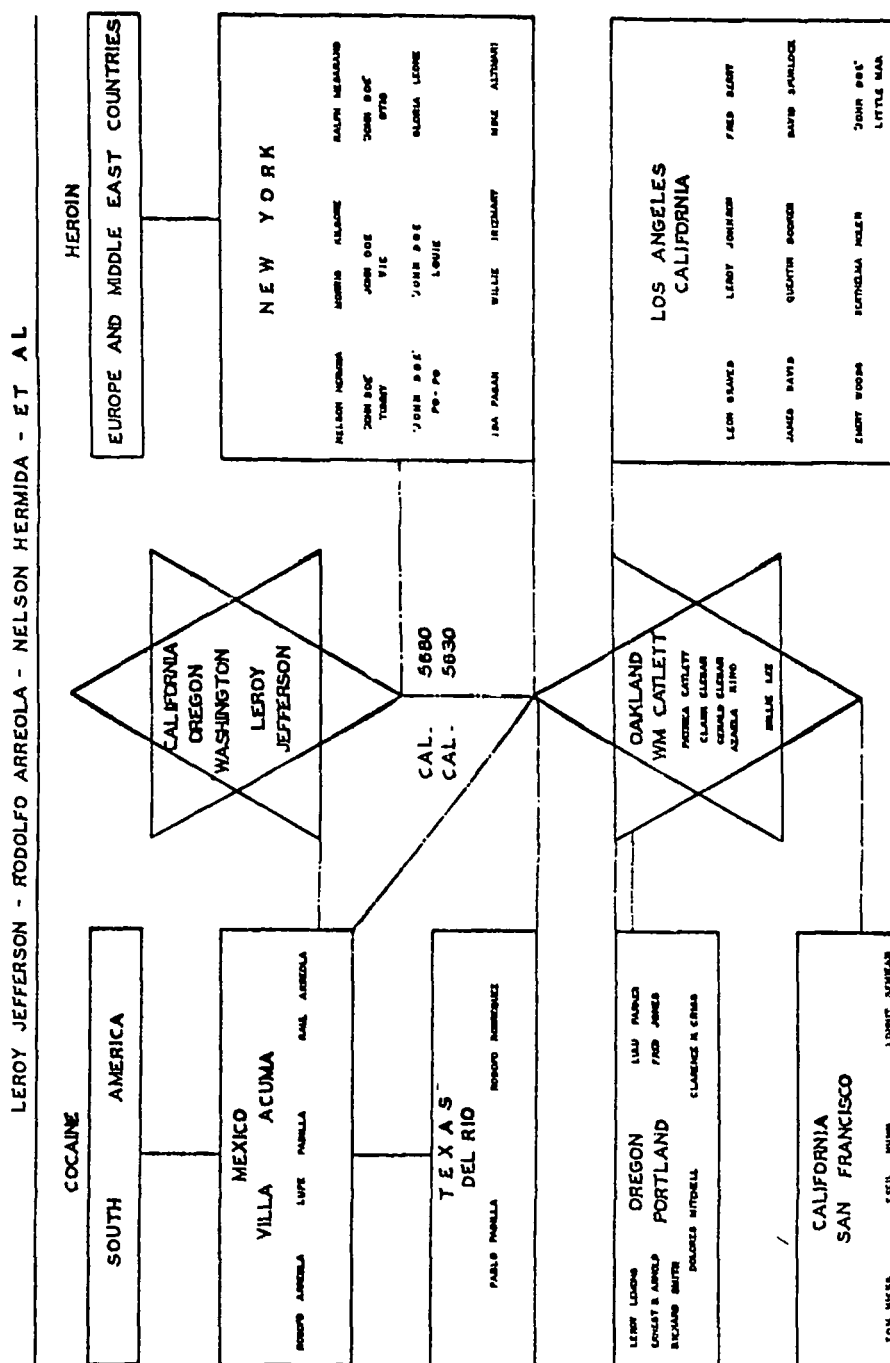

Joseph was convicted on a narcotic charge in Beaumont, Tex., and sentenced September 17, 1959, to 12 years in the penitentiary. This conviction was appealed and Joseph moved to Denver, Colo., where he was convicted and sentenced October 21, 1960, to 8½ years in the penitentiary on a narcotic charge. This conviction was also appealed.

Joseph then transferred his headquarters to Los Angeles, Calif., from which point he directed unlawful distribution of heroin in Texas, Colorado, and California.

Following conviction on charges of having unlawfully sold heroin in large quantities to undercover agents of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics in Los Angeles, Calif., during February and March 1961, Morris Joseph, on May 4, 1961, was sentenced to 60 years in a Federal penitentiary and immediately began serving this sentence.

On August 10, 1961, at Las Vegas, Nev., the body of the Government witness who testified against Morris Joseph was found in an automobile. He had been shot twice. This murder "contract" apparently was given by Joseph and other notorious racketeers in Los Angeles against whom the Government witness had made evidential purchases for the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics at Los Angeles.

In an excellent example of outstanding cooperation between the Federal Bureau of Narcotics and the California State Bureau of Narcotics, an extensive investigation resulted in the arrest of Milton Beasley for the murder of this witness. Beasley has been convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment without possibility of parole. Three other individuals were arrested for this murder when it was proven that they had paid Beasley the sum of $5,000 to commit the murder. These three individuals had previously been arrested for narcotic violations as a result of testimony provided by the same witness. To date, one of these defendants, Randolph Patterson has pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and has been sentenced to 15 years at Las Vegas, Nev. The trial of the other two defendants is still pending.

1120 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

IGNAZIO CARLO MARCHESE

Aliases: Benny Mardhese; "Okay Benny."

Description: Date of birth, February 12, 1903, Palma, Italy; white male; 5 feet 9 inches tall; weighs 195 pounds; brown eyes; hair is graying; naturalized February 2, 1944, in Connecticut.

Criminal associates: Frank Piccolo, Raymond Marcesca, Paul Agrests, John Santangelo, all of Connecticut; Michele Marchese of Los Angeles; Anthony Castaldi and Vincent Corrao of New York City.

Criminal history: Arrests since 1930 include carrying concealed weapon, robbery with violence, and conviction of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: An interstate narcotic trafficker who obtained his supply from known Mafia traffickers in New York City.

Identification: FBI No. 4612703; Connecticut State Police No. 49778.

Summary of activity

Ignazio C. Marchese, alias Benny, was important in the interstate traffic in heroin and was identified as the source of supply for his nephew, Michele Marchese of Los Angeles, Calif. Marchese maintained a residence in Ansonia, Conn.

In February and March of 1958, Marchese made two sales totaling approximately 1 kilogram of pure heroin to an undercover agent in New York. He was identified as an associate of well-known narcotic traffickers in Harlem and the lower East Side of New York City.

On September 10, 1958, at Federal district court, New York City, Marchese was sentenced to 7 years in the Federal penitentiary.

MICHELE MARCHESE

Alias: Michael Marchese.

Description: Date of birth, January 15, 1922, New York City; white male, Italian extraction; 5 feet 8½ inches tall; weighs 185 pounds; medium-heavy build; has dark brown hair; hazel eyes.

Criminal associates: Benjamin Marchese (uncle); Jesse Del Bono; Anthony Castaldi.

Criminal history: Michael Marchese has been arrested for narcotic violations and perjury. On June 16, 1958, he was sentenced to 10 years in Federal penitentiary for narcotic violations at Los Angeles, Calif.

Modus operandi: Large-scale interstate trafficker in Los Angeles, Calif., area, has important sources of supply in New York City and Chicago.

Identification: FBI No. 833-156-C.

Summary of activity

On March 13, 1958, Federal narcotic agents and California authorities arrested Michele Marchese and Jesse Marvin Del Bono, and seized 921 grams (32½ ounces) of heroin which Marchese had delivered. In Del Bono's garage arresting officers found 85 grams (3 ounces) of heroin and some packaging equipment. The arrests and seizures climaxed 3 months of investigation, during which Marchese made two sales totaling 113 grams (4 ounces) of good quality heroin.

Marchese, considered one of the largest distributors of heroin on the west coast, had been associated with major narcotic violators on the east coast, and was known as a supplier of heroin to several other narcotic dealers in the Los Angeles area. On June 16, 1958, Federal Judge Thurmond Clarke of Los Angeles sentenced Marchese to 10 years in prison.

Investigation disclosed that Michele Marchese and Jesse Del Bono had numerous sources of supply both in New York City and Chicago, Ill. Benny Marchese, the uncle of Michele, supplied large amounts of heroin from syndicated narcotic traffickers in New York City. Investigation also disclosed that Del Bono was mailing registered packages from California to Tony Dichiarente, in Chicago, Ill. These packages were believed to contain moneys in payment for deliveries of heroin from the Chicago syndicate. It was established that Marchese was a close friend and associate of major trafficker Anthony Castaldi of New York City.

YSIDRO ONTIVERO

Aliases: Chilo; Juan O. Torres; Isidro Rico; Isidro Ontivero.

Description: Date of birth, May 15, 1919, in El Paso, Tex.; 5 feet 8 inches tall; weighs 150 pounds; black hair; brown eyes; dark complexion; medium build.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1121

Criminal associates: Enrique Galindo, Feliciano Garcia, Mitchel Rosenberg, Jack Barthel, Mike Ramirez, the latter in Tijuana, Mexico.

Criminal history: Dates from 1935 and includes arrests for theft, burglary, and violation of the narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: A member of a group of traffickers engaged in smuggling-distributing heroin from Mexico. Sources of supply along the Mexican border and in Mexico.

Identification: FBI No. 1111269.

Summary of activity

Ysidro Ontivero has been an important international drug trafficker since 1935. Since that time he has served two Federal prison terms for violation of the Federal narcotic laws, one term for violation of the State narcotic laws, and one term in a prison in Mexico for violation of that country's narcotic laws.

When not in prison, Ontivero has persistently engaged in the narcotic traffic in the Western United States. In recent years, he has been associated with major trafficker, Miguel Barragan of Tijuana, Mexico. Ontivero received kilogram deliveries of heroin from Barragan on a consignment basis. He distributed this heroin in Los Angeles, Calif.; San Jose, Calif., and in the State of Washington.

On December 13, 1963, at Los Angeles, Calif., Ontivero was arrested after making several sales of heroin to a Federal narcotic agent. On February 18, 1964, he was sentenced to 10 years in the Federal penitentiary.

JAMES DURA PATTERSON

Alias: Pat.

Description: Date of birth, May 19, 1921, at Philadelphia, Pa.; 5 feet 11 inches tall; weighs 185 pounds; black hair; brown eyes; brown complexion; medium build; Negro.

Criminal associates: Megan King, Andrew Shannon, John T. McClain, Robert Burke. Well known to narcotic traffickers in the vicinity of 107th Street and Second Avenue, New York City.

Criminal history: Dates from 1945 and includes arrests for draft evasion, bookmaking, and violation of State and Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Purchases and sells heroin in wholesale quantities. Has sources of supply in New York that furnish pure heroin in kilogram lots. Maintains organization for distribution of narcotics.

Identification: FBI No. 4405723; Los Angeles Police Department No. 77387.

Summary of activity

James Patterson has long been identified as a wholesale dealer in heroin in the Los Angeles, Calif., area. In 1951, he was arrested in Los Angeles, Calif., along with his brother, Randolph Patterson, at which time 2 kilograms of pure heroin were seized. This heroin had just been received through the mail from New York.

Investigation disclosed Patterson's source of supply to be Dillard Morrison, considered to be the top heroin trafficker in the Harlem area of New York. Morrison's source of supply was Vincent Pacelli, considered one of the top men in the eastern narcotic syndicate. Pacelli, through Morrison, had been supplying quantities of heroin to California for several years through their west coast distributors, the Patterson brothers.

James Patterson was acquitted in a jury trial on December 4, 1951, at Los Angeles, Calif., when his brother and codefendant, Randolph Patterson testified that the narcotics seized were sent to him by a New York Italian trafficker. James Patterson continues to be one of the powers behind the illicit narcotic traffic in southern California. However, he ordinarily manages to have other individuals, such as his brother, front for him in this traffic.

MARIA ROSE SANTINO

Aliases: None.

Description: Date of birth, January 27, 1919, Boston, Mass.; white female, Italian extraction, 5 feet 1 inch tall, weighs 130 pounds, black hair, brown eyes, medium build.

Criminal associates: Matthew Santino (husband); Anthony Marcella, Anthony Dichiarante.

1122 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Criminal history: Includes arrests for prostitution, and one conviction for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Interstate courier of heroin for wholesale dealer Anthony Marcella, of Kansas City and Los Angeles.

Identification: FBI No. 390-862-C.

Summary of Activity

Maria Santino and her husband, Matthew Santino, were utilized by the notorious heroin trafficker Anthony Marcella in the large-scale interstate traffic from the Midwest to the Western United States. Maria Santino was utilized as a courier to travel by air to the Midwest for the purpose of transporting narcotics for distribution in the California area.

On March 20, 1959, at Los Angeles, Calif., narcotic agents arrested the two Santinos. Investigation disclosed that the source of supply for this operation was the Anthony Dichiarente group of Chicago, Ill.

MATTHEW SANTINO

Aliases: None.

Description: Date of birth, August 29, 1922, Kansas City, Mo.; white male, Italian extraction; 5 feet 11 inches tall; weighs 170 pounds; black hair; brown eyes; medium build.

Criminal associates: Anthony Marcella; Maria Santino (wife).

Criminal history: In addition to minor arrests, includes one conviction for violation of Federal narcotics laws.

Modus operandi: Interstate courier of heroin for wholesale dealer Anthony Marcella, of Kansas City and Los Angeles.

Identification: FBI No. 954-310-B.

Summary of activity

Maria Santino and her husband, Matthew Santino, were utilized by the notorious heroin trafficker Anthony Marcella in the large-scale interstate traffic from the Midwest to the Western United States. Maria Santino was utilized as a courier to travel by air to the Midwest for the purpose of transporting narcotics for distribution in the California area.

Matthew Santino acted as a courier in the intrastate traffic for the delivery of heroin between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

On March 20, 1959, at Los Angeles, Calif., narcotic agents arrested the two Santinos. Investigation disclosed that the source of supply for this operation was the Anthony Dichiarente group of Chicago, Ill.

JOSEPH SICA

Aliases: None.

Description: Date of birth, August 20, 1911, Newark, N.J.; 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighs 190 pounds, brown hair, black eyes, stocky build, dark complexion, and rough.

Criminal associates: Alfred, Frank, and Angelo Sica (brothers); Thomas DeMayo, Mickey Cohen, Salvatore Iannone, James Iannone, and is well known to all racketeers in southern California.

Criminal history: Record dates from 1926 and includes arrests for larceny, grand larceny, robbery, violation of Mann Act, and violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Important Mafia leader who maintains organization through strong-arm methods and extreme violence; is known as a killer; travels with bodyguard and is reported to deal in wholesale quantities of heroin.

Identification: FBI No. 343378; Los Angeles Police Department No. 32483M12.

Summary of activity

Joseph Sica of California has long been considered one of the most dangerous and deadly thugs in the country. Sica's lengthy criminal record includes arrests since 1928 for robbery, murder, extortion, narcotics, and other serious crimes. In early 1950, Sica and 15 other major racketeers were indicted by the grand jury for the Southern District of California, charged with conspiring to sell narcotics.

The eyewitness who testified for the Government concerning the sale and transactions by Sica was Abraham Davidian. While the case was pending for trial, Davidian was shot to death while sleeping in his mother's home at Fresno, Calif. No person has ever been tried for this murder; however, there is no doubt that

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1123

Sica and his codefendants were responsible for this killing. In view of Davidian's death, the indictment against all the defendants in this case was dismissed.

On September 28, 1959, Sica was arrested at Los Angeles for violation of the Antiracketeering Act, extortion, and conspiracy. Also arrested on the same charges were Paul John Carbo; Frank Palermo; Louis Tom Dragna, and Truman Gibson. On December 2, 1961, in Federal district court, California, Sica was sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment. Sica filed notice of appeal and was released on bond.

Joseph Sica and his brother, Alfred Sica, are hoodlums with important underworld connections in the East and in California.

SAN FRANCISCO AREA

MARIO BALISTRERI

Aliases: Marion Balesteri, Marlo Balestrero.

Description: Date of birth, November 20, 1901, San Francisco, Calif.; 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighs 175 pounds; blue eyes; brown hair, bald pate, walks with limp (right foot).

Criminal associates: Salvatore Lima, Joseph Pitta, Abraham Chalupowitz, and William Levin, of California, Arturo Leyvas, of Phoenix, Sebastiano Nani (deportee) and Charles Schiffman, of New Jersey.

Criminal history: Record dating from 1924 includes arrests for counterfeiting and narcotic trafficking. Three Federal narcotic convictions.

Modus operandi: Persistent large-scale Mafia narcotic trafficker, operating in association with important smugglers and traffickers who are members of the Mafia in the San Francisco Bay area.

Identification: FBI No. 93064; San Francisco Police Department No. P-302.

Summary of activity

The defendants in this case, 36 in number, conspired and formed an organization to distribute illicit narcotic drugs throughout the United States. The principal source of supply was Irving Waxler, of New York. Other sources of supply were Charles Schiffman, Robert L. Reynolds, Joseph Olivero, Mario Balestreri, and Sebastiano Nani. Joseph Littman acted as an order taker and receiver of currency in payment for narcotics sold by Irving Waxler and Charles Schiffman. All of these persons supplied Abraham Chalupowitz with narcotics. His partner in the sale of narcotics in California was Joseph Palm. Abraham Chalupowitz personally directed the sales of narcotics, utilizing the services of Harry Winkleblack to deliver and receive payments for the narcotics sold to the other defendants in this case. On March 23, 1951, Harry Winkleblack was arrested for violation of the narcotic laws. The defendants, William Levin and Frank McKee, then actively assisted him after Winkleblack's arrest in obtaining and selling narcotics. On April 22, 1951, Abraham Chalupowitz and William Levin were arrested and the arrest of Frank McKee followed on August 2, 1951, for violation of the narcotic laws. Mary Palm Hare, after January 29, 1951, the date Joseph Palm was sentenced to the penitentiary, knowingly participated in the conspiracy and collected money from Abraham Chalupowitz due Joseph Palm as his share of the profits from narcotics sold by Chalupowitz. The other defendants in this case purchased narcotics from Abraham Chalupowitz in California for distribution in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, and Arizona. The defendants, Irving Waxler, Samuel Kass, Arthur Repola, and Benjamin Katz continued to sell narcotics at New York, N.Y., until arrested in that city on August 2, 1951, for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

GAETANO PAUL CAPALBO

Aliases: Paul Anthony, Paulette Helm.

Description: White male, Italian extraction, born March 14, 1914, New York City, 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 160 pounds, medium build, dark brown-gray hair, brown eyes, ruddy complexion, often wears glasses.

Criminal associates: Joseph Stallone, Dominic Marcone, Alfred Saco, Archangelo Noio, Rocco Mазzie, Joseph Barra, Harry Tantillo.

Criminal history: Criminal record dates from 1933, includes grand larceny and narcotic law violations. Has two convictions for Federal narcotic law violations, for which he is currently serving a 10-year sentence.

1124 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Modus operandi: Large-scale narcotic trafficker for past 25 years with associates in New York and California.

Identification: FBI No. 2340720; New York City Police Department No. B-200313.

Summary of activity

The following case is a clear-cut example of the large-scale distribution of heroin of European origin from a highly organized east coast syndicate to the California area. In this case, the Bureau of Narcotics was fortunate in effecting the introduction of an undercover agent to this group before they got their operation off the ground.

During the month of January, 1958, Gaetano Paul Capalbo was introduced to an undercover Federal narcotic agent. Capalbo explained to the agent his grandiose idea for setting up a large interstate narcotic operation. As a result of this meeting, Capalbo and the agent traveled to New York City where, on January 29, 1958, Capalbo and Dominic Marcone sold one-half kilogram of heroin to the agent for $7,000 in Government money.

On February 21, 1958, Capalbo was arrested in San Francisco, Calif., together with Alfred Frank Sacco and Archangelo Rudolph Nolo, who had just arrived by air from New York, allegedly to deliver large quantities of heroin.

On February 24, 1958, Dominic Marcone was arrested in New York City and on March 7, 1958, three additional conspirators were arrested in New York, including Rocco Mazzie. Mazzie was identified as the source of supply for this organization and is considered to be one of the top traffickers within the eastern Mafia group.

ABRAHAM CHALUPOWITZ

Aliases: Abe Chapman, Abe Klein, Abe Gordon, Lou Green.

Description: White male; date of birth July 3, 1904, Poland, Jewish; 5 feet 6 inches tall; weighs 150 pounds; brown hair; brown eyes; medium build; rough skin. Alien, to be deported. At present no country will accept him.

Criminal associates: Sebastiano Nani; Joe Palm; Mario Balistreri, of California; Charles Schiffman, Samuel Kassop, and the late Waxey Gordon, of New York.

Criminal history: Record dating from 1928 includes arrests for theft and immigration violation. Three Federal narcotic convictions.

Modus operandi: A one-time member of the Murder, Inc., mob in Brooklyn, N.Y. He has operated over the years with the approval and cooperation of important Mafiosi in all parts of the country. A persistent large-scale narcotic trafficker.

Identification: FBI No. 264-265.

Summary of activity

The defendants in this case, 36 in number conspired and formed an organization to distribute illicit narcotic drugs throughout the United States. The principal source of supply was Irving Waxler of New York. Other sources of supply were Charles Schiffman, Robert L. Reynolds, Joseph Olivero, Mario Balestreri, and Sebastiano Nani. Joseph Littman acted as an order-faker and receiver of currency in payment for narcotics sold by Irving Waxler and Charles Schiffman. All of these persons supplied Abraham Chalupowitz with narcotics. His partner in the sale of narcotics in California was Joseph Palm. Abraham Chalupowitz personally directed the sales of narcotics, utilizing the services of Harry Winkleblack to deliver and receive payments for the narcotics sold to the other defendants in this case. On March 23, 1951, Harry Winkleblack was arrested for violation of the narcotic laws. The defendants, William Levin and Frank McKee, then actively assisted him after Winkleblack's arrest in obtaining and selling narcotics. On April 22, 1951, Abraham Chalupowitz and William Levin were arrested and the arrest of Frank McKee followed on August 2, 1951, for violation of the narcotic laws. Mary Palm Hare, after January 29, 1951, the date Joseph Palm was sentenced to the penitentiary, knowingly participated in the conspiracy and collected money from Abraham Chalupowitz due Joseph Palm as his share of the profits from narcotics sold by Chalupowitz. The other defendants in this case purchased narcotics from Abraham Chalupowitz in California for distribution in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, and Arizona. The defendants Irving Waxler, Samuel Kass, Arthur Repola, and Benjamin Katz continued to sell narcotics at New York, until arrested in that city on August 2, 1951, for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1125

CHAN CHUN

Alias: Chan Poon Char.

Description: In 1957, 69 years of age; Chinese, weighs 115 pounds; has maroon eyes; black hair; and sallow complexion.

Criminal associates: Pon Wai, Chang Jui Kang, Wong Yin Doon, Law Suey Wah; Lee Dong Kan.

Criminal history: Includes arrests for State and Federal narcotic laws. On July 15, 1954, sentenced to 7 years for Federal narcotic law violation in San Francisco.

Modus operandi: Wholesale dealer in heroin in kilogram lots from mainland China. Uses position as stockholder in business enterprises in San Francisco to facilitate the illicit narcotic traffic.

Identification: FBI No. 1766725; San Francisco Police Department No. 3725.

Summary of activity

After months of intensive investigation by undercover narcotic agents, major narcotic traffickers in Communist Chinese heroin were arrested in raids in San Francisco, Calif., on April 4, 1954. Those arrested were Ly Hing Soo; Chan Chun; Pon Wai; Chew Chung Young; Lee Chee Young; Chan Him Leong Ming; Hoo Ah Sze; and Quan Shue. All are Chinese. Approximately 6 pounds of heroin were seized in the raids. It was established that the heroin had been smuggled into the United States from Communist China. The principal source of supply was identified as Judah Isaac Ezra of Hong Kong, formerly convicted of large-scale narcotic trafficking in the United States and subsequently deported. Merchant seamen who frequented Ezra's hotel-restaurant-brothel in Hong Kong obtained the narcotics from Ezra and smuggled them in the United States for the narcotic dealers arrested in the raids on April 4, 1954.

From Chan Chun and Pon Wai two purchases of heroin, 1 pound each, were made. These men were also engaged in legitimate enterprises; Chan Chun was principal stockholder and operator of the China Emporium, one of the largest merchandising stores in San Francisco; Pon Wai operated the Fragrant Flower Shop, and one of the heroin purchases was delivered in a flower box of the firm.

Through Pon Wai the agent met Chew Chung Young and Lee Chee Young and purchased a pound of heroin from them. This heroin was wrapped as a Christmas parcel.

The agent also met Hoo Ah Sze and purchased from him 14 ounces of heroin. Hoo Ah Sze was employed as a cook was illegally in the United States, having jumped ship in San Francisco in 1951; he told the agent that he obtained the drugs from a seaman at Los Angeles.

From Leong Ming, and Chan Him, who was associated with him in the traffic, the agent purchased a pound of heroin.

The cases were prosecuted in Federal court and the following sentences were imposed:

Chan Chun, 7 years and $1,000 fine.

Pon Wai, 8 years.

Lee Chee Young, 8 years and $3,000 fine.

Hoo Ah Sze, 3 years and $300 fine.

Leong Ming, 10 years and $2,000 fine.

Ly Hing Soo, 10 years and $4,000 fine.

Chan Him, 8 years and $1,000 fine.

Quan Shue, 2 years and $1 fine.

JAMES VINCENT LaSALA

Aliases: Jimmie LaSala, Vincent LaSala.

Description: White male, date of birth, June 4, 1904, at Brooklyn, N.Y.; 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 190 pounds; brown eyes; gray hair; dark complexion; stout build.

Criminal associates: Frank LaSala (son); Bennie Mauceri; Sam Bartolotta; Frank Messina; Al Pizzichino; Anthony Caruso, and John Busterno, all of California; and Joseph DiGiovanna of New York City.

Criminal history: Has record of arrests dating from 1933, on such charges as narcotics, counterfeiting, and bookmaking with one conviction for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Is an active member in the Mafia's organization for the wholesale distribution of narcotics on the west coast.

Identification: FBI No. 690454; Los Angeles Police Department No. 82171.

1126 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS*Summary of activities*

James Vincent LaSala was one of the most important traffickers in northern California, obtaining huge supplies of heroin from the Mafia eastern syndicate. In 1953 and 1954, LaSala supplied pound quantities of heroin to the major traffickers in the San Francisco area.

LaSala's partner in this operation was one Benny Daguanno of Brooklyn, N.Y. Daguanno brought large quantities of heroin from the East by automobile to San Francisco where he assisted LaSala in the distribution of this drug.

The caution of these two traffickers was so great, that prior to making a transaction, they would have underlings maintain surveillance of the potential customer for several hours prior to the delivery to insure that the customer was not contacted by law enforcement officers or known informants.

LaSala was arrested on February 5, 1954, at San Francisco, Calif., and was later sentenced to 4 years in prison. The investigation of this operation disclosed that the source of supply for LaSala and Daguanno was Christoforo Rubino, a major New York trafficker. Rubino was later murdered in gangland fashion.

LEE DONG KAN

Aliases: Lee Wai; Chew W. Lee; Chew Chung Young.

Description: In 1957, 63 years of age; weighs 150 pounds; 5 feet 4½ inches tall; has maroon eyes; black hair; sallow complexion; and is Chinese.

Criminal associates: Lee Chuck Foo; Lee Hong Chung; Chan Chun.

Criminal history: Dates from 1934 and includes arrest for violation of State and Federal narcotic laws. Sentenced May 20, 1954, to 8 years for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: A smuggler-distributor of narcotics in large quantities locally in San Francisco and into interstate traffic. Source of supply: Red China via Hong Kong.

Identification: FBI No. 715171; San Francisco Police Department No. 3769.

Summary of activity

After months of intensive investigation by undercover narcotic agents, major narcotic traffickers in Communist Chinese heroin were arrested in raids in San Francisco, Calif., on April 4, 1954. Those arrested were Ly Hing Soo; Chan Chun; Pon Wai; Chew Chung Young; Lee Chee Young; Chan Him; Leong Ming; Hoo Ah Sze; and Quan Shue. All are Chinese. Approximately 6 pounds of heroin were seized in the raids. It was established that the heroin had been smuggled into the United States from Communist China. The principal source of supply was identified as Judah Isaac Ezra of Hong Kong, formerly convicted of large-scale narcotic trafficking in the United States and subsequently deported. Merchant seamen who frequented Ezra's hotel-restaurant-brothel in Hong Kong obtained the narcotics from Ezra and smuggled them into the United States for the narcotic dealers arrested in the raids on April 4, 1954.

From Chan Chun and Pon Wai two purchases of heroin, 1 pound each, were made. These men were also engaged in legitimate enterprise; Chan Chun was principal stockholder and operator of the China Emporium, one of the largest Chinese merchandising stores in San Francisco; Pon Wai operated the Fragrant Flower Shop, and one of the heroin purchases was delivered in a flower box of the firm.

Through Pon Wai the agent met Chew Chung Young and Lee Chee Young and purchased a pound of heroin from them. This heroin was wrapped as a Christmas parcel.

The agent also met Hoo Ah Sze and purchased from him 14 ounces of heroin. Hoo Sze was employed as a cook, was illegally in the United States having "jumped" ship in San Francisco in 1951, he told the agent that he obtained the drugs from a seaman at Los Angeles.

From Leong Ming, and Chan Him, who was associated with him in the traffic, the agent purchased a pound of heroin.

The cases were prosecuted in Federal court and the following sentences were imposed:

Chan Chun, 7 years and $1,000 fine.

Pon Wai, 8 years.

Lee Chee Young, 8 years and $3,000 fine.

Hoo Ah Sze, 3 years and $300 fine.

Leong Ming, 10 years and $2,000 fine.

Ly Hing Soo, 10 years and $4,000 fine.

Chan Him, 8 years and $1,000 fine.

Quan Shue, 2 years and $1 fine.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1127

ANTHONY MARCELLA

Aliases: Stringbean; Anthony Marcus; Tony Amore; Tony Ventola.

Description: White male; date of birth December 29, 1904, at Kansas City, Mo.; 5 feet, 8 inches tall; weighs 203 pounds; brown eyes; gray hair; dark complexion.

Criminal associates: Mike Altimari; Hugh G. Wall; Bennie Bonjoe, Patsy Ventola; Charles Taibi; John Picone; Harvey Mighell; Louis Ventola; Maria Avola; Charles Carolla (Palermo).

Criminal history: Dates from 1923 and includes 22 arrests for liquor law violations, gambling, and assault.

Modus operandi: A wholesale trafficker in narcotics with sources of supply in New York City and Chicago. Supplies narcotics in large quantities to dealers in other cities.

Identification: FBI No. 830276; Kansas City Police Department No. 47870.

Summary of activities

Anthony Marcella for many years was a notorious heroin trafficker in the Middle West operating from Kansas City, Mo. In the late 1950's he moved to Los Angeles, Calif., where he maintained a palatial residence. In California he sold enormous quantities of heroin and cocaine in Los Angeles and San Francisco, dealing in pound quantities.

Marcella's source of supply was the Anthony Dichiarente organization of Chicago, Ill. Marcella utilized couriers to travel by air to the Midwest and transport large quantities of heroin to the west coast. The two primary couriers utilized by Marcella were Matthew Santino, a Hollywood, Calif., bartender, and his wife, Maria Santino. This pair, in addition to delivering the drugs from Chicago, distributed this heroin throughout the State of California.

On March 19, 1959, at Los Angeles, Calif., narcotic agents arrested Marcella. Investigation disclosed that Marcella was the successor to the notorious Louis Fiano. On August 14, 1959, Federal Judge William C. Mathes sentenced Marcella to 40 years in prison.

ARCHANGELO RUDOLPH NOIO

Aliases: Angelo Nolo, Joseph Martine.

Description: White male, Italian extraction; date of birth May 2, 1927, at New York City; 5 feet, 10 inches tall, weighs 140 pounds; brown hair, brown eyes, and his occupation is chauffeur and truckdriver.

Criminal associates: Paul Capalbo, Alfred Frank Sacco, Rocco Mазzie.

Criminal history: This record dates from 1945 and includes arrests for rape, grand larceny, bookmaking, and violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Large-scale distributor of heroin from New York City to San Francisco, Calif.

Identification: FBI No. 4-539-562; New York City Police Department No. B-239891.

Summary of activity

Archangelo Rudolph Noio was utilized as a courier to deliver large quantities of heroin from New York City to the San Francisco, Calif., area. He was associated with violator Paul Capalbo in the interstate traffic, and Capalbo in turn was receiving his supply of heroin from Rocco Mазzie, identified as one of the top traffickers of the Italian eastern syndicate.

On February 21, 1958, Noio was arrested at San Francisco, Calif., together with Paul Capalbo and Alfred Frank Sacco, shortly after arriving by air from New York City, allegedly to deliver large quantities of heroin.

PETER JOHN PIACENTI

Aliases: Pete Nimo; Pete Gallo.

Description: White male, date of birth August 26, 1921, at New York City; 5 feet 7 inches tall weighs 190 ponuds; brown eyes, black curly hair; medium complexion.

Criminal associates: Sebastiano Nani; Pietro Raimondi; Leo Ferraro; Frank Scappatura; John Stopelli; Andrew Ingoglia.

Criminal history: Record dates from 1947 and includes arrests for conspiracy, theft, felonious assault, and violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: A large scale narcotic distributor who has close ties with top-level Mafia members in New York and California.

1128 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Identification: FBI No. 561015-A; New York City Police Department No. B-252724.

Summary of activity

Three 5-ounce purchases of heroin were made from Peter J. Piacenti and Pietro B. Raimondi in 1952 in San Jose, Calif. Two of these purchases were made by an undercover agent and after the arrest, in the home of Raimondi, the officers found 14 ounces of heroin, together with 2 pounds of the adulterant manitol, scales, bags, and other paraphernalia.

These violators, who are young, both resided in San Jose, Calif., and both had legitimate employment. Piacenti indicated to the undercover agent that he could furnish heroin in amounts of 100 ounces or more on 12 hours' notice. Investigation disclosed that the source of supply was Sebastiano Nani of Brooklyn, N.Y., a known international violator and a defendant in a California conspiracy case. Following the California arrest Sebastiano Nani and Frank Piacento were arrested in New York for attempting to bribe a narcotic agent with reference to Nani's indictment in San Francisco. Frank Piacenti is a brother of Peter, the defendant in this case.

Conviction was had after a trial of 2 weeks' duration, Peter J. Piacenti was sentenced to 3 years' imprisonment and Pietro B. Raimondi to 2 years' imprisonment.

GEORGE DOUGLAS POOLE

Aliases: Frank Thomas, Frank Ellis.

Description: Date of birth Oakland, Calif., January 22, 1923; white male, 6 feet tall, weighs 175 pounds, brown hair, blue eyes, medium complexion.

Criminal associates: Richard Ketchum, Raymond Hanna, John Simpson, Franklin Soares, John Chappell, Gerald Williams, King Richardson, Sr., Albert Marks.

Criminal history: Criminal record dates from 1936 when his arrest record began as a juvenile. He has been arrested for burglary, petty theft, and violation of the California narcotic laws, with no complaint filed for the latter arrest.

Modus operandi: A smuggler-distributor of narcotics in large quantities locally in San Francisco and into interstate traffic.

Identification: FBI No. 3472450, San Francisco Police Department No. 20219.

Summary of activity

Between 1948 and 1954 a group of approximately 25 Caucasian seamen residing in the San Francisco Bay area conspired to carry on a quiet, smoothly running smuggling operation resulting in the importation into San Francisco of more than 70 kilograms of Oriental heroin. During this period the caution and moderation employed by these conspirators was such that they were practically unknown to the authorities concerned. One of their safety precautions was to keep their operation relatively small, using the American President Line ships for the most part. They seldom attempted to smuggle more than 1 pound of drugs on each trip. President Line ships arrived in San Francisco every 3 weeks from the Orient and only one or two members of the group would be involved in the actual smuggling on each trip. The others would remain ashore and contribute money toward the purchase of the drugs in Hong Kong. When the drugs were finally brought ashore, generally with the assistance of longshoremen confederates, they would be distributed according to the financial contribution of each member of the group. In this way no individual risked a really important sum of money on each trip and, further, avoided suspicion by sailing only at infrequent intervals. The drugs were disposed of by selling the entire shipment to one of several wholesalers who were known only to a few of the smugglers.

In 1954, State narcotic officers arrested Thomas Moeller, one of the seamen involved, with possession of approximately 1 pound of heroin, at Oakland, Calif. He was subsequently sentenced to a term in the State penitentiary. This was the first important setback these conspirators had suffered. Since most of them were now reasonably well-to-do the group broke up and many of them engaged in legal enterprises ashore.

Following the arrest of Moeller, observation and investigation by Federal narcotic agents at San Francisco indicated that Moeller was only one of a large organization, most prominent of whom was George Poole. Poole had continued in the drug traffic, although he had remained ashore, and had become the proprietor of a garage. He obtained his drugs from various individual smugglers some of whom had been members of the conspiracy prior to its dissolution.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1129

After the enactment of the immunity statute incorporated in the Narcotic Control Act of 1956, it appeared that if we availed ourselves of that statute with respect to the brother of Thomas Moeller, William, there was an excellent chance of obtaining evidence against Poole and other members of the conspiracy. An administrative subpoena was served on William Moeller and he appeared with his attorney at the San Francisco headquarters of the Bureau of Narcotics. Upon advice of counsel he invoked the fifth amendment in response to questioning. It was then we suggested that an attempt would be made to apply the immunity statute to him and, after conferring with his attorney, he stated that should this be done he would testify on behalf of the Government in prosecution of others with whom he and his brother had been associated. The U.S. attorney at San Francisco then requested, and obtained from the Attorney General, authority to give William Moeller immunity.

In order to expedite matters, an agreement was reached with William Moeller and his attorney to make full disclosures in advance of the grand jury appearance. Based upon the information supplied by Moeller, administrative subpoenas were issued to all of the other persons involved with William Moeller. All appeared in response to the subpoena. Those who did not already have legal counsel were advised to obtain counsel so that they would be aware of the authority of agents of this Bureau to question them. Some of these persons returned and expressed a desire to cooperate and gave recorded statements involving themselves and others. Those who did not cooperate, invoking the fifth amendment, were kept available through the device of continuing their subpoenas from week to week pending action of the grand jury. As those witnesses cooperating were repeatedly questioned, more and more of the complex story unfolded. We obtained the crew lists of the American President Lines for all of the voyages concerned and were thus able to establish an exact chronology of the sailing and arrival times of the various conspirators. This, in turn, enabled us to locate hotel registrations where meetings of the group were held to distribute smuggled drugs, as well as other physical evidence corroborating the statements, such as toll calls, etc.

Thirty persons were reported to the U.S. attorney but, because of the statute of limitations, the U.S. attorney felt that only nine persons should be indicted, not including Thomas and William Moeller. On the opening day of the trial, when they became aware of the evidence in possession of the Government, four of the defendants pleaded guilty and three others pleaded guilty during the course of the trial. The two remaining defendants were found guilty. All defendants were sentenced to 5 years' imprisonment except one of the principal witnesses who received 3 years.

An interesting aspect of this case is that several of the defendants had become successful, legitimate businessmen, acquired families, and enjoyed an excellent reputation in their communities. Each considered himself well beyond the reach of justice.

CAL-5347—George Poole conspiracy

Richard Ketchum : 5 years ; court 9 ; April 23, 1957.
Raymond Hanna : 5 years ; court 9 ; April 23, 1957.
John Simpson ; 5 years ; court 9 ; April 23, 1957.
Franklin Soares ; 5 years ; court 9 ; April 23, 1957.
George Poole ; 5 years ; court 5 ; April 23, 1957.
John Chappell ; 5 years ; court 2 ; April 23, 1957.
Gerald Williams ; 3 years ; court 11 ; April 23, 1957.
King Richardson, Sr. ; 5 years ; court 9 ; April 23, 1957.
Albert Marks ; 2½ years ; courts 3, 4, 5, 6 ; May 28, 1957.
Douglas Van Horne : Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
John Doe "Goldteeth" : Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Samson Sargis : Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Andrew Mitchell, Jr. : Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Wallace Hargraves : Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
James Woods : Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Cornelius Shanahan : Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Thomas McKoy : Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Trinidad Swenson : Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
John Doe "Fong" : Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.

1130 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

OAL 5347—George Poole conspiracy—Continued

John Doe "Kalid": Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
John Doe "Abdul": Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Lee Spencer: Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
William Simpson: Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Hardin Briscoe: Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Jessie Lawrence: Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Oliver Roberts: Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Willie Christian: Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Anthony Longobardi: Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Ong Way Jong: Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.
Willie Tucker: Prosecution denied by U.S. attorney.

PETER B. RAIMONDI

Aliases: None.

Description: White male, Italian; date of birth, February 2, 1926, at Paola, Italy; 5 feet, 10 inches tall; weighs 190 pounds; blue eyes; black hair; heavy build and light complexion.

Criminal associates: Peter J. Piacenti, Sebastiano Nani.

Criminal history: One arrest and conviction for violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Large-scale distributor of heroin in California with important New York sources of supply.

Identification: FBI No. 193962-B.

Summary of activities

Three 5-ounce purchases of heroin were made from Peter J. Piacenti and Pietro B. Raimondi in 1952 at San Jose, Calif. Two of these purchases were made by an undercover agent and after the arrest, in the home of Raimondi, the officers found 14 ounces of heroin, together with 2 pounds of the adulterant manitol, scales, bags, and other paraphernalia.

These violators, who are young, both resided in San Jose, Calif., and both had legitimate employment. Piacenti indicated to the undercover agent that he could furnish heroin in amounts of 100 ounces or more on 12 hours' notice. Investigation disclosed that the source of supply was Sebastiano Nani of Brooklyn, N.Y., a known international violator and a defendant in a California conspiracy case. Following the California arrest Sebastiano Nani and Frank Piacenti were arrested in New York for attempting to bribe a narcotic agent with reference to Nani's indictment in San Francisco. Frank Piacenti is a brother of Peter; the defendant in this case.

Conviction was had after a trial of 2 weeks' duration, Peter J. Piacenti was sentenced to 3 years imprisonment and Pietro B. Raimondi to 2 years imprisonment.

ALFRED FRANK SACCO

Alias: Freddie.

Description: White male, Italian extraction, date of birth, March 6, 1928; at New York, N.Y.; 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 165 pounds, brown hair and blue eyes. His occupation is bartender.

Criminal associates: Paul Capalbo; Archangelo Rudolph Noio, Rocco Mазzie.

Criminal history: Includes arrests from 1948 for gambling, bookmaking, and violation of the Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Large-scale distributor of heroin from New York City to San Francisco, Calif.

Identification: FBI No. 808-989-C.

Summary of activity

Alfred Frank Sacco was utilized as a courier to deliver large quantities of heroin from New York City to the San Francisco, Calif., area. He was associated with violator Paul Capalbo in the interstate traffic, and Capalbo in turn was receiving his supply of heroin from Rocco Mазzie, identified as one of the top traffickers of the Italian eastern syndicate.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1131

On February 21, 1958, Sacco was arrested at San Francisco, Calif., together with Paul Capalbo and Archangelo Rudolph Noio, shortly after he arrived by air from New York City, allegedly to deliver large quantities of heroin.

GEORGE W. YEE

Aliases: None.

Description: Born in Canton, China, March 29, 1905; weighs 180 pounds; 5 feet 10 inches tall; black hair; brown eyes; stocky build; sallow complexion.

Criminal associates: Lee Dean, Fred Moe, Chung Wing Fong.

Criminal history: One arrest and conviction for violation of the Federal narcotic laws for which a sentence of 5 years was imposed.

Modus operandi: A smuggler-distributor of large quantities of heroin in the interstate traffic between California, Oregon, and Washington. Source of supply, Red China via Hong Kong.

Identification: FBI No. 291-005-E.

Summary of activity

Upon the arrest of Jung Jim, defendant in case Oreg-1941 on April 28, 1958, in Portland, Oreg., documentary evidence was seized which revealed that between the period 1951 through 1957, 124 kilograms of pure heroin were smuggled into the United States from the Far East.

A total of 21 Chinese conspirators were engaged in this vast operation. Twelve of them resided in Hong Kong, Macao, and Shanghai, beyond the jurisdiction of the United States for prosecution.

From the documents seized, it was established that the heroin originated in the Province of Szechwan, Communist China, and was smuggled into various U.S. Pacific coast ports via Hong Kong and Shanghai. Documentary evidence also showed that the conspirators in this case referred to themselves in customary Communist terms. The U.S. price paid by the American-Chinese receivers averaged $360 an ounce.

It was noted that two Chinese tongs here in the United States—namely, the Bing Kong and the Hip Sing—played important roles in this conspiracy case. The Bing Kong president at Portland, Oreg., was used as a mediator and settled the matter of commissions over narcotics between two conspirators in this case. George W. Yee, the primary conspirator in this case, was the president of the Hip Sing Tong in San Francisco during the year 1958.

On April 28, 1959, George W. Yee, was sentenced in Federal court at San Francisco, to a term of 5 years imprisonment for his participation in this case.

Moe Yim, alias Fred Moe, of Portland, Oreg., a conspirator in this case, committed suicide shortly after his arrest and release on commissioner's bond, by driving his vehicle at a high rate of speed into a concrete freeway pillar.

Lee Dean of Portland, Oreg., another conspirator in this case, is still a fugitive. From reliable sources of information, it has been established that Lee fled to Kowloon, where he is presently residing.

Two former narcotic partners of both Moe Yim and Lee Dean in Portland, Oreg., were Tung Jim and Wey Him Fong, alias Wayne Fong. Jung is presently incarcerated at McNeil Island Penitentiary, serving a 12-year sentence imposed in case Oreg-1951, as a result of sales of both heroin and opium to an undercover narcotic agent.

Fong is presently incarcerated in the U.S. penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kans., serving a 20-year sentence imposed in case Oreg-1946, as a result of three separate sales of pure brick heroin to an undercover narcotic agent.

Cal-5628—George W. Yee et al.

The following is the translation from defendant Jim Jung's memorandum book:

On page 24 of the memorandum book dated August 15, no year, is the following:

"1. Received 'Ger Kiung' from Sue-Chung Province in Communist China (assumed to be heroin) 1 dozen (assumed to be 12 ounces).

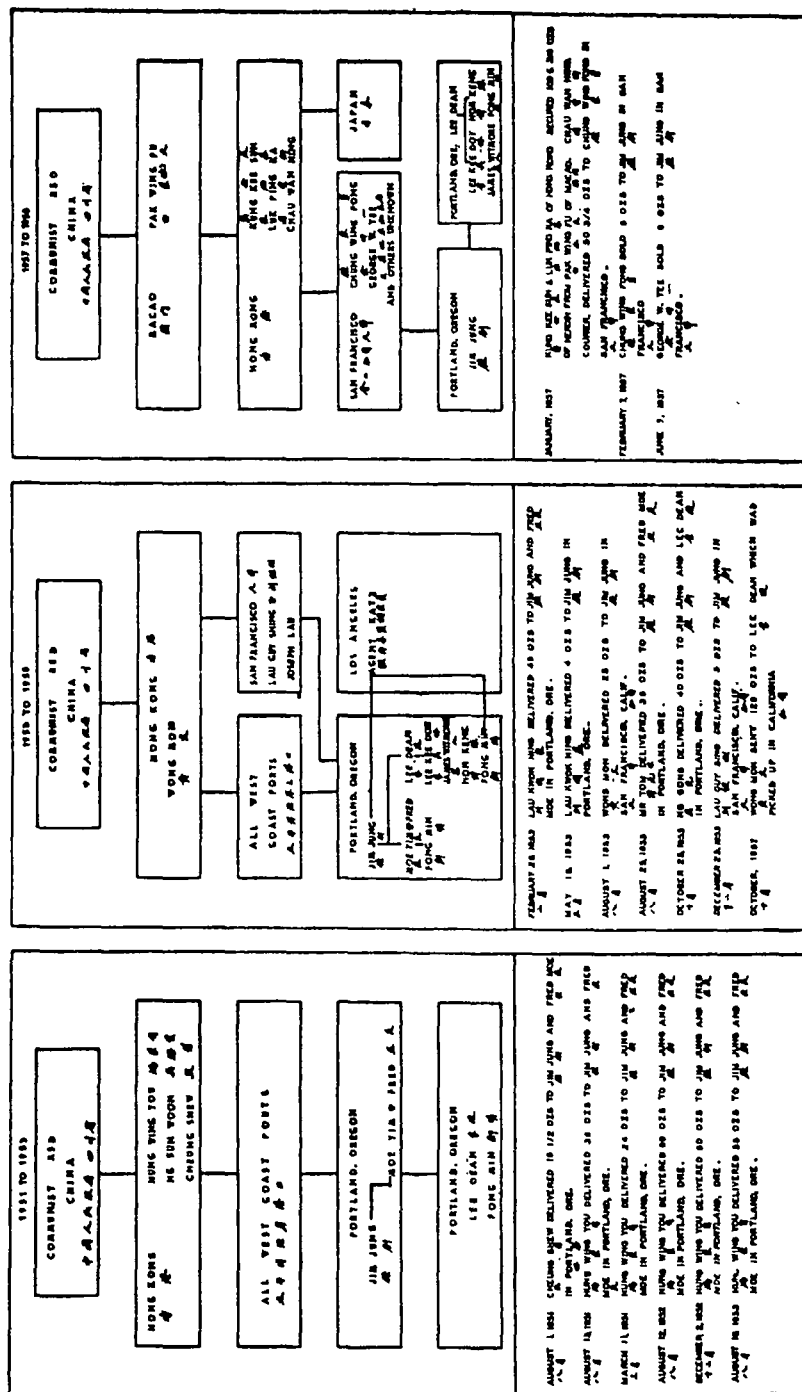

"2. At the same date, received private stock of 'Ger Kyung' from Sue Chung Province in Communist China (assumed to be heroin) at the price of $250 per ounce.

"3. This action is completed (assumed money was paid and transaction completed)."

1132 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

GEORGE W. YEE ET AL

CAL. 5028

1951 TO 1958 AT LEAST 270 POUNDS HEROIN BROUGHT INTO THE UNITED STATES FROM COMMUNIST CHINA. SUE CHUN PROVINCE

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1133

SEATTLE, WASH., AREA

ERNEST DUKE ARNOLD

Aliases: None.

Description: Date of birth: June 12, 1922, at Sapulpa, Okla.; Negro male; 5 feet 8 inches tall; 175 pounds; black hair, brown eyes; usually wears a mustache; dark brown complexion; scar on his head.

Criminal associates: Westbrook Sanders, Leroy Lemons, Travis Reid, Solomon Sandez, Jr., Eugene Westbrook, Leroy Jefferson, Clarence Criss.

Criminal history: Dates from 1936, includes arrests for larceny, vagrancy, wife abandonment, pimping, carrying a concealed weapon, first degree kidnapping, violation of Mann Act, violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Distributor of heroin in the States of Washington and Oregon.

Identification: FBI No. 1-991-904, San Francisco Police Department No. 83787, Los Angeles Police Department No. 100410.

Summary of activity

This subject is considered to have been one of the most important narcotic traffickers in the Pacific Northwest. In addition to independent interstate and international heroin trafficking, he was associated with two large conspiracy groups operating on the Pacific coast. The first of these was the Leroy Jefferson group which conspired to import heroin from Mexico and France for distribution in the United States, primarily in Washington, Oregon, and California. Arnold was one of the distributors for the group in Washington and Oregon. When the Jefferson conspiracy was ended in 1959 Arnold found a source of supply in Solomon Rodrigo-Sandez, Jr., of Tijuana, Mexico, and began buying heroin from him at Tijuana and San Diego, usually sending runners, such as Travis Robert Reid, Clayton Avritt, Robert Watson Boyd, Hazel Davis, Odean Sheppard, and Darres Poe to pick up the heroin (several ounces at a time) and bring it to Portland. This operation grew into another conspiracy with Westbrook Sanders, Leroy Lemons, Wallace Hanks (deceased), Jack Rose, and others to secure heroin from Sandez at Tijuana for distribution in Washington and Oregon. This conspiracy existed during 1959 and 1960 with Arnold, Sanders, and Lemons as the leaders. At one time they planned to set up their own laboratory at Dallesport, Wash., in order to manufacture heroin themselves.

In September 1959, there were three factions competing for the heroin market in Portland. One was Arnold, and others; the second was Charles Redd and associates; and the third was a group composed of Clarence Moss, Robert Perkins, and Otto Jordon. On September 30, 1959, Redd and Arnold got into an argument and Redd struck Arnold over the head with a pistol which also went off and shot Arnold in the head, causing some brain damage. A few weeks later Redd was found murdered in his hotel room after having been shot 11 times with a pistol. Otto Jordon pleaded guilty to the murder and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

On December 4, 1960, Arnold was arrested in cases Oreg-1984 and Wash-3110, sales of heroin at Portland, Oreg., and Dallesport, Wash. He was convicted in case Oreg-1984 at U.S. district court, Portland, and was sentenced to a term of 10 years on March 2, 1961. A complaint was filed in Wash-3110 at Yakima, Wash., but dismissed after the sentence in Oreg-1984.

TOM FUN BOW (DECEASED)

Aliases: Hom Fun Bow, Harry Fun Bow.

Description: Date of birth: September 21, 1895 in Canton, China; Chinese male; 5 feet 6½ inches tall; weighs 175 pounds; brown eyes; black hair; stocky build.

Criminal associates: Yee Shee Foon, Luis Wong, Wing Locke.

Criminal history: Alleged to have been a "hatchetman" for the On Leong Tong in the eastern part of the United States; president of the Fourth Family Association, known as the Chew Lun Benevolent Association.

Modus operandi: Sole distributor for Luis Wong of Mexicali, Mexico.

Identification: FBI No. 366-636.

1134 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS*Summary of activity*

In the early 1950's this suspect received his supply of narcotic drugs from seamen who smuggled same from the Orient to various points throughout the Western United States.

Following the general trend in the Western United States in the late 1950's his source of supply was identified as an important international violator, Luis Wong of Mexicali, Mexico.

Tom Fun Bow was found guilty of narcotic violations in Federal court on September 29, 1960, and sentenced to a 10-year term and fined $10,000. He was allowed to remain free on appeal bond. On the following day, September 30, 1960, he committed suicide by leaping from the roof of the Bush Hotel in Seattle, Wash.

LEROY LEMONS

Aliases: Leroy Lemmons, LeRoy Lemon.

Description: Date of birth: September 3, 1926, at Weimar, Tex.; Negro male; 6 feet tall, 184 pounds, black hair processed, brown eyes.

Criminal associates: Solomon Rodrigo Sandez, Jr., Ernest Duke Arnold, Caesar Watson, Beulah Smith, Marvin Sockwell, Luke Pope.

Criminal history: Dates from 1945 and includes arrests for narcotic violations and pimping.

Modus operandi: Wholesale distributor of narcotics in the Seattle, Wash., and Portland, Oreg., area.

Identification: FBI No. 435672; Seattle Police Department No. 42465.

Summary of activity

In 1958 Leroy Lemons emerged as the main source of supply for Portland, Oreg., and vicinity with his supply being Westbrook Sanders. Sanders' source was Solomon Sandez, Jr., of Tijuana, Mexico.

Lemons was associated in a conspiracy with Ernest Arnold, Westbrook Sanders, and many others. These conspirators used addict runners to travel to San Diego, Calif., where they would obtain large quantities of heroin from their source of supply in Tijuana, Mexico. In each of these transactions in San Diego, Calif., sums of money ranging in amounts from $2,500 to $5,000 were exchanged.

This trafficker widened his scope of operation to include the Seattle, Wash., area, in addition to Portland, Oreg.

In early 1962 Lemons was convicted in a conspiracy case in Seattle and sentenced to 10 years in Federal penitentiary.

WESTBROOK SANDERS

Aliases: None.

Description: Born March 2, 1915, at Paul Valley, Okla.; Negro male. Married to Charlotte Sanders, a white female ex-prostitute.

Criminal associates: Tom Burton, Ivory Wilson, Isaac Wilson, Howard Bible, Oscar Trotter, Frank Williams, Frank White, Robert Perkins.

Criminal history: Includes arrest and conviction for burglary second degree, Mann Act, conspiracy and violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Wholesale heroin dealer in San Diego, Calif., Portland, Oreg., and Seattle, Wash.

Identification: FBI No. 888532; Seattle, Wash., Police Department No. 45432.

Summary of activity

Westbrook Sanders was an important heroin trafficker in Seattle, Wash., from 1950 until his arrest and conviction there in 1954. His main source of supply at that time was seamen arriving from the Orient. He was able to purchase heroin in Canada and apparently did so. Sanders was in prison from 1954 to 1958 after being convicted in Washington—2961. In 1958 Sanders left McNeil Island and again engaged in the heroin traffic, but on a much larger scale.

Westbrook Sanders was associated in a conspiracy with Ernest Arnold, Leroy Lemons, Leon Noah, Jack Rose, Robert W. Boyd, Odean Sheppard, Hazel Davis, Eugene Westbrook, Daares Poe, Travis Reid, Beulah Smith, and Ceasar Watson, to obtain heroin from Solomon Rodrigo Sandez, Jr., in Mexico, through Sandez's runners, to be delivered to San Diego for transportation to Portland, Oreg., and Seattle, Wash.

On July 9, 1962, Sanders was sentenced to a term of 15 years for violation of 21 U.S.C. 174 (conspiracy). He is presently incarcerated at McNeil Island Penitentiary.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1135

PORTLAND, OREG., AREA

CLARENCE CRISS

Alias: "Big Criss."

Born November 27, 1917, Pine Bluff, Ark.

Criminal associates: Leroy Lemons, Clarence Dawkins, Leroy Jefferson, Lulu Parker, Ernest Duke Arnold, Velmer Dorsey, and numerous other Portland, Oreg., hoodlums.

Criminal record: FBI No. 2431808.

Prior to his sentence of 10 years in Federal court at Portland, Oreg., on April 11, 1958, in connection with Oreg-1938, Criss had only two prior arrests, one in 1938 at Dalhart, Tex., for vagrancy and the other one in 1952 at Los Angeles, Calif., for a traffic violation.

Personal description and history: Clarence Criss is a male Negro who, sometime prior to 1956, met and became acquainted with notorious violator Leroy Jefferson. Criss was not a narcotic addict but was reported to be a heavy marihuana smoker. In fact he was also considered to be, in addition to his highly important role in the heroin traffic, a very large source of supply for bulk marihuana in Portland. At the time of his arrest in our case Oreg-1938 in 1958, Criss was married to Augusta Criss and they had one child age 3½. He claimed that he formerly was a taxi driver in Chicago and that he also had worked on the Southern Pacific Railroad for many years. At that time he was paying for his home in Portland at the rate of $50 per month after $150 downpayment.

LEROY LEMONS

Aliases: Leroy Lemmons; LeRoy Lemon.

Description: Date of birth, September 3, 1926, at Weimar, Tex.; Negro male; six feet tall; 184 pounds; black hair processed; brown eyes.

Criminal associates: Solomon Rodrigo Sandez, Jr., Ernest Duke Arnold, Caesar Watson, Beulah Smith, Marvin Sockwell, Luke Pope.

Criminal history: Dates from 1945 and includes arrests for narcotic violations and pimping.

Modus operandi: Wholesale distributor of narcotics in the Seattle, Wash., and Portland, Oreg., area.

Identification: FBI No. 435672; Seattle Police Department No. 42465.

Summary of activity

In 1958, Leroy Lemons emerged as the main source of supply for Portland, Oreg., and vicinity with his supply being Westbrook Sanders. Sanders' source was Solomon Sandez, Jr., of Tijuana, Mexico.

Lemons was associated in a conspiracy with Ernest Arnold, Westbrook Sanders, and many others. These conspirators used addict runners to travel to San Diego, Calif., where they would obtain large quantities of heroin from their source of supply in Tijuana, Mexico. In each of these transactions in San Diego, Calif., sums of money ranging in amounts from $2,500 to $5,000 were exchanged.

This trafficker widened his scope of operation to include the Seattle, Wash., area, in addition to Portland, Oreg.

In early 1962 Lemons was convicted in a conspiracy case in Seattle and sentenced to 10 years in Federal penitentiary.

ARTHUR JAMES PALMER

Address: 109 Northeast San Rafael Street, Portland, Oreg. (presently serving 7½ years' sentence in Federal prison).

Place and date of birth: De Funiak Springs, Fla., May 19, 1923.

Criminal associates: Leroy Lemons, Ernest Duke Arnold, Sam Blasingame, Travis Robert Reid, William McCowan, Merle Blasingame McGowan, John Adams also known as Horace, Roma Ollison also known as Poop, David Kiser, Herman Canyon, Eddie Henry Lloyd, James Whitmore, James Williams, Gwen Crawford, Clyde Motton, Solomon Sandez, Jr.

Criminal record: The first arrest of Arthur Palmer, according to his FBI record, was by the police department at Alameda, Calif., on August 14, 1948, for petty theft. No disposition is shown. He was arrested by the Anchorage,

1136 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Alaska, Police Department on November 6, 1949, for reckless driving, posted $100 bail. On June 20, 1952, he was arrested by the sheriff's office at Seattle, Wash., for petty larceny and the case was dismissed by bail forfeiture. He was arrested by the sheriff's office at Tacoma, Wash., on November 14, 1953, for driving while license suspended, was sentenced to 2 days in the county jail and $2.50 costs. At Seattle he was arrested by the police department on February 19, 1958, for a traffic violation and investigated for narcotics. He posted a $20 bond on the traffic charge which he then forfeited.

Palmer was detained (not an arrest) by the San Diego, Calif., Police Department on June 5, 1958, for suspicion of robbery.

On March 30, 1962, Palmer was arrested at Portland, Oreg., for violation of the Federal narcotic laws, was sentenced to a term of 7½ years on September 13, 1962. (See cases Oreg-2002 and Oreg-2009.)

Criminal identification numbers:

Federal Bureau of Investigation: 3 760 331.

Federal Bureau of Narcotics: Oreg-2002, Oreg-2009.

Alameda, Calif., Police Department: 7997.

Seattle, Wash., Sheriff's Office: 38 189.

Tacoma, Wash., Sheriff's Office: BA-18 488.

Seattle, Wash., Police Department: 49 478.

Anchorage, Alaska, Police Department: 2479/3252.

San Diego, Calif., Police Department: 152 906.

Portland, Oreg., Police Department: 40 811.

Portland, Oreg., Sheriff's Office: 43 770.

Personal description and history: Arthur James Palmer, also known as Roosevelt Oates, is a Negro, male, born De Funiak Springs, Fla., on May 19, 1923, five feet eight inches tall, 168 pounds, black hair, maroon eyes, former carpenter, merchant seaman, motel and hotel operator, and political club leader.

The subject has six brothers and one sister. One of the brothers is Leroy Palmer who is a foundry worker living at 3728 North Williams Ave., Portland, Oreg. Arthur Palmer served in the U.S. Navy from 1942 to 1945, was discharged with the rank of seaman, first class. He worked as a merchant seaman during 1946 and 1947, serving on vessels that called at foreign ports. In 1948 and 1949 he was employed as a carpenter for the Atomic Energy Commission, Hanford project, Pasco, Wash. While living at Pasco he became acquainted with Ernest Duke Arnold, Leroy Lemons and Sam Blasingame, among others. During 1950, 1951, 1952, and 1953 he worked again as a merchant seaman and resided at Seattle, Wash. During 1954 and 1955 he worked as a carpenter in military construction in Alaska; went to sea again in 1956 and 1957; resided in Portland from 1958 to 1962 when he went to Federal prison. In Portland, Palmer owned and operated the Desert Hotel, which was destroyed by fire in late 1959, and the Desert Motel.

Palmer became a narcotic suspect in the Pacific Northwest over 10 years ago, during the period 1950-53 when he was employed as a merchant seaman, and it is interesting to note that just prior to that period (1948 and 1949) he had worked at Pasco, Wash., and while there had become acquainted with such notorious heroin traffickers as Ernest Duke Arnold, Leroy Lemons, and Sam Blasingame, as is mentioned above. Although he did not move to Portland until 1956, it is known that Palmer trafficked in narcotics in Portland as early as 1952. Although we have little information as to his sources of supply prior to 1961, it is believed that the bulk of his heroin supplies were smuggled into the United States by either Palmer himself or by seaman associates.

In 1961 Palmer began securing his heroin supplies from Solomon Sandez, Jr., of Tijuana, Mexico, and engaged Travis Robert Reid to act as a runner to pick up the drugs from Sandez.

During the period 1960-62 Palmer distributed heroin in Portland through James Whitmore, James Williams, Clyde Motton, William McGowan, Merle McGowan, and Travis Robert Reid, among others. He usually sold to the retailers in quantities of "spoons" or better and often took stolen merchandise in payment for drugs.

Although this subject was considered by most enforcement agencies to be a major narcotic violator, he claimed to be a social and political leader in the Portland area. A large number of politicians and other prominent business and social leaders were taken in by Palmer and had no idea that he was engaged in the narcotic traffic. He was president of the Booker T. Washington Democrat Club in Portland which supported first the Democratic and then the Republican Party in the 1960 presidential election.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1137

A narcotic conspiracy case (Oreg-2002) was developed against Palmer in early 1962. At his trial on May 16 and 17, 1962, three prime Government witnesses balked, causing the trial to end in a mistrial and a loss of eight of the nine counts in the indictment. Investigation revealed that Palmer had intimidated and bribed witnesses and a new 19-count indictment was returned. He subsequently pleaded guilty to a bill of information charging one count of narcotic law violation (Oreg-2009) and was sentenced to a term of 7½ years on September 13, 1962.

EUGENE JOSEPH GREGORY SPURLOCK

Address: U.S. Penitentiary, McNeil Island, Wash.

Aliases: Eugene Joseph Spurlock, Spider, George Joseph Spurlock, Gregory Spurlock, Earl Robert Washington, Harold Eugene Gregory.

Personal description: Male Negro, U.S. citizen; born January 12, 1923, at Brooklyn, N.Y.; height 5 feet 7 inches, weight 131 pounds, black hair, maroon eyes; slender build. Addicted at time of arrest February 25, 1960; admits use of heroin and addiction since 1950.

Criminal history: FBI No. 4-991-975; U.S. Bureau of Narcotics case No. Oreg-1968; Portland Police Department No. 37759; Multnomah County Sheriff's Office No. 40444; Seattle Police Department No. 49414.

Spurlock's first arrest, as indicated by the FBI criminal record report, was in 1941 at New York for robbery. During the next 19 years from 1941 to 1960 Spurlock's record report shows a total of 66 arrests for assault, larceny, check forgery, Not Stolen Property Act, drinking, burglary from auto, vagrancy, narcotic addiction, grand theft, bunco, possession of narcotics, larceny from a store, and violation of the Federal narcotic laws. As a result of these charges Spurlock served small sentences of from 3 to 6 months. A Federal charge of interstate transportation of stolen checks in 1947 resulted in a sentence of 1 year and 6 months. In 1960 Spurlock was arrested for violation of the Federal narcotic laws for which he received an 8-year sentence, the first substantial incarceration in his long and varied criminal career.

Background information: Eugene Spurlock first came to the attention of the Bureau of Narcotics, District No. 15, during the years 1957 and 1958 in Seattle, Wash. During this time Spurlock can best be described as an addict peddling small capsule quantities of heroin to sustain his own addiction. He was then associating with Don Jordon, Seattle trafficker, selling shots and capsules at Jordon's residence. After Jordon's arrest in 1959 Spurlock came to Portland, Oreg. During the latter part of 1959 Spurlock made several trips to Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada, to pick up small supplies of heroin for his own use and for resale. In this same period of time he became associated with Myrtle Patricia Cutchlow. Cutchlow herself had just moved to Portland from Seattle where she had peddled heroin for a number of years, on her own, and in conjunction with her husband, Ray Cutchlow. Pat Cutchlow moved to Portland after Ray was arrested on a narcotic charge. It is rumored that Pat Cutchlow was responsible for this arrest. Pat Cutchlow then made her own arrangements with her husband's former source of supply for heroin. Cutchlow made numerous trips to San Diego during 1959 to pick up heroin from Urbano Siquieros of Tijuana, Mexico. She in turn was supplying several local peddlers including Ernest Duke Arnold, Oreg-1984, Leroy Hastings, Oreg-1970, Charles Erwin Redd, and Westbrook Sanders, of Seattle, Wash. On the retail level most of the peddling was handled by Eugene Spurlock.

In January 1960 Cutchlow was arrested for possession of heroin by Portland police officers and this case was taken into Federal court. After this arrest Cutchlow enlisted the aid of Eugene Spurlock to make trips to San Diego for her. These trips were made at Cutchlow's expense and payment of moneys and other arrangements were taken care of by Cutchlow. Spurlock made one successful trip to San Diego in January 1960 and on the second trip in February 1960 he was arrested by agents of the Bureau of Narcotics at Portland, Oreg.

In March of 1960 Urbano Siquieros was arrested in possession of a quantity of heroin by agents of the Los Angeles office of the Bureau of Narcotics working in conjunction with Mexican authorities.

In September 1960 Spurlock was found guilty by a Federal court jury and later received an 8-year sentence. Pat Cutchlow received a 10-year sentence on her separate case in July 1960.

1138 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

DENVER, COLO., AREA

JOE NATHAN CLARK

Alias: Squirrel.

Description: Negro male; born in Midland, Tex., July 9, 1934; 5 feet 9½ inches; 145 pounds; slender build; brown complexion; maroon eyes; and black hair. Has large burn scar on side of face.

Localities frequented: Bars in the Five Points area (Negro section) of Denver. Presently in Federal prison for violation of Federal narcotic laws. Due to be released on December 13, 1962, and will reside at 2096 Emerson Street, Denver, Colo.

Criminal associates: Hubert Mason, Charles A. Garret, Jr., George Benningfield.

Criminal history: Discloses one minor arrest for theft and conviction for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Employed by wholesale dealers as a courier for transportation of heroin from Chicago to Denver. Would meet Denver wholesale dealers in Chicago, pick up the drug, and return to Denver via some conveyance other than that used by his employer.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Police Department, Denver, Colo.

Identification: FBI No. 937,396 C; Denver Police Department No. 56225.

Summary of activity

In July of 1958, information furnished the Chicago office of the Bureau of Narcotics indicated that Charles A. Garret, Jr., and subject Joe Nathan Clark, known only as Squirrel, at that time were in Chicago to purchase a quantity of heroin from an unknown source. Agents of the Chicago office subsequently observed Joe Nathan Clark entrain the Denver Zephyr on July 15, 1958, and he was arrested the following morning by Denver agents. He was found with 3 ounces 432.5 grains of heroin on his person. Clark refused to identify the person for whom he made the trip to Chicago or to identify any individuals whom he contacted in Chicago relative to the transaction.

Clark was tried for violation of the Federal narcotic laws on March 13, 1959, was found guilty, and subsequently sentenced to 5 years. He remains in Federal prison but according to the Federal probation office, Denver, is scheduled for release on December 13, 1962. He intends to return to Denver.

Subject Clark had been used on several occasions by Charles A. Garret, Jr., and Hubert Mason to transport heroin to Denver. Whether he will again become involved in the narcotic traffic cannot presently be determined. Both Garret and Mason have recently become active and may approach Clark following his release; however, Clark himself has never attained any stature in the heroin traffic and it appears doubtful that he will gain any further importance than that of a courier.

In view of Clark's reluctance to cooperate before his incarceration, it is not felt that he would be any more amenable to suggestion that he help the Government now that he has served his prison term.

JAMES GLOVER, JR.

Aliases: None.

Description: Negro male; born in Fort Worth, Tex., on August 8, 1932; 5 feet 9 inches; 180 pounds; muscular build; brown complexion; brown eyes; and black hair.

Localities frequented: Denver address, 2925 Josephine Street. Frequents bars in Five points area (Negro section) of Denver. Presently confined at Federal Medical Center, Springfield, Mo.

Criminal associates: Morris Joseph, Norman Smith, Edward McCray, Wesley W. Jackson, Douglas Onick, Kentha McDowell.

Criminal history: Conviction for violation of the Federal narcotic laws in May 1961. Circuit court reversed guilty verdict and dismissed charges.

Modus operandi: Obtained large quantities of heroin from Morris Joseph for distribution in Colorado and Texas.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics; and police departments of Denver, Colo., and Fort Worth, Tex.

Identification: FBI No. 885,504B; Denver Police Department No. 61124; Fort Worth Police Department No. EX-83159.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1139

Summary of activity

James Glover, Jr., first came to the attention of this office during the summer of 1959 as an active heroin violator. Further reports indicated that Glover was operating on a larger scale and being supplied by Morris Joseph. Efforts were made to purchase evidence from him but he refused to meet any agents or special employees. Glover extended his activities, in cooperation with Morris Joseph and Norman Smith, to Texas where he supplied heroin in wholesale quantities to peddlers in Fort Worth and Dallas. Glover and Norman Smith entered in a partnership with Morris Joseph, who supplied the heroin from various sources in Chicago and Tijuana, Mexico. Glover would make frequent trips to Chicago; Texas; and the west coast in furtherance of these activities. Glover was convicted on May 22, 1961, at Denver, Colo., for violation of the Federal narcotic laws and subsequently sentenced to 15 years. The conviction was reversed by the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals on July 9, 1961. In September of 1961, a Federal grand jury at Dallas, Tex., returned an indictment charging Glover with violation of the Federal narcotic laws in Texas. He was arrested and transported to Texas to stand trial. On December 11, 1961, while en route to district court for trial Glover went berserk. He was committed to the custody of the Attorney General and subsequently taken to the Medical Center for Federal Prisoners at Springfield, Mo., where he remains under treatment. Upon determination by hospital authorities that his mental condition is sufficiently improved, he will stand trial for violations reported in Tex-12236.

MORRIS JOSEPH

Alias: Fat Joe.

Localities frequented: Has lived in Beaumont, Tex.; New York City; Chicago; Hartford; Denver; and Los Angeles. Frequents better bars in Negro sections.

Description: Negro male; born in New Orleans, La., on June 24, 1926; 5 feet 7 inches; 200 pounds; heavy build; dark brown complexion; brown eyes; and black hair. Has 4-inch-cut scar over left eye.

Criminal associates: Edward McCray; James Glover, Jr.; Norman E. Smith; and prominent heroin traffickers in Chicago, New York, California, and Texas.

Modus operandi: A notorious trafficker in narcotics throughout the United States. Is able to obtain heroin in large quantities through associates for distribution to outlets in many of the large cities. Would operate small businesses such as taxi service, real estate, etc., as a front.

Criminal history: Dates from 1944 and includes four convictions under the Federal narcotics and marihuana laws. Currently serving a total of 80½ years following convictions for violation of the Federal narcotic laws in Texas, Colorado, and California.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics; U.S. Customs Agency Service; police departments in Denver, Colo.; Chicago, Ill.; Beaumont, Tex.; and State police, Hartford, Conn.

Identification: FBI No. 4,394,479; Denver Police Department No. 61945; Chicago Police Department No. E 4413; Beaumont Police Department No. 10282; State police, Hartford, No. G-1630-E/75336.

Summary of activity

Morris Joseph initially came to the attention of this office in November 1958. He was arrested with a local violator and charged in State court with possession of a quantity of marihuana and heroin found in their hotel room. It was learned at that time that he was the subject of case Tex-12102 in Beaumont, Tex., and was considered an important violator. Joseph made his home in Denver and continued his trafficking in narcotics, supplying local dealers with heroin. He was arrested in Denver in January 1959, for violation of the Federal marihuana law (Colo-713-M).

The following September Joseph was convicted in case Tex-12102 and received a 12-year sentence. This conviction was promptly appealed. He continued operations in Denver on an increasing scale supplying Edward McCray, James Glover, and Norman Smith with all the heroin they were able to distribute. In September 1960, he was convicted in case Colo-713-M and received an 8½-year sentence and immediately appealed the conviction. Joseph moved to Los Angeles, Calif., in the summer of 1960 from whence he continued to supply his confederates with heroin obtained from Tijuana, Mexico, sources. While in California, a third case was developed against Joseph involving sales of heroin (Cal-6069) in March of 1961. Joseph was promptly brought to trial and sentenced to 60 years in the latter case. A total of 80½ years were imposed in the three cases. Joseph is presently serving these sentences in Federal prison.

1140 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS .

Morris Joseph, a major interstate heroin trafficker, was the most important violator to come under investigation by District No. 13. His activities, while in Denver, have no doubt contributed more to spread the use of heroin in this area than any other violator before or since. Subject seemingly had in inexhaustible availability of heroin which he apparently had no difficulty obtaining from the various prominent traffickers known to him throughout the country. Morris Joseph never really ceased to be a major heroin violator and it is believed that he would continue to be one as long as he remained free from incarceration.

Morris Joseph, through his extensive operations and connections in many large cities, has considerable knowledge of the heroin traffic from the violator's viewpoint. If called upon to appear as a witness, it is not believed that he would cooperate unless he has assurance that he could gainfully do so through mitigation of his sentence.

NORMAN EUGENE SMITH

Aliases: None.

Description: Negro male; born in Iowa City, Iowa, March 1, 1931; 5 feet 7 inches; 170 pounds; medium-heavy build; light brown complexion; brown eyes; black hair.

Localities frequented: Presently in Federal prison for violation of Federal narcotic laws. Earliest possible release date July 4, 1967. Formerly frequented bars in the Five Points area (Negro section) of Denver.

Criminal associates: Morris Joseph James Glover, Jr.; Charles Garrett, Jr.; Martin Talley; Edward McCray.

Criminal history: Dates from 1949 includes arrests for investigation of possession of narcotics, burglary, assault, conviction for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Modus operandi: Wholesale dealer in large quantities of heroin locally and in interstate traffic. Source of supply was Morris Joseph.

Agencies with information: U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and the Denver Police Department.

Identification: FBI No. 242,807-A; Denver Police Department No. 82026.

Summary of activity

Norman Eugene Smith first came to the attention of the Bureau of Narcotics in the early part of 1960 when it was reported that he was engaged in the sale of heroin to addicts at the retail level. Subject became increasingly active and allied himself with James Glover, Jr. Together with Morris Joseph, these three individuals during 1959 and 1960 supplied most of the heroin in the Denver area. Upon the departure of Morris Joseph to Los Angeles, subjects Norman Smith and Glover retained their control of the traffic locally and were supplied by Morris Joseph from California. Smith made frequent trips to Los Angeles during which he would carry substantial sums of money, on one occasion reported to be $7,000. Other sums were sent by Smith to Joseph by telegraph and money orders. These three principals became partners and extended their series of operations to Fort Worth, Tex., where Glover made numerous sales to peddlers in that area. This operation ceased following the arrest of Morris Joseph in California in March 1961, and of James Glover, Jr., at Denver, Colo., also in March of 1961, both for violation of Federal narcotic laws.

Norman Eugene Smith was charged in Federal court in Denver, Colo. on August 18, 1961, with two violations of 21 U.S.C. 174. He pleaded guilty to one count and was sentenced to 7½ years on January 5, 1960. The U.S. Probation Office advises that the earliest date possible for his release from Federal prison is July 4, 1967.

On questioning regarding his association with Glover and Joseph, he readily admitted that the three of them operated as a partnership; however, there was a tendency by Smith to minimize the extent of their operations. Smith appears to be the most intelligent of the important violators known to this district and would be the most likely to be a friendly witness. Whether his present incarceration would influence him in this matter is not known.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1141

COLORADO AREA

The most extensive narcotic activity in District No. 13 is concentrated in the State of Colorado; the focal point for distribution being the city of Denver with lesser activity noted in Pueblo and Colorado Springs. The narcotic activity during the first half of the past decade reflected violations of marihuana laws with numerous narcotic cases developed on registrant diversions, illegal possession of taxable drugs, and prescription violations. A single case involving the drug of heroin was reported in 1953 wherein a small seizure was made. Beginning in 1956 there was a sudden and strong upsurge in the heroin traffic in Denver. This activity increased steadily as violators with interstate connections began operations. Wholesale arrests of heroin peddlers in 1960, 1961, and 1962 on indictments resulted in curbing the traffic to some degree. With the removal of these violators from the streets, and particularly Morris Joseph, a notorious major trafficker, activity dropped to a lower level during the latter part of 1961 and continuing into 1962.

With the decline of the Negro violator during this period the use and distribution of the drug by persons of Mexican descent began. Several of these traffickers through their operations became major violators with sources of supply in Mexico. Heroin traffic among Mexican violators was the dominant trend and not until the latter part of 1962 had the situation showed any change. Beginning in approximately September of 1962 there appeared a reactivation of the heroin traffic among Negroes which continues at the time of this writing.

A compilation of the annual reports on narcotic and marihuana arrests (forms 49-N) in the State of Colorado from the beginning of the calendar year 1952 until the present time follows: It should be noted that beginning with the year 1957 arrests and seizures embrace Federal, State, and local violations. Prior to that time only Federal figures were available. In addition to the heroin and marihuana seizures listed in this chart, there were varied quantities of drugstore type narcotics not listed. These drugs comprised for the greatest part items recovered by police in the course of their investigations of drugstore thefts and have no significant effect on the trend generally.

Year	Narcotic arrests		Marihuana arrests		Type of drug and/or quantity of drug involved
	Federal	State and local	Federal	State and local
1952.....	3	4	26	49	Assorted drugs; marihuana, 6.7 kilos.
1953.....	6	1	66	14	Heroin, 4.3 grams; marihuana, 7.3 kilos.
1954.....	8	4	28	1	Heroin, 2.5 grams; marihuana, 7.9 kilos.
1955.....	4	15	18	57	Heroin, 58.5 grams; marihuana, 13.3 kilos.
1956.....	15	8	11	28	Heroin, 313 grams; marihuana, 10.1 kilos.
1957.....	9	173	7	131	Heroin, 29.7 grams; marihuana, 962 grams.
1958.....	9	142	2	143	Heroin, 399 grams; marihuana, 7.7 kilos.
1959.....	14	24	0	51	Heroin, 28.7 grams; marihuana, 909 grams.
1960.....	15	53	0	95	Heroin, 50.1 grams; marihuana, 2.8 kilos.
1961.....	8	96	1	65	Heroin, 216.3 grams; marihuana, 4.8 kilos.
1962.....	1	35	7	34	Heroin, 158 grams; marihuana, 1.9 kilos.

The overall trend in the narcotic activity for the Colorado area is reported chronologically as follows:

1952 through 1955

As reflected in the above chart for the years of 1952, 1953, 1954, and 1955, arrests and seizures were based on the marihuana traffic with the secondary effort being directed toward violations involving taxable narcotic drugs. A single heroin violation in 1953, two in 1954, followed by two others in 1955 represented the extent of the heroin traffic during those years. The marihuana activity during this period showed no organization nor any distinct pattern. Violators were generally individuals operating on their own obtaining their supply from various local producers or sometimes journeying to Mexican border cities for the weed.

1142 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

1956

As previously mentioned there was a sharp upsurge in the heroin traffic beginning with this year. Seizures of heroin totaled 313 grams. Most violators were arrested transporting the heroin to Denver via different conveyances. These heroin operations were all individual actions and no particular pattern or organization was indicated. Sources for the heroin seized were Chicago, San Francisco, Kansas City, and Nogales, Ariz. Only Chicago was named as a source in more than one instance.

1957

This year saw the first indication of organization of the heroin traffic in the Denver area. James W. Lewis alias Six, early in the year obtained heroin from Chicago in sufficient quantities to employ several peddlers on a street level. Although the quality of the drug obtained by Lewis was generally poor he was instrumental in extending the use of the heroin among a large number of Negroes. Lewis was apprehended and convicted for violation of the narcotic laws in October of 1957, made bond, and continued his operations until finally sent to prison in June of 1959. Appeals and a retrial delayed his imprisonment. Charles A. Garrett, Jr. and Hubert Mason initiated their interstate operations during the year and obtained heroin in wholesale quantities in Chicago for distribution in Denver. Mason was arrested in June 1957, convicted in November 1957 for narcotics violation, appealed the conviction, and remained free on appeal bond until November 1958 when the conviction was affirmed. Mason and Garrett remained active in the traffic during all this time.

1958

The distribution of heroin in the Denver area by interstate traffickers James W. Lewis, Hubert Mason, and Charles A. Garrett continued unabated during most of the year. Two couriers employed by Mason and Garrett were apprehended with large quantities of heroin obtained in Chicago upon arrival in Denver. Joe N. Clark, their chief courier, was one of those apprehended, the other being a female courier. Clarence W. Dawkins was arrested upon arrival in Denver. Dawkins transported a quantity of heroin from Portland, Oreg. for distribution in Denver. Dawkins has not returned to Denver but upon his release from prison returned to Portland where he is considered an important violator at present. Edward McCray came to the attention of this office in mid-1958, first as a minor violator and by the end of the year had allied himself with Morris Joseph, major interstate trafficker, who was living in Beaumont, Tex., at the time. McCray obtained large quantities of heroin from sources in Chicago through arrangements made by Morris Joseph.

1959

It was during this year that Morris Joseph became engaged in the heroin traffic locally. Hubert Mason and Charles A. Garrett were no longer in the traffic and James W. Lewis was operating on a declining scale until his imprisonment in June. Morris Joseph continued his employment of Edward McCray as one of his distributors and engaged several others, most important of which was James Glover, Jr., Joseph operating out of Denver, would make trips to various cities throughout the country, Chicago and Los Angeles in particular, where he would obtain heroin and have it transported to Denver. Upon the receipt of the drug by Glover, he would in turn supply it to a number of peddlers for street distribution. Able to obtain almost unlimited quantities of heroin through his partnership with Joseph, Glover extended his interstate operations into the Dallas-Fort Worth area of Texas.

1960

In February of 1960 grand jury indictments were handed down resulting in the removal of 14 violators from the traffic. These were for the most part peddlers on a street level. The heroin traffic subsided only briefly and resumed on a more active scale than ever with the sources of supply continuing to be

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1143

Morris Joseph and his associates. During the early part of the year Joseph acquired another partner, Norman Smith, who was to become prominent in the interstate traffic during 1960 and early 1961.

During the latter part of 1960 the violator of Mexican descent emerged as a factor to be considered. This was anticipated to some degree since it was known that a large number of pharmacy stickups committed in the late part of 1959 and early part of 1960, wherein the narcotic drugs were taken, were committed by persons of Mexican descent. The distribution and illegal sale of these drugs among that particular group no doubt were responsible for their graduation from use of marihuana to the use of heavier drugs.

1961

Indictments returned on 26 persons in February 1961 for violations of the Federal narcotic laws reduced the heroin traffic to a minimum. Almost all of the street peddlers employed by Glover and Norman Smith were taken into custody as was Glover himself. Smith was arrested several months later when one of his peddlers furnished necessary testimony to implicate him. This roundup of violators curtailed the drug traffic among Negro users to such an extent that only isolated instances of drug offenses came to the attention of this office for the next 18 months.

Following the cessation of the heroin traffic among Negroes it became apparent that violators of Mexican descent had taken over the traffic. In March of 1961 it was learned that Frank Maestas, of Colorado Springs, was obtaining heroin in large quantities from sources in Tijuana, Mexico, and distributing it in wholesale quantities in the Denver and Pueblo areas. Maestas was arrested with an associate several months later, pursuant to sales of heroin to a narcotic agent. He was convicted in December 1961 and immediately appealed the conviction. He continued his supplying of heroin on a wholesale basis without letup. Maestas was joined by a brother, Henry Eddie Maestas, upon the latter's release from the Colorado State Penitentiary in December.

1962

The heroin activity during the early part of the year centered on brothers Henry and Frank Maestas. These two violators, through a fugitive brother-in-law in Tijuana, Mexico, were able to obtain heroin in almost any quantity, which they subsequently distributed in Colorado. Purchases of evidence were made from Henry Maestas and his chief distributor in Pueblo resulting in their indictments in February of 1962. Henry Maestas was not apprehended and became a fugitive. He elected to join his fugitive brother-in law in Tijuana, Mexico, from where he supplies his brother, Frank Maestas, with wholesale quantities of heroin. Frank Maestas, who remains free on appeal bond, continues his heroin activities in Denver. A minor increase in drugstore robberies was noted in the early part of 1962, probably resulting from a panic created by the arrests in February.

In January of 1962, Nickolas Guerra was arrested by agents of the U.S. Customs Agency Service as he was about to take delivery of 75 pounds of marihuana supplied to him at Pueblo from a source in Juarez, Mexico. Guerra pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 10 years in prison in August of 1962. Guerra for many years sold marihuana in very large quantities to peddlers in the State of Colorado and to individuals in other States. Guerra was in every respect a major dealer in marihuana with interstate and international involvement. This subject did not employ any organization but chose to operate chiefly through members of his own family.

Sentences imposed by the U.S. district court in Colorado have been substantial and averaging about 8 years during the past several terms of court. Most sentences imposed were for violation of the narcotic law. Sentences in State court are not as substantial and have provisions for probation and parole under the State law.

Narcotic enforcement on a local level is generally very good. Excellent work is done by the intelligence division of the Denver Police Department under whose responsibility falls the enforcement of the local narcotic laws. There is no State police, and enforcement in less populated areas is the responsibility of the county sheriff.

1144 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

In summary, the current trend of the narcotic traffic indicates the continued domination by Negro and Mexican traffickers. As reported heretofore, there is a noticeable increase in activity by the Negroes. Not all users, of course, are of the two groups mentioned as there are a number of Caucasian users. None have attained any prominence in the narcotic traffic; however, it should be mentioned here that at no time in the past decade has there been any indication of the entry of the Italian hoodlums into the illicit narcotic traffic. Several such isolated instances have been reported but no concrete evidence was developed to substantiate the reports. With the imprisonment of Nickolas Guerra there remains no other major marihuana trafficker of interstate proportions. Several marihuana producers are presently under investigation; however, they are not considered important violators.

NEW MEXICO AREA

The narcotic traffic in the State of New Mexico has remained at fairly constant level for the past 10 years. Supplies of heroin and marihuana have been slightly irregular at times but the overall pattern is one of minor individual operations involving relatively small quantities of drugs. Since January 1, 1952, a total of 92 narcotic cases and 125 marihuana cases have been reported on a Federal level. No significant seizures or purchases were reported and the trend of the traffic disclosed that violations reported for the first half of the past decade chiefly involved marihuana, illegal diversion of drugstore narcotics, and obtainment of drugs through deceit. Eight cases were made on physicians who were charged with some type of diversion. The first heroin activity reported during this period occurred in February 1954 and reflected a small seizure.

Beginning in 1957 a noticeable and steady increase became apparent in the heroin traffic. During the years 1959, 1960, and 1961, the illegal activity appeared to have reached its peak. Wholesale arrests on several occasions by Federal and local officers and subsequent substantial sentences imposed by Federal judges in Albuquerque did much to alleviate the situation. Traffic in heroin continues, but primarily on a street level involving small quantities.

A compilation of the annual reports on narcotic and marihuana arrests (form 49-N) in the State of New Mexico from the beginning of the calendar year 1952 until the present time follows: It should be noted that beginning with the year 1957 arrests and seizures listed embrace Federal, State, and local statistics. Prior to that time only Federal figures were available.

Year	Narcotic arrests		Marihuana arrests		Type of drug and/or quantity of drug involved
	Federal	State and local	Federal	State and local
1952	5	5	15	18	Marihuana, 179.6 grams; Rx arrests and assorted drugs.
1953	7	2	52	14	Marihuana, 1 kilo, 230 grams; Rx arrests and assorted drugs.
1954	10	2	23	10	Heroin, 5.2 grams; marihuana, 603.5 grams; raw opium, 1.3 grams.
1955	18	25	7	20	Heroin, 32.6 grams; marihuana, 0.2 kilos.
1956	9	1	8	38	Heroin, 14.2 grams; opium, 141.7 grams; marihuana, 1.6 kilos.
1957	10	8	6	8	Heroin, 25.4 grams; marihuana, 19.8 kilos.
1958	13	32	1	64	Heroin, 151 grams; marihuana, 15 kilos.
1959	20	44	0	59	Assorted drugs; marihuana, 7.9 kilos.
1960	30	10	0	36	Heroin, 189 grams; marihuana, 3.8 kilos.
1961	0	64	0	58	Heroin, 141.77 grams; marihuana, 4.5 kilos.
1962 ¹	1	9	0	-----	Heroin, 3.5 grams; marihuana, not available.

¹ Complete statistics in this period are not presently available.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1145

Neither the heroin traffic nor the marihuana traffic is organized in the State of New Mexico. Albuquerque is the focal point for the distribution of heroin in the State. Sources of supply in the city depends, for the most part, on various individuals who acquire sufficient funds to purchase relatively small quantities of the drug in Mexico and return to Albuquerque to distribute it. Where sufficient profit is realized the individual, usually an addict, may again make several trips to Mexico. No peddler has attained sufficient stature in the traffic to establish himself as a major violator.

The same pattern exists as relates to the marihuana traffic. Most peddlers who sell the marihuana on a wholesale level obtain it from sources below the Mexican border, usually at Juarez, Mexico.

Interstate trafficking exists only as it pertains to persons who may journey to Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, for drugs and transport it through the State of Arizona. A similar situation applies where heroin was reportedly obtained from sources in southern California and the Tijuana area.

Heroin use is confined for the most part to persons of Mexican descent. There are a small number of Negroes in Albuquerque who also use the drug. The latest figures available report 171 narcotic addicts. There are, no doubt, additional uncounted persons who use the drug only occasionally and have not been recorded.

Although there are no interstate traffickers of note in this area, there are two well-known international sources who reside in Mexico and supply most of the heroin brought into the State. Ignacio Jasso vda Gonzales, alias La Nacha, international list No. 137, is the most notorious supplier. She resides in Juarez, Chihuahua, Mexico, where her activities have been under investigation for many years by the Bureau of Narcotics and U.S. Customs Agency Service. Enrique Sanchez, also known as Henry Sanchez, of Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, is the other international supplier of renown. These two individuals are no doubt responsible for most of the heroin peddled on a street level in New Mexico cities.

Narcotic enforcement in the State is pursued vigorously. In addition to the Bureau of Narcotics and the U.S. Customs Agency Service who operate into New Mexico from the Mexican border, the New Mexico State Police has a narcotic enforcement division. Several of their members have attended the Federal Bureau of Narcotics Training School as have several officers from the Albuquerque Police Department. Cooperation between the Bureau of Narcotics and the other agencies throughout the State for the most part is excellent.

Almost all narcotic violations in New Mexico are taken into U.S. district court where substantial sentences are meted out to those convicted. Where violations of 21 U.S.C. 174 are involved, sentences are particularly good. An average sentence of 9.2 years was imposed on individuals arrested following one roundup.

Because of the proximity of New Mexico to the Mexican border and the easy accessibility by addicts to sources of supply therein, any marked decrease in the narcotic traffic appears unlikely.

UTAH AREA

The narcotic traffic in the State of Utah for the past 10 years has been relatively inextensive. A branch office at Salt Lake City was maintained by district No. 13 until November of 1957. During the time that an agent was stationed in that city, more activity on a Federal level, of course, was noted and reported. A compilation of narcotic and marihuana arrests reported out of Utah for the past 10 years reflect a larger amount of arrests and seizures accordingly. Since the departure of the agent, there has been a decline, particularly in the reporting of violations in smaller communities. Salt Lake City and Ogden, the State's two largest cities, have in the past and continue to be the focal point for the illicit traffic in narcotics.

There is no distinct pattern, trend, or organization indicated in the narcotic traffic in this State. Violations primarily involved sales and possession of marihuana; diversions of legal drugs by registrants, for the most part physicians; and the obtainment of narcotic drugs by addicts through misrepresentation and forgery. A large number of arrests reported by State and local agencies represent violations for exempt and minor-type narcotic drugs and do not reflect any change in the overall picture. It will be noted that no arrests or seizures involving heroin were made in this period.

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

1146 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Information from forms 49-N (annual report on narcotic and marihuana arrests), since 1952 reflect as follows:

Year	Narcotic arrests		Marihuana arrests		Type of violation and/or quantity of drug involved
	Federal	State and local	Federal	State and local
1952.....	3	1	4	7	Marihuana, 592.7 grams. Smoking opium, 304.3 grams. Assorted drugs.
1953.....	0	43	4	10	Marihuana, 27.5 grams. Assorted drugs and prescription violations.
1954.....	3	0	4	0	Marihuana, 379.8 grams. Assorted drugs.
1955.....	8	19	3	19	Marihuana, 4.8 grams. Prescription violations.
1956.....	3	5	4	6	Marihuana, 44.5 grams. Prescription violations and assorted drugs.
1957.....	0	12	4	7	Marihuana, 105 cigarettes. Drug-store narcotics.
1958.....	0	11	0	5	Marihuana, 14 grams. Assorted drugs.
1959.....	0	8	0	4	Marihuana, 38.35 grams. Assorted drugs.
1960.....	0	45	0	6	Marihuana, 2.26 kilos.
1961.....	0	21	0	1	Marihuana, 4 plants. Assorted drugs. Prescription violations.
1962.....	1	10	0	3	Assorted drugs.

¹ Complete figures not available.

The marihuana traffic in the State involved a number of cases wherein relatively small purchases and seizures were made. The violators in these instances were for the most part Negroes and whites. Nine of the narcotic violators were physicians charged with irregularities pertaining to diversion or prescribing of drugs illegally to addicts.

The narcotic traffic remained limited and unorganized during this time. With the exception of one significant case involving the seizure of approximately 11 ounces of smoking opium, originally obtained in Mexico, there has been no indication of any interstate or international trafficking in narcotic drugs. In this case, Wilbur Lee Judd, Utah-1654, was arrested at Salt Lake City in May of 1952 with the opium. He obtained it from Mexicali, Mexico, for his use and that of a friend. Judd agreed to assist Federal authorities in apprehending his source and was subsequently instrumental in bringing on the arrest by U.S. customs officials in August 1952 of Mario Desiderio Alcantar-Fernandez and Miguel Moreno-Verdugo. This arrest resulted in the seizure of 10 cans of smoking opium and 2 cars.

Sentences imposed on a Federal level in narcotic cases ranged from 2 to 5 years with an average of 3.2 years. State sentences were insignificant. Sentences given in marihuana cases taken to U.S. district court embrace probation and terms from 2 to 5 years with an average of 4.4 years. State sentences for similar offenses were from 60 days to 5 years with an approximate average of 1.5 years.

The majority of arrests centered on the cities of Salt Lake City, Ogden, and Provo. Narcotic enforcement in the State is primarily on a local level and assistance is extended by this office whenever indicated and practicable. There is no State police organization; however, registrants are controlled by the State department of business regulations who have done an excellent job thereof. Two officers have been sent from the Salt Lake City Police Department to the Federal Bureau of Narcotics Training School. Only one presently remains on the force. Other cities have been urged to send a representative.

No particular change in the trend of the narcotic traffic is anticipated in the foreseeable future.

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1147

WYOMING AREA

The narcotic traffic in the State of Wyoming has been a minor problem in district No. 13 during the past 10 years. No extensive degree of activity was noted nor any type of pattern established. Violations primarily involved sales and possession of marihuana; diversions of legal drugs by registrants, for the most part physicians; and the obtainment of narcotics drugs by transient addicts through fraud, misrepresentation, and forgery. No heroin violations were reported.

A compilation of the annual reports on narcotic and marihuana arrests (form 49-N) in the State of Wyoming from the beginning of the calendar year 1952 until the present time discloses the following:

Year	Narcotic arrests		Marihuana arrests		Type of drug and/or quantity of drug involved
	Federal	State and local	Federal	State and local
1952.....	2	2	0	0	Illegal sale of drugs.
1953.....	0	0	5	1	Marihuana, 769.4 grams.
1954.....	0	0	2	0	Marihuana, 152.6 grams.
1955.....	4	0	0	0	Prescription violations.
1956.....	0	0	0	1	No seizure reported.
1957.....	0	1	0	3	Morphine sulfate. Marihuana, 30 cigarettes.
1958.....	0	0	0	2	Marihuana, 2.9 kilos.
1959.....	0	5	0	0	No quantities reported.
1960.....	0	0	0	0	None.
1961.....	0	0	0	0	Do.
1962 ¹	0	0	0	3	Drugstore theft.

¹ Reported to Nov. 1, 1962.

As indicated by the above chart, narcotic traffic has been on the decline during the past 2 years. Furthermore, there is no indication of any interstate or international traffic in the State. Any suggestion of interstate traffic, if it can be considered such, is restricted to transient addicts who may have obtained legal-type drugs through fraud and misrepresentation, or through forgery.

The marihuana traffic in the State appears to be confined to the two largest cities, Cheyenne and Casper, and the arrests involved primarily Negroes and persons of Mexican descent. Several physicians were prosecuted for illegal sale of drugs.

Sentences imposed in U.S. district court for narcotic violations ranged from 4 to 10 years with an average of 7 years, exclusive of probation granted to physicians who were prosecuted. With reference to marihuana violations, sentences in Federal court averaged 2.75 years and the average State sentence was 6.5 years. Violators are vigorously prosecuted on both Federal and State levels.

No significant cases were developed during the past decade and no great change in the narcotic traffic is anticipated in the foreseeable future.

Cooperation with State and local enforcement officials is excellent. Aside from the relatively few police departments in the State, enforcement is for the most part carried out by county sheriffs, since there is no State police. On occasions, these local officers admit that they are at a loss as to how to proceed on narcotic violations. Thus far no police officer from the State has attended the Federal Bureau of Narcotics Training School, although the police departments of Casper and Cheyenne have been informed of the availability of this school and urged to have some member or members of their department attend. Lack of funds appears to be the major stumbling block for these agencies.

PAGINA BIANCA

PART 5

(August 4, and 5, 1964)

PAGINA BIANCA

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

HEARINGS BEFORE THE PERMANENT SUBCOMMITTEE ON INVESTIGATIONS OF THE COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS UNITED STATES SENATE EIGHTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS SECOND SESSION PURSUANT TO SENATE RESOLUTION 278, 88TH CONGRESS

AUGUST 4 AND 5, 1964

PART 5

Printed for the use of the Committee on Government Operations

U.S. GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE
WASHINGTON : 1964

24-366

COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS

JOHN L. McCLELLAN, Arkansas, Chairman

HENRY M. JACKSON, Washington	KARL E. MUNDT, South Dakota
SAM J. ERVIN, Jr., North Carolina	CARL T. CURTIS, Nebraska
HUBERT H. HUMPHREY, Minnesota	JACOB K. JAVITS, New York
ERNEST GRUENING, Alaska	JACK MILLER, Iowa
EDMUND S. MUSKIE, Maine	JAMES B. PEARSON, Kansas
CLAIBORNE PELL, Rhode Island
THOMAS J. MCINTYRE, New Hampshire
ABRAHAM A. RIBICOFF, Connecticut
DANIEL B. BREWSTER, Maryland

WALTER L. REYNOLDS, Chief Clerk

PERMANENT SUBCOMMITTEE ON INVESTIGATIONS

JOHN L. McCLELLAN, Arkansas, Chairman

HENRY M. JACKSON, Washington	KARL E. MUNDT, South Dakota
SAM J. ERVIN, Jr., North Carolina	CARL T. CURTIS, Nebraska
EDMUND S. MUSKIE, Maine	JACOB K. JAVITS, New York
THOMAS J. MCINTYRE, New Hampshire
DANIEL B. BREWSTER, Maryland

JEROME S. ADLERMAN, *General Counsel*DONALD F. O'DONNELL, *Chief Counsel*PHILIP W. MORGAN, *Chief Counsel to the Minority*RUTH YOUNG WATT, Chief Clerk

CONTENTS

	Page
Appendix.....	1331
Statement of—
Brill, Dr. Henry.....	1315
Dempsey, Rev. O. D.....	1353
Isbell, Dr. Harris.....	1325
Smith, Judge William F.....	1275
Testimony of—
Baird, Dr. Robert W.....	1228
Cameron, Dr. Dale C.....	1149
Hess, Dr. Catherine B.....	1222
Kolb, Dr. Lawrence C.....	1281
Kuh, Richard H.....	1176
Meiselas, Dr. Harold.....	1196
Raskin, Dr. Herbert A.....	1298
Rector, Milton G.....	1247
Rubin, Sol (interrogatory).....	1259
Wood, Roland W.....	1239

EXHIBITS

	Introduced on page	Appears on page
7. Booklet entitled "Narcotics Addiction," prepared by Department of Mental Health of the American Medical Association, 1963.....	1152	*

CHARTS PRINTED IN THE RECORD

	Page
The flow of worldwide traffic in illicit narcotics, map (3 parts).....	Facing 1330
Proceedings of—
August 4, 1964.....	1149
August 5, 1964.....	1221

*May be found in the files of the subcommittee.

PAGINA BIANCA

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

TUESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1964

U.S. SENATE,
PERMANENT SUBCOMMITTEE ON INVESTIGATIONS
OF THE COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS,
Washington, D.C.

The subcommittee met at 10:37 a.m., in room 3302, New Senate Office Building, pursuant to Senate Resolution 278, agreed to February 10, 1964, Senator John L. McClellan (chairman of the subcommittee) presiding.

Present: Senator John L. McClellan, Democrat, Arkansas; Senator Edmund S. Muskie, Democrat, Maine; Senator Thomas J. McIntyre, Democrat, New Hampshire; and Senator Jacob K. Javits, Republican, New York.

Also present: Jerome S. Adlerman, general counsel; Paul B. Kame-
rick, assistant counsel; LaVern J. Duffy, assistant counsel; Philip W.
Morgan, chief counsel to the minority; Eugene J. Marshall, Bureau of Narcotics; and Ruth Y. Watt, chief clerk.

The CHAIRMAN. The subcommittee will please be in order.

(Members of the subcommittee present at time of convening: Senators McClellan, Muskie, and Javits.)

The CHAIRMAN. Dr. Cameron, will you come forward, please?

Be sworn, please, sir.

You do solemnly swear the evidence you shall give before this Senate subcommittee shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

TESTIMONY OF DALE C. CAMERON, M.D.

Dr. CAMERON. I do.

Senator JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, may I have permission to make a very brief statement?

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Javits.

Senator JAVITS. I have to go to another meeting. I hope you will forgive me, but I will read your testimony with the greatest care.

Mr. Chairman, today the committee will hear from Mr. Richard H.
Kuh, of the New York District Attorneys Association, and the man in the office of District Attorney Hogan, of New York County who has had most experience with the aspects of the narcotics problem which we are dealing with here.

The committee will also hear from Dr. Harold Meiselas, of the New York State Mental Hygiene Department, which is doing its utmost to cope with the treatment of narcotic addicts, particularly under our new Metcalf-Volker Act in New York.

1150 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. Chairman, the point I would like to make as an opening remark in respect to their testimony, which will come in due course later in the morning, is that, upon checking into one of the important reasons for the riots in New York City, in the Bedford-Stuyvesant and Harlem areas, is I have repeatedly been told that the presence of large numbers of narcotic addicts on the streets represents material of such an incendiary character that if there is the least spark in the community to set it off, it can be expected at once to ride such a whirlwind, even to the extent of the riots and the looting which occurred.

It is felt by many of those best informed that removal of narcotic addicts from the streets would be a very major contribution, not only to crime prevention, or crime avoidance, but also to the public order, stability and tranquility in such a very trying period as this.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a point for the witness to pursue, that what we need, perhaps, is not only additional law—in New York we already have such a law—but additional facilities and additional money. These apparently cannot come alone from State and municipal sources, but must come to some extent from the Federal Government. The availability of civil commitment must be complemented by the availability of facilities which together will remove these narcotic addicts from the streets where they are a constant menace, quite despite themselves.

I think that last-mentioned factor has now become very clear from our testimony; that what has been said does not necessarily mean that these people in any way have control of themselves. Whether they do or not is immaterial to the impact that they have upon public order.

I make that statement, Mr. Chairman, because I have just come back from a little time in my home community, and this was so much impressed upon me. It bears so heavily upon what our chairman likes to feel about his hearings; that is, that they are very germane to some really burning public issue. I can assure the chairman that that is very much the case in respect to the subject of these hearings.

I thank the chairman for the opportunity to make this statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much, Senator. I hope these hearings are serving some good purpose, and I hope we may, through them, find some of the answers, find some means of coping with this menace more effectively than we have been able to in the past.

Senator Muskie, have you any statement before we proceed with the witness?

Senator MUSKIE. No, Mr. Chairman.

(At this point Senator McIntyre entered the hearing room.)

The CHAIRMAN. I am glad to see Senator McIntyre arrive. I hope we can keep a quorum today and tomorrow. The Chair may not be able to be here tomorrow because of some appropriations bills, but if we can have two present, you can proceed without my presence. I hope we can continue and expedite the hearings.

Dr. Cameron, will you identify yourself for the record, please, sir?

Dr. CAMERON. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, my name is Dale Cameron. I am Superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital here in Washington, D.C.

I deeply appreciate your invitation to express my views on some of the current issues in the field of narcotic addiction. I am speaking as a private citizen.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1151

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have a prepared statement?

Dr. CAMERON. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, you may proceed.

First, let's get a little more of your background in the record. Give us a little of your background and experience, Doctor, please.

(At this point Senator Javits withdrew from the hearing room.)

Dr. CAMERON. I am a commissioned officer in the Public Health Service. I have been in that organization since 1936, with the exception of 6 years when I was medical director for the department of welfare in the State of Minnesota.

I am a graduate of the University of Nebraska, College of Medicine; and of the Johns Hopkins University, in public health. As I indicated earlier, I am the Superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital here in Washington, D.C., on loan from the Public Health Service.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you served as Superintendent?

Dr. CAMERON. Approximately 2 years. Prior to that I was Assistant Superintendent at the hospital.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you chairman of the National Academy of Sciences and National Research Council's Committees on Drug Addiction and Narcotics?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is that affiliated with the American Medical Association?

Dr. CAMERON. No, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you chairman of one of the committees of the American Medical Association?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, sir; the Committee on Alcoholism and Addiction.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And you are familiar with the report that has been put out by the American Medical Association?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, sir; I am.

Mr. ADLERMAN. We would like to cover part of the American Medical Association report with you as you proceed.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, you may proceed. If you choose to do so, you can read your statement or you can insert it into the record and highlight it, as you desire, whichever way you prefer.

Dr. CAMERON. With your permission, Mr. Chairman, I would like to read my statement.

The CHAIRMAN. You may proceed.

Dr. CAMERON. What I have to say has neither been approved or disapproved by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, the Department for which I work.

The current issues relative to addiction have to do with questions of broad public policy in relation to the management of addicts, and with the nature of research needed better to understand, control, and prevent addiction. Narcotic addiction is the primary focus of my discussion despite the fact that the number of such addicts in the United States—estimated at 40,000 to 60,000—is almost minuscule as compared with the number of problem drinkers—estimated at 4,500,000—and the substantial number of persons dependent on barbiturates.

All three groups are of grave concern to society, yet the public assumes a somewhat less severe attitude toward the alcoholic and barbiturate addict than toward the narcotic addict.

1152 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

"Narcotic addiction" and "drug addiction" are emotionally charged and much misunderstood phrases. Because of this, the American Medical Association and the National Research Council found it useful to make a joint statement on this subject in May 1962. A spokesman for the Federal Bureau of Narcotics expressed that Bureau's complete approval of the views contained in the statement.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Doctor, do you have a copy of those reports?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, I do, and I would like, if it is agreeable to the Chair, to read one of the statements, since it is relatively short.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would like to have it introduced in evidence, if I may.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't think it needs to be printed in the record in full. It may be made a part of the record as exhibit 7.

(The report referred to was marked exhibit No. 7 for reference and may be found in the files of the subcommittee.)

(Excerpts from this report follow :)

AMBULATORY WITHDRAWAL CLINICS

27. The 1962 joint AMA-NRC statement (9) reads:

"* * * Ambulatory clinic plans for the withdrawal of narcotics from addicts are * * * generally inadequate and medically unsound."

This position is taken "on the basis of present knowledge" and is intended to cover current clinical practice; it is not intended to obstruct bona fide research (see under Research).

AMBULATORY MAINTENANCE AND CONTINUED ADMINISTRATION

28. The joint statement covers this much debated issue as follows:

"The maintenance of stable dosage levels is generally inadequate and medically unsound and ambulatory clinic plans for the withdrawal of narcotics from addicts are likewise generally inadequate and medically unsound. [Emphasis supplied.]

"As a result of these conclusions the American Medical Association and the National Research Council oppose on the basis of present knowledge such ambulatory treatment plans."

29. In fact, as pointed out earlier, ambulatory maintenance can be considered ethical medical practice only if consultation has been had and it is agreed by the physicians concerned that (a) withdrawal would be hazardous to life, or (b) continued drug administration is necessary for a chronic or terminal painful condition other than the drug addiction itself and for which no other mode of treatment is feasible.

DEFINITIVE TREATMENT

30. After withdrawal a therapeutic program of up to 6 months or even a year is often indicated and this is best carried out in specialized facilities. However, physicians with specialized experience in this field who have established a good working relationship with the patient can and do carry out treatment in other institutional settings and provide followup services with long-term aftercare in the community.

31. Information as to inpatient facilities is available on a local basis from the State or local agency having to do with health matters, or from local voluntary and professional groups such as local medical societies or mental health associations.

32. Physicians will often wish to refer patients to such facilities for definitive care. Certification to civil facilities is possible in a number of States and its broader application is recommended. It may supply the element of compulsion toward maintenance of treatment which most addicts require. Information or certification is also available from the sources named in paragraph 30.

AFTERCARE AND REHABILITATION

33. After a patient has had even the best available treatment in any special closed facility his subsequent course will depend to a significant degree on the type and adequacy of aftercare, the social, economic, and psychiatric rehabilitation program which can be provided and the environment to which the patient returns. Physicians should play an important role in the mobilization of social resources for aftercare and in providing supervision and followup treatment.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1153

34. Relapse requires treatment and should not be taken as indication of failure, but should be accepted as in any other relapsing disorder. There is suggestive evidence that with the passage of time, patients tend to become more responsive to treatment and an increasing number of cases "mature out" of addiction.

RESEARCH

41. It is apparent that research on the problems of addiction to narcotics is absolutely necessary. The joint statement of the American Medical Association and the National Research Council Committees (9) was very explicit in emphasizing that the judgment of these organizations about ambulatory withdrawal and ambulatory maintenance was based on "present knowledge" and it characterized these methods as generally inadequate and unsound but there was no intent or desire to prevent any future research efforts (12).

42. There is urgent need for further investigations of many types, both at clinical and basic science levels, and future findings may make it necessary to revise further our current concepts of what constitutes ethical medical practice in relation to narcotics and narcotic addicts.

43. Many of the restrictions on the use of narcotics in general medical practice may properly be modified for the purpose of carrying out bona fide research activities since research creates special requirements. Such activities must, however, be carried out within the limits of ethical medical practice as applied to research.

The CHAIRMAN. You may quote from it, of course, if you like. I just thought it unnecessary to burden the record with printing it, since it is available from other sources. But it may be attached as an exhibit and, therefore, becomes a part of the record but not a part of the printed record.

Dr. CAMERON. Senator, I shall not attempt to read the entire series of statements in this published material which I have just handed to the clerk.

The CHAIRMAN. Read such excerpts as you desire.

Dr. CAMERON. If I may, I should like to read the rather brief statement that was made by the AMA and the National Academy of Sciences in 1962. It is less than a page long.

The American Medical Association and the National Research Council for many years have been concerned about and have studied the narcotic drug addiction problem. To assist in carrying out its studies, the American Medical Association collaborated with the American Bar Association in establishing a joint committee which made an interim report to the two organizations in 1958, and a final report in 1959.

It is concluded that there is widespread public and professional misunderstanding about this subject, specifically (1) that the Federal Bureau of Narcotics believes drug addiction to be a crime; a belief that is contrary to the Federal law and its application by the Bureau; and (2) that the American Medical Association proposes the establishment of community ambulatory clinics for the withdrawal of narcotics from addicts, or for the continuing maintenance of addicts on narcotics; a belief that is contrary to the official position of the American Medical Association.

Mr. ADLERMAN. At what page is that in the report? Perhaps you can supply the pages later on.

Dr. CAMERON. I believe it is on page 47 of the report.

Historically, society has found it necessary—

Senator MUSKIE. May I ask a question, Doctor?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes.

1154 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Senator MUSKIE. The second point in the second paragraph is—that the American Medical Association proposes the establishment of community ambulatory—which is contrary to the official position.

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, sir. The point I am trying to make is that many people were saying that the American Medical Association was proposing the establishment of ambulatory clinics, but that this is not true, and the American Medical Association never had advocated such a position.

Senator MUSKIE. Thank you.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And that same paragraph indicates that people believe that the Federal Bureau of Narcotics says that drug addiction is a crime. It is not a crime.

Dr. CAMERON. It is not a crime.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And the Federal Bureau of Narcotics does not contend that addiction is a crime?

Dr. CAMERON. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And the second point is that the American Medical Association does not believe in community ambulatory clinics, contrary to popular beliefs.

Dr. CAMERON. That is correct. [Reading:]

Historically, society has found it necessary to employ legal controls to prevent the spread of certain types of illness that constitute a hazard to the public health. Drug addiction is such a hazard.

The successful and humane withdrawal of individuals addicted to narcotics in the United States necessitates constant control, under conditions affording a drug-free environment, and always requires close medical supervision.

The successful treatment of narcotic addicts in the United States requires extensive postwithdrawal rehabilitation and other therapeutic services.

The maintenance of stable dosage levels in individuals addicted to narcotics is generally inadequate and medically unsound, and ambulatory clinic plans for the withdrawal of narcotics from addicts are likewise generally inadequate and medically unsound.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I wonder if you can expand on that to some extent? Do you feel that an addict on an ambulatory basis can be given a dosage of the drug, stabilizing the same amount each day?

Dr. CAMERON. There are always exceptions to generalities, but in general the import of this statement, and I agree with it, is that it is not feasible to try, in an uncontrolled setting, to maintain an addict on a stabilized dose. Most addicts will tend to increase their dose under these circumstances, if they can get the drug.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Could you go into the question of the buildup of tolerance for the drugs? I think it is rather important that we understand why you cannot have a stabilized dosage.

Dr. CAMERON. There are three factors in addiction. One is the psychological dependence, that is, the psychological need to continue taking the drug.

A second is the business of tolerance, which you mentioned. That means that as a person becomes addicted, he tends to require an increasing amount of drug in order to get the same effect, that is, the same dose tends to become relatively less effective as he continues the administration of the drug.

The third factor in addiction has to do with physical dependence. This does not occur in all types of addictions, but it does occur in narcotic addiction, alcohol, and barbiturate addiction. The type of dependence that one has depends on the addicting drug, but in general, it may be said that if a drug is withdrawn suddenly from an addicted person, he will become physically ill.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1155

Mr. ADLERMAN. If a drug addict is treated on an ambulatory or out-patient basis, or any other basis—if the person is given a quarter grain of morphine, heroin, or whatever the drug may be, for a period of time—at the end of a few weeks he doesn't receive the amount that he had in the beginning. Does he not require an increase to maybe a half grain?

Dr. CAMERON. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This continues until he has built up some kind of tolerance of unbelievable capacity; is that correct?

Dr. CAMERON. That is correct; an addict who is tolerant may be able to take doses of narcotics which, if administered to a nontolerant person, might kill him.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I have read of cases where tolerance has built up to maybe 70 grains a day, or something of that sort.

Dr. CAMERON. I think the largest habit of any addict I ever cared for was 64 grains of medical morphine a day.

Mr. ADLERMAN. But they do build up an unbelievable tolerance?

Dr. CAMERON. That is a good one.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And they reach a stage where they have ever-increasing requirements for it.

Dr. CAMERON. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you find that some of them will go into a hospital—first, were you connected with Lexington?

Dr. CAMERON. No; I was a staff member at the Fort Worth Hospital for 3 years.

Dr. ADLERMAN. And that is a Federal hospital for the treatment of addicts?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you find that there are certain addicts who go in for voluntary treatment and go through withdrawal under hospital care so they can take their tolerance down to the point where they can start off again at one-twentieth of a grain or one-fifth of a grain? They build themselves back, and in a year or so come back again?

Dr. CAMERON. Occasionally addicts come up with this as their avowed purpose. More came in that wanted to get off the drug. It was our impression that some came in to reduce their tolerance, so they could continue at a lower level.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This is not uncommon, to have a "dryout" and then go back on it at a lower level.

Dr. CAMERON. The point you make is well taken.

The CHAIRMAN. Doctor, have you finished your statement?

Dr. CAMERON. Not quite.

The CHAIRMAN. Proceed until you finish.

Dr. CAMERON. Continuing the quotation:

As a result of these conclusions, the American Medical Association and the National Research Council oppose on the basis of present knowledge such ambulatory treatment plans.

These two organization support: (1) After complete withdrawal, followup treatment for addicts, including that available at rehabilitation centers; (2) measures designed to permit the compulsory civil commitment of drug addicts for treatment in a drug-free environment; (3) the advancement of methods and measures toward rehabilitation of the addict under continuing civil commitment; (4) the development of research designed to gain new knowledge about the prevention of drug addiction and the treatment of addicted persons; and (5) the dissemination of factual information on narcotic addiction.

1156 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. If I understand correctly, the American Medical Association and the National Research Council, including the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, all three of those organizations have come to the conclusion that the plan or the outline in the last paragraph of the statement which you just quoted represent to them the best methods of handling this problem; is that correct?

Dr. CAMERON. It is correct in this sense: The statement was prepared by the AMA and the National Research Council. The Federal Bureau of Narcotics did not participate in its preparation, but it did endorse it after it had been prepared.

The CHAIRMAN. What I am getting at, Doctor, is this last paragraph which you read, giving five indications of support, of the things they support, is endorsed by the three organizations as presenting the best methods of dealing with this problem.

Dr. CAMERON. As I understand it; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the source of the opposition to these recommendations, or these methods?

Dr. CAMERON. I am not aware that there is enormous opposition to these methods. The three organizations that I just quoted are, it seems to me, the three preeminent organizations in this field in the country.

The CHAIRMAN. That is what I was getting at. This, then, represents the best thinking from your standpoint, your judgment, and so far as we know the best thinking on the subject.

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, sir. I might point out that contained in the pamphlet "Narcotics Addiction," previously given to you, there is another statement by the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council and the American Medical Association on "The Use of Narcotic Drugs in Medical Practice, and the Management of Narcotic Addicts," which was adopted in June 1963, a more recent statement. It appears on page 51 of the pamphlet I have given you. I have not quoted from it.

All it does is endeavor to make somewhat more clear and more precise the details of the meaning of the statement I have just read.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you agree with the five points recommended?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, I do.

The CHAIRMAN. I have one or two questions on those.

Senator MUSKIE. May I ask a question, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Senator MUSKIE. At the beginning of your statement, Doctor, you said that your statement was neither approved or disapproved by the Department.

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, sir.

Senator MUSKIE. Does that qualification apply to the paragraph to which the chairman is referring?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, sir.

Senator MUSKIE. Does the Public Health Service take a position, in other words?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1157

Dr. CAMERON. I don't know that the Public Health Service has taken an official stand on this statement that I have just read. If so, I am not aware of it. But it may well have.

The CHAIRMAN. What you are trying to say is that this statement is yours?

Dr. CAMERON. I am saying that this is a statement of the AMA and the National Research Council, and as chairman of the two committees that drafted it, I am in agreement with it.

The CHAIRMAN. That which you quoted is their statement, but the statement you are presenting to the committee, as I understand, has not been approved or disapproved by your superiors.

Dr. CAMERON. That is correct. It is my personal opinion; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You said:

After complete withdrawal, followup treatment for addicts, including that available at rehabilitation centers.

How do we get the complete withdrawal before we get to this recommendation?

Dr. CAMERON. A complete withdrawal is relatively easily accomplished, Senator McClellan, in a drug-free environment under medical supervision. It usually would take no more than 2 to 3 weeks, and can be done with relatively little discomfort to the addict, with proper medical management.

The CHAIRMAN. How do you get the addict there? He doesn't go voluntarily.

Dr. CAMERON. Some do. Others come as a result, in some States, of civil commitment. The majority would come as a result of criminal proceedings, in many instances. Some would come on probation. Some may come while under sentence.

The CHAIRMAN. Is this designed to take the place of criminal penalties?

Dr. CAMERON. It is my feeling, Senator, that the use of civil commitment in the vast majority of cases would be preferable to criminal commitment.

The CHAIRMAN. As I understand it, one may be an addict and not a law violator in the sense that he is a pusher of the drug or peddler of the drug.

Dr. CAMERON. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. From that standpoint, I can appreciate that possibly a court order, if he consents to it, or even if he didn't, would require him to take treatment and would be in order. But if one is a pusher of the drug, a peddler of it, actually engaged in the violation of the law, then should this treatment be given to him? Or should there be discrimination in trying to sift out those that are repeaters, and so forth? Should we give this treatment or prescribe this remedy and give this civil sentence only to those who are just beginners, maybe, just first offenders?

Dr. CAMERON. Senator, of one thing I am reasonably sure, and that is that not all persons are alike.

The CHAIRMAN. That what?

Dr. CAMERON. That not all persons are alike. If you treat every person exactly alike, you will certainly perpetrate an injustice to some. Therefore, I believe that the treatment of the addict must be individualized according to his particular problem, socially, and so on.

1158 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. And leave it to the discretion, of course, of the court hearing the case, as to whether a criminal penalty should be imposed, or whether treatment should be prescribed?

Dr. CAMERON. I think the two are not necessarily mutually exclusive. Criminal penalty may be imposed and the person may receive treatment while he is undergoing sentence.

The CHAIRMAN. You may do it both ways.

Dr. CAMERON. You may do it both ways. Perhaps one point to be made here is that many addicts sell simply to maintain their own habit, while other addicts sell far in excess of this amount, much on the order of a private entrepreneur, if you will. I believe that the management, from the legal point of view, of these two classes of addicts might well be different.

The CHAIRMAN. This thought occurs to me. If a fellow is such an addict that he doesn't have the power of resistance, and satisfies his desire for drugs by peddling them to get money to buy them—then in a sense he is as dangerous to society as the fellow who peddles for profit, even though his is a little different situation.

Possibly if you could cure him of the addiction, he wouldn't have any desire to peddle the drug; whereas, the other man, who is in the business for profit, whether cured or not cured, might still want to engage in the illicit traffic.

Dr. CAMERON. I agree with you entirely. I think there will be some problems of determining into which class of peddler the person falls, but in general, I think a distinction can more often than not be accurately made, and to take into account this difference in motive is not a new concept under the law because, for example, in the case of murder, you may have a question of first degree murder, second degree murder, manslaughter, and so on.

The law does recognize differences in intent and in motivation, and I think that could be applied here.

The CHAIRMAN. The courts or the authorities who have the responsibility for making decisions are not infallible and often get people paroled who are habitual criminals. Yet there is always a humanitarian appeal to give them another chance.

We make many mistakes in that field, and I am sure there would be mistakes made here, but the question is, does the potential good outweigh the harm that might occur from mistakes? It is something that deserves study and these two agencies, and apparently the Bureau of Narcotics, have all finally come to the same conclusion.

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The second recommendation is for measures designed to permit the compulsory civil commitment of drug addicts for treatment in a drug-free environment. What does that mean?

Dr. CAMERON. That would mean that it is our hope that the several States and perhaps the Federal Government might enact laws enabling the civil commitment of persons who are addicted, committing them to medical authorities for proper treatment.

The treatment would begin in a closed setting, generally, for withdrawal. Under civil commitment it would be possible, then, to follow the person for a number of months or years, if necessary, during the rehabilitation process and give him supervision during that period.

The CHAIRMAN. Do we not have Federal laws to permit that now? Are our Federal laws inadequate?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1159

Dr. CAMERON. I know of no Federal statute that provides for civil commitment of an addict.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think such laws should be enacted?

Dr. CAMERON. Personally, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You think you would recommend that that be done?

Dr. CAMERON. Quite definitely.

The CHAIRMAN. I assume, then, that a number of States do not have such statutes?

Dr. CAMERON. That is correct, although in some States you find it possible to commit persons who are addicts under their existing civil commitment statutes, but this is not uniformly the case.

The CHAIRMAN. This second recommendation proposes that proper statutes be enacted both by the Federal Government and the States where they do not have them to authorize treatment in the handling of addicts in this manner. That would be your interpretation of that?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes.

Senator MUSKIE. Would the chairman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Senator MUSKIE. Who would initiate the civil commitment proceedings?

Dr. CAMERON. That would depend upon the way the statute was drafted. But it would occur to me that the initiation of such proceedings might well be on the basis of medical action or on the basis of law enforcement agencies, or private citizens.

Senator MUSKIE. If it was initiated by law enforcement agencies, what would be the distinction between civil commitment proceedings and criminal commitment proceedings?

Dr. CAMERON. The law enforcement agencies now very often initiate proceedings in connection with commitment of the mentally ill, but the fact that the police officer might be the petitioner does not necessarily mean that the court would have to hear it under a criminal proceeding.

Senator MUSKIE. And the commitment would be for a definite period of time or would that be left to the judgment of those who would have to evaluate the success of the rehabilitation?

Dr. CAMERON. I would recommend an indefinite period because it is difficult to determine in advance how long a period would be required.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you say "indefinite"?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You would have to put some limit on it, wouldn't you?

Dr. CAMERON. I would use as a model many of the civil commitment statutes for the mentally ill at the present time. Those persons are usually committed to a mental hospital and may be released when, in the opinion of the superintendent of that hospital, he is sufficiently recovered to return to the community. He may be released under certain conditions, such as that he report back to the hospital for continued treatment. I would use the same model for the commitment of addicts.

Senator McINTYRE. Doctor, what is meant by "civil commitment"? Does that have reference to the procedure by which he is committed, or does it have a reference to where he will be retained?

1160 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. CAMERON. It has reference to the type of procedure, civil judicial commitment in contradistinction to criminal action on a criminal charge.

Senator McINTYRE. The purpose there being to give it an atmosphere of noncriminality, the same as we do in juvenile courts, for instance?

Dr. CAMERON. Exactly.

Senator McINTYRE. Thank you.

Senator MUSKIE. I have one other question, Mr. Chairman.

You said something that implied that civil commitment might encompass the possibility of the patient being at large in the community.

Dr. CAMERON. Certainly later in his period of treatment this would be the case. I think most States, if this kind of legislation were enacted for bringing a person into a hospital setting or his withdrawal and the beginnings of his treatment, would have that covered. There would come a time when it would be necessary to release him under a certain amount of supervision to the community, if the goal is rehabilitation.

Then the person needs to learn to accept increasing responsibility for his own actions and to demonstrate that he is learning this. In order to have this happen, he will have to have increasing opportunity to exercise responsibility for himself. A person doesn't get well suddenly, overnight; today he is sick and locked up and tomorrow he is completely well and on the street. This is a gradual process and has to be handled, I think, in this way.

Senator MUSKIE. He is still subject to supervision in that period and subject to recommitment in an institution?

Dr. CAMERON. In the event he were to relapse; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. I would assume that the courts making the order for civil commitment would retain control of the case pending further developments.

Dr. CAMERON. This is an area that would need to be explored. If one were to use the civil commitment model, then the court would not retain jurisdiction, but would give it to the medical personnel who are treating the person. On the other hand, you well know that in certain types of criminal proceedings, for example, a person who is found not guilty of an act by reason of insanity, the court very often retains jurisdiction and he may be released from the hospital only on approval of the court. It could be done either way in this instance.

The CHAIRMAN. You might follow through with an explanation, Doctor, of recommendations 4 and 5, briefly.

Senator MUSKIE, will you take charge until I return?

(At this point Senator McClellan withdrew from the hearing room.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. May I ask a few questions?

Senator MUSKIE (presiding). Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think it might be well, Doctor, to explain the problems in rehabilitation, the problems of trying to effect a cure for addiction.

As I understand it, you have two dependencies: one is a physical dependency on the drug which can be removed by treatment during which you give them diminishing doses in a period of a week to 10 days or 2 weeks, and that would remove the physical dependency on the drug.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1161

Dr. CAMERON. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is, on the withdrawal. Then you have the big problem, which is the psychological dependency on the drug.

Dr. CAMERON. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There is a very severe relapse where you have a person who has been taken off and withdrawn from the drugs. There is an extremely high episode of relapse; is that correct?

Dr. CAMERON. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The civil commitment that you advocate, and which has been followed in some States, although not in the Federal courts, does provide that when a person comes up on a criminal charge in some States, he can be offered an alternative to accept civil commitment for a period of years, or for the length of the term of the sentence. He is, however, under control and under supervision all of this time to see that he doesn't relapse.

If he does, he is sent back either to the jail or the hospital, as the case may be. Is that right?

Dr. CAMERON. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. But there is a continuous pressure on him, holding the sentence or parole over him, to give him a motive to stay off the drug.

Dr. CAMERON. That is right. I would invite to your attention that since drug addiction is a chronic relapsing disorder, that we should not be surprised, even if civil commitment statutes are enacted and appropriate programs to implement them are provided, we should not be surprised if some addicts continue to relapse and have to come back into the treatment center. That relapse should not be considered as an ultimate failure. There is suggestive evidence to indicate that addicts, as they come off drugs, tend to relapse, but at less frequent intervals, until they finally remain abstinent.

There are many illnesses that have a relapsing characteristic. This is true of addiction insofar as it involves sick people.

I might say parenthetically that I think most addicts are mentally disordered persons who have addiction as a symptom, but not all addicts are in this category. Since this is a relapsing illness, we must not be disappointed by the fact that some addicts, even with an ideal treatment program, will relapse and have to renew their treatment.

Mr. ADLERMAN. However, doesn't it give a much greater hope for effecting some cures that would be given just by taking him off the drug while he is in jail, with no aftercare, no psychiatric treatment, or anything of this sort. Then almost invariably he will relapse?

Dr. CAMERON. This is the current pattern.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Then there is a sort of emotional immaturity involved in drug addiction; is that not correct?

Dr. CAMERON. For many addicts this is true.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is it not true that to some extent, after a period of years when they reach a certain age, there seems to be a tendency to outgrow the need for the drugs, perhaps at age 40 or 45?

Dr. CAMERON. There is some suggestive evidence for this. It is twofold. On the basis of clinical experience in treating addicts, it is not uncommon to see the same man several times during his earlier years, and then he disappears from the scene. Since so many of them get into trouble with the law, it is reasonable to assume, I think that if they disappear from the scene, a good proportion of them are remaining abstinent, but these people are notoriously difficult to follow.

1162 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

I think, and you can get this from the personnel at the Bureau of Narcotics directly, rather than from me, it is my impression that they keep records of people known to be addicts, and that their records show that persons tend to disappear from the law violation rolls very often around the age of 40 or 45.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They disappear at about that age, but there is another group who are free who appear to have a diminishing desire.

Dr. CAMERON. I believe the individual does not disappear from the Bureau of Narcotics roster by virtue of being in prison. They still keep track of them.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would you proceed?

Senator MUSKIE. Doctor, I have one or two other questions.

Do any States meet the standards in their programs which you have outlined in these five points?

Dr. CAMERON. Not completely; no, sir; although two or three States are making very valiant efforts to try to improve their programs, notably New York and California.

But so far as I am aware, no State would have the kind of treatment program advocated here, with treatment, rehabilitation, and research programs, nor quite likely have they what they would like to have themselves.

Senator MUSKIE. Is there any disagreement among the States which face the problem in any way at all with the concept which underlies your five points?

Dr. CAMERON. I think it would perhaps be inappropriate for me to try to speak for all of the States on that, Senator Muskier.

Senator MUSKIE. Are you aware of any important difference of opinion?

Dr. CAMERON. Most of the persons knowledgeable about the treatment of addicts are moving very much in this direction.

Mr. ADLERMAN. We will hear from representatives of the States of New York and California, Mr. Chairman.

Senator MUSKIE. Thank you.

Your last two points emphasize the importance of research and dissemination of information. This is inadequately done now, I take it.

Dr. CAMERON. Yes. There are research endeavors in this field, in New York and California, and the Federal Government at Lexington, but it is my impression that a great deal more needs to be learned. I would suggest, perhaps, that some of the areas of research that should be undertaken might be as follows: An experimental facility for outpatient and/or general hospital treatment of narcotic addicts to explore the possibilities of treating at least some types of addicted persons in the community rather than in closed facilities designed primarily or exclusively for the treatment of addicted persons.

Such endeavors would have to be closely supervised, controlled, and carried out only with skilled consultation and approval of appropriate professional and other authorities. This should be done on a research basis. This is a mode of treatment which we now do not generally endorse, but I think we should not cut off the possibility that this might be useful and it should be explored on a research basis.

We need a good deal more research about the causes and the psychological and physiological mechanisms of addiction. We need more studies on the natural history of addiction in a substantial series of patients with special attention to the patterns of and factors associated with addiction, with relapse, with recovery.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1163

This is a field in which we do rather badly at the present time in terms of treatment, and it is imperative, I believe, that our research efforts in this area be intensified.

Senator MUSKIE. I take it you are speaking of a substantial expansion of the research.

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, I am.

Senator McINTYRE. Mr. Chairman——

Senator MUSKIE. Senator McIntyre?

Senator McINTYRE. At the risk of these questions having been answered in prior hearings, I have two possible conceptions that are entertained generally, and I think the doctor can put them at rest for me.

One is that it is my understanding that once addicted, there is no permanent cure, but that they are always subject to relapse.

Dr. CAMERON. There is always the danger of relapse, but I can point to a good many individual patients who have been treated and who are no longer addicted and have never relapsed. These are relatively few, but it does occur.

Senator McINTYRE. These are the exceptions?

Dr. CAMERON. Percentagewise; yes, sir.

Senator McINTYRE. The second popular conception I have is that—and this has reference to some earlier testimony of yours—that when you seek to treat an addict, the initial treatment I have pictured in my mind is one of complete withdrawal of the drug. I think in your testimony you said this can now be accomplished with relatively little discomfort to the patient.

Dr. CAMERON. That is right.

Senator McINTYRE. So the popular conception, at least, that I entertained to this moment, that this initial treatment was one of agony, or seeing them climbing up the walls of the cells, is not true today.

Dr. CAMERON. If I can develop this point just a little further, some years ago, when addicts were able to get, through illicit channels, "better" drugs than they are now able to, one frequently saw rather severe withdrawal syndromes. Even though severe withdrawal syndromes can be well managed with modern drugs, now, because of the lack of availability of drugs on the illicit market, the kind of "stuff" the man gets on the street is usually cut to the point that even though he thinks he may be taking quite a little when he comes in, he usually has a relatively mild withdrawal, and indeed it is not necessary in many instances to give him any supporting drugs during the period of withdrawal.

But if he does have a severe habit, by the proper use of medications this procedure can be made relatively painless. He will have some aches, he will feel uncomfortable, and he won't like it psychologically because he still has a considerable yen for the drug, but as far as physical agony, this is absolutely and completely unnecessary.

Senator McINTYRE. Thank you.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Does the so-called "cold turkey" withdrawal sometimes happen on rare occasions where a man may be picked up and they cannot get medical care for him right away? Ordinarily, hasn't that been abandoned as a method of withdrawal?

1164 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. CAMERON. Even the term "cold turkey" is subject to very marked misunderstanding. "Cold turkey" for a person who has a severe habit is an agonizing and unnecessary process. But as I pointed out before, if a man has only a mild dependence due to the availability of only limited amounts of drugs, it may be possible to withdraw him "cold turkey" because he never develops any real, severe symptoms in the first place.

"Cold turkey" simply means that you give him no drugs during his withdrawal period, and if he doesn't need it, I suppose there are some who would call this "cold turkey," but that is not inhumane.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And this is not practiced as a general rule anyhow, even with the mild cases? It is not generally practiced in any of the Federal penitentiaries or in any of the State hospitals?

Dr. CAMERON. It may well be. For example, a patient comes in and claims to have a large habit. He may sincerely think he has a large habit. But before we would give him drugs, more often than not, we would wait and see if he begins to develop objective signs of withdrawal. Many persons never even develop objective signs of withdrawal.

So in those circumstances, you would not give him drugs because it would simply be an increase in his dosage.

Mr. ADLERMAN. May I explain for the record that we have heard testimony that the drugs are diluted or adulterated to the extent that, whereas most of the addicts think they are getting high dosages, actually they are getting one-twentieth of the morphine or heroin content of the pure drug. The pure drug is about 80 percent heroin, as it arrives in the United States. But it is diluted 20 times.

So a package of maybe 3 grains that the addict may get—a $5 bag—contains only one-twentieth of a grain heroin content. So he is getting very, very little. Many think they are getting a whole lot more and sometimes they don't get any at all. They only get quinine, but they don't realize it.

Dr. CAMERON. You will notice in our statement that we did say that the withdrawal should always be under medical supervision, and even if the person has been taking relatively little drug and turns out not to need additional drugs during the withdrawal period, this determination should be made under medical supervision.

(At this point Senator McClellan entered the hearing room.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you wish to proceed?

Dr. CAMERON. My formal statement, Mr. Chairman, continues after the quotation.

Since the Federal Bureau of Narcotics expressed its complete approval of the views contained in the statement, it is apparent that the three organizations involved share common objectives concerning narcotic addiction in the United States, namely, that present efforts should be strengthened (1) to reduce and, if possible, eliminate such addiction; and (2) to provide the best possible treatment and rehabilitation services to addicted persons. Understandably, and quite properly, those concerned with various aspects of this problem have and doubtless will continue to view it from their particular vantage point.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1165

Narcotic addicts in the United States today are to be found primarily in the major metropolitan centers of New York, California, Illinois, and Michigan. According to the "Report on Narcotic Addiction" of the Council on Mental Health of the American Medical Association in 1957:

There is a remarkable agreement between * * * various studies in diverse locations. In all studies, addiction, especially of youths, is found to be largely confined to very limited areas of the cities involved. These areas are the poorest in the cities and are characterized by the lowest income, poorest housing, most unstable family structures, the highest delinquency rates, and * * * the areas having populations of predominantly Negro or Puerto Rican origin.

Thus, it is evident that socioeconomic factors are associated with the development of addiction in particular persons. However, it is important to remember that addicts are to be found in other settings and that there are many persons in these deprived areas who do not become addicts—in fact, more who do not than do.

There are other factors associated with addiction. In addition to the socioeconomic factors mentioned, there are usually very important psychiatric factors as well. According to the 1957 Report of the Council on Mental Health—

There is a general agreement among all students of addiction that addicts have personality aberrations and that these psychiatric conditions preceded and played an important role in the genesis of addiction, its maintenance, and the higher relapse rate after treatment—note the possible relationship with socioeconomic factors, particularly unstable family structures, in the development of such personality disturbances.

It has been said that the development of addiction to narcotics usually involves first of all an unstable personality plus the "accident" of introduction to the drugs. The drugs must fall on "fertile soil" before addiction occurs. I should stress that I am here ignoring the occasional person who is unavoidably made physically dependent and tolerant to drugs in the process of being given relief from intractable pain.

I shall not endeavor to describe the types of mental and emotional disorders most frequently associated with addiction, other than to say that most addicts in the United States today (ignoring those unavoidably medically addicted), suffer from character disorders, inadequate personalities, and various types of neuroses. For these persons, narcotics seem to be used as a "crutch" or a "solution" for meeting life's problems. The range and paradoxical nature of the effects of narcotics are astonishing indeed. For the man who wants to remain awake, narcotics provide an answer. For the man who wants to go to sleep, narcotics induce slumber. Narcotics have both euphoriant and sedative effects. They give relief from pain, relief from fear, relief from anxiety, and even relief from excessive passivity. Narcotics come as close as any drugs yet found to being a panacea, solving different problems for different people, and different problems for the same person at different points in time.

Lest narcotics be made to sound too attractive, we should move on to a consideration of the characteristics of the addiction phenomena, psychological dependence, tolerance, and usually physical dependence.

I have already discussed with you these three factors and will not read the formal part on this. I will ask that my entire statement, if agreeable with the Chair, be inserted into the record.

1166 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Psychological dependence has to do with the "relief" or "crutch" phenomena mentioned earlier. Drugs make the addict "feel better" or in some instances "not feel." For some persons, particularly those addicted to narcotics, there may even be a sense of elation or a state of well being greater than that normally experienced, especially in the early phases of addiction. However, this euphoriant effect is usually lost as the addiction progresses and the person continues to take drugs just to feel "normal," which to the addict means absence of tension of any type. The desire for "relief" or euphoria often develops, after drug usage, to an intensity amounting to "craving." It is this psychological drive or "need" that usually starts the drug user on the road to addiction or causes him to relapse, once withdrawn. Without such a psychological "need" there would be little, if any, addiction.

Tolerance means that as a person continues to use a particular addicting drug over a period of time, its effectiveness for that person tends to diminish and an increasing dose is necessary to produce the desired effect. This is particularly true of narcotics, quite true of barbiturates, and less so for alcohol. But tolerance to alcohol does develop.

The final characteristic is that of physical dependence. It must be emphasized that this does not occur in all types of addiction. It does occur with narcotics, barbiturates, and alcohol, but it does not occur with marihuana, cocaine, and the amphetamines.

When physical dependence has been established, it is "necessary" to continue the use of the addicting drug, not only to feel "normal" psychologically, but to prevent the onset of an actual physical illness referred to as the "abstinence syndrome." This syndrome is manifested in different ways, depending upon the nature of the addicting drug and the intensity of use. Allowed to run its course without appropriate treatment, the abstinence syndrome induced by narcotic withdrawal is characterized by sweating, a runny nose, muscular aching, tremulousness, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, and it may, in extreme cases involving debilitated persons, proceed to collapse and death. When physical dependence occurs, it tends to make the use of the addicting drug continuous. Thus, we have a second powerful factor in addition to psychic dependency that perpetuates addictions, once established.

The withdrawal of narcotics from an addicted person is a relatively simple matter, granted a drug-free environment, and can be accomplished with only minimal to moderate discomfort to the patient by the appropriate use of methadone, itself an addicting drug. I am making this point a second time because I think it is quite important. Withdrawal from barbiturates must be quite gradual and requires very close medical supervision. Also, withdrawal from alcohol can, in most cases, be accomplished with only moderate difficulty if scrupulous attention is given to the establishment of a proper fluid, vitamin, and nutritional balance, and to the judicious use of sedatives.

Once the nature of addiction and its antecedents are appreciated, particularly the psychological craving and the intensity of the physical discomfort associated with unsupported withdrawal from narcotics, it is not surprising that some addicts may participate in criminal activity in order to obtain drugs if they cannot obtain them in other ways. (It should be remembered that many addicts who carry out criminal acts had a well-established pattern of criminal behavior before becoming addicted.)

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1167

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would like to say that we already have in evidence the report and letter from the FBI, from Mr. Hoover, to the effect that 73 percent of the addicts have had a criminal record before they were first arrested for addiction. That is the point the witness is making.

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, sir.

The narcotic addict, unlike the alcoholic, if able to obtain an adequate supply, tends to be relatively tranquil and placid and does not ordinarily demonstrate aggressive behavior. He wants to be let alone to enjoy the "boost" given by the drug. However, he well knows that in order to maintain this state of tranquillity and sense of "relief" he must have additional drugs; and if he has no ready funds with which to buy, he may steal in order to get them. It is noteworthy that the crimes committed by narcotic addicts are usually against property and not against persons. Many addicts participate in criminal activity only to the extent necessary to obtain money to maintain their habits, while some tend to go far beyond this. Particularly is this true in connection with the crime of selling drugs.

It is a common pattern for a narcotic addict to buy drugs, take about half for himself, add to the remainder some innocuous adulterant such as powdered sugar to restore the original volume, and sell it to someone else. The buyer again "cuts" it and sells, so that the final purchaser may obtain relatively little active drug. Illicit narcotics in the United States are now so scarce that the majority of addicts obtain such diluted "stuff" that relatively few show major evidences of physical dependence during withdrawal.

The CHAIRMAN. Apparently from that statement we are making tremendous progress in the matter of stopping this illicit traffic in drugs.

Dr. CAMERON. I think a great deal of progress has been made. There is no question about it. When I was actively engaged in the clinical treatment of addicts before World War I, we saw numerous patients who had severe habits supplied on the illicit market. Now it is rather unusual to find an addict who can get enough drug to support a severe habit.

This simply means that the material isn't as available as it once was. I must assume that this state of affairs is largely due to the activities of the Bureau of Narcotics, who are responsible for this phase of enforcement.

The CHAIRMAN. Are we to assume from this that the present weapons, the present statutes, are adequate to deal with the problem, if they are making such progress with the present methods being employed?

Dr. CAMERON. Senator McClellan, I am a physician. I think we have to make a lot more progress on the problems of treatment and rehabilitation. The control of the distribution of drugs is not my particular problem and I am not an expert in this field. That should be responded to by the Bureau of Narcotics and not by me.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't have to be an expert to say whether the present weapons, which have reduced the number of addicts in this country, are apparently effective. Whether we can implement them better and make them more effective, to finally obliterate this menace from our midst, I don't know. But that is what we are searching for. I thought maybe you had some comment.

1168 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. CAMERON. I think we need to improve treatment and rehabilitation resources. Such resources of this type as we have, plus the control program have had some effect. There can be no question on that. But since I do not know enough about the intricacies of control, I think it would be a little presumptuous on my part to suggest whether or not the Commissioner of Narcotics needs additional staff or additional laws.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you what percentage of those that you attempt to rehabilitate are rehabilitated, and remain rehabilitated?

Dr. CAMERON. This is a difficult question to answer because, as I said before, addicts are notoriously difficult to follow. There have been some attempts to follow them, and recent studies show that a large proportion of addicts did relapse, but they didn't all relapse. If you take a cross-section of persons addicted at a particular point in time, you find some of them on now and off at another time.

But the relapse rate is high. There was a study some years ago in which it was ascertained that something under 10 percent were known to be absent after treatment. Around—and I am not certain of the figures—50 percent were known to have relapsed, and the remaining 40 percent or thereabouts, were not able to be found. We have to assume that some of that 40 percent had died, but not all of them.

Since in that situation, reports were being received from the FBI about any criminal activity of persons in this group, and since they had not appeared again on the FBI files, it is to be assumed that a substantial number of those who were not capable of being followed were, indeed, abstinent because they were not again getting into trouble with the law. But to give you a positive figure from that study would be difficult.

The CHAIRMAN. Doctor, irrespective of whether additional weapons are needed in the field of preventing the traffic and dealing with addicts as criminals—in that field, there is, according to your testimony, great need for continuing research and efforts in curing the addict and preventing the relapse.

Dr. CAMERON. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. That is where you are placing the emphasis of your testimony?

Dr. CAMERON. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, you may proceed.

Dr. CAMERON. There is much misunderstanding about the relation of crime and narcotic addiction. It is not a Federal crime to be an addict, nor is it under most State laws. A recent California law making it a crime to be an addict was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States. It is, however, a crime to possess or sell illicit drugs, and to steal. Thus, persons who become addicted because of an underlying personality difficulty, and the opportunity to obtain drugs, may or may not participate in criminal activities.

And, of course, there is a massive amount of criminal activity perpetrated by nonaddicts. As a matter of fact, the number of drug users is so small that even though a substantial proportion of them do participate in some form of criminal activity, it is not possible to find any effect on overall crime rates because of their presence. Some areas where there is a relatively high prevalence of addiction have lower crime rates than those where there is a relatively low prevalence of addiction.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1169

The CHAIRMAN. The person under the influence of a drug is not likely to commit any crime, as I understand you, other than that of possibly stealing to get money to replenish his supply.

Dr. CAMERON. As long as the addict has a plentiful supply, he is usually a relatively tranquil person. It is when he is running short that he is apt to get in trouble.

The CHAIRMAN. But that is the principal crime they commit, is that right?

Dr. CAMERON. Stealing is the principal crime; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. So the contribution of drug addiction to crime is primarily that of larceny, or stealing.

Dr. CAMERON. That is right.

Since society applies sanctions against criminal behavior and many narcotic addicts are involved in such behavior, it is useful for us to look at the philosophies underlying various criminal sanctions.

One of the philosophies is that of "deterrence." It, in effect, says: "Punish the offender as an example to others, that they may see and be persuaded not to do likewise." Perhaps this was the philosophy underlying capital punishment for theft many years ago in England. It was not particularly effective, since a starving man may steal despite the severity of the penalty, if caught. Besides, if he does not get food, he is dead anyway. The addict "needs" to ward off the abstinence syndrome and to obtain relief from his psychic distress. Thus, he has a very substantial "hunger." Deterrence, as an underlying basis for criminal sanctions against many of the criminal acts of narcotic addicts, seems to me to leave something to be desired.

A second major philosophy underlying criminal sanctions is that of "retribution," or "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." If we accept the thesis that addiction is more often than not a symptom of an underlying personality disorder or illness, then we must lay aside the retribution philosophy as an inappropriate basis for dealing with a sick person. I do not say that all addicts have a mental disorder, but I do say that most of them have.

A third philosophy that underlies criminal sanctions is that of treatability or "correction." Here, the idea is to detain the person for a sufficient length of time to give him an opportunity to acquire new understandings and skills so that it will no longer be "necessary" for him to participate in criminal activities.

This is certainly one of the more predominant philosophies today, and has resulted in the change in the name of many institutions from penitentiaries to correctional centers. The correctional philosophy is closely related to treatment and rehabilitation. Holding the views I do as to the causes and nature of addiction, it is understandable that I favor a correctional philosophy as the basis for any criminal sanctions that may have to be applied to narcotic addicts involved in criminal behavior.

The CHAIRMAN. You wouldn't apply that to a criminal who was out pushing drugs.

Dr. CAMERON. No; I would not.

1170 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. Only to the addict who becomes engaged in stealing or pushing a drug in order to get money to sustain his own addiction?

Dr. CAMERON. That is right. The nonaddict pusher is not an addict and I am not talking about him at all today.

The CHAIRMAN. I thought there ought to be some distinction made. I have no sympathy with the fellow out pushing the drug simply to profiteer on human misery. I think severe penalties should be imposed in those instances. I can't have much sympathy or tolerance for them.

Dr. CAMERON. To me, there are three groups: (1) The nonaddict who sells, and I would tend to share your view about how he should be dealt with; (2) the addict who sells far in excess of the amount necessary to maintain his own habit; and (3) the addict who sells only to maintain his own habit. I believe the three should be dealt with differently.

The CHAIRMAN. That some different treatment should be given in each case.

Dr. CAMERON. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. I agree with you. Particularly the head of a gang of illicit distributors, the importer of it, people who are actually engaged in it as a business, profiteering on human misery—I don't know that anything less than death is an excess penalty for people who do that.

You may proceed.

Dr. CAMERON. I might add parenthetically that if one wishes to deal with each person in his own best interest and that of society, it is necessary to individualize the program for each person. There is no surer way to make this difficult or impossible than to treat each person exactly alike, because all persons are not alike. To deal with different persons with different problems in exactly the same way is to assure unfairness to some.

The CHAIRMAN. That brings us to another thought. The courts before whom they are brought are not necessarily competent to deal with each case, because they lack experience and information in this field.

One judge might have a far better understanding than another judge, with the same facts before him. One judge might conclude that a heavy penalty should be assessed and another might conclude that treatment, civil commitment, was in order. I don't know how you are going to remedy that situation. Have you any suggestions about that?

Dr. CAMERON. No. I would simply join in saying that where as you have indicated that some courts have different skills and interests, so, too, do physicians have different skills and interests.

The CHAIRMAN. I might in some cases have pretty good judgment and exercise some wisdom in a decision or sentence I might impose. In this field, I don't know if I understand the problem enough. I just wonder about whether judges generally do.

Dr. CAMERON. Fortunately, most of the addiction is concentrated in a few metropolitan areas, and it is not unreasonable to assume that certain courts may, therefore, acquire considerable skill.

The CHAIRMAN. They may very well. They may become experts.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1171

Dr. CAMERON. Just as many physicians in those areas might become quite skilled. I think the courts should use the advice of physicians in making their judicial determinations. I do not suggest that the physicians should supplant the courts in making judicial determinations.

The CHAIRMAN. I think it is an area in which it would be well for folks to consult physicians.

Dr. CAMERON (continuing). There is much to be learned about the control, treatment, and prevention of various types of addiction. Control of narcotic distribution is one of the most important ways to prevent such addiction. Without the availability of narcotics there could be no narcotic addiction, though there certainly would remain many persons with mental and emotional problems who would constitute "fertile soil" for other addictions.

It may be easier to control the availability of narcotics than to "cure" all persons with mental disorders that render them susceptible to such addiction. That control of drugs is useful has been well demonstrated. Since the passage of the Harrison Narcotic Act, the number of addicts in the United States has steadily declined despite the increased number of people in the country. Further, during World War II, the number of addicts fell to an all-time low, not because people were necessarily healthier, but because shipping was so difficult as a result of the war that illicit drugs were very hard to smuggle into the country.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Doctor, there has been much advocacy of the ambulatory withdrawal clinics. It is a controversial matter and we will hear representatives of those who are advocating both ambulatory maintenance and ambulatory withdrawal clinics, or treatment by physicians. The American Medical Association has taken a position on that in its last report in 1963, at page 57, paragraphs 27 and 28. Do you agree with those conclusions?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, sir; I do.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can that be printed in full in the record, Mr. Chairman, paragraphs 27, 28, and 29? I think that becomes pertinent at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well. The witness says he agrees with it. It may be printed in the record.

(The material referred to follows:)

AMBULATORY WITHDRAWAL CLINICS

27. The 1962 joint AMA-NRC statement (9) reads:

"* * * Ambulatory clinic plans for the withdrawal of narcotics from addicts are * * * generally inadequate and medically unsound."

This position is taken "on the basis of present knowledge" and is intended to cover current clinical practice; it is not intended to obstruct bona fide research. (See under Research.)

AMBULATORY MAINTENANCE AND CONTINUED ADMINISTRATION

28. The joint statement covers this much-debated issue as follows: "The maintenance of stable dosage levels is generally inadequate and medically unsound and ambulatory clinic plans for the withdrawal of narcotics from addicts are likewise generally inadequate and medically unsound."

"As a result of these conclusions the American Medical Association and the National Research Council oppose on the basis of present knowledge such ambulatory treatment plans."

1172 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

29. In fact, as pointed out earlier, ambulatory maintenance can be considered ethical medical practice only if consultation has been had and it is agreed by the physicians concerned that (a) withdrawal would be hazardous to life, or (b) continued drug administration is necessary for a chronic or terminal painful condition other than the drug addiction itself and for which no other mode of treatment is feasible.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Apropos of that and apropos of the previous paragraph you just read in your statement about the "fertile soil" present in addiction, today narcotic addiction is generally concentrated in three cities, New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles. And in many States in the United States there is very little addiction.

If you were to have a clinic arrangement under, say, Federal law, it would have to be one that would be available to all doctors and to all patients throughout the United States.

It would make drugs available on prescription. Would this tend to reverse the present tendency of low addiction in all of the rural areas and all of the States outside of these three large cities, and make narcotics available by prescription to those who may be addiction prone in, say, Utah, Wyoming, Nevada, Texas, or any of the other States?

Dr. CAMERON. I am not sure that it would alter that picture materially, Mr. Adlerman. I think a physician who would prescribe narcotics for a person as symptomatic relief, for a person who is addiction prone, or who has a neurosis or something of this kind, is certainly practicing very poor medicine, and I doubt very seriously that very many physicians would do it.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This is assuming, of course, that you could control it. But if an addict is present in an area and has available to him prescription drugs—and, you know, addicts make addicts. Isn't that the adage?

Dr. CAMERON. They associate with one another; yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And one who is addiction prone, for example, a man will very frequently induce his wife to become an addict—

Dr. CAMERON. He may.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Or a brother, or another relative, or a close friend, to try it out and get a kick. If it is available to him in one of the States where there is very little addiction at present, this might spread and cause additional addiction?

Dr. CAMERON. Mr. Adlerman, I don't know of anyone who has ever suggested in connection with maintenance clinics that drugs be made readily available to anyone, particularly those who are not now addicted.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They wouldn't be made available to those not now addicted, but they could readily become addicted because the drug would be made available.

Dr. CAMERON. To the extent that an addict who is already addicted could get drugs easily and then pass them on to the wife, as you suggest; yes, this would be a problem.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And there might be a tendency to spread addiction throughout the country, if there were ambulatory outpatient maintenance types of operation?

Dr. CAMERON. Only if the physicians involved are practicing a very poor brand of medicine.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you familiar with what happened in the early 1920's, and even before that?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1173

Dr. CAMERON. I have read accounts of it, yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It was common for doctors to give scrip for medication?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You will always find a few rotten apples in the barrel throughout the world, and I don't suppose the medical profession would be an exception to it. But there always are some rotten apples in a barrel. This might make narcotics available to a great number of people.

Dr. CAMERON. If you had a lot of rotten apples, yes, this would be a serious problem.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well.

Dr. CAMERON. Elimination of the availability of another addicting drug, alcohol, was tried and failed. Some persons argue that since it was deemed wise to repeal the Prohibition Act in order to help get the underworld out of the illicit alcohol business, it would be useful to follow the same reasoning with narcotics, viz., make narcotics readily available, thus removing the profit to the underworld and reducing the incentive to recruit new addicts. There are at least two flaws in this argument. There is a vast difference in the number of persons involved in narcotic abuse (40,000 to 60,000) as compared with those who abuse alcohol (approximately 4,500,000). There are additional millions who use, but do not abuse alcohol. The market is rather different. The other flaw is that seldom does one hear of persons being recruited to narcotic addiction by the underworld. Rather, the persons who become narcotic addicts because of their personality difficulties either seek out the drug supply, or more often, are introduced to it rather accidentally.

Another related approach to the prevention of addiction is that of trying to find effective analgesics that do not have addiction liability, thus making unnecessary the production of narcotics. Much work has been done in this area, but to date the efforts have not been crowned with notable success. However, there is reason to believe that such drugs may be forthcoming in the next few years. Further work is required.

It goes without saying that programs designed to correct some of the social and economic ills associated with various forms of addiction are important preventive approaches and much further work needs to be done in these areas. It is recognized that such ills are doubtless more important in and of themselves than is the problem of narcotic addiction with which they are associated.

Perhaps one of the most fruitful avenues for the medical and allied professions to follow, relative to addiction, is to provide to all addicts the best methods available for their withdrawal, treatment, and rehabilitation. We are not now serving the vast majority as well as we know how. We know that the successful treatment of the mentally disordered person is very often a long and difficult process. This is doubly true of those who have addiction as a complicating syndrome of their basic underlying difficulty. Such persons need intensive and prolonged followup assistance, once withdrawn from drugs. Yet, we have very meager resources in this country for that purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. What do we mean by prolonged followup?

Dr. CAMERON. Several years.

1174 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. Then one who becomes an addict becomes rather a burden on the tax resources of the country or of the community.

Dr. CAMERON. He is a burden either way.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think the burden is lighter if he is treated than if he is permitted to continue the habit?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well.

Dr. CAMERON. In those communities where there are relatively large numbers of addicts, special facilities and services for their treatment and followup need to be developed further. In those communities where they are numerically few, at least some agencies providing services to persons with other mental and emotional problems should endeavor to provide help to addicts as a part of their overall services.

In connection with providing adequate withdrawal, treatment, and rehabilitation services to narcotic addicts, it should be recognized that such persons may not, on their own initiative, seek or continue the necessary treatment. In such cases, civil commitment to medical authorities may be necessary. The several States, and perhaps the Congress, should be encouraged to enact enabling legislation to this end.

The final part of my statement has to do with the needed research and I have already spoken to that point.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Muskie, have you any questions?

Senator MUSKIE. No questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator McIntyre?

Senator MCINTYRE. No questions, Mr. Chairman.

(At this point Senator McIntyre withdrew from the hearing room.)

The CHAIRMAN. Counsel has some questions.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you aware of a Bureau of Narcotics regulation which interferes with a physician in his right to treat an addict?

Dr. CAMERON. No, sir; but I am well aware that there is a good deal of controversy on this point. Some physicians think there is such a regulation. The Bureau of Narcotics think there is not. It depends on how you read the regulation. My own reading of the regulation is that it does not interfere with legitimate, ethical medical practice. However, it is my personal opinion that since the regulation can be read in more than one way, depending upon your preexisting prejudice, it might be useful to consider how it might be written so it couldn't be so easily misunderstood.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think it can be so written?

Dr. CAMERON. I think so.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, you think it needs clarification.

Dr. CAMERON. I am quite convinced that the intent of the regulation, as it is implemented by the current staff of the Bureau of Narcotics, is not intended to interfere with ethical medical practice. I think if this is a problem for some physicians, then it might be useful to try to clarify it.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Doctor, I would like to go over one or two things in the AMA report. Page 2 covers the operation of narcotic clinics rather fully, does it not, concerning the abandonment of the clinic system back about 1919 or 1920?

Dr. CAMERON. Yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And it gives the reasons for closing them. Also it discusses the tolerance factor of the report on page 11. Then, there is the fact that Canada rejected the clinics in 1955. That is on page 22. Also, there is the English system which has been referred to, covered on page 23.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1175

There may be a difference in the medical profession toward treatment, is that correct?

Dr. CAMERON. I think the statement to which you are inviting attention in various sections is a factual presentation of the history for the period covered. There is a lot of misunderstanding of the so-called British system. Most of the addicts who are registered in Britain and who receive maintenance doses would not be considered addicts in this country. They are, for the most part, persons with terminal painful conditions for whom no question would be raised about their continued maintenance in this country.

Mr. ADLERMAN. These people receive narcotics from physicians in this country without any hindrance or any objection by anyone, whether it is a Government agency, including the Bureau of Narcotics, or anybody else?

Dr. CAMERON. I think this is true, though I can well imagine in some instances that if a physician happens to have several patients of this kind and is prescribing a fair amount of narcotics, he might well be queried by the Bureau as to where these are going. But if he is using them in this way, he is in no trouble as I understand it.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There is no interference with that?

Dr. CAMERON. No.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And that is generally accepted as good medical practice and not to be frowned upon in any way whatsoever?

Dr. CAMERON. Unfortunately, there are some conditions where you just cannot treat, where the pain is extreme, and it is only humane to give the person, even if addicted, the necessary pain reliever.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think the AMA takes the position on page 34 in this report that there is nothing in the law, the Federal narcotics law, which prohibits a physician from treating an addict. I am not talking about only medical addicts. I am talking about treating an addict in the sense that we are talking about, the criminal addict.

Dr. CAMERON. I am aware of no such prohibition.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much, Doctor.

The committee will stand in recess until 2 o'clock. We will try to resume at that time.

(Members present at time of recess: Senators McClellan and Muskie.)

(Whereupon, at 12:07 p.m., the subcommittee recessed, to reconvene at 2 p.m. the same day.)

AFTERNOON SESSION

(The committee reconvened at 2:23 p.m., Senator John L. McClellan, chairman of the subcommittee, presiding.)

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order.

(Members present at time of convening: Senators McClellan and McIntyre.)

The CHAIRMAN. Will you stand and be sworn?

1176 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Do you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give before this Senate subcommittee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. KUH. I do.

TESTIMONY OF RICHARD H. KUH

The CHAIRMAN. Will you please identify yourself for the record?

Mr. KUH. I am Richard H. Kuh, an assistant district attorney in the county district attorney's office, where I have been since 1953. In 1955, I was appointed administrative assistant to District Attorney Francis Hogan, and I have been in charge of the criminal division of that office since 1960.

I also serve as secretary of the New York District Attorneys Association, and also as coordinator of the New York State Combined Council of Law Enforcement Officials, which consists of sheriffs, the State police, the waterfront commission, and all other law enforcement agencies in the State of New York.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you been licensed to practice law?

Mr. KUH. In 1948 I was admitted to the practice of law.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you still with the U.S. district attorney's office?

Mr. KUH. The New York County district attorney's office, yes, I am.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you a prepared statement?

Mr. KUH. I have a prepared statement which I believe your counsel has and I ask that it be made part of the record.

The CHAIRMAN. Let the entire statement as submitted by the witness be printed in the record at this point.

STATEMENT OF RICHARD H. KUH

I have been asked to, and shall consider with you, two areas of the narcotic addiction problem:

First, whether addicts should be treated—given narcotics—on a maintenance out-patient basis; and

Second, the provisions of and experience under New York State's 1962 Narcotic Addiction Act, know as the Metcalf-Volker law, and whether somewhat similar Federal civil commitment legislation is advisable.

SUPPLYING NARCOTICS TO MAINTAIN OUT-PATIENTS ON DRUGS

As these hearings are intended to serve a constructive purpose, and not merely to add tonnage to the already bulging volumes of conference minutes and hearing transcripts dealing with addiction, that have been compiled at city, State, and Federal levels, I see little sense in continuing—before this subcommittee—the battle between those who would give drugs away and those who would not.

For years, distinguished "authorities" have lined up on both sides of this issue. Most recently, in June of this year, the Advisory Council of Judges of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, urged the wisdom of "administering drugs as necessary" to addicts at large in our communities. Earlier in the year, the President's Advisory Commission on Narcotic and Drug Abuse, a Commission that had been appointed by the late President Kennedy, issued its final report reaching the contrary conclusion. That report cited the 1963 findings of the American Medical Association and the National Research Council to the effect that "the continuous administration of maintenance doses to addicts as treatment is medically unsound."

With most persons in law enforcement who regularly spend time in the courts, I prefer to take my medical advice—at least my current advice on addiction—not from those who are judges by profession, but from those whose orientation is scientific: the National Research Council, the American Medical Association, and the President's Advisory Commission (that included, among its members, several distinguished scientists). Indeed, at least in the area of addiction, the current opinion of these men of science seems to me as a lawyer, to make better commonsense.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1177

I will not here detail all of my reasoning, but I believe that some brief explanation of my conclusions, shared generally by law enforcement personnel who have had continuing close contact with narcotic cases, is appropriate: (i) America's experience with addiction is almost exclusively a problem of heroin, of the person who became addicted initially for "kicks," who is frequently ghettoed, for whom heroin offers escape from the harshness and frustrations of daily living.

This addict seeks, not relief from the pain but something quite different: a euphoric "high." As his tolerance for the drug, heroin, increases, he seeks it in mounting quantities, in order that it may continue to bring him nirvana. "Maintenance dosages" for our addicts would mean steadily mounting dosages. (ii) It grossly oversimplifies to say that America's outlawing of opiates causes crime. For many of our addicts the procuring of drugs is simply one more manifestation of that antisocial conduct that expresses their neurotic or psychopathic rebellion against society. These addicts are not milk-toasts, readily regimented, prepared to register and to stand in line for mere maintenance dosages, merely because such drugs may be lawful, when lacking inhibiting feelings of guilt they can procure "happier" drug quantities with less redtape through illegal sources. (iii) The so-called British system offers no argument. Britain is no more America than is Hong Kong America; and in Hong Kong, where the same system prevails, an estimated 1 in 12 persons is addicted (in New York City, sadly America's addiction capital, the figure is about 1 in 700). In Britain, the rate for major crimes—allowing for differences in population—is one-eighth to one-tenth of ours. England's handful of addicts are, unlike our vast multitudes, mostly addicted to morphine or cocaine, as painkillers, following serious illness. It is not the system, but the sociology of the community, that is likely to accelerate or to retard its addiction rate.

(iv) America's experience with white-collar addiction has been heaviest among our doctors and nurses (it might more accurately be termed "white gown" addiction, indicating that drug use increases with drug availability. (v) Lastly, the use of drugs, to keep an estimated 50,000 American addicts in a muted, gently flowing euphoria, placid and flaccid, lacking in energy and ambition, is hardly to be subsidized by the state. Today this should be particularly so, when the public's growing concern over addiction may auger well for burgeoning research; this may—ultimately—produce effective modes of prevention, treatment, and rehabilitation.

This catalog of arguments would seem to belie the seriousness with which I said that I saw no sense in continuing, before this subcommittee, the battle pro and con outpatient drug administration. That battle, I would guess, has absorbed more than enough energy over the years to send dozens of lunar probes into space, but—unlike last week's universal adventure—I fear that it has returned little of value to this earth. Rather than continuing the battle, those on both sides would do well to explore together such areas of agreement as may exist.

Mr. Justice Frankfurter and the late great Learned Hand were fond of quoting Cromwell's thundering pronouncement: "Ye may be right, and I may be wrong. But, by the bowels of Christ, I suffer ye to conceive it possible that ye may be wrong."

Prosecutors and police do well to keep this caveat in mind (as the actions of the Supreme Court have so often reminded us). And so, convinced that we are right, but conceiving it possible that we may be wrong, many in law enforcement would welcome some scientific proof of the truth. Many of us should like to see a workable pilot project that might ultimately tell us definitely whether or not drugs could be safely administered to addicts at large in our communities.

Happily, we have now learned that this year has seen the start of such a pilot project, on an extremely small scale, under the auspices of the New York State Department of Mental Hygiene. We are hopeful that we, and the public, will be kept informed of its progress. We are watching to see whether it can be demonstrated experimentally that in heterogeneously populated New York City, with the unfortunately high addiction rates of our ghettoed racial and ethnic groups, heroin addicts can be maintained—on heroin, or on some drug the addicts will accept in lieu of heroin—in their communities. Can this be done without exposing the nonaddicted to the infection of addiction? Can spot checks utilizing scientific means (urine chromatography, naline, etc.) be used effectively to see whether pilot project addicts are supplementing their controlled dosages with supplies of illegal drugs? Can typical addicts in the project function usefully in society while under the influence of their daily drug dosages?

1178 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Unless and until such experiments prove the workability of broad drug give-away program, responsible persons chargeable with reducing the addiction plague and simultaneously protecting their communities, should not—one would hope—commit themselves to general out-patient drug doles.

Meanwhile, continued all-or-nothing agitation for immediate and widespread "clinical" drug dispensation serves only to divert attention from a method of dealing with addiction that is clearly more cautious, although infinitely less dramatic. I refer, of course, to the civil commitment of drug addicts.

NEW YORK STATE'S 1962 NARCOTIC ADDICTION ACT, ITS PROMISE AND ITS PERFORMANCE

We in New York City have long recognized the criminal law's limitations in dealing with drug addiction. Traditional enforcement methods make no sense against an addiction background: Paroling or bailing drug defendants for months—or even years—before the criminal charges against them are disposed of in no way means an addict from his drugs. Hinging the determination as to what, if anything, is to be done about an addict, on whether the drugs were fished out of his pocket or seen openly in his hand—likely to be crucial if there is a claim of lawless police conduct—makes little sense in a medical or sociological context. Trying addicts pursuant to rules not designed to deal with illness, and hence intentionally oblivious to the addict's social history—is equally unproductive. Ultimately, sentencing addict-defendants with an awareness that they may be deemed ill and hence should not be imprisoned is likely to mean that they are tossed back into their communities with no real assistance; incarceration for "90 days" followed by no aftercare supervision is just as nonsensical.

Recognizing these limitations, in 1951 New York County District Attorney Frank S. Hogan urged the adoption of a new procedure for the civil commitment of adolescent drug users to hospitals. That procedure was adopted in 1952.

A decade later, in March 1962, the New York State Legislature, by unanimous vote in both houses, adopted the comprehensive Metcalf-Volker law, thus leveling an attack on all phases of addiction. This act was the product of a series of shirt sleeve work sessions between county, city, State, and Federal officials, and representatives of community volunteer groups and social workers, bound together by the determination to produce a statute that would chart a course, both progressive and workable, to govern New York's efforts to do something about addiction.

The act concentrates full responsibility in the State department of mental hygiene. (There were some misgivings about saddling that agency—that operates more than 80,000 hospital beds for mental patients—with this added responsibility. Responsibility was there lodged, however, at the insistence of those conferees who represented State government.)

A unit within the mental hygiene department was charged with planning, educating the public, conducting research, collecting and disseminating statistical and other information, training workers, operating institutions and reviewing and approving institutions operated by others, and handling commitments and all phases of aftercare of the addicts.

The most novel feature of the 1962 legislation was its subdivision known as the Arrested Narcotic Addict Commitment Act. It specified that an arrested addict, whether charged with a narcotic crime or one not directly involving drugs might—subject to certain necessary safeguards—by his own election, convert the criminal proceeding pending against him to a civil hospital commitment. During that commitment, further criminal action is stayed. Decisions of medical personnel govern release of the addict to the department of mental hygiene's aftercare out-patient program. If this program, too, is completed to the satisfaction of the doctors, the criminal charges that led to the arrest are dismissed, and the addict will have avoided the onus of a criminal record. The period of hospitalization and aftercare combined is not to exceed 3 years, and the medical authorities have discretion to have the criminal charges sooner dismissed. (As to misdemeanants lacking prior felony records, the criminal accusation must be dismissed after 1 year's hospitalization or aftercare.)

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1179

Should mental hygiene find a defendant intractable, it may return him to the criminal courts; there the criminal charges will be reactivated. Similarly, the charges are to be revived against escapees and those whose determination peters out in some fashion during the aftercare period.

Signing the 1962 statute into law, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller hailed it broadly, stating:

"Many narcotics addicts under arrest whose most serious failing is their own tragic addiction will be given an opportunity under the provisions of this measure to become self-respecting and self-reliant members of society through State hospital treatment and rehabilitation."

In September of 1963, having observed the operation of the arrested narcotic addict commitment provisions—that had gone into effect January 1, 1963—for more than 8 months, the mental hygiene department announced:

"One set of facts has emerged quite clearly, and that is that the arrested drug addicts who chose medical treatment in preference to a possible correctional sentence are, in comparison to voluntary cases:

"(a) More easily retained in the hospital for a suitable period of treatment.

"(b) With some exceptions, respond more easily to hospital requirements.

"(c) And are brought to cooperate with aftercare more easily."

This conclusion, that corroborates earlier experiences of the New York State Division of Parole, poses a strong argument for hospitalization as a humane alternative to the unallayed invocation of our punitive processes. In light of this conclusion, and of the work being done by mental hygiene in conducting the much-needed pilot project utilizing maintenance doses for outpatients, it would be pleasant to be able to praise lavishly that department's handling of the new law. Because of my own firm conviction that hospital commitment programs, both State and Federal, are desirable—they humanely help the addict to try to "cure" himself, and they protect the community while so doing—I should like to be able to boast that the new law is working wonderfully under the mental hygiene aegis. But, long ago, a wise man noted "Among the smaller duties of life, I hardly know any one more important than that of not praising where praise is not due." And, clearly, praise is not due for the mental hygiene department's performance in this area.

An analysis of some of the weaknesses in mental hygiene's administration of the new law may serve to point up the importance, should there be Federal civil commitment legislation, of entrusting its administration to an agency that is realistic in recognizing the dangers to society of the unsupervised addict in our community, and that possesses a high degree of dedication, imagination, and flexibility.

Consideration of the tabulation that I have prepared, showing the use of the new law in New York County for the year 1963, will underscore the importance of these qualities. The New York County experience is worth considering; unfortunately my county has the State's and Nation's largest addict population.

HOSPITALIZATION

Firstly, I shall consider the extent to which hospitalization has been used. In 1963, less than one in three persons arrested and charged with drug crimes, and who were eligible for hospitalization, sought it. (In 1964, the proportion dropped somewhat; it now seems closer to one in four.) Hence, despite the public wailing on behalf of "the sick addict," the odds are better than 2 to 1 that the "sick" one himself remains cool enough to weigh the threat to his untrammelled freedom more heavily than he weighs his hopes for a cure. On the one hand he sees the prospect of "beating the rap" entirely, or of receiving one of the so frequently light sentences; on the other is the prospect of as much as 3 years of subjection to medical supervision. Realistically though, as hospital beds for addicts remain woefully few, there is little point in worrying now about why even more addicts do not seek access to them.

The bed shortage is, of course, a major problem. In 1963, 1,093 addicts arrested in New York County sought beds and were eligible for them. Mental hygiene was only able to accept 615, thus rejecting about 43 percent of those who sought the "cure". (This same rate of rejection continues in 1964.) And those that got the beds were not long kept in them. The 1962 Ad Hoc Report of the President's Committee on Narcotic and Drug Abuse had recommended that hospitalized addicts be held for about 5 months, before their release into aftercare programs. Mental hygiene hospitalizes its patients for only about 3.

1180 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

When, in 1963, half a million dollars was lopped from its budget, representing 100 to-be-added beds, mental hygiene made no efforts to dramatize its plight in order to get public support for restoring those funds. (The Department's addiction budget is of pygmy proportions compared to its overall annual outlays for mental health.)

The escape figures are alarming; 81 of the 615 committed New York County addicts—or 13 percent—escaped. (Imagine the public scandal that would engulf a correctional institution with a 1-percent escape record.) Although the mental hygiene addict facilities are hospitals—not prisons—that some effective security precautions would have been taken was to be expected.

Approximately the same escape rate continues in 1964. That the drug addict at large in our community can be extremely dangerous should be clear; it has been confirmed by the recent killings by addicts of a New York lawyer (in June, in an elevator), and a New York policeman (in July, on a fire-escape).

AFTERCARE

In preparing the Metcalf-Volker bill, the draftsmen recognized that aftercare was as important to the addict's rehabilitation, and to the community's protection, as was hospitalization. (See sec. 207.) Here, too, the record of the State Mental Hygiene Department is shockingly poor. Of New York County's approximately 500 addicts to be released to aftercare, 349—or almost 70 percent—had disappeared from the aftercare program by July 15 of this year, and more than a third of these are still at large. The high rate of disappearance from mental hygiene aftercare is understandable—but not excusable. The department maintains but two aftercare centers, both open only during normal business hours. One is at the Manhattan State Hospital on Wards Island in the East River; the other, almost as inaccessible to the bulk of the addict populace, is on East 17th Street. By way of contrast, the U.S. Public Health Service placed its project where the addicts are, at 135th Street and Broadway; the East Harlem Protestant Parish Narcotic Committee has its headquarters in East Harlem, at 103d Street, and is open round the clock; New York City operates four neighborhood rehabilitation centers, located in the addict communities, where they remain open 7 days a week 'til 9 at night. There can be little wonder that the addict, who needs help when and where he needs it, drops out of mental hygiene's geographically and chronologically remote program.

The utter absurdity—the virtual nonexistence—of a serious aftercare program is underscored by the lack of any in-community spot checks by mental hygiene. The law provides expressly (sec. 210(3)) for the use of "accepted medical procedures, tests and treatment, which may include but are not limited to the use of narcotic antagonists or other accepted techniques," but no use by mental hygiene has been reported of antagonists such as nalline, or of urine chromatography, in connection with aftercare for the bulk of the released addicts.

The results achieved are consonant with the level of performance. Of the 615 New York County addicts accepted by mental hygiene in 1963, by June 15, 1964, only 126—or 20 percent—were still either hospitalized or in aftercare, and only 15 persons had remained in the program long enough, and satisfactorily enough, to have had the criminal charges against them dismissed. The ultimate "success ratio" that this suggests is, it is obvious, extremely low. Not only aren't a significant portion of our addict populace getting meaningful aid from mental hygiene, but our New York community is not being protected from the depredations of the addict populace while mental hygiene bumbles along.

This does not mean that a civil commitment and aftercare program skillfully conducted, cannot produce meaningful results. In sharp contrast is the State division of parole's special narcotic project, that produced about 30 percent "cures," through a dedicated program that removed addicts from their communities for an appreciable period of time, and followed this with meaningful aftercare supervision.

OTHER DERELICTIONS

Quite apart from its shortcomings in the area of hospitalization and aftercare, the Mental Hygiene Department has utilized only bits and pieces of the 1962 Narcotic Addiction Act; the law's full tapestry remains largely unexplored.

A portion of the new law, effective more than 26 months ago, in March 1962, empowers the Commissioner of Mental Hygiene to "formulate a comprehensive plan for the long-range development, through the utilization of Federal, State, local, and private resources, of adequate services and facilities for the prevention and control of drug addiction" (sec. 203(1)). No such plan has, as yet, been unveiled. All agencies in the State continue to pursue their own separate paths, without any overall unified aim or design.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1181

Another provision (sec. 207) specifies the issuance by the Commissioner of "regulations and standards" for the guidance of private agencies, and agencies of political subdivisions of the State, in handling addicts. It specifies further that the facilities of such agencies are to be "reviewed and approved" by the Commissioner, if they conform to these "standards." There has been no State action along these lines.

Throughout, the act uses the term "hospitals or facilities," not simply "hospitals." This was done intentionally by the draftsmen, in order that mental hygiene might create halfway houses, work camps, industrial schools, and other nonhospital facilities that might be useful in the battle against addiction. To date, however, mental hygiene's facilities are beds in hospitals. Period.

The 1962 law (sec. 203(5)) specifies that the Commissioner is to "provide public education on the nature and results of drug addiction and on the potentialities of prevention and rehabilitation in order to promote public understanding, interest, and support." No efforts at "public education" have come to my attention.

Many years ago Mr. Dooley commented "I care not who make the laws in a nation, if I can get out an injunction." Unfortunately, there are times when it does not take so much as an injunction to render a statute almost nugatory.

RECOMMENDATIONS

What, if anything, can and should the Federal Government do in the area of narcotics?

First, I believe that the New York experience underscores the importance of who is handling the problem. Some months ago, the President's Advisory Commission on Narcotic and Drug Abuse issued its final report. Generally, I agreed with most of its recommendations. Respectfully, however, I would caution this subcommittee that, as New York's experience so clearly shows, when handling problems of addiction becomes merely a tiny tail on an overly large dog, the imagination and dedication that is required for substantial progress to be made are likely to be lacking. I hope I will not seem an intruder into the Federal area when I note that professionals in local law enforcement have long admired the imaginative and dedicated performance of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics.

Second, I would urge Federal support for programs embracing the hospitalization of addicts. The President's Advisory Commission has also made this recommendation. In 1961, New York's Senators Javits and Keating, with support from Senators Bush, Case, Hart, Kuchel, and Scott, and the late Senator Ke-fauver, introduced two civil commitment bills, S. 1693 and S. 1694 (87th Cong., 1st sess.). The New York Senators reintroduced those bills in February of last year. One, S. 864 (88th Cong., 1st sess.), provides for the civil commitment and aftercare of addicts who have been arrested on Federal narcotic charges. The statutory scheme is much like that of New York's 1962 legislation, with the Surgeon General supervising the addict commitments. The other, S. 861, provides for grants-in-aid to those States with earnest programs for dealing with their own addiction problems.

Third, Senators Javits and Keating have introduced two other, and more modest, bills in the addiction field, passage of which I urge. S. 862 specifies that the U.S. Public Health Service may make research grants in the area of addiction. S. 863 provides that youths, charged with narcotic offenses, are entitled to the protections of the Youth Corrections Act.

Passage of bills substantially along these lines would announce with unmistakable clarity that the United States of America has mandated humane and constructive treatment for addicts, whether locally or federally arrested. Passage would also appropriately assist New York and California, and other States with appreciable narcotic problems, in establishing more adequate facilities for the treatment of their addicted. I say "appropriately" because I do not believe that, today, there can be any doubt that addiction is a Federal—not solely a local—problem.

Lastly—but of great importance—Federal wiretap legislation is urgently needed. The Department of Justice's proposal, introduced in the Senate by Senator McClellan in 1962, as S. 2813 (2d sess., 87th Cong.), was reintroduced by him—as S. 1308—during the present session. That bill provides a host of safeguards and affords a narrow area only in which law enforcement is authorized to intercept. Narcotic investigations are within that narrow area. In 1962, a large group, representing the Nation's prosecutors, police, and crime commissioners, convened in Washington and testified, before the Senate Judiciary Committee, for legislation along the lines of the Attorney General's proposal. We join Commissioner Giordano, whose testimony favoring wiretap legislation this committee heard, in hoping for early—and favorable—congressional action in this area.

1182 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

New York County addict commitment figures¹ for 1963, the 1st year of operations under the Arrested Narcotic Addict Commitment Act (secs. 208-216, art. 9, mental hygiene law)

Arraignments on narcotic charges only.....	4,932
Number of such defendants eligible for commitment.....	3,075
Number of such eligible defendants requesting commitment under the act.....	880
Number of defendants charged with nonnarcotic crime eligible for and requesting commitment.....	430
Total number of defendants requesting commitment.....	1,310
Number of these found not to be addicted.....	217
Number of these found to be addicted.....	1,093
Addicts accepted by mental hygiene and committed.....	615
Addicts denied commitment by the court.....	11
Addicts turned down by mental hygiene, though eligible.....	467
Total.....	1,093
Followup on those 615 addicts accepted by mental hygiene and committed during 1963, from New York County:
Addicts still either hospitalized or in after-care program.....	126
Addicts who escaped from inpatient care.....	81
Of whom—
Still at large.....	28
Apprehended:
Case disposed of.....	52
Case still open.....	1
Addicts who disappeared from after-care.....	349
Of whom—
Still at large.....	137
Apprehended:
Case disposed of.....	187
Case still open.....	25
Addicts whose cases abated because of death.....	2
Addicts who were recommitted to hospital after reapprehension, following escape or disappearance.....	8
Addicts returned to court by mental hygiene as unsuitable for continued commitment.....	34
Addicts certified (under sec. 213) whose criminal charges dismissed pursuant thereto.....	15
Total.....	615

¹ This tabulation prepared from such documents as have been available to the New York County district attorney's office; as comprehensive reports have not been available from mental hygiene, and as such documents as were received have varied some during the first year of operation, some slight error in these figures is possible.

The CHAIRMAN. You may proceed to highlight it as you like.

Mr. KUH. First, I would like to thank the committee for the privilege of appearing, and also the thanks of my superior, Mr. Hogan, to you and the committee for the fantastic job you have done for law enforcement over the years, the highlighting of situations that exist, getting the public aware of some of the problems of law enforcement. It has certainly been a major accomplishment.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1183

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much. You know that primarily our responsibility and our jurisdiction is limited to searching out information that might help us with respect to legislation.

In other words, we have a legislative function, but there seems to be some considerable justification, I may say, for the view that often hearings of this kind alert the public to conditions that it would not have known about, except for some forum of this kind where these things are brought out and exposed to the public. As I say, while alerting the public is not the primary function and doesn't come within what we term to be the legislative function of the committee, however, it seems to be a wholesome byproduct from which some good ensues. Sometimes these hearings really have a greater impact that way than they do, at least immediately, upon legislation.

We make these records, and they are here for quite a long time. Maybe no legislation actually results from the inquiries, but in the meantime something else happens and then you go into the matter again with this background as a record for the Congress in its further study of the situation.

So, I don't think these hearings are always—well, in fact, I think they are never a complete loss of time, energy, and effort on the part of Senators who serve upon the committee.

Mr. KUH. We quite seriously recognize, and I think the events of the last few months not only in our city but in the Nation, the problem of when the public is not in sympathy with and doesn't understand the problems of law enforcement.

So, quite apart from the legislative purposes, which your committee has so ably served, the public education purpose we in law enforcement find to be an important one.

We are indebted for both. I was asked to talk about two critical problems in the narcotic area, one the problem of outpatient treatment of addicts to drugs, and the other is the civil commitment situation, and how New York deals with it.

I will deal with them in that order. Dr. Cameron, this morning, spoke with you about the recommendations of the American Medical Association and the National Research Council against an outpatient maintenance program. There is, and I think in fairness we must note, a great conflict in this area. Quite recently, the Advisory Council of Judges of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency issued a report in which they appeared strongly in favor of such a program of administering drugs to addicts while on the street.

The CHAIRMAN. If you will, inject there just what this program is and how it operates, so we will know exactly what we are talking about, and we will also know what is controversial.

Mr. KUH. Senator, you have anticipated me, because that, frankly, is one of my problems. We find groups saying, "Give them drugs, let them have drugs in the street," and yet, one of the problems is we don't see a concrete workable program as to how it can be done under adequate controls.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you call it?

Mr. KUH. The outpatient maintenance program.

The CHAIRMAN. What do you mean by that?

Mr. KUH. I guess that they mean outpatient, that the person is not in a hospital. He is an outpatient.

1184 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. But under the care of a doctor?

Mr. KUH. Under the care of a doctor or under the care of doctors in a clinic.

The CHAIRMAN. With the doctor authorized to give him drugs?

Mr. KUH. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, he is an outpatient in the sense that he is under the care of a doctor but not restrained in any way.

Mr. KUH. He would be free to go about his daily tasks and come in periodically to get his maintenance dosages of drugs.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand we have people who advocate that to be the way to handle the group.

Mr. KUH. Yes. The most distinguished group to recently advocate it was the so-called Advisory Council of Judges of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, a group of about 30 judges, some of them quite distinguished, many of them from adolescent and children's courts.

The CHAIRMAN. Do they do that by having the patient go to the doctor or hospital to get his injection?

Mr. KUH. I think, Senator, one of the problems is that they favor giving them drugs out of the hospital, but they don't quite indicate how they are going to handle it. I have yet to see a concrete program.

The CHAIRMAN. Would the addict go there to have them give him a supply to last him 2 or 3 days?

Mr. KUH. I would hope not.

The CHAIRMAN. That is what I am getting to. It would seem to me that that addict might very well, with the drug in his pocket, while he is "pretty high"—I guess that is the proper term—might solicit a friend to join him. They do that with alcohol. They might very well do it, though I don't know.

Mr. KUH. I understand this might happen. I am anything but a champion of that program. I think it has many weaknesses. I understand, though, that Milton Rector, of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, is to be one of the witnesses before this committee in the next few days.

I think one of the problems is that we must recognize that there are distinguished groups of people, and, I guess, so far as anyone is an authority, authorities on both sides of this question, and it is a question that has been boiling for some years, actively, certainly, in the last 10 or more years. You sort of get teams lined up on each side. I don't know that one can decide the question by saying which set of authorities you would like more. Our own opinion, and I think I speak generally for law enforcement, as best we can see the thing cannot be successful.

You heard Dr. Cameron this morning talk of the idea that there is no such thing as a simple maintenance dose. The doses go up. The addicts want more and more. The addict personality is likely to be a highly neurotic personality. Addicts are frequently psychopaths. These are persons who rebel to authority. They are not the persons who would like to stand in line saying "Please, may I have more?" They would rather deal with an illegal market.

Then, one hears about the British system. I understand that the so-called British system also exists in Hong Kong, where the addiction rate is even greater than New York City, and we have more addiction than any part of the country.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1185

We learn of doctors and nurses having drugs readily available to them have a very high addiction rate. So, just on a theoretical basis, we in law enforcement are convinced, and this morning Mr. Adlerman referred to the experience of the 1920's, that it won't work. And that was a practical experience.

But we don't think the problem will be solved by arguing about it for the next 12 years. What we would like to see, and I speak for the district attorney of New York County, and I think generally for law enforcement in New York City, is a real test. We would like to see an effective pilot project. We would like to see the doctors, if you will, or the social scientists, who feel that the outpatient administration of drugs is the answer, come up with a plan of having a control project in which addicts are given drugs and are out in their community, but they are given tests.

There are tests today. We are told about nalline, about urine chromatography, that will reveal if the addict is supplementing his dosages, or taking a greater supply of dosages on the outside.

I think if we can get the results of such tests, we think we know what they will be. We think they will not work. But it may settle the argument. One of the problems that bothers us is that so much in this whole area of drug addiction is spent in arguing, in arguing giving drugs, in cussing at the law enforcement officials claiming that we are living in the stone age because we don't believe in giving out drugs. So, we are hopeful that a pilot project in this area may settle the project.

The CHAIRMAN. Is a pilot project now authorized?

Mr. KUH. It is my understanding, and apparently, it has been conducted in somewhat hush-hush fashion, and you have a witness who will tell you more about it than I, that the State department of mental hygiene is conducting at this point a very, very small pilot project involving about 19 or 20 addicts that are out in the community, but that are reporting daily or thereabouts for dosages.

The CHAIRMAN. The State department?

Mr. KUH. New York State Department of Mental Hygiene. That is a department of the State of New York.

The CHAIRMAN. It is not a Federal project but a State project?

Mr. KUH. That is correct. It is my understanding, and again, I have this fourth hand, that that agency is here, but that before commencing it, they did have discussions with Federal Narcotics Bureau, and the program is proceeding with at least official tolerance.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, it is an experiment.

Mr. KUH. It is, a very small one. But at least, it is a project.

The CHAIRMAN. So far as you know, the Federal authorities are cooperating?

Mr. KUH. That is my understanding. I have it, as I said, fourth hand.

The CHAIRMAN. How long has that been going on?

Mr. KUH. It is my understanding that it started about the first of this year, approximately.

I prefer not to take more time of this committee, therefore, discussing the pros and cons of this, because I think the results of this project, and if there are others, will be more persuasive than anything I can say. I would like to get into the problem of the civil commitment of addicts and what we have done about addicts in this area in New York.

1186 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

We have law enforcement in New York and New York County, my county, unfortunately have more addiction than any other county in the country. We recognize that the traditional methods of law enforcement would not be effective in cutting down on our addiction problem.

The CHAIRMAN. What do you mean by the traditional methods?

Mr. KUH. Arresting someone, holding him for trial, possibly releasing him on bail, or releasing him on his own recognizance pending trial, and having the trial take place a week after he was arrested or a year and a half after arrested.

During this intervening period, he would still be on drugs.

The CHAIRMAN. You are talking about the drug addict and not the arrest and prosecution of the drug pusher.

Mr. KUH. That is correct, Senator. One of the big problems in this area is that so often the pusher, and at least almost invariably the small pusher, is himself an addict, so you can't draw sharp dividing lines and say all pushers should get thus and thus sentence but all addicts treated differently.

The New York Police have said for years, and I think this is an attitude that the Federal Narcotic Bureau shares, that every addict is a pusher, either actually or potentially. To support his own habit, because of the community social nature of addiction, he will share what he has or sell what he has, on occasion.

So, the short line or the sharp line cannot be drawn. We found that traditional methods don't work. I have indicated one reason, that there can be a long delay before trial. In the meantime, the addict may be nurturing his addiction. We do have and certainly have in all the 50 States of the Union, since the case in June 1961, where the situation, where what happens to a defendant may hinge on whether he was seen with the white powder in his hand or whether the police officer fished the white powder out of his pocket.

If it is fished out of his pocket, you may have an illegal search, and, thus, can do nothing in the way of treatment, punishment, or incarceration, where if it is in his hand, the case may not go out, that the police officer has probable cause.

So, this distinction in terms of a social frame of reference makes no sense at all. It does in a legal frame of reference, but not in the terms of helping the addict.

Then, the addict, assuming he is ultimately convicted, you may find a range of sentencing that varies with human personalities. You will find a tough judge who says, "Anybody with anything to do with drugs will get a maximum sentence," and another judge who says, "It is a sickness," and even though the person is a pusher he may get a suspended sentence, released, put on probation or what have you.

So, our methods of law enforcement we have found, have not been effective. We will even have mandatory minimum sentences, but if one is dealing with an addict who is selling to support his own habit, there are great human pressures not to treat him as a seller and to impose the 5-year mandatory minimum sentence upon him, human pressures to give him a lesser plea.

So, recognizing that our own traditional methods have not worked, law enforcement, late in 1960, started making efforts for legislation in

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1187

New York for a civil commitment program, a method whereby a drug addict, instead of being processed in the criminal courts, could be sent to a hospital, and the criminal procedures held in abeyance pending the results of his hospital treatment. That program was finally accepted and enacted, I might say, unanimously by both houses of our legislature in 1962.

Prior to its enactment, it was refined and codified in a series of what I call shirt-sleeve conferences. I certainly mean no reflection on these excellent hearings, but they were working conferences held off the record, just everybody sitting together, editing, making suggested changes, making improvements. We finally came up with a statute that social workers, people in the Federal Narcotics Bureau, people in the State enforcement, in the State mental hygiene department, doctors, the whole gamut of opinion in the narcotic area feeling we had a good, workable statute.

Much of that became effective on signing on March 21, 1962. When Governor Rockefeller signed it he said :

Many narcotics addicts under arrest whose most serious failing is their own tragic addiction will be given an opportunity under the provisions of this measure to become self-respecting and self-relying members of society through State hospital treatment and rehabilitation.

The essence is that when he is arrested for a narcotic crime he, within a period of 15 days, may elect civil commitment, elect to be sent to a hospital. If he made that election and it was approved of by the court and not, in effect, vetoed by mental hygiene, he would then go to a hospital facility where he could be held up to 3 years, to be released under an after-care program under mental hygiene supervision for the balance of that 3-year period.

We did have certain safeguards in the act. I should also add that the act provided that persons who were narcotic addicts but who were arrested for nonnarcotic crimes might similarly be committed to a hospital if the crime seemed to be the outgrowth of their narcotic habit.

We had safeguards in there because we didn't want persons charged with muggings, robberies, murders, if you will, to say, "Well, it is only because I am an addict. Send me to the hospital for a few months." So, there were certain categories of persons who were excluded. In any event, that portion of the 1962 act became effective January 1, 1963. So, we have had more than a year and a half's experience with it to date.

It was an act, I might say, in which I was one of the draftsmen along with a group of other persons. We had great pride in that act. Unfortunately, many of us who had great hopes in that act have been disappointed.

I think although this is a Federal hearing and not a State hearing, I think there is some relevancy to our consideration of the experience under that act. I know that there is some consideration for similar Federal legislation, and I think New York's experience may help give guidance in terms of administration of any Federal act, if there should be such Federal legislation.

We found, first of all, that the sick one, if you will, the addict, in large numbers, wasn't interested in going to the hospital. We found during the first year of operation, less than one in three persons who were eligible for the act electing civil commitment under the act.

1188 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

We have known, before this act passed, when one generalizes and when one talks about human beings, we can never be fooled by the generalization, but we knew that our addicts by and large, were a pretty savvy group of our inhabitants. The best we could figure was that he would weigh the possibilities. If he saw the chance was for a successful motion to suppress evidence and hence, the case to go out, or if he thought the likelihood was only 3 months in prison or 5 months in prison, we thought the chances would be greater than equal that he would say that the best would be to go to a hospital and technically staying under supervision for 3 years.

And he would sooner take the chance on beating the rap or taking the chance on 90 days and having it over with. So, we found one out of three addicts who were eligible in 1963 saying no dice, they elected to take the hospital commitment. Our figures for the first 6 months of 1964 are incomplete, but they indicate the percentage of addicts seeking hospital commitment has dropped. It now appears to be less than one in four.

I should note that I have attached as the last page of my statement the complete figures for 1963, with followup, up until July 15, 1964. Actually, the fact that more than two out of three addicts do not elect civil commitments is not at this point a crucial criticism because if more elected we would have no beds to put them in anyway.

We had hoped literally for thousands of beds. We understand you will hear from Mr. Wood, of California, who will tell you of their experience, where I gather some 2,300 beds are available.

New York State up to July 1 had the grand total of 455 beds available, and we supposedly have 35,000 to 40,000 addicts in the State. I am told now, with an increase, we have about 555 beds, plus a few hundred beds that New York City maintains that have not been used under the act of which I speak. So, our first need, of course, is for more beds. That, naturally, tunes us in to Senator Javits' statement this morning, the need for Federal funds, that will encourage the State to develop more beds, train more workers, have more people to man the institutions.

The second defect of our State civil commitment program is that we much fear that the blend of the medical and the law enforcement is not recognized by the doctors. In effect, when someone seeks civil commitment he is turned over to the doctors. The court is out of the picture until and unless the doctors say, "We can't do anything for this man," and they would remand him to us. Other than that, the court has no role in handling the addict committed to a doctor.

On the other hand, we do feel, or at least we hoped, that our State mental hygiene department would have shown some concern with the security that the addict at large—I should say the threat to the security that the addict at large represents. Yet, we have found that of the 615 addicts committed to the State mental hygiene hospitals from New York County, my county, in 1963, 81 of 615 so far have escaped. That means 13 percent who were committed in lieu of penal treatment, committed to a hospital, in some fashion walked out of the hospital.

We know, and Dr. Cameron mentioned this morning, that an addict is normally a peaceful person, not normally committing crimes to persons, we know that there are exceptions. In New York County in the last 6 weeks we have had two people killed, not by escaped addicts but by drug addicts. We would have hoped that our mental hygiene department recognized the importance of some security factor.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1189

The CHAIRMAN. What would that indicate to you? Within the last 6 weeks two drug addicts have committed murder?

Mr. KUH. In June a lawyer was found in a self-service elevator killed, and an addict was charged with the murder, though he has not gone to trial.

Last July, a police officer was shot on a fire escape seeking to apprehend a man. So, in about 6 weeks' time, we have had two persons killed, with persons arrested for those crimes, not yet tried, who were identified as drug addicts.

The CHAIRMAN. If there is occasion of their guilt—I don't mean to say that they have been adjudged guilty, but for the purposes of making calculations in this area you would have regarded them as crimes committed by drug addicts.

Mr. KUH. They have been indicted, and they would not have been arrested had there not been probable cause to suspect that they were persons who had committed the crimes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that unusual?

Mr. KUH. I can't give you any overall statistics.

The CHAIRMAN. I am referring to crimes against persons, that is, the supposition that addicts do not commit crimes against persons?

Mr. KUH. I can only answer it this way, Senator: I think the picture of the dope fiend who goes around mugging people is probably an inaccurate picture, and yet when we have, as we had in 1963, almost 5,000 drug arrests in New York City, I am sure that many of those persons were persons who, on occasions in addition to mugging, certainly committed other crimes of violence in support of their addiction.

In 1963, some 430 persons charged with nondrug crimes sought civil commitment, indicating at least some criminal activity by admitted addicts.

The CHAIRMAN. They were crimes against persons?

Mr. KUH. Without being able to give you figures, Senator, I am sure that a large portion of them were.

The CHAIRMAN. A large portion were?

Mr. KUH. I am sure that they were, an appreciable portion.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, that may or may not be. The peace of a community is certainly more secure if you don't have drug addicts.

Mr. KUH. There can be no question about that, Senator. We in law enforcement would be much happier if a commitment program such as we have in New York recognized that the persons in charge of the commitment program had an obligation not simply to try to cure the addict, which is their prime obligation, but also an obligation to protect society from the depredations of that addict and from the possibility that that addict might escape. As I say, here a 13 percent record indicates that that obligation is not recognized.

The next area of importance certainly, is the aftercare program. When the New York 1962 act was drafted, we recognized that just as important as hospital commitment was what happened to the addict when he was released from the hospital.

One of the defects of our penal system had been that the addict would get 90 days, and then be on his own, with nobody worrying. We felt important that he be eased back into the community and supervised on his reentry in the community and helped on his reentry to the community.

1190 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

So, we felt that the aftercare program was a vital part of this legislation for civil commitment that was enacted in 1962. We had hoped at the time that the aftercare, which was also under the supervision of the mental hygiene department, would include relatively close supervision of the addict. Again, we understand from the California experience that the caseworker will have about 30 cases that he handles.

He will check with employers, he will be in touch with families, he will be in touch with the addicts. He will be moving in the addict's community. Unfortunately, our own aftercare program, at least in the estimate of many of us, failed completely in that regard. It has two aftercare centers, neither of which are anywhere near the drug addict's community. Unfortunately, our New York City problem of addiction to a great extent is a problem of our racial ghettos, our ethnic ghettos. Neither of the aftercare centers are located in those centers. One is on an island in the East River, which creates certain obstacles of travel to get there, and another is way down on East 17th Street, which is some miles from the area of heavy drug concentration in our city.

So, we are not at all surprised when I see that. I might say not only are the aftercare centers out of the community, but the aftercare centers do not send workers into the community to do followups, to see what the addict is doing.

We are not surprised to see that now some 7 or 8 months after the end of 1963, so far 70 percent, 349 out of 500 addicts who were released to the aftercare program from my county, New York County, 70 percent of them have absconded from the aftercare program, have failed to show, failed to appear for their aftercare sessions.

The CHAIRMAN. Would that indicate a relapse?

Mr. KUH. We don't know, because there is no followup. All we get, Senator, is word from the mental hygiene department that he is our baby again, that the courts should issue a warrant, and if we can find him, to bring him back for processing of the criminal charges against him.

The chances are, I would assume, that when he failed to appear for his aftercare sessions, it probably was because he relapsed. Of that, we have no way of knowing.

The CHAIRMAN. Most of them have, I suppose, beyond question.

Mr. KUH. That would be our assumption.

One of the interest, I might say, in setting up what is called the Metcalf-Volker bill, the New York Civil Commitment Act of 1962, was that prior to then we leaned somewhat heavily on Lexington, a hospital some 700 miles from New York. They had a very high relapse rate, and many people in the field felt the reason for the high relapse rate was because when he got out of Lexington he was on his own, with no followthrough when he came back to New York.

The CHAIRMAN. And there was no one that he could turn to for guidance when he felt a weak moment.

Mr. KUH. Exactly. And there was nothing in the community coordinated to what happened when he was in the hospital. We thought when we gave the New York State Department of Mental Hygiene authority over the aftercare program, we would get a real follow-through program. Instead, as I indicated, so far, we have 70 percent dropouts, quite apart from those who escaped from the hospital.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1191

We contrast this, incidentally, with the program that another agency of State government has conducted, our State parole commission, in which they had a really intensive aftercare program, and which followed the addict back into his community. They found, over a much longer period, something like 30 percent or better than 30 percent rehabilitation.

We have other criticisms of the failure of imaginative followthrough on the part of our State agency charged with this program, detailed in my formal statement. I will not take the time to review them. I think they point out a couple of things, a couple of points that I would like to make.

One, it is important, if one is to engage in a civil commitment program, to have an imaginative, dedicated administration of it that has in mind not only the medical aspects, but the aspects of the community's security.

Secondly, another point I would like to make about it is in terms of getting a dedicated and imaginative agency administering something. This is an intangible. I, here, may seem to be going afield, but it was early this year that we had the reports of the President's Advisory Commission on Narcotic and Drug Abuse. Basically, many of us in the narcotic area agreed with most of its recommendations, but I think there was one recommendation, or really one that was broken into several parts, that we in law enforcement, we in New York law enforcement, would take violent issue with.

That sort of suggested a shifting and a breaking up of the functions of the Federal Narcotic Bureau. We in law enforcement have found that that Bureau has always been a very imaginative and very dedicated Bureau, and I think these are intangible factors that may not exist if you simply make narcotics a small part of some other function.

One of our criticisms of our State mental hygiene department is that it handles over 80,000 beds, 80,000 beds for mental patients. Compare to that 555 or 455 narcotic beds are not even the tail on the dog. They are a flea; they are a nothing. So, we feel it doesn't have the imagination, the dedication, the size of staff, the size of appropriation, that an independent agency charged solely with this function might have.

In this respect, we think the independence and esprit de corps, if you will, of the Federal Narcotics Bureau has been a major plus factor in good law enforcement.

Another recommendation I would like to make to the subcommittee would be serious consideration of the bills introduced by Senators Keating and Javits, and others, that call for two things; one, a Federal civil commitment program, that would be in outline somewhat similar to our New York program; and, secondly, call for grants in aid to the States, so that the States can further their own hospital bed programs and their own aftercare program, encouraged by Federal funds.

Many of us think that were there today such a program, we might, as a result of it, be getting much more constructive activity in terms of our own State commitment program.

One last item that I should like to mention, Senator, that I know has been something close to you, is that we in law enforcement would again urge consideration of wiretapping legislation. We are appreciative to you for the bill that you introduced several years ago and reintroduced last year, S. 1308. Were this law today, we in New York could make infinitely greater headway in dealing with some of the pushers, some of the nonaddict pushers, some of the large commercial pushers, in the drug area.

1192 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

You will remember that some years ago we had arrested a group of about eight of them and had to dismiss the indictment against the seven of the eight because our evidence against them consisted of wiretaps that we felt we could not use in the courtroom, consistent with Federal law.

District Attorney Hogan felt he would not ask the police officer or assistants of his to violate a Federal statute.

Under that case, we would have had to violate a Federal law.

Once again, we would like to join yourself, Commissioner Giordano, and others, in urging senatorial and House action on wiretap legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Kuh, with respect to the wiretapping, I don't think there is any question that it should have been enacted as law before now. There is no doubt that it will be enacted. However, people are apprehensive that the law would be abused—that is, the legal supervision of the authority to wiretap would be abused.

You have been in the law enforcement field for quite a long time and you hold a responsible position. In a jurisdiction where there are all kinds of law violations, where there is hardly a crime in the book that you have not had experience with, I am sure, do you think the likelihood of abuse of this statute, if it were enacted, is high enough really to put the rights of law-abiding citizens in jeopardy?

Mr. KUH. Senator, it is our experience that whenever any legislation is proposed, either statewide, our city council, or nationally, that has to do with police power, or that either confers new police power or that firms up legislatively what may be police power, there are a lot of people that holler and wail that this is going to interfere with civil liberties.

It is equally our experience that these calamity hollerers can rarely point to facts to sustain their argument.

In direct answer to your question, we have had wiretapping under our State constitution and that enabling legislation pursuant to that since 1938. Our State constitution was amended in 1938 and spelled out the right of court order wiretaps.

The use of wiretapping by law enforcement officials, pursuant to court order, which was investigated by a joint legislative committee, headed by an assemblyman from Queens, which, as I recollect, started with a strong wiretap point of view, which was also investigated by the civil rights committee of our State bar association, and headed by Whitney North Seymour, who later became president of the American Bar Association—well, I am sorry that I don't have extracts of their reports before me—and both of them said that in all their studies of the history of wiretapping in New York, they had never—underlining never—had never seen it abused by law enforcement officials.

Certainly, there are private eyes, and others who violate the law and tap wires.

The CHAIRMAN. But they are doing that all the time now.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1193

Mr. KUH. They are. And when we have found them we have convicted them. But that today violates the law. We now have a situation in New York State where our State constitution and our State statutes not simply say this is lawful, but they create the wiretap weapon for law enforcement.

Yet, if law enforcement uses it and chooses to use it in a courtroom, we commit a Federal crime when we do it. It is an incredible situation.

The CHAIRMAN. It is an inconsistency. It certainly should be removed. There is no question about that. But here is the condition that prevails today: The criminal, the scoundrel, so to speak, if he desires to do so, can use an intercepting device and thus violate the privilege, the confidence, the freedom, and privacy of any citizen, and yet escape any punishment whatsoever. Is that correct?

Mr. KUH. They do, unless we can get the goods on them.

The CHAIRMAN. But it is pretty hard to get the goods.

Mr. KUH. It certainly is. And it becomes increasingly so.

The CHAIRMAN. They are able to continue the practice in spite of the law, and in spite of diligence and desire to enforce the law. But society cannot make use of the technique under the supervision of constituted authority: the courts. Society cannot make use of it to catch the criminal. That is what puts us in a very awkward situation.

The criminal can use it and get by with it, but the law-abiding citizen is not permitted to have the benefit of it to catch the criminal.

Mr. KUH. I would like to underscore the points you make, that under the supervision of the courts, the bill you introduce has built-in safeguards, during close court supervision. The fear that police and prosecutors are going to go haywire simply because they are given another record is a fear that (a) is rebutted by the very terms of your bill, and (b) is rebutted by the experience of jurisdictions that have used wiretapping.

The CHAIRMAN. While that is not entirely pertinent to this inquiry, since it has come in I am glad to have your comments that you have been investigated in New York, your administration of the law or your operations under it, twice, I believe you said.

Mr. KUH. By these two major committees; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And in no instance have they found that you have abused it.

Mr. KUH. That is correct.

(At this point Senator Muskie entered the hearing room.)

The CHAIRMAN. So people get the idea that you will turn over to the cop on the beat the right to go in and tap anybody's wire or telephone, and so forth, but that is not the approach we are making. We are asking for wiretap authority to be granted after a presentation has been made to a court of competent jurisdiction. Then the court may order it at a given place under stated conditions.

Mr. KUH. Exactly.

The CHAIRMAN. And, of course, the authority would remain under the jurisdiction of the court and they would order it removed at the least abuse.

Mr. KUH. And under your bill, it could only be used for certain serious crimes, including narcotic crimes.

(At this point Senator McIntyre withdrew from the hearing room.)

1194 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. It is not a license to every law enforcement officer to go out and do what he pleases. It still remains under the immediate jurisdiction and supervision of a court of law.

Mr. KUH. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. I think it is a weapon that is needed. I would be very much opposed if there was strong probability of its abuse. As I see it now, there is the very slightest probability that it can or will be abused. If it ever occurs, it will be such a singular incident that I don't think it will be repeated.

Mr. KUH. Anytime you give humans power, there is potential for abuse. But nonetheless, the course of government has tended to give governmental agencies, other than police, more and more power.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course, the officer who is entrusted with the custody of a prisoner can abuse a prisoner if he wants to. He would be in violation of the law. Yet we don't say, because that does occur occasionally, that we will no longer permit any arrest, we will no longer prosecute anybody, we will no longer apprehend anybody who violates the law. We don't do that.

I think we have reached a point in this country where we are going to have to do something with the tremendous and steadily increasing crime and about the handicap that law enforcement officials are under, and particularly about the way the courts seem to be inclined to give the criminal the breaks. We will have to employ some additional weapons in order to combat this situation. It is getting very, very serious. I don't think wiretapping legislation will cure it. I don't mean that. But I do think that with this instrument at your disposal, law enforcement officials will be able to get some of the higher-ups that are now insulated from being detected, being apprehended.

Mr. KUH. One of the interesting things is that wiretapping can be used and can be used most effectively to prevent not only trade in narcotics but can prevent official abuse. There is pending right now, and I can't comment on it beyond this, a motion before a judge in Queens County to prevent a grand jury in that county that is now engaged in police abuses in the gambling area, police dishonesty in the gambling area, a motion to prevent that grand jury from hearing any evidence on the basis that the evidence might be the fruit of, allegedly, unlawful or unconstitutional wiretapping.

This is being litigated and further comment would be improper. But I might say that experience shows that in connection with official abuse, in connection with dishonesty on the part of government employees, be they police officers or anyone else, wiretapping over the years has been an invaluable tool, a tool for which there is no substitute, absolutely no substitute.

As we pointed out, there has been no evidence that it has been abused. I am getting off the topic that I have here, and I didn't mean to do that.

The CHAIRMAN. But you think it would be a great aid, do you, in this particular area?

Mr. KUH. And our experience proves that, Senator.

I have nothing further. I am most appreciative of the opportunity to be here.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Muskie, have you any questions?

Senator MUSKIE. First of all, Mr. Chairman, I would like to apologize for not being present during Mr. Kuh's testimony. I looked forward to hearing it but I was held up in arriving here. I want to avoid asking questions, simply because they may be repetitious of what has been stated.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1195

There are a couple of questions, however, concerning the application of the Metcalf-Volker law in New York. That applies only to addicts who have been arrested for some crime, as I understand it.

Mr. KUH. Part of it has the arrested narcotic addict commitment portion.

Senator MUSKIE. I am referring to the commitment portion.

Mr. KUH. That is two parts. There is a voluntary commitment feature for the nonarrested addicts who feels he would like to terminate his addiction or reduce his dosages, whatever the motivation, and who would like to go to a hospital for a period of time.

That can be done by either assigning himself to a hospital or going through formal commitment procedures, done in a civil court. That is done on a voluntary basis. That is one portion of the act. I mention the two ways of handling the one portion.

If he simply assigns himself in, he can only be held thereafter 45 days against his will. If he goes through formal court proceeding, he can normally be held up to a year, even though he may change his mind. Quite another part of the same act provides that the arrested addict may, with certain safeguards, convert his arrest into a civil commitment.

Senator MUSKIE. There is no provision which would permit caring for an addict who does not himself wish to be committed for treatment?

Mr. KUH. Yes and no. Of course, the formal civil commitment procedure for the 1-year commitment in our civil courts does permit persons other than the addict to seek the civil commitment. I forget the exact wording. I can check it, but it is his family, his next of kin, or persons close to him can ask that he be civilly committed, much like the commitment for an insane person.

Senator MUSKIE. Against his will?

Mr. KUH. Against his will. I think to the best of my knowledge that has rarely, if ever, been used. But it can be done.

Senator MUSKIE. That is the commitment statute apart from the Metcalf-Volker?

Mr. KUH. That was the law prior to Metcalf-Volker and was re-incorporated with a few slight modifications.

Senator MUSKIE. For how long a period can an addict be held?

Mr. KUH. Up to a year. I think someone else can give you more of the experience under that. It is my understanding that if an addict wants out, they find that basically he will not be responsive to treatment and they will not hold him longer, even though they have a legal right to hold him.

Senator MUSKIE. Is commitment under the Metcalf-Volker law, or other statutes, done after a court hearing, by a court order?

Mr. KUH. Yes. Again, I am sorry I can't give you a blank yes or no on these things. It is, Senator Muskier, except for the 45-day commitment the addict can sign himself in for himself, and then can be held for 45 days, even though he changes his mind.

Senator MUSKIE. Under the law applying to commitment of addicts who would not choose to do so voluntarily, that is, the involuntary commitment, is there provision for jury trial? Or is this also a court hearing?

1196 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. KUH. The civil commitment that a family could use to commit an addict, that would be done, I am quite sure, without a jury. It would be a hearing before a judge.

Senator MUSKIE. That would be the case in most States, I assume.

Mr. KUH. I am not certain of that, Senator, and I don't mean to mislead you. But I think it can be done without a jury. I think it has been rarely used.

Senator MUSKIE. I am sure I would have other questions, Mr. Chairman, but I wasn't privileged to hear his testimony. I don't want to get into subjects and cover them for a second time.

The CHAIRMAN. This witness has made an excellent presentation.

We do appreciate your cooperation very much.

Mr. KUH. Thank you very much.

The CHAIRMAN. Call the next witness.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Dr. Meiselas.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you be sworn, please?

You do solemnly swear that the testimony you shall give before this Senate subcommittee shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

TESTIMONY OF DR. HAROLD MEISELAS

Dr. MEISELAS. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. Please identify yourself for the record, giving us your background of experience, training, and qualifications.

Dr. MEISELAS. I am Dr. Harold Meiselas, director of the New York State Department of Mental Hygiene, Division of Narcotics.

I am licensed to practice medicine in the State of New York since 1954. I am guest lecturer at the New York School of Psychiatry. I am on the staff of the College of Physicians & Surgeons, Columbia University. I have been working in the drug addiction field since 1959, at which time New York State began its program.

The CHAIRMAN. I notice you have a prepared statement.

Dr. MEISELAS. I do, and I would like to submit it to the committee for its consideration.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you wish to have it printed in the record and then highlight it, or would you prefer to read it?

Dr. MEISELAS. I think I would like to read it and augment it as I go along.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well. You may proceed.

Dr. MEISELAS. To begin with, I want to stress that what I will be talking about is a treatment program. I think this is a very important thing to stress since, in developing a program under the auspices of the New York State Department of Mental Hygiene, what we have essentially attempted to do is to provide something in the field of drug addiction which prior to the initiation of our program did not exist.

The program had its origin in 1958, at which time a survey of the scientific literature, a series of conferences with experts in narcotic addiction, and a number of field visits in this country and abroad were initiated. Among the sites visited were the U.S. Public Health Service hospital at Lexington, Ky., the Narcotic Services of the California Department of Mental Hygiene, the Riverside Hospital in New York, several community agencies, and a number of New York City detention facilities. Specialists from the National Institute of Mental Health, the National Research Council, and the U.S. Treasury Department's Bureau of Narcotics were consulted and visits were paid to several European workers, especially those in the Narcotic Unit of the World Health Organization. Finally, a field survey of the British narcotic experience was made in collaboration with the New York State Department of Health.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1197

As a result of this exploratory effort, we were able to confirm that:

1. While the need for services to the narcotic addict was far greater in the New York City metropolitan area than anywhere else in the United States or Europe, clinical effort on the addict's behalf have provided very limited success. This was particularly true of the youthful addict whose capacity to make constructive use of a treatment program was virtually nil.

2. While there was considerable clinical experience and much literature on certain aspects of drug addiction, particularly as provided by the Lexington hospital, scientific data was universally acknowledged to be seriously incomplete. It was clear, therefore, that there was an urgent need for expanded research, especially basic scientific research.

3. Nowhere was there to be found a satisfactory or successful system after which a narcotic service for New York State could be patterned. In many ways it would be necessary to develop a methodology which would be applicable to the New York situation.

4. Adequate numbers of professional personnel trained for work in addiction were not available from either U.S. or European sources, so that a program dealing with narcotic abuse would require that all the levels of personnel be secured and trained locally.

5. While it was appropriate to develop a narcotic treatment and research service under mental hygiene auspices, the creation of such a service would require radical modification of existing technical procedures, standards of financing, and staffing patterns, all of which would have to evolve within the framework of an actual work experience.

With these observations in mind, and with the active support of the administration and the legislature, the following steps were then taken to create a New York State program in narcotic addiction:

1. In the spring of 1959 organization of a 55-bed research unit in narcotic addiction was begun at the Manhattan State Hospital with the appointment of a supervising psychiatrist and several nurses who were sent to the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital at Lexington, Ky., to acquire familiarity with the operating techniques of this facility. In September of 1959 the unit began to receive voluntary admissions.

2. This group later served as the training center for personnel to man the 80-bed service subsequently opened at Central Islip State Hospital in 1961 and the 20-bed ward at Utica State Hospital opened in 1962. A narcotic after care service was also started with the Manhattan State Hospital as the base of operations.

3. With Federal grant support, a $1,700,000 rehabilitation contract was let in October of 1961 to convert the 60,000-square-foot Mabon Building of the Manhattan State Hospital into a modern, basic science institute for neurochemistry and narcotics with a 55-bed clinical research wing.

1198 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

4. Anticipating the availability of these facilities, temporary laboratories were established at Manhattan State Hospital in 1961 and research activities which had been initiated elsewhere were transferred to this facility.

5. Meanwhile, preliminary work on the Metcalf-Volker bill made it clear that the State program was to be expanded to include treatment services for the adolescent. Accordingly, in 1961 negotiations were undertaken with representatives of New York City to secure an extension of an expiring lease to a part of the Manhattan State Hospital which contained buildings suitable for relatively quick conversion to an excellent adolescent narcotic facility. Final approval by the New York City Board of Estimates was secured in December of 1962, but by then the passage of the Metcalf-Volker Act in the spring of that year had already moved the department in the direction of implementing its provisions.

ORGANIZATIONAL ACTIVITIES

1. Pursuant to the provisions of the law, a division of narcotics was created in the department and a director appointed June 7, 1962.

2. Simultaneously, a study was initiated within the Manhattan House of Detention so that some impression could be gained to the numbers and types of cases a source such as this would be likely to yield under the provisions of the Arrested Narcotic Commitment Act, a section of the Metcalf-Volker law. This allowed for a random sampling of some 400 individuals who were interviewed over a 5-month period following their arraignment in magistrates courts and classification by the detention facility as narcotic addicts. The techniques utilized by this institution in the processing and management of addict defendants was also reviewed and an opportunity to familiarize hospital personnel with these methods was provided.

As a result, the development of administrative procedures to be followed by local correction departments under the provisions of the new law was facilitated and an opportunity to train personnel in the screening of arrested drug addicts was made possible.

3. In anticipation of final approval by the New York City Board of Estimates, plans were pursued to convert the Keener Building at the Manhattan State Hospital to an adolescent narcotic facility. Contracts were let and construction work initiated late in 1962.

4. On September 4, 1962, Governor Rockefeller named nine members to the newly created advisory council on drug addiction. This group has met regularly since November 9, 1962.

5. In another move to anticipate the expansion of services under the law, a cadre of personnel was sent for training to Manhattan State Hospital from Pilgrim, Middletown, and Buffalo State Hospitals. Wards were readied in these institutions, several hundred mental patients were evacuated to other locations, the necessary structural changes were made, and a considerable amount of new equipment was installed to provide the intensive treatment and rehabilitation program required by the narcotic patient as well as the necessary security for a narcotic-free environment.

6. Meanwhile, there remained the task of creating an administrative mechanism for an orderly movement of cases from detention facilities to the narcotic units. Conferences were held with judges and district attorneys, procedures agreed upon, certification forms created, and regulations developed during the closing months of 1962.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1199

7. During the early months of 1963, a narcotic aftercare division was created in the aftercare clinic at 39 East 17th Street, New York City, by transferring part of the work of this clinic to another location.

8. In July of 1964 the inpatient facilities of the department were expanded by adding 100 beds to the 455 which had been previously established.

CURRENT SITUATION AND OPERATING STATUS

On January 1, 1963, the Metcalf-Volker Act became fully operative. The current situation and the record of operations are summarized in the tables appended to this report. It will be noted that the department presently operates 555 inpatient beds at 6 different locations, 510 of which are primarily for the use of narcotic addict patients originating in the downstate area—Table 1. Services are offered to addicted individuals of both sexes and all ages, with females being handled exclusively at the Middletown State Hospital and adolescent males at the Manhattan State Hospital. Patients are received on a voluntary committed basis with applications from individuals who are in the communities of New York City being processed at the Manhattan State Hospital and from those outside of the immediate New York City metropolitan area at those department institutions closest to their homes. In addition, the department performs regular screening interviews of arrested addicts in the detention facilities of Erie, Nassau, Westchester, Bronx, Queens, Kings, and Manhattan Counties where the bulk of such cases originate. Special arrangements are made to screen arrested persons who apply from other areas of the State. Most patients placed on aftercare are serviced at the Narcotic Aftercare Clinic on 17th Street in New York City, but each of the institutions with inpatient facilities can and do serve patients whose homes are close to the hospital where they have been treated and another aftercare clinic will open in the Bronx this year.

From January 1, 1963, through June 30, 1964, over 2,800 patients were admitted to the department's facilities—table 2—and roughly half of the eligible prisoners in detention who made application under section 208 of the Arrested Drug Addict Commitment Act were accepted—table 3. I would add parenthetically that this is a pretty good record for a program in its infancy. In accepting applicants, consideration was given to the individual's level of motivation, ability to live in a hospital setting, and capacity to utilize psychiatric and social work services. Thus, many applicants who were not accepted were rejected because they failed to meet the most basic of treatment criteria. This is not to say that those addicts who were admitted to the program brought with them a good prognosis. Quite the contrary, and I think this is quite consistent with the testimony of the two previous witnesses, in virtually all cases our patients present a complex clinical entity which tends to resist therapeutic intervention.

In addition to this program of service, research activities continue at the department's narcotic research unit on Ward's Island. I would invite those who have not seen our research facilities to do so. Also, during these 18 months, the department provided speakers to several community meetings on narcotics and members of the department participated in five major narcotic conferences. Representative of several community agencies visited with the division director to explore matters of mutual interest and the division provided students and other interested persons with opportunities to familiarize themselves with the operation of a narcotic treatment center. Further, members of the division continued to give a course dealing with narcotic abuse to resident psychiatrists attending the New York School of Psychiatry and gave lectures to the students of several schools of nursing.

1200 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Finally, an ongoing program of in-service training for staff members attached to the program was maintained, as was an intensive recruitment effort in the face of a very difficult personnel situation.

In summarizing and making some comments, I hope to pick up some points that Mr. Kuh brought in.

1. The New York State Department of Mental Hygiene has been evolving a program addressed to the treatment of addicted individuals since 1959, which was initiated at a time when services for the addict did not exist. Confronted with a requirement to train virtually all levels of personnel and faced with severe manpower shortages in the field of mental health, the program nevertheless has moved forward in stepwise fashion and can be expected to continue to do so. Recognizing the needs of the addict for specialized services, separate facilities at six State hospitals have been established and recently expanded. Presently the focus is upon the strengthening of aftercare and with this end in mind, an additional aftercare clinic will open shortly.

Contrary to Mr. Kuh's implied statements in his written document, the budget of the division of narcotics has been steadily increased, and our initial budget of $75,000 in 1959, when we started, has gone to a budget of $2,700,000 in 1964, an increase of $500,000 over our budget in 1963.

2. Within the framework of current knowledge, narcotic addiction must be viewed as a chronic relapsing affair and treatment results should be evaluated with this in mind. Thus, upward to 90 percent of addict patients can be expected to relapse on return to the community, and unfortunately all too frequently cease to avail themselves of those who would offer help.

I would say this has been virtually everyone's experience including the New York State Division of Parole.

The CHAIRMAN. If there have been that many relapses, what have you profited? Only 10 percent have been benefited by the treatment and the aftercare?

Dr. MEISELAS. I think this is a very pertinent question. After all is said and done, if one sees this particular question in perspective, what we are offering to the addict today by suggesting that he be treated is the humane willingness to address ourselves to an illness which heretofore has essentially been handled largely through law enforcement. We do this with other illnesses and I think that it is appropriate that we do it with narcotic addiction as well.

We don't, for example, close our cancer hospitals because the overwhelming majority of cancer patients die. We continue to address ourselves to improve methods and techniques, and live in the hope that at some point in time our results will be better.

I make a point a little later on—

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1201

The CHAIRMAN. There is nothing that an individual can do, necessarily, to prevent cancer. There is a little difference where people go out, perhaps because of a weakness, or deliberately, and become addicted—I say deliberately and to some degree it is deliberate to the extent they have judgment and reason. If we can't cure and stop over 10 percent of them should we continue this? There should be some prospect that we are making progress toward improving that situation. That might give some further justification.

Dr. MEISELAS. You stopped me a sentence before where I was about to make that point.

The CHAIRMAN. I had no doubt you were. I was a little surprised to find that 90 percent of them relapse, and that it is a continuing thing. I was surprised at a percentage that large.

Dr. MEISELAS. As I say, this has been everyone's experience, including the New York State Division of Parole. The figure Mr. Kuh referred to was an early figure in their study, and the most recent followup indicates that the abstainers which they originally had was not the number of abstainers that they ended up with after following up these cases further.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you this: Do you effectuate any permanent cures, do you think?

Dr. MEISELAS. This brings us into the question of what narcotic addiction is. As Dr. Cameron pointed out this morning, most cases of drug addiction deal with individuals who present a basic personality disorder. A number of times the word "neurosis" was used, but we infrequently see neuroses as a clinical entity. We see largely individuals with character defects who are impulsive, who operate within the framework of feelings of inadequacy, whose ability to postpone gratification is limited, who tend to be preoccupied with their bodies almost to the point of hypochondriasis in some instances, who operate with a low level of self-esteem, whose personal identification is confused, whose ability to sustain themselves in the complex society in which we live is quite limited.

It is within this framework that virtually all patients utilize narcotics as a means of reversing the feelings of personal discomfort, as a way of securing satisfaction in living.

The CHAIRMAN. I still don't have a very direct answer to my question about whether you can effect any permanent cures. Maybe I couldn't follow you too well. Do we effect any cures, so far as you know, that you can really rely upon as being permanent?

Dr. MEISELAS. I think that we see, as we work with patients over periods of time, changes which are favorable, that we see a certain number of people who abstain for longer periods of time as they get older, and people who abstain for longer periods of time as they react to treatment; that we see certain individuals as they are treated, sometimes repeatedly, who grow in terms of their personal assets and who ultimately, in later periods of time, begin to assume a greater life for themselves.

The CHAIRMAN. What would you say is the average time before relapse after release? Could you comment upon those who relapse quickly and those who relapse not so quickly?

Dr. MEISELAS. Some addicts relapse almost as soon as they hit the streets, return to the community. Other addicts sustain themselves over a period of time, sometimes for extended periods of time. At the present time, I don't think we have a clear idea as to what relapse is all about. This is one of the issues that I think we have to pursue through research.

1202 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The CHAIRMAN. Proceed with your statement. We may have to go and vote in a minute. I hoped we could conclude, but still, these questions arise in my mind. I am hoping you can give us helpful answers.

Senator MUSKIE. I have one question, Mr. Chairman, if I may pursue it.

Do people who relapse often, after further treatment, achieve a cure to the degree that you can call them cured? In other words, after one or two relapses, would they finally put these people on the right road?

Dr. MEISELAS. My impression is that a significant number of addicts, after relapsing several times in their lifespan, ultimately stop using drugs.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, you may proceed.

Dr. MEISELAS. The aftercare effort we are making shows some promise of reversing this trend and our plans to intensify this effort may help us further. However, it is incorrect today to simply look to treatment of the narcotic addict as a means of resolving the drug addiction problem. Rather, it should be clear that so long as socioeconomic deprivation in the city of New York and elsewhere persists; so long as people grow up under circumstances which are not conducive to the development of sound personality structure which permit them to live at peace with themselves and the world around them; so long as drugs are available and can be secured with relative ease—drug addiction as a human phenomenon will persist. These issues require attention and should not be shunted aside as too inconvenient to face.

Mr. Kuh has indicated that his county has the largest incidence of narcotic addiction in the State, and I think it is important to point out that his county also has large slum areas, large areas of socioeconomic depression, large areas that require attention, where the people can possibly begin to grow and develop so that they can meet the expectations with which our society confronts them; namely, so that they can live free of drugs.

The CHAIRMAN. Won't you agree with this statement: that we need to concentrate heavily upon eliminating the source, no matter what addicts' environment or conditions are? If they cannot get the drugs, they cannot become addicts.

I can appreciate that those people in that environment perhaps becoming more susceptible and are more susceptible, but our problem is to stop the source.

Dr. MEISELAS. We agree you do not have drug addiction without drugs, and we would encourage those who are responsible for law enforcement to pursue the task of eliminating the racketeers and the individuals who essentially stand behind the drug traffic. The fact remains, however, that in New York City's Harlem drugs are readily available, and when we have susceptibles growing up under conditions whereby they turn to drugs as a way of life, we have a problem which is self-perpetuating.

If law enforcement can remove the drugs from the streets of New York City, we would be most happy to see this accomplished. But I think in some ways if we face up to some of these social issues that confront us in New York City, we have a chance, perhaps, of eliminating some of the susceptibles so that perhaps fewer people will turn to drugs even though they are available.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1203

The CHAIRMAN. I think that is undoubtedly true, but you are never going to make all people ambitious by law, environment, or anything else. You will never make them all self-respecting and so forth. You will never eliminate the source completely. But we have, I think, with our efforts, gone a long way toward drying up the source. We need to concentrate on that.

The social problems exist in addition to the drug problem. The slum environments and those things are continuing problems that we have to work on. But in this particular matter, I think we need to concentrate continuously on drying up the source, stopping the drugs from getting in here, and trying to reach the highups, the persons who are guilty of this exploitation of human suffering.

Dr. MEISELAS. We agree, Senator McClellan.

The CHAIRMAN. I am not condemning what you are doing. As long as we have addiction we need to do something about it from the medical standpoint, to provide as much relief to that suffering and affliction as we can.

Dr. MEISELAS. But on the other hand, I think you are making a very important point and one with which we agree; namely, that law enforcement efforts must be vigorous and must be supported in terms of driving out those who supply our cities with drugs.

The CHAIRMAN. I find it difficult to have much sympathy for a man who wasn't an addict himself who was apprehended and convicted of actually engaging in this traffic. There are addicts who sell drugs or push them to satisfy their own craving for them. But a fellow who is just in the business to exploit human beings and profiteer from them—I would like to give him a life sentence. I think he has pretty much forfeited his right to be in a free society. I think he should be restrained so that he couldn't do such things.

Would you proceed?

Dr. MEISELAS. Three. The Metcalf-Volker law in its entirety is a broad statute based upon the suggestions of many individuals and groups, both public and private, including those of the State department of mental hygiene, which in establishing a basis upon which a mental hygiene program can develop, in no way relieves the Federal Government and local communities of their responsibilities in providing services to the drug addict.

I feel this is important to stress, because Mr. Kuh feels that in passing this law the department placed the handling of drug addiction in the hands of the department of mental hygiene and that there is where the matter should rest. I think it is important to point out that we certainly need Federal help and have to look to local communities to do their part of the job—

The CHAIRMAN. I am sorry, but that is a signal for a rollcall vote and we will have to leave.

Will it be satisfactory with you if we place the rest of your prepared statement in the record?

Dr. MEISELAS. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. We will do that so that you don't have to come back tomorrow. Do you wish to make a brief statement?

1204 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. MEISELAS. In view of the time, I will not, but perhaps we can communicate with you and present a few additional thoughts.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you submit any supplemental thoughts that you have? They will appear here along with your other testimony. (The balance of Dr. Meiselas' statement follows:)

To date, its basic concepts appear to be sound and constructive. However, it is necessary to stress that among the basic concepts contained in the statute is the realization that all users of narcotics are not suitable for inclusion in a psychiatric treatment program. Further, to insure that the civil commitment procedures will not be abused, defendants who are serious criminal offenders are excluded and a claim of addiction must be substantiated by medical examination. Thus, it is not possible to project the ideal size of a treatment program for addicts simply by estimating the number of drug users in the community or the number who claim to be addicts following arrest. Rather, the ultimate size of a program is best arrived at through an experience which demonstrates the number of eligible addicted individuals who are suitable for inclusion and will avail themselves of it. Further, care should be exercised not to confuse plans which would incarcerate the drug user for extended periods of time without the benefit of due process with a program of treatment. The civil commitment law which encourages a defendant to seek psychiatric assistance by holding the charge against him in abeyance if he does so constitutes a useful and humane approach. But a law which would take from an individual who is not psychotic the right to elect as to whether he will be treated, a law which fails to provide for evaluation by the treatment agency as to whether the individual could benefit from treatment, a law which denies the individual the right to change his mind or would charge the treatment agency with the responsibility to hold him at all costs for a period of years should be seen for what it is.

Whether we call the building where he is to be held a hospital or the camp to which he is sent a rehabilitation center, the simple fact is that under those circumstances, the individual has been jailed without the same considerations operating which other citizens enjoy. With treatment methods producing the limited results they do, such a state of affairs becomes all the more repugnant.

4. Finally, may I point out that perhaps the most crucial task in the drug addiction field which lies ahead for medicine and psychiatry is the search for knowledge which, when applied, will improve treatment results. It is with this in mind that our research facilities on Ward's Island were established and much of our hope for the future rests with those who are there at work.

(Tables 1, 2, and 3 accompanying Dr. Meiselas' statement follow:)

TABLE I.—Expansion of services

	Total before Jan. 1, 1963	New beds added Jan. 1, 1963	New beds added July 1964	Total beds avail- able	New ado'es- cent beds Jan. 1, 1963	Adult beds added Jan. 1, 1963	Adult beds added July 1964	Total adult beds July 1964
Central Islip State Hospital.....	80	0	10	90	0	0	10	90
Manhattan State Hospital.....	55	135	10	200	¹ 135	0	10	65
Middletown State Hospital.....	0	35	20	55	² 15	² 20	20	40
Pilgrim State Hospital.....	0	105	60	165	0	105	60	165
Total available to downstate metropolitan area.....	135	275	100	510	150	125	100	360
Utica State Hospital.....	20	0	0	20	0	0	0	20
Buffalo State Hospital.....	0	25	0	25	0	25	0	25
Statewide total.....	155	300	100	555	150	150	100	405

¹ Male.

² Female.

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1205

TABLE II.—Admissions to narcotic units, Jan. 1, 1963, to June 30, 1964

Total.....	2,846
Legal status:
Sec. 208, arrested addict.....	1,669
Sec. 206, probation condition and regular certification.....	63
Voluntary.....	1,114
Age (years):
15 to 17.....	137
18 to 20.....	656
21 to 25.....	829
26 to 30.....	583
31 to 35.....	389
36 to 40.....	144
40 and up.....	108
Source of cases:
Manhattan.....	1,067
Brooklyn.....	708
Bronx.....	425
Queens.....	289
Richmond.....	12
Outside New York City.....	345

TABLE III.—Admissions under arrested narcotic addict provisions

Applications from eligible prisoners in detentions.....	3,491
Accepted.....	1,837
Not accepted.....	1,654
Admitted ¹	1,669
Placed on convalescent care.....	1,252
Returned to court from convalescent care.....	586
Returned to hospital from convalescent care.....	237
Discharged.....	13
On convalescent care June 30, 1964.....	416

¹ Difference between those accepted and those rejected equal the sum of those cases in process and those where in spite of an acceptance by the department, civil commitment did not ensue.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You are at the present time running a pilot project on outpatient ambulatory maintenance. We would like to get the details. If you cannot testify tomorrow, perhaps we can do it in the form of interrogatories, preparing certain questions for you to give us the answers to, and we will insert those into the record.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be all right, any supplemental statement.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I can submit the questions to him.

The CHAIRMAN. You wouldn't mind that, would you?

Dr. MEISELAS. We made this point to Mr. Adlerman previously. This particular study is in a very preliminary stage, and I think that most of the questions that Mr. Adlerman will put to us we really don't have concrete answers to at this particular point.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, you two work that out.

I am very sorry for this interruption which we cannot avoid. I will recess until 10:30 in the morning.

(Members of the subcommittee present at time of recess: Senators McClellan and Muskie.)

(Whereupon, at 3:48 p.m., the subcommittee recessed, to reconvene at 10:30 a.m., Wednesday, August 5, 1964.)

INTERROGATORY OF DR. HAROLD MEISELAS

A staff interrogation of Dr. Harold Meiselas, director, Division of Narcotics, New York State Mental Hygiene Department, was held at 4 p.m., in room 101, Old Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C.

1206 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Staff members present: Jerome S. Adlerman, general counsel; and LaVern J. Duffy, assistant counsel.

Also present: Charles J. Reynolds, a shorthand reporter from Alderson Reporting Co.

Mr. ADLERMAN. These are interrogatories taken this 4th day of August 1964, at 4 p.m., of Dr. Harold Meiselas, director, Division of Narcotics, New York State Mental Hygiene Department, pursuant to agreement at the hearings held this same date, and in continuation of the matters dealt with at the hearing.

Dr. Meiselas, there were certain things unfinished at the time we closed the hearing pertaining to, one, the civil commitment procedure in the State of New York and its implementation by the department of mental hygiene; two, questions relating to a research project being conducted under your direction for the maintenance treatment of ambulatory patients.

At which hospital is that?

Dr. MEISELAS. Manhattan State.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The Civil Commitment Act in the State of New York, I believe, is under the jurisdiction of the department of mental health, New York State Department of Mental Health?

Dr. MEISELAS. Mental hygiene, that is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What is the average length of time that a patient committed under the Civil Commitment Act as a result of a criminal proceeding is treated and maintained in the hospital?

Dr. MEISELAS. Three months.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And what type of aftercare treatment does he receive when he leaves the hospital?

Dr. MEISELAS. An extension of the same services that we initiated in the hospital; namely, an attempt to address ourselves to the psychological issues which makes him the individual he is, and an attempt to address ourselves to the social issues which confront him, and which perhaps have contributed to his addiction, to address ourselves to some of the vocational issues and problems which our patients have. In short, an attempt to quite simply move with the individual in the direction of becoming a productive citizen.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is the addict who is under aftercare treatment under any parole? Can he be sent back to the hospital or to the criminal jurisdiction of the State if he does not comply with the aftercare requirements set up by the doctor who is treating him?

Dr. MEISELAS. The law so provides.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is it so provided?

Dr. MEISELAS. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Who supervises the addict in the aftercare treatment?

Dr. MEISELAS. The staff consists of psychiatric social workers and psychiatrists.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are any steps taken to determine whether or not he is taking any drugs once he leaves the hospital?

Dr. MEISELAS. We see our patients regularly and we don't feel, any more than the New York State commissioner of parole feels, that there is a problem in recognizing when an addict returns to drug usage. We plan to initiate thin layer chromatography, not because we need a test to determine whether he is back on drugs, but rather, because we feel this creates a situation where the therapy proceeds more smoothly.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1207

To explain that a little bit, at the present time, we are confronted with a situation whereby the person providing treatment must confront the addict with the question of drug usage. The utilization of a chemical test makes this an administrative procedure apart from the therapy, itself. All in all, the primary benefit, we feel, is in this direction.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What is the principal objective, then, of having an addict under aftercare treatment if it isn't to make sure that you are effecting a cure and that he has not relapsed or reverted to the use of drugs?

Dr. MEISELAS. I haven't said that we are not interested in whether or not he has relapsed. We are. The point that I make, rather, was that this is not a big problem in determining whether or not he has relapsed.

Mr. ADLERMAN. How is it determined?

Dr. MEISELAS. By clinical judgment. How he looks, what his behavior in the community is like, the reports we receive from the family, arm examinations. All of this provides a pretty good indication as to whether or not he is using drugs.

Mr. ADLERMAN. How often does the psychiatrist or the social worker see each addict?

Dr. MEISELAS. We see most of our patients on a weekly basis. Occasionally we see some patients more frequently, and those patients who are doing well and require less intensive care are seen less frequently.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you think that this has proven to be an effective method in trying to cure or help the addict stay away from drugs?

Dr. MEISELAS. I think we are moving in the right direction. What I mean very simply by that is this: Heretofore we have had a situation whereby all addicts would be arrested at some point in time, go off to a correctional facility, return to the community largely under auspices which were not treatment oriented. Currently we are addressing ourselves to a group of addicts who show some promise of being worked with in therapy contacts.

In working with this particular group, we see some indications that if one is dedicated and one works hard, that there is the possibility of holding individuals at a level of equilibrium that is better than would be the case otherwise.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I asked the last question because I understand there had been a study made, and I wonder if you are familiar with it, by the New York State Parole Division which shows that they conducted an after-care program which was perhaps more in the nature of a Department of Correction type of care operation rather than the medical or mental hygiene type of approach, and the patients showed a lower incidence of relapse.

I believe they showed 30 percent maintained themselves free of drugs and 70 percent reverted, while I think you testified that you have a relapse record of about 90 percent.

Dr. MEISELAS. I think there was some confusion in that testimony. I am sorry that the interruption came at a point in time where it wasn't possible to explain that. The point that I made was, very simply, that drug addicts can be expected to relapse up to 90 percent and that that is everybody's experience.

1208 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

What we are talking about is the basic nature of the problem, what the inclination is. It would be similar if I said that 100 percent of the individuals who get sore throats will, at some time or other in the future, get a sore throat again.

The aftercare efforts that we are making show some promise of reversing this trend. That was the sentence that I was cut off at before I was able to read it.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think you left the impression that in your program there was a 90-percent relapse, and if that was not so, I think it should be corrected.

Dr. MEISELAS. I am very anxious to correct that impression. I think if the statement I made is read carefully, the next sentence indicated that our initial experience shows some promise of reversing this trend and has led us to feel that an intensification of this effort might help us further.

The point is simply this, that while there is an inclination for a 90 percent relapse rate, efforts on behalf of the addict do help this. The New York State parole had the following experience. In dealing with individuals who are largely felons, and in dealing with a particular age group, and in dealing with a highly selected group of drug addicts, who in many instances had a significant amount of time to do back in the penitentiary if they didn't make it in the community, they approached the drug addict in a manner whereby they made use of principals which are largely psychiatric in nature, and they indicated that through such an approach a percentage can be kept drug free.

Interestingly enough, their last report which follows this group beyond the period when they were on parole, shows a relapse rate which brings their results very close to the 10 percent admission rate that most facilities experience.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You are talking now about the division of parole?

Dr. MEISELAS. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So when they lose custody and the addicts continue beyond the custody of the parole commission and are followed up, an additional 20 percent relapse is shown so that only 10 percent wind up without any drug addiction?

Dr. MEISELAS. This perhaps is implied, but it hasn't been proven. What I mean by that is that perhaps the relapse rate would continue even if they were under supervision. The point is, again, that if one thinks in treatment terms we deal with a chronic relapsing illness in drug addiction, and I think we have to face up to this—I don't think we can just throw our hands up because we have a chronic relapsing situation—I think in medicine we are confronted over and over again with medical problems which do not yield simply to the techniques which are currently available.

The only way we have ever developed improved techniques is by continuing to work with those patients who, while they don't respond initially to the techniques that were available, ultimately responded to those techniques that were developed.

Mr. ADLERMAN. If you remember earlier in the testimony, Senator McIntyre, I believe, asked Dr. Cameron about his understanding that once a person was hooked on heroin, it was almost impossible for him to be cured. I think Dr. Cameron did not agree with that, but said that he found that there are many cases where you have been able to effect a cure.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1209

Dr. MEISELAS. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you in agreement with Dr. Cameron in that statement?

Dr. MEISELAS. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would you go beyond the 10 percent figure?

Dr. MEISELAS. Yes. Here, again, when we talk about this 90 percent relapse rate, we are talking about a given group of addicts under a given course of treatment. Dr. Cameron was talking about following addicts over an extended period of time.

We have a fairly stable number of addicts in the United States today. The only way we can explain this is, if new addicts are constantly being formed, and they are, is by recognizing that a certain number of people will constantly stop using drugs. So I think it is appropriate for us to recognize, and we do, that there is a maturing out factor.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you feel that the patients you get in the hospital under civil commitment are hard-core patients? Are they as a group, a stronger group than the average?

Dr. MEISELAS. I think we are seeing the drug addicts that represent the community problem. I am certainly aware of the fact that there are middle-class drug addicts who present a different kind of problem. But I don't think this is the addict that society is concerned with. I think we are seeing the same drug addict that everybody else sees within the framework of drug addiction as a problem for this country and for our State.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you familiar with the results in California? I presume you keep yourself familiar with other areas.

Dr. MEISELAS. I would say that we have been familiar with the development of the California program. Mr. Woods has just given me a more recent report which I do not have.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Have you read the report he is submitting now?

Dr. MEISELAS. No.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would be glad to let you have a copy.

Dr. MEISELAS. He already gave me one.

Mr. ADLERMAN. He indicates in his report, the one that he will submit to the Senate tomorrow, a much higher rate of success in their followup program than the 90-percent figure. How do you account for that?

Dr. MEISELAS. Well, here again, I would emphasize that we are not talking about a 90-percent figure as our experience. I don't even think we have had an experience that we can begin to talk about statistically.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you give us a figure of what you feel is your accomplishment in your program?

Dr. MEISELAS. I would say that I think our program is at such an early stage that for us to talk about results would be very premature. This is not what I was doing today.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The California project is not much older than yours. I think they came up about the same time.

Dr. MEISELAS. What is the year of the California project?

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think it was January 1963.

Dr. MEISELAS. Then I would make the same reference to their results.

1210 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. DUFFY. The pilot program has been in existence since 1959 in California.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I am talking about the Corona, Calif., program.

Mr. DUFFY. That started initially in 1959. Then the California Act was passed in 1961. It has been in existence since that time.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Then they have a little longer experience.

Mr. DUFFY. How long has your program been in existence?

Dr. MEISELAS. The civil commitment is since January 1963. The aftercare patients didn't even begin to appear on the scene until about April or May of that year.

Mr. DUFFY. In light of Mr. Kuh's criticism of the so-called escapees, and I don't know what he meant by that, it seems to indicate that these were relapses.

Dr. MEISELAS. No, Mr. Kuh was talking about individuals who left the hospital without permission. First of all, I think you have to analyze the group of people who leave without permission to understand what this means in terms of a total approach.

What Mr. Kuh did not do, and what I did not have the opportunity to point out, was he didn't analyze the number. The number is largely adolescent addicts, and the number of adolescent addicts we have taken into the program has been large. The adolescent addict is the most unstable drug addict and you have to pitch your program a little differently toward the adolescent addict than the adult.

We had this experience, and we are altering some of our techniques and approaches with this group. We have already seen some change in terms of what we are experiencing. So here, again, this is jumping the gun well before one really has an opportunity to look at something in the way where you would know what you are talking about. Just take a raw number without analyzing it. It really has very little meaning in terms of moving along.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It is generally agreed, then, that the adolescent addict is a much more difficult problem to handle as far as effecting any cure or success in getting him off the drug?

Dr. MEISELAS. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It is only after he is in the middle twenties or so that you have a measure of success?

Dr. MEISELAS. When you begin to get a man in his late twenties or early thirties, you begin to get a man you can work with much better.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And that is not the case with the adolescents.

Dr. MEISELAS. We, in our first year and a half operation out of a total of 2,846 patients admitted, had 137 between the ages of 15 and 17 and 656 between the ages of 18 and 20. So you can get some idea as to the percentage of adolescents that were in the program.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The California Civil Commitment Act is operated by the department of correction?

Dr. MEISELAS. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They probably take more of a penal—well, they do tend toward a penal attitude toward these things, keeping addicts in strict confinement and so forth. Is that done in the New York State program, too?

Dr. MEISELAS. If you look at our statute, what we have is a situation whereby there is an opportunity to select out a group of people who can be treated in a hospital rather than a correctional facility. As

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1211

Mr. Kuh pointed out, the law was not simply developed by district attorneys and correction people. It was developed by other interested parties.

To put it quite simply, one goal for the statute is to create a treatment program. This does not eliminate the possibility of significant numbers of drug addicts being handled under correctional auspices. Significant numbers of drug addicts are handled in that manner. The point is that since there would be an opportunity for those people who can be handled under a different set of circumstances, and we feel there should be, we are developing a program for this group of people.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It will be interesting to watch, if we have enough time to do it, the difference between the results perhaps of a purely medical approach and a quasi-medical-correctional approach—that is, a medical approach with some quasi-correctional features in it.

Dr. MEISELAS. It will be interesting to watch this from many points of view, not only in terms of the individual results with addicts who enter one program or the other, but also in terms of the total impact of such program upon the community in which it operates. This is another point that I would stress.

In operating a treatment program, you have an opportunity to develop people who can ultimately work on the community level. In operating a correctional program, the possibilities of doing this are not the same. The response you get from community leaders if you are operating under a treatment philosophy is a different one than if you are operating under a correctional philosophy. This too, is something we have to keep in mind.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The second question we would like to cover is the progress being made on the research program for the maintenance of ambulatory patients.

How long is it since this project was undertaken? When was it first undertaken?

Dr. MEISELAS. I would have a little difficulty pinning down the precise date, but it is something I think we had in the back of our minds easily for a couple of years.

Mr. ADLERMAN. But when was it first started? I would like to get the details.

Mr. DUFFY. When were the funds first appropriated?

Dr. MEISELAS. This does not require a special appropriation of funds because there are funds that have already been set up for a research operation which allows for a variety of projects under clinical auspices. So it doesn't require any special funds to run this particular project. This does not give us a point of time.

Mr. DUFFY. You had it in mind, but you didn't do it for 2 years; is that it?

Dr. MEISELAS. No, I wouldn't put it that way. What we have had is a situation whereby we had to give consideration to certain kinds of research goals, initially. Again, in starting a research program, one of the things that we had to give consideration to initially was how to handle the item, as simply as that.

If we sit here in 1964 we can talk casually about many variables that we have already eliminated. But getting started in 1959 that was certainly not the case.

Mr. ADLERMAN. When did you undertake to treat the first patients for this project?

1212 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. MEISELAS. Let me say this. I don't think as we sit here today that this project has really begun in terms of a selected group of people who will represent the subjects for the projects.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What I am trying to get at is when was the first one committed? How long ago was that?

Dr. MEISELAS. This is a hard thing to pin down.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was it a year or 2 years ago?

Dr. MEISELAS. It goes back quite a while.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was it 2 years ago?

Dr. MEISELAS. We will say the first time we gave any thought to it whatsoever in the framework of administration was possibly about a year and a half, I would think.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And how was this program to work? Were you to try to give them stabilized doses, after determining the level at which you could give an individual his narcotics?

Dr. MEISELAS. The problem starts initially in the following way: At the present time the drug addicts must obtain their narcotics from the illicit market. There are those who have suggested that if drugs were freely available this illicit market would dry up, drug addicts would not have to use all their time pursuing drugs, that perhaps they could lead useful, constructive lives and the community would be better off.

This is the basic question to which we addressed ourselves. Some of the immediate issues which we had to recognize are: No. 1, the possible threat to the community when drugs are placed in the addicts hands; No. 2, how much drugs should an addict get, how much drugs would a clinic working in the city be able to supply; and No. 3, what problems are there in terms of: will this man continue to deal with an illicit market and thereby keep it alive even if he receives legal supplies?

These are some of the variables we had to give consideration to. In pursuing the variables, we had to give consideration to techniques and methods that would provide us with answers, and it is this particular area that we are currently exploring. Today the subject was made by Mr. Kuh that nalline tests and urine chromatography provide a basis for making tests.

It is not as simple as that. We are still exploring with our biochemists techniques that would still put us in a firm position.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You say you started off a year and a half ago, and when you started off you must have had some program. Did you try to get an idea of whether or not you could stabilize them at a certain level of drugs, or did you just abandon the idea of stabilization and give them a progressively higher dosage and then dry them out and bring them up again?

Dr. MEISELAS. We already have adequate clinical literature which clearly indicates that a drug addict who takes the same dose of narcotics for an extended period of time develops tolerance and seeks to increase his dose. This is a problem which I think we probably will have to deal with, either by bringing them in periodically and drying them out and then starting them all over again, or by increasing the dose as we go along. Currently we have nothing more to add on that particular question.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1213

Mr. DUFFY. What experience have you had already with the recruits that you have programed, that you already have in your program? What are the results you have so far on this point?

Dr. MEISELAS. I would prefer not to answer that question for the very simple reason since it is not a formal project at this particular time, I think it would prejudice results if I started talking about results which are not results.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I didn't get the question.

Dr. MEISELAS. He wants the results.

(The record was read by the reporter.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. And you say you prefer not to answer that. Can you tell us how many recruits you did have?

Dr. MEISELAS. Well, we have worked with approximately, I would estimate, 23 people in one aspect of this project or another on this point.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is that the total number or did you have more recruits?

Dr. MEISELAS. No; as I say, I would estimate that we have worked with about 23 people.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And I think you told us the other day you only have three left.

Dr. MEISELAS. No; I told you that we were currently working with three people.

Mr. DUFFY. Have you lost the rest?

Dr. MEISELAS. I don't think you can talk in terms of losing the rest when you do not have a formal study in operation.

Mr. DUFFY. Let me ask you first: How many do you plan to get into the program?

Dr. MEISELAS. We initially thought in terms of 20. The possibility is that we will have to work with a larger group to get a statistically valid sample.

Mr. DUFFY. During the period of recruitment you say you have had in the program as high as 20 or 23?

Dr. MEISELAS. What I am saying is that over a period of time we have worked with approximately 23 people.

Mr. DUFFY. Now you have three people in the program.

Dr. MEISELAS. We are currently working with three people.

Mr. DUFFY. So you have lost the remainder in that period of time.

Dr. MEISELAS. No; I would say that is not necessarily so.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would you explain it in your own way?

Dr. MEISELAS. The point I would make, very simply, is that the assumption is made that all of the people who have participated in the project were brought into the project as subjects for the project. The point I am making, very simply, is that this is not a conclusion that you should necessarily arrive at.

Mr. DUFFY. Let me ask one other question: Are you having trouble getting people into the program?

Dr. MEISELAS. It is my impression at this particular time that the numbers of addicts who are available for maintenance projects of this kind is not nearly as large as many people would be inclined to think.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think we discussed that a little. Why is it that an addict who can have available to him narcotics on a prescription basis or by treatment at the hospital, freely, without any cost to himself—well, I would imagine that this would sort of start a panic, and if not a panic a large number going to the hospital and demanding this type of treatment. Why is it that so few are willing to volunteer for it?

1214 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. MEISELAS. First of all, I don't think that we really, at this point, have the answer to that question. I think to get the answer to that question one has to have a way of analyzing those individuals who have an opportunity to participate in a project such as this but do not. Putting it quite simply, the motivations may be many. For example, a given addict may not want to tie himself in with a governmental agency within the framework of a project of this kind.

No. 2, a given addict may not feel that he can operate within the structure of a project such as this.

Mr. ADLERMAN. By structure, you mean what?

Dr. MEISELAS. Well, I mean meet all the requirements of this type of study. For instance, it is essential that you use nothing else, that you only utilize the substance which is given to you, that you report at a given time, that you report regularly, that you don't miss appointments, and so forth. To conduct a study of this kind, you have to structure along these lines, or at least that is our impression at this time.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Meaning that he has to be under supervision so that he does not get drugs elsewhere, and you must have some assurances.

Dr. MEISELAS. Yes; there are all these issues.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Still, it would seem to me if they were offered drugs without cost, or without fear of being arrested while trying to steal the money to get the drugs or while possessing the drugs, the freedom from fear of prosecution would be a great inducement for them to enlist in this project. It is hard for me to understand why they don't enlist.

Dr. MEISELAS. Without meaning to be offensive, I would point out to you that that is in many ways middle-class logic. I don't think that you can simply apply your view of things and the way you would approach living to an individual who has lived as a drug addict, perhaps for many years. I don't think that you can see your goals in life as being identical with his.

I don't know that you can see your satisfactions in living as being identical with his. So what one really must do, if he wants to understand the logic of a drug addict, is to begin to develop a little feeling from where this logic comes from.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Let me put it this way. You undoubtedly know there have been many Canadian and United States addicts who have gone to England in the belief that they can put themselves under socialized medicine, obtain free drugs, and be free of any fear of prosecution. Are you aware of this fact?

Dr. MEISELAS. I really have not encountered this too frequently. I don't think I can help you on that.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Have you read any reports from Lady—

Dr. MEISELAS. I know the doctor you are referring to.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Lady Frankau, and also the Cameron report containing a study of some 31 Canadian addicts?

Dr. MEISELAS. How many addicts are 31? There, again, I don't think this is a fair point to make. We are talking about how many addicts go to England out of a total population of—well, you know.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1215

Mr. ADLERMAN. I assure you that the report that Cameron wrote on 31 addicts happens to cover only 31 that went to his little hospital in London on an emergency basis to get the drugs on a day when they couldn't be available any other place. But that doesn't represent all of the Canadians that went to England or all the Americans that went to England.

Dr. MEISELAS. Mr. Adlerman, I think here we again get into the question of firm figures. We don't know how many addicts there are in the United States. From the point you are making we apparently don't know how many addicts migrated to England. Until we know how many addicts migrated to England——

Mr. ADLERMAN. I agree that the figures on the subject are very hazy. Here we have the figure of 48,000 reported, the only firm figure, and there are estimates running 60,000, and both could be off by many thousands. Do you feel that the figure is higher or lower, or do you want to venture a guess?

Dr. MEISELAS. I would have no basis for guessing as to how many addicts go to England. All I can say is we have not known many addicts. In our experience, I think we have met about 4,000 or 5,000. We don't know how many addicts that left the United States for England.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you tell us what happened to the 20 who are no longer in the program? Did they drop out voluntarily or were they forced out by you for some reason or another, and, if so, why?

Dr. MEISELAS. Here, again, I think the only way I could get into that would be to review the preliminary thinking, which I am reluctant to do at this particular time.

Let me explain my reluctance.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This is rather important. I don't want to press you too hard. I understand you have a really hard job and you want to do a good job. I am sure of that. But at the same time, this subject comes up, and in the report written in 1963 by the New York Academy of Medicine they refer to the pilot project. Since this project exists we ought to try to get some information even though we probably cannot take it as the final word on this subject.

I think you should have more time. It may be very valuable to have a very realistic appraisal made at a later date when you feel the timing is appropriate. But at the present time I would like to learn what little we can learn from it.

Dr. MEISELAS. I would like to make this point, Mr. Adlerman. The people associated with the New York Academy of Medicine have been closely alined with projects of a scientific nature. They understand research problems and they know you can't talk results until you have them.

The position that has been taken is largely a position which is a social position, and in terms of dealing with some of the critiques of that social position, there is a need for a demonstration project. A demonstration project has not been completed. Until it is completed I don't think anybody can point to it as meaning anything.

Mr. ADLERMAN. At the same time, I think we ought to be able to get some idea of the problems you are facing. If you had 23 to start off with, and 20 have dropped out and you only have 3 left, that is an indication to me—and it may be that I am a layman and do not understand these things—which has some meaning.

1216 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. DUFFY. In that same connection is the tolerance issue the main reason that you have had difficulty getting people into the program?

Dr. MEISELAS. I don't think we have gone far enough to evaluate the problem.

Mr. DUFFY. I think you can give us an answer.

Dr. MEISELAS. If we had gone far enough to evaluate this particular problem I would certainly be happy to give you an answer. I am not being nearly as mysterious as it seems.

Mr. ADLERMAN. When do you think you can get results?

Dr. MEISELAS. I think in 2 or maybe 3 years. Perhaps a preliminary report could be put out before that.

Mr. DUFFY. Are you having trouble getting them into the program because they don't want a stabilized dosage? Do they want more and more, and you will not give it to them and so they are falling out of the program?

Dr. MEISELAS. I don't think we can give you an answer.

Mr. DUFFY. But you have had some experience along that line, Doctor. I think it is important for us to know that.

Dr. MEISELAS. I would agree if I had a firm answer to give you, I would give you the answer.

Mr. DUFFY. Do you have a tentative thought on that?

Dr. MEISELAS. I can only say, as I speculated before, and that is the reason I emphasize the May—

Mr. DUFFY. In our conversation in New York, you said tolerance was one of the difficult problems you were encountering. You also said it was something that you would have to get around. Is that a fair statement?

Dr. MEISELAS. I think it is a fair statement to say that if you conduct a program of this kind, sooner or later you will have to face up to tolerance.

Mr. DUFFY. Would you say tolerance is one of the main reasons for not getting people into this program?

Dr. MEISELAS. No, I haven't said that.

Mr. DUFFY. You said it to us in New York, Doctor, and you are implying it now.

Dr. MEISELAS. Let me say this to you—

Mr. DUFFY. We are not trying to ruin your research program, but we are trying to get the results thus far.

Mr. ADLERMAN. We are not trying to pressure you or badger you. But it is obvious that if 20 drop out of 23 you must know the reason why. I wonder why you hesitate to answer that question.

Dr. MEISELAS. Mr. Adlerman—

Mr. ADLERMAN. I don't object to any way you want to answer it; qualify it as much as you want to. I think there must be an answer to it, though.

Dr. MEISELAS. No. 1, if you are going to conduct a study of this kind, you have to develop criteria that are going to be applied to the individuals who are included. That is the first point I would make. We haven't finalized those criteria.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What are the criteria? What kind of criteria are you talking about?

Dr. MEISELAS. As I stated, we haven't finalized the criteria.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is it the size of the dosages?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1217

Dr. MEISELAS. No. I said you have to decide who are the people you are going to include. You have to decide what age range, you have to decide marital status, you have to decide vocational background, arrest record.

Mr. DUFFY. Before you can initiate a program, you have to have some criteria. You have thought about this program for 2 years and the criteria has not been laid down as yet? You have to have the criteria before you can begin to recruit.

Dr. MEISELAS. As I said, I tried to give you an accurate estimate, as accurate as I possibly could, as of 2 years ago. I think as we have gone along, we have learned a few things and we are adjusting our sights accordingly.

If you will let me finish the points I am trying to make, if you publish criteria prematurely, if you publish methodology prematurely, you cannot have satisfactory results, and I will explain to you why. Let us assume that the best person in terms of coming to some kind of conclusive result to do this work are addicts of a given age, a given marital status, given vocational background, and a given arrest record.

Once you have publicly announced these are your criteria, the people who present themselves adjust to meet this criteria. You have to know your criteria and you cannot develop it prematurely.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The drug addict is really a very clever individual. He is very clever in his way of handling the doctor, and satisfying his capacity for drugs, and in conning people. You feel that if you were to divulge your criteria, he would tailor his approach to fight the criteria if he felt this would be the best way to get the drugs?

Dr. MEISELAS. All of these things that you say are true. I would only add that they are also true of people who are not addicts. Putting this quite simply, if you run any kind of experimental program and you have people who are interested in getting into the program, and they think that it might have some meaning for them, and you have certain criteria, you will find that people adjust to the criteria.

If you have a drug for arthritis and you are only going to give it to people who have had arthritis for 10 years, are of a given age, have a particular type of history, and you publish this, the people who come who want relief for arthritis present this history.

Mr. DUFFY. I will not belabor the point; but I agree with him, probably, that it would not be wise to tell us what the criteria is. But I think it is only a fair question for us to ask, since the program has been in existence for 2 years, what results have you had from the program.

Dr. MEISELAS. The program is not in existence from 2 years.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Have you developed the criteria yet?

Dr. MEISELAS. I must say we have done some thinking about it, and the final study form still remains to be structured, and I think until you have a final study form there is no point in talking about the study you are going to make.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can I ask you a question on another point?

Dr. MEISELAS. Incidentally, this is not unusual in research.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you familiar with the program of Dr. Kolb for the American Academy of Medicine or with the academy's approach to this?

1218 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. MEISELAS. Let me say that I am familiar with certain published materials I have read.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you believe that can be implemented at the present time, considering your knowledge of the subject over the past year and a half, doing it on a pilot basis? Do you think this is ready to go?

Dr. MEISELAS. I couldn't base it on the pilot work we have done. I can only base it on my understanding of narcotic addiction. Essentially our feeling is that maintenance studies—well, our feelings are very similar to Dr. Cameron's. I think that is the easiest way to say it.

Mr. DUFFY. You reject the academy's approach on this issue?

Dr. MEISELAS. We feel that there is nothing that we know currently that would suggest that this would be useful at this particular time. That doesn't mean we shouldn't pursue issues to improve our knowledge and improve the base upon which we take this position, or abandon it.

Mr. DUFFY. But from the status of the art today, that would be your conclusion?

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you feel that it should await the outcome of your research projects, say for another 2 years?

Dr. MEISELAS. I think that our research projects should provide some information. I think we are going to find that other people do research of this kind, and that will add also to the general fund of information. I think the whole question, philosophically, of who the addict is in our midst is something that requires further examination, and requires that there be additional education on this particular point. There are a lot of people we meet who are troubled with drugs who struggle to maintain adjustments in their community.

Mr. ADLERMAN. If I am not mistaken, the judicial council, the Advisory Council of Judges of the Council of Juvenile Delinquency, goes even further, I believe, than the clinical-type approach advocated by the American Academy of Medicine. They don't believe even in civil commitment, if I understand it correctly. I may be entirely wrong.

Mr. DUFFY. Have you read the report?

Dr. MEISELAS. No. I have only seen newspaper accounts.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They believe it should be freely handled by physicians without further ado.

Mr. DUFFY. Leaving it to the physician to use his best medical judgment in handling addicts. That in principle is what they are saying. Do you agree with that thesis?

Dr. MEISELAS. I think our position is that currently too many physicians are not intimately familiar with the regard to handling of addicts. I think the idea of simply abandoning our present structure in terms of what we do know, in terms of the familiarity of practicing physicians in the community with the drug addict currently. I know none of this that would be particularly helpful.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Where do your funds come from for this research? Are they from the National Institutes of Health?

Dr. MEISELAS. No.

Mr. ADLERMAN. New York State?

Dr. MEISELAS. These are New York State funds.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you have sufficient funds to conduct your experiments?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1219

Dr. MEISELAS. Well, when you talk money——

Mr. ADLERMAN. You never have enough.

Dr. MEISELAS. I would simply say that I think additional funds for narcotic addiction would be welcomed.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I don't mean for narcotic addiction. I am talking about the pilot project.

Dr. MEISELAS. The pilot project, itself, this study, really isn't expensive to itself. The people who are working with it are also employed in other research work so that essentially we are talking about a percentage.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You don't have a strong problem on money?

Dr. MEISELAS. No.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Whom do you report to on this thing? Do you have any interim reports that you file, and, if so, whom do you file with?

Dr. MEISELAS. Dr. Brill has been intimately involved with the project, and I would say he is the senior research consultant working with us.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is he presently associated with this project?

Mr. DUFFY. I think he left approximately 3 months ago.

Dr. MEISELAS. He left the central office. He was director of a State hospital.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I believe those are all the questions we have. We will send you a copy of the transcript to correct any errors in grammar but not in substance. We will send it to you and you can return it to the committee.

Dr. MEISELAS. Thank you.

(Whereupon, at 4:55 p.m., the interrogation was concluded.)

PAGINA BIANCA

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1964

U.S. SENATE,
PERMANENT SUBCOMMITTEE ON INVESTIGATIONS
OF THE COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS,
Washington, D.C.

The subcommittee met at 10:55 a.m. in room 3302, New Senate Office Building, pursuant to Senate Resolution 278, agreed to February 10, 1964, Senator Henry M. Jackson presiding.

Present: Senator Henry M. Jackson, Democrat, of Washington; Senator Edmund S. Muskie, Democrat, of Maine.

Also present: Jerome S. Adlerman, general counsel; Paul B. Kamerrick, assistant counsel; LaVern J. Duffy, assistant counsel; Philip W. Morgan, chief counsel to the minority; Eugene J. Marshall, Bureau of Narcotics; Ruth Y. Watt, chief clerk.

Senator JACKSON. The committee will come to order.

(Members of the subcommittee present at time of convening: Senators Jackson and Muskie.)

Senator JACKSON. We regret that due to so many committee meetings in session today, it is not possible for all the members to be present, nor is it possible to take the detailed testimony from each of the witnesses in person in the committee room. Instead, we are asking that the seven distinguished witnesses be sworn and present their testimony for the record. Subsequently, interrogatories will be submitted to the witnesses. The witnesses will give their response, and all of this will be a part of the sworn testimony that is being submitted today.

Senator MUSKIE. Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I might add this comment: that in behalf of the absent members of this committee, as well as ourselves, this committee does not indicate a lack of interest on the part of the committee in the subject of these hearings. I think we are all intensely interested. It happens that we are driving for adjournment of the Congress within the next 2 weeks, and in that process we are all deluged with committee responsibilities of one kind and another, as well as work on the floor, and it is simply impossible for us to give the time to this that we would all very much like to give.

Senator JACKSON. I wholeheartedly agree with the statement by Senator Muskie. We are intensely interested in this problem. It is for this reason that we want to receive this testimony, have it in the record. It will be scrutinized very carefully.

1222 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

We do not want to delay the proceedings to a later date when, of course, we would lose the value of the important contribution that these gentlemen make. It is for this reason that we are anxious to get the testimony in the record, and the comments and counsel will be pursued vigorously on the part of the committee in order that we have a full and complete story.

Dr. Catherine Hess, would you come forward?

Please be sworn.

Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you are about to give before this subcommittee shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

TESTIMONY OF DR. CATHERINE B. HESS

Dr. HESS. I do.

Senator JACKSON. You are the assistant commissioner of the New York City Health Department, Doctor?

Dr. HESS. That is correct?

Senator JACKSON. And you have a statement?

Dr. HESS. Yes, I have presented a prepared statement.

Senator JACKSON. And you swear, of course, that this statement is true to the best of your belief?

Dr. HESS. Yes, sir.

Senator JACKSON. That statement will be included at this point in the record. In addition, I understand that you have three exhibits.

Dr. HESS. Four exhibits, Senator.

Senator JACKSON. Without objection, the four exhibits marked "Exhibits A, B, C, and D" will be included at this point in the record; that is to say, at the conclusion of your testimony.

(The exhibits A, B, C, and D will be found in the appendix on p. 1331.)

(170)

(Dr. Hess' statement follows:)

STATEMENT OF DR. CATHERINE B. HESSMAGNITUDE OF THE PROBLEM OF NARCOTICS ADDICTION*New York City Health Department, Office of Narcotics Coordinator

The various figures quoted as representing the narcotic population in New York City are at such extreme limits that one wonders which will ever approach the real situation. According to the figures compiled by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, there were 47,489 known addicts in the United States in 1962, of which 22,034 (46.4 percent) were located in New York. Some voluntary groups estimate the addicted population to be as high as 60,000 in Harlem alone. My office, through implementation of Health Code No. 11.05, established a central registry on January 1, 1963. In that year 9,012 new cases were entered in this registry, and in the first 6 months of 1964 an additional 4,412 new cases were reported. The characteristics of these persons on the registry can be seen in exhibit A.

Another aid in evaluating the magnitude of the problem is the analysis of the health department intake figures for hospitalization to Manhattan General, a 215-bed proprietary hospital for detoxification. Approximately one-third of all admissions go through the health department admitting facility so that they can utilize the rehabilitation facilities afterward.

Exhibit B shows that in a 3-month period, January 14 to April 14, 1964, 443 patients were seen and interviewed. The waiting period for a bed is about 7 days for this facility during which interval 30 to 50 percent are lost.

The greatest "underreporting" is evident in the public school system, where in the past year 48 were listed as narcotics addicts and 140 as nonnarcotic addicts.

(170) Fra le pagine 1330-1331 del documento originale risultano inserite solo tre mappe che — contrassegnate, rispettivamente, con le lettere LL, MM e NN — sono pubblicate, insieme alle altre carte, nella Parte Terza del presente tomo. (N.d.r.)

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1223

Voluntary agencies reported giving service in 1963 to 7,000 addicts. The amount of duplications and poor recordkeeping in their groups makes the figure of questionable value.

Considering the fact that in the first 18 months of reporting to the registry, 13,400 new addict names have appeared almost exclusively from medical facilities and 7,000 services have been reported from voluntary agencies, it is probably safe to say that New York City has a minimum of 30,000 addicts.

DRUG USE

The drug of choice continues to be heroin, which currently sells for $3 to $5 a bag. In New York City the amount of heroin in a deck is so low that the addict supplements it with anything from barbiturates to morning-glory seeds.

A recent survey by the office of the chief medical examiner from the city of New York indicates clearly that an addict cannot predict the contents of a given bag of heroin bought on the street. Samples were carefully analyzed in 119 cases—132 individual samples were studied. Of 122 samples supposedly containing heroin, the heroin strength varied from zero to 77.2 percent. Among 12 specimens sold as heroin, but which contained no heroin, 9 contained diluted quinine hydrochloride, 1 pure quinine, 1 baking soda, and 1 starch. Most individual bags contained 1 to 3 percent heroin.

An increase has been noted in the use of Tuinal, Doriden, tranquilizers, amyl nitrate, and amphetamines. In the health department's intake group, approximately 30 percent of the people use other drugs to supplement the heroin habit.

Deaths from overdose in New York County in 1961 were 311; in 1962, 172; and in 1963, 242 deaths were attributed to overdose or some form of anaphylactic shock.

DRUG USERS

Although most drug users become involved with drugs between 16 and 22 years of age, they do not seek assistance for their problem to any extent under 25. Treatment of adolescents at Riverside Hospital over a 10-year period from 1952 to 1963 was a failure and continues to be in other voluntary settings. The only groups showing any promise are those who develop high religious transferences and the group of 20 on probation from King's County Court living at "Daytop Lodge" on Staten Island.

Boys who become addicts are clearly related to the delinquent subculture. This environment contributes to heavy moods of pessimism, a sense of mistrust, with no goals in life and inability to face reality. The boys spend their leisure time aimlessly, hanging in doorways talking about expensive cars and getting something for nothing, and discussing methods of manipulation to achieve these ends. This group has few friends, except other addicts, and no meaningful interests. The majority of female addicts are not only prostitutes, but homosexuals. Males are not implicated homosexually as frequently as females and in most instances are ashamed of such involvement. While the male addict becomes a criminal to support his habit, the female is a prostitute first and addiction is superimposed.

The vast majority of addicts are not psychotics, but do have psychopathology—with immature character development—and inadequate personalities. They have feelings of inferiority which are translated to aggressive acts against society and which never seem capable of coping with the pressures and stresses of the environment. Drug addiction to me is much more a sociological than a psychiatric manifestation of physical disease.

CURRENT TREATMENT APPROACHES OF ADDICTION IN NEW YORK CITY

Currently there are four possible phases of treatment, namely—

1. Ambulatory: This is an experimental approach by several groups and does not represent a standard procedure.
2. Prehospitalization: Treatment while waiting for a hospital bed.
3. Hospitalization: A detoxification process.
4. Rehabilitation phase: To include the halfway house concept and to provide sheltered workshops.

1. Ambulatory treatment-experimental concept

The New York Academy of Medicine in 1963 advocated that physicians should treat addiction as a disease. Although this way may be a possible approach for the future, at the present time any mass therapy program would produce chaos and failure (see exhibit C) as experienced in the health department clinics of 1917 when 7,000 patients were in a program to supply them with drugs. This ended in failure within 10 months.

1224 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Before such a plan of supplying drugs to the addict on an ambulatory basis could be considered, the following must occur:

1. A drug must be found to simulate heroin which needs to be administered only once daily. Giving even 30,000 shots a day seems a formidable task.
2. This drug must have satisfying effects, but at the same time must permit the individuals to work.
3. A rapid test must be developed to detect the usage of narcotics from the street so that the clinic dose will not compound the effects, resulting in overdose and death.
4. Some assurance must be given that the dealer and pusher will go out of business, instead of their spreading the heroin to new populations and new areas which most authorities in the field think will occur.

2. Prehospitalization

The waiting period for a bed of detoxification varies directly with the supply of drugs on the street. When things are tight, there is a surge for hospitalization. In the city hospitals, where most addicts are admitted, the waiting period is 3 to 5 days at Manhattan General Hospital, and about 4 to 6 weeks at Metropolitan Hospital. The period at Manhattan State Hospital has been as high as 9 weeks. This program is run exclusively by the State.

In the city program there is a 30- to 50-percent loss between the time the addict applies for admission and the time the bed vacancy occurs for him to be admitted. It is important that an addict be supplied a bed as soon as he decides to seek help. If we force him to continue his habit while waiting, we promote crime with our blessing. To help solve this problem, until more beds are available, the health department is planning to give the addict medication while he is awaiting hospitalization (not to exceed a 10-day period). Currently a program has been established doing group therapy with those who register at our health center and are awaiting a bed. This approach was established to cut down the loss during this interval. This group is continued through the hospital stay into the rehabilitation period.

3. Hospitalization

The city supply of beds is as follows:

Manhattan General.....	215
Metropolitan.....	60
Female voluntary hospitals.....	25

State hospital beds in the New York City vicinity include:

Manhattan State.....	190
Central Islip.....	80
Middletown (female).....	35
Pilgrim State.....	105

This is a total of 710 beds in the New York City area.

The medical detoxification is accomplished by using oral methadone X mgm., three times a day and, when needed, thorazine or another tranquilizer. For sleep, chloral hydrate is the drug of choice. All barbiturates, doriden and librium should be avoided because of their high addictive qualities. Withdrawal with methadone takes approximately 3 to 4 days, but the entire hospitalization period is 3 weeks, the time allocated to become accustomed to living without drugs.

It is questionable how much psychiatric diagnosis or therapy can be accomplished in this period which for the most part is a period of friction and confusion. Certainly the day the patient enters is no time for such an evaluation and often, if postponed, the patient signs out. At Manhattan General, where approximately 7,000 admissions occur in a year's period of time, 36 percent complete the 3 weeks' treatment program, 41 percent complete the withdrawal phase, and the remainder sign out within the week.

The group therapy sessions organized by the health department for the addict while awaiting admission are continued in the hospital in an effort to begin helping the patient identify his needs and problems. This is then carried over to the aftercare period.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1225

Any hospital floor having 20 to 30 admissions and 20 to 30 discharges a day is mechanically in a state of agitation and flux. Friends come and go, the pusher can be among friends or foes, battles are fought over past debts, and the homosexuals are disturbed that a pass was made at their friends, and with it all, no family or visitor may see the patient. In such an atmosphere, little evaluation or rehabilitation can successfully take place.

I personally feel that large wards are unsatisfactory and that the ideal is around 50 to 60 beds. This is a workable unit in which each patient can have a complete physical exam, a social work evaluation, and a psychiatric interview. Our experience has shown that, in addition to their addiction problem, these patients are medically ill people suffering from gastrointestinal disturbance, dental caries, malnutrition, skin diseases and abscesses, chest conditions, infectious hepatitis, endocarditis, and orthopedic problems.

4. Rehabilitation

Here lies the potential for the entire future of the addict. Up until now, no program anywhere has been able to offer a thorough and complete answer in this period of his treatment. It is usually because of lack of funds and many times because of shortage of personnel. Until a full complement of services can be offered the addict, our recidivist rate will be high and successes will be an exception, and the public at large will continue to demand a new approach.

The health department has only one rehabilitation center for five boroughs. We should be serving the 7,000 yearly discharges from Manhattan General all the time. Currently, the space and staff can accommodate only 100 patients. Services are limited to those who stayed the entire 3 weeks in the hospital and within 48 hours after discharge come to the center. The main services included are psychologic testing, psychiatric diagnosis and treatment, social service casework, medical treatment and vocational rehabilitation. The uniqueness of the program is the day care aspect, where only drug-free former addicts participate in recreation, organized group therapy sessions, and occupational therapy. They can get breakfast and lunch at the center and remain a full 12 hours if they so desire.

The main objective in this part of the program is to teach him discipline, such as ability to keep appointments on time, and to develop self-esteem which he has never been able to attain. Graduated work in the center is the first step of his occupational therapy. In a few cases it takes only weeks to prepare a man for a job in the community, in most cases months of patient support are required. The majority of addicts revert to drugs after being on the job 2 to 3 days because they still cannot stand the pressure and stress in an unprotected situation. There is also a need for productive, meaningful occupational training where items can be made and sold in an outlet store.

Following this training, the patient should be placed in a sheltered workshop for varying periods of time until he can manage on his own. It is possible that he may always have to work in a sheltered situation. Every patient must be evaluated separately.

While rehabilitation is being programed for the individual, it is essential that he live in protected, "clean" quarters. Currently, as soon as he is discharged from jail or hospital, the addict is placed on welfare and finds a place to live infested with other addicts and prostitutes. No matter how determined this person is to stay off drugs, the constant needling and pressure from friends breaks down his good intentions. The support given him 10 hours a day, 6 days a week, at the rehabilitation center is not sufficient to carry him for the other 14 hours, and for the seventh day in the week. The Halfway House approach must be tried to overcome this situation.

I believe it should be physically placed in an area where the addict is accustomed to living, and not on some farm or faraway place in the country. Sooner or later he must live in his own community again, and all programing should be directed through this transition to that end. No matter where you relocate the individual, he always drifts back to his own environment.

Many other less-extensive types of rehabilitation programs offer a sliding scale of services to the addict. Exhibit D is a directory of such services in New York City provided chiefly by voluntary agencies. These services range from a group receiving so much religious support that the adolescent addict visibly carries his Bible through Harlem and the Bronx, to another group practicing hypnosis, to a private physician who sees addict patients only between 10 p.m. and 2 a.m. To give some idea of the extent of involvement of many of these groups there are currently 12 halfway houses being proposed by 7 groups. One group, Haryou, is advocating the erection of five in Harlem alone.

1226 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

All State hospitals admitting addicts, plus the two city hospitals, have their own aftercare programs which consist of the traditional approach in an outpatient clinic where the patient is seen by a psychiatrist once or twice a week.

There is an active Narcotics Anonymous group functioning in New York City with several chapters. This approach of receiving strength through the accomplishments of others is a time-honored one in the field of alcoholism and is now applied to the field of addiction. Their membership is claimed to be near 200, but no documentation is available.

Another rehabilitation approach is working through the courts with probationers and parolees. The probation officers utilize the services already existing in the community with a condition of probation being to stay drugfree. The New York State Division of Parole followed 344 carefully supervised parolees. Here the relapse rate was 55 percent while paroled, and 15 percent after 3 years. The health department is conducting another study with probationers on a grant from the National Institute of Mental Health, where the influence of a health department setting and services will be measured against the normal services given to those on probation.

With all of these skills and techniques available, the relapse rate for all programs is discouragingly high. No approach has ever produced more than a 35-percent abstinence rate, and this has been obtained only in a correction setting. Voluntary groups have never produced more than a 6- to 10-percent "cured" group. One is inclined to admit to the hopelessness of the situation and declare there is no satisfactory answer. Such a declaration, I feel, is premature. It is true that we have tried many hospitalization techniques and found no differences in the cure rate no matter what the technique, but the loopholes are in the aftercare and rehabilitation components of treatment. These inadequacies include:

1. Insufficient staff; namely, social workers, to reach out and work with families as well as patients.
2. Insufficient beds for detoxification in all areas of New York.
3. The lack of vocational and occupational training, including sheltered workshops.
4. No existing Halfway Houses where the addict can try community living and adjustment with ample support.
5. Too few day-care rehabilitation-type centers exist where he can go any time of the day or evening to keep busy and learn constructive approaches to his problems.

Before leaving the discussion of methods of rehabilitation, a statement should be made about New York's Metcalf-Volker Act in effect since January 1, 1963.

It is a well-known fact that crime and addiction are inseparable because of the need to secure money to support the habit. In New York City in 1963, 7 percent of the 206,248 arrested persons were drug addicts. Drug users committed only 1.2 percent of crimes against the person, but 11.7 percent of crimes against property. Narcotic users were responsible for 22.4 percent of arrests for criminally receiving property, 15.6 percent of burglaries, 14.9 percent of forgery and counterfeiting arrests. In striking contrast, narcotic users were implicated in only 1.2 percent of felonious assault arrests and 0.6 percent of the arrests for rape.

From 111,055 new admissions to its detention facilities the New York City Department of Corrections admitted 30,106 inmates to sentenced institutions. Out of a total of 8,629 applications for voluntary civil commitment under the Metcalf-Volker Act, 966 were approved for admissions to State mental hygiene facilities and 665 were admitted, of which 50 percent disappeared from the followup program.

Here, again, one sees an attempt to answer a problem through civil commitment, but because of inadequate facilities, not because of the act itself, it is ineffectual in many ways. Lack of beds at Manhattan State have made it necessary to carefully select those who will be admitted to the program. There has not been sufficient experience to know if the criteria used is the most productive possible. Because of the shortage of beds, the waiting list for voluntary admissions reached 9 weeks in the past, so the health department and many voluntary agencies have discontinued looking to this referral source for any of their cases. In an attempt to free more beds earlier, discharges are made so the patient can be carried on an ambulatory basis and he then disappears from the program with inadequate measures to get him back. It is disappointing to note that the research and educational provisions of the act have not moved along at a more rapid pace.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1227

SPECIFIC RECOMMENDATIONS FOR MEDICAL MANAGEMENT

1. Expand the procedure of treating addicts with methadon or a similar drug while waiting for admission to hospitals for detoxification.
2. Expand the group therapy principle in the prehospital phase, through hospitalization into rehabilitation or aftercare.
3. Create more beds in State hospitals to take care of those electing civil commitment under the Metcalf-Volker Act.
4. Provide more day-care centers in all boroughs of New York.
5. Provide Halfway House facilities for a period up to 1 year for individual addicts if needed.
6. Exploration into the feasibility of "foster homes" for addicts.
7. Establish sheltered workshops and extensive vocational training facilities so when a person gets a job he can keep it without going back to drugs.
8. Expansion must be made in laboratory facilities to do larger amounts of chromatography testing, which is the urine test to determine if the individual is using drugs or not. This test is an essential part of rehabilitation and should be used by probation and parole, police in fatal accidents, welfare, department of licenses, and all treatment and rehabilitation centers and in the school system.
9. Research needed:
 - (a) Continued search to find an adequate drug substitute for heroin.
 - (b) Continued search to find if there are physiologic and metabolic differences detected in addiction-prone individuals.
 - (c) More ambulatory studies maintaining the addict on drugs in different settings must be tried with small groups before considering it possible for mass use. In such studies the following questions must be answered: While on supplied drugs, does he have the ability to stay out of trouble? While on a supplied maintenance dose, can he be self-supporting?

CONCLUSIONS

Narcotic addiction is a psychosocial disease which will always be present as long as there is availability of drugs; as long as there are slums and unemployment, and no integrated family living. The narcotic problem is not spreading at any measurable rate, although those experimenting with all fringe practices of drug abuse show increases. In time, a small portion of these will become victims of the habit.

Treatment facilities need to be expanded and enlarged with greater emphasis on rehabilitation. Laws and regulations related to control over manufacture, importation, and exportation of narcotic drugs must be tightened. More severe penalties must be imposed on the importer and mob-connected dealers and distributors so that availability of drugs reaches a minimum. Until drugs are taken out of the reach of the susceptibles, the addict will always make all types of attempts to secure them. It was only during World War II when supply was so low that the addiction population dropped.

Prevention must be the area for greatest concentration of effort in the future. Environment which breeds frustration and anger and leads to antisocial behavior must be changed. Slum housing must be replaced with decent places to live. Education must be broadened as to the dangers of addiction and how it starts. In the school system, early recognition of the use and abuse of drugs must be made with programs formulated to serve the needs of these early users. Medical schools must provide more curriculum in the addiction field. Greater knowledge is needed in how to treat and detoxify addicts who are not only on heroin alone, but suffer from using a multitude of drugs and harmful substances.

If localities and States could be as united a front and be as well organized as the dealers and mob organizers, we could push this addiction problem to an insignificant size.

Senator JACKSON. Thank you very much, Dr. Hess. We are very sorry that we are operating under these expedited procedures. We want you to understand how much we appreciate your help. We will be in touch with you later.

Dr. Hess. I am very happy to have been able to present the material for you.

(Dr. Hess' exhibits A, B, C, and D will be found in the appendix on p. 1331.)

1228 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Senator JACKSON. Thank you.

Dr. Robert Baird, the Haven Clinic, would you come forward, please?

Will you raise your right hand?

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you are about to give before this subcommittee shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Dr. BAIRD. I do.

TESTIMONY OF ROBERT W. BAIRD, M.D.

Senator JACKSON. Your name is Robert Baird?

Dr. BAIRD. Yes, sir. My address is 222 East 116th Street, New York City. I was licensed in 1952 to practice medicine, and I am chairman of Haven Clinic, an organization which helps addicts, and a member of the faculty of New York College and Metropolitan Hospital.

Senator JACKSON. You have a statement do you not?

Dr. BAIRD. Yes.

Senator JACKSON. And you swear to the information contained in the statement as being true to the best of your ability?

Dr. BAIRD. Yes, sir.

Senator JACKSON. Do you have any exhibits?

Mr. ADLERMAN. There are some exhibits which have to be culled, I think. I would like to have some of them printed in the record, but we would have to select them.

Senator JACKSON. Without objection, then, the exhibits will be reviewed and then submitted for the record.

Thank you very much, Doctor.

Dr. BAIRD. Thank you, Senator.

(The full statement of Dr. Baird follows:)

STATEMENT OF DR. ROBERT W. BAIRD

It certainly is a pleasure and an honor to be called down here to discuss narcotics control and treatment. Most often only those physicians who have treated patients in large institutions and not on an out-patient basis are consulted, which is a different form of medical experience. Withdrawing a patient in his environment is completely different from withdrawing him in a hospital. The motivation, of course, is different. Those withdrawn on an ambulatory basis want to kick the habit. Those who are in a hospital want to kick the habit, or else they have been sentenced, in which case motivation is absent, and unless psychotherapy is intensive and prolonged, there will be marked recidivism. Today, the treatment of drug addiction runs the gamut from lay people who want to do good, to theologians with fervent prayer designed to overcome withdrawal symptoms of vomiting and diarrhea, to some doctors who mean well but are naive and are conned and deceived by the smart drug addict into writing prescriptions which the addict uses either to sell or increase his habit, and to some fast-talking hucksters who are cropping up daily and milking the public out of millions of dollars to develop a sicker inner circle closed society of drug addicts who, they say, need no medical supervision. Too many doctors in institutions see the drug addict in a totally unrealistic situation.

I think the analogy can be drawn of the professor of zoology who knows everything about the tiger, its technical name, classification, habits, progeny, and relationship in its environment, and, of course, these are verified and substantiated by going to the zoo and making more observations. Now place this erudite man in the cage with just a chair and a whip, or allow him to have an encounter with the animal in its natural habitat, and lo and behold, all knowledge soon departs because there is no firsthand experience working with the animal in its natural environment. It is the same with the drug addict. One must see him under the pressure of home life, his personal reactions with his environment, and his motivations in a situation that is not protective to be truly able to understand him.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1229

DIFFERENT THEORIES

There are so many schools of advice and therapy which are offered to us and given so freely by the "professional sociologically oriented narcotics expert" to confuse us:

- (1) Advocates of the so-called English system.
- (2) Advocates of professionalism who make statements like: "If you can't take care of their problems, at least make them happy and allow them narcotics."
- (3) Advocates of the American clinic system with ambulatory withdrawal or maintenance doses.
- (4) Advocates of cold turkey and the punitive approach.

QUOTATIONS

Some of my own medical compatriots are well intentioned but make remarks that require further examination. For example, one expert wrote this: "It is extremely doubtful that any mentally healthy woman would ever go into prostitution in order to support an addiction habit."

I quote from a book published in 1962 by an expert on narcotics: "There are only 5,000 marijuana smokers." From the same book: "A critical review of all the evidence strongly suggests that the impact of drug addiction on major crimes is so slight that it is imperceptible in statistics." I wonder what impact this has had on the families of two policemen who died and the man killed in an elevator because of crazed drug addicts. It is such statements as these coming from well-meaning people who themselves do not have the wide scope of training or experience that have managed to retard the forward motion of narcotics addiction toward its solution.

PRAISE FOR THE NARCOTICS BUREAU

I find myself backing the Narcotics Bureau 100 percent in their dictums. It is their department of 289 agents that has been the greatest asset in keeping narcotics addiction to a minimum. How? They keep the pill black market to a minimum and further addiction down by keeping contraband opiates and heroin from coming into our country from all over the world, by reminding physicians what the dangers of free dispensation of narcotics are if given to addicts not in good faith. Yes, the doctors might have good faith in the addict but would the addict have good faith in himself attempting to withdraw with an extra supply of narcotics. This is where interpretation should be reevaluated.

I publicly acclaim these narcotics agents who go out all over the world to risk their lives with the most ruthless thugs to protect us from this narcotic plague. If more of us who sit back and criticize so readily and do nothing constructive would press for more agents perhaps we might be able to get more of the contraband which they know is coming in. They are limited by such a small number of truly dedicated men.

DOES THE HARRISON ACT HARASS MEDICINE?

There is nothing in the Harrison Act which prohibits doctors from treating drug addicts on an ambulatory basis, providing one does not employ narcotics. This is a godsend. There are certainly enough medicines in the physicians' armamentarium to forestall withdrawal symptoms in a drug addict. There are nonnarcotic medications which stop the nausea, vomiting, and diarrhea, and minimize the hot-and-cold sweats. There are medications which are vitamins and anabolic hormones for building up the drug addict, and he will not be discomforted any more than his institutional withdrawal with the use of methadon and decreasing dosages of morphine or the long, possibly addictive hypnotics. In fact, the physical withdrawal can be done in 3 to 4 days. We in medicine have always accepted the challenge of a disease thought to be hopeless, and have come up with a solution. Need I mention smallpox, syphilis, polio, and now measles. Here were diseases and we had to seek out different solutions. If a patient develops pneumonia and does not react to penicillin, we don't give up and shrug our shoulders, we develop another antibiotic. Many of us remember the historical treatment of syphilis with arsenic and the silver bullet. Then followed the great advent of penicillin and the eradication of syphilis. Many of us in medicine have failed to take up the torch of medical resourcefulness and carry it aloft so that it might light up the dark night of drug addiction. In fact, it is distressing to me as a physician because it makes many of us in medicine, law, and legislation think like the totally unsophisticated medically oriented drug addict that the answer to this problem is more narcotics.

1230 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Let us analyze a few of the theories that have beleaguered us and found their own advocates and let us see their shortcomings:

THE "ENGLISH SYSTEM"

There is no "English system." Drug addiction exists there despite the fact that we Americans here say England has no problem, and the English doctors themselves deny they have a system. Why cannot the therapy applied to England apply to us in America? I have brought a few exhibits to attempt to graphically illustrate differences:

(1) The racial background of the two countries.—England is a homogenic group of Anglo-Saxons with a predominantly unilateral church. We here in America have a heterogenic group of white, black, and yellow people with multilateral religious backgrounds. The significance of this is that various minorities set themselves aside from the majority of the people. This, in turn, develops inner social tensions manifested by anxieties and frustrations which are sublimated by the development of neuroses with external manifestations of alcoholism, gambling, and drug addiction. I predict by 1970 there will be a tremendous increase of reported cases of narcotics addiction in England due to the influx of minority groups from the English possessions.

(2) Natural inclination.—The people of England simply do not take to narcotics as we do in America. They are aware of narcotics but do not have the curiosity or interest in trying it. This may be likened to our being aware of the sport in England called rugby. We have no desire to perpetuate this sport in our country.

(3) Psychologic background.—The demeanor of the English people is far more reserved than that of the Americans and more rigidly regimented than our rather casual mores here. This is evidenced by the fact that our police wear guns but in England there is no need to use guns.

Can you imagine the police in America keeping crime down without implementation of weapons? In England, if a police officer gets killed, it is front-line news. It has been several years since a police officer has been killed there.

However, in the past year of 1963, in New York City, it has been reported by the Department of Justice that 764 policemen were wounded and 6 officers slain in the line of duty. In addition, compare the murders in London which range between 40 and 50 a year and those in New York City of 646.

(4) Mores.—The alcoholic rate in England per 100,000 people is approximately 1,000. In the United States, it is 4,000 and we at the last compilation of alcoholic statistics have 5 million in this country.

The divorce rate is approximately 300 per 100,000, and in America 2,500 per 100,000, nearly 8 times as much, showing there is a certain unstable factor.

(5) England's "model addict."—England has a peculiar type of addict. Apparently all 547 have become medically addicted. This is in contrast to ours who are addicted on the street level from a drug-laden environment. It is seldom brought up but England uses twice as much narcotics as we in America, 14,000 dosages against our 7,000 per thousand population. Does this mean the English have more heart disease, more lung pathology, less pain tolerance than the Americans? The answer is no. They have more addicts than are reported. I am sure that in a year or two from now when England has a better method of narcotic policing the statistics will meteorically rise and suddenly they will be aware of 3,000 to 4,000 addicts. Will this be new? No. They are there now but unwittingly not reported or hidden in statistics.

If one observes the rising statistics, in 1957, 350 addicts, in 1959, 450, in 1961, 547, one wonders what is happening to the system.

(6) The professional intellectual addict.—About 25 percent of those are doctors, dentists, and nurses. This is a rather bizarre situation peculiar to England when one considers the greater percentage of our addicts are individuals who have never completed 2 years of high school. This would reflect a rather mentally disturbed professionalism in England which I seriously doubt. It would seem the more intellectual, the more vulnerable.

(7) Ratio of male and female addicts.—It is reported that England has more women than men addicts. This is the reverse of American addicts where the male addict is in the ratio of approximately 4 or 5 to 1.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1231

(8) Incorrect premise.—If all we have been saying about England is incorrect, that they are not medically addicted, how did these addicts first develop their habit in England and where did the narcotics to supply this habit come from? It has been reported in 1959, 373 pounds of hemp were discovered and also raw opium.

(9) Increased consumption of illicit drugs.—Another reason for not believing the English system is the answer, is the increased consumption of barbiturates, dexedrine, and cough preparations in that country. It has been my own experience that wherever you have a narcotics problem you have an attending drug problem as observed by the increased consumption of sleep medications, barbiturates, stimulants, amphetamine derivatives, and cough medicines.

This is because the mentally disturbed mind of the addict is always looking for something different. To our loyal friends across the sea, the day will occur when they will be aware that their addict population has deceived them, like the wife who is last to find that her husband has been indiscreet.

(9a) Age differential.—In England the age of the addict is over 30 years. In the United States the age of the average addict is under 30. As one approaches 40 there is a maturation out factor of drug addiction which will markedly decrease the incidence.

(10) Medical reasons for using narcotics.—The English method sets three premises for treatment:

(a) Patients under treatment for withdrawal with the view toward cure.

(b) Patients who while undergoing withdrawal have such severe symptoms that it would threaten the safety and health of the individual and narcotics are needed for maintenance.

(c) Patients who cannot function physically and mentally normal without jeopardizing their health without the constant maintenance dose of narcotics.

This actually leaves the addict being the doctor because he knows his subjective feelings and also how normal he should feel. What is England's followup of the normal function? There is none. In fact, there are no true statistics on how many of these drug addicts are working and functioning in the community. To cite an example of the English system, I have a 68-year-old male patient who has been on drugs of all kinds from smoking opium to eating it, shooting heroin and morphine and taking cough medicines for 45 years. Last October he left for England because he had heard of the "famed system." He left the United States with a 2-grain habit and returned 4 months later to America with a 20-grain habit.

When he arrived in Liverpool, he made a drug connection and got mud—raw opium, for $3 a bag on the street. This he swallowed. He became greedy and built up a habit and one day took too much and was rendered unconscious, was brought to a hospital in Liverpool and while there detoxified. The last 2 weeks of a 6-week sojourn he relates he met a Chinese chap who was getting raw opium and it was supplied to him in the hospital for the 2 weeks. He was again re-addicted and the medical people were unaware of this and to add to the confusion he was given a 1-day pass. While out in the street, he bought some raw opium and came back again into the hospital under the influence of it and no one knew about it. He left the hospital because he recognized his futility and went to see a narcotics specialist. He told the doctor he was on morphine and was asked how much. He said 15 grains. The doctor gave him the 15 grains. Now remember, he had been on only 2 grains while in America. He states he increased his habit within a few days and the medication did not last him for more than 2 to 3 days. He mentioned how little effort was made to control him and he had to leave England because he said it would have been his death. He states he lost approximately 20 pounds during this time. I asked why his dosage went up so quickly and he said: "Doctor, there was so much around that I could get for a few pennies that I couldn't get my hands on enough. The doctor would give me a 4- to 5-day supply but I would use it up in 2 or 3 days." Here is simple evidence that the patient's compulsive factor was so great and unbridled because of no medical restriction.

An interesting feature about this is that the physician who treated him sent him a letter stating that he owed quite a bit of money for service rendered him while in England. This very doctor was involved in a recent death of a patient in England from an overdose of narcotics because the patient received a supply of drugs too great in anticipation of his needs. The doctor believed the drug addict's demands and was unaware that the tolerance had dropped down. (I might suggest that this type of lying by addicts would be repeated here in America thousands and thousands of times over since the drug addict is so used to lying and prefabricating while under the influence of narcotics.)

1232 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

(11) Maintenance dose.—An interesting aspect of the "English system" is the alleged maintenance dose. By maintenance dose is meant that amount of narcotic which will keep the addict in a homeostatic physiologic-psychologic equilibrium so he has no discomfort. This seems uniquely peculiar to the addict in England. I have seen hundreds upon hundreds of addicts and have observed their tolerance build up from where one shot a day might be sufficient, at the end of several weeks or months this is insufficient and before they know it they are taking two and three bags three and four times a day. Tolerance is a definite part and package of drug addiction. It would only be a matter of time before the drug addict would have to take larger doses. I recall one addict who was taking 90 grains of morphine daily.

(12) Compulsory registration.—England has no compulsory law for registering the addicts nor central agencies for such administration of keeping check on the number of addicts. They have no treatment centers. The patient may drift from one doctor to another doctor like a psychologic rudderless ship in a sea of hedonism buffeted by seas of his own unawareness and abject despair.

(13) Marihuana and opium problem.—Apparently England does not consider this a major problem but we know that marihuana is a dangerous drug and it is the key that opens the door to heroin addiction. The psychology of the drug addict's addictive personality is always to seek a reaction that is bizarre. Perhaps because it is a problem endemic to some minority groups that have migrated to the British Isles, nevertheless it is still to be contended with.

(14) Hong Kong debacle.—Here is an open market where opium is given to the narcotic addict by the Government. At last count supposedly there are a thousand registered addicts, but there are now anywhere from 150,000 to 200,000 addicts not registered. There has been a change from smoking opium to shooting heroin.

This concludes some of the story of the "English system."

THE "AMERICAN CLINIC SYSTEM"

The next system to be discussed is the American clinic system. There are many champions in our country who are advocating this policy. They are well-intentioned individuals truly convinced that the solution to this problem is to allocate narcotics to take the profit out of addiction. If this ever were to be employed, it would culminate in sheer disaster to our youth and to hundreds of thousands of people. Suppose we were to yield to the pressures of those people with this type of reasoning. I will attempt to show why from a medical point of view this would not be feasible.

(1) Motivation.—There would be a lack of motivation in so many people to give up the drug if it is so readily available. When it is more difficult to procure it acts as a deterrent to many to keep their habit down.

(2) Increased recidivism.—There would be an increased relapse rate of those who had abstained from drugs because these individuals when they see others around them on the nod brings back selective memories of the euphoric reaction of yesterday and not the adverse discomfort.

(3) Added illicit supplies.—The problem of making sure the addict doesn't get an illicit supply of drugs plus his "be good candy 2-for-1 fix" from the Government would be difficult to check. This would mean the utilization of costly urine and blood tests and would get to be a psychologic thrill game with the addicts to see if they could beat the authorities and the doctors.

(4) Tolerance.—This is as I have mentioned before in the English system is the problem of addiction and the dosage would have to go up especially with youngsters where compulsion plays an extremely important role.

(5) Work capacity.—It is true that some people may function on it but at a definite decreased output. To the addict since he is so deluded by the drug he thinks he is producing far more than normal. No matter how much propaganda is put out, there is definite impairment since the very nature of the pharmacologic reaction of the drug is that it is a depressant. The old hand-me-down story of the M.D. who functions on drugs is not acceptable. In practically all our medical societies if they find out a physician is addicted, the board will temporarily suspend his license until he gives up drugs. I certainly would not advocate a doctor who is addicted to operate on a patient of mine.

To these people who say a drug addict can function normally on narcotics I would like to propose two situations. Can any of you imagine boarding a jet plane going to England and seeing the pilot injecting himself with some narcotics. How would you feel? In this modern world of aerodynamics where planes can travel 15 miles a minute, a brief 30 seconds on the nod would bring death to all passengers since the plane could go off its course 8 miles in that 30 seconds and crash into the side of a mountain or into a skyscraper. What about a bus driver on the overnight rides on a rain-slicked highway? A brief second and sheer destruction to so many innocent people.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1233

(6) GI liability.—The Government's attitude toward the drug addict in Selective Service is that of a liability. If those advocates of the free dispensation of drugs would look at the greatest medical service we have, that in the armed services where one gets doctor and medical supplies free, here the addict could get his narcotics, be fed and clothed and, according to their advocacy, should function well because he is in a psychologically good environment. I daresay if we had a battalion of 50,000 loyal American addicts fighting for us and if the enemy were to intercept a supply of narcotics, this battalion would be besieged by withdrawal, not by guns. Within 24 to 48 hours, the enemy would get a total surrender merely by offering them narcotics if they would throw down their arms. This is one time where not bearing arms for the addicts would give them rewards. How many of us would feel secure if their country were being protected by such a contingent.

(7) Legal liability.—In this age of lawsuits involving millions and millions of dollars, would deaths due to a drug addict falling asleep be called negligence on the part of the company or would it fall into the same category of the individual in a responsible position who dies of a heart attack. I hardly think so.

(8) The fate of the teenage addict.—According to this system, what would be the outlook for the thousands of the teenagers who are on narcotics now and to whom continuation of narcotic addiction would be acceptable and perpetuated? This would be a lost generation of youngsters. If they were not easily available they would not occur. If one were to see 9- and 11-year-old addicts, one would realize the odious situation.

(9) Social and economic retrogression.—Another point to think about is the fact that our Nation in its young 350 years of existence has made tremendous strides economically and socially. One needs only to look at those countries with their problem of addiction to see the economic and sociologic deprivation that exists in those cultures that are over 2,000 and 3,000 years old.

I refer specifically to India, China, Africa, Burma, Thailand, Laos, and Vietnam. This ought to awaken us to the end result of the inability to shake the yoke of addiction. In fact, we send green dollar bills to these countries and they in return send us white powder to destroy our economy and youth.

(10) Morality.—Many people say no changes in morals are involved. This is sheer nonsense and those people who believe that, have absolutely no conception of the impact of narcotics on the moral fiber and perhaps they have only seen the narcotic addict on the late, late show where everything turns out good in the long run. Do you recall recently the episode where a husband-wife addict team went out to get a fix and while taking the drug saw the fire going in their apartment and figured they had a minute to spare when they could run back and rescue their children, only to return to find the children had been burned to death. In their deluded sense of timing it was not a mere minute but some time had gone by. What happens to the moral fiber of an addict who would give an injection of heroin to a 2- or 3-year-old child to keep the child quiet so that she can go out and get a fix? In the meanwhile, this innocent 2-year-old has become addicted to drugs. What about the drug addict who sends his wife out to prostitute so the money realized can be used for drugs and paying rent and food. He states he is broadminded and doesn't consider this promiscuity. His rationale is that he is too sick to work and also he doesn't want to bring disgrace to his family and have to rob. In fact, he doesn't say anything about going out to work. If the addicts remain long enough on narcotics, they lie and pre-fabricate and have no true values of life.

(11) Homosexuality and Lesbianism.—There is an increased incidence of this among addicts. This is due to basic underlying psychopathology which caused them to become addicts as well as the decreased mental reserves to resist immoral attitudes of the homosexual deviate. This situation is aggravated by the perpetuation of their habit of drugs.

(12) Newborn addiction.—This fact alone should be one of the most strong arguments to prohibit the development of ambulatory narcotic treatment.

1234 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

There occurs in the realm of addiction the plight of the newborn child who is born addicted. This is the most pathetic and heart rending situation of them all where two for the price of one become enslaved to the torture of narcotics. Mothers not withdrawn before term will have the strong possibility of having newborn children born addicted. The child comes into this world not as well prepared as his normal brother, physiologically or psychologically. He is generally underweight about 5 pounds, extremely nervous, has no appetite, has diarrhea, vomiting, convulsions, and dehydration. In fact, within a few hours he has signs of severe withdrawal. If the child gets no medication within 12 to 24 hours he will succumb within 48 hours. It takes a period of 10 days to 3 weeks to withdraw this innocent infant. Are we to continue a pregnant woman on a course of drug addiction? Are we also to threaten future children with the possibility of being born to a woman who is addicted because she has a habit and in order to function she must have narcotics. This is a grave moral responsibility upon the medical profession and in all those peripheral branches who advocate giving narcotics away.

(13) Dropouts.—In this day and age when we are attempting to solve the problem of dropouts in school, this situation will even be aggravated. If one allows narcotics to be given, this is a further deterrent to education since the side effects of narcotics is that the individual loses his powers of concentration and lives in a world of unreality where he feels his education is just as good as anyone else's.

The incentive for further education would be destroyed and social relief rolls for taking care of these indigent people would be increased manifold.

(14) Inherent disease dangers.—Many people say there are no diseases from the use of heroin. They are concerned whether these are primary or secondary effects. What is the difference if a man in a house that is on fire is burned to death or is suffocated to death? The one situation is the primary cause of death, the flames; the secondary cause of death is the lack of oxygen and suffocation. The end result is the same—death. The same holds true in drug addiction. Some of the diseases that are associated with drug addiction with increased frequency are hepatitis, a disease of the liver which in its fulminating stages can claim the life of its victim, tetanus, malaria, tuberculosis, venereal diseases, bacterial endocarditis, septicemia, malnutrition, endocrine disturbances, and death. Yes, these are all the end result of taking narcotics. Are we to look to the resurgence of all these diseases by the legalization of narcotics? We know this will occur because many drug addicts like the company of other addicts taking off together and undoubtedly use one syringe and needle.

(15) The masked syndrome.—This is a situation which I call the masked syndrome. That is a disease whereby the addict is oblivious to the fact that he has the disease. We know that drug addicts when under the influence of narcotics their tolerance to pain has been increased so that nature's normal warnings of pain, hurt and observation have been destroyed.

Patients with bleeding or ruptured ulcers, kidney stones, bladder infections, ruptured appendix, venereal diseases, tuberculosis, pneumonia, these particular situations where the cough reflex has been depressed are not aware of having a lung disease until too late, have their lives threatened by the destruction of nature's governor of warning—pain.

(16) External physical harm.—This has claimed the life of many addicts such as fire. The addict falls asleep with a cigarette in his hand. He doesn't feel it burning.

Mattress goes on fire and he suffers burns and worse than that the threat to the family and community with a fiery holocaust. Driving a car proves a hazard because he may fall asleep at the wheel and kill someone. There are individuals who like to take an injection on a hot summer day along a riverbank, or piers, and fall into the water and drown.

(17) OD.—To the thousands of "addicts," this is a dreaded word. It means overdose. This is a dangerous situation with many addicts who shoot too much narcotics into their veins or to the narcotic addict who has been released from the hospital or prison and whose tolerance has been decreased. He takes an injection which before just managed to keep him from getting sick and this time the same dosage kills him. In Los Angeles in 1960-61 the fatalities were 263 deaths.

(18) Detection.—If one legalizes narcotics one would have the most difficult time of checking up on the addict if he had taken an illicit injection of heroin in addition to that supplied by the clinic whether it be in the injectable or oral form.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1235

I have seen addicts who inject themselves underneath a scab and replace the scab. When the doctor looks at the site, he finds no trace. There have been situations where the addict has burned himself deliberately with a cigarette to cover up the injection site and even those who cut themselves with a wire or a nick from a blade so that the laceration would cover up the area of injection. To run constant urinalyses and blood tests would be expensive and time consuming and also to check all over their bodies for this would be most difficult. We must spend more of our energies toward the underlying problem that is ailing the addict and take away the drug which is prolonging the agony. At this particular time, in the field of narcotics we seem to have arrived at a situation where we have "paralysis by analysis."

(19) Counterfeit medications.—If some individuals require taking injectables this would open many avenues more of the syndicate putting counterfeit ampules out like the ones supplied by the Government. Another situation could arise whereby the addicts would buy an illicit supply of heroin, put it in the ampule the Government supplies and if the addict were apprehended by authorities he could tell them he obtained it from the clinic. Other addicts might sell dummy ampules with distilled water or perhaps sell their supply.

(20) The clinic system of the 1920's.—The clinics were tried in 1919 to 1925 and were dismal failures with an increase in addiction. Many people would say those doctors did not have the knowledge or the dedication. These doctors were just as dedicated and highly motivated as our present-day physicians. I hope this situation is not repeated all over again.

(21) Take the profit out of addiction.—This school has so many advocates and they are so concerned about profit and justifiably so. However, I am concerned about the poverty of poor health, social decay, irresponsibility, and decadency of the addicts when they are on drugs. Ironically enough the syndicate has its greatest allies in those protagonists of those giveaway narcotics to the addicts. Why? Because more people would go on drugs. The psychology of a youngster is most interesting. When a youngster knows that someone is getting something which has a purportedly phsyic bizarre reaction and gets it for nothing, he will try it. What is more heinous is that it has the Government's stamp of approval and this gives a certain respectable sanction with rationalization by the child that if the Government says it is all right then it must be all right. The syndicate would have more addicts on drugs if this program were tried and we would have to awaken one day to its futility. I can just hear the story given by a pusher. "Don't worry, son. If you can't afford the habit, the Government will give you a free supply and if that supply isn't enough every now and then you can afford to buy one from us."

(2) The syndicate would still operate since so many individuals would not want to go to doctors or to clinics since their normal mental setup is to distrust anything that represents authority and there is a strong percentage of this type of individual with the addictive personality. (3) There would still be the syndicate with the strong profit motive as evidenced by the fact that individuals receiving narcotics at the various hospitals dealing with withdrawal programs have had cases recorded of smuggling of heroin into the withdrawal wards. Why should this be? They are getting their narcotics from the institution. There is simply tremendous greed which drug addicts have which is potentiated by the narcotics augmenting the hedonistic drive. (4) There will be many individuals who will sell their narcotics to other individuals which is being done right now where a naive doctor in good faith would give a prescription of 30 or 40 methadone tablets and they would sell the pills for $1 to $3 each. What must be done? Every effort to cut off the supply completely, this is a case of supply and demand and we do not want to make it demand and supply. Very simply, you will recall during World War II when silk stockings were at a premium and difficult to secure we found a substitute, nylon stockings.

Medical research must find a different solution and there is no holding back despite the old cliché of the Harrison Act and harassment by the Narcotic Bureau. I just read recently where a grant of $100,000 was given to one of our leading institutions to study the effect of narcotics on body function: "To probe the relation between the use of narcotics and the apparently widespread lack of sex drive among addicts." I certainly wish that this amount of money would be spent on the families psychologic genetic setup and that of the youngsters rather than to worry about why the sex drive is at a low ebb. It's a God-given gift to me to have these addicts have their drive depressed otherwise how many unwanted children would be born into an unwanted environment by parents who have no moral scruples and care less. I think that if one weighs the merits of the possible ambulatory narcotic supported program against those not using narcotics, we will find that the scales don't tip but fall heavily to the side of "no narcotics to be dispensed to support a habit except in those far few cases which would be under strict medical supervision with hospitalization."

1236 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

(22) Maintenance dose.—This is an extremely difficult psychological homeostatic plane to attain. All one has to do is think of the thousands upon thousands of addicts who in an area of drugs do not keep the habit down to $3 a day and are unable to exist without the necessity of going out to rob.

However, they continue to take more and more because of the strong compulsion that surrounds them. I cannot possibly see where the ambulatory setup dealing with doling out narcotics will all of a sudden give these people the strong mental capacity to say: "This is all I take today until I see my doctor tomorrow."

(23) Costs.—The cost of maintaining this narcotics program would be a most extreme taxation of professional and financial resources if narcotics are utilized. Let us set up the example that we have only 25,000 addicts in the city which I believe is really 30 percent of the actual count. Each one of these addicts should be seen daily by a doctor for consultation and counseling to make sure that he is not getting more drugs. The average doctor would see about 25 patients a day, at least 15 minutes to a patient in an 8-hour day outside of his other responsibilities, clinics, talks, making hospital rounds, etc. This would take a minimum of 1,000 doctors a day working around the clock and approximately 325 doctors in an 8-hour shift just to dole out narcotics and checking up on these people. If the patients were to pay for the service a minimum of $5, where would they get the money for this? Sixty-five percent can't work, 25 percent utilize prostitution, the other 5 percent would have to augment their habit by stealing and 5 percent can afford it. If the city were to pay the doctor the program would not be good because giving therapy to patients on opiates or drugs whose powers of concentration are decreased would be a waste of the doctor's time and psychotherapy. In addition, the utilization of the other ancillary services, laboratory, nurses, social service workers, would add up to prohibitive cost amounting easily to a million dollars a day. So, why not circumvent all of this and not deal with the dispensation of narcotics.

(24) What is the difference between the doctor and the professional drug pusher? Both advocate maintenance doses. I hate to think that a doctor with his 25 years of formal education would think along the same lines as a hoodlum racketeer with his 10 years of schooling because the final equation is the same—supplying drugs. Doctors must develop new techniques and new approaches to the understanding of the drug addicts and their families and attempts to set prophylactic programs that will stay the development of the addictive personalities as well as treatment with the end in sight of cure.

(25) Addicts' research.—Another situation arises which is rather ironical in the research of narcotics. We in medicine have traveled slowly but here in the world of addiction these addicts keep up to date with the modern advances. They know the combinations of heroin and cocaine, the speedball, the combinations with amphetamines.

They know how to prolong the effects of heroin with barbiturates and Doriden. They know how to isolate opium from paregoric and how to make Percodan available in injectable form. Giving them narcotics will just perpetuate further drug abuse.

The cold turkey approach.—This can be dismissed with a few words since its withdrawal is sickening and the symptoms of convulsions and all forms of complication can terminate with a fatality.

A DIFFERENT, PRACTICAL APPROACH

I, as a practicing physician, have one more theory to be discussed which I hope will not be confusing but which can graphically demonstrate a new approach. I humbly submit these arguments with all due respect to my more experienced and older medical colleagues. With an office in Harlem and admittedly with the limited experience of 12 years, I have observed narcotic addiction from the street level. I have learned the hard way from hundreds upon hundreds of addicts because when I went to medical college there was no formal institutional training on drug addiction. From these individuals I have learned painfully the story of addiction, how opium and heroin and marihuana get here, the various ways they get it on the street, the various avenues of getting illicit moneys, the various combinations of drugs and the various ways to beat the authorities and to con doctors out of narcotics. After having seen a 9-year-old youngster on narcotics, I realized that I, as a physician, should make a concerted effort in my area to come up with some little program to help eradicate some of this problem. Out of this evolved the clinic which I conduct called the HAVEN Clinic (Help Addicts Voluntarily End Narcotics) which is supported solely by myself. The clinic operates from 10 p.m. until 4 a.m. and when necessary on Saturdays and Sundays. We have a little higher success than normally because the motivation is here with many of the addicts. They voluntarily seek aid and they want to give up the habit, not to want to want to give up the habit.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1237

I have realized the small facilities I have are not sufficient and have initiated a campaign to see if funds can be raised for a narcotics hospital in New York City with outpatient clinics throughout the five boroughs which would operate free and on a 24-hour basis. Drug addiction does not work on the hours of 9 to 5 nor are there any holidays like Christmas or New Year. Every hour, every day, the drug addict needs help more than any other type of patient. The outline of our goal is:

(1) To procure a hospital in which to place drug addicts for a period of detoxification using other drugs rather than narcotics, except in the few recalcitrant cases and to have ambulatory narcotics clinics not using narcotics for withdrawal. During this hospital stay they should receive intensive counseling and psychotherapy.

(2) After the period of detoxification in the hospital, to get the cooperation of unions, school systems, to help teach and train these men and women to some vocation such as plasterers, carpenters, porters—practical application of job interest. This should be a time of not sitting in the hospital watching television, playing checkers, and making ceramics all day because this just potentiates their pleasure-seeking mechanisms of no responsibility.

(3) After this period of training, 6 to 8 months, during which time they are still at this hospital but in an informal setup, not wearing pajamas and bathrobes which reinforces the idea that you're sick and you start to believe it.

They would then be allowed an afternoon or evening a week out, then to return to the hospital at night, gradually giving them more and more liberties after they have proven themselves.

(4) If this period of 1 day a week has been successful, allow them a weekend at home so that the temptation to take drugs could be overcome and transition made easier.

(5) During this time, if training has been successful or if they already have a vocation, we would then procure a job for them. We would try to get the cooperation of industry and big department stores to help hire them. At the end of the day they would return to the HAVEN center to sleep. The idea would be to gradually get them to have confidence in themselves and be able to withstand the temptation of the community.

(6) Clinics would be established throughout the various communities on a 24-hour basis, open at night so that an addict if he should suddenly develop a compulsive craving or desire to return to the use of narcotics, could talk it over with someone and in this way help to get over the rough period. These should not be 9-to-5 clinics. Addicts do not take drugs or develop problems on a 9-to-5 basis. Personnel for these clinics would be recruited from the mother hospital and would attend weekly meetings so that rapport would be established with the narcotic addicts who would be going to the various community clinics. This would preclude the possibility of the addict feeling that he is going to a strange therapist or group of people who really do not know the problem. It is so important to individualize therapy with drug addicts.

(7) To employ hospital personnel who are dynamic and driving and whose appearance and demeanor are smart, bright, and alert so that the addict can look up to these people as leaders and make some identification.

Drug addicts are keenly perceptive to those therapists and those people who are helping them and many of them have commented on the apathy and lack of interest, careless dress of those who should be the epitome of hope and inspiration.

(8) To further research in the fields of drugs and the causes for taking them and to encourage training in medical schools, nursing schools, and all other schools associated with narcotics problems.

1238 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

(9) To disseminate the education of narcotics and its ramifications to all concerned, public schools, churches, philanthropic organizations, parent groups, etc., by competent lecturers. The adverse reactions of narcotics must be vilified and not glorified. This has been a grave mistake in education.

(10) Treatment must be free because otherwise we would encourage them to go out and rob and steal. They also develop a moral responsibility and they know people are devoting time and effort to them.

CONTEMPLATED LEGISLATION

(1) Make illegal any cough medicine preparations containing codeine or any derivative of opium unless prescribed by a doctor. This should be a Federal statute. (Too many addicts get cough preparations containing codeine and consume twenty-five 4-ounce bottles daily.)

(2) Make illegal any barbiturates, hypnotics, stimulants, without the prescription of a doctor. This, too, should fall under Federal statute. (There is a tremendous illicit market of this in our country.)

(3) Unannounced physical examinations of all elementary, high school, and college students in September, January, and June of each year to check for early addiction by inspecting various sites such as arms, nose, and fingers.

(4) Increased punishment of a minimum of 30 years imprisonment for the professional nonaddict pusher. At the time of apprehension, photographs of pushers' arms and legs should be taken, urine and blood tests for opiates and confinement to a hospital for observation of withdrawal and subsequent blood and urine analyses. Too many times these individuals get out of their sentencing because of the little awareness of the marked ramifications of the impact of drug addiction in our country. A mandatory sentence of 30 years is a good punitive approach to these people with no parole.

(5) Levy a fine against the mode of transportation (ships, planes) in which the narcotics came, as well as a fine against unions who vouch for said individual. This would further more thorough screening of all personnel by employers and unions.

(6) Impose economic sanctions on countries to whom we give foreign aid and who in turn then send us illicit exports of heroin. They would then make an attempt to maintain better narcotics traffic control.

(7) Inspection of all personnel, commercial, and armed services, coming in and out of our country for possible heroin addiction. It has come to my attention many of our GI's returning from the Orient have been able to get illicit supplies from Korea, Japan, Hong Kong, Morocco, France, Italy, and Greece. This is disturbing to me since it could prove a tremendous black market to ship to the United States.

(8) Legislation to the effect that all diplomatic personnel have baggage inspection by dual inspectors, country of his origin or his embassy plus our customs officers.

(9) Compulsory hospitalization of drug addicts. If we go on the premise that is acceptable now, that drug addicts are sick, we should carry this logic to its successful conclusion. Too many drug addicts go into a hospital and after 3 or 4 days there decide they don't want it and they sign out. I feel since they are sick we should not allow them to perpetuate their illness and should keep them in a hospital. We might send them to another narcotic hospital, but they require hospitalization because they contaminate a community and get new devotees.

(10) Development of a new type of doctor who would have the authority, like a parole officer when a drug addict has violated parole, to send him back to the hospital for further treatment. A drug addict gets better results if he knows that if he goes astray certain restraints will be put on him. This will prevent so many addicts from thinking they can go back on drugs and get away with it because "I'm a sick personality."

(11) Compulsory probationary period of 5 years. The addict would be seen weekly with periodic checks. If relapse occurs during this time, patient would be remanded to the hospital, staying there for the amount of time depending upon the length of time he had been off drugs to be subtracted from the total probationary period. This would not be a prison and not a punitive measure but a reinforcement of a way of living that drugs are not the answer to one's problems. The time would be directed toward profound therapy and reassurance.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1239

Gentlemen, we all realize how vast the problem of addiction is with its multitudinous ramifications. We need the help of all avenues, but one avenue we do not want is that where we will give drugs to the addicts.

Let us perpetuate the eradication of illicit supplies into this country, inspire those who are interested in this field, encompass new legislation which will bring this problem under control. This can come about only through leadership of dynamic, knowledgeable people.

Thank you.

Senator JACKSON. Mr. Wood?

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you are about to give before this subcommittee shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Wood. I do.

TESTIMONY OF ROLAND W. WOOD

Senator JACKSON. Mr. Wood, will you give your address?

Mr. Wood. My name is Roland W. Wood. I am superintendent of the California Rehabilitation Center, a part of the Department of Corrections of the State of California.

Senator JACKSON. Located where?

Mr. Wood. At Corona, Calif.

Senator JACKSON. You have a statement, do you?

Mr. Wood. Yes, sir; I have a statement and I would like to have the statement included as a part of the record.

Senator JACKSON. And the statement, to the best of your ability, is true?

Mr. Wood. Yes, sir.

Senator JACKSON. It will be included at this point in the record.

Are there any exhibits or other pertinent data?

Mr. Wood. They are attached to the statement.

Senator JACKSON. Those will be included at this point in the record.
(The full statement of Mr. Wood follows:)

STATEMENT OF ROLAND W. WOOD

It is a personal pleasure and privilege to appear before you and to discuss the program, problems, plans, and findings of the program for the treatment of the narcotic addict under civil commitment to the California Rehabilitation Center, Corona, Calif. This facility in the Youth and Adult Corrections Agency, State of California, and under the administrative direction of the director of corrections, has been in operation just less than 3 years, having been created by the 1961 legislature and activated on September 15, 1961.

During this period, we have had committed to this civil addict program over 3,300 commitments, 2,831 men and 544 women. Our present (July 20, 1964), population at the center is 1,365 men and 227 women, and a felon work crew of 132 men who are engaged in the physical rehabilitation of the former surplus naval hospital buildings and grounds which was acquired for the permanent facility for the center on March 30, 1963.

It is my firm belief that in this 3-year period we have demonstrated that:

The addict can be successfully treated in nonpunitive setting; yes, even one which does control his freedom and does not permit him to leave the program when it becomes painful for him to look at himself.

We can return individuals for additional treatment where relapse into narcotic use has occurred but prior to serious readdiction or criminal activity.

We can successfully control the addict to prevent the spread of addiction by the contagious effect of the addiction process.

We recognize that a great deal must be learned about the addict through research; what makes him "tick," how can we best help him to help himself, and how can we best work with the families and dependents of the addicts.

1240 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The return to the community under close and careful supervision is an integral step in the treatment process; when carefully supervised by competent, trained, and experienced agents coupled with antinarcotic testing, the individual can readjust to society and live drug free in the community.

Effort to treat the problem of addiction on a purely voluntary basis is not considered too successful treatment of the addict nor protection of society.

Perhaps, though, I am summarizing too quickly the results of our experience and you would appreciate a more detailed discussion concerning California's approach to the narcotic problem. Let me, therefore, discuss the various aspects of the program with you.

A great deal of concern was expressed, particularly in southern California, during the early part of 1961 about the increasing incidence of narcotic use, the need for stiffer penalties for users and sellers of narcotics, and the pressing need to provide a treatment program for those addicted. This new and research-based effort to control addiction was activated September 15, 1961. It provided for a program of civil commitments of addicts as recommended by Gov. Edmund G. Brown to the 1961 legislature.

CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE ESTABLISHES CIVIL ADDICT PROGRAM

The legislation as finally enacted drew on experience in the NTCP and provided—

1. A civil commitment for treatment.
2. The California Rehabilitation Center.
3. A mandatory aftercare program, including reduced caseloads, antinarcotic testing to determine narcotics use, and authorization for a halfway house.
4. A mandate for research into the rehabilitation of narcotic addicts.¹

The program was made compulsory and a long period of legal control was provided for therapeutic reasons and after carefully evaluating experience here and elsewhere. Without a legal, enforceable commitment, a very large percentage of addicts will not undertake treatment. Given the opportunity, an extremely high percentage of addicts will leave treatment before this is medically indicated.

Without legal, enforceable commitment, there is no way postinstitutional treatment can be insured. The lack of such treatment has been widely blamed for the high rate of failure in other efforts to control and treat addiction.

The commitment proceedings are essentially those employed for the commitment of the mentally ill.

Once the person is committed, he is committed for a definite period even though he may have actually volunteered himself for treatment. The law now provides for a 2½-year commitment for volunteers, and a 7-year commitment for those committed following a misdemeanor or felony conviction.

The first 6 months, however, must be spent as an inpatient. The former addict may then be placed in outpatient status. If he abstains from the use of narcotics for 3 consecutive years, he is discharged from his commitment and the criminal charges against him, if any, may be dropped.

The law provides return to inpatient status upon detection of narcotic use. It also provides that if the person is ineligible for discharge from the program, he shall be returned to court for imposition of the original sentence or, perhaps, for recommitment to the program. A graphic presentation of this is presented in the attached chart.

THE PROGRAM BEGINS

When the addict is committed, he is received directly at the rehabilitation center and immediately assigned to a group of 60 residents where he will remain until he is returned to the community. Females are received in a separately fenced area of the center. Programing for the women residents is identical but it is completely separate and apart from the men's programing.

The initial diagnosis is undertaken by the psychologists and counselors who will continue to work with the residents. A variety of tests are administered, including IQ, educational achievement, vocational aptitude, and personality tests. The addict's social and criminal history is compiled. The counseling staff makes a special effort to develop his narcotic history. From this the staff develops a recommended treatment program.

¹ Ch. IV, title 7, pt. 3, California Penal Code, amended 1963.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1241

The program for the nonfelon addicts is based on a continuous effort on both an in- and out-patient basis by trained staff to provide enough control to avoid damage either to the patient or society, but also leave opportunity for growth. The emphasis within the institution is upon the group or community living. This includes an effort to involve as much staff as possible as part of this community.

The living units, composed of 60 men, are the basic treatment groups. Transfer between units, is discouraged. Individuals function and learn to live in their own unit—facing and working out problems as they occur. Large group meetings are held daily, 5 days per week and include all residents plus staff. This is patterned after the techniques found successful by Drs. Maxwell Jones and Harry Wilmer and discussed more in detail in their writings on the therapeutic community as it was applied to patients in mental hospitals.²

These large groups begin by discussing everyday problems of living in an institution. Gradually, the groups begin to consider such things as pilfering, informing, and other problems which might exist in the unit. They also eventually consider relationships with friends and family on the outside, and often come to grips with feelings about themselves and others. The large daily meeting is followed by a smaller meeting of staff to evaluate what happened and provide feedback to the next large group meeting. Two or three times a week, in addition to the daily large group meeting, the 60-man group breaks into four 15-man group sessions for an hour of more intensive group work.

For some residents the second half of the day is devoted to what might generally be classed as work therapy.

Others are assigned to school or to vocational training. There is a full academic program through the elementary and high school level.

The institutional treatment is only the first phase. The test comes in the community and only in the community. I should emphasize that we are not expecting to "cure" the addict. We are looking for signs that he has gained sufficient control of himself that he is worthy of an opportunity to test the strengths that he has gained. We will never know if he is not given the opportunity to test himself and certainly our experience has shown that excessive time in confinement does not bring about this desirable change.

CHARACTERISTICS OF CALIFORNIA REHABILITATION CENTER ADMISSION IN 1963—MALE

1. A young group.—A median age of 26 establishes the California Rehabilitation Center residents as being about 4 years younger than felony offenders committed to California correctional institutions. Those under 21 account for 12.4 percent of those received.

2. Intelligent.—The measured intelligence of the California Rehabilitation Center residents is on the whole, slightly above that of the general population with most falling in the "normal" and "high average" categories.

3. Need education.—Over 50 percent of the population measures below the 8th-grade level. Twenty-three percent have a grade placement of 9.5 or better.

4. Marihuana and drugs—Then opiates.—Between the ages of 16 to 18 a large majority of the California Rehabilitation Center commitments experimented with marihuana and dangerous drugs. The use of opiates, especially heroin, occurred at about 20 years of age.

5. Not necessarily delinquent prior to drug use.—One-half of the California Rehabilitation Center group had no indication of an arrest prior to their first experimentation with drugs; 98 percent had no prior prison commitment before first drug use.

6. Mostly felony convictions.—Sixty-seven percent of the admissions to the California Rehabilitation Center were committed following conviction on felony charges; 22 percent following conviction on misdemeanor charges; and 11 percent were committed without criminal charge; 82 percent had no prior prison commitments.

7. Narcotic convictions predominate.—Seventy-one percent of the California Rehabilitation Center commitments followed conviction on a narcotic offense; 18 percent were convicted of crimes against property or persons; 11 percent had no criminal charge.

² Jones, Maxwell, "The Therapeutic Community," a new treatment method in psychiatry, Basic Books, New York, 1953 (53-7402). Wilmer, Harry A., "Social Psychiatry in Action," a therapeutic community, Thomas, Illinois, 1958 (58-8436).

1242 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

8. Most commitments from Los Angeles County.—Over 65 percent of the California Rehabilitation Center commitments were from Los Angeles County. Eighty-six percent were from southern California.

9. Basically a California problem.—More than one-half of the California Rehabilitation Center residents were born in California and 87 percent have lived in California 10 years or more.

CHARACTERISTICS OF CALIFORNIA REHABILITATION CENTER ADMISSION
IN 1963—FEMALE

Data on California Rehabilitation Center female residents is still being compiled and analyzed. There is some evidence that there are somewhat fewer felony convictions preceding commitment and a somewhat larger number of voluntary commitments for the women as contrasted with the men. Also, the women are slightly older than the men with a median age of 28. They do differ significantly with respect to ethnic background with the largest group composed of the Caucasian white as compared to the males where those of Mexican-American ancestry predominate.

CASEWORK CONTINUES IN THE COMMUNITY

The field (community) staff becomes involved with the resident soon after his commitment. The caseworker contributes an extensive review of the resident's home environment, family feelings and attitudes, work record and prospects to the case history while the initial summary is being compiled. The caseworker may at this time make his first contact with the resident. When the institution staff feels the resident is ready to leave, the caseworker to whom he will be assigned in the field contacts him. Together they work out release plans and begin to build a constructive relationship.

The caseworker is specially trained to work with addicts and his caseload of 30 are all addicts. The troop work with addicts continues while the former resident is on outpatient status in the community. Each caseworker meets weekly with his caseload as a group. Counseling attendance is regarded as particularly important for those who are unemployed. Use is also made of the parole and community services division's outpatient psychiatric clinics where indicated.

The caseworker meets individually with each releasee weekly at his home or at his job. He also contacts others in a position to evaluate the progress being made—his family, his employer, the police.

In addition, each outpatient is chemically tested five times a month for at least the first 6 months. Four of these "nalline" tests are given on a regular basis and one is a surprise test. If all the indications are good, this test schedule may be cut to two surprise tests a month after the first 6 months.

Test failure or other indication of relapse to narcotic use results in return to inpatient status. We have recently added the use of urinalysis in the testing procedure and our research is continuing to determine the best possible methods of early detection of reuse. On the other hand, many of our returnees are returned, not because they were using narcotics, but because they started drinking heavily or because they failed to maintain adequate employment or violated other conditions of their release. We look at some beginning delinquent behavior as a danger sign and we bring him right back. The point is that a man's return to the center is not failure. When a man goes out of the hospital after a pneumonia case, the doctor keeps his eyes open. If he sees a sign of relapse coming, he gets him back to the hospital. That is what we are doing. A doctor never really considers a tubercular patient cured. When they release them after hospitalization, they keep checking back, usually every 3 months, then every 6 months and then every year. It is the same kind of control that we think we are dealing with, in terms of the addict, and consequently a person who relapses is not seen as any more of a failure than a person who has to have further treatment for a tubercular condition.

Some of those who have returned have gone out convinced they "had it made." They encountered unexpected problems and reverted to narcotics use.

On return, instead of the bitterness and blaming of others that might be expected, counselors found an attitude of new appreciation of their problems and a new determination to lick them.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1243

WHAT HAS BEEN OUR EXPERIENCE WITH THE ADDICT WHEN RELEASED?

So far, far too few residents have been returned to the community to afford any measure of the program's effect. Needless to say, those released also have been the better prospects. And most of them have not been out very long. But we do have some positive indications that the program is working and are encouraged at this point that we can make headway in returning men and women to the community where they can live responsible drug-free lives.

Since the beginning of the program in September 1961, there have been over 3,300 men and women committed. As of July 20, 1964, there were 1,365 males and 227 females in the center. By June 1, 1964, 914 men and 306 women have been released to outpatient status in the community. Of those released to outpatient status 326 men and 110 women have been returned to the center for additional treatment. It is quite significant that of those males returned to the center only 6.7 percent were convicted of a new charge, while 93.3 percent were returned on the original commitment. With respect to the women, only 2.7 percent were returned with new charges. While it is too early to make any predictions based upon these small numbers, the results are encouraging when it is recognized that some of the women have been out since June 1962, and some of the men since July 1962.

We do have preliminary studies on those released from the California Rehabilitation Center on outpatient status and although they do involve only a small number to report major findings, some preliminary facts are available.

A report on the first releases during 1962 and covering 6 months of experience in the community, a total of 108 addicts, 52 men and 56 women, indicates that only 2 men have been convicted of a felony offense; that about half the men and women remained in the community with no evidence of drug use. That of the group returned to the California Rehabilitation Center, Corona, for further inpatient care, a little less than one-half of them were charged with opiate use and the remaining returnees were split 50-50 between no drug use and use of marijuana and dangerous drugs.

We as staff and society must learn to recognize that a return to the center for an additional period of treatment, perhaps once, twice, or three or more times should not be looked upon as failure. We must continue to offer the addict intensive, probing programs of counseling, psychotherapy, and psychiatry. And our programs should not and do not stop when he leaves the center. We must continue to supervise, help, yes, even control the addict in the community; we must provide enough aid to bolster him over periods when society again, as it will, appears about to overwhelm him.

And when the addict has begun the reuse of narcotics we must promptly return him for further treatment aimed at making him fit for another opportunity back in the community. As Mr. Richard A. McGee, administrator, Youth and Adult Corrections Agency, has aptly put it:

"If society naively expects today's techniques to turn off addiction with a flick of a needle or a single dose of treatment, society is due for disillusionment. Society has to learn that an addict's problems are so varied and so deeply seated that repeated treatment may be necessary before he ultimately is free of his addiction."

NEED FOR AGGRESSIVE RESEARCH

Although there has been a great deal of interest and concern in research about addicting drugs, little is still known about the addict himself and we are prepared to undertake research along these lines. At the California Rehabilitation Center we have the unique advantage of having a specific mandate in the law for research. We are beginning to make some gains with the recent appointment of Edmund C. Gaulden, M.D., as chief of research, a man well qualified in medicine as well as research.

We see the need for well-structured research in the medical, physiological, psychiatric, psychological, and sociological aspects of narcotics addiction. Some of the questions we are prepared to ask ourselves sound like this:

1. Is there a specific physiological process which develops in narcotics addiction and is this process subject to control?
2. What is the nature of addiction, independent of the addicting agent?
3. Is there an addiction-prone personality and, if so, what are its dimensions?
4. What are the sociological factors in addiction; why do some social groups tend to have a higher addiction rate than others?
5. What is the relationship between narcotics addiction and various forms of social maladjustment generally described as criminal?

1244 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

6. What happens as a result of our community group approach?

What is the nature of the process itself and what are its outcomes?

These and many other questions need answers before we can hope to "cure" narcotics addiction. An important part of our task at the California Rehabilitation Center is to start answering some of these questions and to exploit the interest of others in an attempt to answer them. Our research budget, as such, is not tremendous, and we are going to have to rely on the interest of the major universities, the National Institutes of Health, and the large research foundations to undertake much of the needed research. Our grant applications are now being reviewed by NIMH.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR FEDERAL ASSISTANCE OF NEEDED LEGISLATION

I have been asked to comment regarding the needs which I see concerning changes in legislation or Federal assistance needed. I am cognizant of the fact that I must limit my remarks to those related to the control and treatment of the addict rather than to the enforcement of the narcotic laws and its many ramifications of which I am not competent to speak. Law enforcement in its many subdivisions has been and must continue to carry out another very important phase of the control program for addicts. Efforts need to continue to control major suppliers of drugs coming into the United States and the Federal Government plays an important role in this aspect. There are other areas, however, that I should like to comment on quite briefly.

1. Treatment centers should be developed with a nonpunitive atmosphere where the individual is under treatment and he is not permitted to leave at will, but must remain until such time as it can be reasonably assured that he will not immediately return to drug use.

Certainly our experience has shown us that for the most part, men and women will not volunteer for treatment if they are free to leave as soon as the initial discomfort of withdrawal has passed. In the California Rehabilitation Center program, one may volunteer, but after entry into treatment it is no longer voluntary. At the present time about 5 percent of the population are voluntary commitments. Treatment should be something more than an opportunity to reduce one's habit and then immediately be free to go back and pursue a course which leads to more severe addiction and criminal activity to support the habit.

2. Supportive supervision upon return to the community with return to the center for additional treatment if reuse of drugs is begun should be an integral part of the process.

There is no easy solution to the problem of narcotic addiction and as I have previously mentioned, we cannot expect that an individual with evidence of serious maladjustment may be able to refrain from reuse when he again faces the pressures in the community after a short period of confinement and treatment. Like the alcoholic—and there are many similarities—he may relapse a number of times before he can become a useful citizen, husband, and father.

3. Modify the Federal statutes to permit a civil commitment procedure for addicts and eliminate the mandatory sentences.

It is impossible, or at least unlikely, to combine a punitive and treatment program in the same kind of treatment climate. Staff and those confined respond to the atmosphere created. California Rehabilitation Center is not a hospital nor is it a traditional prison; men and women are in a controlled drug-free environment but in an atmosphere which is conducive to change in previous behavior patterns. An opportunity is afforded for him to look at himself, to examine attitudes, beliefs, feelings, and to be prepared to learn from mistakes so that ultimately he can make wise decisions about himself.

There have been a number of both men and women who have been committed to the California Rehabilitation Center who were under Federal commitment. Had it not been for the legal status requiring excessive mandatory terms, these individuals could have been assisted and released to the community under supervision. The research that has been conducted concerning the length of term indicates there is little relationship to lengthy sentences and the possibility of successful adjustment in the community.

The experience gained thus far with the stiffer penalty imposed by the changes in the laws in 1961 indicates the district attorneys and judges are most reluctant to see 10- and 15-year minimums imposed and there is a tendency to accept alternate dispositions.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1245

Without going into extensive discussion here, the merits of the indeterminate sentence with the judgment of the suitability for return to the community left to the judgment of a competent releasing authority far outweighs the sought-for protection to society that is hoped for with mandatory fixed sentences. Readiness for return to society must be based upon changes that have been made in the individual rather than merely the expiration of a stated period of time.

4. A comprehensive plan of research should be developed covering all aspects of narcotic and drug abuse. Some agency such as the National Institute of Mental Health should be provided with the necessary funds and the authorization to assist governmental agencies, universities, and competent researchers in a continuing, systematic evaluation of treatment programs, to seek out better treatment techniques, more scientific detection programs, and new ways of ending the traffic in narcotics. There is nothing small about the narcotics problem. No half-hearted program will solve it. The modest amounts that are included in the present State budget will cover only the barest of essentials. There is a vast warehouse of knowledge available if funds can be appropriated for this purpose.

It boils down to this: Do we want to spend the funds for research and seek solutions or do we want to continue to pay the price in human suffering, crime, and programs of detention?

5. Increased programs of prevention aimed at the community where sources of infection are prevalent. Provide the public and professionals involved with accurate and factual knowledge on narcotic and drug abuse to combat the misinformation that is often prevalent. Perhaps here again funds could be made available to NIMH to assist State, local, and private nonprofit agencies for demonstration projects looking exclusively to the development of informational and educational materials.

CONCLUSIONS

Controlling narcotics addicts is possible and a reasonably good job is being done in California with this phase of the problem. A description of the elements of the control and treatment program in the California Department of Corrections and the California Rehabilitation Center as well as the legal basis for the program has been given.

Much is being said today about control of narcotics addicts, but little with any finality about cures. Experience within the department of corrections in handling narcotics addicts has supplied no cures, but has not been completely negative.

The department of corrections, in the regular facilities of the department and in the California Rehabilitation Center, has thousands of narcotics addicts in its care. They must be handled now in the "best way possible" within the limitations of budget, physical facilities, and staff skills. Addicts who end up in prison and in the center have embraced a way of life which is largely foreign to you and me. In some cases, they may be escaping a situation they can no longer accept; in others, they may be seeking acceptance and companionship in the only place and circumstances where it is available.

When mixed with other prisoners, addicts are generally looked down upon in the prison community. If allowed to meet together without proper leadership, they tend to discuss in great detail and relive their narcotics experiences on the outside. The "best way possible" to work with the addict in a controlled situation is first, to insure a drug-free environment; second, to provide some structured experiences that utilize and capitalize upon his interests as soon as they become evident so that he begins to find new and hopeful directions to life.

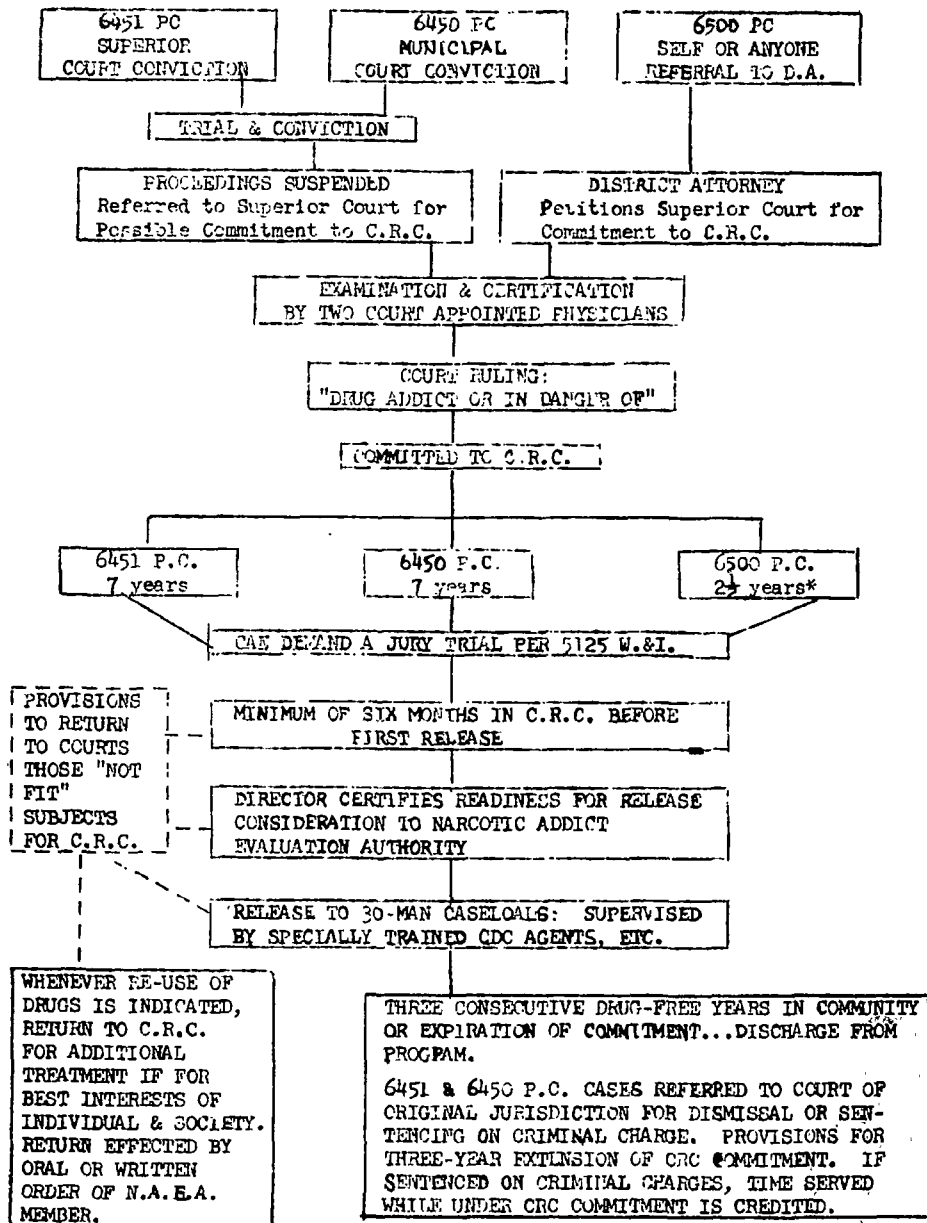

Somewhere along this trial is the honest encounter with himself, the desire and effort to hold a job, the discovery of some concern and feelings for others, and the thousand and one other characteristics which develop self-respect and make life worth living.

In effect then, the California program is specifically designed to—

1. Get the addict off the street. Reduce their chances of contaminating other men and women with the same infection. Dries up the market for heroin peddlers.
2. Provides treatment for addicts.
3. Controls them when released to the community through intensive supervision and testing for drug use.
4. Returns them to the center for retreatment if they cannot adjust to the community.
5. Provides protection for society.

1246 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

CALIFORNIA REHABILITATION CENTER - CIVIL ADDICT PROGRAM

LEGAL PROCESS

*Commitment is 2½ years for those who volunteer themselves for commitment;
7 years for those committed under this section upon the initiative of others.

Senator JACKSON. Thank you very much, Mr. Wood.

Mr. Milton Rector.

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you are about to give before this subcommittee shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1247

TESTIMONY OF MILTON G. RECTOR

Dr. RECTOR. I do.

Senator JACKSON. State your name and official capacity.

Dr. RECTOR. Milton G. Rector, executive director of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency.

Senator JACKSON. Where is that located?

Dr. RECTOR. 44 East 23d Street, New York City.

Senator JACKSON. And you have a statement for the committee?

Dr. RECTOR. I have, sir.

Senator JACKSON. To the best of your ability and knowledge, the statement is true and correct?

Dr. RECTOR. It is; yes.

Senator JACKSON. The statement will be included at this point in the record.

Do you have any other exhibits?

Dr. RECTOR. I have two exhibits, Senator. One is a full report, of which my statement is a summary, and the second is a model sentencing act, which contains a recommended penal code revision, relating to the sentencing of racketeers and those who traffic in narcotics.

Senator JACKSON. The committee will receive those exhibits and will defer until later the appropriate disposition.

Thank you very much.

Dr. RECTOR. Thank you.

(Dr. Rector's statement follows:)

STATEMENT OF DR. MILTON G. RECTOR

The policy statement of the Advisory Council of Judges of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, copies of which have been supplied the Senate subcommittee, would go far toward solving, certainly ameliorating, a serious part of our crime problem—narcotics drug addiction, crimes by addicts, and the business of organized crime in drug addiction. The advisory council of judges, which includes 50 distinguished jurists from Federal and State courts, is an arm of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency that has been providing leadership in judicial administration in juvenile, family, and criminal courts through published guides of which the present report is the latest. Chairman of the advisory council of judges is Chief Judge Alfred P. Murrah of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit. Chairman of the special study committee which prepared the draft of the narcotics report was the late Judge John W. McIlvaine of the U.S. District Court of Pittsburgh.

Our report reviews the history of administration of the Harrison Act and points up that the regulations as enforced by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics are in conflict with the rulings of the Supreme Court as stated in 1925 in the case of Linder v. United States (268 U.S. 5) and the U.S. court of appeals in 1937 in the case of Hawkins v. United States (90 F. 2d 551). These rulings clearly would allow doctors to treat addicts today, even to administer maintenance doses of drugs if medically indicated. The regulations and enforcement policy of the Bureau have deterred doctors from doing this by providing that they shall be prosecuted for issuing prescriptions for narcotics sufficient to keep an addict or habitual user comfortable by maintaining his customary use. In the post-war period, the extent of addiction has increased, and crimes by addicts are a serious part of our crime problem. Their crimes are committed to sustain their expensive addiction. At present, it is pushers and racketeers who are "treating" addicts rather than the medical profession, which should have the primary responsibility both for treatment of addiction and research to find the ultimate cure and prevention.

Our policy statement supports these points:

1. The narcotic drug addict is a sick person, physically and psychologically, and as such is entitled to qualified medical attention just as are other sick people. We do not advocate that addicts be sustained on maintenance doses, but that if

1248 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

in a doctor's opinion such doses are necessary for treatment of the illness, they should be administered for such time as the doctor thinks necessary. As a sick person, the addict should receive whatever medical care he may need, as an outpatient of a clinic or private physician, or, when necessary, in a hospital as any private citizen might obtain admission to a hospital for a serious illness. Sick persons do not need criminal or civil process for medical care to be available to them. We, therefore, question the need for a civil commitment procedure and for hospitals specially built to confine and to treat addicts.

Civil commitment of addicts is supported by advocates of special hospitals or institutions. Such an approach seems to envision little more than the institutionalization of all drugs addicts under an illusory pretense of noncriminal procedure, noncriminal in phraseology only, and at a time when experience with special institutions for addicts have proved unsuccessful. At a time when the most promising research and experimentation with the mentally ill, and even with the criminal offender, points up the need for more treatment resources at the community level and less institutional confinement, we suggest that more funds be directed to strengthen community and medical treatment resources and research and less for institutionalization of the addict.

2. The traffic in narcotic drugs is properly controlled by legislation and effective penal sanctions. Since the illegal handling of narcotic drugs today is a big business of organized crime, State and Federal law enforcement efforts should concentrate on reaching the criminals at the upper administrative level. The addict should be directed to medical help and should not be criminally prosecuted unless, of course, he has committed a crime, the nature of which requires that his addiction be considered a secondary matter. We commend to the attention of legislative bodies the Model Sentencing Act which categorizes racketeers who traffic in narcotics as dangerous offenders who should be subject to prison terms of up to 30 years.

3. In recent years the penalties for narcotics crimes have become more and more severe, the theory of the legislation evidently being that the greater the penalty, the greater deterrence. The result in practice has been to glut the penal institutions with small-fry pushers and addicts serving long terms, without any deterrent effect on the racket, but with deteriorating effect on the prisoners and the correctional institutions. We oppose mandatory terms in narcotics cases, and the exclusion of narcotics offenders from eligibility for probation or parole. The U.S. Bureau of Prisoners has reported that narcotics violators made up 15 percent of the Federal prison population in 1960, as compared with 4.3 percent in 1946 as a direct result of longer sentences and mandatory minimum sentences without parole.

A research project in New York with the parole of criminal offenders who were addicts proves that parole can be helpful. Almost without exception, those who have experimented with institutional treatment of addicts have the need for more aftercare (parole) assistance after return to the community. For the criminal offender who is primarily an addict and secondarily a criminal, probation supervision would be more promising than institutionalization if medical treatment were available.

The National Council on Crime and Delinquency, and our Advisory Council of Judges, will welcome opportunities to cooperate with judicial, bar, and medical groups whose programs are substantially in accord with our policy statement and will encourage studies of the methods used here and abroad in the treatment of drug addicts in correctional institutions, in hospitals, and in the community. We hope to achieve:

(1) A change in the regulations of the Narcotics Bureau to support the community treatment of addiction as an illness; (2) the setting up by doctors and medical groups of treatment centers, including clinics, and the freedom of individual doctors to treat addicts.

(Booklets submitted by Dr. Rector entitled "Narcotics Law Violation (A Policy Statement)" and Model Sentencing Act" published by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency may be found in the files of the subcommittee.)

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1249

INTERROGATORY OF DR. MILTON RECTOR

A staff interrogation of Dr. Milton Rector, director, Advisory Council of Judges of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, was held at 12:37 p.m., in room 101, Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C.

Staff members present: Jerome S. Adlerman, general counsel; and Eugene J. Marshall, consultant to the subcommittee.

Also present: Charles J. Reynolds, a shorthand reporter from Alderson Reporting Co.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This will be the interrogatory of Milton G. Rector, being conducted in accordance with the statements of Senator Jackson, acting chairman of the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations.

Dr. Rector is executive director of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency.

How many judges are in the National Council of Crime and Delinquency?

Dr. RECTOR. The membership list contains approximately 50. They have a provision requiring a maximum of 50.

Mr. ADLERMAN. By whom was the report of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency drawn?

Dr. RECTOR. The report was drawn by a committee of the criminal court section, which was chaired by the late Judge McIlvaine, U.S. district court judge from Pittsburgh. That was with the staff service of the national council's legal counsel, Sol Rubin.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And I presume the report was written by Mr. Rubin?

Dr. RECTOR. Technically, I guess it is.

Mr. ADLERMAN. With the consultation of some of the judges?

Dr. RECTOR. Well, the entire report is reviewed in rough draft by all of the judges, whose comments are then considered by the committee and then Mr. Rubin redrafts in accordance with their consensus, agreements, and so on.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do any of the judges disagree with your interpretation of the problem and the opinion that the Bureau of Narcotics regulations concerning the treatment of medical addicts by doctors is in contravention of the Linden decision?

Dr. RECTOR. This question could probably best go to Mr. Rubin, who will be glad to pull the file. I am not acquainted with the correspondence.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I mention this only because Judge William F. Smith has indicated a disapproval of the findings contained in the report and has requested permission to submit a statement.

Dr. RECTOR. I hope Judge Smith will be given an opportunity to submit such a statement. To my knowledge, Judge Smith did, at the time of the circulation of a rough draft of the report by the committee, submit a letter in which he—I can't say it was critical or took issue, but I do remember seeing a somewhat lengthy letter.

To my knowledge, I can't say whether his objections were dealt with in the final report to his satisfaction. I have seen no letter from Judge Smith since the report was published stating his disagreement. I am not sure whether such a letter has gone to Chief Judge Mura, the chairman of the council.

1250 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

I am sure Sol Rubin would also be glad to submit copies of correspondence to this effect, if we did receive any.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I noticed that you state on the bottom of page 1 of your prepared statement that the regulations and the policy of the Bureau of Narcotics have deterred doctors from furnishing narcotics sufficient to keep an addict comfortable by maintaining their customary use. Is that a fair statement?

Dr. RECTOR. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. A few lines later you say:

We do not advocate that addicts be sustained on maintenance doses.

Can you tell me, if that is so, where does your stand differ from that of the law enforcement agencies, such as the Bureau of Narcotics?

Dr. RECTOR. There is a fine line of distinction, I think, between the advocates of longtime sustaining of addicts on maintenance doses as though the maintenance, itself, would accomplish the purpose. As I interpret the statement of our council of judges, they recommend maintenance doses only as a part of treatment for such period as the doctor, himself, deems necessary. It might be a short term or a long term.

I think the statement here is to indicate that we are not saying that long-term maintenance doses of addicts is the panacea.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think this report of yours has led to a great deal of misconception. For example, I speak of the newspaper editorials. Even today, if I am not mistaken, the Saturday Evening Post had an article by Nathan Strauss. Are you familiar with it?

Dr. RECTOR. There is a Dr. Strauss whose name I am familiar with. I haven't seen the article.

Mr. MARSHALL. This is not Dr. Strauss.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Mr. Strauss states in the article in Saturday Evening Post, that he advocates giving free medication to the addict, and thus taking away the motive of profit in peddling narcotics and doing away with the racket of narcotics.

I think this was similar to your report, and I think the tenor of the report of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency was that they advocated maintenance of the addict by doctors, giving the drug by prescription, and so on. Am I mistaken about that?

Dr. RECTOR. They do advocate that doctors be permitted to give drugs by prescription.

Mr. ADLERMAN. On a general maintenance basis, to take away the profit from narcotic addiction and so forth?

Dr. RECTOR. I don't believe we have such a statement in our report, that the goal is to sustain over long periods of time. But if a doctor would feel that for a given patient a maintenance dose were an essential part of treatment for—to take any period out of the air—a year, I think the intent of our judges was to support the doctors' opinion.

I think, in other words, the attitude of the judges could be summarized as feeling that the experimentation, research, and treatment into the problem of addiction is a medical problem, and that the doctors should have a free hand in prescribing narcotics as a part of treatment, and that the Linder decision of the Supreme Court supports this.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1251

Mr. ADLERMAN. If I recall correctly, page 14 of your report states:

Meanwhile, extending medical care to addicts and administering drugs as necessary would deprive organized crime of a constantly increasing percentage of its customers and would weaken the foundation of narcotics syndicates which came into existence only after the drug addict was criminalized.

That would indicate to me that you feel that the treatment should be widespread and that supplying of the drugs would be applicable to all the addicts. I think in many ways you also advocate the so-called British system, where drugs are given to addicts by the doctors on a maintenance basis.

Dr. RECTOR. I would say that is a fair interpretation.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So, in effect, you do advocate the ambulatory treatment of addicts by doctors, and this would go for all addicts, I assume?

Dr. RECTOR. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Thus taking away the profit motive from the narcotic peddler.

Dr. RECTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you familiar with the stand taken by the American Medical Association, their committee on addiction as to the ambulatory treatment by doctors?

Dr. RECTOR. I am not personally familiar with it; no, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Let me call to your attention that in 1963, June 1963, the American Medical Association and National Research Council say:

The ambulatory clinic programs for withdrawal of narcotic addicts are generally inadequate and medically unsound, and the maintenance of stable dosage levels is generally inadequate and medically unsound.

Would you care to comment on that?

Dr. RECTOR. No, I wouldn't.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you feel that the judges should substitute their legal opinions on these things, or their medical opinions, in place of those of the trained physicians and of an organization such as the American Medical Association?

Dr. RECTOR. No, I do not believe the judges intended to substitute their opinion for medical opinion. I think the intent of the judges is to support the medical profession. My guess is that you will find opposition within the medical profession.

Mr. ADLERMAN. For example, would you rely on Dr. Kolb's answer to this?

Dr. RECTOR. I am not able to—

Mr. ADLERMAN. Dr. Kolb has taken the position that he does not advocate ambulatory treatment on a general level for all addicts on an out-patient basis by physicians. I realize you are not a physician and neither am I.

Dr. RECTOR. No, I am not.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would like to ask you: Have you given any consideration to the question of tolerance of drugs, particularly of the narcotic drugs, by addicts? Are you familiar with it?

Dr. RECTOR. I am not. I am not an expert on addiction of any kind.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you know whether any consideration was given to this, to the question of tolerance, by Mr. Rubin when he wrote the report or by the judges when they approved the report?

1252 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. RECTOR. I don't know whether this was one of the many reports, or this was included in one of the many reports, reviewed by the judges or not. The judges reviewed a great many expressions of opinion in different reports in adopting their position.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The medical testimony we have received tells us that heroin is one of the drugs which builds up a certain tolerance in an addict in a short period of time. After a while the amount of drug that the addict previously got cannot give him the sense of euphoria or the craving that he has, and it has to be taken at an ever-increasing level; whereas, the person who takes a low dose of the drug, in time will build his tolerance up so that some addicts who may start off with a $5 a day habit may develop one costing hundreds of dollars.

Dr. RECTOR. This I understand; yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And I think the testimony yesterday was from one doctor's experience that the tolerance had been built up to 64 grains a day. The street level market for example, in New York, provides about three-twentieths of a grain in a $5 bag.

I wonder if this report took into consideration the problem of requiring ever-increasing dosages of the drug that would have to be given on a maintenance basis?

Dr. RECTOR. Again, this is a supposition, but in fairness to the judges, I think their intent was to focus the responsibility upon the medical profession.

Mr. ADLERMAN. They advocated that the doctors be allowed to do this?

Dr. RECTOR. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Did they get any medical advice on the writing of this report?

Dr. RECTOR. They read a great number of reports by medical groups and organizations.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Did they get any consultants? Did they consult with any medical authorities on this?

Dr. RECTOR. This I can't tell you.

I infer from your questions that the medical testimony that you are receiving does not support ambulatory treatment.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is the position taken by the National Research Council and the American Medical Association both. They have both condemned or criticized this. They say it is not good medical practice.

Dr. RECTOR. May I ask if that is with reference to all narcotics or just heroin?

Mr. ADLERMAN. I am not too sure, but I think it talks about general narcotics meaning the opiates. I would like to call to your attention the fact that the American Medical Association said it was not good professional practice for a physician to place drugs in the hands of an addict for self-administration. This is what happened in the Linder case, I believe.

Dr. RECTOR. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Let me ask about the proposition of giving the drugs to the addicts by prescription to remove the profit motive of narcotics from the racketeer. Would this be on stabilized dosages, or would it be on the ever-increasing tolerance dosages?

Dr. RECTOR. I couldn't answer your question.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1253

Mr. ADLERMAN. Have you considered at all the mechanical problems that would be involved? I think Dr. Hess, the assistant commissioner of health in New York City, pointed out that in New York City, with the estimated 30,000 addicts to be placed on a maintenance basis, even if it is a stabilized basis, facilities would be required to give 30,000 shots of heroin a day, if it were only 1 shot a day, and most addicts require anywhere from 3 to 4 shots a day. That would run the mechanical thing up from 30,000 to maybe 120,000 shots a day, unless you would give it to them to apply themselves.

Again, the American Medical Association thinks this is very unsound medical practice.

Dr. RECTOR. What would be their solution?

Mr. ADLERMAN. What would be their solution?

Dr. RECTOR. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I don't know. I am not holding a brief for anyone in this thing.

Dr. RECTOR. I know that. The reason I asked the question is the alternative——

Mr. ADLERMAN. I wonder whether or not civil commitment isn't the best answer.

Dr. RECTOR. The alternative proposal I have heard for New York, and 30,000, if anyone actually knows there are 30,000 heroin addicts, has been civil commitment to an institution. I think when you consider the mechanics involved in institutionalizing 30,000 addicts, and also seeing that it is more than a pseudocivil procedure, and is in fact not a criminal procedure, that it is a treatment program, it is a tremendous thing.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you familiar with the California operation?

Dr. RECTOR. Vaguely, I am. I was familiar with the turning over of certain correctional institutions and labeling them as narcotic hospitals to receive civil commitments.

Mr. ADLERMAN. From my point of view, that seems to be the most promising proposition so far that I have seen in narcotics treatment. Mr. Roland Wood submitted a statement and statistics.

Dr. RECTOR. It is quite high in success, as I remember.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Very high, but nowhere near the height of the experience in the hospitals in New York, or with the outpatient treatment in New York, or in Lexington or anyplace else. California shows a percentage of relapse of only 50 percent over the period of 2 years that they have been working, which is a much more promising number than most programs show. Most of them show 90 percent relapse.

So if you ask me for the alternative, I think their Corona project and their Chino project both seem to hold great promise.

Dr. RECTOR. I think so. I think another part of it is good parole service and aftercare.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There is no question about that.

Dr. RECTOR. I think that is probably, not being medical experts, where our judges are on sounder ground in criticizing some of the mandatory sentencing provisions, and exclusions from both probation and parole.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you aware, for example, of the FBI statistics which show that 73 percent of the addicts have had prior criminal records before their first convictions as addicts?

1254 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. RECTOR. Seventy-three percent?

Mr. ADLERMAN. Yes. Were the prior criminal tendencies of the addicts taken into consideration the time this report was written?

Dr. RECTOR. Prior to any knowledge of addiction?

Mr. ADLERMAN. Yes.

Dr. RECTOR. I don't know.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I wondered whether the question of tolerance was taken into consideration. Would you know whether they considered the reports of the Council on Mental Health of the American Medical Association and the findings that they made, that drugs supplied by a doctor—

Dr. RECTOR. Again, just by your reference to the title of the report, I would have to get that answered for you, as to whether or not that was one they considered. I don't know.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I will just take this quote:

The degree of tolerance which can be developed into the opiate drug seems almost boundless. Authentic cases have been recorded in which addicts took as much as 78 grains of morphine intravenously in less than 24 hours without incurring any untoward effects. What the final upper limit would be is unknown as are the physical effects of long, continued taking of large amounts of opium.

That is pages 11 and 12 of the report of 1957.

Did you give any consideration in your report to whether or not the drug addict who is on drugs could maintain himself, keep his job, operate a school bus, drive a car, work in a factory where there is machinery around, and so forth? Has any consideration been given to that?

Dr. RECTOR. Again, I couldn't speak for the committee on exactly what it considered. However, I, myself, have discussed with doctors the ability of addicts to maintain themselves on jobs while undergoing treatment.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Isn't that the very rare exception?

Dr. RECTOR. This I don't know.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Wouldn't that be an addict with a high level of intelligence, not the average addict by a long shot?

Dr. RECTOR. This I don't know. How seriously is he addicted, too, would be a matter of consideration, in my guess.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Since you are a spokesman for the organization, I would like to find out what the organization's opinion would be about who should make a determination whether narcotic activities of a physician constitute sound medical practice?

Dr. RECTOR. We would recommend that this be done by the medical profession, as it makes such determinations in other areas of medical practice.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The greater majority of the medical profession is represented by the AMA, which takes the position that ambulatory treatment of narcotics on a maintenance basis is unsound medical practice.

Dr. RECTOR. Then I would bow to the American Medical Association. I understood your question as to who should make such a determination.

Mr. ADLERMAN. If you do bow, if your organization bows to it, doesn't that mean that it vitiates your entire report?

Dr. RECTOR. No, I don't think so.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1255

Mr. ADLERMAN. All right, that phase of the report.

Dr. RECTOR. Not the entire report by any means.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That phase of the report which advocates treatment by the doctors on an ambulatory outpatient maintenance basis.

Dr. RECTOR. The policies adopted by the Council of Judges relating to medical care has as its first statement that the narcotic drug addict is a sick person and, as such, is entitled to qualified medical attention just as are other sick people.

This doesn't get into the technicalities of what is ambulatory care and what is not ambulatory care, and the degrees of tolerance and who could be treated by such degrees of tolerance.

Again, as I say, the intent of the judges is to encourage the medical profession to get headlong into the treatment of addicts, and from the various reports and persons with whom they conferred, their impressions were, and I believe I am being fair to them in this, that doctors had been discouraged from taking the initiative in treatment of addicts by the regulations of the Bureau of Narcotics.

Mr. ADLERMAN. How about the first report? Didn't they say that they thought that there should be an ambulatory treatment? I think you just confirmed that a little while ago: that doctors should feel free to give ambulatory treatment.

Dr. RECTOR. Yes, I said ambulatory treatment, to the degree that an addict should feel free to consult his physician and ask for treatment without requesting commitment to an institution to receive it.

Mr. ADLERMAN. On a maintenance basis.

Dr. RECTOR. I was trying to examine your question as to why the statement of the American Medical Association would discredit the—

Mr. ADLERMAN. Let me ask you this: Are you familiar with the fact that the statement of the AMA and National Research Council sets forth a code for the handling of addicts?

Dr. RECTOR. I am familiar with the fact that it has. I am not familiar with the code or the statement with it.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This code definitely states, for example:

Ambulatory clinic plans for the withdrawal of narcotic addicts are generally inadequate and medically unsound.

In the joint statement:

The maintenance of stable dosage levels is generally inadequate and medically unsound.

As a result of these conclusions, the American Medical Association and the National Research Council oppose on the basis of present knowledge such ambulatory treatment plans.

Dr. RECTOR. Acquaint me with the terms. Is my inference right, then, that they are recommending that any addict must be committed for hospital care?

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think that they advocate that all withdrawal and all treatment of an addict, particularly the withdrawal, should be done under drug-free atmosphere, in an institution.

Mr. MARSHALL. With rehabilitation, aftercare, on an outpatient basis.

Mr. ADLERMAN. With the aftercare treatment; right.

Dr. RECTOR. But that if there is another usage of narcotics during the aftercare, that he be returned to the institution?

Mr. ADLERMAN. What was that, again?

1256 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. RECTOR. That if he again goes on narcotics after release during the period of aftercare, that he be returned to the institution?

Mr. ADLERMAN. They just discuss the question of treatment by doctors. They say that any withdrawal should be done in closed institutions. They generally advocate, I believe, that addicts should be treated in an institutionalized atmosphere, rather than by individual doctors on the outside. They definitely state, however, that when a man is sick, a terminal case of cancer, painful conditions, and so forth, that the doctors are free to prescribe without any hindrance whatsoever the use of narcotics.

They also state that in the interval between the time when a doctor first sees a patient and the time when he is to go to a hospital, a period of a week or 10 days, the doctor can prescribe an opiate to cover the addict for that period of time until he gets to the hospital to withdraw.

Does your organization disagree with those propositions?

Dr. RECTOR. We would have no basis for disagreeing.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I thought when you came to testify that you would be the one who had knowledge of the subject. We asked Mr. Rubin to testify originally. However, he advised us that you would appear; that you would be able to answer all our questions.

Dr. RECTOR. I can't answer any of your questions regarding the various proposals of the medical profession. As director of the organization, I have not been involved in the staff work with the committee to the degree of knowing what reports they considered, who they consulted, and who they didn't.

I do regret that the appearance here couldn't have been delayed. Mr. Rubin, I believe, told your person he would return from vacation next week. He asked if I would appear. I was on vacation at the time your staff called at our office. They communicated with me and I said I would be glad to appear to submit for the record the statement of the judges.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I didn't speak to Mr. Rubin about the appearance before the subcommittee, but as I understood it, it was believed that you as executive director would have better knowledge of the entire situation and would speak with more authority for the advisory council.

Dr. RECTOR. No; I do not staff the advisory council. I deal with the policy matters and so on. But when it gets down to the staff work, what was involved in the work of the committee, in the reports they reviewed and summarized, that is not me.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I was going to ask some more detailed questions about the basis upon which the report was written, but I see that it would be just running up against the same proposition, that you would have no knowledge of it.

Dr. RECTOR. It would. I am embarrassed that I am putting you up to this. But if you would care to do what was suggested earlier and send your questions, I would be glad to see that they were given full attention and full response. We certainly want to cooperate in every way possible.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I don't know how I can arrange that now, about sending interrogatories to Mr. Rubin. Perhaps we might be able to do that and perhaps I can get the Senator's consent to submit Mr. Rubin's statements into the record. That might be a better way to do it. I will consult him. He should be sworn. He will have to be sworn up there. (See p. 1259.)

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1257

Dr. RECTOR. You can send them to me and I will certainly consult with the staff to see that you got thorough answers, if they came under my signature.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Maybe that would be the best way. I don't like to put you on the spot on this thing.

Dr. RECTOR. I know you are not trying to put me on the spot at all. You are asking me questions about the committee work which I really am not in a position to answer.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I realize you don't know the answers to the questions that I wanted to know. There is no use in my asking continuous questions and having you say, "I don't know." I realize it is embarrassing.

Dr. RECTOR. It is that, and I am certainly not one to try to bluff on what I don't know. I know the judges are a group of very competent persons who spent a period of about 3 years, and they reviewed a great deal of material. They didn't attempt to pretend that they were speaking with the knowledge of the doctor or someone who understood the medical aspects of narcotics.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I will tell you frankly that when I first heard about this plan, I was very much concerned because it sounded like a very plausible argument which had a great deal of merit to it—to take away the profit motive from the heroin peddler and give it to the addict on a prescription basis.

It sounded very attractive. But I think as you get into it deeper and deeper you become less certain as to the merits. I am not trying to prejudge it.

Dr. RECTOR. I understand.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I am only counsel in the thing, but I cannot help forming some opinions on the subject. On the other hand, I am not closing my mind.

Dr. RECTOR. I understand.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There is some part of the statement, which I cannot put my finger on now, that gives the implication that only small-fry pushers and addicts were caught. This is not a medical question. Maybe you can handle it.

Dr. RECTOR. This, I believe, is not to imply that only small-fry pushers, but that in the main those who are being committed to the institutions are the small pushers and users, and few of the top echelon in the rackets.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you realize, or have you had any firsthand knowledge of the fact, that the 20 major conspiracy cases involving more than 200 top-level racketeers which have been developed in recent years were developed by the Bureau of Narcotics? Can you refer the subcommittee to any other law enforcement agency which has equaled the efforts of the Bureau of Narcotics in developing evidence against the organized crime groups?

Dr. RECTOR. From the Federal level, I doubt that we could. The implication is not that the Bureau of Narcotics is not doing its job, by any means. The intent of the judges is that the offenders who, in their impression, make up the majority of those convicted, who are primarily offenders because they are seeking to get funds to feed the habit—

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you talking now on the Federal level or the State level?

1258 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. RECTOR. We are talking about both. We would have to be, because many of the judges in their experience have only been State judges.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think you would have the same thing on the State level and the Federal level. For example, in New York City you have a large narcotic squad, a police department narcotic squad, and you have the same in Chicago and Los Angeles. The breakdown of the jurisdiction generally is that the Federal authorities take the big cases and the interstate cases, and the local police departments take the street peddlers and the possession cases.

I don't know of any State that has a law—I know it is not in the Federal law—that says an addict is a criminal, or that addiction is a crime. I think California tried to state that and it was knocked out.

Dr. RECTOR. Yes; the supreme court knocked it out in California.

Mr. ADLERMAN. But I don't think the Federal law ever stated that addiction was a crime, and so far as I know no other State has said addiction was a crime.

Dr. RECTOR. I was under the impression that they had, but I cannot name them.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There is a possibility in Texas, but I am not too sure.

Dr. RECTOR. I would be glad to have that researched for you, if it would be of any help.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That would be, of course, on a State level, and there really isn't much we can do about it.

Dr. RECTOR. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. On the Federal level, it is not a crime, but possession is a crime. That brings me to the question of mandatory sentences. I gather that the council has taken the position condemning the present system of mandatory sentencing.

Dr. RECTOR. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What do they offer in substitution?

Dr. RECTOR. The substitution is to deal within the present criminal law with the offense which the person committed.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What part of the mandatory sentences do they criticize? Is it the whole statute or is it part of the statute?

Dr. RECTOR. It is the provision of the mandatory minimum.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There is mandatory sentencing for possession and mandatory sentencing for selling and for manufacturing, which are much more severe than possession.

Dr. RECTOR. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do they criticize the mandatory sentencing of large-scale narcotic felons or traders, importers, wholesalers?

Dr. RECTOR. The policy of both the Advisory Council of Judges and, of course, the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, is opposition to any mandatory minimum sentence for any kind of offender. I submitted in evidence this morning a copy of our Model Sentencing Act.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, it is against the general proposition of mandatory sentencing, per se?

Dr. RECTOR. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It isn't that you pick the possession cases out of the others, or anything of the sort?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1259

Dr. RECTOR. No. We would pick certain kinds of possession cases. As you will see in the Model Sentencing Act, again with a great deal of work and consultation, we have tried to arrive at some sound legal definitions of dangerous offenders which, after the conviction for the criminal charge, whatever it might be, then we recommend that the sentence be imposed on a finding of whether the person is or is not a dangerous offender. So a dangerous offender——

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would this apply to all criminal sentencing?

Dr. RECTOR. This would apply to all criminal sentencing.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Whether it is narcotics or otherwise?

Dr. RECTOR. Yes. And we specify with reference to racketeers and those involved in traffic in narcotics, who are involved in various crimes in the rackets, so that they would come into the definition of dangerous. The maximum sentence recommended there is indeterminate at up to 30 years. It is not even a mandatory sentence in that case.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Thank you very much, Mr. Rector.

Is there anything you would like to add?

Dr. RECTOR. No; I can't add anything beyond what is in the report. I hope that the Model Sentencing Act will receive attention by the committee. I know Justice Edwards included that with his reference in his testimony some time ago with reference to organized crime.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Who did?

Dr. RECTOR. Judge Edwards, then police commissioner of Detroit.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was that in our hearings?

Dr. RECTOR. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That was on the Valachi case?

Dr. RECTOR. Following that, in the operations of the Mafia in Detroit, and as a means of dealing with them in the courts.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I don't recall that particular phase. I wonder whether or not he may have testified before the Judiciary Committee. I think they are considering something in that connection.

Dr. RECTOR. It is in one of your sets of hearings, No. 2, I believe.

Mr. ADLERMAN. We have not written a report yet on it. That will really be part of this, too.

(Whereupon, at 1:35 p.m. the staff interrogation of Milton Rector was concluded.)

INTERROGATORY OF SOL RUBIN

A staff interrogation of Sol Rubin was held at 10:30 a.m., Monday, October 5, 1964, in room 9, Federal Court House Building, Foley Square, New York, N.Y.

Staff member present: Jerome S. Adlerman, general counsel.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This will be an interrogatory of Mr. Sol Rubin conducted in accordance with the directive of Senator Jackson, acting chairman of the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations.

Mr. Sol Rubin is counsel to the National Council on Crime and Delinquency and, by extension, counsel to the Advisory Council of Judges.

Mr. Rubin, you are familiar with the intent and purpose of our subcommittee in its investigation into narcotics?

1260 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. RUBIN. That is right; I am.

Mr. ADLERMAN. We wished to examine addiction, treatment, legal remedies, and legislative changes that may be necessary.

Mr. RUBIN. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You also understand that we have interrogated Mr. Milton G. Rector, director of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency on August 5, 1964?

Mr. RUBIN. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And you understand that during discussion of the report or the policy statement on narcotics law violation issued by the Advisory Council of Judges of the National Council of Crime and Delinquency, Mr. Rector recommended that we interrogate you as being a person who is more familiar with the formulation of this policy statement?

Mr. RUBIN. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And you are willing to answer all the questions freely and without hesitation?

Mr. RUBIN. By all means, so far as I can anticipate.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I believe that this report, on this policy statement, is a matter of record with our subcommittee.

There are many aspects of this which are extremely interesting to the subcommittee, expressing viewpoints which we have to respect. At the same time there are some controversial matters included, and there seem to be many different opinions concerning the report.

Although I may ask you some questions which may appear to be controversial, I believe this is necessary in order to clear up some of the facts.

Mr. RUBIN. We are well aware that some of the points we are making are controversial.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I am sure of that. And I also am aware of the letter that you sent to the Commissioner on Narcotics, with a copy addressed to me. I thank you for it. I think it was sent by Mr. Rector.

Mr. RUBIN. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Mr. Rubin, were you responsible primarily for the preparation of the policy statement on narcotics law violations issued by the advisory council?

Mr. RUBIN. I was the principal staff member who worked with the committee and the ACJ; these are the initials of the Advisory Council of Judges.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There are some 50 judges of the various courts in the United States who make up this council. Is that correct?

Mr. RUBIN. The maximum number is 50; it varies from time to time. It is never more than 2 or 3 below 50.

Mr. ADLERMAN. At the time this policy statement was issued, Chief Judge Alfred Murrah, U.S. Court of Appeals of Oklahoma City, Okla., was the chairman.

Mr. RUBIN. Correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you mind if I call the report a policy statement?

Mr. RUBIN. Anything you want.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was this report or policy statement submitted to all of the 50 judges for their consideration and approval?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1261

Mr. RUBIN. Oh, it was submitted to them not only in this form but it was submitted to them in every form in which the previous materials appeared.

For example, originally there was, as you would imagine, a committee report, and then after that there was a draft, and another draft.

Of course, all of these documents went to all the members of the Advisory Council of Judges.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, as I understand it, there were several preliminary drafts that were made before approval was obtained.

Mr. RUBIN. Well, this is not a question of how the before-and-after approval was obtained; this is the way in which we produce all kinds of documents that our Advisory Council of Judges is the author of.

We start with a problem, sometimes this is discussed at an annual meeting rather than informally, a committee is appointed, and the committee renders a report, the report is considered and so on and so forth.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was this report approved by all of the 50 judges?

Mr. RUBIN. Well, yes, except as noted in the report.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And where was it noted in the report?

Mr. RUBIN. For example, there is one limited dissenting view at page 13 where the question called for civil commitment of drug addicts. It is discussed and Judge Sanders has a somewhat different position from that of the report.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is this the only instance where there was a reservation as to approval?

Mr. RUBIN. Yes; with respect to the final report.

In other words, all kinds of discussions and comments were addressed to previous materials that the committee produced. But as to the final report, that is the only one.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I did not hear that.

Mr. RUBIN. As to the final report, Judge Sanders is the only judge who expressed a reservation.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Did any of the judges disagree with the full report itself and advise that it should not be published?

Mr. RUBIN. No.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you know whether William F. Smith strongly objected to its publication in the form in which it was published?

Mr. RUBIN. He did not, very definitely. I would like to make the comment for the record also with respect to this line of questioning.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Yes.

Mr. RUBIN. I think that the nature of the report and the nature of its sponsorship is such that the report speaks for itself in quite simple terms. We do not have newspaper people or outside reporters, although we have visitors at our working meetings.

All of this is an interfamily discussion until a final report is issued.

Judge Smith had comments on an early report, other judges did all kinds of extended verbal discussions that occurred at our annual meetings, and at our lay meetings.

All of these were taken into account and although we are very proud of the process through which we go in producing these documents, it is a peculiar kind of inquiry so far as I can see when it explores the attitude of a letter of Judge Smith, and things of this kind.

1262 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. Of course you must realize that there have been questions raised as to this report, questions about whether or not this report really had the approval of the majority of the judges.

Mr. RUBIN. I hardly think that judges like Murrah, whom you cited, and the other people, eminent and distinguished judges whose names appear here, would ever allow their names to appear unless they were in accord.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was this report signed by each of the 50 judges?

Mr. RUBIN. Actual signature?

Mr. ADLERMAN. Yes.

Mr. RUBIN. No.

Mr. ADLERMAN. How was it finally approved? How did you get the final approval?

Mr. RUBIN. Yes; this was approved in its substance at a working committee meeting taking place at our annual meeting in 1963.

We have an annual meeting.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is this by voice vote or something of that sort?

Mr. RUBIN. This is by voice vote. Now, it so happens that at that session I was not the staff person present, but typically this may be a formal vote or it may be an obvious expression of approval.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is this approval by the full 50 members of the Advisory Council of Judges or is it by a committee?

Mr. RUBIN. No; we have two sections comprising our Advisory Council of Judges. One section is the criminal court section and the other is the juvenile and family court section. More or slightly more than half the judges are in the criminal court section, however.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would this be the criminal court section?

Mr. RUBIN. This would be the criminal court section. But again I want to say that all of the materials at all times went to all members of the ACJ.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Continue.

Mr. RUBIN. Now, then, after this meeting, since you want to know how approval occurred—

Mr. ADLERMAN. Explain it as fully as you wish.

Mr. RUBIN. Because although I do have an opinion about the nature of this inquiry, not only by you—and this is not a judgment about your giving me questions—but about related inquiries—as I say, I think that we adopt a very effective and democratic procedure to do this.

And although the approval occurred at the point of the discussion at the annual meeting, nevertheless there were various suggestions that came out.

These suggestions were then reflected in a revision. That revision then was mailed to all of the judges of the ACJ. And it was indicated then and there that this was a covering memo of mine, it was indicated then that subject to any changes that would come out of such correspondence, this is the form in which it would be published.

That draft, by the way, went to the Federal Bureau of Narcotics and Mr. Giordano had a copy and gave us material, and his material also went to all members of the Advisory Council of Judges.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1263

That occurred after the annual meeting. We actually received inquiries from a number of judges. This resulted in quite a number of changes and as you are aware, Judge Smith was one of those who wrote a letter about it. As a matter of fact, Judge Smith wrote several letters about it because we were in correspondence.

And as the staff person responsible, even though I was not at that meeting, I conferred—I had the minutes written by the man who was present—I met with Judge Smith at his chambers and we had quite a lengthy discussion one morning at which time every consideration was given to Judge Smith to express any dissenting view or any reservations.

I must say that to my surprise he then said:

No; I have decided that I do not want to dissent or express any reservations.

And that is the way it was. So his view as present in that earlier letter is not reflected here for this reason.

MR. ADLERMAN. I think that covers the thing pretty adequately.

MR. RUBIN. Yes.

MR. ADLERMAN. Coming back to the preparation of the basis for this report, what authorities were consulted in drawing up this report? I mean medical authorities?

MR. RUBIN. We did not have a doctor present. Actually what occurred here was that after some preliminary discussion at a meeting of the Advisory Council of Judges, again at an annual meeting in 1959, it was obvious that we could not put out a policy statement without the labors of the committee.

The committee that was appointed consisted of Judge McIlvane who is or was—he has died since then—who was the United States—

MR. ADLERMAN. Who is that?

MR. RUBIN. Judge McIlvane; he died. Yes; this was a great loss to our ACJ, and a personal loss. Judge McIlvane was chairman of the committee.

The members of the committee consisted, besides Judge McIlvane, of Judge Sobeloff who, as you know, was in the U.S. Court of Appeals, and Judge George Ravel, who is a district court judge in the State of Washington, and ex officio member of the committee was the chairman of the section; namely, Chief Justice Cooper, now a U.S. district court judge, then of the court of special sessions.

Now, I myself consulted various materials, both legal and sociological and medical. I am sure that I know that the judges consulted their own materials because they came armed with documents that they themselves had brought.

They came armed with their vast amounts of experience, more than I ever had or ever will have. As I say, there was no doctor present.

I myself read some medical materials thereafter, even before then, but not very much, more afterward as the report was being done. I have no idea how much medical material the others read.

MR. ADLERMAN. You did not have, I take it, any consultant, any medical consultant concerned with it then?

MR. RUBIN. Correct.

MR. ADLERMAN. Did you consider, among other things, the code that was issued—I would call it a code, I may be wrong in my terminology—the code that was issued by the American Medical Association in conjunction with the National Research Council—I believe I am a little bit vague in my terms.

1264 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. RUBIN. I have it here. Actually there were two reports.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think there was a report in 1963, if I am not mistaken.

Mr. RUBIN. Yes; that is the report.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you familiar with the report of the Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Committee of the Council of Mental Health of the American Medical Association of 1963?

Mr. RUBIN. I think that that is a report published in June 1963. The copy I have, and which I have had since it was published, is entitled, I believe, "The Use of Narcotic Drugs in Medical Management of Narcotic Addicts."

Yes; we have had that.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was that considered at the time you were making the report?

Mr. RUBIN. No; not at the time we wrote the report. This was published in June 1963. However, it was prior to the final publication, although not much prior.

Actually, the final adoption came just prior to the publication.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was it considered in preparing the final report?

Mr. RUBIN. Well, now, I had this available to me when I took the minutes of the annual meeting and prepared the proposed final version, which again was amended. The others on the council, I imagine, must have known about this report also. But this report was actually issued—

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would like to get what happened pretty clear in my mind. Was this recommendation or was this code that was set out by the American Medical Association, regarding what is good medical practice in the treatment of narcotics addiction, considered at the time this narcotics law violation policy statement was issued?

Mr. RUBIN. Well, the American Medical Association has put out more than one statement on narcotics. They put out a rather substantial one produced by their committee prior to the time our group started consideration of it, and that of course was considered, very much so.

Mr. ADLERMAN. At the time your council statement was issued, you were aware of the fact that the American Medical Association council had taken a position regarding the code of good medical practice concerning addiction?

Mr. RUBIN. Well, I would say that the thing we were most familiar with was the report of the joint committee of the American Medical Association and the American Bar Association.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Were you familiar with the later one that was issued in 1963?

Mr. RUBIN. I personally was familiar with it.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Not with the report issued in conjunction with American Bar Association?

Mr. RUBIN. No; I personally was familiar with this one that you just referred to, the statement of the American Medical Association Council on Mental Health and the National Academy of Sciences, National Research Council, yes.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1265

I was familiar with this one, and as I say, I don't know whether the others were, the members of the council.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This was issued subsequent to the time the American Medical Association had made a statement with the American Bar Association?

Mr. RUBIN. This was issued subsequent to the publication of that report of the American Medical Association and the American Bar Association.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Let me just cite a few points here. This report issued by the American Medical Association Council on Mental Health in conjunction with the National Academy of Sciences, National Research Council, dated June 1963, contains certain statements to which I would like to call your attention.

On page 4, in discussing what is "good medical practice," they state:

 continued administration of drugs for maintenance of addiction is not a bona fide attempt as a cure, nor is it ethical treatment except in the few unusual circumstances discussed later.

And further—I am referring now to page 5 and I am taking excerpts of this report. Item 21 here:

Withdrawal on an ambulatory basis generally medically unsound and not recommended on the basis of present knowledge.

On page 6, item 27:

Ambulatory clinic plans for withdrawal of narcotics from addiction are  generally inadequate and medically unsound.

Further on page 6, item 28:

The maintenance of stable dosage levels is generally inadequate and medically unsound.

Without going into details, of course there is a summary on page 9. I would like to ask whether or not these findings, these statements, these pronouncements of the American Medical Association and its subcommittees, and the National Research Council, were considered and deliberated upon when this report or policy statement was issued.

Mr. RUBIN. As I explained before, the report that you have just quoted from was published in June of 1963.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is right, and your report was published in 1964.

Mr. RUBIN. The annual meeting at which the report was adopted by the Advisory Council of Judges came in May of 1963.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I am sorry.

Mr. RUBIN. Although subsequently there was correspondence that I have already described. The actual action of the ACJ occurred prior to the issuance of this June report.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, you did not have the advantage of having this document of the American Medical Association in front of you before you had your meeting in May of 1963?

Mr. RUBIN. We did not have this in the May meeting.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You may have been able to consider part of it and had some discussion of it between May and the time you printed your own report?

Mr. RUBIN. Yes; except these views were common currency even before June and we had this in other reports.

Before you leave that, however, I think that——

1266 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. Let me say this—at any time if you feel that you want to expand at length fully, feel free to do so, regardless whether or not you feel my question brings out the need.

Mr. RUBIN. Thank you very much. Actually, I only want to add to the answer.

The extract that you have read to me represents one medical view. You know very well that there are other medical views, and you also know that the only elements of medical opinion that the Advisory Council of Judges has expressed in this report is that the drug addict is a sick person, physically and psychologically, and now I have just read from the statement of the report.

So that a number of points made in the material you have read were not involved in our report.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. There was considerable discussion relating to the Linder decision in the report?

Mr. RUBIN. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I assume that you have made a study of the legal aspects of the thing to quite an extent, because your statements essentially are a legalistic treatise on the matter?

Mr. RUBIN. Yes. I have read the Linder case and a number of other cases.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is it your belief that the Supreme Court decision gave approval of the principle that doctors can furnish addicts with narcotic drugs when the sole purpose is to sustain addiction?

Mr. RUBIN. I think that all of the cases and up to the proposition that under the present holdings a doctor may give a maintenance dose to a bona fide patient, the question of whether this is exclusively for maintenance without an attempted cure is really an artificial question.

For example, just take one illness like arthritis or take another one, diabetes.

Now the medical profession——

Mr. ADLERMAN. Now you are discussing another aspect.

Mr. RUBIN. No; I am trying to make a point.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There is no question. I think we ought to clarify it right now. I know of no case and I don't believe that you could cite any case either—I think this is in fairness to the Bureau of Narcotics—in which any doctor would ever be prosecuted or any attempt be made to prosecute any doctor for treating a patient who is inflicted with any painful condition, such as a case of cancer or anything of that sort, by giving him heavy doses or very heavy doses of narcotics.

There has never been any attempt to prosecute any doctor for that practice.

Mr. RUBIN. That is not the issue.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is correct; I agree with you.

Mr. RUBIN. The issue is, suppose a doctor has under his care a person who is addicted to narcotic drugs. You grant—the Bureau grants—we believe, and I think this is what the medical field is in accord on—that this is an illness.

It is an illness to which the cure today is not known, just as that is likewise true of some other illnesses. In an illness of that kind the doctors give medication according to the best knowledge that they have to relieve the person, hopefully that they will latch on to a cure sooner or later.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1267

To my way of thinking, what this report is saying and what the decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court and the court of appeals have said that a doctor——

Mr. ADLERMAN. When you say the U.S. Supreme Court and court of appeals, are you discussing the Linder case?

Mr. RUBIN. Correct. What they are saying is that a doctor who has such a patient may give narcotic drugs to ease that condition even though at the moment he does not have a cure.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It is your position, then, that under the Linder decision doctors can treat narcotic addicts and put them on maintenance dosages?

Mr. RUBIN. Correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In your research on the legal problems, have you come across any cases since the Linder case in which the same position has been taken?

Mr. RUBIN. Yes. We cited one in the report.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What case is that?

Mr. RUBIN. Here at page 13 of the report, we cite Hawkins v. the United States, 1937, and Bush v. the United States in 1927, and we quote from Hawkins v. the United States as follows:

There is no doubt that the Linder case ruled that a physician may lawfully prescribe narcotics—may lawfully prescribe narcotics for an addict purely because of his addiction, provided the amount is not large as to put the No. 1 power of the addict to sell part of the drug in violation of the Harrison Act.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I cannot verify the statistics given to me, but they show some 1,600 cases involving doctors since the 1925 case. These two cases that you cited were 1927, I believe.

Mr. RUBIN. One was 1927, and one was 1937.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Have there been any other similar decisions arising out of the 1,600 convictions? I refer to cases that have gone to the Supreme Court or have been taken up on appeal?

Mr. RUBIN. I don't know that.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. There have been a great number of convictions of doctors since the Linder decision in 1925. I have been informed there may be as many as 1,600 such cases. I believe you refer to two or three cases in 1927 and 1937——

Mr. RUBIN. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN (continuing). Which have gone up on appeal and which have restated the proposition of the Linder case. Does the advisory council or do you as counsel to the advisory council believe that there has been a successful contravention of the ruling of the Supreme Court in the Linder case during the past 25 or 30 years by Government agencies, particularly by the Bureau of Narcotics?

Mr. RUBIN. As a practical matter, yes. In other words, this has been the effect of the policy of the Bureau and of its regulations.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Mr. Rubin, don't you feel that if there were 1,600 convictions of doctors of the violations of the Narcotics Act in the past 40 years, and there has been this dearth of decisions since the Linder case, that the law should be considered adequate at the present time in regard to the physician's right to prescribe drugs?

1268 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. RUBIN. I don't think that is the conclusion that one would arrive at at all in the light of those prosecutions. I think the doctors today have certain things in front of their eyes; No. 1 is the Linder case. Another is the fact that there have been 1,600 prosecutions, and another is that the regulations of the Bureau of Narcotics take a certain form.

Now, no matter what the Supreme Court says, the average doctor will be extremely reluctant to treat an addict because of the nature of the regulations, because there are prosecutions and also because drug addicts have become involved in criminality. They keep away from it.

This is one of the tragedies of the administrative practice.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And it would then follow that you believe that the doctors have avoided treating addicts because of fear of violating the regulations of the Bureau of Narcotics and that these regulations, in your mind, are contrary to the Linder decision?

Mr. RUBIN. Correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It may well be, then, that the 1,600 convictions which have been cited, may well be convictions of doctors for other illegal activities involved in narcotics.

Mr. RUBIN. I guess it would be that some of these doctors were definitely in violation of the Harrison Act as well as of the regulations.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Coming to the advocacy of maintenance dosage treatment in the council's report—

Mr. RUBIN. Excuse me, we do not advocate maintenance dosage treatment. I think that this is an implication in a great deal that has been said, but this is not our position.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would you state your position?

Mr. RUBIN. Yes. Our position is that a doctor should be free to treat an addict according to concepts of sound medical practice.

It is true that we have said here:

As the Supreme Court pointed out in the Linder v. the United States, the present law is interpreted—and should be so interpreted and enforced by the Narcotics Bureau or any other Government agency—as allowing prescription of medicine including narcotic drugs for relief of conditions incident to addiction.

As I see it, this is about as close as the statement comes to a reference to maintenance dosage, except in the quotation from the Hawkins v. the United States.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do I take it your position is that the Advisory Council of Judges would support a doctor who wished to give maintenance dosages to a patient?

Mr. RUBIN. If a doctor has a bona fide patient who is a drug addict, he should be free to do that, if in his judgment this is what is indicated for this patient.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I questioned Mr. Rector about this and he advises that he felt the report—advocates maintenance dosages only as a part of treatment for such period as the doctor himself deems necessary. It might be short term or a long term.

Do you agree with the statement of Mr. Rector?

Mr. RUBIN. I think that that statement is consistent with what is in the published statement.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1269

Mr. ADLERMAN. Does this report advocate ambulatory treatment, that is, outpatient treatment of narcotic addicts?

Mr. RUBIN. If this is what a particular doctor thinks is suitable for a particular patient, and there would be drug addicts of that kind, then we say he should be allowed to provide ambulatory treatment.

Mr. ADLERMAN. As you know, the American Medical Association and the National Research Council have taken the position that it is not good ethical practice to give patients maintenance dosages. Would you say that any individual doctor should be able to treat a patient in the way he feels is good practice, even though the great body of medical opinion may be against it?

Mr. RUBIN. Well, I am not so sure that the great body of medical opinion is against maintenance doses in a situation that we are talking about.

There isn't a great body of medical opinion. However, with the record of failure of treatment in this country of addicts, it is our view that bona fide doctors and bona fide relationships with a drug addict should have this freedom and even though that doctor is not doing what the average run of doctors is doing.

I would feel the same way about any other illness. In fact—

Mr. ADLERMAN. Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. Mr. Rubin, I think we have to consider another thing. As you answer these questions, of course I expected that you would be giving us not only your own opinion, but you are expressing the viewpoint of the council.

Mr. RUBIN. I believe that up to this point I have been expressing the opinion of the ACJ as well as my own. There is no difference.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Dr. Hess, assistant commissioner of the New York City Department of Health, estimates there are 30,000 narcotic addicts in New York City.

Dr. Hess pointed out that the ambulatory treatment of narcotic addicts in New York City would involve over 30,000 addicts who would need at least one injection of heroin a day. Some of them need more and some would need as many as four a day.

Were the logistics of such ambulatory treatment considered? Did you consider the practicality of giving heroin injections daily to 30,000 narcotic addicts in varying dosages?

Mr. RUBIN. I might say that the judges, in my opinion, would not undertake to set up a structure for treating 30,000 people.

But in my own opinion this is not a realistic question because, if as we would like to see it happen, the regulations were amended or the doctors undertook to treat in a way in which we are suggesting, there would not be 30,000 people being at the doors of doctors. There would be a number of people.

It would be a problem for individual doctors. It would be a problem for the medical societies. We ourselves plan to bring together doctors who are specialists in the treatment of addicts to get their advice on some of these very problems.

But I think this is a problem for the doctors. I have no doubt that among all of these addicts—

Mr. ADLERMAN. If I might interject, and this is not part of our interrogatory, but I might suggest that at that point you ought to consult with Dr. Hess and let her advise you of the headaches of logistics that might be involved.

1270 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. RUBIN. We will certainly consider consulting with Dr. Hess.

Mr. ADLERMAN. She evidently is a very well informed physician on the narcotic question.

Mr. RUBIN. I might say that although the problem of logistics here is difficult, it is not one as difficult as the logistical problem of confining drug addicts in institutions where the penal or so-called hospital—

Mr. ADLERMAN. I agree with you.

Mr. RUBIN. Is that on the record?

Mr. ADLERMAN. Of course. I read your report with a great deal of interest and you do cover certain medical aspects of the treatment. We have talked about maintenance dosages. I would like to know if any attention was given to the question of tolerance. Are you familiar with the problems of tolerance of drugs in narcotic usage?

Mr. RUBIN. I certainly have no depth of knowledge on this subject. I assume that a number of our judges have some knowledge of the subject, perhaps probably greater than mine.

But we did not undertake to provide answers to this question. It is a question that the doctors cannot answer; it is something that can only be answered as the doctors have more experience with treating addicts.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I have to take exception to your statement that the doctors cannot answer the question, because from my conversations and from the testimony we have had, we find that one of the principal problems in medical treatment of addicts is the question of tolerance.

If an addict gets a dose of, say, one-half grain he soon builds up a tolerance for that one-half grain and then, in order to get the same euphoria, the same kick, he requires an increased dose of maybe 1 grain a day, continuing in that progression.

I was told about a case where the tolerance was built up to 70 grains a day, an almost incredible amount of heroin for an addict in 1 day.

This is an ever-increasing demand in order to maintain them on the habit and to satisfy them.

If the doctor gives him a maintenance dosage of one-quarter, one-half, 1 grain, 2 grains a day, this could only last a very short time and would not satisfy the addict.

When the addict is dissatisfied with his failure to obtain his state of euphoria, he then goes to the illicit market to get the additional drugs.

Was this question of tolerance considered in any way whatsoever in the drafting of this policy statement of the Advisory Council of Judges?

Mr. RUBIN. As you see, the statement does not go into this question specifically because this is a medical question. If you want my own response to the situation you described, we do not visualize that the medical profession is interested in giving maintenance doses.

On the contrary, the goal of doctors would be to cure the addict or to reduce the requirement.

As I recall, some of the material that I read, the effort of the doctors would be to apply psychological and social assistance of their patients so that the cure or the reduction of dosage would be achieved, and that is why Mr. Rector said the direction of maintenance dose might involve a very short period of time.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1271

Mr. ADLERMAN. Actually, from what I have been able to learn, withdrawal can be made without too much discomfort to the patient in a period of 2 weeks, and for some patients within a period of a week. There are some doctors who are treating narcotic addicts on withdrawal without giving them any methodone or any narcotics whatsoever in New York City.

There is one in particular who is doing that, but these are patients who are motivated with a desire to be cured, which is an extremely rare motivation in a drug addict.

Mr. RUBIN. I think you are making a very good point. The problem involves all kinds of psychological aspects besides the addiction, and the point I have just made is that there are undoubtedly addicts who are not motivated to give up the addiction immediately but who, under care, could become motivated. Whether this would take a month or 2 months or more, I don't know.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. I take it your position is that the American Medical Association National Research Council statement that ambulatory clinic programs for withdrawal of narcotic addicts are generally inadequate and medically unsound and that the maintenance of stable doses is generally inadequate and medically unsound, is not accepted by the Advisory Council of Judges as a statement by the great body of medical opinion?

Mr. RUBIN. Well, I don't know whether it represents the great body of medical opinion. I know that there is respectable medical opinion the other way. In other words, this is not the total statement of the medical situation.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. ADLERMAN. In view of my previous question I would like to ask this question: Why does the report of the advisory council, on page 13, declare that—the weight of medical opinion support the view that the British program has been successful.

Mr. RUBIN. Well, the complete statement is as follows:

Although some believe that the British experience is not applicable here, the weight of medical opinion supports the view that the British program has been successful in avoiding a rise in addiction, in keeping the addict from turning to crime, and in preventing racketeering in narcotics.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you tell me where you get that "weight of medical opinion"?

Mr. RUBIN. As a matter of fact, I think that very few people would disagree, doctors or anybody else.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I am not asking you that question, I am asking where did you get that "weight of medical opinion," because I have not found that to be true.

Mr. RUBIN. At this point and in support of the statement I have just read, we cite Brill and Larrimore, "The British Narcotics System," 1960 New York State Journal of Medicine, 107, published in 1960, and we refer also to the New York Academy Report No. 39, "Report on Drug Addiction," volume 2, page 417, of 1963.

1272 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. You say that gives you the justification of saying that is the weight of medical opinion?

Mr. RUBIN. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you know that Dr. Brill takes an opposite view on that?

Mr. RUBIN. Dr. Brill?

Mr. ADLERMAN. Yes.

Mr. RUBIN. I don't recall at this moment.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And the British doctors themselves will not subscribe to that.

Mr. RUBIN. Well, may I have the booklet again? It would surprise me very much if the British doctors did not in fact boast that under their system they have been successful—in avoiding a rise in addiction, in keeping the addict from turning to crime, and in preventing racketeering in narcotics.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In the report of the American Advisory Council it states that—the addict should be directed to medical help and should not be criminally prosecuted.

I take it that you do not mean that they should not be held accountable for their acts under criminal law?

Mr. RUBIN. Oh, of course, if an addict commits a crime he should be subject to all the regular prosecution processes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You believe that an addict who steals to finance his habits or who sells narcotics to finance his habit, should be held accountable?

Mr. RUBIN. Well, in general, an addict who commits a crime should be subject to the process of criminal law in that connection.

But on the other hand—

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think I would like to hear your comment.

Mr. RUBIN. On the other hand, if an addict is not at all of a criminal bent, and in order to maintain his habit he must turn to theft, I think that if the policy were what we suggest it to be, such an addict might well be placed on probation, for example, for the criminal charge, or perhaps even avoid the prosecution altogether, if by referring him to a doctor who could treat him freely as we suggest, and we think the law authorizes, his criminal career will obviously come to an end.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Did the advisory council in the preparation of its report consider the high percentage of addicts or known addicts who have been involved in nonnarcotic criminal activity prior to addiction?

Mr. RUBIN. I don't think we had a specific report along those lines. However, the individual members of the committee and the members of the ACJ may well have been familiar with such material.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think we already touched upon the report of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which is in the record, which reported that 73 percent of arrested addicts were engaged in criminal activity prior to their first arrest for narcotics.

Were you aware of these statistics during the preparation of the report?

Mr. RUBIN. I was personally not aware of those statistics, although I was aware of material of that kind. As I say, the other members of the ACJ may well have been aware of such things.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1273

Mr. ADLERMAN. Did the judges of the advisory council consider, in the preparation of the report, the ability of the addict to engage in the ordinary pursuit of everyday life while being maintained on an ambulatory basis as an outpatient?

The question is, Could he work? Could he drive a vehicle? Is he able to maintain himself?

Mr. RUBIN. This is the belief of our group——

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you know whether or not this is a belief of the judges or whether it is a medical belief?

Mr. RUBIN. I think that the answers I have given you earlier elaborate this very point.

It is our belief—again I can only take what is in the report—that doctors treating addicts will exercise ethical judgment the same way they do in other respects, and that they can usefully treat other selected addicts with maintenance doses on an outpatient basis and have these addicts lead successful, law-abiding lives.

Mr. ADLERMAN. One doctor with whom I talked took the same position, but he agreed that these intellectual addicts would constitute a very small percentage, much smaller than 10 percent of all addicts, who would probably be able to maintain themselves in some degree.

Do you know whether the judges would feel that these addicts would be able to maintain themselves in stable employment?

Could they be truckdrivers? Could they be locomotive engineers? Could they operate any machinery with safety?

Mr. RUBIN. Well, I myself have no knowledge.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Was that given consideration by the judges in their advocacy of ambulatory treatment?

Mr. RUBIN. The judges are advocating that addicts, that the doctors be free to give addicts all the medical care they need, including outpatient maintenance doses as indicated.

I am sure that there are members of our group who have a more intimate idea as to the kind of patient to which this would be applicable than is reflected in the report.

The report is a generalization.

Mr. ADLERMAN. One final question on something I touched on before in the record.

There has been previous experience with outpatient clinics in New York City. I think that was touched on in testimony either by Dr. Hess or some of the other doctors. It proved to be unsuccessful and there have been various reasons advanced.

Mr. RUBIN. So far as I know, the judgment that they proved to be unsuccessful is not without explanation. They may have been successful to some extent.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This is a matter of record and we have testimony on it. However, I would like to call your attention to the fact that it is common knowledge—we can substantiate it with figures—that the addiction problem in the United States was a very much larger problem 30, 40 years ago and that it was prevalent all over the United States. Today addiction is confined almost entirely to the very large centers of population such as New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, with a smattering in some of the other large cities. But the great bulk of addicts, probably 90 percent or more, are located in these big centers where organized criminal activities make narcotics available to the users.

1274 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

We have statistics in the record showing that many States do not have a single narcotic addict, and that 40 of the 50 States have less than 500 addicts in the whole State.

One of two reasons advanced for the heavy addiction in the big cities is the criminal activity in the big cities and the fact that organized crime does not get out to the small villages and towns or rural areas in the United States. But if the law was changed to permit doctors to freely prescribe to addicts, we well might revert to the situation that took place 30 or 40 years ago, prior to the Harrison Act, when doctors were allowed to prescribe drugs freely, when narcotics were accessible and addiction was a problem in every town and village in the United States.

Now, if the Advisory Council of Judges position were accepted and made part of the law, would not the addiction problem revert to what it was 40 years ago?

Mr. RUBIN. Definitely not, in my opinion. I think that if you take a view of history in just slightly different terms you have quite a different picture.

The period you refer to should not be 30 or 40 years ago but it should be 70 years ago. This was a period when, in fact, there were a great many addicts as you say, but this was a period when doctors were ignorant of the existing nature of the drugs and so drugs were obtainable in medicine and given to children, medicine prescribed for casual illnesses.

The real pushing back of the addiction problem came before the Harrison Act, as I understand it, when the doctors discovered the dangers in prescribing the drugs.

Now, then, come to the period since the Harrison Act where, as previously these people were living law-abiding lives, since the Harrison Act and especially since the end of World War II the addict group is a criminal group.

It is our view that the problem—

Mr. ADLERMAN. Have addicts become more numerous since that time?

Mr. RUBIN. In my understanding—

Mr. ADLERMAN. Since the enforcement of the Harrison Act.

Mr. RUBIN. In my understanding since the end of World War II the problem has definitely increased.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Let us be fair. During World War II there was no access for the transportation of drugs from the Near East or the Far East to the United States because shipping was so tightly controlled and narcotics could not come in through the military channels.

There was a complete cutoff of the supply of narcotics.

I think that when you say since World War II, that is not a correct assessment. If you were to say for the period excepting World War II, then I could say this is a fair way of approaching it. But if you say that, then you cannot use those figures because there was practically a termination of the use of narcotics during World War II.

Mr. RUBIN. The main contrast that I want to make is between the period of 70, 80 years ago when the drug addicts—

Mr. ADLERMAN. Let us take the period before the Harrison Act and after the Harrison Act.

Mr. RUBIN. That is basically what I am doing. Before the Harrison Act the drug addicts were by and large not the criminal group.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1275

Mr. ADLERMAN. How many were there in the United States?

Mr. RUBIN. I am not sure; I don't think I know.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think the statistics will be in the record on that. I can tell you this, there were very, very many more than there are at the present time and our population growth has been enormous since that time, as you know.

Mr. RUBIN. Do you consider the Harrison Act administration up to the present time to be a success?

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would say pretty much of a success, even though we still have 60,000 addicts in the United States. I think they have registered 50,000 but I'm willing to say it is more like 60,000.

Mr. RUBIN. Well, I think that if you asked a cross section of knowledgeable people the same question, my guess is that most of them would say that the present situation is far from a successful one, and if you looked at the proceedings of the White House Conference on Narcotics, this is certainly the picture you would get.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I am well aware of that; I attended that conference.

I want to thank you very much for coming, Mr. Rubin. I will see to it that you get a printed copy of the record as soon as we have it.

(Whereupon, at 12:15 p.m., the interrogatory concluded.)

AFFIDAVIT OF WILLIAM F. SMITH

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

County of Essex, ss:

William F. Smith, being duly sworn according to law, deposes and says:

That he is a judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit and prior to his appointment to the court of appeals was a judge of the U.S. District Court for the District of New Jersey for more than 20 years.

He further deposes and says that the annexed statement was written by him and that the opinions therein expressed, except those supported by court decisions or other cited references, are his own.

WILLIAM F. SMITH.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 2d day of November 1964.

ANGELO W. LOCASCIO.

STATEMENT OF WILLIAM F. SMITH

To the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations:

This statement is submitted in response to a request by Jerome S. Adlerman, Esq., general counsel to the committee. The statement is purposely confined to a review of the existing narcotics laws in the light of the recognized objectives of the penal statutes, the means by which these objectives are best achieved, and the effect the narcotics laws have on the attainment of these objectives. The views herein expressed are my own, but I am confident that they are shared by a majority of the judges who have had any experience in the administration of the narcotics laws.

NARCOTIC OFFENDERS

The narcotic offenders may be classified as follows: (1) The wholesale or retail distributor engaged in the illicit traffic; (2) the peddler engaged in the illegal retail sale to the consumer; and (3) the addict or user whose violations may be incidental to his habitual use of narcotics. The nature of their offenses are distinct as to the circumstances of their commission and the gravity of public injury. However, under present laws the offenders must be treated alike. A fair appraisal of mandatory criminal sanctions as a means to combat narcotic abuses requires a consideration of the objectives of the penal laws and the means by which these objectives are best achieved.

OBJECTIVES OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE

The ultimate objective of the penal statutes is the protection of society against the antisocial behavior of its derelict members. We have learned from experience that this objective can best be achieved by the rehabilitation of the offender and his return to the community as a useful citizen. The primary function of the imposition of criminal sanctions, whether probation or imprisonment, should be rehabilitation. It was observed by the Supreme Court in the case of Williams v. New York (337 U.S. 241, 248): "Retribution is no longer the dominant objective of the criminal law. Reformation and rehabilitation of offenders have become the important goals of criminal jurisprudence."

1276 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

There are many offenders whose criminal activities and social attitudes have been such as to indicate that correctional treatment can be best accomplished under institutional supervision. The commitment of such offenders is appropriate as an intermediate means to reformation and deterrence. The term of imprisonment imposed upon such an offender should be consistent not only with the nature and gravity of the offense but also with the needs of the offender; the terms should be no longer than necessary to achieve the rehabilitation of the offender and the protection of society. The prognosis may be difficult but there should be a conscientious effort to make it. The sentence that is excessively severe is retribution in disguise and frequently a barrier to effective rehabilitation. What has been said here is particularly applicable in the majority of cases involving user-offenders whose criminal activities are usually incidental to the maintenance of their habits.

The conscientious judge is fully aware that his choice of the appropriate sentence should be based upon an informed judgment and not upon a cursory evaluation of either the offense or the gravity of public injury. The factors which enter into his determination are: (1) The nature of the offense; (2) the gravity of public injury; (3) the general behavior patterns of the offender, including his personal characteristics and attitudes; (4) the significant facts in the life of the offender; and (5) the family environment in which the offender has lived. The third, fourth, and fifth factors frequently prove more significant than the nature of the crime in which the offender was involved. The existing narcotics laws preclude their consideration in the case of the narcotic offender. The present laws deprive the courts of almost all discretion and have had discernible adverse effects.

The legislation enacted by Congress since 1948, when the Federal Juvenile Delinquency Act was passed, has made available a wide range of expedients adaptable to the individualized treatment of criminal offenders. These expedients are consistent with our advanced knowledge of the social sciences and the modern concepts of criminal jurisprudence. However, the Narcotics Control Act of 1956 (26 U.S.C. 7237) divested the courts of the authority to employ these expedients in cases involving narcotics offenders (United States v. Lane, 284 F. 2d 935 (9th Cir.); United States v. Gibbs, 285 F. 2d 225 (9th Cir.)).

We direct our attention to the Federal Youth Corrections Act (18 U.S.C. 5005 et seq.) the provisions of which are applicable in the case of a youthful offender who is therein defined as "a person under the age of 22 years at the time of conviction." Thereunder " * * * the court may, in lieu of the penalty of imprisonment otherwise provided by law, sentence the youth offender to the custody of the Attorney General for treatment and supervision * * *." [Emphasis supplied.] The discretionary authority to discharge such an offender is vested in the Youth Correction Division (18 U.S.C. 5017). It should be noted further that under the act the court may, prior to the imposition of sentence, commit the offender for observation and study. The report of the study serves as a guide in the choice of the appropriate sentence.

The purpose of the legislation, in the language of the House report, was: " * * * to substitute for retributive punishment methods of training and treatment designed to correct and prevent antisocial tendencies. It departs from the mere punitive idea of dealing with criminals and looks primarily to the objective idea of rehabilitation." [Emphasis supplied.] In view of the stated purpose of the act, is there any valid reason why its salutary provisions should not be applicable in the case of a youthful addict or addiction-prone user? It is my considered view that the commitment of such an offender to an appropriate treatment center, followed by his conditional release under supervision, would, in many cases, effect his rehabilitation. As an inducement to his cooperation in a program of rehabilitation, his conviction could be set aside, as provided in 18 U.S.C. 5021(a).

The enactment of August 25, 1958 (18 U.S.C. 4209), made the provisions of the act applicable to a "young adult offender," a person under the age of 26 years, upon a determination by the court "that there is reasonable ground to believe that the defendant will benefit from the treatment provided under" the act. The optional sentencing procedures available in the case of a "youth offender" were made available in the case of a young adult offender, with one rather important exception. The salutary provisions of the act are not applicable in the case of a "young adult offender" convicted of a violation of the narcotic laws; he is not eligible for either probation or parole (sec. 7 of Public Law 85-752). What has heretofore been said about the "youthful offender" is also true of the "young adult offender."

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1277

We direct our attention to section 3 of Public Law 85-752 (18 U.S.C.A. 4208) which introduced the principle of the indeterminate sentence of imprisonment. The cited section provides: "* * *, when in its opinion the ends of justice and best interests of the public require that the defendant be sentenced to imprisonment for a term exceeding one year," the court "may (1) designate in the sentence of imprisonment imposed a minimum term at the expiration of which the prisoner shall become eligible for parole, * * *, or (2) the court may fix the maximum term of imprisonment to be served, in which event the court may specify that the prisoner may become eligible for parole at such time as the board of parole may determine." [Emphasis supplied.] We have taken some liberty with the language of the statute but this we have done in the interest of clarity.

It is generally recognized by the courts, and in fact by others, that the duration of the term of imprisonment, whether determinate or indeterminate, must fit not only the offense but also the particular needs of the offender. The indeterminate sentence is sufficiently flexible to meet both requirements. The particular advantage of the indeterminate sentence, however, lies in the fact that it affords the flexibility necessary to individualized reformatory treatment. This is an advantage not found in a system of rigid and arbitrary statutory standards. The dominant objective of the indeterminate sentence is treatment and rehabilitation under institutional supervision. However, the provisions of the statute may not be invoked by the court in the case of the narcotic offender, even though he may be an addict or an addiction-prone user.

We have heretofore discussed sections 5005 and 4209 of title 18, United States Code, the objectives of which are correctional treatment and rehabilitation. There is now pending in Congress a bill, S. 863, which will make the optional sentencing procedures available under section 5010 applicable in cases involving violations of the narcotics laws. This bill was introduced by Senator Keating, joined by Senators Javits, Case, Kuchel, Long, and Scott. The proposed legislation was approved by the Judicial Conference of the United States on the recommendation of its Committee on the Administration of Criminal Law, of which I am Chairman.

It should be noted further that corrective legislation (S. 2619, 87th Cong.) was introduced by Senator Hruska in 1961. The introduction of the bill was accompanied by a comprehensive report (Congressional Report, Sept. 22, 1961), in which Senator Hruska stated:

"* * * the present statutory requirement of a mandatory sentence of imprisonment, with no provision for parole, not only frustrates the search for reasonable justice; it ignores the real problem which the drug addicts represent. An addict imprisoned under the Narcotic Control Act is certainly kept away from drugs over a long period of time; but the very length of his term leaves him with very little basis or motivation to rehabilitate himself. The medico-psychological problems which his addiction really involve are largely unmet, because his imprisonment postpones for too long the essential final phase of his treatment which must be undertaken in the community.

MANDATORY TERMS OF IMPRISONMENT

The purpose of the Narcotic Control Act was to strengthen the narcotic laws "to more effectively combat drug addiction and illicit drug traffic" (House report). We can agree that criminal sanctions, including long terms of imprisonment, may be essential to the enforcement of the narcotic laws and the eradication of illicit traffic. However, we must recognize a distinction between the commercial purveyor and the offender user. The available information clearly indicates that mandatory imprisonment as a remedy for narcotic abuse is open to serious question.

We agree that drug addiction, in and of itself, is not a criminal offense and cannot be made such by legislation (Robinson v. California, 370 U.S. 660 (1962)). However, the addict who is found guilty of the violation of a narcotic law should not be exempt from the applicable criminal sanctions solely because of his addiction. The criminal sanction imposed, including any term of imprisonment, should be commensurate not only with the nature and gravity of the offense but also with the individual needs of the offender. This is one of several reasons why we recommend the abolition of mandatory terms of imprisonment and the restoration of the discretionary authority of the courts to make a determination as to the appropriate sentence.

1278 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

There are many conscientious and responsible law enforcement officials who adhere to the opinion that the imposition of mandatory terms of imprisonment is essential to the effective elimination of the underground traffic in narcotics. They argue that prior to the enactment of the Narcotics Control Act of 1956 (26 U.S.C. 7327), and its predecessor, the Boggs Act of 1951, terms of imprisonment imposed on narcotic offenders were not severe enough. What they really mean is that the sentences imposed did not comport with their views as to what the sentences should have been.

The argument overlooks the well-recognized distinction between the function of the law enforcement agency and that of the courts in the administration of our criminal laws. It has been the usual and customary responsibility of the agency to investigate criminal activity and bring the offenders to justice; it has been the usual and customary function of the courts to administer the laws in accordance with acceptable standards of fairness. The Narcotics Control Act deprives the court of this function.

The annexed tabulations, taken from official records, would indicate a significant increase in the number of narcotic offenders now confined in the Federal prisons and an insignificant decrease in the number of narcotic offenders prosecuted and convicted under the federal laws. There were 1,168 narcotic offenders convicted in the federal courts in 1960, and of this number approximately 650 were found to be users. The ratio in earlier years has probably been the same. As of June 30, 1962, there were 4,814 narcotic offenders incarcerated in the federal prisons at an annual cost of approximately ten million dollars.

Since 1952, the number of narcotic offenders confined in federal prisons has increased by over two thousand. It seems reasonable to assume that this alarming increase is attributable to the indiscriminate imposition of mandatory terms of imprisonment on all offenders. This is at least some evidence that the purpose of the Narcotics Control Act has not been achieved.

The indiscriminate imposition of mandatory terms of imprisonment on all offenders, regardless of the nature of the offense, the circumstances of its commission and the gravity of public injury, gives rise to sentence disparity and inequality in the determination of criminal justice. Such disparity and inequality are unavoidable consequences in the administration of our existing narcotics laws.

POLICY STATEMENT ISSUED BY THE ADVISORY COUNCIL OF JUDGES OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL ON CRIME AND DELINQUENCY

The National Council on Crime and Delinquency has placed before the Committee a policy statement issued by the Advisory Council of Judges, of which I am a member. I do not know how many of the judges actually endorsed the statement but I do know that I did not. The statement, in preliminary form, first came to my attention in the latter part of 1963. At that time I objected to its issuance on the grounds, among others, that it was superficial and lacked "depth and objectivity." It is my opinion that the statement is nothing more than an attack on the validity of a Bureau of Narcotics regulation (26 CFR 151.392, as amended) and a defense of a policy apparently espoused by the New York Academy of Medicine ("Report on Drug Addiction," New York State Journal of Medicine, July 1963).

The attack is leveled against that portion of the regulation which reads as follows:

"An order purporting to be a prescription issued to an addict or habitual user of narcotics, not in the course of professional treatment but for the purpose of providing the user of narcotics sufficient to keep him comfortable by maintaining his customary use, is not a prescription within the meaning or intent of section 4705(c) (2) * * *." [Emphasis supplied.]

It is the position of the council that the regulation is in conflict with the decision of the Supreme Court in Linder v. United States (268 U.S. 5 (1925)). The council maintains that under the law, except for the prohibition of the regulation, a registered physician may dispense or prescribe narcotics, even though his sole purpose is to satisfy an addict's habit. I must respectfully disagree.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1279

The regulation, as I interpret it, is in accord with the existing statutory provisions (26 U.S.C. 4705(c) (1) (2)) and the decisions of the courts. The decision of the Court in the Linder case must be construed in the light of the two earlier decisions: Jin Fuey Moy v. United States (254 U.S. 189 (1920)) and United States v. Behrman (258 U.S. 280 (1922)). It seems unnecessary to summarize the facts in each case.

In the Behrman case the Court was called upon to construe section 2 of the Narcotic Drug Act of December 17, 1914 (38 Stat. 785, 786). Thereunder a physician who dispensed narcotic drugs to a "patient" in the course of his professional practice was exempt from the prohibitions of the act. The Court held that the exemption was limited in its application to a physician who dispensed or prescribed narcotic drugs in the course of his professional practice and for medical purposes.

The Court stated, at pages 287 and 288:

"Former decisions of this Court have held that the purpose of the exception is to confine the distribution of these drugs to the regular and lawful course of professional practice, and that not everything called a prescription is necessarily such (Webb v. United States (249 U.S. 96); Jin Fuey Moy v. United States (254 U.S. 189)). Of this phase of the act this Court said in the Jin Fuey Moy case, p. 194:

"Manifestly the phrases 'to a patient' and 'in the course of his professional practice only' are intended to confine the immunity of a registered physician, in dispensing the narcotic drugs mentioned in the act, strictly within the appropriate bounds of a physician's professional practice, and not to extend it to include a sale to a dealer or a distribution intended to cater to the appetite or satisfy the craving of one addicted to the use of the drug. A 'prescription' issued for either of the latter purposes protects neither the physician who issues it nor the dealer who knowingly accepts and fills it." [Emphasis supplied.]

The Linder case is clearly not to the contrary. Therein the defendant, a registered physician, was convicted on an indictment which charged that he had dispensed a moderate quantity of narcotic drugs to a known addict with the intent that the addict would use the same by self-administration. The Court reversed the conviction of the physician on the grounds that: first, the indictment failed to charge that the defendant had not acted in good faith and in the course of his professional practice; second, that the evidence was insufficient to sustain such a charge if it had, in fact, been made. The decision sustained the right of a physician to dispense narcotic drugs, even to an addict, in the course of his professional practice and for medical purposes.

The Court stated, at page 18:

"They [narcotic addicts] are diseased and proper subjects for such treatment, and we cannot possibly conclude that a physician acted improperly or unwisely or for other than medical purposes solely because he had dispensed to one of them, in the ordinary course and in good faith, four small tablets of morphine or cocaine for relief of conditions incident to addiction. * * * Mere pretense of such practice, of course, cannot legalize forbidden sales, or otherwise nullify valid provisions of the statute, or defeat such regulations as may be fairly appropriate to its enforcement within the proper limitations of a revenue measure." [Emphasis supplied.]

The Court was careful to distinguish the Linder case from the Behrman case. Referring to the Behrman case, it stated, at page 22:

"The opinion cannot be accepted as authority for holding that a physician, who acts bona fide and according to fair medical standards, may never give an addict moderate amounts of drugs for self-administration in order to relieve conditions incident to addiction." [Emphasis supplied.]

It should be emphasized that the Court did not reverse any of its earlier decisions.

There is nothing in the decision in the Linder case which supports the position taken by the council. The decision upheld the right of a physician in the course of his professional practice to dispense or prescribe narcotics to alleviate "conditions incident to addiction." The quoted phrase undoubtedly refers to the frequently serious symptoms which accompany withdrawal of the drug—pain, cold perspiration, chills, nervous instability, etc. These are symptoms of a medical condition for which the administration of narcotics is indicated.

The council seems to rely rather heavily on what purports to be an interpretation of the Linder case adopted by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit in Hawkins v. United States (90 F. 2d 551). It is therein stated, at page 553:

1280 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

"There is no doubt that the case ruled that a physician may lawfully prescribe narcotics for an addict purely because of his addiction, provided the amount is not so large as to put it within the power of the addict to sell part of the drug in violation of the Harrison Act." [Emphasis supplied.]

The phrase "purely because of his addiction" is ambiguous. If the quotation is construed as meaning that a physician may dispense or prescribe narcotics solely to satisfy the habit of an addict, it is in conflict with the Linder case and other cases since decided.

Since the decisions of the Supreme Court in the Linder and Behrman cases the courts of appeals have uniformly held that a registered physician in the course of his professional practice may dispense and prescribe narcotics for medical purposes. This would include the treatment of an addict (Needleman v. United States (261 F. 2d 802 (5th Cir. 1958); United States v. Brandenburg (153 F. 2d 110 (3d Cir. 1946)). The same courts have held that a physician may not, except in the course of his professional practice and for medical purposes, dispense narcotics to an addict either directly or by written prescription (ibid.). This was also the holding in Hawkins v. United States, supra, and Bush v. United States (16 F. 2d 709) cited in the statement of policy.

The statement of policy suggests that many physicians are reluctant to undertake treatment of addicts because of fear of prosecution. This suggestion is open to serious question. The majority of responsible physicians are reluctant to undertake the ambulatory treatment of addicts because they recognize that absent control conditions essential to effective cure such treatment is not medically feasible. Absent such conditions there would be nothing to prevent an addict from going to two or more physicians, each unaware that he was under treatment by another or others. There would likewise be nothing to prevent his seeking an additional supply from an underground market. Under the policy recommended by the council a physician could be made an additional source of supply.

In 1921, a committee of the American Medical Association stated in a report:

"* * * The only proper and scientific method of treating narcotic drug addiction is under such conditions of control that any administration of any habit-forming narcotic drug must be by or under the direct personal authority of the physician with no chance of any distribution of the drug of addiction to others, or opportunity for the same person to procure any of the drug from any source other than from the physician directly responsible for the addict's treatment (76 JMA 669, June 1921). [Emphasis supplied.]

This statement was made the subject of a resolution adopted by the house of delegates of the American Medical Association in June of 1924 (82 JMA, 1938). Since that time the association has adhered to substantially the same position.

The statement of policy issued by the council recommends an ambulatory clinic plan under which addicts could receive treatment as outpatients. Such plans were criticized as "generally inadequate and medically unsound" in a joint statement issued by the AMA and the NRC in 1962 (18 New York Journal of Medicine 561). The statement read in part as follows:

"The maintenance of stable dosage levels is generally inadequate and medically unsound and ambulatory clinic plans for the withdrawal of narcotics from addicts are likewise generally inadequate and medically unsound.

"As a result of these conclusions the American Medical Association and the National Research Council oppose on the basis of present knowledge such ambulatory treatment plans." [Emphasis supplied.]

We cite as an additional reference 182 JAMA 30, October 1962.

The statement of policy refers only to the clinic plans established in the early 1920's in approximately forty cities. The statement reads in pertinent part as follows:

"Some of them appeared to be fairly successful, although many took insufficient precautions to assure that addicts would not obtain drugs from more than one source or failed to ascertain that they were treating actual addicts, so that sometimes peddlers came and sold the drugs they received from the clinics." [Emphasis supplied.]

That these plans were "fairly successful" is an understatement; the plans were dismal failures, because under them the clinics were unable to maintain adequate conditions of control (Brown, "The Enigma of Drug Addiction," pp. 170-183). By the end of 1925 all of the clinics had been closed (ibid.).

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1281

The statement of policy contains the following observation :

"Although some believe that the British experience is not applicable here, the weight of medical opinion supports the view that the British program has been successful in avoiding a rise in addiction, in keeping the addict from turning to crime, and in preventing racketeering in narcotics."

The adaptability of the "experience" to the solution of the serious narcotics problems which exist in this country was questioned by the medical experts at the White House Conference on Narcotics and Drug Abuse. However, any evaluation of the "experience" would require a consideration of two important factors: first, the low incidence of narcotic addiction in England; and second, the control conditions implicit in the governmental regulation of the practice of medicine in England.

Respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM F. SMITH,
Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals.

Narcotic offenders prosecuted in Federal courts

[District of Columbia not included]

	1957	1958	1959	1960	1961
Marihuana.....	741	527	481	591	455
Narcotics.....	1,294	1,455	1,409	1,318	1,297
Total.....	2,005	1,982	1,800	1,909	1,752

Narcotic offenders received in Federal prisons

	1950	1952	1954	1956	1958	1960
Marihuana.....	878	654	509	325	303	288
Narcotics.....	1,151	1,278	1,366	1,189	1,264	1,168
Total.....	2,029	1,932	1,875	1,514	1,567	1,456

Narcotic offenders confined in Federal prisons

	1950	1952	1954	1956	1958	1960
Marihuana.....	731	842	877	679	624	686
Narcotics.....	1,286	1,871	2,307	2,502	2,876	3,501
Total.....	2,017	2,713	3,184	3,181	3,500	4,187

Senator JACKSON. Dr. Henry Brill?

He is not here.

Dr. Lawrence C. Kolb?

Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you are about to give before this subcommittee shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

TESTIMONY OF LAWRENCE C. KOLB, M.D.

Dr. KOLB. I do.

Senator JACKSON. State your name, please.

Dr. KOLB. Dr. Lawrence Kolb, director of the New York Psychiatric Institute and the Psychiatric Service of the Presbyterian Hospital, and chairman of the Department of Psychiatry at Columbia University. My address is 722 West 168th Street, New York City.

1282 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Senator JACKSON. Thank you, Doctor. You have a statement, do you not?

Dr. KOLB. Yes, sir.

Senator JACKSON. To the best of your ability, the statement is true and correct?

Dr. KOLB. That is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Appended to your statement is a report, I believe.

Senator JACKSON. Is that the report on drug addiction?

Dr. KOLB. We have two committee reports. I have copies of those if they are not immediately available to you.

Senator JACKSON. The committee will receive the reports. We will decide as to whether they shall be included as an exhibit or printed at this point in the record.

I have No. II before me.

Dr. KOLB. I have No. I. I will give it to you.

Senator JACKSON. Thank you, Doctor.

Dr. KOLB. Thank you.

STATEMENT OF LAWRENCE C. KOLB, M.D.

The New York Academy of Medicine Committee on Public Health, recognizing the unsatisfactory results of treatment of the narcotic addict and control of narcotic addiction, has studied and issued two reports on the subject, the first in 1955 and the second in 1963. The academy committee concluded that the outcome of 25 years of experience in this country with the restrictive and punitive approach to the treatment of the narcotic addict had demonstrated its inadequacy. A comprehensive program was put forward following the original report, as outlined below:

1. That a national policy be formulated with a central thesis that the addict is a sick person.

2. That this thesis should be a guiding principle in the policies, program, and practices or actions of all the various agencies and bodies dealing with the narcotics problem, including medicine, legislation, enforcement, parole, and probation.

3. That the medical approach to the narcotics and addiction problems should be allowed application and fulfillment by rescission of the present threatening regulation which denies to the physician freedom to treat addiction according to his clinical judgment. This step is necessary in order to encourage the physician to return to and permit him to reassume his professional responsibility in this area.

This step could be achieved most directly and expeditiously if the Narcotics Bureau, subscribing to the new policy, would gracefully remove itself from the practice of medicine, cease placing its own interpretation on what are legitimate medical purposes for narcotic addicts, and remove the existing unwarranted restriction now specified in section 151.392 of regulations No. 5.

4. That all addicts should come under medical supervision or treatment. As a result, one source of spread will be reduced; another source, illicit traffic with its profit, will cease; and sick persons will be restored to health.

5. That a national program for the eradication of addiction reflecting the new policy be designed and put into effect. It should be comprehensive in scope. Planning and execution of it should call for the combined activity of all the various bodies working in unity and harmony, but each staying within its own province.

The reaction to the 1955 report was focused largely on point No. 3, to the neglect of the overall statement. Indeed, what was more regrettable, the academy's program was misunderstood and misinterpreted by many organizations and persons. For these reasons, a second report was issued in 1963.

It should be clearly stated that the academy's position and program in 1963 is the same as that of 1955. This second report, issued this past year, was for clarification, recording of advances, highlighting of remaining obstacles and how they may be removed, and some recommendations on organizational framework for an all-out attack on addiction.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1283

This is the situation today :

1. There has been progress in recognizing that the addict is a sick person.
2. Unfortunately, there has developed a tendency to ignore or play down the role of profit in the spread of addiction.

3. The regulation of the Bureau of Narcotics controlling the treatment of addicts still stands. Physicians are not permitted to exercise clinical judgment in the treatment of the addict. Rather, they must follow strictly a mode of treatment that is imposed upon them. In a program of treatment, the physician is the key person, but as a result of dictation by a regulation of the Narcotics Bureau, the physician is not permitted to exercise his clinical judgment in the treatment of addicts. Instead, he must adhere to a narrow course laid down by the Bureau. Any deviation from it might mean arrest, even imprisonment and loss of license to practice medicine. Many were arrested and jailed for practices that were the accepted order of the day.

Method of treatment is the crux of the matter. The only method approved in the Bureau's regulation represents the longstanding attitude of the Bureau of Narcotics and the American Medical Association and, more recently, the National Research Council. The academy thinks that this method and the philosophy upon which it is founded is incorrect for these reasons :

The only method of treatment, that of immediate withdrawal or detoxification, is outmoded. It is, therefore, representative of poor medical practice. The regulation compels physicians to use an archaic and unsound approach to treatment for all addicts. The consequences of this regulation on treatment have been little short of disastrous. Physicians have departed en masse from the field of addiction. As might be expected with a restrictive regulation and little progress by the way of research, the record of success in treatment is not what it might have been. The academy recognizes now that addiction contains a large psychological as well as physical element. Every addict is different. Therefore, the treatment must not be stereotyped, but, rather, individualized and tailored to the particular addict. Accordingly, there are therapeutic decisions in which the physician must exercise his clinical judgment : whether to institute withdrawal or recommend maintenance; when to start withdrawal and the choice of mode. These decisions require a complete study of the addict-patient and complete freedom for the physician to exercise his critical judgment.

There are stages in the therapeutic course where the Bureau's regulations are inadequate, restrictive, or prohibitive. One is the preadmission period. What is to happen to the addict who must await admission to the hospital? There is no provision for the physician to maintain an addict still on the outside during this waiting period. To supply him, the physician must violate the regulations. A second stage of jeopardy for the physician is the postadmission, but pre-withdrawal period, that interval in which the addict must be studied for a therapeutic decision. It may be long, and the addict must be maintained on his customary drug during this time. Again, there is no provision for maintenance of the addict during this period. The third occasion for risk is the choice of treatment and the timing. Among the several therapeutic procedures to be considered is the reduction method on which the Bureau frowns; or in a small proportion of selected cases, it may be maintenance, a legitimate and proper method for some addicts. Yet this procedure is definitely prohibited by the Bureau, although any other therapeutic course at that time may leave the addict worse. Two other situations are also potentially hazardous. The presumed immunity or exemption of the hospital or of research from the Bureau's encroachment is not supported by literal interpretation of the regulations. Belief that there is clinical freedom in either situation is pinned upon false security.

To properly perform his professional duties the physician must be free to exercise his clinical judgment on therapeutic procedure. He must not feel uncertain, hampered, or outright in jeopardy from a governmental agency such as the Narcotics Bureau. Furthermore, he must not be in a position of depending on the personal whims, forbearance, or oral reassurance of enforcement agents.

INTERROGATORY OF DR. LAWRENCE C. KOLB

A staff interrogation of Dr. Lawrence C. Kolb, of the New York Academy of Medicine, was held at 11:30 a.m. in room 101, Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C.

Staff members present: Jerome S. Adlerman, general counsel, and Eugene J. Marshall, consultant to the subcommittee.

1284 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Also present: Charles J. Reynolds, a shorthand reporter from Alderson Reporting Co.

Mr. ADLERMAN. These are interrogatories taken the 5th day of August 1964, at 11:30 a.m., pursuant to the permission granted by the committee at a hearing conducted this same date.

Present: Dr. Lawrence C. Kolb, Jerome S. Adlerman, counsel, and Eugene J. Marshall.

Dr. Kolb, I propose to ask you a few questions in the hope that you will explain the position of the New York Academy of Medicine, as well as your own views on the subject of treatment of the addict.

At the outset, I would like to know, if it is your view that the joint statement released by the American Medical Association and the National Research Council in June 1963 states, provides or denies that a physician has any freedom to treat addiction according to his clinical judgment?

Dr. KOLB. Let me say that the academy met with representatives of the AMA group and we are not in agreement with their statement. We feel that it is still a restrictive presentation of the method of dealing with the addict; and also, I think we had some feeling—well, that is enough of that.

We are not in agreement with the statement. We feel that it doesn't recognize the full problem of addiction in the sense that those who become involved with drugs represent a multitude of personality types and a treatment needs to be individualized.

Their statement does not allow the physician to approach treatment in a particular, specialized way for the individual person. It is some improvement over the statement provided in the regulations of the Bureau of Narcotics, but we don't feel it provides for full practice of medicine in the treatment of the addict.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would you explain what you mean by the statement that a physician is not permitted to exercise clinical judgment in the treatment of an addict?

Dr. KOLB. Yes. Perhaps it would be best to do this by providing some examples.

First of all, the clinician should make a diagnostic evaluation of the patient and in the group of addicts he will find people generally falling into three or four large categories. From the psychiatric standpoint, some of these people will be psychopathic, perhaps the vast majority; others will be neurotic; others will be psychotic; and then there will be a group of persons who become addicted in the course of medical treatment for special illnesses.

The decision as to use, say, the cold withdrawal method, which most medical people say is allowed under the existing regulations, is not compatible with modern knowledge of the treatment of people in these various categories.

It might be very advisable, say, in treating a neurotic individual, for him to be maintained on the drug for a period of some months in order to establish a working therapeutic relationship with the physician and then withdrawal to take place only at a later date.

In the case of certain other persons, the physician might come to a judgment that the drug should be withdrawn in short order after he has seen the patient. There are some instances where it might be advisable to maintain the individual on the drug for even much longer periods of time. I would think this would be unlikely, but certainly those who have a physical ailment in which the symptoms of withdrawal might impair their health, one would need to make this judgment.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1285

In other words, we have on the books, as presently interpreted and understood, a limitation in the sense that the physician does not feel entirely free to design a therapeutic procedure in the treatment of a specific addict. He cannot exercise what we speak of as clinical judgment.

MR. ADLERMAN. Do I understand that you feel that in a case, for example, where an addict is suffering from some physical disability—when I say “physical” I mean other than addiction—that the doctor cannot exercise his judgment to prescribe drugs?

DR. KOLB. I have used that as an example. I don’t think that is where our problem is. I think our problem really comes in the group of individuals who are taking drugs in connection with one of these psychiatric disorders.

MR. ADLERMAN. For example, if a man has an illness such as cancer or some painful illness, can you not prescribe drugs at the present time?

DR. KOLB. You can do so, but you may be questioned as a physician by representatives of the law enforcement agency. This has happened.

MR. ADLERMAN. Do you know of any doctors who have been questioned?

DR. KOLB. Dr. Raskin will give you an example when he comes in. He was telling us of such a case.

MR. ADLERMAN. What was that?

DR. KOLB. Dr. Raskin will give you such an example when he comes in here. He was telling of a recent case; yes.

MR. ADLERMAN. Have you ever been questioned?

DR. KOLB. I haven’t, because I haven’t been involved in that area.

MR. ADLERMAN. It is my understanding, and I may be wrong, that the regulations provide that when a person is ill, requiring drugs to relieve him of a painful condition or a terminal case of cancer, or something like that, that there is no question that the doctor can prescribe these drugs freely without any hindrance or questioning from any law enforcement agency.

DR. KOLB. Unfortunately, they are questioned from time to time and I think this is where some of the problem comes that points up the position of the academy. Why should he be questioned at all? Why should he have to have, if he is filing his drug returns—why should he be questioned about his clinical judgment in such cases and have officers come into his—

MR. ADLERMAN. I don’t want to argue the point.

DR. KOLB. The only reason I bring this up is we have a feeling that this is one of the reasons that many physicians are frightened into withdrawing from dealing with the drug addict.

MR. ADLERMAN. What is there in the regulations that makes them frightened, that makes them feel that they are restricted? Is there any particular part of the regulation?

DR. KOLB. Yes. We mentioned one area of the regulation carried by the Bureau of Narcotics under article V that we feel defines a method of treatment for the drug addict. I am not sure whether you have that. It is mentioned in my formal statement, regulation No. 5, article 167, 1922.

1286 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. MARSHALL. That is at page 77, "Prescriptions, Retail Dealers, Practitioners, Exempt Corporations, and Laboratories."

Mr. ADLERMAN. This is the position, I think, taken by the AMA—that it is not considered good medical practice to provide the user with narcotics to keep him comfortable. I think this is very much akin to the position taken by the AMA, which you disagree with; is that it?

Dr. KOLB. Our feeling is that any statements about how a physician should prescribe in an official document of an enforcing agency is restrictive to the practice of medicine, and driving physicians away from the practice.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is there any other part of the regulation which you feel to be confusing or restrictive?

Dr. KOLB. No.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It comes down to the one question. It is not a question of whether you can prescribe drugs for a person who is ill with cancer or some other condition. The only point at issue under this regulation is whether or not the doctor can provide the user with narcotics sufficient to keep him comfortable by maintaining his customary use, which is not a prescription within the meaning and intent of this act. Is that it?

Dr. KOLB. That is the interpretation of that sentence, for the purpose of providing users with narcotics sufficient to keep them comfortable by maintaining their customary use, not a prescription in the meaning and intent of the act.

Unfortunately, it is and has been often interpreted in a very narrow way, and in the face of the problem of hospitalization, the ability to get a patient into a hospital, the need sometimes to carry a patient on the outside, the wisdom on occasion of maintaining a person over a longer period of time in order to establish a working therapeutic relationship, we find and believe that the limited interpretation put upon this phrase is felt to be restrictive by the medical profession.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You are head of the New York Psychiatric Institute?

Dr. KOLB. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is connected with the Presbyterian Hospital and the Columbian Medical Center?

Dr. KOLB. In the Columbian Presbyterian Medical Center; that is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can you tell me how many addicts you treat in that clinic?

Dr. KOLB. We may have 100 patients, and we may have 1 or 2 in at a time. We don't treat him. I am also in charge of the psychiatric service at the Presbyterian Hospital and formerly at the Mayo Clinic. I have seen addicts in the wards and private rooms of these institutions from time to time, although not many.

I mention this because most of the testimony that is given comes from those who treat the large proportion of addicts who are seen in our public hospitals, people who come from deprived and socio-economic groups, and they represent a different order of persons than those you see in the private institutions. I don't think you should generalize entirely from the bulk of all individuals.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1287

Mr. ADLERMAN. That brings up another point. What proportion of the addicts do you think could be treated on an ambulatory basis by a doctor? Are these exceptions to the average? Is it a 10-percent group, a 15-percent group, or can all of them be treated that way?

Dr. KOLB. I don't think anyone could give you a percentage statement. There are a certain proportion of addicts that, it seems to me, could not possibly be commenced in treatment unless they were certified or confined in some way. My personal belief is that very many of the people we label as psychopaths, or personality disorders, today, are best treated by commencing their withdrawal under some form of hospital confinement.

On the other hand, with the group of neurotic individuals you find in some of the ward situations I have mentioned—

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would these be persons perhaps higher in intellect and background?

Dr. KOLB. They are often professional people.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Addicts in the medical profession?

Dr. KOLB. Yes; such as a nurse.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Isn't this rather a limited group?

Dr. KOLB. It is a limited group.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So the proposal of the New York Academy of Medicine would really be limited to a comparatively small group?

Dr. KOLB. This is incorrect, because the proposal goes further. There are certain problems about treating the addict today, even the psychopathic addict. Suppose you have such a person who comes to you in your office and you want to get him into a hospital bed to treat him. Well, you know the hospitals are crowded.

The doctor really doesn't know under this regulation how long he can carry that person and relieve him outside before he takes him in and withdraws him. This is not clear.

Many doctors raise questions about this. He is not able to time the period of withdrawal. The problem, say, of handling the patient after a period of hospitalization in the outpatient department, I think is rather unclear to physicians as well. There may be periods where once again it would be necessary to make it wise to prescribe a drug to the person.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you then subscribe to the theory that the patients, the addicts, should be given prescriptions for narcotics on an ambulatory basis to take by themselves or inject by themselves?

Dr. KOLB. No.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Under the supervision of a doctor, I mean.

Dr. KOLB. I think under certain circumstances I would say it would be possible to treat persons like this, but a generalized ambulatory patient; no.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In other words, again I come back to the proposition that this would be suitable perhaps for a very limited number; is that right?

Dr. KOLB. Yes; I think that is correct.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So that the general addict—the adolescent addict, perhaps—particularly those who are not highly motivated with the desire to be cured, would not really be benefited by this ambulatory treatment?

Dr. KOLB. It would be inadvisable in any group of psychopaths, I agree thoroughly.

1288 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. So it would perhaps be limited to a comparatively few of the highly motivated addicts who are generally of a different economic level, different intellectual level, and so on.

Dr. KOLB. And with a different type of personality.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And with a different type of personality, who are neurotic rather than psychotic?

Dr. KOLB. Than psychopathic.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you feel that there is any restriction on giving any amount of narcotics to a patient who is waiting treatment in a hospital or an institution? Is there any restriction now in the regulations which prohibits giving an addict something to maintain him until he can get to a hospital, for a period of maybe 2, 3, or 4 weeks?

Dr. KOLB. I think the feeling is this: that there is an element of doubt in the mind of the physician as to whether he is dealing in a way with his patient that prevents him from being accused of malpractice. This stems from the fact that this regulation exists.

I would say it would be better not to have it on the books. I don't know of any instance of a patient in a hospital where such questioning has taken place but, nevertheless, I think the very fact that an enforcement agency carries this, suggests or places the element of doubt in the minds of physicians and makes many of them rather indifferent to engaging in the care of these people.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I have made some study of the regulations and it occurs to me that maybe there is a problem of communication here. I have, for example, Pamphlet No. 56, Revised September 1963, by the Treasury Department. It concerns prescribing and dispensing narcotics under the Harrison Act.

On page 18 there is a clause "Interim treatment of an addict on a waiting list for admission to a narcotic facility." It agrees with the proposition that an addict can be given treatment by an attending physician which consists of dosages of Methadone for a period of 10 days to 2 weeks, pending his admission or pending observation of response to medication.

Dr. KOLB. And there may be times when you couldn't get a patient into a hospital in this period of time, and there may be some patients you wouldn't want to take off.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The point is, though, that under the regulations you can do that.

Dr. KOLB. I understand.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I thought you said you could not do that.

Dr. KOLB. No; I didn't say that. I said that in the minds of the profession, there is an element of doubt as to how long they can maintain a patient and be considered operative.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Pending admission to a hospital?

Dr. KOLB. Yes; or pending his judgment as to when withdrawal should take place.

Mr. ADLERMAN. If these facts were disclosed to the doctors, the regulation and pamphlet No. 56, don't you think they would go a long way toward clarifying it?

Dr. KOLB. I doubt it, because I think there has been a great deal of anxiety aroused in the medical profession since the Harrison Narcotic Act was passed in relation to interference with the practice of physicians leading to widely publicized, within the medical profession, bringing of physicians into court or questioning them about their practice.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1289

I would like to make a recommendation as to what we think could be done. We have situations like this in other areas of medicine where the medical profession polices its own profession in the following way:

Let's take the area of therapeutic abortion. Therapeutic abortion is a highly problematical matter. There are many people who attempt to get abortions through legitimate means who, under the laws of the various States, certainly don't qualify. This is an area where there is a lot of illegitimate practice, as you people undoubtedly are aware.

In the larger hospitals, where this question comes up frequently, committees of physicians have been established who hear the request of any physician who believes he has a patient who deserves a therapeutic abortion. If his request is one, after he states his case and gives his reasons, where they believe that this particular patient needs a therapeutic abortion in order to preserve her life, it will be done. If not, the request is rejected.

I know that these committees have worked very effectively since my own department is involved in one, and I do know that as soon as that committee was established, the pattern of doing therapeutic abortions was modified in the hospital.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I am in agreement with you on that point, although whether I am in agreement with you makes no difference. I think we face a little different problem here.

Dr. KOLB. I think the problem is the same.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You talk about the big hospitals where they have such committees. How about the occasional doctor without ethics? With a profession so large—probably well over 100,000 doctors in the United States, I am sure you will find quite a few, unfortunately, who may not have the highest ethical standards, who would be willing to sell prescriptions.

Dr. KOLB. Let me take that up. I hold no brief for these people. If the various States would establish professional committees who would be charged with the responsibility of receiving from each physician a statement of the addict that he had in treatment and the reasons for the form of treatment that he were to give that individual, and if approval were given in this way, I think we would engage many more physicians in taking up this very difficult problem, and at the same time would relieve our enforcement agencies from a lot of accusations and difficulties.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Briefly, I take it that you feel that this should be a self-policing matter among the medical profession.

Dr. KOLB. Up to a certain limit.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And that the law enforcement agencies should not interfere with any illegal activities of physicians in connection with narcotic addiction.

Dr. KOLB. No; you carry it too far. In the case of an addict treated by a physician, who had not presented his case to such committees, in those instances I would think the law enforcement agency should quite properly raise some questions, but they might better raise the question through the professional committee or in relation to that committee.

1290 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. This raises a point in my mind. Do you know of any physicians who have been prosecuted in the course of their bona fide medical practice where they prescribed drugs in good faith?

Dr. KOLB. I know of one who has been questioned, where a colleague and I had to see his patient and confirm the statements he made about the status of that addict. He attempted, and successfully, withdrew a patient, the wife of a physician, on an outpatient therapeutic regime.

Mr. ADLERMAN. He got the patient to withdraw?

Dr. KOLB. Yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. He was never prosecuted?

Dr. KOLB. He had officers come to his office, though, and also report him to the medical society. It was necessary for him to bring in several of us as consultants in order to define the facts of his case.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is that considered improper by the AMA?

Dr. KOLB. Pardon?

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is that considered improper by the AMA, to withdraw a patient—

Dr. KOLB. At the present time, I would say that a physician who operated this way under the statements made will be considered to be operating in a somewhat dubious way. Most physicians wouldn't dare to make this attempt.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is there anything in the law—and I am very curious about this—that says a doctor cannot treat a patient and try to cure him by withdrawing him from drugs, prescribing drugs and diminishing them?

Dr. KOLB. In this particular instance, the doctor carried the woman for about 6 months on an outpatient basis and successfully withdrew the patient. I think he would be seriously questioned by both his professional colleagues and the enforcing agency. I think their questioning under present circumstances was correct. I think this young man probably operated within an area of judgment. But let's point out that his area of judgment under both areas of regulations proved to be correct, because he was successful in treating the patient.

Mr. ADLERMAN. But that would not be considered good medical practice by the American Medical Association, would it? I think they frown on ambulatory withdrawal.

Dr. KOLB. They would look with disfavor on anything except quick withdrawal.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What is the usual time of withdrawal? I think we had testimony that even heavily addicted patients can be safely and humanely withdrawn in the course of about 10 days or 2 weeks.

Dr. KOLB. That is correct. But there is one point that is continually left out here. That is the working relationship between the physician and the patient which may sustain this person from becoming re-addicted. We in our field do not believe that if you are dealing with any of the addicted groups that you withdraw the sustaining drug, or whatever it might be—an obese person, in a sense, is addicted to food—you do not immediately withdraw the agent which those individuals use to relieve anxiety until you have established some sort of a substitute.

Part of that substitution is the personal relationship that can be set up between physician and patient, or a rearrangement of their living conditions that makes it possible for them to accept the anxiety of withdrawal.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1291

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you think if you were to communicate with the Bureau of Narcotics, the Attorney General's Office, or whoever it may be, that you are treating a patient and that you intend to give him a drug over an extended period of time because you are trying to effect a cure, that any doctor would be disturbed doing that?

Dr. KOLB. That any doctor would be disturbed?

Mr. ADLERMAN. Yes. When I say "disturbed," I mean questioned or condemned or criticized for doing that.

Dr. KOLB. If there was a reasonable officer who understood his physician, perhaps things would go well. There are such circumstances. But I don't think them generally attainable and the profession doesn't believe them.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I am a layman on the subject and, of course, I have to go from what I have been able to pick up and absorb. I would like to ask you this question: Do you feel that the average medical man who has had really no experience with addicts is capable of treating an addict on an outpatient basis?

Dr. KOLB. Not at the present time. I would say, if circumstances were changed, and the indication of the profession was modified so that they could get at the addict and learn something about him, he might be able to do so.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That brings up another question.

Dr. KOLB. Very few doctors today are interested in the addict. As you point out, there are very few of them who have experience.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The addict is a rather difficult person to deal with, I understand. He is quite a con man. He knows how to wheedle a doctor into giving him drugs if the doctor is not really experienced, and he knows how to cheat and do a lot of things in order to get the drug. I understand he is a very, very difficult type of patient.

Dr. KOLB. There is no question about it.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You don't feel that the average doctor, unless he has received a lot of training, can handle an addict as a patient?

Dr. KOLB. I would feel that the average doctor, without experience, would have a great deal of difficulty.

There is one other area that generally gets overlooked. Shall I mention it here, or wait?

Mr. ADLERMAN. Surely.

Dr. KOLB. We think that the present arrangements are such that really crime is being produced through continuing to treat the addict as a criminal rather than as a medical problem. We think the situation is not dissimilar to the situation in this country under the Volstead Act.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I have heard the analogy before. The difference, as I see it, is that the vast majority of people may indulge in alcohol on occasion, perhaps with some form of regularity, but are able to handle themselves pretty well without becoming alcoholics.

Dr. KOLB. This is one of the mistakes made. There is very good evidence to show that most people do better on a narcotic than they do on alcohol. The narcotics are more likely to keep their thinking processes as clear as they can be. Alcohol on the other hand is a confusing agent.

1292 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

In studies, careful studies, of large numbers of addicts, they would suggest that people adapted better when they were on drugs. Some alcoholics have been on drugs and alcohol. It has been shown that they get better on drugs than alcohol.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I am not an expert in the field, but I have to rely on my ordinary powers of observation and say that I doubt very much whether the average person who takes a drink becomes an alcoholic or can't stay away from it.

Dr. KOLB. The average person who takes a single shot of a drug doesn't become a drug addict. These things are given in hospitals every day.

Mr. ADLERMAN. How many people take a single shot of heroin and then leave it and don't take another one for a week or so?

Dr. KOLB. There are many. There are many. Do you know that heroin is used in the medical profession in England as the best agent to prevent a cough? This is being given all the time in England.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I spoke to some of the doctors in England and they advised me that most of the doctors in England are loath to prescribe heroin because of its great addictive quality and they preferred giving morphine, but they resent anyone telling them not to prescribe any. But they, themselves, limit the use of heroin to a very large extent because it is so highly addictive.

Dr. KOLB. It is, but it is still used in cases, because I have a friend who went to England and got virus pneumonia last year and was given heroin.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Earlier in the hearings I drew an analogy between different types of addiction, stating that we do have physical dependency and a psychological dependency on the drug; that during the war, for example, there were thousands, and perhaps hundreds of thousands of soldiers who were badly wounded who were given narcotics, morphine in most cases, while on the field of battle and back in the battle hospitals. These men withdrew on the physical dependency basis and never went back and never had any desire to go back for more morphine.

Dr. KOLB. That is true.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This is the formal, well-settled individual. But there are others, on the other hand—and I call them narcotic-prone since I don't know any other term to use—who need the drug as a crutch for their personalities.

Dr. KOLB. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. These people, if subjected to narcotics in a medical hospital, may when they are through continue as addicts. But this is a small percentage, as I understand.

Dr. KOLB. I think these people are a small percentage of the patients going to general hospitals for treatment, but they are the same kind of personalities as a group of the people who are seen today as addicts.

The person who becomes addicted, whether he is in a hospital or out of a hospital, is certainly an individual, as you point out, with a peculiar personality.

Mr. ADLERMAN. There are very few addicts who become addicted because of medical treatment.

Dr. KOLB. That is not the primary problem, you are quite right. The medical treatment was imposed on a prone personality.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1293

Mr. ADLERMAN. I have heard it said that addicts make addicts, and then I have heard that peddlers make addicts. In your opinion, how does an addict become an addict? By what means?

Dr. KOLB. I think the addict is exposed to the drug through the environment in which he lives. He is associating with other people who may be addicted, or are addicted, who encourage him to have the same sort of experience or thrill that they have had.

The differentiation between these two groups seems to me somewhat erroneous. Someone in the group is getting the drugs from somewhere, and how to define who may be pushing drugs or not pushing drugs, I don't think anyone can do.

Mr. ADLERMAN. We have had some testimony——

Dr. KOLB. The drug has to come from some source.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It has to be available to him.

Dr. KOLB. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. If it is not available to him, he does not become an addict.

Dr. KOLB. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The situation in the United States is such that, for example, in the State of Vermont, there is not a single addict. In probably 20 out of the 50 States there are less than 100 addicts per State. In maybe 40 out of 50 States there are less than 500 addicts per State. The concentration of addiction is confined to the areas of large cities where there is organized crime, where the narcotic is available because of organized criminals in the narcotic field.

That brings another problem to my mind. If you are to broaden the powers of doctors to treat patients on an ambulatory basis and on a maintenance level, will this not be applicable to Kansas, to Iowa, to Vermont, to Georgia, to Utah—places where they have very little addiction now, but where the doctors will be given the same right to prescribe to an addict?

There are a great many in that population area who would be prone to addiction if narcotic drugs were made available to them. Would that not possibly contribute to the spread of addiction if the addict knows that he can get drugs from doctors throughout the United States?

Dr. KOLB. First of all, let me say that our position is that we are not advocating ambulatory treatment or outpatient treatment. We are advocating a situation in which one could practice medicine in relation to the addict.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Maybe I misunderstood your 1955 report which I thought clearly indicated the advocacy of ambulatory treatment.

Dr. KOLB. It was misunderstood and has been misunderstood.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And the 1963 report, if I understood it correctly, reaffirmed the position of the 1955 report.

Dr. KOLB. We never advocated that. We have said that under certain circumstances some people could be treated, as I indicated earlier, under these circumstances, but not all of them. Let me go——

Mr. ADLERMAN. Could you define the circumstances and tell us which addicts or percentage of addicts? I don't want to keep you too long, Doctor.

Dr. KOLB. That is all right. I am not in a rush.

1294 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

There is a certain group of neurotic individuals with a good working relationship with a physician that I can see being treated as ambulatory outpatients. This would be a small percentage, probably not more than 10 percent, and that might be high. As a matter of fact, I think these people are not being reported.

Mr. ADLERMAN. What was that?

Dr. KOLB. I suspect these people are not even being reported. I think I know where they go, who treats them, and I don't think they get reported.

Mr. ADLERMAN. These are mostly medical addicts?

Dr. KOLB. Medical addicts, nursing groups.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Physicians' wives, and so forth?

Dr. KOLB. Yes; and laboratory technicians.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So there is just a small percentage of the addicts discussed by the New York Academy of Medicine report that ambulatory treatment would apply to?

Dr. KOLB. Probably so; yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Ambulatory treatment would apply only to this group of maybe 10 percent of the total?

Dr. KOLB. Possibly.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Am I right on that?

Dr. KOLB. I would say that is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And your second proposition is——

Dr. KOLB. The one about spread. I think we are considering the narcotic addiction problem in a too narrow way, just as we are considering the alcohol addiction problem, the barbiturate addiction problem, in too narrow a way, or the amphetamine problem. They are all addiction problems. The whole thing needs to be looked at as a unity.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I don't mind if you want to discuss that. I didn't want to get into the barbiturate thing, but it is perfectly all right if you want to discuss it. Go right ahead.

Dr. KOLB. I would like to say that where narcotics are not used, you will probably find, although no one has ever done a study, but it might be very likely that you would find, the number of addicted persons—by addicted persons those using one of these various drugs to the point where they are functioning poorly—that it might be the same percentage throughout. I wouldn't know how much liquor is taken in Minnesota or Iowa against barbiturates, amphetamines, and so forth.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I think Dr. Cameron raised the point that the problem of alcoholism is a far greater problem than the one of addiction to narcotics. I think also we have had testimony to the effect that in addition to taking narcotics, many a narcotic addict will supplement his narcotic with some form of barbiturates or some other medication.

Of course, you find addicts who even drink terpin hydrate to get the codeine content, or those who cook cough medications to get the codeine from them.

Mr. MARSHALL. Going further into that point, my main basis was that Dr. Kolb said that today there were very few doctors, psychiatrists or M.D.'s, who are qualified, who have the interest in addiction. We were speaking of primarily narcotic addiction.

Wouldn't these same people be equally less qualified in the overall picture when you get into amphetamines and barbiturates?

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1295

Dr. KOLB. The biggest addictive problem is alcohol.

Mr. MARSHALL. It would be the same thing then.

Dr. KOLB. We see a lot of alcoholics and they are struggling with it.

Let me put one more point in this. I think you will find the highest rates of all addictive forms are in the metropolitan areas because we find the highest rates of psychiatric disabilities in the metropolitan areas, and these things go together. I feel a little less doubtful about Iowa and Nebraska than I do New York.

Mr. ADLERMAN. These people with the psychiatric problems who become addicts—I am not talking about the medical addicts—are they able to maintain themselves and live a useful life, support themselves, support their families, if they become addicts?

Dr. KOLB. Some people on drugs will do better than off drugs.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I am talking about the general average. Take, for example, the Harlem addict, who probably is a member of the largest group in the city of New York. Can he support himself, maintain himself, hold a job, while he is on the drug?

Dr. KOLB. I think the record shows in the last followup study of the Public Health Service that the ones that had become voluntarily absent were doing much better as a group, in terms of their ability to perform socially and hold a job, than those who would not do without the drug.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Let us consider the 60,000 addicts, taking the 10 percent off the top and leaving the other 90 percent. Most of them have a mental weakness of some kind, whether you call it neurotic, psychotic, or whatever it is. Would they be able to hold jobs? Could they be pilots in airplanes? Could they work around machinery in factories? Could they drive trucks safely without endangering their own lives and other people's lives? Could they do any of the hundreds of jobs that are ordinarily performed by people in the normal way of life?

Dr. KOLB. If they could be motivated to do it; yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. While they are under the influence of the drug?

Dr. KOLB. Yes. There have been many distinguished people who functioned while they were taking drugs.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you talking about the top 10 percent?

Dr. KOLB. No. Others. You have a group of people here some of whom will never be motivated to do anything, whether they are on drugs or off drugs. But many of them are just as capable one way or the other.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Do you think they could drive cars while under the influence of drugs?

Dr. KOLB. At a moderate level of addiction; yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would, for example, hate to have a judge judge my case—

Dr. KOLB. We are talking about the drugs of the morphine analog; is that correct?

Mr. ADLERMAN. That is right. I would hate to have a judge who is taking heroin rule on a case where I am defending a criminal or where I am prosecuting a criminal. I would hate to have my child driven to school in a schoolbus driven by a driver who might be taking heroin. I don't think you would either.

1296 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. KOLB. I would rather have a person taking heroin than a man who is taking alcohol, amphetamines, or barbiturates. All of those——

Mr. ADLERMAN. I don't think a truckdriver taking heroin should be allowed to drive. I don't think the man who is drinking alcohol should be allowed to drive. And I don't think the heroin addict who is taking drugs should be allowed to drive.

Dr. KOLB. He would be a much safer guy than the others.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The question is, can they maintain themselves and hold jobs. I interviewed, in one of the doctors' offices a young fellow who was a roofer. His wife brought him in. She is an addict and he is an addict. They have been off it for about 6 months and they got back on again. The wife said to the doctor, "Tell him to stay away from his job, because if he gets on a roof he is going to kill himself." The doctor said to this addict who was a roofer getting $4 an hour, "How do you feel about it?" He said, "Doctor, I was up there yesterday and I got dizzy, I got very dizzy. I don't think I can stay on the job."

I am talking about that type of thing. Can a man who is addicted and who is on drugs keep a job of that sort?

Dr. KOLB. He is not going to function as well as a man who is not addicted, that is for sure. I am not for addiction, I can assure you of that.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Finally, I think the question that arises in my mind, one of the final questions, is, What, if anything, would deter addiction if an addiction-prone person realized that society would not frown upon addiction? What would deter an addict who could obtain his drugs by going to a doctor and confessing to being an addict? Wouldn't he have a steady source of supply at a very reasonable price?

What would deter anybody from becoming an addict, or, say, the addiction-prone person from becoming an addict?

Dr. KOLB. I would assume that the person who turned up for treatment had some interest in changing. The motivation is for modification.

Mr. ADLERMAN. A motivation may be, "I will be able to get drugs freely, without heavy expense. I don't have to steal."

Dr. KOLB. That could be a second motivation. But you can be trapped in this motivation into establishing a treatment relationship which can lead to the withdrawal of the drug. There would be a third group who would never turn up, even under these circumstances, because they would be afraid of just that thing happening. This group of individuals, I think, will continue to have to be certified for treatment in some way, and they won't come off well.

Two of the motivations leading to addiction will be undercut. There is a group of people who get addicted today as a means of defying the law as they see it coming to them through their families. They start on the basis of getting some thrill and proving themselves.

We have made this, in some sense, a source of commitment by publicizing it so much to our young people, in my opinion, and my opinion comes from seeing some of these youngsters in treatment at our hospital. I think we would undercut that type of interest by removing it from the realm of being a defiant or criminal act.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1297

The other thing is that if drugs were made more freely obtainable through the medical profession, the need to have a person sustain his habit through criminal act would lessen.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you familiar with the recent report of the FBI which has been submitted for the record?

Dr. KOLB. I have not seen that.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The FBI report showed that 73 percent of the persons who are addicts had an arrest record or some criminal charge prior to their first arrest as an addict. So you do have a large criminal element in this thing.

Dr. KOLB. That is right.

Mr. ADLERMAN. If drugs were easily obtainable, would they become free of their propensity to stealing or crime? They were already criminals before they got the drugs.

Dr. KOLB. I am quite certain that is so.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would like to call your attention to something else. In Dr. Hess' prepared statement she discusses the ambulatory type of treatment for the addicts in New York City who are estimated to number from 22,000 up to 30,000, and I think you can get other estimates.

Her statement notes the mechanical difficulties in administering to the wants of the addict by physicians. How many physicians would it take to treat these 30,000, if the doctors were to give free medication to addicts? How many shots would have to be given a day? Would it be a minimum of 30,000 shots a day or maybe even double that amount?

Dr. KOLB. The assumption is, of course, that the medical profession would keep them all on drugs. But that is not what they do.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Maybe I misunderstand. It is probably emphasized more in the American Council of Judges report, which goes much further, I think, than the New York Academy of Medicine in advocating this ambulatory treatment of narcotics.

Dr. KOLB. Dr. Hess produces an interesting logistical problem. I would like to think about this. Here is a city of 5 million people, and there must be 500 hospitals. I think with a little thought, you might be able to solve that. I wonder how many patients would come to individual hospitals. I know that the large number congregate in the Harlem area. But even around the Harlem area there are a half-dozen very fine hospitals.

Mr. ADLERMAN. If you took the Harlem area alone and concentrated right in Harlem, I think you would find two-thirds of the 30,000 drug addicts in the Harlem area. That would be 20,000 people getting either 20,000 or 40,000 shots a day.

Dr. KOLB. Let's do a little talking about this further. The addicts that we are seeing at the moment are not addicts in the old sense at all. Many people come in talking about being addicts, but the amount of drug they are taking is so little that they hardly show any withdrawal symptoms.

Mr. ADLERMAN. That has been referred to in the testimony, that the addict is getting a very highly adulterated bag of heroin today, adulterated one-twentieth of pure heroin which is 80 percent pure. It is now down to one-twentieth of 80 percent.

Dr. KOLB. So it has become stylish in certain areas to claim that.

Mr. ADLERMAN. A bag of heroin contains one-twentieth of a grain or two-twentieths of a grain, and it doesn't give them a big habit.

1298 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. KOLB. That is true.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I have been to Dr. Baird's office and I have watched treatment there. He doesn't prescribe any narcotics at all, even in withdrawal. He takes them off with the use of antispasmodic drugs, the muscle relaxers.

Dr. KOLB. Tranquilizers.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Tranquilizers and medication for their stomachs. He has been successful in taking them off. But persons are, I think, unusual types of addicts because they are highly motivated. They come in voluntarily and want to be cured. They are willing to be treated without any drugs whatsoever. He had some that I spoke to who have been off a year.

But the problem, of course, is also aftercare. However, they don't have the withdrawal symptoms.

Dr. KOLB. So they don't think in the oldtime case of the 1920's—

Mr. ADLERMAN. When they have real strong withdrawal symptoms he sends them to the hospital. But he says that is not the usual thing. He gets a different class of addicts. He doesn't like to say so, but I have observed it.

Well, I think that about covers it. Are there any other statements that you would like to add?

Dr. KOLB. No, Mr. Adlerman. I appreciate the opportunity of coming down and talking to you.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I appreciate your coming down. This is a highly controversial subject, and the tenor of my questions doesn't necessarily mean that I have a feeling one way or the other. This has been very interesting. Thank you very much.

(Whereupon, at 12:35 p.m. the staff interrogation of Dr. Kolb was concluded.)

Senator JACKSON. Dr. Herbert A. Raskin.

You do solemnly swear that the testimony you are about to give before this subcommittee shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

TESTIMONY OF HERBERT A. RASKIN, M.D.

Dr. RASKIN. I do.

Senator JACKSON. State your professional business.

Dr. RASKIN. Dr. Herbert A. Raskin, clinical associate professor of psychiatry, School of Medicine, Wayne State University, Detroit, Mich.

Senator JACKSON. You have a statement, Doctor, which you have prepared?

Dr. RASKIN. It has been submitted to the committee; yes, sir.

Senator JACKSON. And to the best of your knowledge it is true and correct?

Dr. RASKIN. Yes, sir.

Senator JACKSON. Do you have any exhibits that you would like to submit?

Dr. RASKIN. Nothing additional.

Senator JACKSON. Your statement will be included at this point in the record. Thank you very much for your cooperation.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1299

STATEMENT OF HERBERT A. RASKIN, M.D.

In a way, it is regrettable that this Senate hearing need be held at all. Had organized medicine, many years ago, not abrogated its responsibility toward one group of ill persons, even though it seemed valid at the time, this hearing would hold but academic interest. Only in very recent years, have we begun to work toward a somewhat radical reorientation of policy and reorganization of efforts to meet the individual and community problems of drug addiction. This hearing can perform an invaluable service in furthering these efforts.

Official reaffirmation by organized medicine of its legal and ethical responsibilities in the care, treatment, and rehabilitation of the drug addict appeared in June 1963. The combined statement of the American Medical Association and the National Research Council, "The Use of Narcotic Drugs in Medical Practice and the Medical Management of Narcotic Addicts," was a major step toward revised policy and the establishment of more effective practices of care and control. Contrary to 40 years ago, however, it would appear that we now have the active support and participation of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics. There exists an interdigitation of law enforcement and medical care that is vital to the successful handling of addiction problems. Our working relationship is still in a state of gradual evolution but already is at a level never before attained. As our knowledge and experience accrue, it can become even more well defined and effective.

We are currently in a period of transition. There is much about the phenomenon of addiction and the narcotic addict that we do not know. It is a very complex and multiphasic clinicopathologic and sociopathologic situation. The AMA-NRC report represents a "review of current medical opinion to the end of developing a tentative code defining proper ethical medical practice with respect to narcotics and narcotic addicts." [Emphasis supplied.]

All recommendations have been made on the basis of present knowledge. Our research programs must be rapidly expanded in many directions of basic studies and applied field experience before we can take the next step in the development of controls, medical or legal.

The story of attempts to meet with the problem of drug addiction in Detroit has been one of continuing frustration and a conspicuous lack of success. Pacing our abortive efforts has been the constant element of financial crisis binding governmental hands, smothering the expansion of existing services and precluding the introduction of new ones. And, of course, greatly complicating and confounding our efforts has been the age-old social apathy, condemnation, and antagonism toward "these junkies," met in both overt and insidiously covert ways in all areas and levels of society.

In March 1951, the city of Detroit organized a citizen's committee, the Mayor's Committee for the Rehabilitation of Narcotic Addicts. It was directed to work along lines of law enforcement, rehabilitation, research, and education. The committee included representatives of psychiatry, general medicine, public health, law, judiciary, law enforcement, penology, education, religion, social agencies, and citizen's groups. The rate of attrition and turnover among committee members has been high; levels of motivation and endurance have been variable. A basic membership nucleus, however, has remained intact, including the committee's original chairman.

An outgrowth of the early work of the mayor's committee was the establishment of the narcotics clinic as part of the Detroit Department of Health in late 1952. It was organized as an administrative and clinical division of the department, totally unrelated to any police function. It served as a voluntary outpatient unit, staffed by one psychiatrist, one social worker, and a secretary. The clinic utilized the psychiatric wards and staff of Receiving Hospital, Detroit's emergency hospital, for inpatient clinical facilities and developed an active working relationship with many community social agencies. Its director was a faculty member of the Department of Psychiatry of Wayne State University and also a member of the mayor's committee. Thusly was created a fusion of interests and services that remains rather unique.

Study of the first 510 patients seen in the clinic by the end of 1955 gave rise to a proposed program of community control of the problem of drug addiction in Detroit. It was our first meeting with the Bureau of the Budget. We lost. It was amazing how many different reasons there were why the program could not be implemented—program priorities, budget deficits, and whose responsibility is the care of addicts anyway, city, county, State, or Federal Government?

1300 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Late in 1958, a directive from the mayor to all city department heads ordered a cutback in all services. The narcotics clinic was one of the first to feel the budgetary ax. It was discontinued as an independent unit and its function was absorbed by the psychiatric outpatient clinic of Receiving Hospital. Its services have remained essentially the same but, perforce of the change, fewer patients could be seen.

At the same time, we structured the program in the context of a "demonstration project" and through Wayne State University made application for grant funds to the National Institute of Mental Health. The National Advisory Mental Health Council did not recommend approval of our application. They indicated that "The Council was concerned that there was no financial support forthcoming from the city or the community for the project."

They did invite resubmission of the application with special reference to the outpatient and followup aspects of the program, suggesting that the local community support the hospitalization program. It took us 4 years to gain such support.

Special commendation must be paid to Mr. Ross Ellis, area supervisor of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, who, on direct orders of Mr. Harry Anslinger and later Mr. Henry Giordano, invested many hours of labor and legwork and performed a magnificently persuasive piece of work on local sources of funds. He paved the way for the mayor's committee and finally in 1962 sufficient money was procured for the addiction hospital. Financial commitment of $125,000 per year has been made for a 16-bed hospital unit. Participating in this contribution are the Detroit Department of Health, the United Foundation, the McGregor Fund, the Kresge Foundation, the Weber-Hudson Fund, and the Ford Motor Co. Fund. The health department is also paying for all alterations required for the new hospital unit and will make space available immediately adjacent to the hospital for the outpatient facility of the proposed program. In June 1963, application was again made for Federal mental health grant funds. But more of that later.

The experience of the Detroit Narcotics Clinic in processing almost 2,000 addicted persons, coupled with my own experience in the private practice of psychiatry, points to the following impressions of the addict and the phenomenon of addiction and provides the basis for our proposed program:

Item I.—The mere use of a narcotic drug and/or narcotic law violation cannot be equated with addiction even if the use is periodic or intermittent. A specific medical diagnosis is always required.

Item II.—Addiction is a medical syndrome, a symptom complex, invariably reflecting some form of underlying mental disorder. The addict is a person suffering from a serious mental or emotional disturbance and manifests this disturbance in great part through his craving for and his relationship to the drug.

The meaning of taking drugs will vary from addict to addict and may even serve different functions at different times for the same addict. Addiction will be seen to operate in dealing with anxiety, guilt, aggression, inadequacy, depression, sexual urges, perversions, physical pain, psychoses, neuroses, and character problems.

The symptom of addiction, however, always represents a mode of adaption, perhaps the sole adjustive mechanism to living problems the addict has available at the moment. It is a symptom representation of some form of psychological stress functioning, an attempt to meet, deal with, or master some form of intra-psychic imbalance, conflict, or excitation.

It is a kind of last-grasping toward something so as to forestall the horror of inevitable disintegration, of psychic disorganization that spells the doom of helplessness. The addict has found something that he knows will give him relief from unbearable tensions and anxieties.

Even a strong wish to be rid of the drug is complicated by an even stronger fear of his real ability to function without it. To suddenly deprive him of this mechanism without replacing it with something at least almost as effective is inflicting harm in the name of help. It is a refined form of cruelty.

Item III.—The addicted person knows that deprivation of his drug is likely to give rise to the suffering of extremely painful symptoms of the withdrawal syndrome. He has experienced it himself or has seen it take place in others. He remains very suspicious and apprehensive even in the face of calm reassurance by the physician that he can be withdrawn with comparative ease and comfort. Under these circumstances alone, the addict is one of the most frightened persons the physician will be called upon to treat.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1301

Item IV.—Pervading the clinical picture of the addicted person is an insidious, inexorable helplessness to deal with his addiction by himself. Through every stage of the development of the addiction, during his preaddiction state through the addiction itself to the postaddiction state, the person we are dealing with is helpless to make an adequate adjustment by himself. His personality is characterized by serious defects in its development and pathological tendencies inherent in its structure. He is intolerant of anxiety. He avoids or escapes experiencing it through impulsive action. Before discovering the effects of drugs, his sense of security and well-being are dependent upon the immediate gratification of his needs and wants. The ordinary delays and inconveniences of daily living are experienced by him as intolerable frustrations. If through some kind of action he cannot escape them, unbearable tensions are experienced which he feels the environment should relieve. When the relief is not forthcoming, he feels that his inalienable right to happiness as a human being has been abrogated.

Thus, simultaneously confronted with the irresistible need for immediate gratification and an ungratifying environment, it is inevitable that he will feel justified in employing any measure to rectify his deprivation. It is the psychological structure of the individual rather than the effects of the drug that determines the etiology of the addiction. Even if this person did not turn to the use of the narcotic drug to relieve his tension, he would need help anyway.

Once introduced to the drug, however, such a person will never forget its effects. The initial use of the drug produces an incomparable sense of well-being, self-sufficiency, and security. Problems no longer exist, decisions do not have to be made. The drug is the decision. The memory of this experience beckons as a panacea for all the unbearable frustrations of daily living. Once the alluring invitation is accepted, addiction is almost inevitable.

Item V.—As is the case in practically all instances of clinical pathology, addiction to narcotic drugs is not merely an "either/or" condition. A person is not just "either addicted or not addicted"; he is not just "either an addict or not an addict." Addiction is a phenomenon that courses through a graduated continuum of degree of involvement or intensity from extremely mild to extremely severe.

There are also different types of addicts. Variable factors coexist in various combinations as degree of craving, psychological pathology, physiological dependence, and what Dr. Isidor Chein, of New York, terms "degree of total personal involvement with narcotics." Each type will pose different problems of treatment and are quite likely to have different etiological histories and prognoses.

Variations also exist from addict to addict as regards level of motivation to live without the drug, to be rid of it. Still further variations exist in the ability of the addict, the so-called degree of ego-organization, to work toward such an aim, to be able to relate to a treatment staff, to be able even to accept any help that might be made available to him. Again, these variations run the gamut of possible degrees.

For example, there are "full-blown addicts" who have no desire whatsoever to live without narcotics, who will never be content with or even consider such a thing as maintenance doses that will only prevent the withdrawal symptoms. They crave the experience of getting "high," feeling the "kick" or "bang," or reaching a state of "oblivion" and will go to any lengths to achieve it. And even this characteristic is not a constant and a consistent thing. It will come and go at different times within the same person.

By the same token, there are addicts who can be greatly benefited by a maintenance dose schedule while certain psychological, physical, or environmental problems are being worked with and then an active treatment program instituted aimed toward abstinence.

And finally there are those rather rare exceptions, cases where with a regular and readily accessible source of supply of the drug the individual may be employed quite constructively in work and creative expression and make an adequate living adjustment. He is not at all interested in procuring the "kick" and it seems he has never heard of physical tolerance where the dose has to be constantly increased or the withdrawal sickness sets in. A problem develops only when his regular minimal drug intake is threatened.

Obviously, it is meaningless simply to identify an individual as an addict. It is completely erroneous to believe that addicts constitute any kind of homogeneous group.

1302 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Item VI.—Reliance upon rehabilitative and control efforts on a voluntary basis is generally ineffectual, if not wholly futile. Strict and enforced supervision is usually required.

Exceptions do exist. In both private and clinic practice I have treated addicted persons whose addiction was completely unknown to anyone other than the patient and myself. They sought psychiatric care because they perceived their own emotional illness and recognized that their addiction must somehow be related to it. Their motivation, sincerity, and cooperation were good and the therapeutic results were excellent. In some instances, the patient actually withdrew himself through self-controlled administration of a gradually decreasing dosage of his own supply of drugs. Some cases required no specific withdrawal program because of the low level of physiological dependence. Other cases were withdrawn on an ambulatory, outpatient basis. In still others, hospitalization was required and the withdrawal was accomplished on the open medical ward of a general hospital. I must stress that these addicted patients are far in the minority but not the inconsequential rarity as is so often posed.

A more typical representation of the addict population within a community is reflected by some of the experiences of the Detroit Narcotics Clinic. It was stated above that the clinic operated on a voluntary basis; that is, all patients referred to the clinic were free to come or not, to continue attendance or not as they saw fit.

The concept of voluntary patient was viewed simply to mean a motivation that excluded any sort of overt external coercion, civil or criminal. Insight by the addicted person of an emotional problem or an expressed need for psychiatric care were intentionally excluded from this definition. But even with such a broad interpretation of voluntary motivation, only 34 addicts out of 510 studies, 6.7 percent, could be so classified. And even among these 34 persons, 20 came to the clinic solely for the purpose of being "cured" only by being withdrawn from the drug. They clearly indicated that they had no desire and felt no need to continue contact following withdrawal. Most of these persons were seeking only to regain a state of increased susceptibility to the drug effect so that they could once more experience the "kick" long since gone with increased tolerance to the drug.

The other categories of motivation for clinic visit, which we would not term especially voluntary, were as follows:

	Percent
1. Pressure of family or friend.....	21.2
2. Cost of unavailability of drug.....	19.0
3. Police prisoner (hospital).....	19.4
4. Referred by probation department.....	12.4
5. Fear of police apprehension.....	4.7
6. Danger of losing job.....	4.1
7. Pressure by physician.....	3.7
8. Referred after police investigation.....	2.7
9. Drug overdose or medical emergency.....	2.7
10. No drug history.....	1.4
11. Not noted in early records.....	2.0

Among these 510 persons who approached the clinic presumably in search of aid voluntarily were 164 who were admitted to Detroit Receiving Hospital for acute withdrawal treatment on their first clinic visit. While in the hospital, these patients were in contact with clinic personnel and specific clinic appointments were made postdischarge. Despite this, following discharge from the hospital 80 percent did not return to the clinic unless they had relapsed and entered a read addiction state.

The Detroit Police Department Narcotic Squad at that time was providing the clinic with a carbon copy of their arrest record of all individuals arrested because of addiction. The clinic contacted these persons by mail. It identified itself and explained its function and facilities in such a manner as to preserve the anonymity of the person as an addict but yet so the addicted person could hardly misunderstand its intent. In a period of 1½ years such letters were sent to 714 persons offering to them the facilities of the clinic as an opportunity to help themselves with their problem. Only 28 individuals, 3.9 percent, replied by making even a first visit to the clinic.

Also among these 510 patients were 87 who applied through the clinic to the USPHS hospital at Lexington, Ky., and were accepted for admission. These were persons with whom such hospitalization had been discussed in great detail and who seriously agreed that it was indicated and of potential benefit to them.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1303

It seems that a 2-week wait for a bed was too much; only 52 patients actually reported to the hospital. And of these 52 patients, 30 left the institution against medical advice shortly after admission; 10 patients completed only the minimal hospital stay. Of these 40 patients, 36 did not resume contact with the clinic, as previously arranged, unless they had become readdicted.

Finally, review of the manner in which appointments were kept, or rather not kept, both at the clinic and with agencies recruited to aid in the work at hand also served to point out the addict's inability to help himself. His dependency, passivity, narcissism, low-frustration tolerance, disregard of time and general irresponsibility, all characteristic of his personality structure, almost always prevented him from relying upon himself to provide his own help.

The experience in subsequent years has only served to substantiate and emphasize these findings.

Item VII.—In any community program of control of the problem of narcotic addiction, we believe that civil court commitment has a vital role to play in a great majority of cases. But this does not mean that the patient is to be sentenced to a hospital for being mentally ill in lieu of going to jail for violation of the narcotics laws. As a matter of fact, it is our belief that a purely institutional setting, hospitalization on either a court committed or voluntary basis, by itself, especially for a prolonged period of time, promises little in the direction of success. Hospitalization must be viewed as but one facet of a total treatment program.

It has a very specific role to play but by no means constitutes the treatment of addiction. The instrument of civil commitment is viewed as just that, an instrument. It is another tool available to the treatment staff in its effort to help the addict to help himself. It is a tool to be used where indicated and to be applied throughout phases of rehabilitative efforts, hospital, outpatient clinic and community followup social casework.

But here again we are speaking only empirically. We do not know with any scientific validity that civil commitment holds the answer we are seeking. It has never been used in any addiction treatment program to any extent, especially in combination with all the various facets of treatment and rehabilitation we now recognize to be required. It has never been subjected to any kind of scientific research under a strictly controlled experimental protocol.

I mentioned above that in June 1963, the Department of Psychiatry of Wayne State University resubmitted its application to the National Institute of Mental Health for grant funds. We sought money to support the out-patient and community activities which would be integrated with the locally supported addiction hospital. The proposed project was a demonstration-research-training project devised, for one thing, to test under controlled conditions the validity of the hypothesis that civil commitment constitutes an effective method in the treatment and rehabilitation of drug addicts. The National Mental Health Advisory Council recommended our application for approval but apparently Congress had not appropriated sufficient funds to finance all approved applications. The money was not available. It is true that $400,000 per year represents a great deal of money.

Such a research project is costly. But human lives are very costly also, so we are starting over and resubmitting our application this year. Frustration tolerance can be increased through the practice of deprivation.

Item VIII.—From all that has gone above, it is clear that we can state a general principle of operation in the treatment of drug addiction. Each addict is entitled to acknowledgment of his individual being and should be availed of complete medical, psychological, and sociological assessment. He should also be provided the best available treatment in terms of his own particular psychological, medical, and sociological needs.

Where the private physician has the necessary training and experience in dealing with problems of addiction, he can be extremely valuable and must be permitted to utilize his medical discretion in determining the specific course of treatment in a given case. The AMA-NRC statement of policy lays down certain ground rules. These will be subject to a continuing review and evaluation and changed where experience dictates.

But not all physicians are trained or equipped to treat cases of addiction even if they want to and a great many physicians do not want to. It is understandable how ungratifying it is to treat a chronic relapsing condition in an extremely demanding, frequently petulant, infantile, and manipulative patient. Also, many physicians do not have any understanding as to just who the addict is and what really constitutes addiction. Teaching and training programs must be developed.

1304 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Of even greater significance is the fact that in most instances the private physician is beyond the financial reach of the addict. A public facility is required in each major metropolitan area in which drug addiction constitutes a problem.

Item IX.—Any community control program must be a multifaceted operation. It will require inpatient hospital facilities, an outpatient clinic, and community and neighborhood social casework services. All facets should be under a single, central administration with the same professional and ancillary personnel retaining continuing contact with the patient through all phases of program operation. Innumerable community resources, medical and social, must be recruited into a community project.

The hospital itself must be a specialized treatment facility insuring an environment free of contraband drugs. Its staff must be especially trained and oriented to meet with the innumerable problems of acute withdrawal, physiological and physical rehabilitation, and psychological and social reorientation.

The basic goal of hospitalization is to initiate the restoration and facilitate the maintenance of physical and mental health. The patient must be returned to the community in as short a time as is possible, usually feasible within 4 to 6 weeks. Its role in the total program is:

- (a) Effectuate an involuntary status where indicated.
- (b) Provide withdrawal and any other medical care indicated.
- (c) Secure psychiatric and sociological studies and an understanding of the functioning personality of each patient.
- (d) In terms of this understanding, develop a patient-specific posthospital treatment and rehabilitation program in terms of the requirements of the individual patient. All preliminary steps of implementation of his program must be accomplished prior to his discharge from the hospital.
- (e) Opportunity for immediate readmission must be available.

Most usually, once the drug has been successfully withdrawn, in 1 day to a week, the previously addicted person is frequently overwhelmed by a surging sense of confidence and optimism. In the protected environment of the hospital, with minimal instinctual tensions, and free of the physiological dependence upon the drug, the memories of the pain and anguish precipitated by the frustrations of daily living become too dim and hazy to have real significance or to be the basis for the lesson that experience should have taught. Now sincere in the belief that he is able to take care of himself and tolerate ordinary frustrations like other people, he presses for release from the hospital. Usually neither logic nor reason can persuade him to remain in the hospital long enough to prepare himself for the inevitable trauma of emergence into the outside. It is just such an instance, which represents the preponderance of addict patients, that the instrument of civil commitment can be of much value to the addict.

Outpatient clinic activity must include psychotherapeutic services and social casework with the patient and, in most cases, with his family. Psychotherapy must be available in whatever form and on whatever level is determined to be required by the individual patient.

Social rehabilitation must be a community, even a neighborhood centered function. This activity cannot be served in the hospital or the offices of an outpatient clinic. On-the-spot, neighborhood contact is deemed to be essential. Many different community and social agencies will have to be utilized to meet the many ramifications of living problems. An organization of Big Brothers on a 1-to-1 ratio with the addict patient to act in assistance to the social service staff would be extremely valuable. I must reemphasize the importance of all such planning being accomplished prior to discharge from the hospital and a kind of reaching out social casework technique developed in order to maintain contact between program personnel and the addict. It is in this instance also that civil commitment process can be effective.

These combined efforts will work with the patient in living areas as employment and job placement, financial support, family care, vocational counseling and job training, academic education, marital and family guidance, recreational and social interests, minority group relationships and acceptance of community obligations and responsibilities.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1305

CONCLUSION

Item X.—Our experience dictates that the addicted person can be helped, but only with an enormous expenditure of energy by the community resources, of all professional and social groups. That punitive community, as experienced by the addicted person, that depriving environment which had made the addiction necessary, must now assume the role of the benevolent but firm communal parent. The community must become cognizant of the severe emotional sickness and the helplessness of the addicted person. The community must recognize his total inability to provide help for himself with his problem of addiction and his incapacity even to cope with the myriad of unpleasant realities of routine living even without the drug. The community dare no longer disregard its responsibility toward the care of its own problem of addiction, and, perhaps, its own responsibility in the creation of this problem. It is a financial burden, a costly one. But so is its cost in terms of self-degradation, family disintegration, and social disorganization.

INTERROGATORY OF DR. HERBERT A. RASKIN

A staff interrogation of Dr. Herbert A. Raskin, associate professor, department of psychiatry, Wayne University, was held at 2:47 p.m. in room 101, Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C.

Staff members present: Jerome S. Adlerman, general counsel; and Eugene J. Marshall, consultant to the subcommittee.

Also present: Charles J. Reynolds, a shorthand reporter from Alderson Reporting Co.

Mr. ADLERMAN. These are interrogatories taken the 5th day of August 1964, pursuant to the direction of the acting chairman of the Senate Investigations Subcommittee at hearings held on August 5, 1964.

Present is Dr. Herbert A. Raskin, clinical associate professor, department of psychiatry, Wayne State University.

Doctor, will you state your qualifications and experience in the treatment of drug addicts?

Dr. RASKIN. My first contact with the problem of drug addiction goes back to 1947 as a medical student and externe at Detroit Emergency Receiving Hospital, followed by psychiatric residency at the same hospital which takes care of all of the drug addiction problems within the city of Detroit, both on a hospital and out-patient basis; followed in 1954 with appointment as director of the Detroit Narcotics Clinic, which post I held until the middle of 1958.

I have been a member of the mayor's committee for the rehabilitation of narcotics addicts since 1953, and currently continue in such a position.

My own private practice of psychiatry, because of the work that I have done over the years with problems of addiction, has included many clinical treatment cases because of the high referral of such cases to me in private practice.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Doctor, are you affiliated with the American Medical Association?

Dr. RASKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And are you on any of the committees of the American Medical Association?

Dr. RASKIN. The Committee on Alcoholism and Drug Addiction of the Council on Mental Health of the AMA.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you also on the Committee on Narcotic Addiction?

1306 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Dr. RASKIN. Of the American Medical Association?

Mr. ADLERMAN. Yes.

Dr. RASKIN. It is now the Committee on Alcoholism and Drug Addiction. Formerly it was the Committee on Drug Addiction.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I will address myself principally to the question of ambulatory maintenance treatment which has been advocated by the New York Academy of Medicine, and by the Advisory Council of Judges of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency.

Has the Committee on Alcoholism and Drug Addiction considered the question of ambulatory maintenance?

Dr. RASKIN. Yes, sir. The committee has issued its findings in the report of June 1963, as approved by the house of delegates and the Executive Council of the American Medical Association, and printed in the Journal of the American Medical Association in September 1963.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Does this committee represent the largest body of medical opinion in the United States?

Dr. RASKIN. It is the official representation of the American Medical Association, which is recognized as organized medicine.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And, as such, the American Medical Association has taken a position on what it considers to be proper medical treatment?

Dr. RASKIN. Proper, ethical, legitimate, legal medical practice in relation to the physician and his treatment of drug addiction, the drug addict, and the use of narcotic drugs in the general practice of medicine.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And the association lays down a sort of guideline to be followed by the medical profession?

Dr. RASKIN. It is a kind of tentative code, as indicated in the statement, provide guidelines, lay the groundwork, the limitations which we feel are applicable at the present time under current knowledge, so to speak, in terms of the field of medicine dealing with the general problem of addiction and the addict, yes.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The American Medical Association's Committee on Alcoholism and Narcotics has issued several reports on narcotic addiction?

Dr. RASKIN. Over the years, the council on mental health has issued reports, yes. The report to which I referred was the first of the committee on narcotics, within my knowledge.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And is your committee part of the group that prepared this report?

Dr. RASKIN. Yes, sir. It was a combined statement of the American Medical Association and the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences.

Mr. ADLERMAN. When this report was drawn up, were the conclusions, findings, and statements of fact drawn up by physicians who are experienced in the field of narcotic treatment in various aspects of medicine as affected by narcotics?

Dr. RASKIN. Yes, sir. All the members of the AMA committee are physicians who either currently or within the recent past have had some relationship with the problem of drug addiction and the care and treatment and rehabilitation of addicts in one direction or another.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1307

Mr. ADLERMAN. Did you take an active part in preparing this report?

Dr. RASKIN. Yes, sir. I was in on the original draft of the report.

Mr. ADLERMAN. In a report on narcotic addiction of 1963, did you review the operation of narcotic clinics between 1919 and 1923?

Dr. RASKIN. As best we could from whatever written records or personal recall of individuals with whom we consulted.

Mr. ADLERMAN. As a result of this study, was it concluded by the association that the operation of narcotic clinics in those years had been a failure, and were the operations condemned by the then members of the American Medical Association, who urged the Attorney General to close these clinics?

Dr. RASKIN. Yes, I think that is a matter of record.

Mr. ADLERMAN. And generally, has the American Medical Association condemned ambulatory maintenance treatment of addicts as poor medical practice?

Dr. RASKIN. No; the American Medical Association has never endorsed or even suggested this means of approach to the problem of addiction, and at the current moment the most recent statement also does not endorse it. It is considered to be medically unsound and unfeasible at the current moment, especially in terms of what we know about addiction now, and most especially in terms of trying to gain a means of working with the total problem of addiction, and the total addict population.

Actually, the statement of 1963 revolves in this kind of orientation: What we are trying to do is set down general rules and regulations, so to speak, recognizing that there are going to exist particular exceptions, both in terms of individual addicts and various aspects of addiction problems.

First of all, this is why we label it a tentative code; secondly, we label it as a kind of general guideline to the field of medicine in general in dealing with the general question of how to treat the narcotic addict.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Have you found in your own experience, and has the American Medical Association found in its report, that the chief drug of addiction in the United States is heroin?

Dr. RASKIN. Among the opiate groups, heroin; yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Again, in discussing the problem of ambulatory maintenance treatment, is not one of the prime factors which inhibits the use of ambulatory maintenance treatment the tolerance factor which makes it almost impossible to treat addicts on an ambulatory basis?

Dr. RASKIN. If you phrase your question again, in the sense of a general medicinewide application of measures to deal with the problem of addiction, yes, the question of tolerance becomes a very important factor, because in general, and in the majority of addiction problems, the increasing physiological and physical dependence upon the drug, the increasing chemical and physiological need by the individual for the drug in order to maintain his own particular response to the drug, physiologically, his own psychological reaction in terms of his need expression for the drug, the amount of drug will increase as time goes on, and his intake continues.

1308 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Again, we can cite exceptions to this as a general rule, and there will be instances that can be cited where the factor of tolerance will not be extremely important and would be able to be controlled on a maintenance basis.

So, I think we have to clarify, firstly, if we are going to discuss individual case control, that is, medical measures applicable to a specific patient, or if we are going to speak in terms of how is medicine going to meet with the problem of addiction in any given community.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I notice that in your report, tolerance is defined in the last paragraph. I would like to read this into the record and ask whether or not you are in agreement with the statements made in this report.

Dr. RASKIN. This is the 1957 AMA statement.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I would also like to read into the record from page 12 the chapter on "Emotional Dependence and Physical Dependence."

Tolerance is defined as a diminishing effect on the repetition of the same dose of the drug or, conversely, as a need to increase the dose in order to obtain the original degree of effect. Despite intensive research, the mechanism of tolerance is still unknown. The degree of tolerance which can be developed to the opiate drug seems almost boundless.

Authentic cases have been recorded in which addicts took as much as 5 grams (78 grains) of morphine intravenously in less than 24 hours without incurring any untoward effects. Some facts about tolerance are important to the consideration of the "clinic" plans.

Tolerance inevitably follows repeated administration of the opiates. It develops most intensively and in the highest degree when drugs are given on a regular schedule. Tolerance is manifested both by decrease in the intensity of the effect induced by a given dose of the drug and by decrease in the duration of observable action of the drug.

If the dose of morphine the addict is taking is held constant for a period of weeks or months and the drugs are given at intervals of 6 hours, signs of mild abstinence ultimately appear 4 or 5 hours after each injection. This means that most patients receiving drugs in clinics would periodically wish to have their doses adjusted upward. What the final upper limit would be is unknown as are the physical effects of long-continued taking of large amounts of opiates.

Emotional dependence refers to the psychological meanings of the use of drugs and the effects of drugs. Psychological dependence is, of course, related to the effects opiates create within the central nervous system. These drugs have the peculiar property of depressing "primary" drives.

They diminish hunger, thirst, fear of pain, and sexual urges. They allay anxiety, create a sense of pleasant relaxation, freedom from worry, and enable the user to engage in fantasy. The development of physical dependence creates a new biological need, the satisfaction of hunger or thirst. The addict tends to discard the usual methods of adaptation to life situations. Taking the drug often becomes the answer for all of life's problems. This creates a tendency of an indolent parasitic existence in many addicts which can be effectively countered by a high degree of motivation to work and to produce depending on the personality of the addict.

Physical dependence is defined as the development of an altered physiological state which is brought about by the repeated administration of the drug and which necessitates continued administration of the drug to prevent the appearance of the characteristic illness which is termed an "abstinence syndrome."

When an addict says that he has a habit, he means that he is physically dependent on a drug. When he says that one drug is habit forming and another is not, he means that the first drug is one on which physical dependence can be developed and that the second is a drug on which physical dependence cannot be developed.

Physical dependence is a real physiological disturbance. It is associated with the development of hyperexcitability in reflexes mediated through multi-neurone arcs. It can be induced in animals, it has been shown to occur in the paralyzed hind limbs of addicted chronic spinal dogs, and also has been produced in dogs whose cerebral cortex has been removed.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1309

Physical dependence is important in that it tends to make chronic opiate intoxication continuous rather than intermittent. It forces the addict to seek his drugs by any and all means. The first concern of many addicts becomes obtaining and maintaining an adequate supply of drugs.

Although physical dependence on opiates is a real entity, the illness which follows withdrawal is not as severe as many persons believe. Even abrupt withdrawal seldom results in death in a person who has no serious complicating organic illness. The rate of recovery from the withdrawal illness is relatively rapid. The severe symptoms largely abate after 3 to 7 days, but some physiological changes with mild symptoms persist for several months. It is not unusual for addicts to discontinue the use of drugs (kick the habit on the street) without medical help.

Many addicts, while dreading drug deprivation, have no overwhelming fear of the withdrawal illness any more than the alcoholic has any great fear of the "hangover."

Why do addicts continue to take drugs? There are several ideas. The most common view is that addicts take drugs merely to prevent the appearance of the withdrawal illness. A less well-known, and possibly more accurate, idea is that the addict continues to take the drugs because he obtains direct positive pleasure from satisfaction of a new and artificial biological need.

It seems most likely that a combination of both reasons is the most logical explanation. Many addicts strive to overcome tolerance and to recapture the initial sensations induced by the drugs. It should be noted that complete tolerance to the orgasmic sensations produced by intravenous injections of drugs does not develop. This is one of the main reasons for the intravenous use of drugs.

In the light of these statements and findings by the American Medical Association, don't you feel that a general proposition for ambulatory maintenance of drug addicts would face its administrators with the impossibility of maintaining an addict on a stable dosage basis except in rare instances?

Dr. RASKIN. I would agree with that completely. There are other factors of psychiatric aspects, of the individual who becomes the addict, that lends even more strength to the conclusion that ambulatory maintenance doses does not constitute a means of either treatment of the addiction state, treatment of the addict himself, or any kind of control of addiction within a community.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Doctor, there have been some statements and some testimony to the effect that doctors should be allowed to maintain addicts for an indefinite time on dosages of narcotics because a psychiatrist, for example, would be able to treat the addict and obtain his cooperation and establish a position from which he can treat the patient. Am I stating that correctly?

Dr. RASKIN. If I understand correctly, it is my feeling that unless the therapeutic aim is very clearly defined and mutually understood by both, the addict patient and the physician, be he psychiatrist or not, that the aim of the whole professional relationship is to help the addicted person deal with his own addiction and all of the various psychological and physiological concomitants of what we call addiction, in such a manner so that the individual is able to live his life without the drug, that this does not constitute treatment.

Every treatment situation requires a goal. If it is even implied to the addict that the physician is going to help him to maintain his drug intake and perhaps learn to live with the drug "better," assuming there is such a thing, the therapeutic situation is doomed to failure, the demands, requirements, that the patient is going to be making upon the physician within a length of time is going to become of such a nature that the physician, himself, I am afraid, will have to withdraw from the treatment situation because it will be impossible for him to meet with the demands.

1310 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Our experience in dealing with drug addicts and various other clinical pathological conditions and cases very similar to the drug addict, indicates that the requirements, the demands, the physical manipulations that the individual is going to attempt anyway, all of the various ruses that he is going to attempt under the best of circumstances, makes it sufficiently difficult for really the patient or the physician to work in a treatment situation, and I am afraid that unless there is a very clear understanding as to why the patient is seeing the physician—is treating the patient in the first place—it will not be able to work feasibly. Again, I can picture, and actually recall, certain instances where drugs can be provided to the patient in a treatment situation, but there is a very definitive understanding that this is a temporary kind of situation in terms of meeting some specific kind of problem, whether it be medical or psychiatric, recognizing that the duration of the administration of the opiate drug is going to be as minimal as possible, and that the definitive aim of the treatment situation continues to remain, coming off the drug at the earliest moment and working with whatever problems exist within the individual so as to perpetuate and make as permanent as possible his living without the drug.

Mr. ADLERMAN. I noticed that on page 57 of the report, paragraphs 27, 28, and 29 cover ambulatory withdrawal clinics and ambulatory maintenance and continued ministrations, and that the AMA considers ambulatory withdrawal clinics to be generally inadequate and medically unsound, and that the maintenance of stable dosage levels is generally inadequate and medically unsound.

Further, as a result of these conclusions, the American Medical Association and the National Research Council oppose such ambulatory treatment plans on the basis of present knowledge.

Are you in agreement with that?

Dr. RASKIN. Complete agreement with both of these AMA and NRC statements, which is why we repeated it in the current June 1963 statement.

Again, I have to bring special note to the word “generally,” both as regards the ambulatory clinic plans and especially regarding the maintenance of stable dosage. Here, again, we are trying to deal in terms of meeting the general problem of addiction and not speaking in terms of dealing with any specific individual addict, because in another part of the report we indicate where, under exceptional circumstances, on page 56, paragraph 21, it is proper to attempt withdrawal and treatment in an ambulatory basis.

There are specific exceptions to the general rule, but the specific exceptions cannot dictate general medical practice as far as the total problem of addiction is concerned.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is it possible to have an ambulatory system work for any of the narcotic addicts?

Dr. RASKIN. Yes. It will work for certain narcotic addicts. The number or percentage of such narcotic addicts, when compared with the total addict population, is in the greatest minority. As a matter of fact, they do not even represent a significant number in terms of the total addict population.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1311

Mr. ADLERMAN. Is this the group that happens to be of somewhat superior intelligence, of higher social and economic level than the average addict?

Dr. RASKIN. No, not necessarily. Actually, I think it is more a matter of psychopathology, the mental-emotional disturbance that underlies the use of the drug, the personality construction of the addict rather than intelligence or socioeconomic levels, as such.

Mr. ADLERMAN. We have heard one of the other doctors say that there is a small, very small, group who are perhaps intellectually superior, economically and socially superior, such as medical addicts, who might be aided by an ambulatory treatment.

Dr. RASKIN. I think statistically maybe the likelihood or the statistical probability of finding these individuals to be more intelligent, to have accomplished more in a socioeconomic way, will be true, because these are the individuals whose psychological function has been of such a nature so that they will have been able to accomplish, attain, adjust better.

Mr. ADLERMAN. You say this would be a very small minority as compared to the whole?

Dr. RASKIN. Very, very small.

Mr. ADLERMAN. The average addict—I'm not talking about the small group—and I don't know whether you can identify an average addict, as I suppose that is almost an impossible——

Dr. RASKIN. You can't.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Can jobs be held by the greater number of addicts while they are on addiction? Can they be truck drivers, busdrivers, machineshop operators, and so on, while they are under addiction?

Dr. RASKIN. Most generally speaking, the individual who has a significant degree of physical dependence, psychological dependence, on a regular intake of any of the opiate drugs, the greatest likelihood is that they are incapable, they cannot hold down responsible positions that require any kind of complicated, motivated thought action or physical action.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Coming again to the ambulatory maintenance treatment, let us consider large population areas such as New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles. Would it not be a physical impossibility to find the number of doctors to administer to, for example, the 30,000 addicts in New York City, on a maintenance basis, giving them anywhere from one to three shots per day?

Dr. RASKIN. Well, my own opinion, and this comes actually from many, many informal surveys and contact with addicted people, is that if we were to have a clinic available and we were to indicate to the addict that we will provide them with a predetermined dose of, let's say, morphine, they would have to come to the clinic for each individual dose, that we would practically see no patients.

First of all, these individuals are not going to come to the clinic because it is too much trouble. That sounds perhaps rather silly, to think that when an individual needs a substance as much as the addict needs his drug, and we keep saying that he will go to any lengths to procure it, to ask and expect the addict to set up this kind of self-organization so that he will meet with clinic schedules, and he will regulate himself in this kind of an organized fashion, the usual addict with whom we will meet very firmly denies it, that it would be much more to his interest to procure his own illegal source of drug rather than to pursue this kind of structured existence.

1312 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. Even if he had to go out and steal the money to buy the drugs?

Dr. RASKIN. This is of no consequence. We are dealing with a kind of psychological dictation and self-organization where the stealing of money is of little consequence. The value systems involved in the psychology of the usual addict does not cover this particular social attribute, "thou shalt not steal," nor many other moral standard codes, by the same nature.

Secondly, there is another aspect to this clinic. You notice that I mentioned that if we administered the drug morphine, we have all recognized that in the greatest majority, the opium addict wants heroin. Unless we did a complete turnabout as far as all concepts of Federal law, medical usage, tradition are concerned, we would not be able to provide the addict with the heroin that he is seeking.

Again, from the surveys, most of these addicts are not interested in getting morphine, even for nothing; they want heroin. Even if we were able to revolutionize our whole social structure and give them heroin, again the individual addict, unless you gave them, say, a bulk amount, and provided it to them for their own self-administration, only under these circumstances do I believe that we would get the cooperation of the addict to begin with.

But here, again, if we are going to direct and expect the individual addict to set up a self-scheduled administration program, where, say, we give him a week supply and ask him to prorate this mutually agreed upon amount over the week, he will take so much per day for 7 days, the addict who honestly reports to you will indicate that it is an absurdity, because by the end of the second day, if it lasts that long, the total amount prorated for the week would be gone.

Here, again, the psychology of the individual addict comes into play because if the individual had what we call the degree and type of ego organization, if he had the degree of self-direction and self-discipline to cooperate in this kind of a self-administration program, the greatest likelihood is that he would not be an addict in the first place, and that we would not be seeing him in this kind of clinical situation.

Mr. ADLERMAN. So in order really to have an ambulatory maintenance system work with the heroin addict, we would have to revise our own laws in order to obtain heroin to give to the doctors.

Dr. RASKIN. Even if we did, it is my personal feeling out of experience in Detroit that such a clinic would not work.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you familiar with the problems they had in Israel recently on that type of clinic?

Dr. RASKIN. Not enough to discuss it; no.

Mr. ADLERMAN. It was reported in the United Nations bulletin.

Dr. RASKIN. No; I did not see the report.

Mr. ADLERMAN. This is a matter that is in the record now.

Dr. RASKIN. Let me add to my answer in terms of these ambulatory clinics. There is another factor involved, and you hear it spoken of so very, very frequently, that if the drug were made legal that "a large proportion of addicts" would no longer feel that they wanted the drug because their primary motivation for taking the drug is the acting out or the expression of a psychological disorder, of an antisocial nature, and the mere fact that it is an illegal act is what constitutes their main drive for the drug.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1313

Now, it is true that there are certain individuals, we used to call them constitutional psychopaths, and then psychopathic personalities, and now antisocial character disorders, where the mere illegality of the drug and the pitting of themselves in an antisocial fashion against authority, plays a very important role in their acquisition and use of the drug.

But here, again, we are dealing with a very small minority of the addict population, and actually I believe the contrary to be true, that if the drugs were made legally accessible merely for the asking, even if we put in a qualification that the individual could not get the drug unless he demonstrated that he was an addict, I feel that we would be recruiting into the ranks of the addict population many new individuals, that actually the illegality to a certain extent does act as a deterrent, and actually frightens certain individuals away from the drug because of the legal dangers inherent in using the drug.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Have you read the reports of the New York Academy of Medicine?

Dr. RASKIN. Yes, both reports.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you familiar with the report that has been issued by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency?

Dr. RASKIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Are you in agreement with the conclusions and findings of those reports?

Dr. RASKIN. Dealing with the New York Academy of Medicine, especially in the terms of their recommendations, it is extremely difficult to disagree with any of their recommendations, if it is taken literally as stated in the report and properly interpreted.

My own personal opinion was that the recommendations did not completely grow out of the material that precedes the recommendations, at least some of the material, because I don't think anybody can disagree that a national policy having a central thesis that the addict is a sick person, or that this thesis should guide any and all agencies in dealing with the narcotics problem in the addict, and that the medical approach to narcotics and addiction should be allowed application.

The question of fulfillment by rescission of the present threatening regulation which denies to the physician freedom to treat addiction according to his "clinical judgment" I don't think is a completely accurate statement, and especially now in terms of the American Medical Association-National Research Council's statement that particular objection has even less credence.

As to whether the Narcotics Bureau shall pull out of the regulations No. 5, the specific statement regarding what constitutes a prescription, I don't see where it makes any difference as to whether that particular regulation is pulled out because as they indicate in the legitimate practice of medicine, and it is my belief that the Federal Bureau of Narcotics will leave the interpretation of what constitutes proper, legitimate, ethical, legal medical practice to the physicians. I think this was demonstrated by the support given to the American Medical Association by the Federal Bureau in terms of their cooperation in the distribution of our particular statement. I think we are going to get even more cooperation from them.

1314 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

All addicts should come under medical supervision or treatment—I don't think we can argue with that—or that a national program for eradication of addiction be designed and put into effect. We are all working toward that.

As far as the New York Academy's statements in terms of the general application of maintenance programs or ambulatory clinic programs, on a voluntary basis, I think my own opinion has already been stated, and it runs contrary to the feelings of the New York Academy.

I think we have to recognize another element in this whole situation. I don't think that medicine right now is really in a position to state the final definitive word as to how medicine can deal with the problem of addiction. I think we are in a state of transition; we are in a state of learning and change. The AMA-NRC statement of 1963 represents this kind of stepwise progress that is being made.

I think all the physicians recognize that we need far more research in terms of scientifically testing some of the hypotheses that have grown out of our experience with addiction, and that until we have conducted some of this work, it would not be reasonable to try establishing further definitive methods, either medical or legal.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Let me ask you one more question: Doctor, this is one of the principal arguments that has been advanced for the ambulatory maintenance treatment—an addict under the care of a physician will presumably get a stabilized dosage of narcotics, to maintain him to the best of the doctor's ability and this allows the addict to get his drugs for a very nominal cost by way of a prescription. Thus the profit motive will be removed for the narcotic racketeer.

Do you think that giving the drugs to addicts at a nominal cost or no cost while they are under the care of physicians would eliminate the narcotic racketeer?

Dr. RASKIN. I think we can answer that question "No," with two illustrations, one of which is when you ask any individual addict, "How much drug do you need, how much drug do you require?" his answer almost invariably is going to be "As much as I can get."

The confirmed, addicted person has no minimal and no maximal amount of drugs that he wants or will use if he can get his hands on it. I feel that no matter how much drug we were to provide the individual at cost or free in a clinic situation for self-administration or for clinic administration, this would serve as part of his total drug supply and he would seek and probably maintain his same purchase level outside of the clinic as he had previously, and actually his total drug intake would be increased by as much as he was able to provide himself, outside of the clinic atmosphere.

Secondly, if we look at the problem of addiction among doctors and nurses, to a much lesser extent pharmacists, we find that this is exactly the kind of situation that exists. Here there is no profit motive, there is no cost involved, actually. The individual has as much drug available to himself as he wishes, and the same kind of situation holds true. He will provide himself with as much drug, actually, as he can divert to his own use, again recognizing there are differences in extent and degree of addiction, and there are physicians that I have seen who are constantly in a far advanced state of opiate intoxication, extremely sedated, simply because the drug is immediately and readily available to them.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1315

(Whereupon, at 3:30 the staff interrogation of Dr. Herbert A. Raskin was concluded.)

Senator JACKSON. Has Dr. Brill arrived?

Evidently not.

Mr. ADLERMAN. Would it be all right, Mr. Chairman, if we had Dr. Brill's statement sworn to and submit that for the record as a sworn statement?

Senator JACKSON. If there is no objection, Dr. Brill's statement, accompanied by a proper affidavit or other sworn statement accompanying it, will be included in the record at this point as if sworn to during this session.

(Dr. Brill's affidavit and statement follows:)

AFFIDAVIT

Dr. Henry Brill, being duly sworn, desposes and says that he is director of Pilgrim State Hospital, West Brentwood, Long Island, N.Y. He has prepared a statement which he intended to deliver before the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations of the U.S. Senate Government Operations Committee. Because of conflicting schedules, it is impossible to so deliver this statement and he requests that this statement, which is attached hereto, be incorporated into the transcript of the hearings concerning illicit traffic in narcotics which are being conducted by that subcommittee.

(Signed) HENRY BRILL,
Director, Pilgrim State Hospital, West Brentwood, Long Island, N.Y.

Sworn and subscribed before me in Washington D.C., this 5th day of August 1964.

(Signed) ROBERT A. BRENTWOOD,
Notary Public, District of Columbia.

My commission expires November 30, 1967.

STATEMENT OF DR. HENRY BRILL

It is a personal pleasure and privilege to appear before this subcommittee and discuss the problem of narcotic addiction and especially the areas described in the following paragraph:

"Much has been written in recent years about the problem of narcotic addiction. Numerous 'solutions' have been advanced. One such solution which has had a number of proponents is the so-called clinic plan, which proposes, under various schemes, to provide narcotic drugs without cost to addicts on demand under the premise that an available supply would deter addicts from committing crimes and would remove from the scene the pusher and the peddler of illicit narcotics."¹

THE BRITISH SYSTEM: FACT OR FICTION

I would like to outline for you today certain experiences, observations, and conclusions which relate to the so-called British system and the narcotic question generally in Britain.

THE "SYSTEM" IN AMERICAN REPORTS

In 1958, the department of mental hygiene in New York had become vitally interested in a number of aspects of the British system, and the specific technical practices which it involved. If there was in operation some sort of plan for regular issue of narcotics, it would be important to observe its conditions to find out how much was given, in what form, under what precautions, and how the service was organized.

We were particularly interested because this so-called system was so often cited here as having demonstrated a special effectiveness for prevention, treatment, and cure and also because it appeared to represent an active operating organization from which we might learn to apply some proven principles or procedures:

¹ Larimore, G.; and Brill, H.: "The British Narcotic System." New York State J. Med., 60: 1, 1960.

1316 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

At that time, one widely accepted U.S. version was that in Britain:

1. Any person addicted to a drug was expected to register with an official governmental agency where the fact of addiction was confirmed.

2. Narcotic clinics were maintained, at least in the larger centers of population, where a registered addict could get his necessary supply of drugs at a nominal cost.

Other versions were less definite as to administrative mechanisms but in spite of differences all proponents of the "British system" agreed that, with or without registry or clinics, the British practice achieved its aim by permitting the addict access to narcotics under a benign series of medically oriented regulations. The logic was that by taking the profit out of the traffic a vicious circle was interrupted and thus if we did the same there would be no longer any incentive for the underworld to maintain and extend the market. It was argued that without such support addiction would die out as it had in Britain. It was also urged that once relieved of the need to pay extortionate prices the addict would live within the law. It was claimed that half the crime in New York was related to narcotics and that hundreds of millions of dollars went into underworld channels annually maintaining an underworld system of supply and corruption.

SILENCE OF THE BRITISH MEDICAL LITERATURE ON THE "BRITISH SYSTEM"

When we attempted to pinpoint various important questions about the "British system," we found that while there were voluminous though vague references in the American literature, there was an unaccountable lack of British technical reports of the kind which we needed and which are ordinarily found on such subjects. The British appeared to have nothing to say about their own accomplishments in the field and this was all the more surprising in view of their very large and important literature in social psychiatry and public health matters generally. In conducting our review, we were in addition struck by the scarcity of British technical literature on narcotic addiction generally even in the last century.

THE SITE VISIT

It was apparent that a number of important questions would have to be answered before we could decide what aspects of the British experience might be carried over to New York State and exactly how we might go about the task. A site visit would in any event have been highly desirable, but under the circumstances it was essential that we should have an opportunity to see the clinics and other facilities in action and have the opportunity to consult with administrative and medical personnel who were directly involved in this work.

A visit was accordingly organized with Dr. Granville Larrimore, of the Department of Health of New York State, which is directly concerned with the medical use of narcotics in New York State and has long had a broad interest in the problem of addiction. We went to England during the summer of 1958 and subsequently reported in our observations and conclusions and a copy of the report is attached herewith.

The findings may be summarized as follows:

1. There were no narcotic clinics in England nor had there ever been any as far as we could determine.

2. There was no system of compulsory legal registration although physicians were encouraged to report the names of addicted persons who came to them.

3. There was no formal system of official issue of drugs which would entitle the addict to receive a regular supply from a clinic or a physician or any other sources.

4. The names of some 350 addicted persons were known to the medical authorities but heroin addicts were a small minority and virtually all the cases had characteristics of age, sex, and addiction pattern that marked them as essentially medical addicts; many were older women with chronic painful conditions.

It was quite obvious that any generalizations based on such cases would have no application to the criminal addiction problem which creates the New York situation.

5. The channels of supply were medical and there was no underworld organization such as we have to deal with but there was a small well-known illicit market.

6. The wording of British regulations appears to permit a physician to administer narcotics to a patient who in his judgment needs to be maintained but we were led to understand that these rules are virtually nullified by others which forbid the giving of narcotics to maintain addiction; informal discussion with numerous psychiatrists and other physicians made it clear that the British practice is much the same as our own. We did not succeed in locating any physician who could describe a significant experience with maintenance of the kind so widely quoted in America nor could we locate medical reports which described such a procedure or its results. If there was a right, it was exercised in such a way that the actual practice was like our own.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1317

On the contrary, we were consistently told by psychiatrists and other physicians that they would not become involved with prescribing maintenance for addicts for legal and administrative as well as ethical reasons.

It appeared clear that the British have never had a significant problem, and this coupled with the fact that they possess other and characteristically indirect methods of control has made it possible to retain the flexible sounding regulations. This was carefully done because of professional sensitivity with respect to the broader implications of increased Government control in other areas of practice. As far as narcotic addiction itself was concerned, their attitude was quite similar to that of American physicians. There was not the slightest evidence that the present low rate of addiction was the result of any "system"; in fact, very low rates of addiction are reported from other European countries whose regulations are quite stringent.

Following the publication of our paper on this subject and its rather wide circulation in Britain, Dr. Larrimore and I received a number of very favorable comments from British sources, and in no case has there been any claim from England that this represents a misstatement or a misunderstanding on our part.

SUBSEQUENT OBSERVATIONS AND ADDITIONAL DATA RELATING TO THE "BRITISH SYSTEM"

Following the 1958 site visit, I have been in England several times and have had other occasions to extend and amplify our observations, and to reexamine the impressions already recorded. The result has been to confirm the position taken in the site visit report and to add some very interesting facts. British physicians leave no reasonable doubt that their practice with respect to narcotic addiction closely parallels our own and their treatment results are publicly stated as being no better. The question is, of course, dominated by the simple fact that the total number of their cases is very small, although it has risen from 350 at the time of our visit to about 470 in 1961, and that only a small minority of the addicts take heroin and only a few of these are nonmedical addicts.

It may be worthy of note that the number of these nonmedical addicts and the percentage of the total has been rising during the last few years and the latest information available to me indicates that a narcotic treatment center for the London area is being publicly discussed.

Meanwhile the British have become concerned about erroneous and misleading accounts of a "British narcotic system" and have published comments to clarify the matter. Perhaps the most important is a part of the report of the committee headed by Sir Russel Brain. This report, presented to the Government in 1961, is essentially a position paper designed to bring up to date the 1926 Rolleston Report which had provided the technical foundation for British regulations for over 25 years.

The Brain Committee expresses regret at "The unfortunate and persistent misunderstanding * * * that addicts are entitled to receive supplies of dangerous drugs on prescription and that this involves the registration of the addict with some central authority," and goes on to say that there never has been such a system or such an intent on the part of the Government.

This type of clarification has merely narrowed the ground for subsequent controversy (in this country) and has not disposed of it because, granting that there is no formal "British system," those who feel that our problem is due to our legal structure and social attitudes still insist that the British do have a far more liberal policy since physicians have the right to prescribe for addicts. Some see in this policy the reason why Britain has never had an addiction problem, others feel that there was once a problem which was overcome by the liberal policy, and still others claim that treatment results are better because the physician can follow his own judgment without concern about legal questions.

A part of this discussion is based on logic alone and is very difficult to handle without becoming involved in arguments and counterarguments as to why such a system would or would not be expected to work in this country. Such discussions in the abstract seem to have relatively little meaning from a direct operational viewpoint. However, some parts of this discussion are open to exploration as to facts. Perhaps the simplest is the question whether there ever was an addiction problem in Britain. Since no one could claim to have overcome a problem which never existed, it would settle the issue as to whether the liberal policy had overcome a situation in the past.

1318 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

STATEMENTS FROM BRITISH MEDICAL LITERATURE ON EXTENT OF ADDICTION

The 1892-93 edition of Tuke's famous "Dictionary of Psychological Medicine" (J. & A. Churchill, London, 1892) apparently found it necessary to go to Germany to find an author who could write on "morphinomania" and this author states, "The history of morphinomania begins with the year 1864. Great Britain has contributed very little indeed to the literature of this subject which is very extensive." One can assume from the subsequent course of events and from what we know of the genesis of medical literature that the British had contributed so little because they had so little addiction to describe, at least up to 1892.

In 1926, the Rolleston report, already mentioned above, states with respect to the prevalence of addiction " * * * evidence has all tended in the same direction and is remarkably strong in support of the conclusion that, in this country addiction to morphine or heroin is rare.

"Some experienced general practitioners have stated that they had never been called upon to treat such cases, others that they have only seen two or three such cases in the course of 20 to 30 years' practice * * * there is also a general concurrence of testimony to the effect that addiction has diminished in recent years, most witnesses attributing the decline * * * to the operation of the Dangerous Drugs Acts which made it difficult to obtain the drugs otherwise than from, or through, doctors.

"Although sources of illegitimate supply exist, it appears that those who might, in other circumstances have obtained the drugs from nonmedical sources are usually lacking in the determination and ingenuity necessary for overcoming the obstacles which the law now places in their way. Thus the diminution of the number of addicts may be regarded as mainly due to the fact that the new addicts are not being created as they were under former conditions."

From the point of view of the Rolleston report, the addiction problems was small, was preponderantly due to morphine, and the further reduction of the small number was traced directly to restrictive legislation which had cut off sources of illegal supply. Nowhere is there any suggestion of a problem which had been solved by liberalization of policy. The report throughout reflects the reluctance of physicians to be subjected to governmental controls and the section entitled "Circumstances in Which Morphine or Heroin May Legitimately Be Administered to Addicts" outlines two such types of conditions:

Exception 1.—Where complete withdrawal produces serious symptoms, etc.

Exception 2.—The patient while capable of leading a useful and fairly normal life so long as he takes a certain nonprogressive quantity, usually small, of the drug of addiction, ceases to be able to do so when the regular allowance is withdrawn.

Anyone who has had much to do with American addicts in public treatment facilities will recognize that applied to them the wording of this statement would be tantamount to a complete prohibition of maintenance therapy. Unfortunately British reports are not clear as to the actual application of the rules and regulations and one must depend on the type of direct communication and observation which formed the substance of our site visit report. The cases which have been described in the recent American literature as examples of British maintenance methods are clearly not within the limits of the Rolleston recommendations.

The course of events between 1926 and 1961 falls within the period covered by the personal recollection of the British experts who provided our material and they were unanimous in stating that there had been no significant problem during this time, a statement which is supported by the 1935 report of His Majesty's Government that there were then 700 known addicts in the country.

In 1961, the Brain report says "The incidence of addiction to dangerous drugs * * * morphine and heroin * * * is still very small." The Brain report incidentally casts a shadow of doubt on exception I of Rolleston and indicates that this can and should be overcome by institutional treatment. Both of these papers constitute semiofficial documents which summarize contemporary professional knowledge and opinion in Britain, and as such are worth a close and careful scrutiny. Neither report makes the slightest claim that the liberality of the rules had had a restraining influence on the spread of addiction and there is no mention of any possible value in reducing the problem. The most that is claimed is that the liberal wording of the rules and the way in which they have been applied "has not contributed to any increase in the total number * * * receiving regular supplies in this way."

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1319

Documentation from British sources thus gives fairly clear evidence that there was never any significant narcotic problem in Britain. The silence in the British literature is based on the simple fact that there never was anything which justified recording, and they have remained aware of the problem chiefly through the experience of other countries, especially the United States, and to a lesser extent that of Germany.

Under the circumstances it appears pointless to argue whether anything which was done in Britain brought about a reduction of a few hundred cases; a fluctuation of this magnitude in a country of some 53 million is of little significance in view of the notorious uncertainty of narcotics reporting.

When we come to the question of treatment results, and the claim that they are superior in Britain because of a better social attitude and climate, one can only say that any claim of superiority is directly contrary to the observations of the British themselves.

Finally it remains to review the claim that the existence of a liberal climate has prevented the spread of addiction. This hypothesis does not lend itself to any direct testing though it might be examined by comparing the rates of addiction in various countries which have various types of policy with respect to narcotics and here diametrically opposite conclusions have been drawn depending on the selection of examples. At best the hypothesis of control or spread remains completely unproved and is a claim that appears to have originated outside of England; at worst it seems to fly in the face of a rather imposing set of contrary data from many countries and many States.

WHAT WAS THE ORIGINAL BASIS OF THE STORY ABOUT THE BRITISH NARCOTIC SYSTEM?

While at least some accounts of the British narcotic system represent monumental examples of grossly inaccurate communication, the suspicion will still remain in many minds "Was there any fire where there was so much smoke?" It might serve a useful purpose if we could trace the original source of the story. The Brain Committee assumed that it began as an overinterpretation of the "exceptions" quoted from the Rolleston document but it remains unclear how such a specific and circumstantial account of a system of operation could have been built around nothing more than several purposefully vague statements in an official report. An additional source has been thought to be the American clinic system which persisted briefly during the early 1920's when the Harrison Act first began to be applied but it would be hard to understand how this could be attributed to the British or how the details were elaborated.

An interesting possibility which has never had much attention lies in a British system which was fully documented and which operated much along the lines described but this has to do with the British colonies and never was operative in the home country.

The system is described by Mukerji in the Journal of the Indian Medical Profession of August 1959 in the following terms (p. 2765) (Treatment of Addicts of the Opium Treatment Center, Singapore) "Before the Second World War in Malaya in 1941 use and sale of opium was controlled as Government monopoly and an addict having been examined by a medical officer and duly certified was registered and then permitted to purchase an allowance of opium from a Government shop. It was the policy of the monopoly to bring about a gradual reduction of the consumption of opium."

Could it be that this is the British system which gives rise to the elaborate accounts which finally reached us with some error of geography? It is an interesting possibility, but perhaps a better explanation can be found.

RECENT NEW YORK EXPERIENCE IN RELATION TO THE DISCUSSION ABOUT PRESCRIBING OF NARCOTICS TO ADDICTS

As operating experience with thousands of addicts has accumulated in the New York metropolitan area, and as more technically trained personnel have become directly acquainted with the problem, the various elements in the old clinic discussion have begun to fall into a clearer perspective and differences of opinion have been markedly narrowed.

1320 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

It is abundantly clear that to establish large scale heroin or other narcotic clinics or any other general method of legal supply in New York would be a disastrous experiment, and there are few who would propose it.

The addict as we have come to know him is facile, demanding, dependent, young, impatient, unreliable, manipulative, and intolerant of frustration. The instability of his personality structure is such that any overall "clinic" system is now generally considered to be utterly impracticable. The analogy which has been drawn between alcohol and narcotics is misleading since the addict with whom we have to deal does not correspond to the social drinker who created the main prohibition problem, rather the relation of the addict to drugs is that of the pathological alcoholic to alcohol, and for both complete abstinence is the only course. This is a matter of clinical fact based on extensive observations by many workers with direct experience.

The question of prescribing thus begins to resolve itself into a theoretical discussion about professional freedom to prescribe, and whether any patients exist who would fulfill the criteria posed by both the British Commissions; namely, that they would be able to be maintained on a fixed dosage of drugs and would on such a dosage be able to carry on useful and reasonably satisfactory existence, etc.

This entire question was reviewed recently by representatives of the Mental Hygiene Council of the American Medical Association jointly with a committee of the National Research Council and after careful consideration of all available evidence they decided that such maintenance was not to be recommended and did not constitute ethical medical practice.

CONCLUSION: A FALSE AND DANGEROUS SHORT CUT IDENTIFIED

It appears that various systems for providing narcotics to addicts including the so-called British System are based on a dangerous oversimplification of the problem of drug addiction and constitute a false short cut toward solution. It is now becoming clear that the more costly and complex conditions for development of a narcotic service, such as those developed for New York State, are necessary and in addition they have proved practicable. This can be said from the vantage point of several years of operating experience and while the idea of solving a large part of the problem by the simple device of providing drugs to these persons is a very attractive one, the accounts of the supposed situation in Britain presented in support of such a scheme are very misleading being based on no demonstrable facts as to the very existence of such a system in Britain, nor on any demonstration that the British practices in this field are significantly different from our own or more effective, or that their treatments produce better results than ours. Careful investigation and repeated contact with their practicing specialists as well as examination of their literature serves only to provide further evidence that the so-called British System is an American invention and that the British themselves make no claim of a superior method in the prevention or treatment of narcotic addiction.

Their medical literature is very clear that there has never been more than a miniscule problem in this area and their relaxed attitude and liberal sounding regulations are the consequences of the favorable situation and not the cause of it.

Senator JACKSON. We want to thank you, ladies and gentlemen. We deeply regret that we operate under these procedures, but don't think for one moment that we will not be following up on this very important problem.

The Chair will receive a letter addressed to the President by the chairman of the subcommittee, and a response by Dean F. Markham, Special Assistant on Drug Abuse, The White House. They will be printed in the record at this point.

(The letters referred to follow:)

JUNE 12, 1964.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: This subcommittee, in pursuit of its responsibility to check into the field of organized crime, has conducted hearings into various facets of criminal activity. Late in 1963 we began to hear testimony concerning illicit narcotics traffic. We suspended hearings then at the request of the Department of Justice because of the risk of prejudicing the outcome of several criminal prosecutions which were pending at that time. These trials are now completed and we are advised by the Department of Justice that there is no further reason for delay.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1321

After our hearings were suspended, the President's Advisory Commission on Narcotic and Drug Abuse, which was previously appointed by President John F. Kennedy, made its final report. We plan to resume public hearings at the earliest opportunity. It would be very helpful to the subcommittee to have the benefit of the experience and study of this group. I know we would profit from the findings as well as the recommendations of the Commission. Accordingly, I ask that a representative of the Commission be made available to testify on this subject when hearings are scheduled again.

I shall appreciate any consideration you are able to give this request.

With every good wish, I am,

Sincerely yours,

JOHN L. McCLELLAN, Chairman.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, June 17, 1964.

DEAR SENATOR McCLELLAN: The President has received your letter of June 12 and has asked me to reply.

We note that you are planning to resume hearings within the near future on the illicit narcotics traffic and that it would be helpful to your subcommittee to be able to draw upon the experience and work of the President's Advisory Commission on Narcotic and Drug Abuse.

Actually, the life of that Commission ended on December 31, 1963, following submission of its final report, as specified by Executive Order 11076. However, this office will be pleased to work with you in any way that it may be of service. I am sure that the members of the Commission would also welcome any opportunity to be of assistance in your most vital work in this field. Therefore, please feel free to call upon me and the resources of this office in whatever way we may be of help.

No action has been taken as of this time toward the implementation of the various recommendations in the final report due to the fact that it is still under study by the Bureau of the Budget, who will submit their views to the White House.

I trust the above information will prove to be of help.

Sincerely yours,

DEAN F. MARKHAM,
Special Consultant on Drug Abuse.

(Excerpts from the President's Advisory Commission on Narcotics and Drug Abuse, Final Report, November 1963, follows:)

EXCERPTS FROM THE PRESIDENT'S ADVISORY COMMISSION ON NARCOTIC AND DRUG ABUSE, FINAL REPORT, NOVEMBER 1963

From the Commission's review, four observations emerge:

1. The drug abuser, both the addict and the nonaddict, cannot be cured simply by withdrawal. His hold on abstinence will be tenuous, particularly in the case of the addict. To assume a responsible role in society, he must be led by stages through a long and difficult process of treatment. The confirmed drug abuser may relapse more than once, as in a recurrent illness, but relapse should not be taken as an indication that he cannot be rehabilitated. It may well be that treatment cannot create a mature adult out of the confirmed drug abuser. But it is clear that without prolonged extensive aftercare following withdrawal, there is little hope that total abstinence will ever be attained. On the basis of present evidence, the confirmed drug abuser must be brought into a rehabilitation program wherever possible.

2. The services and facilities for the treatment and rehabilitation of the drug abuser should be in or near his own community. If the goal of treatment is that he learn to make his way in the community, then the services that support him should be readily available in his neighborhood.

3. The treatment and rehabilitation of the drug abuser requires an interdisciplinary approach. Physicians, including psychiatrists, can play a large role in treatment, but treatment and rehabilitation are more than a medical problem. The psychologist, the lawyer, the penologist, the teacher, the criminologist, the clergymen, the social worker, and others all have roles to play.

1322 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

4. For the purpose of considering methods of treatment, drug addicts and habitual users fall into certain broad categories:

(a) Those confined and subject to prison discipline. The necessities of life in penal institutions require that they be taken off their drugs, and many want to be taken off. Here, in the custody and under the control of government officials, is a large group of drug abusers.

(b) Those who detest their drug habit and hail any opportunity to be rid of it. These people welcome therapy which produces relief and will cooperate willingly. Their prime difficulty is an inability to combat the precipitating causes of their affliction following return to community life. Assistance from friendly interested individuals and organizations can be of value here. It should be noted that the preventive effectiveness of this type of help is great.

(c) Those drug users who can be rehabilitated, but who do not wish to be rehabilitated except during brief intervals of remorse or distress at their plight. This is a most difficult category and includes those who succumb to the habit because of mental defects, personal maladjustment, or economic or social conditions. No effective treatment of these people is known. They are the ones for whom halfway houses, part-time release, supervised probation, and similar measures should be tried. The rehabilitation of these people constitutes a vast social problem.

(d) The "incurables." These are the people whose dependence upon drugs has gone so far and become so fixed as to be impossible to change except at severe risk to life or health. It also includes those whose habit has been of such long duration that the education of the victim or his training to pursue a useful vocation has become impossible. What to do with these people is a difficult moral and social problem.

THE MEDICAL USE OF NARCOTIC DRUGS

Since the passage of the Harrison Act in 1914, the Federal narcotic laws have expressly permitted a physician to prescribe narcotic drugs for a patient in the course of "professional practice only" and for "legitimate medical uses" and "legitimate medical purposes." Under this statutory language there is no doubt that a physician may prescribe narcotic drugs for a patient suffering acute pain or from a painful and incurable disease. But a controversy has existed for 50 years over the extent to which narcotic drugs may be administered to an addict solely because he is an addict.

During the first 10 years following enactment of the Harrison Act, the Supreme Court affirmed several convictions under the act involving the indiscriminate prescribing of narcotic drugs for addicts. In 1925, however, in Linder v. United States, 268 U.S. 5, the Court indicated that the dispensing of narcotic drugs by a physician for the purpose of relieving conditions incident to addiction was not in every instance a violation of the act. The case concerned a doctor who had given one tablet of morphine and three tablets of cocaine to an addict. The Harrison Act, said the Court, "says nothing of 'addicts' and does not undertake to prescribe methods for their medical treatment. They are diseased and proper subjects for such treatment, and we cannot possibly conclude that a physician acted improperly or unwisely or for other than medical purpose solely because he has dispensed to one of them, in the ordinary course and in good faith, four small tablets of morphine or cocaine for relief of conditions incident to addiction."

The regulations of the Bureau of Narcotics, however, do not seem to be in accord with that language. The current regulations state: "An order purporting to be a prescription issued to an addict or habitual user of narcotics, not in the course of professional treatment but for the purpose of providing the user with narcotics sufficient to keep him comfortable by maintaining his customary use, is not a prescription within the meaning and intent of the [Harrison] Act; and the person filling such an order, as well as the person issuing it, may be charged with violation of the law."¹

The practicing physician has thus been confused as to when he may prescribe narcotic drugs for an addict. Out of a fear of prosecution many physicians refuse to use narcotics in the treatment of addicts except occasionally in a withdrawal regimen lasting no longer than a few weeks. In most instances they shun addicts as patients.

¹ Code of Federal Regulations, title 26, sec. 151.392.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1323

Drug abuse is not a uniform problem throughout the country, and even in the areas of highest incidence few medical practitioners come into contact with the afflicted. It is estimated that most medical practitioners never see a habitual drug abuser. Nevertheless, spokesmen for the profession have a responsibility to speak for the physicians who are concerned.

The Commission recommends that Federal regulations be amended to reflect the general principle that the definition of legitimate medical use of narcotic drugs and legitimate medical treatment of a narcotic addict are primarily to be determined by the medical profession. [Italic supplied.]

The American Medical Association (AMA) has for many years had committees on this subject. This Commission requested the AMA on January 30, 1963, and the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council (NRC) on February 20, 1963, to submit a joint statement as to what, in their opinion, constitutes the legitimate medical treatment of a narcotic addict, both in and out of institutions. In June 1963, the two organizations, acting through their appropriate committees, submitted a joint statement in response to the Commission's request. The statement has been adopted by the board of trustees and the house of delegates of the AMA.²

The joint statement points out that narcotic drugs may be properly administered over prolonged periods to patients suffering chronic painful diseases and to patients in terminal conditions. It cautions that in such cases the physician should not act alone, but should consult other medical opinion. It also cautions the physician to maintain adequate records and guard against any diversion to illicit channels. The statement advises that narcotics may also be administered to aged and infirm addicts and to severely ill addicts when abrupt withdrawal might be dangerous to life. Here, too, the physician should consult other medical opinion, maintain adequate records, and guard against diversion.

The statement opposes abrupt withdrawal and favors the administration of limited quantities of methadone, a substitute narcotic, in constantly reduced dosage during gradual withdrawal. It advises that withdrawal be carried out in a drug-free institutional setting.

The statement considers ambulatory withdrawal medically unsound as a general policy at this time. While it says that ambulatory withdrawal may be proper in exceptional individual cases, it should be attempted only where the physician has special skill and training in the management of addicts. It cautions that even in such cases the physician should dispense only a day's supply of oral methadone at a time, and no more than enough to reduce the distress or withdrawal to a mild level. While the AMA and the NRC do not completely close the door to ambulatory withdrawal, they do oppose clinics for this purpose.

These organizations also hold that narcotics may be dispensed to an addict awaiting admission to a narcotics withdrawal facility. The physician should see the addict daily and dispense no more than a day's supply of oral methadone at a time. Such a period should last no more than 10 days to 2 weeks.

The most controversial subject with which the joint statement deals is the oft-heard proposal that physicians be permitted to maintain addicts on drugs. According to this proposal, the drugs would be available through legal channels at relatively low prices. Those favoring the proposal argue that addicts would not have to turn to illicit sources for their drugs, and without buyers, the illicit traffic would dry up. Moreover, addicts would not turn to crime to support an expensive drug habit and could lead moderately productive lives.

The AMA and the NRC both state—on the basis of present knowledge—that the continuous administration of maintenance doses to addicts as treatment is medically unsound. The preponderance of evidence presented by experts at the first White House Conference on Narcotic and Drug Abuse and to this Commission confirms this position.

There is no certainty that an addict can be maintained at a stable level. A confirmed addict builds up a tolerance to his drug, and to offset the effects of withdrawal the dosage must be continually increased. Moreover, it would be an unwarranted admission of failure to resort to maintenance doses when research is just beginning to indicate more promising developments in the treatment and rehabilitation of addicts and habitual users.

The joint AMA-NRC statement affirms that further research is needed, pointing out that current concepts of what constitutes ethical medical practice

² The full text of the statement appears in the appendix of this report. It has also been reprinted in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Sept. 21, 1963, CLXXXV, 976-982.

1324 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

in the treatment of narcotic addicts will be subject to continual revision as the findings of research become known. The Commission endorses this call for further research. It strongly believes that properly designed experiments should be initiated to explore whether ambulatory clinics for the dispensing of maintenance doses to addicts are feasible. Ambulatory clinics were tried briefly in the early 1920's, but they maintained inadequate controls over the drugs that were dispensed. Because of inadequate supervision they were discontinued without any conclusive findings being obtained. In addition, there has never been carefully controlled research to determine whether addicts can or cannot be withdrawn from drugs by an outpatient facility.

The joint AMA-NRC statement makes clear that many restrictions on the use of narcotics in regular clinical practice may be relaxed in the conduct of a research project. A psychiatrist treating addicts may wish to experiment with maintaining an addict over a course of months until a positive working relationship can be established. The statement recognizes that the psychiatrist on a research project should be able to do so, provided he remains within the bounds of proper medical ethics.

The experience of Great Britain with its addicts has been cited—mistakenly, in the opinion of the Commission—to support the feasibility of maintaining the American addict. Under the so-called "British system," a physician may prescribe narcotics to an addict as part of a process of gradual withdrawal, or when an addict cannot safely be detoxified because of the severity of the resulting symptoms, or when the patient is considered to be capable of leading a useful life only when a minimum dose is regularly administered.

Under that "system," as this Commission understands it, narcotics may not be prescribed or dispensed solely to gratify an addiction. Before a drug addict may be so maintained, every effort must have been made to cure the addiction. Great Britain has no maintenance clinics, and each case is handled by the individual practitioner. The point of dissimilarity between the "British system" and the American practice lies in the authority taken by the individual British physician to treat the addict as he deems best in his medical judgment.

The greater freedom of the British physician reflects the pattern of addiction in Great Britain. Many British addicts, unlike their American counterparts, would be classified as "medical addicts." Medical addiction occurs when the drug is originally prescribed in the course of medical treatment for a physical or mental illness, and the addict cannot thereafter abandon it. The British addict appears to have sufficient motivation to pursue an ordinary life.

The American addict is quite different. In most instances, he has little motivation and his vocational and economic handicaps limit his ability to lead a normal life. There is no reason to believe that his dosage level can be stabilized. It is often pointed out that Great Britain has a few drug addicts. In 1962 the United Kingdom reported to the United Nations that it had 532 known addicts. But the reason appears to lie outside the "British system." In the view of most experts, this low incidence of addiction is due to the British abhorrence of narcotic drugs and the lack of a cultural susceptibility to drugtaking. With the recent influx of other cultural groups into Great Britain, the number of drug offenses, particularly marihuana, has almost doubled. In 1961, there was a total of 357 convictions for drug offenses; in 1962, there were 675 convictions.

Finally, the joint AMA-NRC statement advocates the establishment of a national medical group to keep current a code of ethical medical practice with regard to narcotics and narcotic addiction and to act in an advisory capacity to the Federal authorities on this matter. The Commission favors the establishment of such a group and its designation to advise the proper Federal authorities on ethical medical practice in the use of narcotic drugs and in the treatment of narcotic addicts. In individual cases in which a physician is alleged to have prescribed or dispensed narcotic drugs in violation of Federal law, the Commission is of the view that the Federal authorities should seek the assistance and collaboration of the appropriate State medical body.

Senator JACKSON. Also to be included at this point in the record will be excerpts from the Bulletin on Narcotics, volume 14, No. 2, April-June 1962, page 11, and other pertinent excerpts.

(See p. 840, pt. 3.)

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1325

Senator JACKSON. The Chair will also receive the following documents and they will be found in the files of the subcommittee:

"Duties of Doctors and Dentists Under the Dangerous Drug Act and Regulations," Home Office, England, February 1956.

One from the "United Nations Laws and Regulations" promulgated to give effect to the provisions of the Convention of July 13, 1931, for limiting the manufacture and regulating the distribution of narcotic drugs as amended by the Protocol, December 11, 1946, with pertinent excerpts.

Also, the interrogatory taken on August 4 of Dr. Harold Meiselas, director of the Division of Narcotics, New York State Mental Hygiene Department.

(See page 1205.)

Senator JACKSON. Also the pertinent excerpts from the President's Advisory Commission on Narcotics and Drug Abuse, final report, November 1963 (see page 1321) and a similar one dated September 27 and 28, 1962 (see page 1352).

Senator JACKSON. Also included will be the statement of Dr. Harris Isbell, a doctor of medicine and a graduate of Tulane Medical School, head of the Lexington Hospital, U.S. Public Health Service Hospital, Lexington, Ky.

This statement has been properly sworn to and will be included in the record.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE, PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE,
August 4, 1964.

DEAR MR. ADLERMAN: I am enclosing copies of the statement that you wished. I had difficulty in preparing it since I was very pressed for time and could not give the matter as much attention as I would like to have.

I do believe I have covered most of the points mentioned in our conversation, with the exception of the differing patterns of drug use in the Southern and Northern States. I believe that Dr. Martin has sent you copies of the work of the Social Science Unit here, so that information is available to you.

Sincerely,

HARRIS ISBELL, M.D.

STATEMENT OF HARRIS ISBELL, M.D.

My name is Harris Isbell. I am a doctor of medicine. I graduated from Tulane University Medical School in 1934. I am a member of the American Medical Association, the American Society for Pharmacology and Experimental Therapeutics, and a member of the American College of Physicians. For 20 years I carried on research in narcotic addiction at the National Institute of Mental Health Addiction Research Center, U.S. Public Health Service Hospital in Lexington, Ky., and directed the activities of that unit for 18 years. I have been a member and chairman of the Council on Mental Health and Committee on Narcotic Addiction of the AMA, and am a member of the Expert Panel on Drugs Liable to Produce Addiction of the World Health Organization.

I have been asked to make some comments on the following issues:

1. Advisability of maintaining addicts on narcotics.
2. Laws relating to the handling and treatment of addicts.
3. Problems of drug abuse other than narcotics.
4. The need for additional research on problems of drug abuse.

MAINTENANCE OF ADDICTS ON OPIATES

Whether or not addicts should be given rations of opiates has created a great deal of controversy. Actually, all statements on this subject are made on the basis of opinion and not on the basis of fact, because the facts to resolve whether such a system is desirable or undesirable do not exist.

1326 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Those who believe that supplying drugs to addicts would have favorable effects base their opinion on the following assumptions:

The antisocial behavior of addicts is due only to the need to obtain drugs to prevent the appearance of withdrawal distress. If drugs were supplied, the addicts would have no need for large amounts of money to buy drugs and their antisocial behavior would cease.

Supplying drugs to addicts would eliminate the illicit market and would tend to reduce addiction, because recruiting by peddlers to expand the market would be eliminated. Secondary gain would be abolition of a traffic that is very profitable to the underworld.

The addiction problem in Great Britain is very small. Doctors in Great Britain are permitted to supply drugs to addicts on a continuing basis. The small addiction problem in England is due to this mechanism.

Supplying drugs to addicts would bring them into the open and would permit the medical profession and other persons to rehabilitate and eventually withdraw them from narcotics.

These ideas have been advanced by reputable, ethical, and reasonable people, not by deluded "crackpots" who are out to undermine the morality of the country or to promote communism. The people who have advocated these systems sincerely believe that they represent the answer to the problem of opiate addiction in this country.

While the facts necessary to evaluate objectively these ideas do not exist, the assumptions on which these views are based need to be examined. It can be argued that supplying opiates will not eliminate or even reduce the antisocial behavior of the average U.S. addict. While there are all kinds of addicts, and while it is dangerous to speak of an ordinary or average addict, I think most people who have studied the problem carefully would admit that the U.S. addict is a person who does not subscribe to the usual mores and morals of the majority of his fellow men. The addict in the United States is generally an impulsive, egotistical person who has difficulty in assessing the probable results of his actions. He is an individual who acts first, thinks later, and is unable to defer satisfaction for a longer goal. The psychiatric histories of most U.S. addicts reveal deep social, familial, and behavioral pathology which antedates the beginning of drug use by many years. Most addicts are individuals who dropped out of school at an early age, who have no skills other than criminal skills, and who have extremely low degrees of motivation to conform to usual social customs. Fortunately, most addicts are not dangerous, aggressive criminals; rather, most are passive-dependent characters who generally do not engage in strong-arm crimes.

Psychiatric and psychological studies show that the personalities of most U.S. addicts are similar to those of other types of offenders who are incarcerated in penal institutions. Behavior of this sort is extremely difficult to modify by any techniques currently known to psychiatry, psychology, and penology. The search for new techniques for modifying this kind of behavior represents a pressing problem in many areas other than addiction.

Since the personalities of the average addict are as they are, it seems unlikely that supplying drugs to addicts would significantly alter their behavior. The basic personality disturbance would be unaltered by giving drugs, and there is no reason to think that the addicts would not continue their antisocial pursuits. Whether the amount of theft attributable to addicts would even be reduced is debatable. Addicts would still have needs other than for drugs, and desires for things other than drugs and might very likely continue to steal in order to obtain their desires. In addition, the problem is confounded by the fact that addicts, on the whole, have little education and few skills. They know of no way to earn a living other than in criminal pursuits, and many are poorly motivated to acquire education and skills of an ordinary kind. They are, therefore, difficult to place in jobs and present a difficult problem of education and vocational rehabilitation.

This part of the problem might not be insoluble, but certainly there would be no reason to expect quick miracles by simply supplying drugs to the addicts.

In addition, all schemes proposed for supplying drugs to addicts involve limitations on the kind of drug, the amounts given, and the time when drugs will be available. Since addicts are by definition persons who have lost the power of self-control with reference to drug use, and since they are psychiatrically impulsive people who act without considering the consequences of their actions, differences of opinion are bound to arise between the addicts and those who decide the quality of drug, et cetera. Many addicts might, therefore, take what drugs they are given and go out and buy more. Further dangers include the registration in more than one clinic, registration of nonaddicts who then sell part of their supplies to other addicts, reluctance of addicts to go to the clinics because attendance makes them "visible" to the public and to law-enforcement officers. These difficulties are more than theoretical. They occurred when clinics were operated in the United States in the 1920's. In recent years, the State of Israel has operated clinics that dispensed drugs to addicts and had problems similar to those described above. (Jerumlowicz, Z. W., and Tunan, A.: "Control and Treatment of Addicts in Israel," Bulletin on Narcotics 14: 11, 1962; Wislicki, L.: "Drug Addiction in Israel," British Journal of Addiction 59: 37, 1963.)

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1327

According to Wislicki, "The number of criminal addicts on the register therefore increased rapidly. They applied for treatment in a certain knowledge that beds were not available to them and that they would receive an allocation [of drugs]. Naturally, they were very keen to get the maximum amount, and unpleasant scenes and dangerous threats became frequent in their health offices, even to the extent that a police guard was required. Another unwelcome result was that many of the opium users transferred injections of morphine, a development indicating a severe form of addiction."

There is no real reason to believe that supplying drugs to addicts will make rehabilitation in these difficult cases any easier. In the drug the addict believes he has the answer to all of his problems. He is content to take the drug, to sit and to dream, and let the world go by. Generally speaking, he does not feel that he has a personality problem and does not believe that he needs treatment. For this reason, most psychiatrists reject the notion of attempting to treat addicts while they are on narcotics. Certainly employers would be reluctant to accept individuals who were still receiving drugs and who were patronizing drug clinics.

Would supplying drugs to addicts eliminate the illicit market? Again, we do not have the facts to resolve the question, but there is certainly no assurance that it would. On the contrary, it might increase addiction. The evidence indicates that currently drug peddlers do not actively proselyte new customers. If the peddlers' market were eliminated by supplying drugs to addicts, it is quite possible that the peddlers might then actively begin to proselyte, with the result being a spread of addiction. It should be pointed out that there are large numbers of people with the same personality characteristics, who live in the same kinds of social circumstances that are associated with addiction, but who are not users of drugs. In other words, a pool of potentially susceptible individuals exists. Why they are not drug users is unknown, but certainly availability of drug is one factor. The effect of supplying drugs might be to increase availability and, therefore, increase the addiction problem.

The argument that the "English system" has reduced or contained the problem in Great Britain and would be applicable to the United States is not valid. England never had a problem of opiate addiction either before or after the British narcotic laws and regulations were put into effect in 1924. The "problem" in Great Britain is about the same size now as it was when these laws were passed.

The probable reasons for the difference in incidence of addiction in the United States than in England have been commented on at length by many people. The true reasons are probably historical and sociological. In addition, it should be pointed out that the average British addict is not an antisocial delinquent as is the average U.S. addict. Addicts in England generally are middle-aged individuals who graduated from school, worked, raised a family, and contributed to the community. They became addicted in middle life usually because of some physical disease or some sort of psychiatric problem. They have never stolen; they do not sell drugs; they are not social problems. The same sort of persons exist in the United States. In every State one can find individuals in middle age or later life who are receiving narcotics from one doctor. These cases are well known to the narcotic authorities, and no action is taken as long as such patients get their drugs from one source and do not sell them. In effect, the United States has the British system.

In summary, my feeling is essentially that contained in the joint statement of the American Medical Association and the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences: "Narcotics Addiction: Official Actions of the American Medical Association," Chicago, 1963. On page 57, item 28, the following statement is found:

1328 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

"The joint statement covers much of this debated issue as follows: 'The maintenance of stable dosage levels is generally inadequate and medically unsound, and ambulatory clinic plans for the withdrawal of narcotics from addicts are likewise generally inadequate and medically unsound.' As a result of these conclusions, the American Medical Association and the National Research Council oppose, on the basis of present knowledge, such ambulatory treatment plans."

I also subscribe to the position further stated by the AMA-NRC committee that the position is intended to cover current clinical practice in the management of addicts and is not intended to obstruct bona fide research of a limited sort designed to obtain answers to the questions arising from schemes that would supply drugs to addicts.

PRESENT NATIONAL LAWS

The present national laws are, I believe, harsh, barbaric, excessively punitive, and unjust. Sentences are excessively long and hamper efforts of treatment and rehabilitation of addicts. Further, even though the addiction problems may have been reduced by the passage and strict enforcement of the narcotic laws, the laws have certainly not eliminated addiction completely. I feel that the laws dealing with addiction should, in the interest of justice, be altered.

I believe that the criminal penalties for illegal possession of drugs should be abolished and replaced by provision for some type of civil commitment. At least there should be a provision for a choice between civil and penal type of commitments on charges of simply possession of drugs. Regardless of the legal type of commitment for illegal possession of drugs, I would favor commitments of indefinite length rather than fixed terms. These ideas are based on the following:

The addict is usually guilty of illegal possession of drugs, however, generally speaking, he has bought these for his own use and is harming no one except himself. Furthermore, the drugs he is taking create far less harm to himself and to society than do other types of drugs that are not controlled so strictly.

To punish the opiate user so severely is, therefore, unjust. To make a commitment a fixed term, obviously, carries a connotation of punishment rather than rehabilitation and treatment. It is a difficult thing to tell an individual that he is under treatment for narcotic addiction when he knows that he has to stay in an institution for 10 years.

If the commitments were indefinite, the patients could be returned to society as soon as it was felt that they had received maximal benefit from treatment, and because of the commitment of indefinite length they could be picked up and returned for further treatment if they relapsed or did not do well in the community.

Illegal sale of narcotics, like illegal sale of any other kind of drugs, should always carry a criminal penalty. Fixed sentences, however, are unjust and barbarous. How is it possible to equate the sale of a small amount of narcotics by an addict to a friend whom he feels is sick with the sale of several kilos of heroin? Yet both would draw the same kind of sentence. The only way in which justice could be carried out in favor of sale would be to abolish the present mandatory minimal sentences and restore opportunities for probation and parole for all narcotic offenders.

If we know anything about addiction, we now know that institutional treatment is not the entire answer to the problem. There is no point in withdrawing an individual from drugs, getting him in good shape, giving him some kind of psychotherapy, and then having to send him out to the same environment that was associated with the addiction in the first place. A patient returning to this environment has no job; he has few skills; he is rejected by employers and even by the social agencies. Institutional treatments should be supplemented by intensive followup care. Services would include trials of such things as halfway houses, intensive parole supervision for indefinite periods, vocational rehabilitation and training, economic assistance, etc.

Since it is unknown whether such intensive followup treatment would really improve results, the laws dealing with the treatment of addicts should be very flexible to permit all sorts of experimentation with various schemes.

There should be also, it seems to me, a definite charge to appropriate Federal agencies to set up controlled experiments with various treatment methods. In order to do this, sufficient money would have to be appropriated to establish proper followup facilities and to set up procedures for evaluating their results of different forms of treatment.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1329

PROBLEMS OF OTHER TYPES OF DRUG ABUSE

Addiction to opiates is only one of the problems of drug abuse that face the country. The largest problem that we have is alcoholism, which is not covered in this statement. In addition to alcoholism, there exists the problem of abuse of a large number of different sedative and hypnotic drugs, including barbiturates, chloral hydrate, paraldehyde, meprobamate, and others. In addition, there is a problem of abuse of stimulant drugs such as the amphetamines and the hallucinogens (LSD, mescaline, psilocybin, etc.). Marihuana and cocaine, which are both controlled by narcotic and marihuana laws, really fall in the latter group. Our ignorance of the problems of drug abuse is even greater than our ignorance of the problems of narcotic drug addiction. We do know that addiction to hypnotic and sedative drugs is more dangerous to the user and to society than addiction to narcotics. Descriptions of the manifestations of hypnotic and stimulant drug abuse have been presented to other congressional committees and have been published in many medical journals, so they need not be repeated here.

At the moment, we are completely in the dark as to the extent of abuse of these drugs. It is known that there is some illicit traffic in these agents, particularly in southern California, but other than this we know very little. There is also little knowledge with respect to the incidence of abuse of the amphetamines and the hallucinogens—very little is known about marihuana, and even less about cocaine. The major need here, it seems to me, is to stimulate research on these problems.

The need for additional research on problems of drug abuse would appear to me to be an area in which additional vigorous Federal action is needed. Our ignorance of many aspects of opiate addiction is great, and our ignorance about other types of drug abuse is truly abysmal. We are continuously in the position of having to give statements about possible legislation and possible programs aiming at these problems when the facts to make rational decisions or to make rational plans do not exist. The only way in which the facts necessary to good programs can be obtained is through the medium of research. Currently the amounts of money expended by the Federal Government on research are rather small. This, I do not believe, has been due to any lack of money. The National Institutes of Health has funds which they would have been very glad to allocate to properly designed research on opiate addiction, and other funds are available. The problem is one of stimulating interest in addiction and drug abuse among researchers. Presently there is a shortage of trained personnel and research in drug abuse has to compete in the market with research of all kinds.

There are very few centers that offer training in this sort of work. The two major ones where training is available are located at the Addiction Research Center, Public Health Service Hospital, Lexington, Ky., and in the Department of Pharmacology at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

The best way to interest researchers in an area is to give them training on the problem. We must convince scientists that drug abuse is not a narrow area or limited in scientific interest. They must be persuaded that drug abuse is a broad area that deals with fundamental problems of adaptation of people to their environment, with the problems of adaptation to foreign chemicals in the environment, and with fundamental problems of human behavior. I feel that the most progress would be made if two or three centers attached to university medical schools could be set up.

The activities of the University of Michigan could be expanded to include activities other than research on the pharmacological aspects of addiction, and the association of the Addiction Research Center with the University of Kentucky could be enlarged.

The object of such a program, of course, would be to develop a pool of scientists interested and expert in areas pertinent to drug abuse.

There is also a need for immediate action. Most people recommend setting up programs of intensive postinstitutional care for addicts. Whether such a program would have any significant effect on the addiction problem is unknown.

The Federal Government should take the lead and should immediately require agencies that deal with addicts to set up various intensive followup treatment programs, such as the use of halfway houses, long continued parole, probation supervision, and the appropriate agencies should be provided with the necessary funds and facilities to carry out these programs. Since the problems of addiction are so similar to the problems of delinquency, knowledge gained about addiction almost certainly would be applicable to the larger problem of managing delinquency. The knowledge gained from studying the problems of delinquency should be equally applicable to the management of drug addiction.

1337 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Mr. ADLERMAN. There are some other documents which, from time to time during the proceedings, the Bureau of Narcotics is supposed to supply. They have asked the right to submit some additional materials. We ask that that material be included.

Senator JACKSON. Without objection, the documents that the Commissioner of Narcotics will supply to the committee will be included in the appendix.

If there is no other business at this time, the committee will stand adjourned, subject to the call of the Chair.

Thank you, ladies and gentlemen.

(Members present at time of recess: Senator Jackson and Muskie.)

(Whereupon, at 11:12 a.m. the subcommittee adjourned subject to call of the Chair.)

APPENDIX

EXHIBIT A

EPIDEMIOLOGIC DATA OF 9,012 INDIVIDUALS REPORTED TO THE NARCOTICS REGISTER AS HABITUAL USERS FROM JANUARY 1, 1963, TO DECEMBER 31, 1963

New York City Department of Health, Office of Narcotics Coordinator, Catherine B. Hess, M.D., Assistant Commissioner, Narcotics Coordinator; George James, M.D., Commissioner of Health

The New York City health code instituted a new regulation No. 11.05 January 1, 1963, which states "Reports of cases of narcotics addiction as prescribed by section 11.03 (physician reports) shall also be made by a person in charge of a correctional institution, social agency, or any other person who has knowledge of or gives care to a narcotics addict."

As a result of this regulation a central registry in the office of narcotics coordinator in the New York City Health Department was established. Full reporting has not as yet been accomplished but all groups are being encouraged to participate. From January 1, 1963, to December 31, 1963, 9,012 reports on new cases were received.

Table IV shows that nearly three out of four (73 percent) of reports to the register come from hospitals. An additional 11 percent come from health department rehabilitation centers. The lower end of the table certainly indicates scant coverage of the addiction problem. We can only speculate about the effects of this underreporting. Here again, because of this, we have to qualify our statements about addicts. It would certainly seem that our figures would have a built-in bias—whether upward or downward cannot be determined. The problem of underreporting certainly leaves a lot of unanswered questions. Some that come to mind are:

1. There are very few reports from the women's house of detention. Would the ratio of three men to one woman hold with more reporting from this source?

2. There is a heavy concentration of Puerto Ricans on the Lower East Side; yet only 9 percent of the Puerto Ricans are reported as living in that area. Would the race pattern hold?

3. We have very few reports from private physicians and private voluntary agencies. It is from such sources as these that we might know something of the "medical addicts." And information on this group of addicts could conceivably change the age, sex, race pattern.

Because this is the first attempt in New York City of voluntary reporting, no comparative figures are available. There is no way of knowing whether this year's figures are typical of the addict population as a whole. Several more years of collecting data will be needed so that some parameters could be checked and comparisons made.

Table I, the summary table, shows that over three out of four (77 percent) reported addicts are male and further that one-third (33 percent) of the addicts are Negro males. Nearly one-half of the addicts (46 percent) are Negro. Not surprising perhaps is the fact that over two-fifths (44 percent) of the addicts are in the age group 25 to 34. We can speculate that this would be the age group that comes to our attention due to the fact that their addiction has probably been established long enough (contrary to the younger age groups) for them to seek help.

Although the largest proportion of males and females both fall into the 25 to 34 age group, a greater percentage of females than males fall into this age group—50 percent of the females and 42 percent of the males. The higher percentage holds for this age group—both male and female—when we look at the figures for race (see table II). Here again for race by sex we find the age group 25 to 34 getting the largest percentages across the board, and the percentage of females is larger for each race than the percentage of males. The highest percentage is for Negro females, 55 percent being 25 to 34. The next highest percentage is for Negro males, 47 percent being in this age group. Both of these percentages exceed the averages for total males and total females respectively.

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

1332 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

The younger age groups show an interesting pattern. Both whites and Puerto Ricans have greater proportions of their numbers in these younger groups than do Negroes. This is particularly true of the males. Of white males 36 percent are 20 to 24 and of Puerto Rican males 28 percent are 20 to 24. Ten percent of each of these two race, sex groups are 15 to 19. This pattern could be due to several factors. There is some evidence pointing to the fact that addiction has been with the Negro longer so that the proportion of Negro users who are teenagers or slightly older has tended to level off. Statistics of 10 years ago, for example, might have shown a different picture. Conversely white and Puerto Rican teenagers have more recently entered the addiction picture. In other words, although Negro addicts most probably represent the largest proportion of addicts (and this is true of the younger age groups as well), the rate of increase among white and Puerto Rican addicts at these younger ages is probably greater. In graphic terms, the Negro curve, while higher, may have tended to be less skewed and have plateaued, while the white-Puerto Rican curve may be quite steep at this point in time. Five years or so from now it will be interesting to see if this latter curve has leveled off.

An interesting note is the sharp drop in the proportion of addicts from the 25 to 34 age group to the 35 to 44 age group. This drop occurs across the board—for total, and by age, sex, and race. Overall, the number of addicts in the 35 to 44 group is 65 percent smaller than in the 25 to 34 group. When we look at the percentage differences by race and sex, it would appear significant comparisons can be made for these two age categories.

Percent drop between 25 to 34 and 35 to 44 age group

	Percent		Percent
White.....	75	Puerto Rican.....	73
Male.....	79	Male.....	73
Female.....	63	Female.....	76
Negro.....	59	Others and N.A.....	49
Male.....	56	Male.....	45
Female.....	66	Female.....	59

The most outstanding point evident in the age picture is the overwhelming preponderance of the younger age groups. Three out of four (76 percent) of the reported addicts are under 35 while 20 percent are over 35, and 4.5 percent are over 44 years.

NARCOTICS REGISTER (CHECKED FOR DUPLICATION)

TABLE I.—New reported users of narcotics by sex, race, and age, 1963

	Number	Percent		Number	Percent
Total new cases.....	9,012	100.0	Age:
Sex:			Under 14.....	25	0.3
Male.....	6,938	77.0	15 to 19.....	567	6.3
Female.....	2,074	23.0	20.....	321	3.7
Race:			21 to 24.....	1,941	21.5
White.....	2,513	27.9	25 to 34.....	3,956	43.8
Negro.....	4,108	45.6	35 to 44.....	1,389	15.4
Puerto Rican.....	1,708	19.0	45 to 64.....	365	4.1
Others and not reported..	683	7.5	65 and over.....	40	.4
			Not reported.....	408	4.5

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1333

NARCOTICS REGISTER—NEW CASES, 1963

TABLE II.—Age by sex and race

Age	White						Negro
	Total		Male		Female		Total		Male		Female
	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent
Total.....	2, 513	100. 0	2, 046	100. 0	467	100. 0	4, 108	100. 0	2, 974	100. 0	1, 134	100. 0
Under 14.....	9	. 4	9	. 4	—	—	2	(¹)	2	. 1	—	—
15 to 19.....	238	9. 5	208	10. 2	30	6. 4	135	3. 3	115	3. 9	20	1. 8
20.....	144	5. 7	121	5. 9	23	4. 9	86	2. 1	73	2. 4	13	1. 1
21 to 24.....	707	28. 1	606	29. 6	101	21. 6	753	18. 3	553	18. 6	200	17. 6
25 to 34.....	920	36. 6	738	36. 1	182	39. 0	2, 015	49. 0	1, 394	46. 9	621	54. 8
35 to 44.....	227	9. 0	159	7. 8	68	14. 6	824	20. 1	613	20. 6	211	18. 6
45 to 64.....	129	5. 1	95	4. 6	34	7. 3	134	3. 3	110	3. 7	24	2. 1
65 plus.....	29	1. 2	26	1. 3	3	. 6	—	—	—	—	—	—
Not reported.....	110	4. 4	84	4. 1	26	5. 6	159	3. 9	114	4. 8	45	4. 0

Age	Puerto Rican						Other and not reported
	Total		Male		Female		Total		Male		Female
	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent
Total.....	1, 708	100. 0	1, 413	100. 0	295	100. 0	683	100. 0	505	100. 0	178	100. 0
Under 14.....	6	. 4	5	. 4	1	. 3	8	1. 2	8	1. 6	—	—
15 to 19.....	151	8. 8	142	10. 1	9	3. 1	43	6. 3	36	7. 1	7	3. 9
20.....	83	4. 9	71	5. 0	12	4. 1	8	1. 2	7	1. 4	1	. 6
21 to 24.....	395	23. 1	328	23. 2	67	22. 7	86	12. 6	63	12. 5	23	12. 9
25 to 34.....	751	44. 0	609	43. 1	142	48. 1	270	39. 5	184	36. 4	86	48. 3
35 to 44.....	201	11. 8	167	11. 8	34	11. 5	137	20. 0	102	20. 2	35	19. 7
45 to 64.....	38	2. 2	33	2. 3	5	1. 7	64	9. 4	56	11. 1	8	4. 5
65 plus.....	2	. 1	2	. 1	—	—	9	1. 3	6	1. 2	3	1. 4
Not reported.....	81	4. 7	56	4. 0	25	8. 5	58	8. 5	43	8. 5	15	8. 7

¹ Less than 0.1 percent.

NARCOTICS REGISTER (CHECKED FOR DUPLICATION)

TABLE III.—New reported users of narcotics by race and sex, 1963

Race and sex	Number	Percent	Race and sex	Number	Percent
Total.....	9, 012	100. 0	Puerto Rican:
White:			Male.....	1, 413	15. 7
Male.....	2, 046	22. 6	Female.....	295	3. 3
Female.....	467	5. 2	Other:
Negro:			Male.....	505	5. 6
Male.....	2, 974	33. 0	Female.....	178	2. 0
Female.....	1, 134	12. 6

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

1334 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

NARCOTICS REGISTER (CHECKED FOR DUPLICATION)

TABLE IV.—New reported users of narcotics by age and sex, 1963

Age	Male		Female
	Number	Percent	Number	Percent
Total.....	6,938	100.0	2,074	100.0
Under 14.....	24	.3	1	(¹)
15 to 19.....	501	7.2	66	3.2
20.....	272	3.9	49	2.4
21 to 24.....	1,350	22.4	391	18.9
25 to 34.....	2,925	42.2	1,031	49.7
35 to 44.....	1,041	15.0	348	16.8
45 to 64.....	294	4.2	71	3.4
65 plus.....	34	.5	6	.3
Not reported.....	297	4.3	111	5.3

¹ Less than 0.1 percent.

EXHIBIT B

CHARACTERISTICS OF 433 NARCOTIC ADDICTS PRESENTING THEMSELVES FOR HOSPITALIZATION TO MANHATTAN GENERAL HOSPITAL FROM JANUARY 14, 1964, TO APRIL 14, 1964

New York City Department of Health, Office of Narcotics Coordinator, Catherine B. Hess, M.D., Assistant Commissioner, Narcotics Coordinator; George James, M.D., Commissioner of Health

CENTRAL HARLEM INTAKE FOR HEALTH DEPARTMENT

During the first quarter of the year, January 14, 1964, to April 14, 1964, approximately 455 persons registered at the centralized intake center. The primary interest expressed by most of these patients was for detoxification at hospitals in the New York City area. Few applications were requested or distributed for the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital, at Lexington, Ky.

In the appended tables, general epidemiologic data has been tabulated for 443 patients.

One notes that adolescents comprise 7.7 percent of the group, even when considered by sex distribution. The percent of adolescents in the Negro group is much lower than in the white or Puerto Rican groups, but there is also a higher percent of patients over 35 years of age in this Negro group.

The sex distribution and ethnic distribution of the patients seen at the rehabilitation center are as follows: 73.8 percent male and 26.2 percent female; 8.1 percent are white, 80.27 percent Negro, and 11.7 percent Puerto Rican. (See table I.)

Most of the patients seeking detoxification have been users of drugs for 5 years or more (64.1 percent). Only 10.2 percent of the patients were addicted for less than 1 year. There is a tendency to note the greater percent of patients seeking services at an earlier stage in the addiction process amongst both addicted females, and addicted Puerto Ricans. (See table IV.)

There appears to be no male-female differences in the amount of education that this group has. Almost 70 percent of the patients have not completed their high school education. Amongst the Puerto Rican group, 99.5 percent had not completed high school, and this includes 38.5 percent who had not even completed their eighth grade schooling. Of the 19 patients (4.3 percent) who had some college exposure, there were 8 who were white (22.2 percent of the white group) and 10 who were Negro (2.8 percent of the Negro group). (Table VI.)

Although the patients seen at the Central Harlem Rehabilitation Center apply predominantly for detoxification services, there seems to be a high attrition rate, between the center and hospitalization (about 30 to 50 percent) and between detoxification and their further involvement in the health department rehabilitation program. The extent to which the patients follow through on their initial apparent interest in rehabilitation is very poor.

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1335

CENTRAL HARLEM REHABILITATION CENTER INTAKE FOR HOSPITALIZATION,
JAN. 14, 1964, TO APR. 14, 1964

TABLE I.—443 cases by sex and by race

	Number	Percent		Number	Percent
Total cases.....	443	100.0	Race:
Sex:			White.....	36	8.1
Male.....	327	73.8	Negro.....	355	80.2
Female.....	116	26.2	Puerto Rican.....	52	11.7

TABLE II.—Age, sex, and race

Age	Total		Sex				Race
			Male		Female		White		Negro		Puerto Rican
	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent
Under 20.....	16	3.4	11	3.4	5	4.3	2	5.6	13	3.7	1	1.9
21.....	18	4.1	14	4.3	4	3.4	3	8.3	10	2.8	5	9.6
22 to 24.....	54	12.2	40	12.2	14	12.1	4	11.1	40	11.3	10	19.2
25 to 29.....	119	26.9	82	25.1	37	31.9	17	47.2	92	25.9	10	19.2
30 to 34.....	97	21.9	66	20.2	31	26.7	2	5.6	85	23.9	10	19.2
35 to 39.....	79	17.8	61	18.6	18	15.5	3	8.3	65	18.3	11	21.3
40 to 44.....	40	9.0	35	10.7	5	4.3	2	5.6	33	9.3	5	9.6
45 or more.....	19	4.3	18	5.5	1	.9	3	8.3	16	4.5	0	-----
Not stated.....	1	.2	0	-----	1	.9	0	-----	1	.3	0	-----
Total.....	443	100.0	327	100.0	116	100.0	36	100.0	355	100.0	52	100.0

TABLE III.—Religion by sex and race

	Total		Catholic		Protestant		Jewish		Not stated
	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent
Total.....	443	100.0	149	33.6	267	60.3	12	2.7	15	3.4
Sex:
Male.....	327	100.0	112	34.3	197	60.2	5	1.5	13	4.0
Female.....	116	100.0	37	31.9	70	60.4	7	6.0	2	1.7
Race:
White.....	36	100.0	20	55.5	2	5.6	11	30.6	3	8.3
Negro.....	355	100.0	81	22.8	261	73.5	1	0.3	12	3.4
Puerto Rican.....	52	100.0	48	92.3	4	7.7	0	-----	0	-----

TABLE IV.—Age and years addicted to drugs

Age	Total		Under 1 year		13 months to 4 years		5 to 9 years		10 years plus
	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent
Under 20.....	16	3.6	7	15.6	7	6.2	2	1.9	0	-----
21.....	18	4.1	4	8.9	8	7.1	6	5.7	0	-----
22 to 24.....	54	12.2	7	15.6	28	24.8	17	16.0	2	1.1
25 to 29.....	119	26.9	12	26.6	39	34.5	41	38.7	27	15.2
30 to 34.....	97	21.9	8	17.8	11	9.7	17	16.0	60	33.7
35 to 39.....	79	17.8	4	8.9	8	7.1	15	14.2	52	29.2
40 to 44.....	40	9.0	2	4.4	8	7.1	5	4.7	25	14.1
45 plus.....	19	4.3	0	-----	4	3.5	3	2.8	12	6.7
Not stated.....	1	0.2	1	2.2	0	-----	0	-----	0	-----
Total.....	443	100.0	45	100.0	113	100.0	106	100.0	178	100.0

¹ Length of addiction process not stated by 1 patient.

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

1336 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

TABLE V.—Years addicted to drugs by sex and race

Years addicted	Total		Sex				Race
			Males		Females		White		Negro		Puerto Rican
	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent
Under 1 year.....	45	10.2	26	8.0	19	16.4	2	5.6	35	9.9	8	15.4
13 months to 4 years..	113	25.5	84	25.7	29	25.0	10	27.8	84	23.7	19	36.5
5 to 9 years.....	106	23.9	79	24.1	27	23.3	11	30.6	81	22.8	14	26.9
10 years and more.....	178	40.2	138	42.2	40	34.5	13	36.0	154	43.3	11	21.2
Not stated.....	1	.2	0	-----	1	.8	0	-----	1	.3	0	-----
Total.....	443	100.0	327	100.0	116	100.0	36	100.0	355	100.0	52	100.0

TABLE VI.—Educational status by sex and race

	Total		Educational status
			Under 8th grade		Some high school 9th to 11th grade		Finished high school 12th grade		Some college		Not stated
	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent	Num- ber	Per- cent
Total cases.....	443	100	59	13.3	243	54.9	121	27.3	19	4.3	1	0.2
Sex:
Males.....	327	100	47	14.4	179	54.8	86	26.3	14	4.3	1	.2
Females.....	116	100	12	10.3	64	55.2	35	30.2	5	4.3	0	-----
Race:
White.....	36	100	2	5.6	12	33.3	14	38.9	8	22.2	0	-----
Negro.....	355	100	37	10.4	205	57.8	102	28.7	10	2.8	1	.3
Puerto Rican.....	52	100	20	38.5	26	50.0	5	9.6	1	1.9	0	-----

EXHIBIT C

POSITION OF THE OFFICE OF NARCOTICS COORDINATOR FOR NEW YORK CITY ON THE SUPPLYING OF DRUGS TO THE NARCOTICS ADDICT IN A CLINIC OR PRIVATE SETTING

Catherine B. Hess, M.D., Assistant Commissioner; George James, M.D., Commissioner of Health

SUPPLYING OF DRUGS ON A CLINIC BASIS

The reasons for advocating this procedure of supplying the addict with medication is the assumption that there would be less crime committed by narcotic addicts, and thus less violence and less loss of material possessions to the general public. It cannot be denied that the addict maintains his habit through stealing and robbery, whether supplying of drugs will eliminate this practice is very questionable.

Precedence for this method being successful is the much quoted "British system." The differences between Britain's problem and New York City's problem are so great that they can never be comparable.

Populations under consideration are widely different

1. The majority (80 percent) of Britain's addicts are medical addicts. They were given narcotics by physicians originally for relief of pain and became addicted. This individual does not have extensive psychiatric problems nor does he suffer from character immaturity, or from split homes, nor does he live in a poor socioeconomic environment to the degree that is found here in New York City with our "street addicts." He had finished school in the past and had been trained to do a job. As an addict, to some degree, he can hold a job not too demanding or stressful. He was not from a minority group and therefore did not feel the pressures of society around him. He does not have the same demands for increasing dosage as the "street addict," and can be maintained on one standard dose for longer periods of time.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1337

It can therefore be said that England's small incidence of drug addiction results from having fewer susceptible hosts rather than from its method of handling narcotic addicts.

2. The New York City addict has never been able to identify with any authority in his life. Most addicts never knew a father, they are immature individuals having many psychiatric problems. The majority are school dropouts and have never received any job training: 45.6 percent are Negroes, 19 percent are Puerto Ricans, 27.9 percent are whites, and 7.5 percent are other.

There are so many they travel together and become addicted not only to the drug but the ceremony of stealing to get money, hunting the pusher, collecting the equipment to shoot up, and finding friends to do it with them. The addict gets great pleasure in involving a friend and spreading addiction.

3. The latest estimate of the number of addicts in England is less than 2,000 compared with the estimated number of 30,000 in New York City alone. The official number reported to the United Nations in 1962 was 175.

Methods of administration

1. There is no known drug suitable to give to the addict at the present time in the United States. Heroin, the drug bought by the addict on the "black market" is illegal here in the United States because of its high addictive qualities even for use by the medical profession. This is exactly how England produced its current addict population.

An adequate substitute for heroin has not been found. Medication such as Methadon prevents withdrawal symptoms from developing but does not give the satisfactory sensation of flush and exuberance and of feeling out of contact with reality. His problems when on heroin all disappear, when on Methadon they are still ever present.

2. If an adequate substitute drug could be found to fill the above needs of the addict and could be administered only once a day instead of the now 4 to 6 hour schedule, a trial research project with a small number should be tried. The following precautions would have to be taken. In order to eliminate the possibility of the addict dividing the medication received at the clinic or on prescription (because it is undiluted and pure) and creating his own "black market," the medication will have to be given hypodermically under supervision.

The addicts compulsion to possess as much as possible would continue. In this case drugs from the clinic and from his old pusher contacts would be utilized daily. He would try to get the drugs from innumerable clinics and physicians to use for himself and then to sell to the newer less experienced addict. For this reason a compulsory registry where all addicts must register within a short period of time would have to be established, so he could receive proper identification. At the end of this period the registry is closed and no new individuals are ever added except medical addicts so certified by a physician. If such a check is not established and drugs continue to be given to anyone presenting himself at a clinic, the addiction problem will grow at alarming rates. However, with such a check the one danger is the likelihood of the addict splitting his supply now gotten from several sources to a group of unregistered illegal addicts with a new "black market" established by the addict instead of a big dealer and pusher "black market."

3. The difficulty in managing an identification system upon registration involving 30,000 addicts, 18,000 physicians, and possibly a dozen clinics is tremendous, if not impossible. In England where an addict usually receives his prescription from only one physician under the National Medical Care System, it makes control quite simple. In spite of this and the small addict population they admit to the fact that it takes a year to get reports back to the central registry office.

4. Addicts because of increasing tolerance attempt to have their doses increased constantly. If they cannot get what they think is enough from the clinic they would get it from the black market. This known dose compounded onto an unknown quantity received on the black market may in many instances prove fatal to the individual receiving an overdose in this manner. The uncertainty of the amount of heroin in packs now on the market in New York City results in approximately 230 deaths per year.

1338 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

No assurance the addict will come to a clinic

In Hong Kong where there are approximately 150,000 addicts some 700 to 800 obtain their drugs through legal avenues. The addict may prefer to continue his supply from the black market because of—

Waste of time waiting.

Fear of law.

Fear of institutions.

Fear of how he will be treated.

Enjoys the stealing and the ceremony.

More satisfying to deal with his friend the pusher.

The addict will continue to be an economic drain to society

1. No incentive to get off the drug if it is supplied: 5,000 cases a year present themselves voluntarily in New York City for hospitalization. Something has motivated them to want to stop the habit. When we find some better answers to therapy and rehabilitation a larger number of these will be cured. In England in 1958 out of 442 addicts, 11 were cured from their medical addiction. Supplying the drug will never offer any motivation to the street addict to stop. The availability of tranquilizing drugs, the amphetamines (pep pills) and the barbiturates has neither stopped their usage nor kept this population at a static level. It continues to grow at an alarming and frightening rate.

England has its own "black market." In a recent study by Cameron of 30 addicts followed in 1 year, 10 were rearrested and convicted.

2. Maintaining an addict on drugs precludes his ability to work. Few addicts can function satisfactory in an occupation when using drugs. He is obviously accident prone and a high risk to any employer. Therefore he will continue to be supported by welfare.

No real foundation that the black market will disappear

The addict will spread addiction to his friends by sharing his legally secured drugs who will then have to continue to obtain the drugs illegally.

The dealer now having a large supply on hand will actively push the material to more groups, particularly to the younger generation and in areas outside New York City.

In an era of excessiveness of all sorts—sex, alcohol, cigarette smoking, and indulgence in drugs of many sorts—it seems incomprehensible that a society would condone such an antisocial addiction of an egocentric few. It would place a stamp of approval on this demoralizing activity of destruction for both the patient, his family, and the community wherein he moves and operates. There is no easy answer to the treatment of drug addiction and as long as slums exist and individuals feel oppressed and rejected, the weak inadequate individual who cannot face reality will attempt to solve their problems with drugs of any type. Giving drugs won't solve this problem but decent places to live, love, and consideration, job training and its resultant security may.

EXHIBIT D

DIRECTORY OF NARCOTICS ADDICTION SERVICE AGENCIES

MAY 1964 REVISION

The City of New York Department of Health, Office of Narcotics Coordinator, Catherine B. Hess, M.D., Assistant Commissioner, Narcotics Coordinator, and George James, M.D., Commissioner of Health

For information, advice, and guidance on problems relating to narcotics addiction and drug abuse, apply to the office of narcotics coordinator. For educational programs, films, speakers, literature, or other materials, apply either to the office of narcotics coordinator or to your local district health center.

The health department maintains a number of neighborhood counseling referral and rehabilitation centers which are listed in this directory.

Under two recent amendments to the New York City health code, effective January 1, 1963, and June 17, 1963, reports are required by section 11.03 (narcotics addiction, habitual, and compulsive use of a narcotic drug as defined in sec. 3301 of the public health law), by a physician in charge of a hospital, dispensary, clinic, other institution providing care or treatment, clinical laboratory, vessel, or aircraft. Reports of cases of narcotics addiction as prescribed by section 11.03 shall also be made by a person in charge of a correctional institution, social agency, or any other person who has knowledge of or gives care to a narcotic addict.

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1339

These reports and records are confidential and not subject to subpoena or inspection by persons other than authorized personnel of the department of health.

The person to whom any such record relates or his legal representative may, however, by signing a written consent, authorize the commissioner to open the record to inspection.

Report forms may be obtained from the office of narcotics coordinator. The completed report should be sent to the above address. Failure to so report is a violation of the law.

The information contained in this directory is presented as reported by the agencies. Listing of facilities does not necessarily indicate official approval of the programs involved.

CONTENTS

Hospitals:

Federal: USPHS Hospital at Lexington, Ky.

State:

Central Islip.

Manhattan State.

Middletown.

Pilgrim.

Mental hygiene aftercare clinics (State).

Municipal hospitals:

Department of hospitals.

Metropolitan.

Manhattan General (under contract to department hospitals).

Proprietary hospitals:

Gracie Square.

Charles P. Towns.

New York City Department of Health service programs:

Astoria Rehabilitation Center.

Central Harlem Rehabilitation Center.

Washington Heights Rehabilitation Center.

West Side Rehabilitation Center.

Public, private, and voluntary service agencies:

Catholic Charities (Department of Youth Counseling).

Catholic Charities Diocese of Brooklyn.

Civic Center Clinic, Inc. (formerly BARO).

Damascus Christian Church.

East Harlem Protestant Parish Narcotics Committee.

The Emergency Shelter, Inc.

Good Shepherd Society of Convent Avenue Baptist Church.

Greenwich House Counseling Center.

HAVEN (Clinic of Dr. Robert W. Baird).

Jewish Community Service of Long Island.

Legion of Mary.

Lowest East Side Information and Service Center for Narcotics Addiction, Inc.

Manhattan Christian Reformed Church.

Mobilization for Youth.

Narcotics Anonymous Groups.

National Family Council on Drug Addiction, Inc.

Postgraduate Center for Mental Health.

The Quaker Committee on Social Rehabilitation, Inc.

The Salvation Army.

Teen Challenge.

Trinity Parish Counseling Service.

Upper Park Avenue Baptist Church—Rev. O. B. Dempsey House of Hope of the Anti-Crime and Anti-Narcotic Committee.

Vocational Foundation, Inc.

Other public service agencies:

New York State Division of Vocational Rehabilitation, Department of Education.

New York State Employment Service.

Law enforcement agencies.

Other relevant public agencies.

Welfare centers.

FEDERAL

U.S. Public Health Service Hospital, Post Office Box 2000, Lexington, Ky., 40501.

Address official correspondence to Medical Officer in Charge.

Type of facility: 1,042-bed hospital—90 percent of these beds are for narcotic addicts.

Eligibility: Male and female addicts who are American citizens who are using a drug which is listed under the Federal Narcotics Act, and who the hospital feels can be helped by hospitalization. Addicts under 21, living at home and supported by parents or guardian need signature of parent or guardian on application form. Parent or guardian will have to present a written request for discharge against medical advice for these unemancipated minors. (Alcoholics, people addicted to the addicting sedatives (including barbiturates), or to addicting tranquilizers, are not admissible unless they also are narcotic addicts.)

1340 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Service: Detoxification, psychiatric treatment, vocational and recreational therapies, and religious service and counseling.

Referral sources and admission procedures: Prisoner patients are sent from Federal courts and Federal prisons. Volunteers must mail to the hospital a completed application form, obtainable from the Medical Officer in Charge, Box 2000, Lexington, Ky., 40501, or from a U.S. narcotic agent, or from the Office of Narcotics Coordinator, 325 Broadway, New York, N.Y., 10007. The addict will be notified when a bed is available. There is usually a waiting list. The length of stay is indefinite; usually 5 to 6 months.

Fee: Currently $11 per day; no charge for indigent patients.

Staff: Psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers, nurses, occupational and educational personnel, and research investigators.

STATE PROGRAMS

The information listed below covers all voluntary admissions and civil commitment of narcotics addicts deemed to be suitable candidates for treatment and rehabilitation. Court commitments are detailed in chapter 204 of the Laws of 1962 (Metcalf-Volker legislation.)

Central Islip State Hospital, Carlton Avenue, Central Islip, Long Island. Dr. Leslie Eber, supervising psychiatrist.

Type of facility: State hospital—80-bed narcotics unit.

Eligibility: Male addicts over 21. New York State residence.

Service: Inpatient detoxification, psychotherapy, casework, psychological services, vocational counseling, family counseling, occupational therapy, recreational therapy, religion, informational, referral to community agencies for special service (e.g., welfare assistance, job placement), aftercare by referral to department of mental hygiene narcotic aftercare clinic.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Contact through division of narcotics, Dr. Harold Maiselas, director. Call Mrs. Gallo, EN 9-0500, extension 508. Patients stay 90 days minimum. There is a waiting list, with a waiting period of about 14 days.

Fee: None if medically indigent.

Staff: Psychiatrists, social workers, psychologists, occupational therapist, recreational therapist, psychiatric nurses, nurses' aids.

Manhattan State Hospital, Ward's Island, N.Y. Dr. Harold Meiselas, director, division of narcotics.

Type of facility: State hospital—190-bed narcotics unit.

Eligibility: Male addicts, adolescent and adult. New York State residence.

Service: Inpatient detoxification, psychotherapy, casework, psychological services, vocational counseling, family counseling, occupational therapy, recreational therapy, religion, informational referral to community agencies for special service (e.g., welfare assistance, job placement), aftercare by referral to department of mental hygiene, narcotic aftercare clinic.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Contact through division of narcotics, Dr. Harold Meiselas, director. Call Mrs. Gallo, EN 9-0500, extension 508. Patients stay 90 days minimum. There is a waiting period of about 14 days.

Fee: None if medically indigent.

Staff: Psychiatrists, social workers, psychologists, occupational therapist, recreational therapist, psychiatric nurses, nurses' aids, teachers.

Middletown State Hospital, Middletown, N.Y. Dr. Luigi Pellegrini, supervising psychiatrist in charge of unit.

Type of facility: State hospital—35-bed narcotic unit.

Eligibility: Female addicts, adolescent and adult. New York State residence.

Service: Inpatient detoxification, psychotherapy, casework, psychological services, vocational counseling, family counseling, occupational therapy, recreational therapy, religion, informational, referral to community agencies for special services (e.g., welfare assistance, job placement), aftercare by referral to department of mental hygiene narcotic aftercare clinic.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Contact through division of narcotics, Dr. Harold Meiselas, director. Call Mrs. Gallo, EN 9-0500, extension 508. Patients stay 90 days minimum. There is a waiting period of about 14 days.

Fee: None if medically indigent.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1341

Staff: Psychiatrists, social workers, psychologist, occupational therapist, recreational therapist, psychiatric nurses, nurses' aids, teacher.
Pilgrim State Hospital, West Brentwood, N.Y. Dr. Joseph C. Clifford, assistant director in charge of unit.

Type of facility: State hospital—105-bed narcotic unit.

Eligibility: Male adults only. New York State residence.

Service: Inpatient detoxification, psychotherapy, casework, psychological services, vocational counseling, family counseling, occupational therapy, recreational therapy, religion, informational, referral to community agencies for special services (e.g., welfare assistance, job placement), aftercare by referral to department of mental hygiene narcotic aftercare clinic.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Contact through division of narcotics, Dr. Harold Meiselas, director. Call Mrs. Gallo, EN 9-0500, extension 508. Patients stay 90 days minimum. There is a waiting period of about 14 days.

Fee: None if medically indigent.

Staff: Psychiatrists, social workers, psychologists, occupational therapist, recreational therapist, psychiatric nurses, nurses' aids, teacher.

Department of Mental Hygiene Aftercare Clinic, Manhattan State Hospital, Ward's Island, N.Y. Dr. Harold Meiselas, director, division of narcotics.

Type of facility: After-care clinic.

Eligibility: Patients hospitalized at department of mental hygiene facility and subsequently placed on convalescent care status.

Service: Psychiatric treatment, casework therapy, family counseling, vocational counseling, and other community resources.

Referral sources: Department of mental hygiene hospitals.

Fee: None if medically indigent.

Department of Mental Hygiene Aftercare Clinic, 39 East 17th Street, New York, N.Y. Dr. Harold Meiselas, director; Dr. Myron Dexter, assistant director in charge.

Type of facility: After-care clinic.

Eligibility: Patients hospitalized at department of mental hygiene facility and subsequently placed on convalescent care status.

Service: Psychiatric treatment, casework therapy, family counseling, vocational counseling, and other community resources.

Referral sources: Department of mental hygiene hospitals.

Fee: None if medically indigent.

MUNICIPAL—THE CITY OF NEW YORK, DEPARTMENT OF HOSPITALS

Manhattan General Hospital, 307 Second Avenue, New York, N.Y. (proprietary hospital under contract with department of hospitals). Edward L. Richman, associate director.

Type of facility: 215-bed narcotic unit operated by New York City Department of Hospitals.

Eligibility: Adult addicts of both sexes (over 21). New York City residents.

Service: (Inpatient), medical treatment, detoxification, counseling or referral, social, job referral, recreational, and informational.

Referral sources and admission procedures: Applicant must be referred by accredited agency, city hospitals' mental hygiene clinics, neighborhood social service clinics, other public or private agencies. Application is made to admission clerk 8:30 a.m.—4:30 p.m., daily (Monday–Friday). Usually 3–7 days' waiting period. For all information and admission procedures, call Miss Bowles, Ordway 7-2911.

Fee: None if medically indigent. Must undergo a means test to determine ability to pay.

Duration of service: Inpatient, 3–4 weeks.

Staff: Psychiatrist, social worker, physicians, sociologists.

Metropolitan Hospital, 1901 First Avenue, New York, N.Y. Dr. Carl Easton, chief psychiatrist.

Type of facility: New York City hospital, 50-bed narcotic unit.

Eligibility: Male addicts, adolescent and adult. New York City residents.

Service: (Inpatient and outpatient), detoxification, psychiatric, medical, social, vocational training, job placement, recreational, religious, informational.

1342 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Referral sources and admission procedures: Voluntary application from all boroughs, referrals from all accredited community agencies. Apply to registration bureau in mental hygiene clinic, 8-10 a.m., 12-2 p.m., daily. After registration, applicant is evaluated by clinic staff. Average waiting period between application and admission is 2-3 weeks. Average length of stay for inpatients is 1 month (2 weeks on withdrawal, 2 weeks convalescence).

Fee: None for the medically indigent.

Clinic (outpatient): Open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., daily.

Staff: Psychiatrists, psychologists, caseworkers, recreation leaders, rehabilitation workers.

General municipal hospitals (as follows: Bellevue, Metropolitan, Harlem, Morrisania, Coney Island, City Hospital at Elmhurst, Queens General).

For withdrawal treatment of "adult females only." New York City residents.

For information as to vacancies and admission procedures, call Worth 4-3958 (only on weekdays, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.).

Should addicts require emergency treatment for any complicated condition (including an acute withdrawal syndrome) he or she should apply to the emergency admitting unit of any of the municipal general hospitals as is the case with an acutely ill person.

Mental hygiene clinics (municipal hospital):

Bellevue: 448 First Avenue, New York, N.Y.

Bronx Municipal: Pelham Parkway and Eastchester Road, Bronx, N.Y.

Coney Island: Ocean Parkway and Avenue Z, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Cumberland: 39 Auburn Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Elmhurst: 79-01 Broadway, Elmhurst, N.Y.

Harlem: 136th Street and Lenox Avenue, New York, N.Y.

Kings County: 451 Clarkson Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Metropolitan: 1901 First Avenue, New York, N.Y.

Morrisania: Walton Avenue and 168th Street, Bronx, N.Y.

Queens General: 82-68 164th Street, Jamaica, N.Y.

PROPRIETARY HOSPITALS

Charles B. Towns Hospital, 293 Central Park West, New York, N.Y. Edward B. Towns, director

Type of facility: Proprietary hospital, 46 beds available.

Eligibility: Addicts of either sex, no age or residence requirements.

Service: Inpatient medical treatment and detoxification.

Referral sources and admission procedure: By doctor's referral or direct application of patient to the admitting office. (Open 24 hours a day.) No waiting list.

Fee: Drug addiction, $240 per week; alcoholic (private) $225 per week; alcoholic (semiprivate), $205 per week; AA referral, $125 (5 days).

Duration of service: Narcotics, 3 weeks recommended, 2 weeks minimum; barbiturates, etc., 2 weeks; alcoholics, 1 week.

Staff: Full time: 2 resident physicians, 2 registered nurses, 12 licensed practical nurses.

Gracie Square Hospital, 420 East 76th Street, New York, N.Y. Stephen M. Smith, M.D., director

Type of facility: Proprietary hospital, approved capacity 220 beds in general psychiatry and medicine.

Eligibility: Male and female addicts 16 and over, no residence requirements.

Service: Inpatient detoxification, medical, psychiatric, social, counseling and referral, recreational, informational.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Call Mrs. Eve Clayton, director of social service, or Miss Gloria Mandelbaum, secretary to director. Open 24 hours daily, prefer Monday to Friday, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. (1) Admission office interview; (2) interview of patient and family by staff psychiatrist; (3) checking in of patient on floor. No waiting list, same-day service.

Fee: $35 per day plus laboratory work and special medication. Deposit of $515 required at admission.

Duration of service: Minimum stay, 2 weeks.

Staff: Director, M.D., clinical director, M.D., 5 staff psychiatrists, 2 staff generalists (all full time).

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1343

NEW YORK CITY DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH SERVICE PROGRAMS

Astoria Rehabilitation Center, 12-26 31st Avenue, Long Island City, N.Y. William H. Shepperson, director public health social work consultant.

Type of facility: New York City Department of Health District Health Center.

Eligibility: Addicts ("using" or "clean") of both sexes and/or families of addicts. No age requirements. Queens residence required.

Service: Outpatient, arrange hospitalization, counseling and referral, consultation, psychiatric, medical, social, informational, educational (phone information, speakers, films, literature), community council cooperation, followup, and rehabilitation.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Call Astoria Rehabilitation Center, Astoria 8-5520 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday to Friday. Patient, family or referral source should first contact center for appointment for initial interview (by phone or in person). No waiting list.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Depends on patient's needs and circumstances.

Staff: (Full time) social work consultant, stenographer, clerk. (Part time) public health team, psychiatric consultation.

Central Harlem Rehabilitation Center, 2238 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. Miss Ursula D. Magagna, director/public health social work consultant.

Type of facility: Central intake center for the New York City Department of Health.

Eligibility: Addicts of both sexes and their families. No age requirements. City residence for referrals to city hospitals and State residence only for State hospitals addiction centers.

Service: Outpatient, arrange hospitalization, counseling and referral, informational (phone), education (through district health educator), participation in community education, consultation to individuals, community, and agencies.

Referral sources and admission procedures: Patient, family, etc., may come to office any weekday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Referrals made to Manhattan General Hospital, Manhattan State Hospital, and Metropolitan Hospital or any other appropriate agency depending on program chosen by patient.

Duration of service: Short-term intake and referral.

Fee: None.

Staff: (Director) consultant, public health social work, case aids.

Washington Heights Rehabilitation Center, 540 West 135th Street, New York, N.Y. Leon Brill, project director.

Type of facility: New York City Department of Health District Center, jointly sponsored by New York City Department of Health, New York City Community Mental Health Board, and National Institute of Mental Health.

Eligibility: Addicts and families of addicts of both sexes, 18 years old and over, living in Washington Heights district health area.

Service: Outpatient, arrange hospitalization, counseling, and referral, psychiatric, medical, social, informational, referral for: vocational training, job placement, religious, recreational; educational: phone information, speakers, literature; consultation on narcotic addiction problems.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Call intake worker, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., weekdays, one or two evenings weekly, as long as intake is open. No waiting list. Service is immediate if accepted.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: From 2 to 5 years.

Staff: Project director, supervisor, three staff social workers, nursing supervision, three public health nurses, medical doctor and psychiatrist (part time), social scientist, statistician.

West Side Rehabilitation Center, 2555 Broadway (at 96th Street), New York, N.Y. Sherman W. Patrick, director.

Type of facility: New York City Department of Health District Center.

Eligibility: Addicts ("clean") and families of addicts. No age or sex requirements. Must apply within 48 hours of hospital discharge.

Service: Counseling and referral, psychiatric, medical, social, job counseling, prevocational training, recreational therapy, educational.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Referrals accepted through Central Harlem Rehabilitation Center and from Manhattan General Hospital. Monday to Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Apply within 48 hours after receiving medical discharge from Manhattan General or city hospitals. No waiting list. Same day service.

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

1344 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Fee: None.

Staff: Director-sociologist, social workers, practical nurse, public health nurses' aids, psychiatrist and medical specialist (part time), psychologist, vocational rehabilitation counselor, therapeutic recreational counselor, laboratory aid, rehabilitation counselor (case aids).

PRIVATE AND VOLUNTARY SERVICE AGENCIES

Catholic Charities (Department of Youth Counseling): 122 East 22d Street, New York, N.Y., 478 East Tremont Avenue, Bronx, N.Y. Very Rev. Msgr. Robert E. Gallagher, director.

Type of facility: Voluntary religiously affiliated service agency.

Eligibility: Addicts and families of addicts (age 7 to 18), Manhattan, Bronx, or Richmond residence.

Service: Arrange hospitalization, counseling, and referral, psychiatric, educational, literature, and speakers; clergy conferences.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Self-referrals through parish priests and accredited community agencies. Contact is made through intake worker who screens patient. Hours are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Service is immediate.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Referral—diagnostic only.

Staff: Manhattan and Bronx Clinic: Psychiatrists, 3 full time, 9 part time; psychologists, 1 full time, 6 part time; social workers, 12 full time, 10 part time.

Catholic Charities Diocese of Brooklyn, family service, 191 Joralemon Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. Rev. Mathew F. Foley and Rev. Rena A. Valero, directors.

Type of facility: Private social agency.

Eligibility: Family of addicts of both sexes, no age requirements, residents of Brooklyn and Queens.

Service: Outpatient, counseling and referral, religious and informational.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Contact is made through supervisory of intake, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday to Friday and evenings by appointment. Referral to field when indicated, after intake study. There is no waiting list for applications; however, the average length of time between application and service is 1 month.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Approximately 1 year, depending on many variables.

Staff: 5 supervisors, 11 caseworkers, 10 case aids, and 15 homemakers, all full time.

Civic Center Clinic, Inc. (formerly known as B.A.R.O.), 44 Willoughby Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. Ralph S. Banay, M.D., medical director.

Type of facility: Voluntary, private, social outpatient agency.

Eligibility: Clean addicts of both sexes, 16 years old and over, New York City residence.

Service: Counseling, referral, psychiatric, medical, social, and vocational training.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Patient telephones or writes for appointment. Social history summaries required on referrals from voluntary and public agencies. Day and hours for admission arranged by appointment. Mr. Edwin H. Busby is the supervising psychiatric social worker. The waiting list is not too long. The average length of time between application and service is about 10 days to 2 weeks.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Depends on patient's needs, motivation, and desire for assistance.

Staff: One full-time social worker (psychiatric); part time: five psychiatrists, nine psychologists, five social workers.

Damascus Christian Church (Youth Crusade), 861 East 162d Street, Bronx, N.Y. Rev. Leonica Rosado, director.

Type of facility: Male addicts using and clean. No age or residence requirements. Minors are accepted only with consent of parent or guardian.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1345

Service: Inpatient and outpatient counseling and referral, social, recreational, religious therapy aimed at rehabilitation and education, informational and speakers. Provide food, clothing, shelter, and dental care. Job placement assistance also given. Church office is open daily.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Call or write director or assistant director. Voluntary application or referral by public or private agencies accepted. There is a waiting list. Average waiting period between application and service is immediate if accommodations are available.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: 6 months to 1 year. Longer if necessary.

Staff: Two full-time and three part-time staff members. Volunteer workers—addicts are withdrawn without the use of drugs, otherwise referred to a city hospital. Program utilizes services of a private physician in emergencies.

East Harlem Protestant Parish Narcotics Committee, 306 East 103d Street, New York, N.Y. Rev. Lynn L. Hageman, director.

Type of facility: Voluntary neighborhood group and private social agency, religiously sponsored.

Eligibility: Addicts, "clean" and using and families of addicts, of both sexes, no age requirements. District residence requirements. East Harlem community (East 89th Street to East 119th Street, 5th Avenue to East River).

Service: Arrange hospitalization, counseling and referral, psychiatric, social, vocational training, job placement, recreational, religious, and informational. Speakers, literature, and films provided.

Referral sources and admission procedures: Voluntary and from private and public agencies. Application may be made in person to receptionist. Interview with sociologist and minister. Open for admission 9 to 9:30 a.m. and 1 to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. There is no waiting list.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Indefinite or as need requires.

Staff: Two full-time members of the clergy, one full-time sociologist, two part-time psychiatrists, two full-time social caseworkers, and other lay and professional volunteers.

The Emergency Shelter, Inc. (St. Marks Shelter for Men), 69 St. Marks Place, New York, N.Y. Rev. Leonard A. Schneider, director.

Type of facility: Private social agency.

Eligibility: Male addicts (clean) 16 years and over. No district residence requirements. Destitute and with no visible means of support. Must be able and willing to work.

Service: Counseling and referral, job placement, religious, informational, social, and recreational on a limited basis. Temporary residence, food, and guidance.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Referral through public or private agencies and on a voluntary or walk-in basis. Service is immediate if space is available. Office open from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily or call Spring 7-1234.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Temporary; emergency housing.

Staff: Two intake counselors, one ministerial counselor, and one employment counselor.

Good Shepherd Society of Convent Avenue Baptist Church, 420 West 145th Street, New York, N.Y. Rev. Henry R. Griffin, director.

Type of facility: Church-sponsored voluntary group.

Eligibility: Male and female addicts, no age or residence requirements; family of addict.

Service: Arrange hospitalization, counseling and referral, religious, informational, phone, speakers.

Referral sources and admission procedures: Call Reverend Griffin, Audubon 6-0340. Referrals from social agencies. Open Wednesday to Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. No waiting list for appointment or service.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Unlimited.

Staff: Rev. Henry Griffin, director; part time: social workers, recreational consultant, registered nurse.

1346 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Greenwich House Counseling Center, 27 Barrow Street, New York, N.Y. Dr. Robert Osnos, director.

Type of facility: Voluntary neighborhood group sponsored jointly by Greenwich House and New York University Graduate School of Social Work.

Eligibility: Male and female addicts and families of addicts residing below 14th Street, west of 4th Avenue, addicted to opiates, narcotics, barbiturates, stimulants, etc.

Service: Outpatient, counseling and referral, psychiatric, social, informational, educational, and recreational in selected cases.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Patient, family, or agency may call center 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday to Friday. (Tuesday and Thursday, 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. call Chelsea 2-3929 number only.) There is no waiting period. Length of service is indefinite.

Fee: None.

Staff: Psychiatrist, psychologist, public health nurse, group worker, case-workers.

HAVEN (Help Addicts Voluntarily End Narcotics), 222 East 116th Street, New York, N.Y. Robert W. Baird, M.D., medical director.

Type of facility: Outpatient, voluntary neighborhood group.

Eligibility: Addicts, family of addicts of both sexes, no age or residence requirements.

Service: Medical, informational, counseling, speakers and literature. Addicts withdrawn with symptomatic drugs.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Attend group meetings and Friday night lectures and then nightly visits from 10 p.m. to 4 a.m. Waiting period is from 4-6 weeks between application and service.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Indefinite—seen weekly as long as deemed necessary.

Staff: Physician, nurse, case aid and volunteers.

Jewish Community Service of Long Island, 89-31 161st Street, Jamaica, N.Y. George Rothman, executive director.

Type of facility: Private family service agency.

Eligibility: No age or sex requirements. Residence restricted to Queens, Nassau, and Suffolk.

Service: Counseling, referral and informational.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Voluntary and other agencies. Apply to Mrs. Ruth Golden. Applications accepted 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday to Friday. Waiting period between application and service is about 2 months.

Fee: Yes—sliding scale, according to ability to pay.

Duration of service: Until referral effected or counseling no longer needed.

Staff: Psychiatrist, psychologist and social caseworkers. Dr. Robert Navarro is director of psychiatric services.

Lower East Side Information & Service Center for Narcotics Addiction, Inc., 165 East Broadway, New York, N.Y. Rev. Edward M. Brown, director.

Type of facility: Voluntary neighborhood group.

Eligibility: Male and female addicts and family of addicts. No age requirements, lower East Side residence required on open intake basis.

Service: Outpatient counseling and referral, psychiatric, medical, social. Vocational training, job placement, recreational, informational and arrange hospitalization, speakers, film and literature. Services also include professional committee, citizen committee, volunteer program.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Registration through intake or social worker, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, Monday to Friday. (Referral through any agency or on a voluntary walk-in basis.) There is no waiting list, service available within an hour.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Indefinite and up to the patient.

Staff: Director, supervisor, three social workers and secretarial staff—full time. Psychiatrist, psychologist, anthropologist and social worker—part time.

Legion of Mary, care of Helper of the Holy Soul Convent, 112 East 86th Street, New York, N.Y. Rev. Lawrence Becker, O.P., spiritual director.

Type of facility: Private social agency—Catholic laymen, self-supported voluntary organization.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1347

Eligibility: Drug addicts of both sexes and family of addicts, no age requirements. Residents of Manhattan, Bronx, and Brooklyn.

Service: Counseling and referral, social, job placement, recreational, religious and informational. Hospital and prison visits. Home visitation; volunteer work at rehabilitation center.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Messages taken by Helpers of Holy Souls Convent, 112 East 86th Street, New York City, telephone EN 9-4750. Meetings held Monday evenings 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. Average length of time between application and service is 1 to 2 weeks.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Indefinite, or as need requires.

Staff: Spiritual director, 15 volunteers (female) including a program director.

Manhattan Christian Reformed Church—Narcotics Rehabilitation Program, 2044 Seventh Avenue, New York, N.Y. James Allen, director.

Type of facility: Nonprofit, church-sponsored, church-supervised program.

Eligibility: All addicts (male and female, no age requirements) who show a sincere desire to overcome drug addiction. No residence requirements but prefer mid-Harlem residents.

Service: Arrange hospitalization, counseling and referral, recreational, religious, social, visitation to relatives, hospitals, prisons, etc., informational, phone, speakers, conditional: housing, job placement, one meal daily ("clean" addicts).

Referral sources and admission procedure: Referral from agencies by written appointment stating specifically what is needed. Schedule: 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. (Monday–Friday). Meal 4:30 p.m. (Monday–Saturday), open meeting, 8–10 p.m. (Wednesday). No waiting list.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Indefinite.

Staff: Director, case aid, plus "clean" addicts as general help.

Mobilization for Youth, 214 East Second Street, New York, N.Y. George Brager, director of action programs.

Type of facility: Private and governmental social agency. Large-scale demonstration project.

Eligibility: Addicts 16–21 years old and family of addicts of both sexes—New York City lower East Side residents with certain boundary restrictions.

Service: Outpatient—vocational training, job placement and recreational. Most services of Mobilization for Youth are available to addicts and their families. Rehabilitative program; i.e., a communitywide organization drive, street work with addicts and preaddicts, and a small group abstinence program does not have open admission. These programs serve specific youngsters chosen to facilitate the research demonstration effort.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Contact made through Mrs. Sylvia Morris, referral coordinator—Monday to Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Service is immediate and depending on service.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Generally brief contact.

NARCOTICS ANONYMOUS GROUPS

East Harlem Narcotics Anonymous Group, 94 East 111th Street, New York, N.Y. Monday, 8–10 p.m.

Fellowship House, 836 East 165th Street Bronx, N.Y., Tuesday, 8–10 p.m.

Narcotics Anonymous, in care of YMCA, 215 West 23d Street, New York, N.Y., Wednesday, 8–10 p.m.

St. John Crysostom's, 985 East 167th Street at Hoe Avenue, Bronx, N.Y., Thursday, 8–10 p.m. Mrs. Rae Lopez, executive secretary.

Type of facility: Nonprofit therapeutic group.

Eligibility: No age, sex or residence requirements. Applicants need only have a desire to stop using drugs.

Service: Group discussion, counseling and referral, informational.

Referral sources and admission procedure: All referrals accepted. Attend meeting and see chairman (open meetings—Wednesday—8–10 p.m., 215 West 23d Street). No waiting period. No restrictions on length of service.

1348 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

Fee: None. Group financed through collections at meeting, benefits and contributions.

Staff: Chaplain, one professional worker, two voluntary workers.

National Family Council on Drug Addiction, Inc., 401 West End Avenue, New York, N.Y. Mr. Nathan S. Zucker, director.

Type of facility: Private social agency.

Eligibility: Addicts, family of addicts of both sexes, no residence or age requirements. Anyone sincere in their desire and efforts.

Service: Outpatient, arrange hospitalization, aftercare, counseling and referral, psychiatric, medical, social, job placement, religious and informational. Speakers, films, and literature provided.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Through office or contacting Mr. Nathan S. Zucker, SU 7-7202 or Brigadier Dorothy Berry, Salvation Army, CH 3-8700, ext. 407. Open daily by appointment only. On first visit, addict must be accompanied by some member of family. There is no waiting list for the first interview. Service for counseling usually without delay. Hospitalization arrangements dependent on availability of bed.

Fee: Yes, if there is ability to pay. No, if medically indigent.

Duration of service: According to individual need.

Staff: Psychiatrists, psychologists, physicians, and counselors. After screening, the addicts may be seen at agency office or at the private office of therapists affiliated with program.

Postgraduate Center for Mental Health, 124 East 28th Street, New York, N.Y. Lewis R. Wolberg, M.D., dean and medical director; Irwin Gould, Ph. D., director, drug addiction project.

Type of facility: Private social agency—school and community mental health center.

Service: Education, consultation and research, counseling, referral and informational, speakers.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Individual, public and private agencies. Contact made through Dr. Irwin Gould. Will consider selected cases only at this time. No clinical service offered addicts.

Staff: Extensive staff of mental health consultants who, in addition, have completed psychoanalytic training.

The Quaker Committee on Social Rehabilitation, Inc., 130 Christopher Street, New York, N.Y.—Office at the house of detention for women. Jane S. Droutman, chairman and executive director.

Type of facility: Nonprofit voluntary social agency.

Eligibility: Women sentenced or in detention at the house of detention for women. No age requirements.

Service: Inside prison: vocational training in typing, shorthand and English; job placement, counseling. Cases accepted while at the house of detention receive services there followed by postrelease care. At Christopher Street office: additional counseling, clothing, financial assistance, psychotherapy, medical help provided. Referrals arranged, including detoxification to New York City hospitals with same postcare facilities. Duration of services varies. Public meetings and symposia on narcotics addiction sponsored by committee. Speakers available.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Following interviews with social workers, cases accepted at house of detention. Christopher Street office open weekdays, 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., except Thursday (9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.).

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Indefinite.

Staff: Five staff members correlate the work of a large number of volunteers, many of them professionals.

The Salvation Army, 546 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. Brig. Dorothy Berry, director.

Type of facility: Private social agency.

Eligibility: Addicts, family of addict—no age, sex, or residence requirements.

Service: Arrange hospitalization, counseling and referral, social job placement, religious, informational, phone, speakers, films, and literature.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1349

Referral sources and admission procedure: Call Chelsea 3-8700, extension 407; 24-hour telephone service. Office: Monday to Friday, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Immediate service.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: As long as sought.

Staff: Director, assistant director, and caseworkers.

Teen Challenge, 416 Clinton Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y. Rev. David R. Wilkerson, director.

Type of facility: Voluntary church related group.

Eligibility: Male and female addicts, ages 15 to 35. No residence requirements.

Service: Inpatient and outpatient, 60 beds available. Arrange hospitalization, counseling and referral, social, vocational training, job placement, recreational, religious, informational, phone, speakers, films, literature, and workers training center.

Referral sources and admission procedures: Voluntary application or referral by accredited community agencies, hospitals, and prisons. Call any member of executive staff (all of whom are ministers) for interview. Open 24 hours a day. One day average length of time between application and service.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: As long as individual desires, subject to staff recommendation.

Staff: Nine full-time ministers, 21 full-time staffworkers (Bible college graduates).

Trinity Parish Counseling Service, 48 Henry Street, New York, N.Y.

Type of facility: Counseling and referral. Cases referred to Lower East Side Information and Service Center for Narcotics Addiction, 165 East Broadway, New York City.

Vocational Foundation, Inc., 242 West 41st Street, New York, N.Y. Mrs. Betty Falek, director.

Type of facility: Private social agency for job counseling and job placement.

Eligibility: Male and female addicts age 16 to 21 who are employable and under followup care and are residents of Greater New York.

Service: Job placement. Employment services, always including intensive individual counseling.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Worker at referring agency telephones for the initial appointment. A preregistration letter giving pertinent background information is a requirement. Open Monday to Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., evenings by appointment. There is a waiting list of 3 to 4 weeks for initial appointment.

Fee: None.

Duration of service: Through age 21.

Staff: Director and three full-time counselors.

Upper Park Avenue Baptist Church, Rev. O. B. Dempsey, House of Hope of the Anti-Crime and Anti-Narcotic Committee, 85 East 125th Street, New York, N.Y. Rev. O. B. Dempsey, director.

Type of facility: Voluntary neighborhood group and private social agency.

Eligibility: Addicts "clean" and "using" of both sexes. No age or residence requirements.

Service: Arrange hospitalization, counseling and referral, social, vocational training, job placement, recreational, religious, and informational. Food is provided and housing arranged.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Call Rev. O. B. Dempsey, Templeton 1-9528. Patient must be anxious and willing to withdraw from drugs on a voluntary basis. Open for admission 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., at the church. Immediate initial interview. Other services contingent upon existing conditions.

Duration of service: Indefinite.

Staff: Director (full time); part-time assistant director, counselor, assistant counselor, 15 church staff volunteers, nurses, social workers, physicians, etc.

LEGISLATURA VIII — DISEGNI DI LEGGE E RELAZIONI - DOCUMENTI

1350 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

OTHER PUBLIC SERVICE AGENCIES

New York State Division of Vocational Rehabilitation, Department of Education, 200 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. Nelson A. Voorhees, district supervisor.

Type of facility: New York State agency.

Eligibility: Male and female over 14 years. Detoxified, at least 1 month. Also based upon existence of substantial employment handicap, not because of drug addiction. Medical or psychiatric diagnosis is required indicating such handicap.

Service: Vocational rehabilitation under conditions of limitations mentioned. Does not provide service to the drug addict as such.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Through intake department any weekday morning between 9 a.m. and 12 m. Public or private agency referrals accepted, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., daily (Monday to Friday).

New York State Employment Service, 370 Seventh Avenue, New York, N.Y.

Anne Altman, New York City consultant.

Type of facility: New York State agency.

Eligibility: Legal working age.

Service: Counseling and placement service.

Referral sources and admission procedure: Through Lexington Hospital, Metropolitan Hospital, Manhattan General Hospital, etc. Rehabilitation required for placement. Referral to be made by social worker or rehabilitation counselor in the hospital as determined by previous cooperative agreement between treatment facility and employment service.

Fee: None.

Staff: Selective placement interviews in local employment service offices.

LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES

New York City Department of Corrections, 100 Centre Street, New York, N.Y.

New York City Parole Commission, 100 Centre Street, New York, N.Y.

New York City Police Department, Narcotics Squad, Old Slip and Front Street, New York, N.Y.

New York State Department of Corrections, 270 Broadway, New York, N.Y.

New York State Division of Parole, 320 Broadway, New York, N.Y.

New York State Department of Health, Division of Narcotics, 80 Centre Street, New York, N.Y.

U.S. Treasury Department, Narcotics Bureau, 90 Church Street, New York, N.Y.

New York City criminal courts:

New York County: 100 Centre Street, New York, N.Y.

Bronx County: 161th Street and Third Avenue, New York, N.Y.

Kings County: 120 Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Queens County: 125-01 Queens Boulevard, Kew Gardens, N.Y.

Richmond County: 67 Targee Street, Staten Island, N.Y.

OTHER RELEVANT PUBLIC AGENCIES

New York City Department of Health (main office), 125 Worth Street, New York, N.Y.

Borough offices, Department of Health:

Bronx: 1826 Arthur Avenue, Bronx, N.Y.

Brooklyn: 295 Flatbush Avenue Extended, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Queens: 90-37 Parsons Boulevard, Jamaica, N.Y.

Richmond: 51 Stuyvesant Place, St. George, Staten Island, N.Y.

District offices, Department of Health:

Central Harlem: 2238 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y.

East Harlem-Kips Bay: 158 East 115th Street, New York, N.Y.

Lower East Side: 341 East 25th Street, New York, N.Y.

Lower West Side: 303 Ninth Avenue, New York, N.Y.

Riverside: 160 West 100th Street, New York, N.Y.

Washington Heights: 600 West 168th Street, New York, N.Y.

Morrisania: 1309 Fulton Avenue, Bronx, N.Y.

Mott Haven: 349 East 140th Street, Bronx, N.Y.

Westchester-Pelham: 2527 Glebe Avenue, Bronx, N.Y.

Bedford: 485 Throop Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Brownsville: 259 Bristol Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1351

Bushwick : 335 Central Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.
Flatbush-Gravesend : 1601 Avenue S, Brooklyn, N.Y.
Red Hook-Gowanus : 250 Baltic Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.
Bay Ridge-Sunset Park : 514 49th Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.
Williamsburg-Greenpoint : 151 Maujer Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.
Astoria-Maspeth : 1226 31st Avenue, Long Island City, N.Y.
Corona-Flushing : 34-33 Junction Boulevard, Jackson Heights, N.Y.
Bureau of Health Education available for films, information, education and program help.
Public Health social work consultants also available for referral and counseling service in all district offices.
New York City Department of Hospitals, narcotics program, 125 Worth Street, New York, N.Y.
New York City Department of Welfare, 250 Church Street, New York, N.Y.
New York City Community Mental Health Board, 93 Worth Street, New York, N.Y.
New York State Department of Mental Hygiene, 270 Broadway, New York, N.Y. (119 Washington Avenue, Albany, N.Y.)
New York State Department of Health, 80 Centre Street, New York, N.Y. (84 Holland Avenue, Albany, N.Y.)

SCHOOL REFERRALS

Any pupil suspected of using narcotic drugs should be referred by the principal to the school nurse for examination by the school physician. If the school medical services are not immediately available, the principal should telephone the Director of the Bureau of School Health, 125 Worth Street, New York, N.Y., Worth 4-3800, extension 254. A physician, usually a supervising physician, will be sent at once to the school. Further referral procedures are outlined in service order No. 18, school health No. 448, PHN No. 1496, March 18, 1964.

WELFARE CENTERS

Manhattan :

Lower Manhattan Welfare Center, No. 11, 330 East Fifth Street, New York.
Yorkville Welfare Center, No. 19, 154 East 68th Street, New York.
East End Welfare Center, No. 23, 309 East 108th Street, New York.
Amsterdam Welfare Center, No. 24, 260 West 30th Street, New York.
St. Nicholas Welfare Center, No. 26, 149 West 124th Street, New York.
Harlem Welfare Center, No. 32, 1951 Park Avenue, New York.

Bronx :

Tremont Welfare Center, No. 41, 1918 Arthur Avenue, New York.
Melrose Welfare Center, No. 40, 847 Morris Avenue, New York.
Kingsbridge Welfare Center, No. 43, 248 East 161st Street, New York.

Queens : Queens Welfare Center, No. 53, 3220 Northern Boulevard, Long Island City.

Brooklyn :

Borough Hall Welfare Center, No. 60, 330 Jay Street, Brooklyn.
Brownsville Welfare Center, No. 73, 163 Bradford Avenue, Brooklyn.
Bushwick Welfare Center, No. 66, 44 Court Street, Brooklyn.
Fort Greene Welfare Center, No. 80, 147 Prince Street, Brooklyn.
Greenwood Welfare Center, No. 65, 100 Lawrence Street, Brooklyn.
Williamsburg Welfare Center, No. 84, 749 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn.

Richmond : Richmond Welfare Center, No. 99, 95 Central Avenue, St. George, Staten Island.

Nonresidence : Nonresidence Welfare Center, No. 90, 157 East 67th Street, New York.

Special service : Special Service Welfare Center, Nos. 74 and 75, 42 Franklin Street, New York.

Veterans service : Veterans Assistance Welfare Center, No. 05, 630 Ninth Avenue, New York.

Chelsea Welfare Center :

Chelsea Welfare Center, No. 77, 400 Eighth Avenue, New York.
Women's shelter (emergency), 324 East Fifth Street, New York.
Family shelter (emergency), 324 East Fifth Street, New York.
Men's shelter (emergency), 8 East Third Street, New York.

1352 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

EXCERPTS FROM THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON NARCOTIC AND DRUG ABUSE, SEPTEMBER 27 AND 28, 1962

CONCLUSIONS

These conclusions are drawn from the body of the report, and fall generally into its major categories of history, pharmacology, incidence and prevalence of drug abuse, characteristics of the drug abuser, treatment, and rehabilitation. However, many are based on information derived from more than one section, and thus it is not possible to reference their narrative explanations to a particular page of the text. We have tried, nevertheless, to group them by subject as closely as possible so that the transition from one to another will not be too abrupt.

1. The compulsive drug abuser may be rehabilitated to a legal and, in some cases, productive place in society. A decision either to place this offender in prison for long periods, or to maintain his addiction by continued drug dosage, is a tacit denial of this possibility.

2. The terms "addiction" and "addict" have become divorced from their original association with physical dependence and habitual use, and have come to be synonymous with illicit use. This widespread misinterpretation is now an established part of the vernacular, and there is no evident advantage in seeking to correct it. However, these words should be kept out of legislation, if possible, and drugs should be described according to the class of effects they actually produce.

3. Almost all of the drugs presently abused are extremely valuable in normal medical practice. Their abuse represents a prostitution of their legitimate function.

4. There is a widespread misconception that heroin has effects significantly different from those of morphine. It does not, and this misconception should be dispelled permanently.

5. Although there are reports which indicate a decrease in the abuse of opiates, a lessened severity of physical dependence of individual addicts, and an increase in the illicit and compulsive abuse of nonopiate drugs such as the amphetamines and barbiturates, our national statistics on illicit drug use are not sufficiently reliable to justify a firm conclusion regarding these suggested trends.

6. There is increasing recognition of "spree" use of a number of drugs in rotation, without development of physical dependence to any, but with the production of dangerous physical and psychotoxic side effects.

7. The present records maintained by various agencies connected with drug abuse are frequently inaccurate, incomplete, and uncoordinated with the records of other cooperating agencies. There is a marked need for a standard core of information, common to all record systems, which would enable proper and efficient cooperation, and, at the same time, enable each agency to add any other information necessary for its particular purposes.

8. Evidence available from all sources indicates that drug abuse spreads from user to user, and only rarely is initiated by the pusher with economic motive in mind. Thus, the spread of addiction is primarily through social forces and motivation rather than through the economic ambitions of the nonaddict peddler. Furthermore, elimination of the peddler by itself would not significantly alter the supply of susceptible individuals.

9. Drug abuse can be regarded as a disease, but observed characteristics of compulsive drug abusers suggest that in these cases it might better be regarded as a manifestation of underlying psychologic or physiologic disorders about which we have little knowledge and no "cure" at present. As a result:

(a) Withdrawal of the drug alone will not eliminate the underlying disorders, which often reappear in the same or another manifestation.

(b) Abuse of drugs, except insofar as it is initiated secondary to the development of physical dependence, is not an illness to which all members of society are equally susceptible. Instead, it usually appears in those persons with the prerequisite disorders: individuals who would not otherwise be normal, productive members of society.

10. The drug abuser, especially the person using heroin or any other narcotic, commits crimes which are primarily against property, rather than against persons. The narcotics themselves characteristically induce a somnolent state ("on the nod"), accompanied by markedly decreased sexual interest and ability.

11. Drug abusers frequently congregate in groups, and often rotate the responsibility for obtaining the drugs among them. As a result, almost all act as peddlers at one time or another, and the distinction between a user and a peddler may not be a clear one.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1353

12. Following withdrawal, the most critical component of treatment and rehabilitation appears to be a long, strictly supervised, highly controlled parole period, with legal and practical measures to assure that the parolee remains drug free. Such a parole period is essential for both civil or criminal commitments, and should be just as strict for either one. The cost of such supervision where tried has been $350 per year as compared with $2,000 to maintain a Federal prisoner for an equal time.

13. Any system of parole must have available an accurate and safe means of detecting any drug used by the parolee. Because new technologies continue to produce more sophisticated methods for such analysis, legislation specifying the use of such a test should not restrict its method or type (e.g., "morphine antagonist").

14. There is widespread misinformation among professionals connected with the treatment and rehabilitation of compulsive drug abusers and a surprising disinterest in either altering these misconceptions or in learning what has been found out from other experimental programs and from the large body of research results already available.

15. Since the Harrison Narcotic Act restricts specifically the availability of drugs under its control to professional use in the course of legitimate medical (including dental and veterinarian) practice and does not propose regulation of such practice, the medical profession should at last develop a code defining legitimate medical practice, around which enforcement policies could reasonably be built.

16. The physician and the law enforcement officer, to whom most of the responsibility for treatment and rehabilitation has previously been given, can actually participate in only a small segment of a prolonged rehabilitation and followup program (i.e., the apprehension, withdrawal from drugs, and limited psychotherapy). Correctional and parole agencies, as well as established community groups serving to aid other types of inadequate persons, should occupy a most important role, but traditionally have been rarely utilized.

17. Because we do not understand the etiology of the character disorders which underlie many cases of compulsive abuse, we have no means yet for cure or prevention. Thus, we must encourage all types of experimental treatment methods with the stipulation that they be carefully monitored, with frequent and critical evaluation during the program.

18. The apparent decrease in both incidence and prevalence of drug abusers after the age of 35 to 40 represents a major epidemiological clue which should be confirmed and then investigated carefully.

19. Since the number of persons exposed to drug abuse through physical proximity or actual experimentation is far greater than the number who actually go on to be compulsive users, we may fruitfully investigate the critical factors in those who manage to remain free of the habit, as well as in those who do not. The frequently cited environmental factors of poverty, low education, crowding, etc., apply also to many millions who never use drugs nor perform other anti-social acts.

20. The general public has not been informed of most of the important facts related to drug abuse and, therefore, has many misconceptions which are frightening and destructive. This situation is due to many causes, among which are the failure of our schools to recognize the problem and provide instruction of equal quantity and quality with that provided for other health hazards; the distortion and exploitation of this public issue for political purposes or as a promotion for mass media sales; and the failure of the responsible people in all professions connected with this problem to make available the large body of information which has already been obtained.

At the request of Senator Jacob K. Javits of New York, the following sworn statement of the Rev. O. D. Dempsey of New York City is included in the record of these hearings. Reverend Dempsey is chairman of the Anti-Crime and Anti-Narcotic Committee of the Upper Park Avenue Baptist Church in the Harlem section of New York City, and is the founder and director of the House of Hope, which is an organization devoted to the rehabilitation of narcotics addicts.

1354 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

SWORN STATEMENT OF REV. O. D. DEMPSEY

A. THE GENERAL SITUATION

Out of the drug traffic situation in the United States and in our Harlem here in New York City and in the little Harlems throughout America the Negro is subjected to unlimited poverty and crime. Drug addiction in the Negro communities of this Nation is either affected directly or indirectly by this scourge leading to obsession and evil. No single problem throughout Harlem and America is as serious as that of dope. I state categorically that unless this country moves at once to face up to the narcotics overlord, the pusher and the roaming addict in our streets—then the very sinew of our life's blood will be severed. The most sordid crimes including all forms of robbery and even murder are being committed by addicts in all sections of New York City in their quest for funds for fixes.

Over the past 18 years, I have watched dope invade the homes of poor but respectable people whereby their teenagers were introduced to narcotics at the school gate. As a minister, I have had to counsel those parents and their children, seeing hard-earned dollars go down the drain to the crime syndicate. Hundreds of millions of dollars leave our Negro communities yearly making these disaster areas—and in more up-to-date dramatic terms "pockets of poverty." In addition to the hundreds of millions of dollars spent directly on drugs there are millions of dollars wasted as a result of narcotics in related areas. Those include:

1. Physical injuries and often death.
2. Damage to property.
3. Broken homes (loss of earning power; separation of husband and wife—parents and children).
4. Robbery of individuals, stores, and homes.

There can be no effective poverty program in New York City without the inclusion of both private and public efforts to control narcotics through law enforcement, exposure of the narcotics syndicate, the pusher, and an intensified program of treatment and rehabilitation of the addict.

The Harlem riots and narcotics

As a rehabilitation center dealing with 20 to 25 addicts or former addicts daily, I have proof that addicts played a major role in the looting of stores and physical violence. This is not to minimize the basic grievances and aspirations of Negroes in Harlem, in Jersey City, in Rochester, and in other northern ghettos: But the power structure in these cities have ignored these legitimate demands and this, plus not facing up to the realities, the problem of narcotics has made an intolerable situation for Negroes.

There are approximately 60,000 addicts in Harlem alone—almost 20 percent of the entire population here. There are approximately 40,000 teenagers on the borderline of addiction, making a total of 100,000 Negroes directly affected by drugs in New York City.

This figure is phenomenal because as a total one it represents over 27 percent of the Negro population. I might caution that this figure is increasing because the narcotics boys upstairs are using modern methods of protecting marketing and distribution. They also see to it that their customers are retained through many forms of violence and intimidation: a ready supply of drugs easily obtained; excellent locations for storing and distribution; and the cooperation of certain corrupt public officials. On top of this, they have a juvenile contact and distribution system that also assures them a growing market for the future.

B. NARCOTICS IS RELATED TO COMMUNISM

The Communists are using known addicts to stir up trouble in the Negro ghettos of New York City. Here again the recent riots in Harlem bear evidence of this. Some addicts have been given guns and ammunition for future trouble. The unaided addict will do anything to obtain drugs. I state strongly that the crime syndicate in New York City, in collusion with the Communists, will, unless stopped, make future riots worse. The crime syndicate is also using Harlem addicts to undermine the Police Department of New York City and to create a disrespect for law enforcement everywhere. That is why the law enforcement agencies of this city must stamp out corruption in their own ranks. They must not be pawns of the Communists who are in collusion with organized crime.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1355

Plight of Negro plus burden of narcotics too much to bear

I repeat that the basic poverty of Negroes in Harlem and elsewhere when coupled with this deliberate narcotics traffic thrust upon them is too much for the Negro leadership to cope with.

I am not against demonstrations of the Negro civil rights leaders. I am in favor of their objectives. But fundamental to our goals is the realism that a program with help of our local, State, and Federal governments centered on the narcotics problem would go a long way in solving our social and economic problems as an ethnic group.

I urge that private foundations, private philanthropy, donations by business, and the funds of our various levels of government help unburden us, the Negro, of narcotics. With adequate financial help, this can be done with both private and public agencies—such as our House of Hope.

There is too much misery and hardship in Harlem that can be attributed directly to narcotics. Freedom from narcotics means freedom from poverty.

C. MY RECOMMENDATIONS ON THE NARCOTICS PROBLEM

1. Since there is no known cure for addicts it is recommended that all known addicts be picked up off the streets and carried through a thorough rehabilitation program including most of all job training or retraining for job placement. This means that all known addicts with or without criminal records must be registered.

2. That the Federal Government set up a series of conservation camps especially for the treatment of addicts and their replacement back in society with the skills and inspiration to work.

3. That at least 500 additional agents be hired by the Federal Narcotics Bureau with a majority of these being Negroes—who could help ferret out pushers and known addicts and the kingpins of the narcotics traffic.

4. That the known areas where addicts congregate be rehabilitated and new improved housing be built so as to physically break up these habitats.

5. That known drug smugglers be shot by a firing squad or be given the death penalty.

6. That the Federal Narcotics Bureau immediately appoint a community relations director fully devoted to informing the various communities of the public's role in narcotics control. That similar positions be attached to local police departments.

7. That greater vigilance be exercised by the Customs Bureau—that here again more men be hired to stop the narcotics traffic. I have just returned from London where I looked thoroughly into the sources of narcotics. I have proof that most drugs come in legitimately, while Communist Cuba and Iran lead in the illegal smuggling traffic. My information also reveals that the Communists are using narcotics as their trojan horse to bring our Nation down. I warn that this could very well happen unless we confront the whole spectrum of narcotics.

D. $1,000,000 NEEDED NOW FOR NEW YORK CITY

No poverty program can be devised unless a section dealing with narcotics is set up. Therefore, we demand that $1 million be turned over to us in Harlem immediately to fight from a private base this whole narcotics situation. We need $100,000 within the next 10 days.

I ask for this money:

- (1) To offset the Communist infiltration of Harlem with their dope and guns;
- (2) As a bulwark to riots and disorders;

1356 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

(3) As a means of getting the addict off the streets and into meaningful pursuits; and

(4) As a means of improving our facilities here at Halfway House and to hire staff.

Separate approach

Since there is a lack of a tried and true and intensive rehabilitation program for addicts anywhere my knowledge of the narcotics racket and its criminal operations has enabled me to provide the Federal Narcotics Bureau of New York City, the narcotics squad of the New York City Police Department, and law enforcement in general with information that led to the apprehension and conviction of small hoodlums in the narcotics traffic—and the big ones as well. I have worked hand in hand with these agencies to—

(1) Prevent traffic and addiction among the citizens of the United States of America.

(2) Also with medical and other institutions for the rehabilitation and cure and employment of former addicts.

I urge that a separate approach to the narcotics problem be initiated as a part of poverty funds now pending before the Government.

I herewith attest to the facts in this statement to be true accurate and can be substantiated further if needed.

OBERIA D. DEMPSEY.

Sworn to and acknowledged before me this 7th day of August 1964.

TERRY L. NICHOLS,

Notary Public, State of New York.

No. 31-8140000. Qualified in New York County. Commission expires March 30, 1966.

UNITED NATIONS ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL, THIRTY-SIXTH SESSION,
4 JUNE 1963

COMMISSION ON NARCOTIC DRUGS—REPORT OF THE EIGHTEENTH SESSION,
29 APRIL—17 MAY 1963

(Submitted by Harry J. Anslinger, Member of Commission)

CHAPTER III. ILLICIT TRAFFIC ⁴²

INTRODUCTION

79. The Commission's Committee on Illicit Traffic, consisting of the representatives of Brazil, Canada, China, the Federal Republic of Germany, France, Hungary, India, Iran, Japan, Mexico, Morocco, Peru, Poland, the Republic of Korea, Switzerland, Turkey, the United Arab Republic, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America, met in closed session at the Palais des Nations, Geneva, on 23 April 1963.⁴³ The Committee unanimously elected Mr. R. E. Curran, Q.C. (Canada) as Chairman. The Committee held a total of eight meetings on 23, 24 and 25 April and 3 May 1963.

80. Observers for Argentina, Bolivia, Burma, Cuba, the Federation of Malaya, Greece,⁴⁴ Israel, Italy, Lebanon, the Netherlands,⁴⁵ Portugal, Somalia and Thailand, and representatives of the International Criminal Police Organization/INTERPOL (ICPO) and of the Permanent Anti-Narcotics Bureau of the League of Arab States attended meetings of the Illicit Traffic Committee as well as of the Commission.

81. The Committee and the Commission expressed appreciation of the assistance and information given by the representatives and observers who were present at the meetings.

REVIEW OF THE ILLICIT TRAFFIC

A. Reports and documents

82. The Commission had before it documents prepared by the Secretary-General and ICPO and copies of chapter XI (Illicit Traffic) of the annual re-

⁴² Agenda item 4; (E/CN.7/SR.512, 513, 521, and 522).

⁴³ Report, seventeenth session, paras. 20 and 21.

⁴⁴ These invitations were extended by the Committee at its first and third meetings on 23 and 24 April.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1357

ports of governments for 1962 on the working of the treaties which had been sent to the Secretary-General in advance of the rest of the annual report.

83. It was noted that reporting by governments on the illicit traffic has improved, enabling information from a larger number of countries to be included in the annual review. By 31 March 1963, reports had reached the Secretariat for forty-four States and eight territories, as compared with reports for thirty-five and thirty-three States, and for five and one territories, respectively, received by that date in the two preceding years.

84. It was nevertheless considered that more and better reports were needed, and at an earlier date, to enable the Commission to make a satisfactory study of the illicit traffic each year. The Commission asked the Secretary-General to remind governments of their obligations as regards reporting and once more to request that copies of chapter XI of annual reports should be dispatched in advance of the rest of the reports so as to reach the Secretariat by 1 March.

85. The ICPO representative introduced to the Commission his organization's annual memorandum on the illicit traffic, explaining that changes had been made in the light of discussions at the previous session. It was hoped that these changes would increase the usefulness of the study.

86. As decided at its previous session, the Commission gave special attention to the illicit traffic in the Far East.

B. Opium and the opiates

(1) THE FAR EAST

87. The representative of the United Kingdom described the situation in Hong Kong, where problems of trafficking and addiction continued to be serious despite the sustained and energetic programme of prevention and suppression which the authorities had been carrying out in the past years. The colony occupied a small area: 391 square miles of land, and 600 square miles of water in which lay some 200 islands. The population was 3½ million, of whom 98 percent were Chinese. Hong Kong did not produce opium, and the manufactured drugs or raw materials for local illicit use and manufacture came from outside. The fact that Hong Kong's existence depended largely on its free port facilities complicated the problem of dealing with the illicit import of narcotics. Hong Kong's land frontier of 26 miles raised no trafficking problem, but the port attracted shipping from all over the world and traffickers exploited the freedom of movement permitted to goods. Those various circumstances made the Government's work of prevention and detection more difficult than would otherwise be the case. In 1962, nearly 6,000 ocean-going vessels and over 14,000 other craft visited the port. Smuggling was accomplished by the concealment of drugs in legitimate cargo, on the persons of the crew-members of vessels and in small craft which picked up supplies outside colony waters. The Special Narcotics Section of the Prevention Service was responsible in particular for the guarding and searching of vessels and the examination of cargo. Six hundred and eighteen ships had been guarded in 1962; of fifty-six narcotics seizures made by this branch of the Service, twenty-six had been on board vessels. Six hundred and ten aircraft had also been inspected. The domestic side of the traffic was dealt with by the police force, one of whose functions was to maintain liaison, through its narcotics bureau, is with enforcement services in other countries. There was regular communication with many of the twenty countries with which the bureau had established relations since its establishment in 1955. The enforcement services were in constant operation throughout the year. Between twelve and fifteen thousand raids a year were made to detect narcotics and their illicit use; 1,300 cases were discovered and over 1,000 persons prosecuted every month, and at the present time (early 1963) an average of forty seizures a day were being made. There had been 9,934 seizures in 1962, of which 7,343 were of heroin. Three or four hundred heroin peddlers were apprehended every year. Hong Kong's intensified campaign against the illicit traffic, launched in 1959, and described in the Government's White Paper, had been reported to the Commission at previous sessions, and activities in connexion with it, co-ordinated by the narcotics advisory committee, were constantly being pursued. The direct Bangkok-Hong Kong route continued to be the one most favoured by traffickers, but recently there had been a tendency to increase use of other south-east Asian ports (particularly North Borneo ports and Singapore) as points for trans-shipment. Earlier reports had now been confirmed that large quantities of drugs were being air-dropped in the Gulf of Siam—South China Sea area and then brought by boat to Hong Kong. One consignment handled by a syndicate operating in Hong Kong, Thailand and the Republic of Viet-nam had comprised over 900 kg of opium and morphine. Some aircraft used in those operations were reported to be piloted by French nationals resident in Laos. Most opium entering Hong Kong was in the raw state; seizures had amounted to over 372 kg in 1962, the number being 2,139. Illicit import of morphine, usually in compressed blocks, was also a feature of the traffic from Bangkok; over 90 kg had been seized in 1962. Some morphine was believed to move through Hong Kong to other destinations. Relatively little knowledge had yet been gained of the sources of the morphine base in which there was such a heavy traffic in south-east Asia, but it was generally accepted that production must take place close to many of the opium-growing areas. It was the "999" brand that was most commonly seized in Hong Kong, although at least eight different trademarks had been seen among various seizures. There was some evidence from wrappings and other features of the blocks that "999" morphine might come from more than one source; it was reported that as many as twenty different organizations had at one time or another produced such blocks. As for heroin, which continued to be the main drug of addiction in Hong Kong, 8,456 offences had been recorded in 1962. Fifty-seven kg had been seized. Clandestine laboratories continued to operate, seven having been detected and destroyed in the past year. Traffickers in Hong Kong, Macao and Bangkok worked in close association. In the past two years, there had been reports of illicit imports of heroin from Thailand, whereas local markets had previously been supplied within the colony or from Macao. In August 1962, the existence of a heroin manufacturing and trafficking syndicate with connexions in Hong Kong, Bangkok, Singapore and Malaya had been disclosed after the arrest in Hong Kong of an important heroin maker and trafficker. A clandestine factory had been set up near Penang, the first indication of illicit manufacture in Malaya. The syndicate was said to have direct connexions with morphine supplies in the Laos-Thailand border area. It seemed clear from the evidence of manufacture in Malaya and from that of a recent seizure in Hong Kong of heroin direct from Bangkok that the pattern of trafficking in southeast Asia was widening.

1358 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

88. The representative of the United States of America expressed appreciation of the informative report on Hong Kong and observed that the problem of the Triad organizations (Chinese groups involved in the illicit traffic in the Far East and Europe) appeared to be significant in recent trafficking developments. The representative of the United Kingdom stated that Triad organizations, of which there were many, were illegal in Hong Kong. They had a long historical background, and members of such societies had in the past had a great influence on criminal activity of all kinds, including the drug traffic. Many heroin traffickers apprehended and dealt with in the past had Triad backgrounds. The influence of the Triad organizations had been greatly reduced through sustained action by the authorities. Hong Kong had notified ICPO that two or three Triad traffickers had made trips to Europe in recent years. The ICPO representative informed the Commission that those traffickers had been traced in the Federal Republic of Germany, Spain, and Switzerland; they had been attempting to organize an international trafficking network while posing as clothing manufacturers.

89. The representative of the Republic of Korea stated that his Government considered it a primary task to join with other countries in the work of suppressing the illicit traffic through close and effective international co-operation. Such humanitarian efforts were an appropriate part of the work being done by his Government in the social, economic, and political fields. He referred to information given in his country's annual report for 1962. The illicit traffic was mainly in raw opium, morphine, and heroin supplied by illicit cultivation and intended for the domestic market. There had been 4,221 prosecutions for narcotics offences. Investigations to detect illicit poppy cultivation, which occurred in sparsely populated mountain areas, were made during the growing and harvesting periods by provincial and national agencies. Illicit import of drugs was also a problem. Smuggling was reported from the northern part of Korea and from Hong Kong. He believed that periodic regional meetings in the Far East and the continuous exchange of information on the traffic would assist materially in bringing trafficking under control.

90. The representative of China stated that the traffic in the Province of Taiwan was not supplied by any illicit cultivation or manufacture, and that all drugs were smuggled into the country, particularly from Hong Kong. Only small quantities of opium, morphine, and heroin had been seized, but enforcement measures were vigorously applied and much effective work was carried out in co-operation with the Hong Kong authorities. Four hundred and sixtyone cases of trafficking had been detected in 1962—about the same number as in 1961. Five-year terms of imprisonment had been imposed in 401 cases, and in other cases there had been sentences of ten years and even life imprisonment. With reference to the traffic in opium from Yunnan Province, he recalled his statements at earlier sessions of the Commission. In his opinion, the Yunnan area must be considered a source of illicit supplies, probably consisting of increasing amounts of morphine, rather than of opium alone. In a case of trafficking at Taipei in 1962, the offender had confessed to handling 2 kg of opium which had come from the Yunnan border area.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1359

91. The representative of Japan said that owing to strict enforcement measures carried out under the Narcotics Control Act, traffickers in his country had not attempted the clandestine manufacture of narcotics. Abuse of heroin was, however, a serious problem in Japan, and foreign traffickers were engaged in organized smuggling on a considerable scale, operating from Bangkok, Hong Kong, and Korea. The quantities of heroin seized in 1962 (8 kg) had been double the 1961 total. There had however, been a considerable decrease in the number of narcotics offences detected during the year, although 2,418 persons had been arrested. Of those, 1,797 had been involved in offences concerning heroin. Every effort was being made by the Japanese Government to deal with narcotics problems; amendments to existing laws were before the Diet, which intended to raise the maximum penalties to life imprisonment and also provide facilities for the effective treatment of addicts. It seemed, however, that the problems of international smuggling could be dealt with only by international co-operation, and it was to be hoped that closer relationships between governments could be developed for the implementation of control measures. In that connexion, valuable work seemed to have been done by the seminar on prevention of narcotic offences in south-east Asia which had been held in Tokyo in 1962 under the "Colombo Plan." In reply to a request from the representative of the United States for information, he told the Commission that some cases in which teen-agers were involved had been reported in Kobe and Osaka and that educational campaigns were being undertaken to prevent young persons from being victimized by traffickers.

92. The ICPO representative said his organization had made a comprehensive study of the question of the extradition of narcotics offenders and that it was now engaged in further detailed study, at the request of the Government of Japan in particular. Unfortunately, there were lacunae in many extradition treaties, especially so far as concerned the illicit traffic and traffickers in drugs. He hoped the study would help governments to cope with that aspect of the problem of intra-regional and international co-operation in dealing with traffickers. He wished to congratulate the Japanese Government for the contribution it had made to the seminar on prevention of narcotic offences, which his organization regretted not having been able to attend. He appealed for the help of all the governments concerned in developing to the fullest possible extent the regional radio communications network which his organization was setting up in connexion with the Manila station. There could be no doubt that such a facility for the constant rapid exchange of information would be of great use to governments in the area.

93. The observer for Thailand referred to the annual report of his Government and stated that seizures of over six tons of opium in 1962, as compared with about four tons in each of the two preceding years, were evidence of the continued very heavy traffic. As the geographical centre of south-east Asia, Thailand was easily accessible from all directions. There were forty-two possible routes for smuggling from Burma and Laos, but Amphur Chiangsan, the Pang Kway district and the Mae Sai district seemed to be the three border areas of Thailand mostly used for trafficking toward Bangkok, or in some cases into the Huey Sai district of Laos for trans-shipment by air to ships off the coast. Two seizures of opium of over one ton each, and a case concerning reports of fourteen tons awaiting shipment from beyond the border, were cited in particular. The bulk of the traffic was intended for Hong Kong or Singapore. In 1962 offences against the Opium Act, consisting mainly of smoking or illicit possession, had been committed by 2,117 persons of whom 1,673 had been convicted. Terms of imprisonment of from six months to five years, and in some cases of 15 years, had been imposed. The control of chemicals and intensive enforcement measures against illicit manufacture had resulted in the removal of illicit laboratories from their former sites in Bangkok, and the replacement of drug production by packaging work. Only one clandestine manufacturing centre had been destroyed in 1962, compared with three in 1961; three packaging plants had been discovered in Bangkok. There had been cases of heroin smuggling over the northern borders of Thailand, and information had been sent in regarding the situation of a factory in the mountains outside Thailand; heroin and manufacturing equipment had been discovered in a hill-tribe village. The total quantity (138 kg) seized in 1962 had been more than twice that seized in 1961, and nine times the total for 1960. Most of the cases, involving 7,434 persons convicted under the Harmful Habit Forming Drugs Act, had been in connexion with offences concerning diacetylmorphine. From reports that had been received, it was reasonable to believe that there were at least two factories for converting opium into morphine situated near the frontier close to Mae Sai. There was strong evidence to suggest that the areas beyond the northern borders of Thailand were the place of origin of "999" morphine. When the Lampang police seized 88 blocks of "999," the smugglers had admitted that the drug had come into Mae Sai from the north. Moreover, in May 1962, the provincial police of Chiangrai had found two "999" moulds among morphine- and heroin-producing equipment which had been brought into Thailand by Chinese hill-tribesmen disguised as refugees from Laos, during the civil war in that country. The Thai hill-tribes were responding increasingly to the Government's programs of resettlement and crop substitution. A development and aid centre, partly consisting of travelling advisory units, had been established. No reasonable estimates could be made of the amount of opium produced by the hill-tribes. Much additional study of the situation was required, and until that could be accomplished he felt it would be premature for the Commission to discuss the "Social and Economic Survey of the Hill-Tribes in Northern Thailand" (E/CN.7/450).

1360 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

94. The representative of the United States of America said he wished to commend the Government of Thailand for the progress it had made, in the face of a difficult and complex situation, in suppressing the illicit traffic. The co-operation extended to the United States Government was appreciated. With reference to the question of the origin of "999" morphine, he drew the Commission's attention to the importance of any assistance which governments might be able to give in collecting evidence. The observer for Burma stated that "999" blocks had been seized in his country, but that the source could only be presumed to be the Burma-mainland China-Laos-Thailand border area. The representatives of Canada and France remarked that in view of the opinion expressed by the ICPO representative that manufacture of morphine did not require highly specialized laboratory equipment, there was some possibility that clandestine factories might be fairly mobile.

95. Commenting on the traffic in south-east Asia, the representative of the United States of America informed the Commission that in the late summer of 1962 reports had been received by his Government to the effect that a huge quantity (40,000 pounds, or about 18 tons) of raw opium, in leaf wrappers, had been smuggled from the Yunnan region through the Shan State of Burma for sale in Laos and Thailand and for smuggling to the United States. That shipment was reported to have been handled by the Kokang Opium Syndicate of Burma. In addition, he cited a report dated 23 May 1962 which his Government had received from the United Nations Laboratory concerning a sample of opium submitted on 25 November 1958. The United States Bureau of Narcotics had requested the Secretariat of the United Nations to determine the origin of a sample of raw opium removed from a seizure made by the Republic of Korea ("Case FE(KCZ-21) 54-57, Report Nos. C-5402, 5404, 5408"). The Korean authorities, through their delegation in Geneva, had associated themselves with the United States' request for a determination of origin. The report of the examination carried out by the United Nations Laboratory stated that the findings "indicate that this seizure very probably originates from mainland China. It is, however, not possible to be more definite in view of the fewness of the authenticated samples from the Chinese mainland."

96. The representative of Hungary observed that clandestine manufacture, local consumption of white drugs and illicit export all appeared to be constantly on the increase in the Far East. There was evidence also that increasingly effective enforcement measures were being brought into play. However, insinuations about the People's Republic of China were being made with growing frequency; and in the absence of a representative of the Republic, the suggestion that that great country was supplying the illicit traffic in order to finance activities abroad and to purchase strategic materials must be rejected. Furthermore, such a suggestion was refuted by the situation in the Far East, for it could not be logically maintained that the People's Republic of China would engage in the opium traffic when trafficking in morphine and heroin would be so much more advantageous owing to the high price and small volume (about one-tenth that of opium) of those drugs. Moreover, the evidence went to show that, despite the undeniable risks, clandestine manufacture was widespread in various countries, and such manufacture would not be profitable if drugs were being supplied to illicit markets by the People's Republic of China. He protested against the procedure whereby cases of trafficking were called in evidence without there having been any communication on the matter between the governments concerned, evidently because concrete proof was lacking. It should be remembered that information had been communicated to the Commission at earlier sessions concerning radical measures taken by the People's Republic of China for dealing with narcotics problems that had existed for centuries. He also alluded to the practice of using terms indicative of nationality when naming offenders in reports on illicit traffic. "Nationality" should be used only in its true sense, and it was necessary to know whether offenders were, in fact, nationals of particular countries; otherwise, people would be classified by race and not by place of residence. He was of the opinion that trafficking and addiction were not problems of any one race as such, but rather the scourge of society in general.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1361

97. Referring to the quantities of morphine and heroin seized in recent years, the representative of Poland drew the Commission's attention to the enormous amount of opium which appeared to be involved in the illicit traffic. He feared that such a volume of raw material might further aggravate the illicit traffic in and use of "white drugs." He also expressed the view that the term "Yunnan opium" used in some reports of governments on the illicit traffic and also in some summaries prepared by the Secretariat, was at best misleading, and that its use, while convenient, was unnecessarily harmful because it publicized the name of a province of the People's Republic of China in connexion with information on illicit traffic that was not well founded. In his opinion, therefore, the use of the term should be discontinued.

98. In reply to a question by the representative of Hungary concerning the identification of the sample of opium referred to by the representative of the United States of America, the representative of the Secretary-General explained that in the determination of the origin of a sample of seized opium, the analytical data for the seizure were compared with the data obtained for all the authenticated samples in the United Nations Laboratory. The basis for the determination of origin was therefore the range and number of authenticated samples available. The Laboratory had large numbers of such samples from some regions, while from others there were only a few. The firmness of a conclusion as to the origin of a seizure was thus dependent upon the number of authenticated samples available from the particular region in question. In the case of the mainland of China, there were only four authenticated samples, which were received in 1951 from the National Government of China. If further authenticated samples could be obtained from the region, it would greatly facilitate the work of the United Nations Laboratory. The representative of Hungary thanked the representative of the Secretary-General for his explanation, but said he did not consider it entirely satisfactory, because, so far as he knew, only the legal authorities of countries were authorized to send samples of opium to the United Nations Laboratory. In the present case, the Laboratory had accepted, as authenticated, samples provided by a Government which in 1951 no longer had authority over the country in question.

99. The representative of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics said that it was inadmissible that questions relating to the People's Republic of China should be discussed in the absence of that country's representatives in the Committee on Illicit Traffic and in the Commission itself. Under resolution VI adopted by the Commission at its tenth session, "The Commission on Narcotic Drugs . . . Recommends that Governments should communicate, either directly or through the International Criminal Police Commission, to the countries from which the seized narcotics drugs would seem to come, all such information as would enable those countries to conduct an inquiry into the origin of the narcotic drugs; Recommends that in official documents Governments should refer to the origin of a seized narcotic drug as being 'certain' or 'suspected' only after previous consultation with the Government concerned." By including in its report one-sided accusations against the People's Republic of China, the Commission was therefore acting contrary to that resolution. For many years the same representatives had been trying to attack a great country, the People's Republic of China, by repeating unverified and unfounded accusations against it; their aims in doing so were, of course, primarily political. So far as the actual position in the People's Republic of China was concerned, a decree strictly prohibiting opium and other narcotic drugs had been issued by the State Administrative Council of the Republic as early as February 1950. The decree also prohibited the cultivation and smoking of opium; throughout the country, "the import, processing and sale of opium and other narcotic drugs are prohibited. Where this decree has been infringed, the opium and other narcotic drugs concerned shall be seized, and the offenders, whoever they may be, shall be severely punished." The decree also provided for the treatment of opium smokers. "Treatment of impecunious opium smokers must be provided free or at reduced rates. In cities in which opium smoking is relatively widespread, opium smokers' treatment centres shall be established. The supply of pharmaceutical products used for the treatment of opium smokers shall be controlled entirely by the public health authorities. The above authorities shall not permit the preparation of opium substitutes." It was therefore regrettable that, despite the actual position with regard to narcotic drugs in the People's Republic of China, and in violation of the relevant resolutions of the Commission, unfounded accusations were being made against the Republic. The Commission should approach the problem objectively and without bias, so as to promote fruitful co-operation between States on the subject of narcotic drugs, and not make such co-operation more difficult by introducing political elements into the discussion.

1362 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

100. In reply to the statements by the representatives of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Hungary and Poland, the United States representative affirmed that his references to Communist China in connexion with certain cases and seizures which he had cited were intended to bring to the attention of the Commission facts concerning the traffic as it affected the United States of America. There could be no doubt that every effort should be made to locate the source of raw opium and morphine base in south-east Asia, for the good of peoples throughout the world. All possible locations of the source of supply in the Burma-mainland China-Laos-Thailand border areas, where Yunnan Province of mainland China, in particular, had been an opium-producing area for centuries past; should be examined. Much could be accomplished among the countries of south-east Asia by close co-operation and the rapid exchange of information by enforcement services, as in the case, for example, of Hong Kong, Japan and Thailand. The observer for Burma reported that information was exchanged by his country with Hong Kong and Thailand, but not with Japan.

101. The representative of China pointed out that it was on scientific grounds that mainland China had been considered to be the probable place of origin of the sample of opium seized in the Republic of Korea, to which the United States representative had referred. At previous sessions, he had repeatedly drawn the Commission's attention to the fact that opium was produced and morphine and heroin manufactured on the mainland of China, especially in the Province of Yunnan. Seizures of opium and heroin originating in mainland China had been mentioned in the annual reports of the United States of America and in the statements made by the United States representative to the Commission; and according to the annual reports of a number of governments in the Far East, large quantities of opium and opiates presumed to have come from the Yunnan-Burma-Laos-Thailand area, and in some cases explicitly from Yunnan, had been seized. At the Commission's seventeenth session, reference had been made to an estimate which placed the total amount of opium alone produced in the region at approximately 1,000 tons per year. He mentioned reports by various governments to the effect that the illicit traffic had not abated in the Far East and that seizures represented only a very small fraction of the total actually involved. Yunnan could in his opinion be regarded as one of the possible sources of opium and opiates (morphine and heroin); and he again emphasized the importance to be attached to the scientific evidence of origin for the sample of opium from a seizure made by the Republic of Korea.

102. The representative of India presented a comprehensive statement: Licit production of opium had increased gradually without any appreciable increase in illicit traffic. In 1962, there had been 2,643 cases of trafficking; about 6½ tons of opium had been seized, but that was a negligible quantity compared with the total production of 969,419 kg (nearly 1,000 tons) from the 44,589 hectares used for cultivation. In that connexion, he said it would be useful if other producer countries should supply similar details of the total areas under cultivation and the total produced. The issue of strict licences to every individual cultivator and the measurement of all poppy fields by cadastral survey and ground measurement were basic features of the control of cultivation in India. Illicit traffic was for the most part internal, and such import and export traffic as there was seemed to be decreasing. In addition to general anti-smuggling measures, special steps had been taken to prevent illicit export. In suspected cases of smuggling, there was a prompt exchange of information with other countries which might be interested. In 1962, only ten attempts had been made at illegal export; there had been eight cases of illegal import. Very strict control measures by India and Pakistan had practically eliminated cases of traffic involving Pakistan. He referred to the accounts which had been given to the Commission in previous years of the elaborate and efficient apparatus for prevention and enforcement established in his country under the Central Narcotics Organization. The Government of India wished to record its appreciation of the co-operation extended by the control authorities in Burma, Ceylon, Malaya, Pakistan and Singapore, and by ICPO.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1363

103. The observer for Burma referred to the statement he had made regarding his country at the Commission's preceding session (E/CN.7/L.244). Without repeating the detailed information that had thus been available, he would briefly refer to the question of opium cultivation. The presumed area of opium production was divided by the Salween river into areas west of the river where cultivation was prohibited and those to the east where, in the Shan State, cultivation was still permitted. Illicit production undoubtedly did occur in the Kachin State, but it was mostly for local consumption, particularly in quasi-medical use and in connexion with the observance of customary rites in some forms of worship. It was estimated that there were some 45,000 addicts in the Kachin State among a population numbering 525,000. Enforcement problems were complicated by legal difficulties and the inaccessibility of much of the area. Surveys were being carried out in the Hukawng valley area to promote a better understanding of the local problems and to facilitate the treatment of addicts. As to estimates of opium production in his country, no sufficiently accurate figures were at present available. His Government would appreciate receiving from the Government of the United States of America some further information concerning the report that the Kokang Opium Syndicate of Burma had handled a shipment of some 20,000 kg of opium smuggled from Yunnan through the Shan State in 1962.

104. The Commission heard with interest a statement by the representative of the United Kingdom reviewing the situation in south-east Asia. To the question where the opium involved in the traffic came from, and where conversion into morphine and heroin took place, the evidence accumulating before the Commission confirmed what had previously been suspected to be the answer—the Burma-mainland China-Laos-Thailand border area. Opium from that border area had been traditionally described as "Yunnan" opium, and there seemed to be no point in trying to find a substitute for an expression that was so well-established and had been used for so long. Though the Commission was gradually achieving a better understanding of the illicit traffic, too little was yet known about it, and much work remained to be done. Governments in the area were making vigorous attempts to deal with narcotics problems. The statements by the observers for Burma and Thailand were appreciated and every encouragement should be given to the efforts that were being made in their countries, despite the difficulties of forested mountain terrain, where there were few communications, and where ethnographic, cultural and political differences among the inhabitants created complex problems so far as concerned the illicit manufacture of "white drugs", no part of the region could be regarded as beyond suspicion: evidence concerning Malaya, for example, had come to light in 1962. It seemed improbable, however, that factories were mobile, since in the areas in question it would be difficult or too troublesome to move the necessary apparatus, whereas the laboratory in the junks at Macau could be moved around quite easily. Some information was available as to the manner in which the drugs travelled, but the routes were frequently changed and the enforcement services had to be constantly alert in the designs and vagaries of highly organized traffickers. The final question that had to be asked was what action must be taken that was likely to be effective against the illicit traffic. More information was needed, and that need could be met through better reporting by governments and through special studies by individual countries. So far as concerned the Kachin State, for example, technical assistance might help to solve the problem of traditional cultivation of opium by the hill tribes, who needed education and an alternative means of livelihood. A long-term effort was needed, but the volume and pace of the work should be increased. Many countries might also strengthen their ability to deal with control problems and fulfil their obligations under the treaties by adopting new legislation. Vigorous enforcement of laws had, of course, to follow. Then, too, steps could be taken to improve control of acetic anhydride since all possible approaches to the suppression of the traffickers' activities should be exploited. In general, closer co-operation between governments was essential. Conferences and joint work on special studies enabled useful knowledge to be shared and also made for closer and confident working relationships by providing valuable opportunities for experts from various parts of the world to meet each other. Finally, all possible measures should be taken by governments to provide treatment for addicts; any progress made in reducing and preventing addiction had far-reaching beneficial effects and was at the same time a means of attack on the underlying reasons for the existence of the illicit traffic in drugs.

1364 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

105. The representative of Canada, who stressed the importance of free and frank discussions on the illicit traffic, commended the review of problems in the Far East as being carried out in this spirit. There could be no doubt that one of the Commission's main objectives and a primary need in the struggle against the illicit traffic was clear identification of the problems to be dealt with and of the areas of the world where those problems had to be met.

106. The representative of France congratulated the representative of the United Kingdom on his account of the situation in south-east Asia, with which he wished to express his full agreement. The most important requirement was obviously that governments should make a maximum effort in the areas of cultivation, not only so far as possible to prevent the production of raw materials, but also to deal with the illicit morphine-base and heroin manufacture which each year was observed to take place in close proximity to the growing areas. An important point in connexion with manufacture—and one which seemed to require more attention—was the question how traffickers obtained adequate supplies of the chemicals required for the transformation of drugs. He expressed appreciation of the operational services which ICPO provided, and of which governments, in their efforts to strengthen their programs and means of enforcement, would do well to make greater use. There were, however, two sides to the question how progress was to be made through ever-closer collaboration among governments: on the one hand, difficulties might exist because of differences in approach and in needs; but on the other hand, the advantages to be derived from diversity were not to be overlooked. So far as concerned the pattern of activities by the international organizations, for example, it was to be hoped the time was near when much more work in the field of narcotics control would be undertaken directly by FAO, WHO and UNESCO within the framework of larger concerted programmes than it had as yet been possible to organize against the basic causes of addiction and the illicit traffic.

107. Finally, the Commission adopted by 17 votes to none, with 1 abstention, the following resolution submitted by Canada, India and the United Kingdom:

"2(XVIII)

"ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN THE FAR EAST

"The Commission on Narcotic Drugs,

"a. Having made a special study, at its eighteenth session, of the situation regarding illicit traffic in narcotic drugs in the Far East;

"b. Noting that the opium poppy is cultivated illicitly in some parts of the area for the production of opium; that illicit laboratories exist there for the manufacture of morphine and heroin; and that there is a highly organized traffic in the area in all these drugs;

"c. Noting also that, although Governments have intensified their efforts to deal with illicit production, manufacture and traffic, the problem remains very serious;

"1. Urges that the Governments concerned take all necessary measures to deal with the situation, in particular by—

"(i) obtaining more precise information about the areas in which the opium poppy is illicitly cultivated and about the location of illicit laboratories for the manufacture of morphine and heroin;

"(ii) registering opium smokers, where such smoking is still permitted, with a view to the eventual elimination of the practice;

"(iii) strengthening wherever necessary their enforcement services and improving the training and methods of operation of those services so that they may be able to deal more effectively with the illicit cultivation of the opium poppy, the illicit manufacture of morphine and heroin, and illicit traffic in these drugs;

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1365

"(iv) controlling to the extent necessary and practicable the import and internal distribution of acetic anhydride and acetyl chloride;

"(v) studying the problem of eliminating the cultivation of the opium poppy by hill tribes or other less-developed groups as a means of livelihood, and taking any necessary measures to achieve that end;

"(vi) co-operating closely with other countries in the area in the direct and co-ordinated exchange of information useful in countering the illicit traffic;

"(vii) including in their applications for technical assistance provision for appropriate assistance which may be required with a view to facilitating the implementation of plans for countering the illicit traffic, whether by way of training personnel, obtaining expert advice or for any other purposes."

(II) AMERICA

108. The Commission took note of data on seizures of opium and opiates in countries of the Americas, observing that the situation, particularly in respect of the heroin traffic in the United States and Canada, continued to be as serious as in previous years.

109. The representative of the United States of America outlined the problem facing his country and cited significant seizures made in 1962. The total quantity of about 88 kg of heroin seized in 1962 was more than twice that seized in 1961. All heroin used in the United States, accounting for over 95 per cent of addiction, came from smuggling the largest proportion of it originating in Europe and the Far East and entering the country at all frontiers. Traffic from Mexico as well supplied areas of the West coast and Texas, but not all heroin coming from Mexico was the result of illicit manufacture there. From France and Italy heroin was illicitly imported into the United States directly and also by way of both Mexico and Canada, and considerable quantities of heroin from the Far East were smuggled through West coast ports. To illustrate the complexities of the traffic, he described two seizures in detail. Chan Way, a well-known seaman-smuggler, was arrested on 2 January 1962, when he transferred a package of 15 grammes of heroin to another trafficker. Sixty-eight grammes of heroin were seized from Chan Way, who admitted that he had smuggled it into the United States from Hong Kong. Chan Way, who had recently been released from prison after serving a five-year sentence for violation of the narcotic laws, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment. His associate, who was not implicated in the case owing to insufficient evidence, alleged that the heroin had originated in mainland China. Another case was the arrest at Miami, Florida, on May 24, 1962, of José Francisco Zavala Manrique. Zavala had arrived at Miami from Peru, by air, the same day and was delivering 500 grammes of heroin to an undercover agent of the United States Bureau of Narcotics when he was arrested. The undercover officer had previously made two evidential purchases from this trafficker, who admitted that he had bought the heroin from a "Chinese Communist" in Lima, Peru. Zabala was sentenced to five years' imprisonment.

110. The representative of Canada stated that there had been no major seizures of international interest in his country in 1962. Heroin was the drug primarily concerned in the illicit traffic, being involved in some 86 per cent of the cases in which convictions were obtained. The market was supplied by illegal import. As in previous years, no evidence of local manufacture had been discovered. There was reason to assume that a traffic was operated to and from the United States, a factor in this problem being the long frontier between the two countries and their long coastlines on both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. Despite the difficulties, however, the continuously increased enforcement activity seemed to have resulted in a substantial reduction in the number of cases tried under the Narcotics Control Act in 1962. There had been 313 convictions, as compared with 478 in 1961.

111. In reply to a question by the representative of France, who stated that he appreciated the thoroughness of the annual reviews made by the United States of America, the representative of the United States confirmed that wholesale prices of heroin in the New York area had risen during the last four years from about $10,000 or $12,000 to $18,000 and $20,000 per kg. That might be a significant result of the heavy seizures during the period on the East coast, and an indication of the salutary effects of the valuable work accomplished by close collaboration between the enforcement authorities of Canada, France, Italy and the United States. The representative of Canada pointed out that the price of heroin in Vancouver had also risen considerably, from $5.00 a capsule to $15.000 or $20.000, as a result of intensive enforcement measures in that part of his country.

1366 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

112. The Commission heard a detailed statement by the representative of Mexico, referring particularly to the persistent efforts being made by his country to stamp out illicit poppy cultivation and the illicit traffic in heroin and marihuana. Intensive campaigns for that purpose were being carried out by all the authorities responsible for enforcing the law, including the Police and the Army; progress had also been made in the education of the rural population and in crop substitution, giving good cause for hope that the situation would materially improve. The illicit traffic appeared to be diminishing; illicit cultivation was less extensive and had been totally eradicated in some states of the Mexican Union. The zone of continued illicit activity seemed to be confined to the north-western part of the country, and the close collaboration between the Mexican and United States authorities in co-ordinating their suppressive measures was a notable factor in the success which had been achieved. He recognized that the high prices paid for heroin and cocaine in the United States provided a powerful incentive to traffickers; and the whole frontier was being vigilantly guarded to prevent illicit exports. The following seizures of narcotic drugs had been made in 1962: 16,144 kg of marihuana; 4 kg 050 g of cocaine; 3 kg 795 g of morphine; 1 kg 883 g of heroin and 9 kg 649 g of raw opium. An area of 273,000 square meters of marihuana plantations, with a total of 1,593,000 plants, had been destroyed; 8 kg 520 g of marihuana seed and 37 kg of poppy seed had been seized; and 233 poppy plantations, covering an area of 1,433,335 square metres and containing about 8,592,000 plants, had been destroyed. During the year 1962, 1,514 men and 235 women had been prosecuted for offences against public health, and court proceedings in 1,146 cases had been initiated. In addition, the following quantities of narcotic drugs had been destroyed in the course of 1962 by burning:

Indian hemp (marihuana)-----	kilograms--	1,998
Opium and its preparations-----	do-----	134
Opium poppy (Papaver somniferum L. Var Album)-----	do-----	89
Coca leaves (Erythroxylon Coca)-----	do-----	45
Morphine and its salts-----	do-----	14
Codeine-----	do-----	10
Meperidine, methadone and their derivatives-----	do-----	6
Cocaine-----	grams--	940

The outstanding success of this campaign by the Government of Mexico had unfortunately been achieved at a tragic cost in human life: Mr. Rosendo Ortiz Islas and Mr. Alfredo Miller Flores, of the Secret Service of the Police, had been shot dead by marihuana traffickers in a Mexico City street in an incident in which 67 kg of marihuana were seized; the murderers had managed to escape.

113. The representative of the United States of America commended the Mexican Government for the excellent co-operation given to the United States enforcement authorities, and for its efforts to eradicate illicit cultivation of the opium poppy in Mexico. Again with reference to Europe, he expressed his Government's appreciation of the action taken by the Government of Italy in arresting Settimo Accardi, an important fugitive from the United States, whose extradition it was hoped would be arranged as soon as possible by the Italian Government.

114. Referring to the indication by the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in chapter XI of its annual report for 1962 that there had been no illicit traffic in the country, the representative of the United States of America drew attention to Press reports published in 1962 concerning cases of narcotics offenses and trafficking in the USSR. The representative of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics informed the Commission that the case in question had come to light only after her Government's annual report on illicit traffic for 1962 had been submitted. The two persons involved had served prison sentences and, not wishing to work, had decided to engage in illicit traffic in narcotic drugs (hashish). They were detected and severely punished. In publishing the account referred to, the Soviet Press aimed at mobilizing public opinion against such abnormal occurrences in the Soviet Union. The case was deemed to be of only internal interest but would be included in the next annual report on illicit traffic.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1367

(III) THE NEAR AND MIDDLE EAST

115. The Commission heard a detailed description by the representative of Iran of the present situation in his country, where continued progress towards the total elimination of opium cultivation seemed to be accompanied by increasing activity on the part of international traffickers. Since the cultivation of the opium poppy had been prohibited in 1955, appreciable headway in enforcement had been made, but the existence of what might now be termed a hard core of addiction provided a market for drugs which international traffickers were exploiting. Surpluses in Turkey and clandestine cultivation in Afghanistan facilitated the smuggling of opium into Iran, where a lucrative market was available. The total quantity of opium seized had increased by more than 74 per cent, from 8,274 kg in 1961 to 14,423 kg in 1962. That increase was considered to be due, not to heavier traffic, but rather to the improved enforcement techniques introduced by the Gendarmerie and the police. Of the seizures made during the year, 5,379 kg had been intercepted near the Afghan border, 5,823 kg near the Turkish border and the balance of 3,211 kg in the interior of Iran, either on roads leading from the eastern and western frontiers or from hiding places on the way. All the opium had been pronounced by experienced officials to be of foreign origin. Within the country, there was an increasing tendency to convert opium into heroin by methods which, though crude initially, had become more and more refined as the year advanced. Nine heroin factories had been discovered, as compared with two in 1961. There had been very few interceptions of foreign heroin or morphine base, but several consignments were believed to have reached Iran from abroad. Because of the extensive use of acetic anhydride in the local manufacture of heroin, imports of this chemical and of acetyl chloride had been placed under restriction. Most of the heroin factories had been found in Teheran, but one had been located in West Azarbaijan, near the Turkish border. The operator, a citizen of Teheran, and his two local accomplices had chosen the place on account of its isolation and to avoid transportation costs on large consignments of raw opium which would otherwise have had to be dispatched to Teheran for conversion. Smugglers were well organized and equipped, and the problem would obviously be solved only by international co-operation in maintaining a close control at the frontiers and in building up forces at strategic points. A frontier control conference between narcotics enforcement representatives of the Governments of Pakistan and Iran had been held at Teheran in July, and the Governments of Turkey, Pakistan, the United Kingdom, the United States and Iran had participated in a Central Treaty Organization conference on narcotics control at Ankara in October.

116. The representative of France expressed the opinion that the statement by the representative of Iran was of particular interest, and he commented on that country's achievement in suppressing nine clandestine heroin factories during the past year. The existence of those factories was another illustration of the fact that traffickers were engaging in illicit manufacture closer to the producing areas, which in consequence were tending to become target areas for the distribution of white drugs.

117. The representative of the League of Arab States made a statement concerning the Near and Middle Eastern region based on reports submitted to him as Director of the League's Permanent Anti-Narcotics Bureau and on his observations from work in the field. There was no legal cultivation of the poppy or production of opium in any of the countries with which he was concerned, and illicit cultivation in Syria and the United Arab Republic was negligible. Smuggling into Syria continued on a large scale, primarily of drugs for transshipment by various routes to Jordan, Lebanon and Israel, and eventually to the United Arab Republic. It was presumed that most of the opium came from Turkey, and there was no doubt that stricter control at the Turkish-Syrian frontier would help to improve the situation. Syria had reported the seizure of 578 kg of opium in 1962. Lebanon had seized 5 kg 617 g in transit. Seizures in Iraq had amounted to 599 kg. The traffic through Jordan and Iraq seemed to have consisted of opium from foreign countries. The illicit production of white drugs in Syria and Lebanon was a very serious problem. Morphine base manufactured in Syria was smuggled into Lebanon and converted into heroin both for export and for local markets. During 1962, seizures in Lebanon had amounted to 1 kg 462 g of heroin and 4 kg 140 g of morphine base. In January 1963, the Lebanese authorities had seized 4 kg 305 g of morphine base from Syria. He thought it important for the Commission to note that vigorous steps needed to be taken in the region to prevent a situation that was already serious from becoming worse as the years went by.

1368 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

118. The representative of the United Arab Republic drew the Commission's attention to the difficulties his country faced so far as opium was concerned. Despite all possible measures of legislation and enforcement, the United Arab Republic was the primary target for the opium traffic in the Near and Middle East. Although seizures in 1962 had amounted to only 976 kg, which was 50 per cent less than in 1961, that could not be regarded as indicating an improvement in the situation, since the number of prosecutions for opium offences had risen from about 2,000 in 1961 to 2,800 in 1962. Nor was the United Arab Republic a producer of opium. Successive improvements in legislation, beginning with the prohibition of cultivation in 1926, had presented increasingly severe penalties for all kinds of offences involving opium. Law 182 of 1960 provided for life sentences with hard labour. There had been 1,535 convictions; sentences of imprisonment had amounted to a total of 3,803 years and 6 months, and there had been fines of 500 to 5,000 Egyptian pounds. It was significant that only 365 poppy plants had been confiscated in 1962, and that those plants had not reached maturity. During the last ten years the total area on which illicit cultivation had been detected was about 2 hectares. The regrettable fact was that the opium supplying the United Arab Republic came from Turkey, but it was also a fact that more effective regional arrangements in the Near and Middle East might give grounds to hope for improved frontier control and for some improvement in the situation as a whole. Meanwhile, the opium in the illicit traffic could be said to be of Turkish origin on the basis of evidence from four sources: the results of analyses of the United Nations Narcotics Laboratory of thirty-eight samples of opium seized in the United Arab Republic in 1960 and 1961; statements by the Middle East Survey Mission in the report on its work in 1959; reports made to the Permanent Anti-Narcotics Bureau of the LAS, particularly regarding traffic over the Syrian frontier with Turkey; and reports by the Turkish Government on seizures from the traffic within the country itself.

119. The Commission heard a statement by the representative of Turkey giving his country's views on the situation and describing his Government's efforts in the field of narcotics control. Everything possible was being done, from the point of view both of internal administration and of international co-operation. Law 7368 placed opium cultivation under a system of control conforming to the 1953 Protocol, and that treaty was now about to be ratified by Parliament. Law 2313 prohibited cultivation of cannabis and the extraction of its resin. Turkey was already a party to all the other international treaties now in force. Enforcement measures were strictly applied, and had resulted, for example, in seizures of opium amounting to 6 tons in 1962. Sixty-three kg of morphine base had also been seized, as well as 330 kg of hashish and 53 tons of cannabis plants. Prosecutions had numbered 897, involving 862 offenders, and convictions were accompanied by severe sentences of imprisonment and fines. The terms of imprisonment imposed had amounted to a total of 1,463 years and the fines to about 28 million Turkish pounds, or 3 million US dollars. He particularly wished to inform the Commission that the Government had decreed a reduction in the area to be used for cultivation of opium; about 5,000 hectares had been withdrawn from cultivation, and from the autumn of 1963 cultivation would no longer be authorized in any area east of Ankara. The possibility of further restrictions was being studied, and a project for co-ordinating the activities of all government agencies dealing with narcotics matters was being developed. Furthermore, the Government was looking forward to receiving the visit of the United Nations Technical Assistance mission on narcotics control later in 1963. In view of the work done in his country and, at the same time, in view of the reports made each year to the Commission by other countries in the region concerning urgent problems of control and the heavy traffic which continued in the Near and Middle East, he was convinced of the need for co-ordinating and applying the most stringent remedies on an international basis. The first necessary step was that countries in the Near and Middle East should exchange the most detailed information on all cases of trafficking as rapidly as possible, so that effective action could be taken. Furthermore, it was absolutely necessary for countries to have agreements with each other concerning the control of frontiers and that those agreements should be properly observed. It should be said in that connexion that the frontier agreement between Turkey, and Iran would become increasingly effective as an instrument of control only if it was enforced by the Iranian authorities. In all those matters, it should be emphasized that the problem was not a lack of good will; it was rather a matter of securing the most effective use of the means of collaboration between governments at all levels. He cited examples of his Government's receiving very inadequate information—and that more than a year late—concerning illicit traffic on the common frontier. As to the allegations in the statement by the LAS representative, they were a repetition of things that had been said by the representative of the United Arab Republic. To the charge that the opium in the illicit traffic was all of Turkish origin, he replied that quantities greater than the total Turkish production would be necessary to supply the 160,000 opium addicts in the United Arab Republic. That such supplies could cross the well-guarded Turkish frontiers was inconceivable; it was, rather, necessary to look for sources within the United Arab Republic itself. As to the results of analyses made by the United Nations Laboratory, he pointed out that the only authenticated samples of opium which had come to the Laboratory from the Near and Middle East were those sent by Turkey. Results of analyses depended on comparison, and it was entirely possible that opium illicitly cultivated in other areas of the region would have the same characteristics as the Turkish opium had. As for the declarations made by the Middle East Survey Mission, they had been taken up in due course; and it was unnecessary to lose time discussing the reports of the LAS. Turning again to the problem of exchange of information, he referred to the resolution adopted by the Commission at its tenth session which, among other matters, called on governments to make detailed reports on cases as fully and quickly as possible. It was to be regretted that more countries in the region did not avail themselves of the services of ICPO, which to his country were of great value. He wished particularly to express his Government's appreciation of the close co-operation it had received from the enforcement services of the United States of America.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1369

120. The observer for Lebanon expressed his Government's regret that internal administrative difficulties had prevented its being represented by an observer at the last three sessions of the Commission. The Lebanese Government had been glad to accept the invitations of the Commission and the Council to be represented at the present session, and it had been glad to be represented at meetings of the Social Committee of the Council at its recent thirty-fourth session. He reviewed his country's position on problems of narcotics control, emphasizing the firm determination of its efforts to suppress the production and use of drugs and the illicit traffic. Lebanon was not only a party to the principal international treaties, but it strove to fulfil its obligations with the utmost good faith. For example, all the required general and seizure reports were made regularly to the United Nations and to ICPO. Lebanon was one of several countries in the Near and Middle East to have set up a direct radio link with ICPO, as part of that organization's network. This facility had been put into service in 1961 and was at the disposal of other Arab countries, ensuring quick communication with ICPO by the region. Lebanon also maintained close association with the Permanent Anti-Narcotics Bureau of LAS. Measures within the country had been intensified in recent years. The regular internal security and Customs services had been supplemented by special anti-narcotics enforcement units in both the police and the Customs. Furthermore, the legislation relating to narcotics offences had been strengthened, and more severe penalties, which were rigorously applied, had been provided. As an example of work by the enforcement agencies, he reported that six clandestine laboratories for the manufacture of heroin had been discovered and destroyed during the last four years.

121. The representative of the United States of America expressed his Government's appreciation of the full co-operation extended by the governments of Lebanon, Syria and Turkey to enforcement agencies of the United States. He commended the action taken by Turkey in reducing by 5,000 hectares the area authorized for opium cultivation. The destruction of clandestine laboratories in Lebanon was also to be commended.

122. The ICPO representative expressed his organization's thanks for the remarks of the Turkish representative concerning the value of ICPO's services. The constant fruitful exchange of information carried out through the ICPO office in Turkey was an example of the important work which could be accomplished, as was the operation of the radio station set up by the Government of Lebanon to serve the needs of ICPO.

123. The observer for Israel suggested that more attention should be given to the practical aspects of combatting the illicit traffic. It seemed to him that enforcement measures were by far the most important means of coming to grips with the problem, which was basically one of organized crime on a large scale. Legislation was of no value unless it was applied, and campaigns against addiction were not in themselves effective weapons against crime. The facts and figures available from year to year showed only too well that the traffic was increasing, and that the criminal operators were consistently ahead of the enforcement agencies. The only possible conclusion to be drawn was that repressive measures by police and associated law enforcement authorities should be intensified in all the countries concerned and that furthermore their work should be carried out within a framework of close international co-operation, using to the fullest advantage the services of the United Nations and ICPO as well as every possible means of bilateral and intra-regional co-ordination. Israel could not be regarded as having any responsibility for the problems of illicit traffic which existed in the region; it was part of an area through which the traffic was conducted and the police acted with the utmost vigilance in taking all possible measures to suppress that traffic. Contrary to what had been suggested by the representatives of the United Arab Republic and LAS, it was the continuing refusal of Israel's neighbours to co-operate with Israel which caused opportunities for improved control and suppressive action to be missed. His Government, which operated through the Israel police force, its law enforcement agency, had never failed to respond to any request for assistance made to it directly or through ICPO, and if co-operation existed in the region instead of being refused, smuggling operations could be stamped out.

1370 ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS

124. The Commission took note of the very large seizure of raw opium reported by the Government of Cyprus. 1,500 kg had been seized from a Turkish vessel which put into Famagusta, possibly with the intention of transferring the contraband to Lebanese vessels in the harbour. The opium was presumed to be of Turkish origin. The master of the ship, a Turkish national, had been sentenced to imprisonment for two years and fined the equivalent of US $28,000.

C. Cocaine

125. The Commission noted that the total quantities of cocaine reported seized in 1962 were larger than in 1961 and that both years showed a considerable increase over 1960. Furthermore, nearly half the world total of about 25 kg., for 1962, had been seized in the United States of America (10 kg. 636 g). Mexico (4 kg. 050 g) and Switzerland had also reported large seizures of cocaine, and close to 10 tons of coca leaf had been seized by Argentina and Chile alone, the origin of the leaf being reported to be Bolivia. Reports from Bolivia and Peru had not been received. The representative of Peru informed the Commission, however, that every effort would be made by his Government to send full reports in future. The Commission again repeated its regret and dissatisfaction that so few reports on illicit traffic in cocaine and coca leaf were available from Latin American countries.

126. The representative of the United States of America drew the Commission's attention to the fact that the Consultative Group on Coca Leaf Problems, which met at Lima from 26 November to 7 December 1962, had repeated statements made at the 1960 and 1961 Inter-American regional meetings at Rio de Janeiro to the effect that the illicit traffic in cocaine was caused by the over-production of coca leaves in Bolivia and Peru. At the above-mentioned 1962 meeting, the representative of Bolivia had mentioned 12,000 tons as the estimated annual production of coca leaf in his country. One half of that production he had stated, went into the illicit traffic. Bolivia's report on the traffic for 1960-61 (E/CN.7/R.12/Add.82) cited seizures of about 140 kg of "substances said to contain cocaine" and stated that "clandestine factories were set up for the manufacture of cocaine, the coca leaf produced in the country being used as raw material. . . ." The representative of the United States of America said that, assuming the proportion of cocaine extracted to be some 75 per cent of the total alkaloid content, which represented 0.5-1.5 per cent of the leaf by weight, the quantity of cocaine which could, at a conservative estimate, be produced from the 6,000 tons in question would amount to the enormous total of some 45 tons (45,000 kg), as compared with the 1½ tons (1,300 kg) which represented the average annual requirements for medical purposes throughout the world.

127. The representative of the United States of America stated that the increase in the cocaine traffic indicated the existence of an alarming situation which the facts showed to be primarily associated with Cuban criminal elements. There had been no less than 63 separate seizures of cocaine in the United States in 1962, and 112 offenders had been arrested. Considerable quantities of cocaine had been smuggled into the United States direct from Cuba, from Cuba through other Caribbean countries, and through Cuban gangsters operating from Latin American countries. Those smuggling organizations were closely associated with criminal groups within the United States, principally Cuban criminal elements, who virtually controlled the illicit traffic in cocaine throughout the country. Cuba had been the source of supply for two of the largest seizures made in the United States. Arturo Rodriguez and four other Cubans had been arrested on 14 March 1962, at Miami, Florida, and two ounces of cocaine had been seized. The undercover narcotics agent had discovered that the cocaine had been smuggled into the Miami area directly from Cuba. On 28 June 1962, at New York City, two Cubans had been arrested for the sale and possession of 403 grammes of cocaine. Two revolvers, together with adulterating and packaging paraphernalia, had been seized. The cocaine, of Cuban origin, had been brought into the United States at Miami. Miami and New York City were being used by the highly organized Cuban traffickers not only as centres for the distribution of cocaine to local underworld markets, but also as bases of operation for interstate traffic to consumer markets in the midwest and on the Pacific coast.

ORGANIZED CRIME AND ILLICIT TRAFFIC IN NARCOTICS 1371

128. The representative of the United States of America affirmed that the evidence was incontrovertible, and that it was difficult to see how the Cuban Government could state in chapter XI of its annual report (E/CN.7/R.13/Add.43), that the illicit traffic had been eradicated and that there had been no seizures in 1962. He further stated that a Press report published at Lima in September 1962 had given an account of the discovery in Peru of a clandestine factory, using modern laboratory equipment and operated by persons with a knowledge of chemistry. As a result of that discovery, a ten-man ring of traffickers, with Cuban affiliations, had been broken up.

129. The observer for Cuba expressed regret that his Government had been unable to be represented by an observer at the meetings of the Committee on Illicit Traffic on 23-25 April. The statement regarding an illicit traffic in Cuba were unfounded; he objected to procedures which did not conform to resolution VI of the tenth session of the Commission and to the use of statements by offenders living in the United States as a basis of information on the illicit traffic. He wished to confirm the statements contained in chapter XI of his Government's annual report.

130. The representative of Hungary said it was preferable for questions to be discussed in the presence of representatives of the countries involved. He wished to refer again to the point he had made concerning the attribution of nationality status to offenders in cases where possession of the nationality in question might not be clearly established. He considered that evidence of residence was in any case of more importance.

131. The representative of Poland referred to reports by the representative of the United States of America concerning the cocaine traffic and the alleged involvement of Cuban nationals. While he wished it to be understood that he sympathized with the United States in its efforts to overcome the illicit traffic, he objected strongly to the emphasis placed on the part allegedly played by Cubans, and expressed the view that the part played by nationals of many other countries should be equally stressed, for otherwise the declarations by the United States representative might be regarded as expressing a special prejudice against Cuban nationals. He also wished to associate himself with the statements by the observer for Cuba.

○

PAGINA BIANCA